 southern counties. The iron ore goes east and south over both roads, though by far the largest amount is used in the Shenango valley and at Pittsburgh and vicinity. As nearly as can be ascertained, the following figures show the coal trade for 1894:

	NET TONS. ANTHRACITE.	NET TONS. BITUMINOUS.	TOTAL.
Shipments to Erie:
By Philadelphia & Erie R. L.	880,294	38,681	918,975
By Erie and Pittsburgh	317,000		317,000
By L. S. & M. S.	50,000		50,000
By P., S. & L. E.	21,000		21,000
	1,268,294	38,681	1,306,975
Shipments from Erie and Local Trade:
By Lake	424,005	205,073	629,078
By Rail	121,435		121,435
Local Trade	35,123	156,644	191,767
	580,563	361,717	942,280

BUSINESS BLOCKS, ETC.—WHEN ERECTED.

The following shows the years when some of the principal hotels and buildings on North and South Park Rows, State, Peach, Turnpike, Parade, Eighth, Eighteenth and other streets were erected—only brick or stone business structures being included. It will surprise most readers to learn how much of the best property in Erie is owned by Germans and citizens of German descent:

A

Ashby & Vincent block, State street, between Fourth and Fifth, 1840-41.

Austin & Moore block, North Park Row, 1857-58.

Arcade Hotel, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1870-71.

Alberstadt block, southeast corner Peach and Twenty-sixth streets, built in 1860, remodeled in 1882.

Abell block, Peach street, near Lake Shore R. R., 1895.

B

Beatty block, North Park Row, 1841-42.

Baker & Osthimer block, southeast corner State and Fifth streets, built in two parts, 1848-49—1852-53.

Bekman block, State street, near Fifth, 1859.

Biley block, northeast corner State and Tenth streets, 1865.

Berst block, State street, near Eighth, north building, 1867; south building, 1870.

Becker block, northeast corner French and Sixth streets, 1871-72.

Blass (L. & P.) block, 1610 and 1612 Peach street, 1872.

Bloeser (C.) block, northwest corner Holland and Eighteenth streets, first building, 1874; second building, 1884.

Brown block, French street, opposite Central Park, remodeled in 1882.

Bloeser (J. S.) block, Myrtle and Eighteenth streets, 1884.

Blass (A.) block, Sassafras and Eighteenth streets, 1888-89.

Beck block, 1008 State street, 1891.

Bass block, 1318 Turnpike street, 1891-92.

Blum block, southwest corner State and Seventeenth streets, 1890-01; 1617 Peach street, 1893; 1621 Peach street, 1894.

Bush block, 1105 State street, built in 1868; remodeled in 1894.

Berriman & Fisher block, southwest corner State and Thirteenth streets, front building, 1893; rear building, 1895-96.

Bach block, 410 West Eighth street, about 1876; 412 West Eighth street, 1893.

C

Carter block, North Park Row, 1859.

Cronenberger block, southwest corner Peach and 25th streets, 1861.

Cooper (F.) block, State street, south of Thirteenth, about 1870.

Conrad block, 1406 Turnpike street, 1876; State street, south of Twelfth, 1891; State street (new one), built in 1891; State street (old one), remodeled in 1894.

Cohen block, 904 and 906 State street, 1880; State street, near Eleventh, 1891.

Clemens block, State street, near Ninth, 1882.

Claus block, State street between Eleventh and Twelfth, 1885.

Camphausen block, 1513 and 1515 Peach street, 1885.

Christoph block, 2518 Peach street, 1890.

Cantlon block, southwest corner State and Twelfth streets; rear building, 1891; corner building, 1895.

Central Market House, 1892-3.

D

Dime Bank block, southwest corner State street and South Park Row, 1875; 1527 Peach street, 1858-9.

Dewitt block, southeast corner State and Seventh streets, 1880.

Downing building, northwest corner Peach and Ninth streets, completed spring of 1883; northeast corner State and Ninth streets, completed spring of 1892.

Dunn's livery stable, Peach and Tenth streets, 1883.

Demuling block, Twelfth street, between State and Peach, 1884; Parade and Eleventh streets, 1893.

Dispatch building, Seventh street, near State, 1886.

Disterdick block, State street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth, about 1874.

Doll block, 1512 Peach street, 1868.

Decker block, 452 West Eighteenth street, 1883; 450 West Eighteenth street, 1887; 454 West Eighteenth street, 1893; 440 and 442 West Eighteenth street, 1895.

Detzel (M.) block, 1306 Parade street, 1887.

Detzel (F. J.) block, northwest corner Parade and Thirteenth streets, 1893.

Dickson block, Seventh street, between State and Peach, 1876.

E

Elliott block, 18 East Seventh street, 1875.

Elliott block, State street, between Fifth and North Park Row, 1857.

Ellsworth House, State street and North Park Row, northeast corner, 1851-2; torn down in 1891.

Exchange building, northwest corner State street and North Park Row, built in 1857; remodeled in 1886.

Eichenlaub (Joseph) block, State street, between Sixth and Seventh, 1856; Parade and Tenth streets, 1882.

Eichenlaub (J. A.) block, State street, near Ninth, 1878.

Eichenlaub (Ferdinand) block, northwest corner State and Twelfth streets, 1882.

Eichenlaub (V. D.) block, State and Eighteenth streets, 1884.

Erhart block, 1012 State street, 1869; State street between Eighth and Ninth, 1880.

Englehart (F.) block, northwest corner State and Eleventh streets, 1856.

Englehart (C.) block, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1856.

Eppley & Buerer block, 1114 and 1116 Parade street, 1895.

Erie Burial Case Co.'s office and store room,

Peach street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth, built about 1865; remodeled in 1888.

Esser block, 414 West Eighth street, 1884.

F

First National Bank building, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1886.

Forman block, State street, between Tenth and Eleventh, 1895.

Fisher block, northwest corner State and Eleventh streets, 1886.

Fink block, southwest corner Chestnut and Eighteenth streets, 1894-5.

Fargo block, 1708 Peach street, 1861.

G

Griffith block, northwest corner State and Eighth streets, 1870.

Gensheimer block, northwest corner State and Seventh streets, 1854.

Germer block, southwest corner State and Ninth streets, 1872.

Gabel block, State street, between Eighth and Ninth streets, 1874; Peach and Fourteenth streets, 1885.

Grant & Metcalf block, French street, opposite Reed House, originally built in 1860.

Gloth block, Twenty-fifth and Peach streets, 1866 or '67; Eighteenth street, near Holland, 1885.

Gross block, Peach street, near Thirteenth, 1872.

H

Hughes block, southwest corner State and Seventh streets: first part in 1834, second part in 1838.

Herald block, southeast corner State and Tenth streets: main building, in 1873; 1005 State street in 1887.

Hall block, State street, near Seventh, 1854.

Hicks block, 1216 State street, 1894; 1218 State street, 1892.

Haller block, 1225 State street, 1887.

Heigel block, southeast corner Chestnut and Eighteenth streets, 1895.

Hengstler block, Cherry and Eighteenth streets, 1892-3.

Heidt block, 1711 Peach street, 1884.

Hamberger block, 1704 Peach street, 1854.

Hartleb block, northeast corner Peach and Sixteenth streets, 1860.

Hoffman block, 1508 and 1510 Peach street, remodeled in 1882.

Heidt block, Peach and Twenty-fourth streets, about 1886.

I

Illig block, 1524 Peach street, 1868; 1106 State street, 1887; northwest corner Peach and Twentieth streets, 1876.

J

Jarecki (G. & H. T.) block, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1876.

Jarecki (A. H.) block, 1010 State street, 1888.

Jarecki (Henry) block, 822 and 824 State street, about 1858.

Jarecki (Charles and Henry) block, 922 State street, about 1883-84.

Jarecki (August) block, 622 State street, 1885.

Jarecki (August) block, 1525 Peach street, 1860-61.

Jones & Sandusky block, northeast corner State and Fourteenth streets, 1890.

K

Krug block, 912 Parade street, 1883.

Kessler (C.) block: Southeast corner of State and Fourth, 1846 and '48; 730 State street, 1873; 1118 and 1120 State street, 1876; southwest corner State and Fourth streets, 1895.

Keystone Bank building, northeast corner State and Eighth streets, 1866.

Klick block, 1007 State street, enlarged 1894-5.

Koehler (L.) block, northwest corner State and Thirteenth streets, 1893.

Kneib block, State street, near Ninth, 1894-5.

Kessler (Henry) block, Eighteenth street, between Walnut and Cherry, 1887.

Kalvelage block, southwest corner Peach and Twenty-fourth streets, 1880.

Kraus block, 810 and 812 Parade street, 1890.

Kern block, Peach street, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth, 1866.

Keller block, Peach street, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth, 1880.

Kuntz block, Peach street, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth, about 1871-2.

L

Liebel House, 1886.

Loeb block, 927 State street, 1890.

Levi block, 929 State street, 1884-5.

Levi Bros.' block, North Park Row, 1862.

Lytle block, 1523 Peach street, 1865.

Loesel block, 1718 and 1722 Peach street, 1891; southwest corner Eighteenth and Holland streets, 1883.

Loesch building, 1706 Peach street, 1854.

Lyons block, Peach street, between Ninth and Tenth, 1895.

Link block, 1124 Parade street, 1877.

M

Minnig (P.) block, State street, between Fourth and Fifth, 1840-41.

Minnig (A.) block, State street, between Eighth and Ninth, 1867.

McGrath block, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1870-71.

Metcalf block, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1872.

Murphy block, North Park Row, 1857.

Masonic block, State street, between Ninth and Tenth, 1884.

Metzner block, Seventh street, between State and Peach, 1890.

Maya (F. C.) block, State street, near Eleventh, built in 1867, remodeled in 1887.

Mænnerchor Hall, State street, south of railroad. Corner stone laid in 1880.

Moore block, State street, adjoining First National Bank, 1856.

Mullane block, southeast corner Chestnut and Eighth streets, 1875-6.

Mission block: North Park Row and Peach street, 1861-2 (rear portion 1865); Northwest corner Peach and Fourteenth streets, 1872.

Mauer block, Seventh street, between State and Peach, built about 1864-5, remodeled in 1882 and 1890.

Meyer (A.) block, Parade street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, 1894.

Minnig (John) block, northwest corner Peach and Eighth streets, 1875.

McCarter block, 1511 Peach street, 1894.

Morton House, about 1849 or 1850.

Mayer (Henry) block: State street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth. South building in 1855, remodeled about 1880; North building, 1888.

Metropolitan Hotel, State street, near Sixteenth, 1892-3.

Meehan block, Peach street, between Tenth and Eleventh, about 1864.

Magill block, Peach street, near Tenth, 1868.

McCallup block, 7, 9 and 11 East Seventh street, 1888.

N

Newbauer block (Colby Hall), State street, near Thirteenth, 1892.

Neimyer block, 1108 State street, 1892.

Nicholson (formerly Boyer) block, State, near Fourteenth, 1873-4.

Nicholson block, 422 and 424 West Eighth street, 1890.

Newberger block, State street, between Fifth and North Park Row, 1857.

Nagosky block, northwest corner Parade and Tenth streets, 1891.

Nick block, Seventh street, between State and Peach, 1876.

Neid block, 1208 Parade street, 1875.

O

Olds block, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1870.

Ostheimer block, 1006 State street, 1891.

O'Brien block, southwest corner Chestnut and Eighth streets, about 1870.

O'Brien block, 404 and 406 West Eighth street, 1887.

P

Perry block, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1837.

Park Opera House, remodeled from Farrar Hall in 1872-3; partially burned September 23, 1894; reopened March 17, 1895.

Penn building (formerly Noble block), southeast corner State and Eighth streets, built in 1866; remodeled in 1894-5.

Palace Hotel, southeast corner Sassafras and Fifteenth streets, 1891.

Pfleuger block, 1216 and 1218 Peach street, 1891.

Parade Street Market House, Parade and Tenth streets, 1895.

People's Market House, State and Fourth streets, 1895.

Pinney block, 1520 and 1522 Peach street, 1866.

Pfister block, Peach street, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth, 1893.

Park View Hotel (brick part), in 1884.

R

Rosenzweig (L.) building, South Park Row, built in 1895, remodeled in 1886.

Reed House (burned three times), rebuilt in 1839-40, 1864-65, 1872-73.

Rindernecht block, southwest corner State and Fifth streets, 1858.

Riblet block, 926 State street, 1869; northwest corner Peach and Twelfth streets, 1886-7.

Rees block, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1856.

Reed block, northeast corner State and Seventh streets, 1871-2.

Reidel block, 1324 State street, built in 1880, remodeled in 1894.

Reaveley block, Parade street, between Ninth and Tenth, 1891.

Rauper block, 1517 and 1519 Peach street, 1866; northeast corner French and Seventeenth streets, 1894.

Rosswog block, southeast corner Peach and Fourteenth streets, 1892.

Rastatter (L.) block, northeast corner Parade and Fifteenth streets, 1870.

S

Selden block, 920 and 922 State street, remodeled from residence in 1880.

Simon block, 1014 State street, about 1875; 1022 State street, 1890.

Smith (Z.) block, 815 State street, 1870.

Suerken block, 810 State street, 1855-6; 924 State street, 1869.

Scott block, northwest corner State and Tenth streets, 1873-5.

Schaaf & Knoll block, State street, between Eighth and Ninth, about 1860.

Sevins block, State street, between Ninth and Tenth, 1884; Seventh street, between State and Peach, 1873.

Seigel (E. C.) block, State street, between Eleventh and Twelfth, 1894.

Schlösser block, 1220 State street, 1892; State street, opposite Central Market House, 1895-96.

Schneider block, State street, near Fourteenth, north building about 1867; south building 1870.

Stricker block, 1104 State street, 1856.

Schlaudecker (Geo.) block, northwest corner State and Ninth streets, 1860; Ninth street, between State and Peach, 1878.

Stancliff block, 1116 State street, 1870.

M. A. Wilson, M.D.

Shannon, (H. C.) block, 814 and 816 State street, 1855.

Sterrett block, French street, opposite Reed House, 1851.

Schlaudecker block (owned by Guckenbeil, Weiss, Rastatter) 908, 910 and 912 Parade street, 1868.

Siegel (Geo. L.) block, 1119 to 1123 Peach street, built in 1881, remodeled in 1894.

Scarlett block, southwest corner Parade and Tenth streets, 1894.

Second Ward Market House, southeast corner Parade and Twelfth streets, 1895.

Stern block, State street, between Seventh and Eighth, 1870-71.

Strauss block, 1320 Turnpike street, 1873; 1322 Turnpike street, 1885-6.

Stuhlfad block, 1404 Turnpike street, 1886.

Swift block, 1501 Peach street, 1893.

Semel block, 1710 Peach street, 1869.

Smith (Dr.) block, northwest corner Peach and Eighteenth streets, 1875.

Shannon (Mrs. J. W.) block, 1518 Peach street, 1866.

Schultz Bros.' block, northwest corner Peach and Twenty-sixth streets, 1873.

Schulze block, northeast corner Peach and Twenty-sixth streets, 1890-91.

Saltsman block, Peach street, near Twelfth: first building, 1883; second building, 1889.

Schabacker block, northwest corner Peach and Thirteenth streets, 1874.

Schuster block, Peach street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth, 1891.

Steiner block, northeast corner State and Eighteenth streets, 1885.

Smith block, 1620 Parade street, 1878.

Shalkman block, 1210 and 1212 Parade street, 1891.

Schneider block, 910 Parade street, 1885.

Sedelmyer block, 908 Parade street, 1887.

T

Trask block, 817 and 819 State street, 1873.

Troy Steam Laundry, State street, between Fourth and Fifth, remodeled in 1892.

Tonson block, southwest corner Eighteenth and Holland streets, 1885.

U

Union block (Reed, Gunnison, Gallagher), North Park Row, 1861-62.

Union Railroad Depot, 1864.
Ultsch block, Eighteenth street, between Walnut and Chestnut, 1883.

V

Vollmer block, 1521 Peach street, 1861.

W

Walther (J. F.) block, southwest corner State and Eighth streets, 1867.

Walther (F.) block, southeast corner State and Eleventh streets, 1867.

Walther (F. G.) block, 1620 Peach street, 1892.

Wilcox House block, two south buildings, in 1873; north building, 1876.

Wheeler & Williams block, Eighth street, between State and French, 1886.

Wright (now Harlan) block, northeast corner State and Fifth streets, 1888-9.

Wayne block, 725 and 727 State street, 1870; remodeled in 1894.

Wilson House, State and Turnpike streets, 1887-8.

Wittich block, southwest corner State and Tenth streets, 1890.

Walker (T. W.) block, 1305 State street, 1869-70.

Wetmore block (Kimberly House), corner building, 1879; old Foster mansion remodeled in 1885.

Warfel (J.) block, northeast corner Peach and Sixteenth streets, 1857.

Warfel (M.) block, 12 West Seventh street, 1854.

Wingert block, Peach street, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth, 1895.

Willis block, 630 Parade street, 1884.

Y

Yantzer & Greiner block, southwest corner Peach and Twenty-fifth streets, 1870.

Yochim block, Peach street, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth, 1873 or 1874.

Z

Zeigler block, 1012 State street, 1890.

Zuck block, southwest corner Peach and Sixteenth streets, 1872; southeast corner Peach and Sixteenth streets, 1892-3.

Zepfel block, Peach street, near Fourteenth, 1887.

CHAPTER XV.

HOTELS, ANCIENT AND MODERN—MARKETS AND MARKET HOUSES—PUBLIC HALLS—THE MILITARY.—[See Chapter XV, General History.]

IT has already been stated that the first public house in Erie was started by Col. Seth Reed, the pioneer of the Reed family, in a one-story log cabin which he built at the mouth of Mill creek. This was in 1795, and the establishment was dignified with the high-sounding title, "Presque Isle Hotel." The following year the Colonel erected a large two-story log house on the southwest corner of Second and Parade streets, which he placed in charge of his son, Rufus S., who kept a tavern and store in it until 1799, when it burned down. The next season Rufus S. Reed rebuilt it, and for some years afterward carried on business at that place.

The third public house was built by George Buehler, in 1800, at the northeast corner of French and Third streets, which became known at a later date as the Rees House and the McConkey House, from the name of its respective landlords, Thomas Rees, jr., and Thomas McConkey. This was the headquarters of Perry during his stay in Erie.

Later hotels or taverns were as follows:

The Bell House at Sixth and French streets, built by William Bell in 1805, and kept in succession by himself, William Hughes and John W. Bell. It was torn down in 1871, to make room for the Becker block.

The American Hotel, on the site of the Dime Bank building, a stone structure, which stood until 1875, built by Robert Brown in 1811, and kept by him until 1829, when he was succeeded by Joseph Y. Moorhead.

Dickson's Hotel, at Second and French streets, built by John Dickson just before the last war with Great Britain.

The Dobbins House at State and Third streets, in which Lafayette was entertained, built by Capt. Daniel Dobbins in 1815, and still standing.

The Farmer's Hotel, at Fifth and French streets, built in 1820 by James Duncan, and kept by Capt. Dewey, John Duncan, and, in comparatively recent years, by John Boyle.

The Laird House, which occupied the lot now covered by the Walther block, at State and Eighth streets, built by Thomas Laird in 1829, and removed in 1867.

The Park House, on the site of the City Hall, built by John Morris in 1829.

STILL LATER PUBLIC HOUSES.

The Erie House, at Front and French streets, kept by John Zimmerly (now used by the Bethel Association).

The Lafayette House, on the west side of French street, near Fifth, kept by Mr. Duttlinger.

The United States Hotel, a large brick building, at the northeast corner of Second and French streets, kept by George W. Reed, Capt. D. P. Dobbins, H. L. Brown, sr., and others.

The Canal House, at Fourth street and the canal, kept at various times by Mr. Diefenbach.

The Cronenberger House, on Fifth street and the canal, kept by John Cronenberger.

The Franklin House, at Second and State streets.

The Sunbury House, on the east side of French street, near Second, opened by Mr. Schafer.

Keefer's Hotel, on the site of the present Liebel House, kept by S. W. Keefer, a famous landlord in his day.

The Western Hotel, kept by A. M. Tarbell, at Eighth street and the canal.

A hotel on the site of the present Park View Hotel, which was built about 1838.

The Commercial House, near the depot, kept by John Anthony (now the Pittsburg House).

In 1835, Hiram L. Brown came from North East, purchased of Joshua Beers the brick block erected by the latter in 1827-28, and in the spring of 1836 opened the Eagle Hotel. He carried on the hotel business in that building until its destruction by fire April 1, 1851. Mr. Brown immediately erected a five-story structure on the site of the old building. This was kept by Mr. Brown until his death in March, 1853. It was long called Brown's Hotel, but, on falling into the control of Col. Ellsworth, in 1869, the name was changed to the Ellsworth House. Among the managers during the interval between Mr. Brown's death and Col. Ellsworth's purchase, were Wm. Walker, Gen. H. L. Brown, Loomis & Ross and Loomis & Tyler. Col. Ellsworth sold the property in 1883, and it was abandoned as a hotel. The premises were bought by Wm. L. Scott, who had the building torn down in the spring of 1891, with the intention of erecting a handsome structure upon the site. Unfortunately for the city, he died before his plans were completed, and the lot remains vacant.

Of public houses in what may be called the outskirts of the incipient city, there were the American Eagle Hotel (afterward the South Erie House), and the Western Prospect House, both on Federal Hill, and the Saltsman House, kept by Anthony Saltsman, at the elbow of the Buffalo road, opposite the John R. Saltsman place. The American Eagle Tavern, or South Erie House, once a famous hostelry, was built by Nathan McCammons, on the northeast corner of Peach and Twenty-sixth streets, in the winter of 1817-18. It was purchased by Capt. John Justice in April, 1821, and in 1824 passed into the hands of James Parks. It was subsequently kept by George Kelly, Abraham Shank, M. B. Mills, James Gray, John Wiley and George Tabor. During the speculation of 1837 this property sold for $17,500. The Western Prospect House was kept at various times by George Moore, Thomas Laird, Ira Glazier, George Kelly, Thomas Childs, N. M. Manly, Simeon Dunn and others.

PRESENT HOTELS.

The Mansion House, occupying part of the site of the present Reed House, was built by Rufus S. Reed in 1826, and immediately became the leading hotel of Erie. On the 22d of February, 1839, the town was visited by the most destructive fire that had yet occurred, and the Mansion House, together with all the outbuildings, containing stage coaches, horses, etc., also several frame houses and stores, were consumed. It was all the property of Mr. Reed, excepting the stages, stock, etc., which were principally owned by Messrs. Hart and Bird. With his usual energy and public spirit, Mr. Reed covered the burnt district with a new hotel, known as the Reed House, which was burned in March, 1864, rebuilt and again destroyed by fire in September, 1872. The present building, erected by the Reed estate soon after the third fire, is therefore the fourth hotel structure on the site. Among its best known landlords have been Messrs. Guild, Keith, Griswold, Elliott, Upson, Wadsworth, Johnson, Ellsworth and Coleman, the latter being in charge at present.

Col. Ellsworth, the veteran hotel manager, came to Erie in 1869, as proprietor of Brown's Hotel, the name of which he changed to the Ellsworth House. After some seven years, he went into the Reed House, but continued to operate the Ellsworth House. He remained in the Reed House until 1883, and was succeeded by D. M. Johnson, who was its landlord about five years. A Mr. Eldridge was in charge a short time. He was followed by Maj. W. B. Coleman, who has been the landlord some seven years.

The Liebel House, built by Michael Liebel on the site of the old Keefe House (also known as the United States Hotel), was first opened to the public January 1, 1887. It was originally called the Arlington, but, after several years, the name was very properly changed in honor of its owner and builder. It is fitted up with all of the modern appliances, and, next to the Reed House, is the largest hotel of the city.

The Wilcox House occupies the second and third floors of three buildings on the east side of State street, between Eighth and Ninth, two of which were erected respectively by Mr. Wilcox, of Girard, and Mr. W. E. Hayes, of Erie, in 1873, and the third, or north one, by W. B. & J. W. Hayes, in 1876. The hotel was established by George B. Kimberley in 1880, who continued as host until 1887. One peculiarity of the house is, that, although well patronized from the start, it has never had a bar.

The Arcade Hotel, on State street, east side, adjoining the Keystone Bank and Wayne block, was built by Henry Neubauer, who remains its owner, in 1870. After carrying on a grocery business in the building for eight years, Mr. Neubauer formed a partnership with Jacob Geib, in 1878, and they opened a restaurant and hotel. Mr. Geib withdrew in 1882, and Frank Neubauer became associated with his father, under the firm name of Neubauer & Son, who conducted the business until 1889, when Frank became proprietor, which he still remains.

The Wilson House was built by M. Knobloch in 1887-88, on the triangle formed by the intersection of State, Turnpike and Fourteenth streets. It was opened by J. H. Wilson as landlord, who remains in charge.

The Kimberly, originally known as the Wetmore House, is kept by George B. Kimberly, on the upper floors of the Wetmore buildings, at Seventh and Peach streets. The corner structure was erected in 1879 by J. W. Wetmore, who enlarged and remodeled the Foster mansion adjoining in 1886. Mr. Kimberly took charge as landlord in 1891, and named the hotel as above. He has never had a bar, and does not believe that one is necessary to succeed in the hotel business.

The Moore House, at the northwest corner of State and Eighth streets, was long conducted by Darius Northrup. Arthur O'Donnell became landlord January 7, 1893, and associated John Delaney with him in 1895.

The Livingston, at Eighteenth and Peach streets, is one of the oldest hotel stands in the city. It was long known as the New Moore House, but changed its name when Charles Livingston became the landlord.

The Park View House, on South Park Row, between State and French streets, has been in charge of James D. Allen since 1884. Mr. Allen purchased the premises in the summer of 1895, and intends to put up a larger building on the site.

The Union Depot Hotel, in the Union Depot, has been in operation since the erection of the latter structure in 1864. It was opened by John Moore, and subsequently kept by D. M. Johnson. Charles Kepner is its present landlord, who has had control a number of years.

The Mottin House, opposite the Union Depot, has been in existence since some time previous to the opening of the Lake Shore road, probably about 1849 or 1850. It was built by Daniel Knobloch and opened by a Mr. Sessions, and for many years has been in charge of Charles Holcomb. Among its best known landlords, in the olden days, was A. W. Van Tassel, best known as "Sandy," who was an influential man twenty-five or thirty years ago.

The Massassauga Hotel, the Tracy Point Hotel, the Grove House and the Maples are described under the heading of Pleasure Resorts.

The Metropolitan Hotel, on State street, near Sixteenth, was built by David Schlosser, and completed in April, 1898.

The Palace Hotel, at the corner of Fifteenth and Sassafras streets, was erected during the spring of 1891, by A. Blenner, who withdrew from its management in the summer of 1895. It was originally known as the Central House and the name was changed by the new proprietor.

The South Eric Hotel, on Peach, near Twenty-sixth street, occupies in part the site of one of the oldest hotel stands in the city.

Other public houses are as follows:

Arlington, 149 East Eighth street.

Beck's Hotel, 502 West Twelfth street.

Brown's Avenue Hotel, Eighteenth and Cherry streets.

Carpenter House, 1406 Turnpike street.

Eric and Pittsburg House, 949 West Third street.

European House, 1219 State street.

East Eric Hotel, 249 East Sixteenth street.

Eric Hotel, 1321 Peach street.

Germania House, 1319 Peach street.

Globe Hotel, Fourteenth and Peach streets.

Grant Hotel, 138 West Fourteenth street.

Grabowski House, 1425 Parade street.

Herbert House, Sixteenth and Holland streets.

Link House, 1128 Parade street.

Morgan House, 1117 Peach street.

Ninth Avenue House, 20 West Ninth street.

Pittsburg House, 1505 Peach street.

Railroad House, 1331 Holland street.

Sailors' Home, foot of State street.

Vollmer's Hotel, 1521 Peach street.

Weigeltown Hotel, Twenty-sixth street, near Brown's avenue.

White's Hotel, Fourteenth and Sassafras streets.

PUBLIC HALLS AND PLACES OF AMUSEMENT.

The principal public halls at the beginning of the war for the Union were: Farrar Hall, now the Opera House; Wayne Hall, on the third floor of the building at present occupied by Johnston & Brevillier, and Park Hall, on the second floor of a frame building on the French street side of Central Park. For a number of years all lectures, dramatic entertainments and political meetings on a large scale were held in one or the other of these places. Wayne Hall, though on the third floor, was at one time quite a popular resort. Edward Everett delivered his famous address on Washington within its walls, and it was the scene of Artemas Ward's first appearance in Erie as a lecturer. At a later date, Dreisigaker's Hall, in the present Wayne block, on State street, near Eighth, and the Academy of Music, now Gabel's Hall, took the place of Wayne Hall and Park Hall as auditoriums for gatherings of a public and semi-public nature.

Previous to the erection of the above places, all concerts, entertainments and public assemblies were held in the Court House or in the dancing rooms of the Reed House and American Hotel. Forrest, the great actor, once gave a dramatic performance in the large room of the Reed House, under the management of W. H. Harris.

Farrar Hall (named after F. F. Farrar), which was a long, narrow room, with a stage at the Fifth street end of the same, was converted into the Park Opera House during the winter of 1872-3. The latter was opened to the public March 17, 1873, and, for the period, was a handsome and creditable place of amusement. The owners and builders were F. F. Farrar, A. H. Gray, John Clemens and Wm. M. Caughey. The Opera House was seriously damaged by fire on the 23d of September, 1894, promptly rebuilt in better style than before, and reopened as the New Park Opera House, on March 17, 1895, the twenty-second anniversary of its original dedication to the use of the public.

The history of "Wonderland" is briefly as follows: The idea of a place in Erie that should furnish attractions for the public at a low price of admission was conceived by Walker & Gallagher, who were then together in the printing business. They opened in the Claus block in the fall of 1888, and ran a variety of cheap entertainments for about a year, at a heavy loss. Some time after, Col. McClure started a museum in the store room now occupied by Straus Bros. In the course of a few months he moved to the Claus block, and built up considerable of a patronage. The institution passed into the hands of Joseph E. Gerard and Frank E. Woods, who opened during the first week in September, 1892. They remained in partnership some time, when the former became sole owner, which he still continues to be. The same season Col. McClure started a rival show, called the Crystal Dime Museum, in the Cohen block, near by, but was only able to keep it in operation a few months.

Below are the principal halls for dancing, concert and secret society purposes at present in the city:

Becker's Hall, Becker block, Sixth and French streets.

Brown's Hall, 21 North Park Row.

C. M. B. A. Hall, McGrath's block, State street.

East Erie Turn Hall, Tenth and Parade streets.

Elk's Hall, Ninth and State streets.

Eichenlaub's Hall, 626 and 628 State street.

Gabel's Hall, Gabel block, State street.

Grand Army Hall, 1305 and 1307 State street.

Harugari Hall, 1118 State street.

Hays' Hall, State street near Ninth.

Jarecki's Hall, 728 State street.

Liedertafel Hall, Walther block, State street.

Männerchor Hall, State street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth.

Masonic Hall, 914 and 916 State street.

Metcalfe's Hall, 726 State street.

Music Hall, Scott block, State street.

Nagosky's Hall, Tenth and Parade streets.

Odd Fellows' Hall, Tenth and State streets.

Penn Hall, Penn building, State and Eighth streets.

Pythian Hall, Olds block, State street.

South Erie Turn Hall, Twenty-eighth and Peach streets.

Sterrett's Hall, 515 French street.

Walther's Hall, Eighth and State streets.
Wayne Hall, Wayne block, east side of State street, near Eighth.

Zuck's Hall, Sixteenth and Peach streets.

THE PUBLIC MARKET.

As long ago as 1807 steps were taken by the town Council looking to the erection of a public market house. The building was not completed, however, till late in 1814. It was constructed under the supervision of Thomas Laird, Robert Brown and Ebenezer Dwinell, a committee named by Councils, and the cost was limited to $250. The ordinance provided that Wednesdays and Saturdays should be the market days, and that the Burgess should have charge of the sale of stalls. A hay scales was built by private parties at the corner of the market house in 1819. That the business was not very heavy in either case is proven by a record in the Council books which shows that the general market was leased to Jos. M. Sterrett in 1832 for the sum of twenty dollars, and the hay scales for six dollars.

In 1837 provision was made by Councils for the building of a new market house, to have "brick walls and be 100 feet long, with an attic story." The contract for the brick work was let to Thomas Mehaffey at two dollars per day, and one dollar per day for any hands he might employ; and for the joiner work to A. J. Mead on the same terms. This building stood in the center of the west park, fronting State street, and was rather imposing for the time. It had six columns in front, was without partitions and was well lighted. The first sale of the meat stalls, on March 23, 1839, realized $375, as follows: Stalls numbered one, two and three, to Peter E. Burton for $100, ninety dollars and sixty-one dollars respectively; number four, to Henry Heethman for forty-five dollars; number five, to Jones and Salsbury for thirty-eight dollars; number six, to Henry Heethman for forty-one dollars. During the same month the hay scales became town property, in consideration of the payment by Councils of $250. G. J. Ball, City Clerk, was appointed Market Master, at a salary of $100 per year. This position was afterward filled by Edward B. Lytle and Samuel L. Foster, and it is evident that there must have been a struggle for the place, as the yearly pay was cut down to fifty dollars. Sherburn Smith filled the post of Weigh-master for a number of years.

The market house was torn down in 1866, as a part of the general plan for the improvement of the parks, and from that year on all of the public markets in the city proper were held in the open air along the east side of State street. At the beginning they were mainly limited to the shady part of the street, fronting on the east park, but they frequently lapped over so as to reach to Fifth and Seventh streets. In due time Councils voted to move them further up town, designating Seventh street as the starting point. From there they reached at first up to Tenth and Eleventh streets, and finally, as the population increased, it was not an unusual sight to see a string of teams and benches stretching from Seventh street to the Lake Shore railway bridge.

When South Erie became a borough a market house was built on Peach street between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, which is still standing. Although well planned, it never "took" with the market people, who preferred, for some reason, to go to the outdoor market on State street.

The hay and wood market, which was long held around the park, was removed to Twelfth street about twenty years ago, and from there was again changed to Parade street. About three years ago, Councils established a general market on the west side of the latter thoroughfare, which continued till the abolishment of the street market system.

THE MODERN MARKET HOUSES.

In 1893 a party of gentlemen living south of the Lake Shore R. R., conceived the plan of building an extensive market house in that part of the city. A company for the purpose was incorporated May 23 of that year, with an authorized capital of $100,000. The corporators were William, Fred'k and Park Densmore, John Depinet and Jacob Warfel, the three gentlemen first named taking more than nine-tenths of the stock. The plot of ground on the west side of State street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, was selected as the site of the building, and, by January, 1894, it was ready for occupancy. The Elks Charity Fair was held in it during the latter month, and the building was regularly opened as a market place in February, 1894. It was given the name of the Central Market House.

Contrary to the expectations of the projectors, the market did not meet with favor by the country people, who were in the habit of attending the street market. The Messrs. Densmore were naturally anxious that their enterprise should not be a failure, and as naturally concluded that the surest way to secure patrons for the building was to get rid of the street market. Their first step was to obtain the street market privilege from the city, by outbidding all competitors. They then entered upon an ingenious campaign to have the street market abolished, which did credit to their shrewdness and energy, whatever may be thought of their methods or the result they effected. In consequence chiefly of their efforts, Councils voted, against the protest of a large number of citizens, to abolish the street market upon State and Parade streets on and after April 1, 1895. When this action was taken the city was receiving a net profit of $4,500 per year from the market privileges, with a prospect of a still larger revenue. Those who opposed the abolishment of the market argued that, as State street had for years been in a most disgraceful condition, and as the city treasury was short of funds for its improvement, sound business policy required that the money realized from the market privileges should be retained for a few years and applied toward laying down a decent pavement on the main business avenue of the city.

MARKET HOUSES ON PARADE AND FOURTH STREETS.

The people of Parade street, and the east side generally, were very indignant over the action of Councils, and decided at once that they would have a market upon that street in spite of the city authorities. Measures were promptly taken to organize a market company and a lot was secured at the corner of Tenth and Parade streets. About the same time another company was formed to build a market house at Parade and Twelfth streets. Both organizations were quite determined in favor of their respective localities, and, as a consequence, Parade street has two handsome market houses in close proximity to each other.

The Second Ward Market, as the building at Twelfth and Parade is known, was first opened to the public on Wednesday, May 29, 1895. It was planned by A. F. Myers, a Cleveland architect, and cost about $7,500, exclusive of the ground, which is valued at $9,500. The main stockholders are Charles Huster, M. Detzel, Stephen Grabowski, Max Bosch, C. M. Conrad, F. Koehler, Jackson Koehler, Eugene Loesch, Frank Link, F. J. Detzel and John Knoechel.

The Parade Street Market House, at Tenth and Parade streets, was not formally opened until July 27, 1895, but an out-door market was held on the premises and upon the sidewalk adjoining, in defiance of the city officials, all of the time from April. The company was incorporated on April 8, 1895, with a capital of $15,000. Its officers are: President, John Scarlett; Secretary, Geo. B. Conrath; Treasurer, J. G. Krug; Directors, Alois Nagosky, C. M. Conrad, Jacob Weiss, J. G. Krug, John Scarlett; and its principal stockholders, aside from these parties, are Dr. Reaveley, Edward Heuer, Edward Krauss, William C. Smith, A. Flath, Jackson Koehler, Fred'k Koehler, Wm. F. Momeyer, Felix Graf, P. Dutlinger, Wm. Schneider, F. Wm. Webber, William Lang, Kirschner Brothers, A. Kneib, George Hein, John S. Ruland and P. J. Rastatter. The architect was Charles P. Cody, of Erie. The building stands on leased ground with the privilege of purchase. It cost between $12,000 and $15,000.

It soon became evident to the down-town merchants and property owners that, in order to hold the trade which bade fair to be diverted by the movements above described, a market in the north part of the city was a necessity. Chiefly through the efforts of C. Kessler and W. J. Sands, a large piece of land fronting on State, Fourth and French streets was secured, and an association incorporated under the name of the People's Market House Company, with a capital of $50,000. This amount was promptly subscribed by the following gentlemen: George W. Starr, Charles M. Reed, Charles C. Koib, W. J. Sands, C. Kessler, J. F. Downing, Baker & Ostheimer, W. A. Galbraith, C. M. Conrad, Jackson Koehler, Martin Higgins, W. F. Weiblein, P. Harlan, Fred'k Koehler, F. A. Mizener, Benjamin Whitman, Henry Beckman, Erie Dime Bank, Joseph Johnston, P. Minnig, Frank Neubauer, C. A. Curtze, Henry Herbst, George D. Williams, Dr. John Bryce, Walker & Roberts, Robert Hunter, Wm. B. Trask, C. B. Wuenschell, E. C. Schmidt, F. F. Curtze, Mrs. W. F. Rindenecht, Edward Heuer, Henry Mayo, John Gensheimer, Joseph P. O'Brien, W. W. Lyle, C. Englehart, James T. Noonan, Philip Kuch, C. Rabe, sr., D. F. Matthews, P. A. Becker's Sons, E. S. Rockafeller. H. R. Dunning is the architect of the building, which was commenced about July 1, 1895, and regularly opened on Thursday, Oct. 31 of the same year. The excellent plan and convenient location of this market house assure it a liberal patronage.

MILITARY COMPANIES.

An account of the military organizations in the city and county previous to the war for the Union is given in the General Chapters of this book, to which those are referred who desire information on the subject. After the war the military spirit was dormant until 1871, when the Erie Guard, Co. B, Seventeenth Regiment, was organized, with C. W. Lytle as Captain. His successors in command were Adam Kurtis, J. W. Burns, J. J. Baxter and O. S. Riblet. Two of its Captains, Lytle and Kurtis, became Colonels of the Seventeenth Regiment. The company went out of service in the summer of 1887 or 1888.

Captain J. S. Riddle organized the McLane Light Guard, Co. C, Seventeenth Regiment, in March, 1875. He was succeeded by Captain John Dodge after the misfortune which caused Captain Riddle to lose his leg. The company was mustered out at the expiration of its term of service. Both of these companies responded to the call of the State during the riots of 1877.

The Sheridan Guard, Co. G, Seventeenth Regiment, was organized in 1873. Its Captains, in succession, were Charles D. Sweeney, John Craine and John H. Wilson. The company disbanded in 1880, at the same time the regiment was mustered out of service.

The Noble Light Guard, an independent company, was recruited in 1880 by Captain Elzie, and had an existence of several years.

The Governor's Guard, Co. E, Seventeenth Regiment, was organized in 1880, with C. C. Hearn as Captain, who soon retired. His successors have been F. M. Lamb, elected in 1880; D. S. Crawford, elected in 1882 and 1887; Charles N. Dinkey, elected in 1891; and Harry C. Mabie, elected in 1893. Messrs.

Lamb and Crawford were promoted to be Majors, and Mr. Dinkey resigned for business reasons. When the Seventeenth Regiment was mustered out in 1880, this organization became Co. C, of the Fifteenth Regiment. The present Lieutenants are: First, J. Wilson Hall; second, Philip Hockenbury. The armory of the company is in the Becker block, which they have occupied since 1882.

Company A, Fifteenth Regiment, is the outgrowth of a political marching club organized during the campaign of 1888, and known as the Culbertson Zouaves. The "boys" rather enjoyed the military drill in which they had been exercised, and, after the election, learning that there was a vacancy of one company in the Fifteenth Regiment, offered to fill it, and were mustered into the State service May 10, 1889. Their armory was in the Noble block (now Penn building) until May 1, 1894, when they changed to the Wayne block. The principal officers have been as follows: Captains, John B. Boyd and James H. Hoskinson; First Lieutenants, W. W. Reed, C. C. Middleton and Ralph B. Sterrett; Second Lieutenants, Frank W. Bailey, John D. Sullivan, James H. Hoskinson, Ralph B. Sterrett and Charles E. Spencer.

Companies A and C were called upon, in connection with the entire Fifteenth Regiment, to do very hard and unpleasant service during the Homestead riots, in 1892. They left Erie at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of July 11, and did not return until the 19th of September. On their arrival home they were enthusiastically received by the citizens and a banquet was provided for them.

The Fifteenth Regiment, to which the Erie companies are attached, is a part of the National Guard system of Pennsylvania. Its chief officers are: Colonel, W. A. Kreps, of Mercer county; Lieutenant-Colonel, W. A. Mechling, Butler county; Majors, D. S. Crawford, of Erie county, and W. W. Hanna, of Mercer county. Other officers of the regiment from Erie are: Dr. Wallace R. Hunter, Lieutenant-Surgeon on Col. Kreps's staff, and Louis G. Brown, Adjutant on the staff of Maj. Crawford.

NATIONAL GUARD.

The National Guard of Pennsylvania consists of one division, under the command of

J. W. Wetmore

Maj. Gen. George R. Snowden, of Philadelphia, acting under the orders of the Governor, who is Commander-in-chief. The division is composed of three brigades, commanded as follows:

First Brigade, Brig. Gen. John W. Scholl, of Norristown.

Second Brigade, Brig. Gen. John A. Wiley, of Franklin.

Third Brigade, Brig. Gen. J. P. S. Gobin, of Lebanon.

The Second Brigade embraces the Fifth, Tenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Eighteenth regiments, division A of the naval reserves, the Sheridan Troop of Tyrone and Battery B of Pittsburg—in all about 3,000 men.

Each regiment is divided into two battalions. The First Battalion of the Fifteenth Regiment is commanded by Maj. Crawford, of Erie, and the second by Maj. Hanna, of Mercer county.

CHAPTER XVI.

MISCELLANEOUS—INFORMATION ON A VARIETY OF SUBJECTS—CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION OF 1895.

THE most interesting and impressive event in the recent history of Erie was the celebration, on the 9th, 10th and 11th of September, 1895, of the one hundredth year of the city's existence.

At no time since Erie was founded has the city been so generally and handsomely decorated, nor the interest and enthusiasm of the people so universal and hearty. On State, Peach, Parade and other business streets nearly every building was elaborately trimmed with flags, streamers and appropriate designs, while there was scarcely a business house or private residence in any part of the city that did not exhibit some beautiful emblem. Four very fine arches were erected in prominent locations, viz.: One at Peach and Twenty-sixth streets, in memory of Washington and Lafayette; one on Peach street, near the Union depot, extending a generous welcome to all; one, as a testimonial to Anthony Wayne, across State street, between Tenth and Eleventh; and one on State street, opposite the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument, in remembrance of the services of Perry and Dobbins. Central Park was brilliantly illuminated each night of the festivities, and even the street cars, hacks, drays, many private carriages and the boats in the harbor were gaily fitted up in honor of the occasion. Erie never saw such vast crowds, nor such a bountiful display of home pride and genuine good will among its citizens as was witnessed during the three days of the Centennial celebration.

On Monday evening, the 9th, there was a splendid bicycle parade, in which some five hundred riders took part, each machine being more or less decorated for the purpose. Many novel and effective features were shown that called forth continual applause from the tens of thousands who lined the route.

Tuesday, the 10th, was ushered in with a salute of one hundred guns, and the ringing of bells throughout the city. At 10:30 in the morning there was a parade of seven thousand Sunday-school children, including all classes, creeds and colors. Each child carried a small American flag, and each of the five divisions in the procession was led by a brass band or a drum and fife corps. The children were accompanied by their pastors and teachers, all being under the marshalship of Major Crawford, of the State National Guard. The parade halted before the City Hall, where the children joined in singing 'The Star Spangled Banner" and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." An inspiring incident of the morning was "The Living Flag," formed of two hundred and fifty little girls, suitably dressed and arranged upon an inclined stage built up against the front of Park Presbyterian Church. Commencing at 1 P. M., the Pennsylvania League of American Wheelmen, which held its annual session in the city, gave a number of exciting bicycle races upon the Reed track, on the Lake road. At 2 o'clock the literary exercises of the day were begun on a platform upon the north front of the City Hall. Historical addresses were delivered by J. F. Downing, James Sill and H. C. Missimer, and a Centennial poem was read by Henry Catlin. Judge Vincent presided, and the proceedings were opened with prayer by Rev. J. C. Wilson, of the United Presbyterian Church, and closed with a Pontifical benediction by Bishop Mullen, head of the Roman Catholic diocese of Erie. Later in the afternoon the corner-stone of a proposed free public library was laid by the Masonic fraternity on a lot upon Seventh street, just east of Freich, donated by Mrs. M. Sanford and Miss Laura G. Sanford. The official program of the day ended with a grand jubilee concert in the Opera House, which was participated in by all of the musical societies in the city. One of the incidents of the evening was the singing of a Centennial ode, composed by Rev. A. H. Caughey, and set to music by H. N. Redman.

On Wednesday, at sunrise, one hundred more guns were fired, and the bells were rung as before. From 9 A. M. until late in the afternoon a spirited series of boat races took place on the bay. At 10 o'clock the historical and industrial parade, the largest and finest ever seen in Erie, began its course through the principal streets, marshalled by E. J. Riblet and a number of aids. It was five miles long, and took about two hours to pass a given point. In the afternoon the civic societies, military and naval organizations marched in procession, under the same leadership, forming a line two or three miles in length, and only exceeded in interest by the parade of the forenoon. Among the participants were the Fifteenth Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, with a full force of officers and about five hundred men. The celebration ended with a magnificent display of fireworks on the bay, which was witnessed from the front of the city by the largest audience ever brought together in Erie.

During the three days' festivities there was a daily Lafayette reception in the historic Dobbins house, and the ladies also conducted a museum, art gallery, old folks' concert and old-time kitchen in the People's Market House, at State and Fourth streets, all of which were well attended.

A tribe of Indians, numbering over a hundred, from the Cattaraugus Reservation in New York, gave exhibitions daily of aboriginal customs, amusements, modes of life, etc., on the base ball grounds.

The daily press of the city did their whole share in aiding the celebration, by printing very creditable special editions, and the occasion was not only widely noted by the papers of other cities, but, in several instances, elegantly illustrated.

The Executive Committee of the Centennial, which had the appointment of the sub-committees and general charge of the arrangements, was composed of the following gentlemen: F. F. Adams, Chairman; Walter Scott (Mayor), E. Camphausen, W. J. Sell, F. P. Magraw, S. W. Bolles, E. J. Howard, J. P. Hanley, F. Brevillier, W. J. Sands, M. Liebel, Joseph H. Williams, John Flecharty, J. F. Downing, Harry Vincent and A. B. Felgemaker.

THE TANNING INDUSTRY.

The pioneer tannery of Erie was built by Ezekiel Dunning, on Holland street, between Fifth and Sixth. It fell into the hands of J. M. Sterrett and was kept up until 1852. Samuel and Robert Hays started a tannery in 1805, near the corner of Eleventh and French streets, which finally became the sole property of Samuel. It was conducted until 1876 or '77 by his sons, W. B. and J. W. Hays. The next tanneries were started by William Arbuckle in 1820, on Eighteenth street, west of Myrtle, and by Luther P. Searles, some years later, on the bank of Mill creek, where the stream crosses Ninth street. The first mentioned was given up in 1880, and the second became the property of J. J. Fuzler, who took John Sanner into partnership. C. E. Gunnison & Co. started their tannery on Eighteenth street, between Sassafras and Myrtle, in the winter of 1857. A tannery was established in 1862 or '63 by Joseph Richtscheid, on Eleventh street, between German and Parade, and discontinued in 1880. About 1840, Abraham Johnson and John H. Walker built a large tannery at the southeast corner of Eighth and Holland streets. They discontinued the business after a few years. For a year or so the building was leased by Mr. Fuezler. It was consumed by fire in 1859 or 1860. The Streuber tannery, on State street, near the New York, Chicago and St. Louis R. R., was started in 1867, by John Streuber. F. R. Simmons bought the Fuezler tannery in 1880, put up new buildings in 1881, and has added largely to the property since. Most of the leather manufactured in Erie in the early days was sold to home dealers; now it is mainly disposed of to the large factories in other cities. [See Chapter XIV, General History.]

NATURAL GAS.

Indications of natural gas in the vicinity of the city were observed long before it began to be bored for as a source of heating. The most remarkable flow was on the Knox farm, just outside of the southern city limits, on the line of State street, where gas emanated at times in sufficient quantity, when lighted, to create a brilliant illumination. From some cause, the supply has almost or entirely ceased. Emissions of natural gas are quite observable at certain periods along the south side of the bay, between the Pittsburg docks and Tracy Point. It has been lighted on the surface of the water, and the flame would last at times for several seconds. Impelled by the belief that where there is gas there must be oil, Clark McSparran, in 1864, put down the first well at Erie in search of the latter fluid, which he failed to find in paying quantities. A similar experience attended later experiments, but gas was almost invariably found to an extent that would have proved fairly profitable had its value been known at the time. The boring of wells to secure gas for fuel did not commence until a later date. It is estimated by some that enough gas has been allowed to run to waste in the various efforts to find oil in and about Erie to have supplied the entire city for a long period.

John J. Roemer claims to have been the first person in Erie to apply natural gas to practical use. Fully thirty years ago he pipied gas from a well along Mill creek to his office, and used it for lighting and warming the same.

TEST GAS WELL.

It is almost forgotten by most of our citizens that the deepest and perhaps the costliest well in the country was put down at Erie for the purpose of testing whether gas could be found to a permanent and profitable extent. An organization for the purpose, under the name of the Presque Isle Natural Gas Co., was formed at the Board of Trade rooms in June, 1887. During the boring of the well two sets of tools were lost, and the subscribers finally became discouraged early in 1889. The well, which was on the Reed tract, near the intersection of Fifth and German streets, reached a depth of 4,585 feet, and, in all, the large sum of $14,790 was expended upon the enterprise. This amount was furnished by 135 stockholders, who are deserving of great credit for their willingness to aid in the experiment. At the depth of 4,380 feet the temperature at the bottom of the well was ascertained to be 100 degrees Fahrenheit, and the tools when brought up were too hot to be safely handled. It is claimed by the managers of the company that at no time was sufficient gas found to indicate a valuable supply—in fact, that no gas was met with that was worth talking about. This was so different from most of the other wells put down in the city that it indicates either an unfortunate site for the experiment, or that the gas-producing rock lies deeper at that point than elsewhere in Erie county. Some of the stockholders still believe that the company would have been warranted in going 500 or 1,000 feet further into the bowels of the earth.

DESTRUCTIVE FLOODS IN MILL CREEK.

The usually insignificant stream of Mill creek, which flows nearly through the center of the city, is subject to sudden and sometimes destructive floods.

In 1878, James Dodsworth and daughter, who lived near the creek on Seventh street, were drowned by an extraordinary rise in the stream.

In May, 1893, an unprecedented fall of rain swelled the creek into a torrent. The bridges and culverts became clogged, and the stream was forced out of its channel in several places. On the night of May 16th, it broke over Eighteenth street, and a large body of water ran down French street nearly to Eleventh, tearing up the asphalt paving and the sidewalks and driving many families out of their homes. A boy named Jacob Heberle was drowned, and various persons narrowly escaped death. It was estimated that the damage to property along the stream amounted to $100,000. The city suffered a loss of quite $15,000 in injuries to bridges, culverts and streets. A number of people had to be relieved by the public and were generously cared for by the ladies of the Erie Bureau of Charities and other kind-hearted citizens.

GRAND EFFORTS FOR CHARITY.

Probably the two greatest efforts for charity in the history of the city were made by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks—the first in the form of a fair, and the second in the shape of a charity edition of the Daily Herald. The fair was held in the Central Market House during the month of January, 1894, and the Society was aided by the ladies of a number of the city churches. The cash receipts were $5,130.51, and the disbursements $451.53, leaving a net profit of $4,678.98, which was placed in the treasury of the Bureau of Charities. Donations of packages for the worthy poor were received, in addition, to the value of $1,000.00.

The Elks' Charity Herald was printed on April 23, 1895, and reached a circulation of some 50,000 copies. It embraced thirty-two pages of the usual size of the Daily Herald, all of the matter in which was written and edited by the Elks and their friends. The Treasurer of the Erie Bureau of Charities received a check for $2,420.50, the net proceeds of the enterprise.

The Order of Elks is entitled to unusual credit for inaugurating and carrying out to a successful conclusion the most notable charity undertakings ever known in the city.

MUSICAL ORGANIZATIONS.

The earliest musical convention in Erie of which any record is at hand was held in 1855, under the direction of W. H. Bradbury. Later ones were conducted by Profs. Taylor, Emerson, Webster, Palmer and Root. The Erie Liedertafel was organized September 2, 1862, being an outgrowth of the Arion Society, a small German organization. Prof. Charles Diefenbach was the first Director of the Liedertafel. The Union Musical Association, organized in 1868, and conducted in succession by L. M. Little and G. F. Brierly, was a notable institution in its day. The Orpheus Society, still in existence, was founded in November, 1878, with Henry Catlin as President and G. F. Brierly as Director. An association under the name of the Harugari Mannerchor was started in January, 1872, which was changed to the Erie Mannerchor in 1875. The Ladies' society, in connection therewith was formed in 1885. The lot on State street upon which the building of the Mannerchor stands was bought about 1887, and the corner stone laid in 1889. Among other musical societies have been the Teutonia, with Prof. John Eckert as Director, and the Schurzo, of which F. Brevillier was President.

The latest musical organizations of prominence (not otherwise noted) have been the Erie Conservatory of Music, organized in June, 1893, with G. W. Hunt as Director and Miss Laura Carroll Dennis as vocal teacher; the Erie Church Musical Society, organized September 14, 1894, with H. N. Redman as Director; and the Erie Vocal Society, organized in October, 1894, with H. J. Fellows as Director. The Conservatory of Music, which at one time seemed quite flourishing, was discontinued in August, 1895. During its short career it developed some of the finest musical talent now in the city.

Two other well-known organizations were in existence in 1895, viz.: The Cæcilian Quintette, formed in 1891, composed of Mrs. Geo. B. Swaney, Mrs. P. E. Eggleston, Mrs. C. C. Colby, jr., H. R. Barnhurst and Geo. E. Barger; and the Schumann Quartette, formed in 1893, with Mrs. J. P. Covert, Mrs. C. W. McKean, Mrs. W. H. F. Nick and Miss Louisa Whitehead as its members.

Of the early bands, the best remembered was that led by M. W. Mehl, which was in existence when the war broke out, and accompanied the troops to the front. Sometime during the war or soon after, Anton Knoll started his famous band, and long remained its leader. It was allowed to run down, but was reorganized in the fall of 1895.

PRICES AND WAGES IN THE EARLY DAYS.

A contract was made by the County Commissioners on the 27th of October, 1829, for twenty to eighty cords of stone at $5 per cord. David Kennedy, on the date last mentioned, offered to furnish 100,000 brick for the proposed new jail at $3.25 per thousand. This offer was thought to be too high and was not accepted. On the 24th of September, 1835, the County Commissioners contracted for 100 cords of "good, dry, hard wood," at $1.12½ per cord. Subsequent contracts were made as follows: $1.50 per cord in 1837; $1.45 in 1840; $1.25 in the fall of 1841; $1.00½ in the fall of 1842. The brick for the courthouse were furnished in 1852, by Daniel Youngs, at $3.87½ per thousand.

When Gunnison's tannery was built, in 1857, wages were much lower than now. Common laborers received from fifty to seventy-five cents per day, and carpenters $1.25. Bricklayers received $1.75 per thousand for laying brick. It may be safely stated that wages and salaries have advanced in Erie since 1860 from twenty-five to fifty per cent.

A noteworthy feature of the iron manufacture in Erie is the difference in prices between the early 60's and to-day. "The class and capacity of engine and boiler that twenty years ago commanded $2,800 to $3,000 as the purchase price can now be bought of equal capacity and superior finish for $450 to $500. The difference in cost is the result of cheaper material, better facilities for manufacturing, and the more general application of machinery in all processes of manufacture."

"The extremes in prices of flour reached within the last thirty-five years have been equally remarkable. Within that time a barrel of flour, of average grade, has been sold for twenty-two dollars, and the same grade for $3.60. The high price was of course largely owing to the war, while the low price was the result of general business depression and abundant crops."

CRANBERRIES AND CRANBERRY DAY.

Up to twenty or twenty-five years ago the peninsula abounded in cranberries, the production of which was carefully looked after. An act of Assembly imposed a fine of not less than ten dollars, nor more than twenty-five dollars, on any person who should gather cranberries between July and October. The first Tuesday of October was "Cranberry day," a great event in olden times. Large parties would cross the bay the night before and remain until morning. The event was regarded as a general holiday, and awaited as eagerly as the Fourth of July or Christmas.

PIONEER MECHANICS.

The following were the pioneers of Erie in their respective trades: Jonas Duncan and John Teel, carpenters; Peter Growtow, mason and bricklayer; Robert Kendall, cooper; John Morris, hatter; Thomas Stewart and Archibald McSparren, tailors. There was no regular copper or brass smith until 1822, when Charles Lay opened a shop on the south side of East Park.

TAXES IN 1820.

The total borough tax in 1820, as shown by the duplicate of that year, was $175.20. Rufus S. Reed stood highest in valuation of real estate, viz.: $6,798, followed by the heirs of John Kelso with $3,740; P. S. V. Hamot, $3,120; Judah Colt, $2,940; John W. Bell, $2,052; Giles Sanford, $2,012; Thomas Laird, $1,579; Samuel Hays, $1,552; Benjamin Wallace, $1,461; heirs of William Wallace, $985; Thomas H. Sill, $730. The corner where the Dime Savings Bank stands, with the buildings then occupying it, was valued at $1,600; the four lots occupied by the Reed House and Ellsworth House, at $656; the Teel House with two lots, on Peach, from Ninth to Tenth streets, at $290; house and two lots, corner of Seventh and Sassafra, at forty-nine dollars; Farmers' Hotel, Fifth and French streets, $587; lot corner French and Second, $850; Dobbins' house and lot, $575; two lots of George A. Eliot, corner of Peach and Sixth, present site of Mrs. Strong's house, $300; the lot on which Carter's and Murphy's stores stand, $150; house and two lots, northeast corner of State and Tenth, $164; sixteen lots, corner of Twelfth and Parade, on the west side of the latter street, sixty-four dollars; thirty-two north of these, $172. The lots on which the Exchange, Rindernacht and other blocks stand, were purchased by John Warren in 1824 for $300. Tax was then collected by the High Constable.

THE ORIGINAL TOWN OF ERIE.

Erie was originally nearly all at the mouth of Mill creek. Travelers from the east entered by Parade and East Sixth streets, the latter intersecting the Lake road near the eastern limits of the town. From Mill creek, the town gradually extended up Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth streets to French, which was long the main business artery.

A CURIOUS CUSTOM.

A custom prevailed, prior to 1810, which required every man to spend each Saturday afternoon in grubbing out stumps from the streets. There was also an ordinance in operation until June, 1846, requiring every person who got on a spree to dig three stumps from the highway as a penalty. Whether it had a tendency to decrease intemperance, the ancient chronicles fail to relate.

DRIVE ALONG THE BEACH.

In 1813 there was a fine drive on the sand beach of the bay, from State street to the mouth of Cascade creek. It had been used for several years, and was a favorite resort among those who were fortunate enough to possess a saddle horse or suitable turnout. With all the talk of late years about low water in the lake, it is doubtful if it has been worse than in seasons long ago. The average depth of water in both bay and lake depends very much upon the rainfall along the entire upper chain.

ERIE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This popular organization was founded on the 12th of September, 1888, by a number of gentlemen living in the city and neighboring townships. Its first exhibition was held on that date, and it continued giving displays of fruits and flowers at intervals of one, two or three months until 1891. In the latter year it organized an annual chrysanthemum exhibit, and continued the same till 1894, when a general display of flowers was made. L. H. Couse has been President and G. Lyman Moody Secretary of the society from its organization.

AN ANCIENT STRUCTURE.

The ruins of a large brick structure, erected near the eastern end of the peninsula long prior to American occupation, were still to be seen in 1795. Who its builders were, or what the purpose of its erection was, is unknown.

LETTER CARRIER SYSTEM.

The letter carrier system was introduced into Erie on April 1, 1867, under the postmas-tership of Judge Sterrett. The first carriers were Phineas Wheeler, Jacob Rindernacht, Peter W. Smith, Thomas Lee, George Momeyer, George Mallory and Spencer H. Booth.

ERIE CITY DIRECTORY.

This valuable publication, which may be said to be one of the "institutions" of Erie, was commenced by W. P. Atkinson in June, 1871, and has been printed by the same gentleman ever since. It is issued regularly in June of each year. The first Directory of the city was published in the spring of 1860, by H. W. Hulbert, who conducted a small job office.

MASONIC RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

The Lake Shore Masonic Relief Association was organized April 16, 1872, for the purpose of more effectually assisting the widows and orphans of worthy brethren. By the payment of a small assessment, the family of each deceased member received a considerable sum in case of his death. Its secretaries (who were the executive officers) at various periods were: E. A. Simons, A. A. Adams, Dr. W. H. Luce and Wm. Hinrod. The association was dissolved by the action of its board of directors in the latter part of 1891.

ART AND ARTISTS.

Among the best known artists have been Moses Billings, who was long the leading portrait painter, Mrs. I. B. Gara, Mrs. John Abell, Miss Ella Babbitt, C. A. Prescott and Miss Sara H. Woodruff. Miss Rosina Hayt was long employed as teacher of drawing in the High school. The first regular art school was established by Miss L. O. Card, now Mrs. Henry Catlin. The Sevins Art Store, started in 1850, by J. T. Sevins, father of the Sevins Bros., present owners, has been largely instrumental in fostering a taste for fine paintings and engravings. F. J. Bassett has been longest in the photographic business of any person now in the city. L. B. Chevalier was for years the leading "general utility" artist. He was a man of a good deal of skill in his line, and gave his attention to all classes of work.

MASONIC HISTORY.

The first Masonic society in the city was constituted September 1, 1814, and was known as Lodge No. 124. Its officers were:

W. M., Giles Sanford; S. W., Rufus S. Reed; J. W., John C. Wallace. The warrant of the Lodge was vacated for delinquency March 7, 1825. Presque Isle Lodge, No. 235, the second in order, was constituted March 13, 1849, having for its officers: W. M., Wm. Flint; S. W., James C. Marshall; J. W., W. W. Reed; Secretary, C. G. Howell; Treasurer, Smith Jackson; Senior Deacon, Wm. Wyatt; Junior Deacon, Daniel Dobbins; Tyler, John Lantz. It disbanded May 3, 1864. The dates of organization of the later lodges will be found under the heading of societies.

SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH.

The ladies comprising this Order number 110 in the Erie diocese. Besides the parochial schools previously referred to, they have charge of the Villa Maria Academy, St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, St. Vincent's Hospital and the Old Folk's Home. At their annual retreat held in Erie on August 14, 1895, Sister Eugenie was elected Mother Superior for the fourth time. The Mother Superior is chosen every three years by a vote of the sisterhood.

BEER, ALE AND MALT.

For many years Alfred King was the largest buyer, seller and shipper of barley in Erie. He established an ale brewery near Twenty-sixth street and the cemetery, and a malt house on Parade street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth, which was afterward operated by Birdsall & Parsons, Wm. Densmore, the Straus Brothers & Bell, of Baltimore, and by Jacob Weschler. The property is at present owned by the Straus estate, of Baltimore. After closing out the Parade street malt house, Mr. King started one at Fourteenth and Holland streets, which was subsequently operated by the Messrs. McCarter, J. S. Riddle and others. It is now used as a machine shop.

Mr. Weschler, who was formerly an employe of Mr. King's, built a malt house on West Ninth street in 1873, and erected the original building of the mammoth enterprise at Parade street and the Lake Shore R. R. in 1883. He was the most successful person in Erie who ever engaged in the malt business, which was probably due to his familiarity with all of its details. Following Mr. King in ale brewing came Downer & Howard, who have always done a prosperous business. An account of the earlier breweries will be found in the General Chapters devoted to manufactories, and the history of the breweries at present in operation is briefly given under the appropriate heading in the portion of the work relating to Erie city.

THE LUMBER INTEREST.

Among the early lumber dealers in Erie were George Selden, William Truesdale, Henry Jaques, James & Sanborn and William Walker. The dealers of those days bought most of their material from the country people in the vicinity of the city, and shipped large quantities by lake and canal to Hudson river points. Some of the merchants also took lumber from the farmers in exchange for goods, money being scarce then, a man considering himself very fortunate if he could get enough to pay his taxes. When the canal was opened southward, great quantities of lumber came to Erie from Girard, Lockport, Albion, Conneautville, Spring Corners, Hartstown and other places along its line.

Heman James, who continued the business after Mr. Sanborn retired, sold out to Finn & Stearns. The latter firm, in 1860, bought the first cargo of pine lumber ever imported into Erie from Canada. George and Thomas H. Carroll located in Erie in 1866, and have continued the business ever since. They removed to their present site in 1871. Other lumber firms were Ketcham & Bannister, who started about 1867; Wheeler & Hill, in 1869 or 1870, and Clemens, White & Co., in 1871. Mr. White withdrew from the latter firm in 1873, and finally it fell solely into the hands of James McBrier, who remained in the business until the spring of 1888.

The first planing mill in Erie was fitted up in an old building on Eleventh street, near Holland, by the three Carter brothers, about the year 1844. It was a sad and curious circumstance that two of the brothers each had a hand cut off by the rip-saw in the mill. The next firm to start a planing mill was Constable & Jones, whose business is continued by the Constable Bros.

EFFECTS OF RAILROADS.

It is interesting to note the affinity of population for the lines of travel. Before the era of railroads Wattsburg, Waterford and Edinboro were the principal business marts outside of Erie city. The operation of the canal built up Albion, Lockport, Girard and Fairview, but when that thoroughfare was abandoned their growth ceased. It is true they had railroads near them, but not through them. Corry, North East, Union City and Mill Village have been created within a comparatively short time by railroads.

ERIE CAPITAL ABROAD.

A large amount of Erie county capital is employed in other counties and States. William L. Scott, William A. Galbraith, J. F. Downing, Addison Leech, W. B. Trask, T. M. Walker, the Reeds, John C. Brady and others of Erie; L. Hammond and T. A. Allen, of Corry; Samson and Alfred Short, of North East; W. C. Culbertson and R. S. Battles, of Girard; and C. M. Wheeler, of LeBeuf, have large investments in various portions of the United States, and some in Canada.

A HEALTHY CITY.

That Erie is a remarkably healthy locality was strikingly manifested in its comparative exemption from the ravages of cholera in 1832 and again in 1849, when neighboring cities suffered so severely. The death rate is low and epidemics are unknown. The late Dr. Germer, City Health Officer, used to take particular pride in claiming, and showing the figures to prove his claim, that Erie was one of the healthiest if not the very healthiest city in America.

LIME AND CEMENT TRADE.

Benjamin Soules was the first person to establish a lime kiln in Erie in 1834, near the foot of French street. Prior to that, all lime was brought from Buffalo or the western end of the lake. At a later date lime kilns were established at various points by Smith Jackson, Halsey Pelton, Dr. Seymour and perhaps others, all of which were abandoned. Henry & Ormsbee started a kiln about 1860, and about 1862 another was built by Spooner & Neiler. These gentlemen, in 1864, bought out the Henry & Ormsbee plant, took John R. Cochran into partnership, and founded the Erie Lime and Cement Company. In due time the concern was purchased by Spooner Rea, who conducted it until 1895. The latter gentlemen moved the plant to the foot of French street, where they had kilns and a dock. The limestone used was from Kelly's Island, and the gypsum from Grand river, Ontario.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

The following are extracts from the records of the borough councils:

June 23, 1817—"Resolved, That Giles Sanford and John Teel be a committee to receive proposals from Gen. Kelso, Capt. Dobbins and Major Wallace to work on certain streets to the amount of their respective taxes."

May 19, 1832—"Resolved, That a public meeting be held by citizens of the borough of Erie regarding the prevalence of cholera morbus and for the adoption of preventive measures. Meeting held Saturday morning, June 23d, Capt. Daniel Dobbins Chairman, Edwin J. Kelso Secretary. Two hundred hand bills were circulated announcing the meeting."

March 25, 1842—"Tax rate fixed at five mills on the dollar"

November 24, 1843—"Resolution passed to pay James Duncan five dollars for keeping fires for the town watch."

"Resolved, That the Weighmaster shall receive all of the receipts from his office as compensation for his services."

GROWTH OF THE BOTTLING BUSINESS.

The Eagle Brewery Bottling Works, corner of Twenty-second and State streets, was purchased December 1, 1892, by its present proprietor, Edward Heuer, the inventory valuation being at that time $10,000. All of the newest bottling appliances and machinery generally have been added, and the plant had, in 1895, an inventory valuation of $25,000. Eight men were employed in the works in 1893; twenty are now employed. In 1893, 2,456 barrels of beer were bottled, or more than 60,000 dozen bottles; in 1894, 3,683 barrels—over 92,000 dozen bottles; in 1895, 5,000 barrels—125,000 dozen bottles. The only beers bottled by this concern are Jackson Koehler's "Export" and "Special Brew."

LARGEST PICNICS AND FAIRS.

Probably the greatest picnic ever held in Erie was that of the Railroad Firemen and Trainmen, held at the Head, on Saturday, August 17, 1895. The reports of the railroad companies show that 9,500 persons came to Erie by rail on that day, and this number was certainly increased by 5,000 or more from the city and vicinity.

Aleman James

The picnics of the Harvest Home Association have always been well attended, and some of them have only been second in size to the above-mentioned. These gatherings have always been held at the Head, usually or invariably in August of each year.

Some of the picnics of the Roman Catholic Church, for charitable purposes, which have been generally held in Cochran's Grove, have been remarkable gatherings. It is no uncommon thing for these picnics to realize a net profit of $2,500 to $3,000.

The Elks' Fair, in the People's Market House, from Monday, October 21, to Saturday, October 26, 1895, was attended by 17,872 persons, and the gross receipts were about $4,000.00.

COAL DEALERS AND DOCK BUILDERS.

Capt. John Dunlap, whose memory goes back as far as any person who is familiar with the lake business, is of the opinion that the first to establish a coal trade at Erie were the Renos, one of whom was the father of the lamented Gen. Reno. Soon after they started, Joy & Webster went into the same line of business, and they were succeeded by others whose names are better known.

Capt. James Dunlap was for years the principal dock builder at the harbor. When his son, Capt. John Dunlap, grew up, he took him into partnership, and, for a long period, the firm built and repaired all the docks in Erie harbor. In due time Mr. Bowers, a son-in-law of Capt. James Dunlap, engaged in the business and has continued it since.

A MEMORABLE EVENT.

Probably the most important event, in its effect upon the reputation of the city throughout the State, was the visit of the Pennsylvania Editorial Association in 1888. The members of the Association, with their ladies, in all numbering some three hundred persons, reached Erie by special train on the evening of June 26, and remained three days. Their treatment was so cordial, and the city was so handsomely decorated in honor of their presence, that every person in the party formed the most pleasant impression of Erie and its citizens. On returning home the editors took special pains to sound the praise of Erie through the columns of their respective journals, and the city became known far and wide as one of the most handsome, prosperous and hospitable in the country.

LOW WATER IN THE LAKE.

The prevalence of low water in Lake Erie for several seasons has led to innumerable suggestions and arguments as to its cause. Some persons think the lakes are gradually drying up, while others contend that the low stage of water is due to the small amount of rainfall over the section of country tributary to these bodies. It will be well to remember, in discussing the question, that stages of low water were noted a hundred years ago, and that they have occurred at various periods during the century. When the pioneers came into Erie county, there was a wide beach along the entire front of the lake from Buffalo to Elk creek, which was used as a road, in the absence of any thoroughfare through the woods. This would indicate a lower stage of water than has been known for a long time, as the beach could not have existed had the lake been at its average height in recent years. Whether the amount of water that falls and flows into Lake Erie is less than it formerly was, or not, it is beyond question that there have been various periods, within the last hundred years, when the level of the lake was as low as it is now or has been recently.

In a symposium of opinions relating to the level of the lakes, in the Chicago Times-Herald of September —, 1895, Capt. Robert Hunter, of this city, is quoted as saying that the water in 1880 was at a high stage. This year (1895) it has averaged three feet below the gauge of that year, while in 1886 it was two to three feet above zero. Capt. John Flecharty stated that a pier mark he established eight or nine years ago shows a fall of about four feet since that time. He had observed that the periods of high and low water extended all the way from seven to twelve years. The United States assistant engineer, in charge of the government works at this port, reported that "the highest average stage of water is in June. In June, 1893, Lake Erie was nine inches above the mean level of that month; in June, 1894, it was a few inches below the mean level. He has found the periods of rise and fall to be irregular, although there are such periods, varying from seven to twelve years, with no apparent system or regularity."

The water in Presque Isle bay on Tuesday night, November 19, 1895, was one foot lower than the zero mark, being the lowest within the recollection of Capt. Hunter.

THE NIAGARA.

It has already been explained that Perry's famous vessel, the Niagara, was sunk in Misery bay, where a portion of her hulk still remains. The exact location of the venerable relic is in the northeast corner of the bay "on a line south by east of the little house at the head of the latter, and not much more than a hundred yards distant from said building." The fragments of the vessel lie north and south, in ten feet of water. During the week of the Centennial celebration in 1895, the site was marked with a spar, so that those who are curious to visit the hulk can easily find the place.

TONNAGE IN 1894 THROUGH THE "SOO" CANAL.

The following information, furnished by a writer in Harper's Weekly, is of local interest: "The tonnage passing last year (1894) through the Sault Ste. Marie was twice that passing Suez, while that of St. Mary's Flats Canal (Detroit river) was five times that of Suez. The round figures are: Suez, 7,000,000 tons; Sault Ste. Marie, 12,000,000; Detroit river, 35,000,000 tons."

EARLY POSTOFFICE SITES.

The postoffice was kept in 1837-40 in the frame building adjoining Allen & Rosenzweig's office on South Park Row, in the rear of the present postoffice.

It was also held for a long time in the old brick structure at the northwest corner of French and Third streets.

EARLY DOCTORS AND DENTISTS.

Among the doctors and dentists during the early sixties, who have died or moved out of the city, were the following:

Doctors—Geo. C. Bennett, Peter, Robert and William Faulkner, E. J. Frazer, J. S. Whillden, E. W. Germer, C. Sevin, H. A. Spencer, J. L. Stewart, W. M. Wallace, Thos. H. Stuart, Chas. Aichner.

Dentists—M. Chapin, O. L. Elliott, C. D. Price, Thompson & Rathburn, T. J. Elliot.

CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION.

The Citizens' Association was organized on April 29, 1895, with the following officers: President, R. S. VanCleve; Vice-Presidents, H. P. Sullivan, George D. Selden; Secretary, E. M. Foye; Treasurer, W. D. Fellows. Its "object is to bring together all good citizens, on a non-partisan, non-sectarian basis, who want to see our affairs, of every name and nature, administered in an enlightened spirit, in the interest of public morals and municipal economy and against vice and lawlessness in all of their forms. The means employed are education and organization, the latter aiming to combine and direct the best forces of the city for the betterment of municipal life." The Association has commenced a series of lectures by leading advocates of Municipal Reform, and gives promise of doing a good work in its line.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

The Grand Army of the Republic numbers about 475 active members in Erie city, 1,450 in the entire county, and 48,000 in the State of Pennsylvania. Below is a list of the posts in Erie county:

- No. 67, Strong Vincent Post, Erie.
- No. 70, J. J. Andrews Post, Corry.
- No. 102, J. W. McLane Post, Union City.
- No. 295, Gen. H. L. Brown Post, Wattsburg.
- No. 240, Col. J. W. Lytle Post, Lundy's Lane.
- No. 309, Maj. W. W. Miles Post, Girard.
- No. 345, John F. Rice Post, Waterford.
- No. 359, Lieut. H. F. Lewis Post, Fairview.
- No. 416, Proudfit Post, Edinboro.
- No. 464, R. W. Scott Post, Erie.
- No. 479, Capt. John M. Sell Post, Westville.
- No. 488, John Braden Post, North East.
- No. 583, Capt. Deveraux Post, East Springfield.

THE CITY OF CORRY.

CHAPTER I.

ORIGIN AND GROWTH—GENERAL DESCRIPTION—SCHOOLS, CHURCHES AND FACTORIES, NEWSPAPERS, SOCIETIES, ETC.

CORRY owes its origin and growth to the circumstance of its being adopted as the point of junction of the Philadelphia and Erie and the Atlantic and Great Western R. R.'s. The Philadelphia and Erie R. R. (then the Sunbury and Erie) was opened from Erie to this point in 1858, and to Warren in 1859. In June, 1861, the Atlantic and Great Western (now the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio) was completed from Jamestown to the junction, and the next year it was continued through to Ohio. The Oil Creek R. R., with a broad gauge track to correspond with the Atlantic and Great Western reached Corry from Titusville in 1862 and the Cross-Cut road was built to Brocton in 1867. These roads were consolidated and are now a part of the Western New York and Pennsylvania R. R. system.

For awhile, the little huddle of shanties that sprung up at the intersection of the Philadelphia and Erie and Atlantic and Great Western R. R.'s was known as "Atlantic and Erie Junction." In October, 1861, a piece of land was purchased by the Atlantic and Great Western R. R. Company, from Hiram Corry, who owned the tract at the junction, and, in consideration of his liberal dealing, Mr. Hill, General Superintendent of the road, named the station in his honor.

The first building was a small, wedge-shaped ticket office and eating house, directly in the angle between the Philadelphia and Erie and Atlantic and Great Western R. R.'s, on the east side. Beginning at this point, the settlement spread out during 1861 along Main street, and to some extent along Cross street. There was little or no improved land in the immediate vicinity, and a good part of the tract since covered by the eastern part of the city was a swamp, grown up with pine and hemlock trees. A less promising location for a town than Corry was at that time could not be conceived by the most lively imagination.

FROM NOTHING TO 7,000 IN A FEW YEARS.

Samuel Downer, a wealthy Boston oil refiner, conceived the notion that by erecting a refinery at some point, adjacent to the oil fields, and convenient for shipping, he would possess an immense advantage over his rivals, who had to carry the crude oil over hundreds of miles of railroad. With this end in view, W. H. L. Smith was sent from Boston in the summer of 1861, to prospect for a favorable site. His choice fell upon the junction, and he purchased fifty acres from Mr. Corry, for what would now seem a "mere so'g." This tract he laid out in town lots, and it was cleared under the superintendence of Eugene Wright, of Boston.

By fall, a frame building had been put up, as the office of the Downer Oil Company, a post office had been established, with C. S. Harris as Postmaster, and a small refinery, known as the "Frenchman's," had been set in operation, in the rear of the present Radiator works. By this time it had dawned upon the minds of a good many people that Corry was destined to become a place of more than ordinary importance. The summer of 1862 witnessed the erection of the Downer & Kent Oil Works, several other factories, the Boston Hotel and Gilson House, and a number of store buildings and residences. People from every section flocked in, many of them men of uncommon dash and fertility of resource. Money was plenty and real estate sold readily.

The founders of the town realized a small fortune from the sale of lots, and several parties who owned land adjoining the plot were also made wealthy. From that period on to the panic of 1873, Corry continued to grow at a rate that encouraged its citizens to think that it would some day be a formidable competitor with Erie for the leading position in North-western Pennsylvania.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

Looking down upon Corry from the hills which surround the city, three valleys are seen extending in as many separate directions, the one to the west being that of the South branch of French creek, the one to the north that of Hare creek, and the one to the east, which is the widest and most important, that of the Brokenstraw. The central portion of Corry is built on the low summit land between these streams, but the residence and manufacturing sections have spread out east, north and west, until they reach into each of the valleys. The South branch of French creek almost touches the southwestern edge of the city, while the Brokenstraw is two or three miles beyond its eastern boundary. Bear creek—so named from the number of those animals that gathered in the swamp on the north-western verge of the city—flows through it from west to east, rising in Wayne township, and emptying into Hare creek. The latter stream, which cuts across the northeastern corner of the city, was named from Michael Hare, who was one of the pioneers of Wayne township, and died at Waterford, at the most advanced age attained by any citizen of the county. It rises in French Creek township, Chautauqua county, New York, crosses Wayne township, and joins the Brokenstraw in Columbus township, Warren county, about three miles east of the city. Hare creek was once navigable for rafts as far up as Corry. A smaller stream than any of the above rises on the high land, in the south part of the city, and enters Hare creek on or near the north-eastern boundary.

The town as laid out by Mr. Smith did not cover more than a third of its present dimensions. Since then, additions have been made which render the city lines about two and a half miles in width from east to west, and nearly three miles in length from north to south. The original owners of the land, besides Mr. Corry, were Amos Heath, H. D. Francis, Mr. Crandall, Anson Johnson, Hollis King, Lorenzo Dow and Mr. Dunham. In laying out the place, a portion was taken from both Wayne and Concord townships, the straight portion of Smith street marking the old boundary between them.

BOROUGH AND CITY CHARTERS.

A charter for a borough was secured in 1863, and the first election held in August of that year. In 1866 the borough was created a city with two wards, the dividing line being the track of the Atlantic and Great Western R. R. The first city election was held in the spring of 1866. The city was divided into four wards twenty years later.

The Mayors of the city have been as follows: W. H. L. Smith, 1866-67; S. A. Bennett, 1867-68; R. A. Palmer, 1868-69; F. S. Barney, 1869-70; M. Crosby, 1870-72; F. A. Phillips, 1872-73; A. F. Kent, 1873-74; B. Ellsworth, 1874-75; T. A. Allen, 1875-79; F. Stanford, 1879-81; J. D. Bentley, 1881-82; T. A. Allen, 1882-83; Isaac Colegrove, 1884-85; J. L. Hatch, 1886; W. C. Shields, 1887; W. E. Marsh, 1888; A. F. Bole, 1889; Eli Barlow, 1890; J. M. Lambing, 1891-92; A. B. Osborne, 1893-94; R. N. Seavor, 1895.

POPULATION.

The population, by the United States census reports, has been as follows at the periods named:

	1870.	1880.	1890.
First ward.....	3,559	2,758	957
Second ward.....	3,250	2,519	1,357
Third ward.....	—	—	1,737
Fourth ward.....	—	—	1,626
Total.....	6,809	5,277	5,677

FACTORIES AND BUSINESS INSTITUTIONS.

As a railroad center and shipping point, Corry has few equals and no superiors among the inland cities of Pennsylvania. With three railroads passing through, giving direct connection with the oil regions, the anthracite and bituminous coal fields and the markets east, west, north and south, the city possesses rare advantages as a manufacturing center. Among the leading industries of Corry are the following:

Howard tannery, erected in 1867—one of the best equipped plants in the country.

Weisser's tannery, erected by Mr. Auer in 1862, and purchased by the present owner in 1871.

The Corry Radiator Works, started in 1892, which supplies power to three other concerns. These establishments occupy the site of the old Downer Works, which were discontinued as a manufactory of oil in 1882, but run two or three years later on a process for distilling tar.

The Corry Chair Co., with a capital of $40,000. This concern bought the works of the Wooden Ware manufactory in 1889. The latter was started in 1865-6.

The Lever Engine Company, occupying the buildings formerly owned by Harmon, Gibbs & Co., and the Ajax Iron Works, erected in 1877. The latter works were damaged by fire on the morning of December 1st, 1895, to the extent of $15,000.

The Climax Machinery Company, formerly known as the Gibbs & Sterrett Works, started some twenty years ago.

The Corry Novelty Works, started in 1870.

The Corry Electrical Works, started in 1894.

Other important industries are as follows: One specialty factory, six cigar factories, two brush block factories, three planing mills, three feed-mills, one flouring-mill, one broom factory, one creamery, one garment factory, one bed-spring works, one bedstead works, three bottling works, two mineral water works, one novelty works, F. Stanford's extensive brickyard, one cigar-box factory, one brewery, two pail and tub works and one copper tempering works.

There is also an extensive killing and packing establishment, and a large supply depot, the latter under the auspices of the Grange.

The hotels and stores of the city are generally creditable and one of the latter enjoys the reputation of carrying the largest stock of its class in the county.

Corry has been unfortunate in having two serious bank failures—the First National having suspended September 14, 1887, and the Corry National November 7, 1891. M. Crosby was appointed receiver of the former and J. W. Sproul of the latter.

The present banking institutions are the Citizens' National, organized December 18, 1890, with a capital of $100,000, and the National Bank of Corry, organized December 12, 1892, capital $50,000.

SCHOOLS.

The schools of the city are held in four large buildings—one in each ward—known respectively as the Hatch, Fairview, Washington street and Concord schools. The first-named is used as a High school, as well as for minor school purposes.

The first school under the control of the Corry board was held in a building on Concord street, which had been ceded by the school directors of Concord township, in the winter of 1863. In 1865, an acre of ground was purchased at the corner of Washington and Essex streets, and the building erected thereon, designated the Union schoolhouse, was completed in March, 1866. In 1865, the board leased a building on East Main street, near the Philadelphia and Erie crossing, where school was held until 1870. In 1866, the old red schoolhouse on the Columbus pike became city property, was re-named Wayne school, number four, and used until the completion of the Hatch school. In 1869, a building was leased on Pleasant street. This burned down in March, 1869; but a room was engaged on the corner of Main street and Second avenue and the school re-commenced in a few days. It was continued until the completion of the Fairview schoolhouse. In 1869 a tax was levied to erect a new brick schoolhouse on the corner of Second avenue and Fairview street, the lot having been purchased two years previous. The building was dedicated April 2, 1870. A new frame building was erected in 1869, on Concord street, for the accommodation of primary pupils, and lots were purchased between Congress and Bond streets, east of Wright, for the erection of a large brick edifice. A special act of Legislature was obtained in 1870 authorizing an additional tax of seven mills. The building was completed in 1871, and, including heating, seating and furnishing, cost $30,000. It was named in honor of J. L. Hatch, who had been a member of the board since its first organization. The schoolhouse on Washington street was destroyed by fire December 12, 1871, and replaced in 1872. The Concord street school building was erected about 1885.

The Superintendents of Schools have been

A. B. Crandall, elected in 1872; V. G. Curtis, elected in 1873; and A. D. Colegrove, elected in 1883, who still holds the position.

In addition to the public schools, there is a prosperous business college, established in 1889 by Charles A. Twining, and a well-attended Conservatory of Music, started some ten years ago. The business college was purchased in June, 1895, by W. E. Tooke, who proposes to make it one of the best institutions of the kind.

CHURCHES.

The earliest Methodist Episcopal class was organized in Wayne township about fifty years ago and erected a meeting house in 1860, about a mile and a half north of Corry. The society was reorganized in 1870, and the house of worship moved to Pike street in Corry, where the body has since been known as the North Corry Methodist Episcopal congregation.

The First Methodist Episcopal congregation was organized in September, 1862. Its building was erected during the summer of 1865, and dedicated October 27th of that year.

St. Thomas Catholic congregation (Irish) was established by Rev. Father Lonergan in 1860. A frame church building was dedicated in September, 1862. The corner-stone of the present structure was laid in 1872, and the building was ready for occupancy in 1884. Connected with the church is a large parochial school and St. Thomas' Academy, both being in charge of the Sisters of St. Joseph. The parochial school has an average attendance of 300. Rev. Thomas Lonergan, the original pastor, is the present rector, assisted by Rev. Patrick McGovern.

St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church (German) was organized in April, 1875. The congregation completed their building in 1876, and it was consecrated in September of the same year. Rev. E. Franck is the present rector. The parochial school has an average attendance of fifty-five.

The first Baptist services were held November 28, 1862. A congregation was organized October 18, 1862. The church building was dedicated April 26, 1865. This was torn down in 1894 and the foundation has been laid for a larger and better structure on the old site.

The First Presbyterian congregation was organized January 18, 1864, and erected a frame structure in the winter of 1865-6. The present building was put up in 1883-4, and the old church sold to the Hebrew congregation.

Emanuel Episcopal congregation laid the corner-stone of their building in September, 1865. Their first services were held in a private hall July 10, 1864. The original structure was remodeled in 1894.

A United Brethren class was organized in 1864, and a building commenced in 1865. The site was changed in 1866, and a church erected on the turnpike. This burned down in 1872, and the present building was put up immediately.

The First Congregational society was organized in 1864, and purchased the building of the Christian denomination, in which they had worshipped for some time, in 1878. It was enlarged and repaired in 1882.

The German Lutheran Church was dedicated June 3, 1877. The congregation was organized several years previous.

The Hebrew congregation was started some twenty years ago, and purchased the old Presbyterian church in the autumn of 1883, which is still their place of worship.

The Universalist congregation are without a building of their own. The society was organized March 7, 1877.

A Danish Lutheran church was established in the fall of 1890, by Rev. A. L. Benze, of Erie. It started with eighty members. The congregation worship in the German Lutheran church.

NEWSPAPERS.

The earliest newspaper venture was by Stebbins & Larkins, who started the Corry City News on the 22d of October, 1863. A half interest in this paper was purchased by Joseph A. Pain in November, 1865. The Petroleum Telegraph, a daily, had been started by Baldwin & Day a short time before. This was discontinued in 1867. Under Mr. Pain's management the office became one of the best equipped in the country. The Daily Itemizer was started in 1868, and fell into the hands of Mr. Pain January 1, 1869, who changed its name to the Daily Blade. This succumbed to the hard times in 1875. Mr. Pain continued the publication of the weekly Telegraph, which has been in existence ever since. The office was burned out on election night, 1884, but was promptly renewed. The following fall Mr. Pain started another daily, under the name of the Corry Leader, which has been continuously published from that date.

The Daily Flyer was started April 3, 1885, by W. C. Plumb, who has always been its editor and publisher. In 1887, the Flyer office absorbed the Herald, established in November, 1867, which is still kept up as the weekly edition of the paper.

All of the above papers are Republican in politics.

The Saturday Democrat, a weekly journal, the name of which indicates its politics, was established December 1, 1890, with the Trimble Bros. as publishers, and D. M. Colegrove as editor. The paper passed into the control of C. T. Trimble in 1891, who remains editor and proprietor.

Among journals that have died out, after a lingering illness, as the obituary writers say, were the daily and weekly Review, Commercial Advertiser, Democratic Press, Democrat, Daily Whetstone, Temperance Vindicator, Weekly Republican, Daily Republican and Enterprise.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Probably no city of the same size in the United States exceeds Corry in the number of its secret societies. Almost every secret organization in the Union is represented, as will be seen by the following list:

Jonathan Lodge, I. O. O. F., was instituted January 19, 1870; Corry Encampment, of the same order, July 26, 1873.

Corry Lodge, F. & A. M., March 19, 1866; Columbus Chapter, R. A. M., instituted at Columbus, Warren county, May 10, 1866; removed to Corry January 13, 1870. Clarence Commandery, K. T., January 22, 1874.

Corry Union, E. A. U., May 2, 1879.

J. J. Andrews Post, G. A. R., June, 1867.

Corry Grange, P. of H., December 23, 1873.

Corry City Lodge, K. of P., October 16, 1880.

Lincoln Council, R. A., April 10, 1878.

Tentonia Lodge, D. O. H., August 17, 1867.

St. Joseph Branch, C. M. B. A., April 24, 1878.

Aharath Sholem Lodge, B'nai Brith, May 30, 1871.

Bliss Council, R. T. of T., April, 1879. Hope Council, March 15, 1880. Humboldt Lodge, February, 1874.

Ely Lodge, K. of H., November, 1874.

Washington Lodge, A. O. U. W., January, 1870.

Lafayette Council, G. K., December 8, 1879.

Evening Star Lodge, K. & L. of H., March, 1878. Germania Lodge, March 26, 1878.

Other lodges were established as follows: K. O. T. M., October 20, 1884; L. O. T. M., August, 1894; Woodmen of the World, May 20, 1892; National Union, July, 1886; L. C. B. A., March, 1890; C. B. L., February 12, 1887; C. K. of A., June 15, 1885.

In addition to the above, there are other societies, the date of organizing which had not been secured at the time of preparing this matter.

STATE AND COUNTY OFFICERS.

The following is a list of the citizens of Corry who have held State and county offices: Associate Judge, Hollis King, November 8, 1866, to November 17, 1871. Delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1873, C. O. Bowman. Assembly, C. O. Bowman, 1869; W. W. Brown, 1872 to 1874; Isaac B. Brown, 1881-82, and 1883-84; J. D. Bentley, elected in 1889. District Attorney, C. L. Baker, elected in 1884. County Commissioner, W. T. Brown, elected in 1872. Jury Commissioner, D. L. Bracken, elected in 1879; H. L. Spiesman, elected in 1891. Director of the Poor, S. A. Bevis, elected in 1869; G. S. Beavis, elected in 1895. Mercantile Appraiser, L. E. Guignon, 1875; Wm. T. Brown, 1880; John W. Leech, 1890. Oil Inspector, A. J. Hubbard, appointed in 1873.

W. W. Brown, chosen to Assembly, as stated above, moved to Bradford, and represented the McKean district in the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Congresses.

Isaac B. Brown was Deputy Secretary of Internal Affairs from May, 1887, to January, 1895, and was appointed Secretary, to fill a vacancy, on the latter date. He served as Secretary until May 7, 1895, and was then appointed to his former position as Deputy.

Charles Porter was State Fish Commissioner for a number of years.

POSTMASTERS.

Below is a list of the postmasters of Corry since the office was established, with the dates of their appointments and the time they took charge of the office, as nearly as the same can be ascertained:

C. S. Harris, Republican, appointed 1861.

James Foreman, Republican, appointed April, 1863.

J. Guy Foreman, Republican, appointed August, 1867.

Oliff E. Gleason, Republican, appointed April, 1877.

Frank H. Button, Republican, appointed February 24, 1885, took charge March 3, 1885.

Max Cameron, Democrat, appointed September, 1888, took charge September 8, 1888.

Frank H. Button, Republican, appointed January 6, 1891, took charge February 1, 1891.

John B. Patterson, Democrat-Populist, appointed March 1, 1895, took charge April 1, 1895.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Corry Water Company began its supply in September, 1886. The water was originally taken from Hare creek, but is now drawn from artesian wells. A reservoir of 5,000,000 gallons capacity, at an elevation of 287 feet, furnishes a pressure that avoids the necessity of steam fire engines. The company has put down fourteen miles of pipe and set sixty-one fire hydrants. For some reason considerable opposition to the company has arisen, and on March 25, 1895, the city Councils let the contract for another plant, to cost $80,000. This became a matter of very animated litigation. The Court of Erie county, on August 13, 1895, issued a permanent injunction restraining the Councils from carrying out the contract and the contractor from going ahead.

A system of sewerage was commenced in October, 1891, and finished in August, 1894, as far as its general features were concerned, at a cost of $64,000, raised by assessment on the property thought to be benefited. The main sewer, which empties into Hare creek, east of the city, is four feet in diameter and 8,000 feet long. Of this, 1,200 feet are iron pipe and the balance is brick. The system begins on Spring street, at the intersection of Church, and passes through the business portion of the city. A number of lateral sewers are under course of construction.

The great rainfall and flood of June, 1892, the severest ever known in Erie county, did a great deal of damage in Corry and its vicinity, especially to the railroads and public roads.

Corry has four cemeteries, viz.: Pine Grove, St. Thomas (Irish Catholic), St. Elizabeth (German Catholic) and the Jewish. The first named, which is the general burial ground of the city and vicinity, embraces ten acres, and was started in 1866.

The principal public halls are the Week's Opera House and the Armory of the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

In 1895, the city commenced a general system of street paving, which is intended to be carried along until all the principal streets are properly paved. During the year named Center street was paved from First to Washington. The material used up to date (September 1, 1895) is vitrified brick.

"The Park," an enclosure of between four and five acres, was donated to the city by W. H. L. Smith. It is surrounded by handsome residences.

The Corry Hospital Association was organized in 1895, and its property purchased the same year.

Natural gas was introduced into the city in 1886 through the mains of the Pennsylvania Gas Company, bringing the article from Warren and Elk counties. The same company supplies Erie, Jamestown and Warren.

A Board of Trade was organized September 4, 1895.

A fair has been held at Corry regularly each fall for many years, under the auspices of the farmers of the surrounding townships, who receive the hearty co-operation of the people of the city. It has always been well patronized and the society, which was organized in 1870, is in a flourishing condition.

Capt. Edward Dow, formerly an officer in the merchant sea service, died in Corry on November 26, 1895, aged 92 years. He located there in 1851.

For an account of the State Fish Hatchery see Wayne township; and for a list of Corry physicians, lawyers and dentists, see Chapters XX and XXI, General History.

N. P. Holman

PART VI.

FAMILY HISTORIES AND BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

Family Histories and Biographical Sketches.

The Reed Family are closely and intimately associated with the history of Erie county, from the very beginning, and may be said to have been the pioneers in its development. Col. Seth Reed, the founder of the family fortune, was a physician at Uxbridge, Mass. When the Revolution began he was given command of a regiment, and fought at Bunker Hill. After the Revolutionary War he finally located in Ontario county, New York, where he became possessed of a tract of land eighteen miles in extent by a trade with the Indians. Impressed with the favorable location of the then new town of Erie, and believing that it was destined to become an important commercial center, he sold out his Ontario county estate, and, with his wife and sons—Charles John and Manning—started for the frontier. At Buffalo he met James Palmadge, who had fitted out a sailboat to run between that place and Erie, with whom a contract was made to bring the party and the few goods they had along with them to their destination. They reached the harbor of Erie on the evening of the last day of June or 1st day of July, 1795, and camped on the peninsula for fear of the Indians. Thos. Rees and a company of State militia, under the command of Capt. John Grubb, with some friendly Indians, were quartered upon the Garrison ground. On seeing the fire in Mr. Reed's camp, they were greatly alarmed, thinking a hostile band had landed there preliminary to an attack. Sentinels were kept on watch all night, and the troops were ordered to be ready at any moment to meet the expected foe. In the morning a boat, with men well-armed, carrying a flag of truce, and accompanied by a canoe-load of friendly Indians, was sent over to the peninsula to ascertain the cause of the alarm. Landing with extreme caution, they were surprised to find a white man and his family equally anxious and alarmed. Mutual explanations ensued, and all fear was allayed. Soon after his arrival, Col. Seth Reed proceeded to erect a place of shelter, choosing a location at the mouth of Mill creek. The building was a one-story log cabin, roofed with bark; it had no floor, strips of bark serving for carpets. This was the first building on the site of Erie, and, primitive as it was, it was called the "Presque Isle Hotel," and used by Col. Reed as a public house. Martin Strong, one of the pioneers of Erie county, on a visit to the locality, said the house was provided "with plenty of good refreshments for all itinerants that chose to call." In September, Col. Reed's sons—Rufus S. and George—came on by the way of Pittsburg, with Mrs. Thos. Rees and Mrs. J. Fairbanks. The following year a larger and better building was constructed for hotel purposes, which was placed in charge of Rufus, when the Colonel moved to a farm he had located on the Walnut creek flats, on the present site of Kearsarge. Here he remained in a rough cabin, until his death, on the 19th of March, 1797, at the age of 53. There being no burying ground, the remains of Col. Reed were temporarily interred on the Walnut creek farm and were later successively removed to the United Presbyterian graveyard, corner Eighth and French streets; then to the Episcopal graveyard, and finally to the family lot in the beautiful Erie cemetery. Hannah, his wife, died December 8, 1821, in her 74th year. Chas. J. Reed, who had moved with his father on the Walnut creek farm, remained there after his father's death. On the 27th of December, 1797, he was united in marriage to Rachel Miller, Thomas Rees, performing the ceremony, as a justice of the peace. This was the first wedding in Erie county. Their bridal trip was taken in a plain sled from the fort to their home on Walnut creek. Mr. Reed died in 1830, and his wife survived until 1851. George W. Reed, another of the sons, went two miles further up the creek, in Summit township, and located a farm. From there he moved to Waterford and opened a public house. In 1823 he changed to Erie, where he continued in the hotel business a number of years. Returning to Waterford in 1844, he died there three years later. Rufus S. Reed, the most prosperous and best-known of the sons, always remained in Erie. He was born at Uxbridge, Mass., on the 11th of October, 1775. While the rest of the family took to farming, his taste was altogether for business, in which he had extraordinary success. He started a store in 1796, which did a large trade with the Indians, the soldiers and the settlers. In 1797 he began an extensive fur trade with the Indians which was very profitable. His boats ran constantly on the lake, loaded with store goods one way and furs the other. He secured large government contracts for supplying the Western posts with beef, pork, flour and whisky. His business becoming too large for him to conduct alone, he associated Giles Sanford in the mercantile branch, and the partnership continued many years. In 1817-18 he erected a grist-mill and distillery on Parade street, near Fifth, and seven years later he built another distillery on his farm, near the corner of Parade street and the Buffalo road. He purchased large bodies of land and fed many cattle, which he killed or drove to the Eastern market. He became an extensive owner of lake vessels, and was the foremost man in enterprise in the whole lake country. To illustrate his shrewdness: The law forbade the sale of ardent spirits to the Indians by the gill, quart, or barrel. Mr. Reed evaded the statute, and preserved the peace of his conscience, by having a hollow stick made, and selling the liquid by the yard. Rufus S. Reed was married twice, his first wife being Dolly, daughter of Jonathan Oaks, of Palmyra, N. Y. The ceremony was characteristic of the man. In 1798, he left Buffalo by lake with a lot of goods in small boats. The party stopped in the evening at the mouth of Smoke's creek (now Hamburg, N. Y.), where Mr. Reed informed the men that he had a matter of business to attend to some three miles back in the country. He was gone all night, and returned in the morning accompanied by his wife. She died the same year, and was buried by the side of Col. Seth Reed, at Walnut creek. In 1801 he married Agnes, daughter of Gen. William Irvine, who bore him one son, the well-known Gen. Charles M. Reed. The marriage ceremony was performed by Thomas Robinson, a justice of the peace at North East. Rufus S. Reed died at the age of 70, on the 1st of June, 1846, leaving the largest fortune that had been accumulated up to that time in the lake shore region. Gen. Charles M. Reed, the only child of Rufus S. Reed, inherited his father's great business abilities. He was born in Erie, in 1806; after receiving the best education the schools of the time afforded, he was sent to college at Washington, Pa., and from there went to Philadelphia, where he read law, and was admitted to the bar in 1821. Returning to Erie, he almost immediately engaged in business with his father, and developed such aptitude for money-making that it was a question which was the more skillful of the two. He early foresaw the advantages of steam navigation, and became the largest owner of steamboats on the lakes. Some of his boats were fitted up magnificently, equaling the finest of the present day. While the canal was at the height of its prosperity, he realized all the benefits of that enterprise, and when the time came for building railroads, he quickly grasped their importance. In his early years he was fond of military display, and became a brigadier general of militia. He served a year in the State Legislature and a term in Congress. In politics he was first a Whig and then a Republican. He died in the 69th year of his age, December 18, 1871, in the mansion at the corner of Sixth street and the West Park. His fortune at the time of his death was variously estimated at $5,000,000 to $15,000,000. None but the family and a few intimate friends knew the exact amount, but it was certainly not less than the sum first named. Gen. Reed was married in September, 1838, to Miss Harriet Gilson, of Watertown, N. Y., who is still living. They had a number of children, of whom only two sons, Charles M. and Lloyd G., survive. Harriet, one of the daughters, married Hon. Henry Rawle, and at her death left two children, who are heirs to their mother's portion of the large estate. It will be seen from the above that Charles M. and Lloyd G. are the fourth generation of the Reeds in Erie. All of the members of Col. Seth Reed's family are buried in the Reed lot in the Erie cemetery. Hon. Charles M. Reed has served as mayor of Erie two years, having been twice elected, in 1872 and 1873. He is a director of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R., and has been often and strongly urged as a Republican candidate for Congress. Mr. Charles M. Reed married Miss Ella M., daughter of the late R. S. Morrison, one of the leading merchants of Erie, who came to the county about 1866. His widow survives and resides in Erie. Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Reed have two children, Carl Morrison and Harrison. Mr. Reed is one of the largest stockholders of the First National Bank of Erie, a member of its board of directors, and since the decease of his father is second vice-president of the board. He and his brother, Lloyd G., and their mother (Mrs. Gen. Reed) reside in Erie, the latter in the fine family mansion, at the corner of West Sixth street and the park; Hon. Charles M. Reed in a magnificent residence on West Sixth street, and Lloyd G. Reed has just completed a fine country residence near Massasauga Point.

Captain Daniel Dobbins (deceased) was born in Lewistown, Mifflin county, Pa., January 5, 1776, and was married to Miss Mary West, near Cannonsburg, Pa., April 1, 1800. She was born October 26, 1779. They had eight children: William W. (deceased); Jane S. (deceased), wife of the late John A. Tracy, of Erie; Stephen Decatur (deceased); Mary Ann; David Porter; Leander; Eliza M., wife of the late Captain John Flecharly, and Marcus (deceased). Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins came to Erie on horseback, in company with "Squire Rees'" party of surveyors in the year 1795. Soon after his arrival, Captain Dobbins engaged in the merchant service, and was part owner and master of the schooner Harlequin, which he sailed for some time. In July, 1812, he sailed the schooner Selma, and while he was lying at Mackinac, the British landed on the island, took possession of the fort, captured his vessel and took him and his passengers, Rufus S. Reed and William W. Reed, of Erie, prisoners. They were all soon after released on parole and returned to their homes in Erie. This was the first intimation that war had been declared. Capt. Dobbins' experience in lake navigation, and his thorough knowledge of the harbors of the lake rendering him well qualified for the position, he was appointed by the government, in 1813, as sailing master in the United States navy, and given the superintendency of the construction and equipment of the fleet of war vessels then being built at Erie (an account of which appears in another part of this history), and it was through his efforts and indomitable perseverance that Erie was made the United States naval station. While connected with the navy he was also engaged in the merchant service. He had commanded the schooner Washington in 1816, which the same year conveyed troops to Green Bay, and his was the first vessel to enter that harbor, it then being considered a difficult task to navigate it. On his first visit some of the harbors in that locality were named and still retain the names given them by Capt. Dobbins and the army officers who accompanied him. In 1826 he was ordered to sea in a vessel fitted out to bring home the remains of Commodore Perry, and resigned his commission. In 1827 he was engaged in constructing piers at Ashtabula, O. In 1829 Gen. Jackson appointed him to the command of the revenue cutter Rush, and he was reappointed in 1845 by President Polk to the command of the revenue cutter Erie. He left active service in the revenue department in 1849. Capt. Dobbins possessed many sterling qualities, and having been a close observer, was enabled to relate many interesting and exciting incidents connected with the early navigation of the lakes and life on the frontier. Capt. Dobbins died in Erie, February 29, 1856, aged 85 years. His wife died January 27, 1879, in her 100th year. The remains of both now lie buried in the Erie cemetery.

John A. Tracy (deceased) was born in Scipio, Cayuga county, N. Y., February 16, 1798. His father, Capt. John Tracy, was a descendant of Lieut. Thomas Tracy, who came to Salem, Mass., from Tewkesbury, England, in the year 1636. Capt. John Tracy, with his family, removed to Little Conaettie (now Washington township, Erie county, Pa.) in 1799, and thence, in 1801, to Waterford. Here John A. Tracy attended school for a few years, under Rev. Russell Stanchiff. He commenced as a boy in the active business of teaming for his father between the head of navigation on French creek and Erie. This business was active in 1812-13-14, during the war, as army and navy stores for Gen. Harrison's army and Commodore Perry's fleet were carried on this route from Pittsburg to Erie, and he thus took his first lesson in inland transportation with ox teams, over stump roads cut through the woods. Mr. Tracy came to Erie when 18 years of age, as clerk in a store, on the southwest corner of French and Sixth streets. He afterwards became a partner of P. S. V. Hamot for several years, and later with Jonas Harrison in a general mercantile business. He was one of the directors of the U. S. branch bank of Erie, and also of the old Erie Bank. He took an active interest in the Erie Extension Canal from the Ohio river to Erie and was a contractor in building the Walnut creek aqueduct, and was subsequently a director for many years. Mr. Tracy was one of the contractors on the New York and Erie R. R. in the early efforts to build it, and again about the year 1848, when the efforts to resume and finish it from New York to Dunkirk were successful. He was among the first and active workers to start the Erie and North East R. R., the first railroad built to the city of Erie, and was one of the contractors in its construction in 1850-51. When completed he continued to be a director until 1853, when he was elected president of the company, and so continued until the company was consolidated with the Buffalo and State Line company, under the name of the Buffalo and Erie company, and when this company was consolidated with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern company, making one corporation from Buffalo to Chicago, he became a director and continued in that office until his death. He was also a director of the Erie and Pittsburg R. R. Co. After the conclusion of his more active duties of railway construction, he gave much attention to farming; his large farms in West Mill Creek and Fairview were models in their thorough cultivation. He married Susan Jane Dobbins, daughter of Captain Daniel Dobbins, in 1826. She died in 1867. Mr. Tracy died at his residence in Erie, February 26, 1875, leaving seven children: John F. Tracy, Mrs. Mary M. Scott, wife of the late Hon. W. L. Scott; Mrs. Anna M. McCullum, wife of Mr. J. W. McCullum; Charles Tracy, Mrs. Eliza T. Griswold, wife of Wm. A. Griswold; Daniel D. Tracy, and William A. Tracy. Mr. Tracy controlled men by the gentle force of his nature, but was inflexible for right and truth. Though mild in his manners, he was firm when it was proposed to drive him from the right. Plain and unpretending, he disliked shams and false pretenses. Social, friendly, and with an extensive acquaintance, he continued a favorite until the day of his death. His remains and those of his wife rest side by side in the cemetery in Erie.

John F. Tracy (deceased), son of John A. Tracy, was born in Erie, Pa., January 7, 1827. He received his education at the Erie Academy. While his father was building the aqueduct of the Erie and Pittsburg Canal at Walnut creek he had his first experience as superintendent of large engineering enterprises, and developed marked capacity. Subsequently he was engaged in the construction of the Buffalo and State Line, the New York and Erie and North East railroads, and although not 25 years of age, almost the entire management of these enterprises was confided to his care. Shortly after the completion of the latter road he was appointed its superintendent, where he had his full share in devising the plans for the practical operating of railroads. When, in 1853, it was decided to change the gauge of this road and make it a part of a through line—a determination which was violently opposed by a large portion of the citizens of Erie, and which resulted in the famous "Railroad War"—Mr. Tracy held his post with firmness and a courageous devotion to the interests of his road, and never for a moment yielded to the pressure of the mistaken and overwhelming popular sentiment which sought to maintain a break in the continuous line of what was destined to become a great continental highway. Mr. Tracy completed this change of gauge determined on by his company in 1854, and then accepted the office of assistant superintendent of the Chicago and Rock Island R. R., then in process of construction. He was soon promoted to the position of general superintendent; was next made vice-president, and finally president of the road, which office he held for many years, until ill health necessitated his resignation in 1877. Under Mr. Tracy's management the Chicago and Rock Island R. R. was extended through Iowa to the Missouri river and across Iowa and Missouri to Leavenworth, Kan. He built the first railroad bridge across the Mississippi river, which first raised the question of the right to build railway bridges across navigable rivers. The controversy was exceedingly bitter, and the river interests even resorted to the expedient of burning the spans of the bridge to prevent its completion. But Mr. Tracy's determination was not to be balked, and he persevered with the same firmness that characterized his conduct during the "Erie Railroad War," and success finally crowned his efforts. At first the Federal Court decisions were averse to the construction of the bridge, but in the end the United States Government became joint owner with the road in a first-class iron bridge. In 1870, while maintaining his position as president of his favorite corporation, the Rock Island, he secured control of the Chicago and Northwestern R. R., its active competitor, and became its president, which office he held till 1875, when he resigned by reason of failing health. Mr. Tracy was the first capitalist that fully recognized the importance of the New York rapid transit movement, and liberally aided it, and in conjunction with his brother-in-law, Hon. W. L. Scott, fought the battle of rapid transit through years of legislative, legal and popular antagonism, until every point in dispute was settled and the problem solved. Mr. Tracy was the equal, if not the superior, of any man in the country in his expert and invariably successful management of railroad combinations. He was reticent, determined, and above all, self-reliant. One of his marked traits was the great tenacity with which he adhered to any opinion he had formed after mature consideration, and the resolute manner in which he championed and executed his favorite projects in defiance of all difficulties and opposition. In his private life he was one of the least ostentatious and most kind-hearted of men. His large wealth was bestowed generously in the direction of public and private charity. Mr. Tracy's health began to fail at the age of 50 years, by reason of his very active life, but he had done his work well, and lived long enough to make himself one of the fathers of the "American Railway System." He remained unmarried, and died at the residence of his brother-in-law, Hon. W. L. Scott, in Erie, February 13, 1878. His remains rest by the side of his father and mother in the Erie cemetery.

Hon. William L. Scott. The busy and eventful life of Hon. William L. Scott was spent in Erie. Here were his home and family, and here his affections were centered. To him it was "dear Erie," as feelingly expressed in one of that series of masterly and statesmanlike addresses made in his Congressional campaign of 1886. He sought to make it "beautiful Erie," and his efforts towards its embellishment in their wide scope (worthy of a Baron Haussman or Christopher Wren) embodied not only the city with its blocks and mansions, its churches, parks and avenues, but the construction, development and adornment of Massasauga Point, and the improvement of the cluster of highly culminated farms, which, with their elegant surroundings, ample approaches and unexcelled roads, surprise and delight those who spend their summers on the shores of Presque Isle Bay. Mr. Scott's life was one of wide activity. It was characterized by methodical and systematic planning, intense thought, alert action and energetic living. These enabled him to accomplish those vast results, which in a review of his life so amaze, when an attempt is made to comprehend the extent of his plans, the directness of action, and his dazzling success in the execution of that which only genius could have originated and an inexorable will performed. William L. Scott was of ancient lineage and of Scotch-Welsh descent. His great grandfather, Rev. James Scott, of the Church of England, graduated at Aberdene University, and was ordained and licensed to preach in Virginia by the Bishop of London in 1755. His grandfather, Gustavus Scott, was educated at Aberdeen and completed his law studies in London in 1771. Returning to America he resided in Annapolis or Baltimore. He was a member of the Continental Congress and held many offices of distinction in Maryland. The family name is indelibly associated with the illustrious Virginians whose patriotic deeds in Revolutionary days are interwoven with the brightest and most honored pages of American history. In recognition of this sentiment, in 1794, President Washington appointed Gustavus Scott one of the first board of commissioners to lay out the City of Washington. Accepting this trust, Mr. Scott built and occupied until his death the noted "Kalarama" residence at the site of the future Federal City. Maj. Robert L. Scott, son of Gustavus, was a graduate of West Point, and served with distinction in the war of 1812. He was the father of William L. Scott, and died when the latter was quite young, leaving six children. Of these William L. Scott achieved commanding position in public affairs; Robert Wainwright Scott (deceased), entered the navy, served through the late war, and was promoted to be commander; and Miss Ann Eliza Scott, a resident of Erie, is now sole survivor of the family. Hon. William L. Scott was born in Washington City July 2, 1828. He received a common school education. He was first appointed a page in Congress about the year of 1840. While serving as such he attracted the notice of Gen. Reed, representative of the Erie District of the Twenty-eighth Congress, by whom in 1840, at the age of 16 years, he was brought to Erie. Gen.

Reed was then in the zenith of his commercial career, with his fleet of steamers and vessels on the lakes, his numerous clerks, agents and warehouses. In one of the latter the young southerner was placed, to receive those first lessons in commerce and modes of transportation, which, then in their infancy, were yet to be so vastly developed by the master mind of Gen. Reed's youthful protege. The celebrated Howell Cobb, afterwards Secretary of the Treasury under President Buchanan, served in the same Congress with Gen. Reed from 1843 to 1845. At that time it was a question whether the young page would go with Mr. Cobb to his Southern home to imbibe his fiery idea of Southern rights, the assertion of which drove him from President Buchanan's cabinet into the Rebel army, or to the care, the tuition and patronage of Gen. Reed, the noted capitalist, steamboat owner and master mind of lake commerce. A destiny was involved. Fate decided, and William L. Scott came to Erie. It was the pivotal point in the orphan's career. To him the commission house and office of Gen. Reed, with their network of transportation, was as important a school as was the Military College at Brienne in the career of the Corsican orphan who there commenced the studies the fruits of which were developed at Marengo, at Austerlitz and at Jena. Mr. Scott's progressive steps were rapid. In this sketch but the merest mention can be given of them. In 1850 he made his first venture in the coal and shipping business with the late Hon. Morrow B. Lowry. This firm continued in business but one year. In 1851 he engaged in the coal business with Mr. John Hearn, the firm continuing until Mr. Hearn's death, when it was succeeded by W. L. Scott & Co. This company, eventually, did the largest business of its kind in the world. It controlled mines in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Iowa and Missouri. Mr. Scott owned upwards of 70,000 acres of coal land. He gave employment to 12,000 people. He was the controlling owner of the stock of the Youghiogheny Coal Company of Pennsylvania, Spring Valley Coal Company of Illinois and Union Coal Company of Pennsylvania. If his coal investments were large, his railroad interests were on an equally grand scale. In 1861 Mr. Scott built that portion of the Erie & Pittsburgh R. R. which extends from Girard to New Castle, and in 1863-64 constructed the completing link from New Castle to the Fort Wayne R. R., becoming a large owner of the same. He was president of the Erie and Pittsburgh R. R. Company up to his death, and during the war located and constructed the Pittsburgh Docks at the mouth of Cascade run, in Erie. In 1862 he and his brother-in-law, John F. Tracy, extended the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. from Grinnell, Iowa, to the Missouri river, being the first railroad built to that waterway. Prior to his death he was the president and director of 22,000 miles of railroad, being more miles of track than any one man has been the central figure in operating. He was one of the pioneers in rapid transit in New York City, and with John F. Tracy was interested in building the first elevated road in that city. Mr. Scott was one of the builders of the Philadelphia and Norfolk R. R., in 1884, which was the first railroad on the peninsula of Virginia. He aided to develop the Canada Southern and Canadian Pacific Railroads. He was at his decease the oldest director of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R., director and member of the Chicago and Northwestern R. R., director in the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis and New Castle and Beaver Valley Railroads; Michigan Central R. R. and Albermarle and Chesapeake Canal Company. He was a manufacturer of iron in the Shenango valley and in Missouri. He was the controlling owner of the Northwestern Fuel Company of St. Paul, and had interests in the Missouri Iron and Coal Company of Missouri, the Sligo Furnace Company of Missouri and the What Cheer Coal Company of Iowa.

The memorials of his presence in Erie are abiding. He built the Scott Block, on the northwest corner of State and Tenth streets, in 1872, costing about $180,000. His elegant home residence was ample and luxurious. Seemingly averse to change from his original residence, he had enlarged and adorned the old homestead until its size, commodiousness and elegance were in keeping with his position. The vast and imposing three-story mansion erected for a residence for his daughter, on West Park, at a cost of four to five hundred thousand dollars, for which Mr. Scott was so long in consultation with architects, will continue to manifest his grandeur in design and magnificence in execution. He owned 2,000 acres of land in Erie county. The utilization of this land for use as stock farms, and the creation of beautiful Massaugauga Point, with its approaches and surroundings, involved the exercise of artistic judgment and the expenditure of vast sums. The result has been the addition of a permanent attraction to Erie and a wider use of the bay as a pleasure resort, which before was but imperfectly realized.

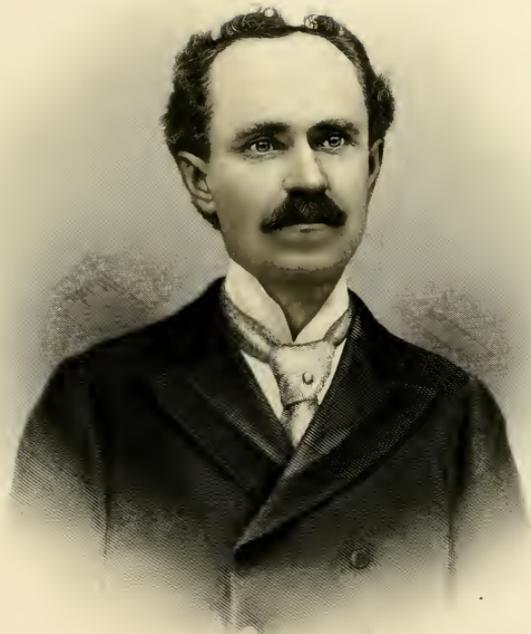

His civil and political career was remarkable; especially so when the great influence he exerted upon the counsels of his party and the moulding of its policy are concerned; for aside from his service as mayor of Erie, he never held a political office until his election to Congress in 1884, a position he held but four years. He had become one of the trusted leaders of the Democratic party and his influence in their National conventions was most potential and sometimes irresistible. He was mayor of Erie in 1806 and again in 1871, serving two full terms. He was nominated for Congress in 1806 and in 1876, but took no part in the campaign. He was a delegate to the National Democratic Conventions of 1868, 1876, 1880 and 1888. He was representative of Pennsylvania on the Democratic National Committee from 1876 to 1884. He was in 1884 elected to Congress from the Erie district. In Congress his surroundings were most congenial and agreeable. They could hardly have been more so. It was his lot to have the fullest confidence and personal friendship of the President and Speaker of the House during his successive terms of service; with very much of influence in shaping the course of the administration. In this respect it is doubtful if any member of the cabinet had more fully the confidence of the President. He introduced and put upon their passage the Chinese Exclusion bill and the Oleomargarine bill, both of which were enacted. His position in the modification of the Tariff was in advance of that of many of the Pennsylvania Democrats; a position to which many of the party came. He took a leading part in the preparation of the Mills bill, in the Fiftieth Congress, in 1888. After its passage by the House and its amendment by the Senate, he prepared a masterly article for a leading publication, calling in question and assailing the constitutional right of the Senate to modify a bill for "raising revenue" which by the Constitution was required to originate in the House. His speech in Congress upon the silver question was most elaborate and exhaustive, indicating remarkable study and research and involving a mass of facts and array of figures and tabulated statistics not often placed together. Later events have shown its predictions to have been prophecy. While his views and wishes on the revenue, owing to the adverse action of the Republican Senate, were not then enacted into laws, yet the large number of appointments made upon his recommendation evinced his sagacity in selection and his consideration for friends, which was one of his most pleasing characteristics. His domestic relations were of the happiest character. Soon after his arrival in Erie he made the acquaintance of Miss Mary M. Tracy, daughter of John A. Tracy, one of the most substantial and public-spirited citizens of Erie, and grand-daughter of the noted Captain Daniel Dobbins, whose fame as an early lake navigator and one of the commanders in Perry's renowned fleet has connected his name with history. With tastes so congenial, and purposes so much in unison, their marriage, September 19th, 1853, became a union of hearts and of hands. It was more for the large experience of Mr. John A. Tracy in railroad construction and the bent of mind of his son, John F. Tracy, destined to so much of distinction, in the extension of Chicago's great system of railroads, doubtless tended materially to encourage and develop the early efforts of Mr. Scott, in the commencement and prosecution of his railroad career, which assumed such large proportions. Mr. and Mrs. Scott had two children: Mrs. Richard H. Townsend, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Charles H. Strong, of Erie. His personal appearance was striking, and in social intercourse his manners were bland and winning. Of blonde complexion and penetrating glance, his voice was soft and his utterance rapid, earnest and emphatic. His movements were quick. His mind was active and his examination of any subject in hand most exhaustive. He had a large and valuable library in which his investigations of any matter under consideration were studiously concentrated. As a result his after treatment of his subject was masterful. It was his habit to make most thorough investigation of a matter in hand, and it was this comprehensive preparation that made his influence in conference or in public meetings so great. During the war he equipped and fitted out at his own expense Capt. Miller's battery of artillery and sent it to the front. Many residents of Erie in widely separated walks of life were gladdened by the flow of charity emanating from himself or his household; this was further manifested in substantial aid to worthy religious and charitable organizations. These it would be impracticable to specify at length, as his giving was as unostentatious as it was generous. Yet these may be mentioned: A gift of $10,000 in interest bearing bonds to St. Vincent Hospital; a like sum to the Hamot Hospital, Home for the Friendless, St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, and a church organ to St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Erie, while all through the community in which he dwelt there were perennial streams from the same inexhaustible source. But Mr. Scott, never physically strong, was unequal to the great strain involved in the conduct of so much business. He sank under his arduous labors, in the Fiftieth Congress. Repeated attacks or shocks continued to remind him of his waning strength. Finally under most eminent medical advice, he sought rest and recuperation in the pure air and sea breezes of Newport. But his healing was too late. He was never to see Erie again. On the 19th of September, 1891, while still at the seaside, he sank into his final sleep. His death was a startling and sad event for Erie. His funeral was most notable. Distinguished men gathered from various parts of the country, from Chicago to New York, magnates of civic, political and of railroad celebrity. These with all classes of the community gathered at the darkened home. The President of the United States (then in the interim of his exalted service), the Governor of Pennsylvania, railroad magnates and Erie's best citizens, stood around the bier containing the honored dead, to bid a last farewell to him who lay in the calm repose of eternal sleep. On the beautiful afternoon of the Thursday following his death, a typical September day, amid crowded streets and masses of sympathetic friends and townsmen, reaching from his home to the cemetery, the remains of Erie's most honored and distinguished citizen were borne to their last resting place, the President and Governor heading the pall-bearers. The casket was placed in the splendid mausoleum, designed for the resting place of Mr. Scott and his family.

The Galbraith Family, of Pennsylvania, came of Scotch-Irish stock, so prominent in the early history of the Commonwealth. James Galbraith, the founder of the family in this State, emigrated from the North of Ireland and settled at Donegal, in what is now Lancaster county, in 1712; he bought large tracts of land from William Penn proprietor; his son, James Galbraith, jr., great-grandfather of Wm. A. Galbraith, married, in 1755, Elizabeth Bertram, who, with her father, Rev. William Bertram, came from Edinburgh, Scotland. These people were all Presbyterians in their religious faith, and the old stone church at Donegal, where they worshipped, has in its churchyard the bones of many of the family. James Galbraith, jr., was elected sheriff of Lancaster county in 1742; he was made Judge of the Common Pleas in 1745, and was for many years a justice of the peace; he removed to Cumberland county in 1760, and in 1763 was appointed judge in that county. He took an active part in the French and Indian war in 1755-56, and during the Revolution, in 1777, was appointed colonel for Cumberland county, being then 23 years of age; he was obliged, however, to resign after a twelve-month's service, on account of advanced years and bodily infirmities. In Eggle's History of Pennsylvania, the writer says: "The Galbraiths of Cumberland county all came from James Galbraith, jr.; every one of his sons became prominent in the Revolutionary war on the side of the patriots. Bertram Galbraith, first lieutenant in Lancaster county, was his son, and did noble service in the cause of his country. Andrew Galbraith, another son, served with distinction as an officer in the Revolution. Chief Justice John Bannister Gibson married one of his daughters. John Galbraith, the youngest son, was a soldier of the Revolution; he was taken prisoner at the battle of Long Island, and, with many others, suffered great hardships in the British prisons in New York city. After the war he removed to Huntingdon county, and from there to Butler county, where he resided until his death. In the southeast corner of the old Derry churchyard, on the line of the Lebanon Valley R. R., at Derry station, is a stone slab bearing the following inscription: 'Here lieth the remains of the Rev. Wm. Bertram, first pastor of this congregation, who departed this life ye 2d Feb., A. D. 1799, aged eighty-five years.' Immediately beside it is another slab with this inscription: 'Here lieth the remains of James Galbraith, who departed this life ye 23d August, 1744, aged seventy-eight years; also James Galbraith, Esq., the younger, on ye 11th June, 1787, aged eighty-three years, who dwelt beloved by all, in rational piety, modest hope and cheerful resignation.' Andrew Galbraith, brother of James Galbraith, jr., was the first coroner of Lancaster county. In 1730 he was appointed one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas, a position he held until 1746. He was created a member of Assembly in 1730, and for eight consecutive sessions thereafter. In 1732, when a candidate for Assembly, he had a most extraordinary canvass; his wife, mounting her mare, Nelly, with spurs strapped to her heels, rode out among the Scotch-Irish in Donegal and collected more than 100 voters, at whose head she rode into Lancaster borough, where the elections were held, and in Penn Square haranged them with such effect that her husband was returned elected by two or three votes. This incident is thus referred to in a biographical sketch of Madame Patterson Bonaparte in Lippincott's Magazine for September, 1877 (Mrs. Patterson, Madame Bonaparte's mother being the grand-daughter of the successful feminine electioneer): "Mrs. Patterson came of that sturdy, independent, Scotch-Irish race that has peopled Pennsylvania's prosperous valleys. Her grandmother, Mrs. Galbraith, was of considerable force of character, taking a prominent part in Revolutionary stir and, on one occasion, traversing on horseback the then almost wilderness, canvassed votes for her husband's election to the Assembly, which she won, whether by robust argument or in the felicitous way of the beautiful Duchess of Devonshire, is not recorded." Robert Galbraith, one of the sons of James Galbraith, jr., was appointed prothonotary for Bedford county, March 21, 1777; he was also justice for the same county. In 1778 he removed to York and there practiced law; he was member of the Assembly from that county, and was appointed agent to sell the confiscated estates of the Tories; he returned to Bedford county in 1784, and was, in 1788, appointed President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Huntingdon county; he was an officer in the Revolution, and served with honor to himself and country. The late Judge John Galbraith, the son of the John Galbraith above referred to, was born in Huntingdon, Pa., in 1794. His father moved to Butler county about the beginning of the nineteenth century, where the son was reared on a farm. Long before he was of age he was in charge of a school, and in due time served an apprenticeship to the printing business in the same office in Butler where James Thompson, afterward Chief Justice, was employed. Tiring of printing, he studied law with General William Ayres, of Butler, and was admitted to the bar, at the age of 24. Soon after he married Miss Amy Ayres, daughter of Rev. Robert Ayres, an Episcopal minister, long resident at Brownsville, Pa., brother of General Ayres. About the same time he moved to Franklin, Pa., where he rose rapidly both in his profession and in popular esteem. His first official position was as a member of the Assembly, to which he was thrice elected; was elected to Congress as a Democrat in 1832-34 '38, serving on important committees. In 1837 he moved to Erie and was ever after a resident of that city. On retiring from Congress he practiced law until the fall of 1851, when he was elected President Judge of the Sixth judicial district, running as Democratic candidate in a district which usually gave a Whig majority of 1,100. His death occurred June 15, 1860, near the close of his judicial term. Judge Galbraith was one of the foremost men in promoting the various public enterprises that gave the first strong impulse to Erie county; he was the pioneer in building the railroad to the Ohio line; was the largest stockholder in the Erie and Edinboro plank road, and aided greatly in reviving the long projected railroad from Erie to Sunbury. One of his favorite ideas, the establishment of a reform school for youthful offenders, has been adopted by the State in the institutions at Huntingdon and elsewhere. Mrs. Galbraith died in Philadelphia, March 2, 1868. Their children were: William A., and Elizabeth Ann, intermarried with William S. Lane, for some time a practicing lawyer in Erie, and later of Philadelphia.

Lloyd S. Reed

William Ayres Galbraith, Erie, Pa., was born in Franklin, Venango county, Pa., May 9, 1823, and came to Erie with his parents in 1837. He is a descendant of one of the most noted families during two centuries of Pennsylvania's history, whose annals, inclusive of the personal history of the late Judge John Galbraith, the father of William A. Galbraith, are contained in this volume, under the caption, "The Galbraith Family." William Ayres Galbraith received his early schooling in Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa., and upon the removal of the family to Erie, Erie county, Pa., he entered Erie academy, from which institution he was duly graduated. Studying law under the preceptorship of his father, he was admitted to the bar on the 21st anniversary of his birth, May 9, 1844. In September of the same year he entered Dane Law School of Harvard University, of which Professors Joseph Story and Simon Greenleaf were the instructors, and was graduated therefrom in 1845. Returning to Erie, he entered upon the practice of his profession in company with his brother-in-law, William S. Lane. In 1846 he was appointed deputy attorney general for Erie county (an office equivalent to the present one of district attorney) by Judge Kane, the attorney general of the State, which position he continued to fill until 1850, under John M. Reed and Benjamin Champneys. From his return to general practice until 1856 his clientage steadily grew, assuming such proportions by the latter year that his health failed and he was compelled temporarily to abandon his practice. Under the advice of his physician, to engage in out-door occupation, he took an interest with General Herman Haupt and others in the Housac Tunnel, the building of which required his personal presence for the major portion of two years in Massachusetts. Returning in 1858, he was appointed attorney for the Sunbury and Erie R. R., and quickly re-entered upon a large practice. From his early manhood he was actively identified with the Democratic party. He was a delegate to the Democratic State Convention in 1846 and of numerous others. He was a delegate to the Democratic National convention in Charleston in 1860, and in Chicago in 1864. In 1861 he was nominated as a Union candidate for State Senator against Morrow B. Lowry, the regular Republican nominee, and was only defeated by about 100 votes in Erie county, which, the preceding year, had been carried by the Republicans by a majority of 3,700. In 1870 he was elected President Judge of the Sixth Judicial district of Pennsylvania, as a people's nominee, though the Republican candidate for President carried the county by a majority of nearly 3,000. His term of office expired January 1, 1887, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of his profession at Erie. Judge Galbraith has contributed materially to the growth and development of this community. He was director of the railroad to the Ohio line, a director of the Sunbury and Erie R. R. Company, and was actively identified with the establishment of the car works, the car wheel works, the Burdett organ factory and other manufacturing establishments. He was one of the original stockholders of the Erie Dime Savings and Loan Company, of which he is now president. He was married May 25, 1846, to Fanny, daughter of the late Capt. William Davenport, of Erie, a biographical sketch of whom is contained in this volume. Judge and Mrs. Galbraith have had four children, of whom but two survive. One child died in infancy, and the eldest, Fanny, wife of Dr. Arnold P. Gilmore, of Chicago, son of the late Judge Gilmore of the Washington (Pa.) district, died May 30, 1893. The surviving children are: Davenport and John W. Galbraith, attorneys-at-law, associated in the practice with their father in Erie. Davenport Galbraith was married June 15, 1885, to Winifred, daughter of J. F. Downing, of Erie. John W. Galbraith was married April 25, 1888, to Mary, daughter of the late Matthew Henning, banker, of Evansville, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. John W. Galbraith have one child, William A. Galbraith.

Colonel Thomas Forster (deceased), son of John Forster, born near Harrisburg, Pa., May 16, 1762; brought up as a surveyor; served during the Revolution in defense of the frontier, was a colonel of volunteers during the whisky insurrection; appointed associate judge of Dauphin county in 1793; member of the assembly one term; came to Erie county as agent of the Harrisburg and Presque Isle Land Company in 1796 or 1797; moved his family to the county in the spring of 1799, settling in Erie; commissioned collector of the port of Erie in March, 1799, a position he filled until his death in 1836, meanwhile acting as government agent for the construction of the breakwater in Erie harbor; serving as captain and brigade inspector in the war of 1812, and holding numerous town and county offices. He married, October 5, 1786, Sarah Pettit, daughter of Rev. Joseph Montgomery, who was a chaplain in the Revolutionary army, and the first member of Congress from Lancaster county under the Constitution of the United States. She died in Erie, July 27, 1808. Among her children were the wives of General E. V. Sumner, General George W. Wright, Colonel John Harris, Major Herson and Captain Bailey, U. S. army. Colonel Forster and Rev. Mr. Montgomery were both educated at Princeton College, New Jersey.

Thomas Forster, Jr. (deceased), son of Colonel Tho. Forster and Sarah, his wife, born near Harrisburg, Pa., in 1736, came to Erie with his father; carried on a forwarding and commission business at Erie harbor several years; captain of a military company, and vestryman of St. Paul's Church; moved to Dunkirk, N. Y., about 1828, from which date he was government agent for the construction of breakwaters at the various harbors on Lake Erie between Erie and Buffalo, until his death; moved to Westfield, N. Y., about 1862, where he died in 1864. He married, in 1821, Juliet M., daughter of Hon. William Bell, of Erie, a settler of 1800, officer in the Revolutionary war and associate judge. Mrs. Forster died in Westfield in 1866. Their children were as follows: John H. and Sarah P., residents of Michigan; William T.; Theodore M.; Annie M.; and E. S., residents of Erie city.

John P. Vincent, of Erie, Pa., is the great-great-great-grandson of Levi Vincent, who was with his family driven from France by the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and went to England. He came with his family to America during the reign of Charles II, probably about the year 1676, and settled at or near Bergen, in New Jersey. His son, John, also lived in New Jersey. His son, Cornelius, left New Jersey and settled on a farm on Warrior's run, about four miles from the present town of Milton, in Northumberland county, and was living there about the beginning of the War of the Revolution. His father, John Vincent, came with him to Pennsylvania. The settlers in that vicinity built a stockade fort called "Vreeland's Fort." This fort was invested by the English and Indians in 1779, and after a sturdy resistance by the settlers, was captured, the English commander agreeing that if they surrendered they would be protected from the Indians, which he assured them he could not do if the fort was taken by storm, or after so long a resistance as to seriously anger the Indians. One of the sons of Cornelius Vincent was killed in one of the skirmishes around the fort. Cornelius Vincent, with his family and his old father, were taken prisoners, but were all liberated except two of his sons, Benjamin and Bethuel, the grandfather of the subject of the present sketch. Benjamin, though quite a young man, was married when captured. After they reached Canada, Benjamin was claimed by a squaw whose husband had been killed during the fights at the fort, and was adopted into her tribe. He was skillful with his rifle, and after a time he was permitted to go hunting, but always accompanied by two young Indians. He was determined to make his escape, if possible, and return to his family, and for that purpose studied the geography of the country carefully, while seemingly contented with his lot. On one of his hunting expeditions he lured his companions towards the border as far as he could, until they became uneasy, and at last attempted to compel him to return to the tribe. He then turned upon them, killed both, and after much hardship joined his family in New Jersey, where his father had returned after being released by the English after the capture of the fort. Bethuel Vincent was exchanged at the end of the war, and returned to Milton, where he died. He was postmaster for a great many years. He married Martha Himrod, an aunt of the late William Himrod of Erie. She was of Dutch ancestry, and was possessed of many of the staunch and indomitable characteristics of that nation. Their eldest son, William, was born in 1791. In the latter part of 1816 he came to Erie county and settled in Waterford. In February, 1817, he married Elsie Jackson Nichols of Lyscoming county. She was of Scotch descent. William Vincent held the office of justice of the peace, and was postmaster for several years. He died in 1872. His wife died in 1886. John P., his eldest son, was born December 2, 1817, in Waterford. He was educated at Waterford Academy, securing a thorough English and classical education, under the instruction of Robert W. Orr, James Park, John Livingston and Edward A. Geary. In 1839 he began the study of law with Hon. Elijah Babbitt, and was admitted to practice February 2, 1841. In 1862-3 he was a member of the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, and in 1863 was the candidate of the Republicans for Speaker. He was an active Republican from the formation of the party. Before that he cast his first vote for Gen. William H. Harrison for President. In 1866 he was elected additional law judge of the Sixth judicial district, composed of the counties of Erie, Crawford and Warren, and subsequently of Erie, Warren and Elk. Under the provisions of the constitution of 1874 the State was re-districted, and Erie remained in the Sixth district. Judge Vincent was then commissioned as the President Judge of the district until the first Monday of January, 1877. He then resumed the practice of the law, and is still in practice. He is now the senior member of the bar.

Strong Vincent was born in Waterford, Erie county, June 17, 1837. He was the oldest son of Bethuel B. Vincent, and a grandson of Judge John Vincent, of this county, both of whom are referred to. His mother was Sarah Ann (Strong) Vincent, a daughter of Captain Martin Strong, of Summit township, one of the earliest pioneers, and in his day one of the foremost citizens of the county. In 1843 his parents removed to the city of Erie. His school days were passed chiefly at the old Erie academy. Here he formed many boyish friendships which, notwithstanding his long absences afterward from his native town, were warmly cherished by him as long as he lived. When he was about 14 years old he was put to work in his father's iron foundry. For six months he worked as a day laborer. He was then taken into the office of the concern. After being thus occupied for a year or more, he left home and entered the scientific school at Hartford, Conn., to secure a scientific education. Desiring later a full collegiate education, he entered Trinity College. Harvard College had a great charm, and he persuaded his father to allow him to enter it as a sophomore in the class of 1859. A college friend, afterward an intimate army friend (Major W. W. Swan) thus speaks in the "Harvard Memorial Biographies" of his college career: "Vincent was a man of mark in his class, and in the college. His personal appearance was in his favor. There was not a student then who did not at first see him seek to learn who he was. Physically he seemed fully developed. Of rather above medium height, he had a well-formed, powerful frame, and his face was remarkably striking and handsome. He looked many years older than he really was, and in every respect his mind corresponded with his body. One would have said on hearing him converse that he was 25 years old. He was not a hard student. And yet when the class of 1859 graduated, if the professors had been asked to name those whom the college would afterward delight to count among her children, Vincent would have been high on the list." Graduating in 1859, he began the study of law in the office of William S. Lane, Erie. In fifteen months he had been creditably admitted to the bar, became Mr. Lane's partner, was taking an active interest in the public affairs of the city and county, and stood high in the estimation of his fellow citizens. In 1861, on the day after the President's first call for volunteers, he enlisted as a private with his company, the "Wayne Guards," in the "Erie regiment" of three months' men. As his Harvard biographer says: "His motive was pure patriotism. Manhood and patriotism made him a soldier." He was at once married to a lady to whom he had been sometime engaged—Miss Elizabeth Carter, of Newark, N. J. Vincent was elected the second lieutenant of his company (A) before it left Erie, was soon afterward appointed adjutant of his regiment, and on arrival at Pittsburg, Colonel McLane of the Erie regiment became post commander, and Vincent post adjutant. His efficient discharge of the duties began to attract attention. On the mustering out of the three months' men, he at once re-enlisted in the 83d Reg. P. V. I. for three years; was again appointed acting adjutant of the new regiment, and was elected its major before leaving Erie. On its arrival at Hall's Hill Camp, near Washington, he was elected and commissioned its lieutenant colonel. Just after leaving home he wrote to his wife: "Surely the right will prevail. I live, we will rejoice over our country's success. If I fall, remember that you have given your husband a sacrifice to the most righteous cause that ever widowed a woman." During that fall and winter (1861-62) Vincent rendered frequent service as brigade inspector. Before Yorktown he was incessantly in the saddle in charge of working parties in the trenches. He made the siege a constant study. His first battle was that of Hanover Court House. Shortly after that he was prostrated by the poisonous air of the Chickahominy swamps, so that his life was despaired of. While in this condition the terrible battle of Gaines' Mill took place, in which over half of his regiment were either killed or wounded. The colonel and major were both killed. The news was kept from him, but the preparations for retreat revealed the truth. Sick as he was, he forced his attendants to let him go, and mounting his horse he led his regiment until he fell helpless from the saddle. Carried for a long distance on the back of his faithful servant, John Hickey, he knew nothing more until he found himself on board a sick transport on the James river. He was met by his wife and father in New York, and taken home, where he remained until October 1, when he returned to his regiment. During his absence he had been chosen and commissioned its colonel. In December this brigade took part in the battle of Fredericksburg. Here he gained the enthusiastic and lasting confidence of his men and fellow-officers by his example of personal bravery, and the command of the brigade falling temporarily to him, he proved his generalship when ordered to fall back, by rescuing his troops from their perilous position.

Socially, he was an unusually attractive man, and his quarters at Acquia Creek during the following winter were always a popular resort. Major Swan's article says of him: "As a general thing his companions were older than himself, for though Vincent was but twenty-five years old, his decisive countenance and confident address made him seem the compeer of men of forty. Among his associates were officers of the highest rank. He could adapt himself to all; could talk with the politicians on questions of history, with a general officer on military evolutions, or with a sporting man on the merits of horses, and all respected his opinion."

For several weeks Vincent was president of a court martial, and later was offered the position of judge advocate general of the Army of the Potomac. This he declined. "I enlisted to fight," he said laughingly, when urged to take the staff position. In April, 1865, he was regularly appointed as ranking colonel to the command of the brigade. Shortly after this he rendered signal service with it, in support of General Pleasanton's cavalry at the battle of Aldie. He there received the special thanks and commendation of the Commander-in-Chief, General Meade. From Aldie his brigade marched to Gettysburg. "As we rode slowly through the town (Hanover) Vincent had the torn colors of the old 83d unrolled and brought to the front of the brigade. As they rustled in the moonlight before him, he reverently bared his head, and said to one of his staff in tones that will never be forgotten: "What death more glorious can any man desire, than to die on the soil of old Pennsylvania, fighting for that flag!" As his command lay quietly on the field at Gettysburg awaiting orders, he said: "To-day will either bring me my stars or finish my career as a soldier." On the afternoon of the 2d, orders arrived for a brigade of their division to move to the support of General Sickles' Third Corps. Vincent (so says an eye witness) in the absence of his superior officer, took the responsibility of taking his own brigade to the front, and posting them so as to hold "Little Round Top." This was the real key, as it afterward appeared, to the position of our army in that day's fight, and the rebels strove desperately all that afternoon to take it, in order to turn our flank, and so drive us certainly from our position. This hill, since known as Vincent's Spur (and now marked by a marble slab erected by "Strong Vincent Post," G. A. R., of Erie), was held by this brigade, though at fearful loss. The disposition of these troops was afterward cited in the classroom at West Point as one of the most signal instances in the war of first-class military strategy by a volunteer officer. But it cost Vincent his life. While standing on a conspicuous rock, encouraging his troops, he was shot by a sharp-shooter, and died five days afterward. The appointment of brigadier general was sent him the day after he was wounded, but it reached him too late. He was buried at Erie with military honors. A little girl was born to him three months after his death. She lived only a year and then was buried in the same grave with "the hero of the Little Round Top."

Bethuel Boyd Vincent.—The earliest ancestor of the Vincent family in this country was a French Huguenot of the name, who fled from religious persecution in France in the middle of the seventeenth century, and settled in New Jersey. In 1772 part of his descendants removed and settled near what is now Milton, Pa., on the west branch of the Susquehanna. During the Revolutionary war they suffered greatly from attacks by the Indians and British, some being killed and others carried as prisoners of war to Quebec. Other families afterward settling in Erie county

(the Himrods, Mileses, Boyds, Lytles and others), had a like experience. Three relatives of the name—John, William and Daniel—removed to Waterford, in Erie county, at different times, about the year 1800. Among the children of William are the Hon. John P. Vincent, lawyer and ex-County Judge, of Erie, and Miss Sarah Vincent, present postmistress in Waterford; and of Daniel, T. D. Vincent and Elizabeth (Mrs. Dr. William Faulkner), of Erie.

John Vincent came to Erie county in 1797, and settled in Fort LeBeuf (now Waterford) when the region was still a howling wilderness. He was a man of strong natural intellect, sound common sense and inflexible integrity. These qualities, though he had but a limited education, procured his appointment as justice of the peace in 1803, and in 1805 as associate judge of Erie county. This latter position he filled with entire satisfaction to the public for forty years. He married twice first Nancy Boyd and afterward Nancy Anderson, and his children were Bethuel, Boyd, John A. (now of Cleveland, Ohio), Phebe W. (Mrs. John Wood), Henry R., Cornelius H. and James P. He died in February, 1860, in the old homestead in Waterford. Bethuel Boyd Vincent was the oldest son of the judge, and was born in Waterford August 4, 1803. He helped his father on the farm and in the salt trade, picking up such education as he could at a country schoolhouse. Later, he studied surveying at the Waterford Academy. In June, 1826, he was employed as assistant to Col. James Kearney, U. S. A., in making surveys for a Government canal from the Ohio to the lakes at Erie. He was afterward some seven years in the State service in Meadville, as civil engineer. In 1834 he returned and lived as a merchant in Waterford until 1843. He then removed to Erie, where he had previously formed a partnership (Vincent, Himrod & Co.) with William and David Himrod and William H. Johnson, in the business of an iron foundry and machine shop. In 1860 he retired from this firm and formed, with others, the banking house of Vincent, Bailey & Co.; and when this was converted, in 1865, into the Marine National Bank of Erie, he became its first president. In 1866 he joined in building "The National" grain elevator, of Chicago (burned in the great fire of 1871—rebuilt, 1873), and was a partner in this concern at the time of his death, July 21, 1876. Mr. Vincent was, like his father and others of his ancestors, a man of marked individuality of character. He had a clear, vigorous, well-informed mind; an indomitable, almost imperious will; thorough independence and unwearied energy of spirit; yet, withal, a tenderly affectionate and hearty social disposition. He was active in the church of his choice. From his earliest residence in Erie he was connected with St. Paul's Church as a vestryman and warden, and was for thirty years the superintendent of its Sunday-school. He had a great fondness for children and a great faculty for winning their confidence and affection. His means were generously given to the building of the present beautiful St. Paul's Church and of its four chapels. He was almost always, too, a representative of this parish, both in the diocesan and general councils of the Church. A beautiful memorial tablet in St. Paul's testifies to the active blessedness of Mr. Vincent's Christian life, and to the gratitude of those whom he helped to teach and lead in the same way. Mrs. Vincent was a daughter of Capt. Martin Strong, of this county, and still lives (1895) with her only surviving children, Bishop Boyd Vincent and Ward Vincent, in the city of Cincinnati. Three daughters—Blanche, Bell and Kate—died in early life, and two sons—Strong (Gen. Vincent) and Reed—in early manhood. One daughter, Mrs. George A. Lyon, still survives.

Harry Vincent, of the firm of Ashby & Vincent, printers, stationers and binders, Erie, Pa., was born in Waterford, Erie county, Pa., June 27, 1847. He is a descendant of one of Erie's historic families, particulars of which are contained elsewhere in the volume. He was educated in the public schools and academy of Erie, and at Eastman's Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. His first business connection was with Clemens, Caughey & Burgess, wholesale grocers, Erie, with whom he remained two years. He was then for two years connected with the business department of the Erie Dispatch. On May 1, 1870, he formed his present partnership association with J. E. Ashby, under the firm name of Ashby & Vincent, printers, binders, stationers and blank book manufacturers. He is unmarried and resides at 164 West Seventh street. Mr. Vincent is a member of the Masonic Fraternity and Royal Arcanum.

The Wallace Family.—This well known family furnished both the first resident physician and attorney to Erie after its settlement. Both were learned and able men and did much towards the advancement of Erie, while the families of each continued to identify the name with Erie's progress. Mention is now made of both of these able and accomplished brothers, whose early homes erected in the wilderness still stand—associated as each is with Erie's earlier history, and the part its distinguished occupants took therein.

Dr. John C. Wallace (deceased) was the first resident physician in Erie county, and the only one until a short time before his death. He was born in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, February 14, 1771, and died in Erie, December 8, 1827. He graduated at Philadelphia under Dr. Rush and other celebrated medical men. He was appointed surgeon in the United States army, and in 1794 accompanied Gen. Wayne in the Indian war. During the war he visited Erie for a short time. Some years later he resigned his position in the army, and after residing in Franklin, Pa., for three years, came to Erie with his family in 1803. Professionally he was identified with the entire county, his professional calls often taking him far beyond its bounds. In 1806 he was elected the first burgess of Erie, and also held the offices of justice of the peace, county commissioner and coroner. At the beginning of the war of 1812, he commanded an Erie county regiment, and after the battle on Lake Erie assisted Dr. Parsons, of the navy, in attending the wounded. Dr. Wallace was married in Franklin, in 1801, to Miss Margaret Heron, daughter of Capt. James Heron of the army. They had seven children: Eleanor, Benjamin, Elizabeth, Gordon, Jane, Mary Ann and William Perry, of whom only two are now living. Gordon Wallace lives in Missouri, Mo., and Jane (now a widow), who married Capt. Wheeler, late of the army, lives in Troy, Mo. The only one who remained in Erie county was Elizabeth, who married Charles Pollock, March 8, 1831. They had nine children: John, Wheeler, Charles, Benjamin, James, Robert, Jane, Elizabeth and Ellen. Five are still living: Wheeler, Charles, James, Robert and Elizabeth. Wheeler has three children: Burt, Josephine and Winnie. Charles has two children: Annie and Robert. Several of this family were noted and specially merit mention. Benjamin was a volunteer, with the rank of major, in the Texan army in their war against Mexico for independence in 1835-36. He was taken prisoner by the Mexicans, and by order of Santa Anna, with other prisoners was murdered in cold blood at the massacre of Goliad. O. Wheeler, son of Elizabeth Pollock, is a captain in the 23d infantry U. S. regular army. Their family home, stately and of a quaint finish, as occupied by the family up to 1827, still stands with but little change, the third house east of French on the north side of East Fifth street.

William Wallace was a lawyer. He came from Harrisburg in 1800 as attorney for the Pennsylvania Population Company. His first wife (Rachel Forrest) died in Erie in 1804. In 1806 he married Eleanor, daughter of Hon. Wm. Maclay, one of the first U. S. Senators from Pennsylvania. He made his home on East Sixth street, in the wooden dwelling near Holland street, which afterwards was enlarged and has been long known as the Sill homestead. He remained in Erie until 1810. His daughter, Mary Eleanor, was long conspicuous in Harrisburg as Mrs. Rev. Dr. W. R. DeWitt, and his son, Dr. William Maclay, whose extended career in Erie as a physician and president of the State Medical Society made him so widely known, died in 1878. Mr. Wallace returned to Harrisburg with his family in 1810, and both he and his wife are interred in the old Paxtang churchyard. His younger son, Irwin M. Wallace, was an esteemed citizen of Erie until his death in 1894, and another, Mr. Benjamin, was a gifted and successful minister of the Presbyterian Church, and an editor. William Maclay, son of Irwin M. Wallace, is assistant cashier of the Second National Bank of Erie, and his sister, Eleanor, is the wife of Rev. John DeWitt, a professor in the Theological Seminary in Princeton, and Miss Julia A. DeWitt is the author of several works; Kate is the wife of Mr. George Sterry, of New York. Though but few of the family remain in Erie, the name is indissolubly connected with the settlement, early struggles and the defense and advancement of Erie.

Jerome Francis Downing, a prominent business man and representative citizen of Erie, was born in Hampshire county, Massachusetts, March 24, 1827. His father, James Downing, was born in Boston in 1775, and his mother, Roxana Forbush, belonged to a Roxbury family of that name. They settled first in Roxbury, now a part of Boston, but removed about the year 1810 to the town of Enfield, in the county above named, and took up their abode on a farm (still in possession of one of the children), where they reared a large family of seven sons and four daughters, Jerome being the youngest child. Like many young men who have become useful and influential citizens, young Downing was accustomed to hard work, either on the farm or in some one of the factories or machine shops then established in the neighborhood. In this manner he obtained the means of securing a better education than the common school afforded; and in 1848 entered the freshman class of Amherst College. Two years later he became the editor of a newspaper in Holyoke, Mass., which position he soon relinquished for the chief editorship of the Troy (N. Y.) Daily Post, where he remained for some time; his next move being in the direction of the legal profession. Having been admitted to the bar, Mr. Downing settled in Erie, Pa., in the fall of 1855, and in 1863 was elected district attorney of the county. The following year a new departure in life was presented to him: The old Insurance Company of North America, of Philadelphia, then, as now, one of the most prominent fire and marine insurance companies in the country, was looking about for a suitable person to extend its operations into the Western States. The choice fell upon Mr. Downing, notwithstanding the fact that he had not been brought up to the business of fire insurance. With much reluctance and many misgivings the position offered, of general agent for the Western States for the company named, was accepted, headquarters to be established in Erie for the time being. This position Mr. Downing has now (1895) held for over thirty years; an era of remarkable success for the company's Western business. Indeed, it can be said that no one in the same line of effort has been more successful. Mr. Downing's field of operations embraces the States of Ohio, West Virginia, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas and Wyoming, and the Territories of Oklahoma and New Mexico, in which field over 3,000 agencies have been established. The headquarters of the department still remain at Erie, where Mr. Downing occupies one of the finest and best appointed general insurance offices in the country. A business of such importance, spread over so large a field, demands a large force of experienced assistants, both in the office and in the field, all of whom look to Mr. Downing for instruction and direction in their various duties. It is only justice to say that no department office of any of our most prominent underwriting institutions during the last quarter of a century has been conducted more successfully or more conscientiously, Mr. Downing's business motto being the Golden Rule. Just and honorable dealing with all the patrons of the companies represented by Mr. Downing in the settlement of losses or in other business, has created an unusually friendly sentiment and led to a patronage of very large proportions. The writer of a sketch of Mr. Downing, published in the "History of Erie County," says: "From the general features of Jerome F. Downing's business career here outlined, it appears that the profession of fire underwriting, in the widest sense of the term, has been his main life-work, and is likely to so continue for the remainder of his business career. But it will be a mistake to suppose that Mr. Downing has confined himself exclusively to the duties of his profession." The same writer referred to above describes Mr. Downing as a citizen in these words: "He has not simply been a successful business man; he has always taken an active interest in promoting the growth and prosperity of the city where his home has been for so many years; has invested liberally in manufacturing enterprises and in the erection of a large number of fine dwelling houses for the accommodation of such as do not own their own homes, as well as other buildings, among which may be mentioned his new office building, one of the finest structures for the purpose designed in the State,

As a school director and a member of the City Councils he has done his share of public duties, but his influence and example, whether in or out of office, is always on the side of progress and improvement. Possessed of talents which eminently fit him for legislative halls, he has no ambition for office and a decided aversion to office-seeking. In politics he was first a Whig and then a Republican, but is not a strong partisan, holding to no extreme views on any of the leading political questions of the day. Mr. Downing has long been a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and a liberal supporter of that society, as well as of the charitable and benevolent enterprises connected therewith. The same may be said of his contributions generally for objects of benevolence and public welfare—they have been liberal and unostentatious. In this connection should be mentioned the fact that the establishment of the new park adjoining the city on the south, and christened "Glenwood Park," owes its inception to Mr. Downing, who, so far, has been its most liberal supporter. Other citizens are entitled to much credit for the success achieved in the securing of the beautiful grounds comprising the park, but it is only fair to say that without the impetus given to the project by Mr. Downing, nothing would have been accomplished. In 1892 Mr. Downing erected the largest and finest business building in the city, situated on the northeast corner of State and Ninth streets. The building is eighty-two and one-half by 165 feet and six stories high, exclusive of the basement. It is a massive structure, the heavy brick walls being faced with the finest quality of pressed brick. A large dry-goods store occupies the first floors, and the balance of the building is devoted to offices. Heated by steam and lighted by gas and electricity, with passenger and freight elevators and every modern convenience, it is one of the finest business buildings in Northwestern Pennsylvania, and the first large office structure erected in Erie with all the modern conveniences. But Mr. Downing's enterprise is not confined to the locality in which he lives. He has invested largely and successfully in Chicago real estate, and also in farm property in the Northwest. He carries on two wheat farms in North Dakota, one of 2,500 acres and one of 5,000 acres, all under cultivation. Of course the management of these large farms has to be confided to experienced and trusty superintendents, who have the immediate direction of affairs, subject to the general plans adopted by the owner. The results have fully justified the outlay, demonstrating the fact that money can be made in judicious farming. Mr. Downing also carries on a small farm just outside the city limits of Erie, but in this case farming is conducted for the pleasure of it rather than for profit. It affords another illustration of the fact, often referred to, that a majority of successful men who spent their boyhood days on a farm are inclined later in life to indulge in the recreation of owning and running a farm. Mr. Downing's home is one of the attractions of Erie; his residence and adjoining grounds compare favorably with the best in the city. This home, attractive as it is, owes much of its real charm to the wife who has for so many years been its loving center and directing spirit. Although the devoted mother of seven children, Mrs. Downing, aside from her domestic obligations, has found time to administer to the needs of the unfortunate and make their pathway in life brighter and happier, exemplify the truth that it is our duty to make our lives a blessing to others as well as to ourselves. Mrs. Downing's early home was in Western Massachusetts, in the town of Worthington, where she was born in 1830. She is a lady of cultivation, of much natural artistic talent, a great admirer of the beauties of nature, and fond of travel, having seen much of the Old World as well as the New. Their children are mostly grown up and settled in life, their homes being near the parental roof. The career of Mr. Downing is an emphatic illustration of the success which attends earnest, persistent and well-directed effort in any chosen field of labor. It presents an example worthy of emulation by all who, without adventitious surroundings, start on the road to success, firmly resolved to battle bravely and unceasingly for the achievement of the grandest and best possibilities of life. In the words of Mr. Downing, in one of his numerous addresses to young men: "Let a boy start out with a right ambition, and no matter what his environment may be, good habits, industry, patience, perseverance, fidelity and devotion to duty, coupled with good business education, will bring success in due time; though possibly not wealth, which is not essential to true success in life." In this connection it may not be out of place to allude to Mr. Downing's usefulness as a public speaker, he being frequently called upon to serve in such capacity on more occasion or other of local interest. He is fluent, versatile, easy in manner, mature in thought, his language direct and pointed—qualities hardly to be expected in one who is so deeply engrossed in business cares and responsibilities. On the occasion of the celebration of "Columbus Day" in Erie, the committee of arrangements selected Mr. Downing as one of the four speakers to be invited to deliver brief addresses; the subject assigned to him being the "Development of Four Centuries." The address was earnest and eloquent, and filled with the wisdom of a practical man. Equally impressive and valuable was his address as Erie's Centennial orator on the occasion of the celebration of the 100th anniversary of Erie's existence, delivered September 11, 1895. As a fitting conclusion to this brief sketch, the following tribute to Mr. Downing and his life-long companion, from the pen of one of Erie's most respected and cultured citizens, a compeer of a third of a century, is here given: "Coming from the hills of New England, with a community of thought, of needs and of hopes, their toils and trials have been mutual. As the way was opened and their position in life became secure, each advance found both equal to all the requisites which their surroundings imposed. Whether in church or state, at home or abroad, in the whirl of society or in the graver exertions of organized effort for the alleviation of misery or mitigation of distress, their means, their influence, and their time could be counted as a factor. To all such calls a deaf ear was never turned. And now in the serenity of a fully rounded career, each can review with a complacency unalloyed with selfishness the full fruition of their early hopes, the complete accomplishment of each one of their noble aspirations."

The Kelso Family.—There is hardly a name more intimately associated with the settlement of Erie city and county from its very first start than that of the Kelso family. Identified as it is with the landed interests, the military occupation and protection of Erie, and the social, political, official and business annals of Erie's first half century, some space is properly devoted to this old Erie family, especially as the record of but one other seems to reach so far, or to be so indissolubly linked with Erie's early history. The early family home on the lake bank, as it is recalled in all its naturalness and floral grace, illustrates how the love of flowers and vines came with the first settlers from the Susquehanna valley to the banks of Lake Erie, and thus gave the "Gem City" the picturesque beauty for which it has since become renowned. Gen. John Kelso, son of William Kelso (who was the son of Joseph and Margaret Kelso, of Scotch descent), was born in 1766, in Paxton township, Dauphin county, Pa., the home of the family being at the old Kelso Ferry House, on the banks of the Susquehanna, where William died May 22, 1807. About 1796 the Harrisburg and Presque Isle Company was formed in that vicinity by ten persons, each contributing £200, for the purchase of land near Erie. In August, 1796, the company purchased thirty-seven inlots and outlots at the public sale at Carlisle, and obtained 430 acres at the mouth of Walnut creek. John Kelso was reared on a farm, educated at the common schools of the vicinity, and married Miss Sarah Willis Carson. After their marriage Gen. and Mrs. Kelso came to Erie county, settling in what is now Fairview township, and afterwards removed to the head of the Bay of Presque Isle, settling on what is still land of the family. Their coming to the county was about 1797 or 1798, and after five years' residence in Fairview and Mill Creek they moved to Erie. They had seven children: Albert J., Edwin J., Harry, William, Caroline C., wife of the late Hon. E. Babbitt, and Adaline, wife of the late Rev. Dr. James H. Whallon. All are deceased. As an incident of Gen. Kelso's residence in Mill Creek, it can be stated that the first schoolhouse in that township was erected probably during his time, and on the Kelso land. It was of hewn logs. The whole side formed the fire-place. It was visible a few years ago, a quaint ruin at the foot of that high and narrow bluff known as the "Devil's backbone." Nothing now remains of it more than a broken foundation and blackened hearth stones. Gen. Kelso was appointed associate judge for Erie county in March, 1800. Court was held for Erie county at Meadville for some time. He resigned as judge to accept the appointment of prothonotary, register and clerk of courts December, 1804; was reappointed January 18, 1809; was appointed treasurer in 1806; and April 18, 1806, he was made commissioner for the sale of lots, and later brigadier general, and placed in command of the troops defending Erie. In 1805 he removed from a dwelling at the mouth of Garrison run to a new residence owned by Capt. William Lee, near the navy yard, in the vicinity of the spot where the government vessels were constructed. When the county was opened for settlement the dense forest abounded in game. Fish were so plentiful that the settlers with hook and line obtained large quantities. The following items are from Mrs. James Hoskinson's historical notes: In 1804 Mr. Kelso commenced to build at the foot of State street; trees were cut down and converted into logs; a square log house was put up; later wings were added and the logs weather-boarded; there were five rooms, two halls, kitchen and servants' sleeping apartments; the large grounds fronting the entrance to the house, as the writer remembers, was a lawn of velvety softness; trees were planted and roses climbed upon the sides of the windows, giving it a picturesque effect. Mrs. Kelso was a woman of cultivated tastes, having received many advantages in early life. She was a worshiper at nature's shrine, and her garden was a marvel of beauty, entered by an arched gateway, which was covered by that delicate and graceful climber, the woodbine; in the center was a summer house, divided into four parts, and at each corner were large apple trees; their branches were tastefully trained, and, meeting in the center, formed a dense shade, where a ray of sunshine could hardly peep, and when in bloom, the summer house was covered with flowers of rich and varied hues; it was exquisitely beautiful and of unsurpassed loveliness; from the arbor diverged four walks, dividing the garden into squares, surrounded by neat railings; all varieties of flowers grew here most profusely; there were several varieties of roses, hyacinths, tulips, columbines, pinks, sweet williams, chrysanthemums, and a beautiful collection of primroses, not to be found now; lilacs were abundant and also the beautiful golden laburnum tree. Mrs. Kelso first brought the althea and sweet briar to Erie. When Gen. and Mrs. Kelso came to Erie county slavery still existed in Pennsylvania. They brought with them Charley Logan and his wife, Fira (a slave), with her three sons, who were by law servants until 28 years of age. Mrs. Kelso, finding it difficult to control so large a family, agreed to part with her colored boys. George was exchanged for 100 barrels of salt to Rufus S. Reed; Briston to Mr. Brown. After their freedom Briston became the widely-known ice cream caterer, and served at many fine entertainments. Fira lived to be 101 years old, and grew to be an immense fat negress. She died at her son George's after the breaking up of Mrs. Kelso's home. Fira was the wife of Charles Logan, and to her culinary skill was due the hospitable dinners and open house, and woe to the urchins who invaded her domicile. So utterly defenseless was Erie at the outbreak of the war of 1812 that the British could easily have captured it. The only fortification was a small block house on the eastern part of the peninsula, which was without any kind of guns or ammunition. The most formidable instrument of war was a small boat howitzer (owned by Gen. Kelso), which was used to celebrate the Fourth of July and other great occasions. It was found by Gen. Kelso on the beach at Mill creek, where it had been left by the wrecking of an armed French bateau. Subsequently it was borrowed by a lake captain and reported lost overboard. In the war of 1812 Erie county militia formed a part of the western division, which was commanded by Brig. Gen. John Kelso. Before the close of June Gen. Kelso ordered out his brigade for the defense of Erie; August 25th expresses were sent over the county stating that the enemy's vessels had been seen and would make a descent upon Erie; September 4th the government directed that the State field pieces be sent to Erie; September 15th the secretary of war was notified by the governor that Gen. John Kelso had transmitted him a communication signed by respectable gentlemen of Erie, requesting that some efficient action for the protection of Erie may be speedily taken; September 16th Gen. Kelso was notified that one brass piece and four 4-pounders were on their way to Erie; October 21st Governor Snyder ordered Gen. Kelso to employ volunteers, if practicable, for the defense of Erie. The summer's campaign along the lakes was disastrous to the Americans, and it became apparent to those who knew the situation that without a fleet to co-operate with the western and New York armies, the cause of our country in this direction was hopeless. So little account of land operations of the day has been preserved, through loss of records, that it is briefly stated: It was ordered that Erie should be a navy yard; in October work was commenced on two gunboats; the British menaced the new station to retard the building of the boats; several times the enemy's vessels anchored in the roadstead, and, but for the shallow water, would have entered the harbor; Mrs. Kelso and other ladies fled to Duncan's tavern for protection; at another time they sought safety in Waterford at George W. Reed's tavern; July 19th six of the enemy's vessels were in sight outside of the harbor, where they lay becalmed for two days; all this time the meager land force was kept busy marching upon the bank of the lake to give the enemy an impression of a much larger force or army being present; after the burning of the villages of Black Rock and Buffalo by the British and Indians, the most terrifying rumors were circulated; May 15th the wildest alarm was created by a false report that 600 or 700 British and Indians were coming to Erie to destroy and burn the village; the troops at Erie only numbered 2,000 men, and the hostiles were 3,000 strong; the first brigade of Gen. Mead's command was ordered into service to increase the defensive force to about 4,000; happily the alarm was false, but a considerable body of troops was kept at Erie during the winter; many of these men were poorly furnished with arms and equipments; so destitute were the stores of comfortable supplies that Mrs. Kelso was obliged to cut up her blankets to make clothing for her boys. Following the war, Mr. Kelso and citizens were kept busy restoring and rebuilding trade, laying out roads and clearing land. Gen. Kelso's son remembers holding the plow behind a yoke of oxen, breaking the road to Massassauga. In 1818 Gen. Kelso donated the bluff for the land light house, being a part of the tract given to the United States government for the purpose of a lighthouse, the abandonment of it in March, 1881, caused a question of title between the purchaser, Myron Sanford, and William Kelso, which was amicably settled. Later, the government, through the pressure brought to bear by lake men, repurchased from Mr. Sanford, giving double the amount it cost him, that is, $4,000. Gen. Kelso died in 1819, in the prime of life, leaving his widow, Mrs. Sarah Willis Carson Kelso, and seven children, two daughters and five sons. Her great wish and ambition was to live to see the Erie canal completed. She was an interesting conversationalist, and could tell much of the society of Erie, which was of the army and navy (the best of the county), and most delightful. Gen. Kelso's descendants own and reside on 200 acres of land on the bank of the bay, near the head upon which he once lived and the home at the foot of State street.

Edwin J. Kelso (deceased), second son of Gen. Kelso, was born April 10, 1800, in Fairview township, Erie county. He came to Erie a boy, and as his father was in the discharge of public trusts, he was early instructed in the modes and duties of official routine. It was with experience thus in advance acquired that he accepted the position of prothonotary and register and recorder, to which he was appointed by Gov. Shultze in 1824, upon the death of Thomas Wilson. These duties were ably and satisfactorily performed, for about twelve years, when relieved by a change of administration, in 1835. In 1836 he was appointed by President Jackson collector of the port of Erie, to succeed Col. Thomas Forster, who soon died, after having filled the position of collector for thirty-five years. Mr. Kelso was the second collector of the port, and having been re-appointed by President Van Buren, held the office till 1841, when he was displaced by a change of parties, after which he held no office. For some years he was engaged in the forwarding business in Erie, wherein his large and early acquaintance was utilized. Mr. Kelso was married, in 1828, to Miss Malvina Atkins, of Buffalo, whose elegant tastes and genial manners, as evinced in her surroundings, will be kindly remembered. Mrs. Kelso died in 1871. The inheritor of a large landed property in and near Erie, and connected, with its public business, prominence as a citizen, and politician, Mr. Kelso became widely known and trusted. He was an earnest member of the Democratic party, and shared in its triumphs, yet was loyal to its teachings under adversity, as in its palmer days. To have filled his public positions satisfactorily, to the appointing power and to the people, to have been faithful to all these trusts; and laid down his functions without a stain upon his record, was the pleasing contemplation of Mr. Kelso during the evening of his life. He died February 10, 1879, leaving one son, John, and two daughters, Emma S., married in 1865, to C. C. Eddy, a resident of Erie county, Pennsylvania, and Mary; they live on the old homestead. C. C. Eddy was born in Rhode Island January 27, 1829, son of Sylvester and Thamer H. (Luther) Eddy, natives of Rhode Island, of English extraction. Mr. Eddy enlisted in the United States navy in New York in 1862, and in the same year was appointed second lieutenant. He served five years and six months on the United States steamer Michigan during the civil war. In 1878 he resigned his position and embarked in the lumber business; he is a Democrat in politics.

Albert J. Kelso was born September 7, 1802, in this county, son of Gen. John Kelso. His wife used to ride home to Cumberland county on horseback to visit friends. Mr. Kelso was educated in Erie, successively by Mr. Eastman, Prof. Blossom, Mr. Reed and Mr. Gunnison. He was married January 26, 1842, to Elizabeth Sullivan, who bore him the following children: Sarah, wife of Edwin Tenny, of Crawford county, Pennsylvania; Albert C., married to Livonia Green, have four children, Philo K., Frankie, Ella and Harry; Annie, wife of E. DeWolf, have six children, reside in Iowa, and Edwin J. Mrs. Kelso dying in 1850, he married, January 25, 1853, Maria L. Fales, a native of Massachusetts. By this union were born five children, four now living: Susan M., wife of J. Benson, have one daughter, Grace; Caroline A., Alice A. and Charles H. Mr. Kelso resided in Erie city fifty years, and on his present farm, located on the Lake road in West Mill Creek township thirty years. He was at one time in business in Erie city with Mr. Kellogg. He was a thorough temperance man, declining even to sell barley for distilling purposes. He died some years since.

Melvin M. Kelso, born in Erie city September 1, 1816, married Martha S. Johnson, born in Fairview

Richard O'Brien

May 3, 1817, daughter of Samuel and Ann (Barnett) Johnson, natives of Dauphin county, Pennsylvania. They had eight children, of whom Richard B., Melvin M. and Effie B. are now living.

Melvin M. Kelso, sr., was a son of Gen. John Kelso. In early life he was a sailor, then for a number of years was clerk in the Erie postoffice. Inheriting from his father 130 acres on Ridge road in Fairview, he eventually adopted agricultural pursuits, in which he was very successful, owning 474 acres of farm property. He was a prominent citizen, filling the offices of director of the poor, township road commissioner, justice of the peace, etc. He was an adherent of the Presbyterian Church, to which with all other good causes, he contributed liberally. He died November 18, 1866.

Richard Barnett Kelso now owns the home farm, which he is greatly improving, and on which he is erecting fine buildings. Politically he is a Republican. Harry Kelso moved in early life to the vicinity of Green Bay, where he died many years since.

William C. Kelso, the last of his family, died April 24, 1892. He was of refined and gentle nature, a true Christian, was a vestryman of St. Paul's Church for over fifty years, and many years of that time rector's warden. Among his effects was an English side dagger, belonging originally to an officer of the British fleet and surrendered to an officer of Perry's. Mr. Kelso was very much of a collaborator in old books and relics. William C. Kelso was assistant assessor of internal revenue in 1863 and served for some years Adaline (Kelso) Whallon, wife of Rev. James H. Whallon, D. D., was married about 1829 and spent most of her life in Erie. Her home was at the corner of Second and Sassafras streets, on her patrimonial estate. Her husband was a Methodist Episcopal minister and actively engaged, serving several terms as presiding elder. He was sent by President Grant as consul to Port Mahon, in Mediterranean. Dr. Whallon died about 1877, and Mrs. Whallon survived him some time. Of their large family only Melvin and Isabella survives. Both reside in Ohio.

A. C. Kelso, farmer, Mill Creek township, post-office Erie, was born in the city of Erie in 1848, son of Albert J. and Elizabeth (Sullivan) Kelso. The former was a native of Erie county and was born in Manchester, Fairview township. The latter was a daughter of Rev. Mr. Sullivan, a Methodist clergyman, and for many years a resident of Harbor Creek. After her death he was again married to Marie Fales, who now survives him, residing in Mill Creek township. Albert J. Kelso was a resident of the same township during his life time, and the last forty years was spent on the farm now owned by his son, A. C. He died in 1890, at the age of 87 years. Mr. A. C. Kelso is the third of a family of four children: Sarah, wife of L. E. Tenny, Lincolnville, Crawford county, Pa.; Anna, wife of Ezra DeWolf, resident of Iowa; Albert and Elizabeth, of Erie. By the second marriage there were also four children: Susan, wife of B. J. Benson, Union City, Pa.; Caroline, Mill Creek township; Alice, Mill Creek, and Charles, of Riceville, Pa. September 10, 1873, Mr. Kelso was married to Miss Livonia, daughter of Philo H. and Betsey L. (Gleason) Green, of Harbor Creek. The former was a prominent citizen of the township, where he resided. He died November 8, 1872, aged 47 years. His widow still survives, at the age of 78 years, and resides in Harbor Creek. Their children were: George (deceased), Livonia, wife of Mr. Kelso; Ellen L., wife of G. P. Gifford, of Harbor Creek; Charles, of Buffalo; Clarinda, wife of William H. Gray, Harbor Creek; Albert (deceased), and Andrew Greene, of Harbor Creek. The children of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Kelso are: Philo, Frank, Ella, Harry and Bessie. John Kelso, grandfather of A. C., was a general in the war of 1812 (of whom a complete sketch is published in this work). Charles H. and Catherine (Bowers) Greene, grandparents of Mrs. Kelso, were natives of New York State, and came to Erie county about fifty years ago. William Gleason, grandfather of Mrs. Kelso, was a life long resident of Chautauqua county, New York. His wife was Polly Smith. Noah Sullivan, grandfather of Mr. Kelso, died in Harbor Creek. Mr. Kelso is one of the progressive farmers and influential citizens of Mill Creek township. Mr. and Mrs. Kelso are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Miles Family. In June, 1795, William Miles and William Cook came with their wives, who were sisters, to what is now Concord township, Erie county, before the organization of the township or county, and a month or so before the arrival of Colonel Seth Reed and his family to Erie. They are deemed the first white settlers in the county, as Mrs. Miles and Mrs. Cook were the first white women to become residents. The Miles and Cook families first settled in Concord, but in 1801 came to Union, where Mr. Miles erected both saw and gristmills. He was a very prominent and noted man, and in his lifetime witnessed many changes. Born in the Valley of the Susquehanna, not far from the junction of the North and West branches, where the border warfare with the British and Indians might well have caused it to be called "The dark and bloody ground," he was taken prisoner during one of those furious raids to which the valley was subjected from the savages and their allies, under Brant, or warriors of like infamous character. When a child, he was taken to Canada and there detained as a prisoner for some time. During this period he was instructed, and upon his return to his home, destined. He was the brother-in-law of David Watts, of Carlisle, both of whom came to the Northwest wilderness in connection with the survey, allotment and sale of a large part of Erie county, the survey of the Tenth Donation district, laying out for settlement numerous bodies of land, as well as the village of Wattsburg, which was named for David Watts. Mr. Miles became possessed of a vast body of land in Union township and its vicinity. His son, James, afterward purchased 1,000 acres in Girard township, embracing the mouth of Elk creek. Mr. Miles was a conspicuous and influential citizen in the settlement of Erie county for nearly half a century. He had a strong will, great versatility and unyielding purpose. He acquired a very large land estate and left many memorials of his life. In the laying out and building of roads and bridges, and naming townships and fixing places for voting, he exercised a large influence. He built mills at Union City, which place was long called Miles' Mills. He had several children, among whom were: Hon. James Miles, associate judge of Erie county from 1851 to 1856; Frederick Miles and Mrs. Bemis.

James Miles, in 1832, settled on his large tract of land at the mouth of Elk creek. There he resided in almost baronial style. He also purposed the laying out of a city and the formation of a harbor at the mouth of Elk creek, to be accompanied with an effort backed by powerful support to make it an outlet for the Erie and Pittsburg Canal. He also offered the Agricultural College of Pennsylvania the gift of one or more hundred acres of this land for its location, after his characteristic activity in the organization of the college. Judge Miles co-operated with Judge John Galbraith and Hon. Alfred Kelley in the building of the railroad from Erie to the Ohio line, now part of the Lake Shore R. R. Into this he entered with great zeal, and was long a director of the Cleveland, Painesville and Ash-tabula R. R. Co., and among the most prominent in the movements touching the railroad system of Erie county in the stirring period from 1850 to 1864. Judge Miles, towards the close of his life, built an imposing mansion on the banks of Elk creek, and Miles' Grove was laid out at the station of the Lake Shore R. R. The village of Miles Grove, with the busy hum of industry, and the constant arrival and departure of cars on several railroads, perpetuate the name of its founder. Mrs. Bemis and Frederick Miles died many years ago. Judge James Miles died at his home near Miles Grove in 1869. His father, William Miles, died about half a century since. Of the Judge's family, William Miles, who made a brilliant record as a cavalry officer, gave his life for his country. James Miles, Jr., died about four or five years since, and John F. Miles and Mrs. Hall and one unmarried sister are the surviving children of Judge Miles.

The Marvin Family.—ELISHA MARVIN, eldest son of Elisha Marvin and Elizabeth Selden, his wife, was born at Lyme, Conn., November 22, 1768; brought up on a farm. About 1792, in company with his brother-in-law, Judah Colt, and his brother Enoch, he settled in Canandaigua, N. Y. In 1796, Mr. Colt having been appointed agent for the Population Company, both brothers removed with him to Erie county, and settled at Colt's Station, in Greenfield township, where Elisha bought a large tract of land. He was justice of the peace in Greenfield for many years, and long one of the most prominent surveyors and farmers in the county. He married Minerva Prendergast, of Jamestown, N. Y., May 13, 1812; died September 29, 1829. Mrs. Marvin, who was a woman of more than usual culture, died April 1, 1858. Their children were William E., born March 21, 1814; and Elizabeth Susan, born November 29, 1818, died in the fall of 1873. William still survives, in North East borough. Enoch Marvin, brother of Elisha, was born in Lyme, October 19, 1774; after spending a number of years at Greenfield and Erie, he went to Beaver county, Pennsylvania, as agent of a land company, where he died March 31, 1840, leaving a large estate, much of which was in Erie county. He married Eliza Hull in 1820. She survived him a number of years. They had one child which died in infancy. Elihu Marvin, youngest brother of Elisha and Enoch Marvin above named, was born at Lyme, Conn., August 1, 1791. He early developed a taste for business pursuits, and became associated with General David Humphreys, of Derby, Conn., in the woolen manufacture. September 10, 1813, he married Ann Humphreys, a niece of the general. After several years of active prosecution of the woolen business, his health failed and he withdrew from the concern. About 1823, he moved to Ripley, N. Y., where he purchased a farm and devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. In 1842, changed to Erie, living for a number of years on a farm which included the site of Marvintown. About 1854 or 1856, he laid out part of his farm in town lots, and sold off a large number. About 1864, he built a residence on Tenth street, where he resided until death. He was influential wherever he lived, but had a great repugnance to holding office; was an enthusiast in favor of schools and as a fruit grower; a liberal giver to the Presbyterian Church, with which he early associated himself. Mrs. Marvin died April 30, 1875. Mr. Marvin died August 29, 1878, having acquired an extensive property. They had two children—Susan, born in 1816, died in 1834; Sarah, born January 26, 1820, married Rev. L. G. Olmstead, December 20, 1838, died May 25, 1843, leaving an only child—Sarah L., born May 18, 1840, who married Matthew Griswold, January 8, 1866, and died in February, 1871, leaving two sons—Matthew Griswold, jr., and Elihu Marvin Griswold.

Hon. Selden Marvin (deceased), formerly city recorder and city attorney, Erie, only child of Dudley and Mary (Whalley) Marvin (brother of Elisha, Enoch and Elihu), was born in Canandaigua, N. Y., June 9, 1819, named after his grandmother, who was of the Connecticut family of Seldens; received his education mainly at Canandaigua academy, and at Jefferson college, Cannonsburg, Pa.; spent one year in printing office in Boston. Parents moved to New York city in the summer of 1837, where he read law until 1841 in the office of his father, who was one of the most distinguished attorneys in the State, and for eight years a member of Congress. In 1841, removed to Ripley, Chautauqua county, N. Y., where he was exclusively engaged in farming until 1846; in the latter year entered upon the practice of law at Jamestown. In 1847, was married to Miss Sarah Wilson Dinsmore, of Ripley, and returned to the farm. A year or so later formed a connection with Hon. Geo. W. Parker, now of the city of New York, and resumed the legal profession at Westfield, N. Y.; in the fall of 1852, was elected special county judge, and in 1855 county judge of Chautauqua county, serving in the latter position until January 1, 1860; moved to Erie in June, 1860; became a member of the firm of Spencer & Marvin, and practiced law until 1877. Was the Democratic candidate for Assembly in 1862; Democratic nominee for Congress in 1870, coming within 500 votes of an election; Democratic candidate for elector at large in 1872; mayor of Erie city in 1877; the same year elected city recorder for five years; was re-elected in 1882. The marriage of Judge Marvin and his wife has been blessed with five children, three of whom survive, viz.: Charles Dinsmore Marvin, engaged in the banking business in the city of New York; Anna Humphreys, wife of William D. Lewis, and Elizabeth Selden Marvin, wife of Robert W. Neff, of Boston, Mass. Judge Selden Marvin died in Erie, December 25, 1894.

William Elisha Marvin was born in Chautauqua county, New York, March 21, 1814. He is a son of the late Col. Elisha and Minerva (Prendergast) Marvin, the former a native of Lyme, Conn., and of English descent, the latter of New York birth and Irish parentage. Col. Marvin settled in Erie county in 1796, and was engaged in business as a surveyor and farmer until his decease, in 1829. He was a valuable citizen and took a prominent part in local affairs generally, holding numerous official trusts in the county. His title was conferred through his command of a regiment of militia. His wife survived until 1858. William Elisha Marvin received a common school education, learned surveying and followed that business and farming jointly for twenty-five or thirty years, since which time he has been exclusively engaged as an agriculturist. Politically he was an old line Whig, latterly a Republican. He was for twenty-one years a justice of the peace in Greenfield township, has held all the township offices, filling those positions with ability, and to the entire satisfaction of the community. He served acceptably as county commissioner, and was a candidate for the State Legislature. He has been one of the board of directors of the First National Bank of Erie since 1880. He was married November 2, 1848, to Catharine F., daughter of the late William Spencer, of Had-Lynne, Conn. She died in September, 1892. Mr. Marvin has been a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church since May 1, 1863, and has been an elder of the congregation at North East since November 8, 1868. He was for many years a member of the board of trustees, and has always been a liberal contributor to the support of the congregation. He was one of the original stockholders and a member of the board of directors of the First National Bank of North East.

John H. Bliss, president of the Erie City Iron Works, Erie, Pa., was born in Fort Howard, Wis., October 4, 1825, and is a son of John and Letitia (Elliott) Bliss, both of English ancestry. The Bliss family settled in New England about 1630, and the Elliott family in Maryland about 1730. Major Andrew Elliott, who was a grandfather of Mr. Bliss, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, January 24, 1754, and devoted the greater part of his life to the service of his country. Though a member of the Society of Friends, he commanded a battalion of Maryland militia in the Revolutionary war. In 1784 he was employed by the State of Virginia in fixing the boundary between that State and Pennsylvania. In 1786 he was commissioned by the supreme executive council of Pennsylvania to run the northern boundary of the State. Two years later he was directed to make a survey of the islands of the Allegheny and Ohio rivers within the State of Pennsylvania. This occupied about a year, after which he was commissioned by the United States government to locate the western boundary of the State of New York and ascertain the validity of the claim of that State to the territory which is now the northern portion of Erie county. After much labor and hardship he succeeded in locating the present boundary. In this important and responsible duty his services seem to have been highly appreciated, for about the time of its completion he writes: "General Washington has treated me with attention. The Speaker of the House and the Governor of the State have constantly extended to me the most flattering courtesies." The next important service which he rendered to his country was that of surveying District of Columbia and the city of Washington, which he began in 1790. In 1796 the government was again in need of one in whom it could place explicit confidence, and Washington, seemingly ever conscious of Major Ellicott's sterling qualities, appointed him commissioner to fix the boundary between the United States and the Spanish American possessions. During the very first month of Jefferson's administration the "Father of Democracy" tendered to Major Ellicott the Surveyor Generalship of the United States, which he accepted, subject to conditions of his own dictation. On September 1, 1813, he was appointed professor of mathematics in the West Point Military Academy, to which place he soon afterward removed with his family, and where he died August 28, 1820, leaving a widow and nine children. The intelligence and active ability of Major Ellicott were of inestimable value in the settlement and development of this new country, and one important duty followed another for a period of over forty years, in which he was constantly employed in some public capacity of responsibility and trust, and he was never found wanting. Chief among his characteristics, touching upon his public life, were his true sense of duty, well defined conception of personal responsibilities, and his general upright character. It was these, rather than shrewd political diplomacy, which won for him the exalted honors which were conferred upon him. The name of Major Ellicott will go down in American history an honor to his country, to his family and to his posterity. Mr. Bliss' grandfather, Joseph Bliss, was a captain of artillery in the regular Continental army of the United Colonies during their struggle for independence. His father entered the regular army of the United State in the war of 1812 as lieutenant, reached the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and was wounded at Lundy's Lane; he died December 22, 1854. Of the children, Mr. John H. Bliss was the one who reached majority. He was educated in the Cincinnati College, studied civil engineering and was for two years employed in the survey of the Erie extension of the Pennsylvania Canal. He then entered upon the study of law at Little Falls, N. Y., later continued his studies in Buffalo, attended a course of lectures at Harvard University, and was admitted to the bar at Albany, January 15, 1847. He afterwards returned to Buffalo, but gave up the practice of law. In 1855 he came to Erie, where he soon formed a partnership with Mr. George Selden, in the establishment of a bending works, which they operated three years. They then engaged in the manufacture of oil barrels, at that time in great demand, which they continued until 1864, when, in company with Mr. W. J. F. Liddell, under the firm name of Liddell, Selden & Bliss, they purchased the Erie City Iron Works. This institution, upon whose fame at whose products it may be truly said that the sun never sets, was founded in 1840 by (B. B. and J. H.) Vincent, (David and William) Himrod & Co. In 1860, the proprietors became (W. J. F.) Liddell & (Joseph) McCarter, who sold to the present company in 1864. The original plant was located at the corner of State and Twelfth streets, and there continued until 1880, when the rapid increase of business made the demand for greater facilities imperative, and a lot 200x600 feet, located on the east side of East avenue, adjoining the L. S. & M. S. R. R. was purchased. Later a lot 330x618 feet, bounded on the north by the L. S. & M. S. R. R., and on the west by the P. & E. R. R., was added to the space necessary to contain this gigantic institution. This vast area is entirely occupied by the various buildings of the concern and the yards and tracks necessary for the successful operation of the same. The boiler shop is 100 x 600 feet, the foundry 104 x 286 feet, the machine shop 80 x 160 feet, the flanging shop 40 x 180 feet, the engine room 30 x 50 feet, the office room 40 x 50 feet, and a pattern and general storeroom each 60 x 150 feet. There are besides those mentioned, almost innumerable minor shops, and the flanging shop, are substantial stone, brick and iron structures, and are supplied throughout with the latest and most improved machinery. The company was incorporated January 1, 1894, with John H. Bliss, president; George D. Selden, vice president; E. P. Selden, treasurer, and George T. Bliss, secretary. The capital stock is $1,000,000. From 1889 to 1892 inclusive, the output was over a million dollars a year, some years reaching nearly a million and a half, which is undoubtedly the largest of any similar institution in the world. The products of the concern include all kinds of stationary and portable horizontal and upright boilers and engines, for the sale of which depots have been established in all the great business centers of the United States, also in Paris, Glasgow and Mexico. It is not the purpose of this sketch to advertise this world-renowned institution and its products, but to give to coming generations some conception of it, in order to properly identify the gentleman who has made its establishment and development the greater part of his life work, and who has been to a great extent responsible for its wonderful success, he having had charge of the office and works, while Mr. George Selden conducted the sales department, and brought the institution into the recognition of the markets of the world. Mr. Bliss was first married in 1848 to Miss Mary Lovering. His second wife was Miss Ellen Christie, daughter of Dr. Christie, surgeon in the United States navy, to whom he was married October 1, 1850. The issue of this marriage was four children: Anna (wife of the Rev. S. D. McConnell of the Episcopal Church of Philadelphia), Horace John (who died in childhood), Louise (widow of the late Wallace DeWitt, Esq.) and Mr. George T. Bliss. Mr. Bliss and family attend the Protestant Episcopal Church. He belongs to that class of truly benevolent people who are daily doing something to relieve the poor and unfortunate, but who do not allow the name of the donor to be known, even to those who are recipients of their beneficence. Indeed, it is doubtful whether Erie has a greater or more conscientious worker in the field of charity than Mr. Bliss. In his political views he is a life-long Democrat, but with a sense of justice stronger than party allegiance, with the best interests of the community always at heart, and with a conviction that the welfare of the nation should be paramount to the success of any party; he is never in sympathy with the trickery of unscrupulous politicians whose ambition is that of personal emulation rather than the prosperity of the country. He is a member of the Sons of the Revolution, to which he is justly entitled by both his paternal and his maternal ancestors.

George Truscott Bliss, secretary and assistant superintendent of the Erie City Iron Works, Erie City, Pa., was born in Erie, May 21, 1864, and is a son of Mr. John H. Bliss (whose sketch appears in this work). He received his early education in the private schools of Erie, and during a year and a half, in 1875-6, while his parents lived in Charlotte, N. C., he attended the Carolina Military Institute of that city. After returning to Erie he attended the academy, and later a private school for about three years. In 1879 he entered De Vaux College, there he remained one year, after which he attended Harcourt Academy, a boys' boarding school in Gambier, Ohio, for about two years. He next entered the Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y. In 1883 he entered the machine shop of the Erie City Iron Works to learn the trade of machinist. For three years he worked ten hours a day, and in almost every position about the shop, all the time studying steam engine construction, and making himself familiar with the practical part of the work. He became assistant superintendent in May, 1886, and upon the incorporation of the company, January 1, 1894, was elected secretary. Mr. Bliss takes great interest in boating, and is a skillful yachtsman. It was largely due to his efforts that the regatta on the bay, Saturday, September 8, 1894, was a success. He was the moving spirit in the organization of the Erie Yacht Club in September, 1894, of which he was made the first president; he was made Commodore of the club November 14, 1894. Mr. Bliss was married January 16, 1894, to Miss Grace, daughter of Mr. I. A. Forman, of Erie, by whom he has one child, Miriam. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; he is a member of the Y. M. C. A., a charter member of the Kalkwa Club. Politically Mr. Bliss has no party, and thinks the time has arrived foreshadowed in "Washington's Farewell Address," when party lines are a menace to the country.

The Gunnisons of Erie county trace their genealogy to Hugh Gunnison, who came from Sweden some time before 1631, and finally settled in Boston, Mass. He was born about 1610, and died at Kittery, Maine, September 21, 1658. Among his descendants was William Gunnison, who was the immediate progenitor of the Erie county Gunnisons. He was twice married, and was the father of twenty-two children. Ebenezer Dearing Gunnison was the eighth child of William by his first wife, Hannah Grant, and was born in Kittery, Maine, March 27, 1790. His education was mainly obtained at the Salisbury (N. H.) Academy, where he was a fellow-pupil with Daniel Webster, Levi Woodbury and John A. Dix. He was trained for a surveyor, but taught school in New Hampshire several years. On the 14th of February, 1815, he married Miss Sophia Baker, and in October of the same year, accompanied by his wife and brother, Benjamin, he came to Erie. He was employed as a school teacher for ten years, a year and a half of the time as principal of the Erie academy. In 1825 he was elected justice of the peace, and held that position until 1840; in the meantime he also did business as a merchant. The financial crisis of 1837 stripped him of most of his earnings. In 1839 he was appointed register and recorder by the Governor; in 1840 he was clerk to the engineer on the canal; in 1841-2 was bookkeeper for Walker, Williams & Co.; in 1842 he was chosen as confidential business agent for the Reed estate, a place he held during the balance of his long life. He was one of the original members of the First Baptist Church of Erie, and was always one of its leaders. Mr. Gunnison died March 17, 1873; his widow August 15th of the same year. Their children were as follows: Sophia Elizabeth, born July 3, 1816, married Dr. Charles T. Sage, July 20, 1845; Dr. Sage died November 18, 1874. They had four children, Eugene J., Mary Jane, Eben C. and S. Mimsie. Elvira Jane, born July 22, 1818, died February 13, 1885; Mary Baker, born October 28, 1820, married George J. Morton September 30, 1845; Mr. Morton died February 28, 1868; they had three children, Sylvia Cook, Blanche and George Julius. George W., born May 8, 1823, a prominent educator, died in Boston May 14, 1878 (he was twice married: first to Sarah L. Pattison, second to Harrietta B. Boynton, and was the father of six children). John B., born April 16, 1826, educated at Erie academy, learned the trade of tanner and currier at Hays's tannery in Erie, was in the book trade a number of years; in 1859, associated with his brother, Charles E., built and has since operated the Gunnison tannery in Erie; has served on the school board and city councils and held various other public trusts; married Eleanor Spafford February 5, 1851 (they have had four children, Charles, Alfred, Anna and Rolla; Charles married May Evelyn Gunnison March 12, 1878; Alfred married Josephine Springer July 12, 1877; Anna is the wife of Chas. L. Thayer and resides in Minnesota), Charles E., born August 9, 1829, educated at Erie academy; in his early years was engaged in a general store; clerk in 1851 in the banking house of J. H. Williams (afterwards Williams & Wright); cashier of the Southern Bank of Indiana in Terre Haute in 1853; partner in the banking house of C. B. Wright & Co. from 1854 to 1859; assistant cashier Marine National Bank of Erie from 1866 to 1884; married Jane T. Welsh September 1, 1852; they had three children, Emma, Harry and Carrie. Emma married Dr. D. H. Strickland October 16, 1878; have two sons, Clyde C. and Charles G.; Carrie married Frank T. Kimball, September 8, 1881. Annette Julia, born December 31, 1832; married Gen. David B. McCreary September 17, 1851; they had three children, Sophia Gertrude, Annette and Wirt. Sophia Gertrude married Henry Alden Clark July 18, 1878; Annette died October 16, 1854; Wirt was in 1884 a naval cadet at Annapolis, now of the firm of Thompson & Co., dealers in guns and sporting supplies. Benjamin Gunnison, brother to Ebenezer, was born in Kittery, Maine, May 24, 1796, and came to Erie at the same time. He first settled on one of the Love farms in Mill Creek township, but in two years removed to Greene township, where he continued on the same farm for thirty-five years; he then moved to Erie, but in six years went to Mill Creek; remaining there twelve years, he again returned to Erie, where he died August 18, 1879. He was married July 1, 1819, to Miss Clarinda, daughter of Jonas Parker; their children were three sons, as follows: Ora Parker, born April 27, 1822, married Elmira, daughter of Cyril Drown, of Greene township, April 30, 1848; they have had no children. Mr. Gunnison has been a farmer, assistant assessor of internal revenue, deputy collector and collector of internal revenue and clerk to the county commissioners. Jonas, second son of Benjamin, born December 25, 1824, married Charlotte A. Spafford May 9, 1847, died July 21, 1871; their children were Frank, Nerr, Clara, Mary and Marion; Nerr died November 20, 1851, and Mary February 24, 1863. Jonas Gunnison was educated at the Erie academy; studied law with John Galbraith, and was very successful in his practice; for a number of years was associated with Gen. D. B. McCreary; served in the Select Council of Erie; was a member of the Legislature in 1860; for many years was trustee of the Erie academy; frequently represented Erie county in Republican State conventions, and was on the Republican State committee. Frank, son of Jonas, was born in Erie February 2, 1848; married Lila, daughter of Hon. M. B. Lowry, September 5, 1872, by whom he had two children, M. B. and infant son; studied law with his father; admitted to practice in 1870; was associated for a time with Gen. McCreary; was a member of the Select Council of Erie and trustee of the Erie academy, and is now President Judge of the Sixth judicial district of Pennsylvania. Albert B., third son of Benjamin Gunnison, was born September 1, 1830, married Olive A. Low, May 19, 1853; their children have been May, Evelyn, Albert, Merrick Low, Ora C., Paul, Olive Albertine, Mary Edith and Jennie Clarinda; Albert died March 21, 1856, and Paul January 27, 1863; Mary Evelyn married Charles, son of J. B. Gunnison, March 12, 1878; have two children, Arthur and Carl. Merrick Low married Blanche Fairbairn in April, 1879; have one child, Florence. Ora C. married Mary Loyer in 1858. Mr. Gunnison started in life as a farmer, then commenced the manufacture of wooden pumps and pipes, in which he was engaged up to 1884; he was also engaged in lumber dealing with W. W. Love; he has been road commissioner, county commissioner, and prominent in public life generally.

Charles E. Gunnison, cashier of the Marine National Bank, Erie, Pa., was born August 9, 1829, at Erie. He is a son of the late E. D. Gunnison, whose history and genealogy are contained in this volume, under the caption, "The Gunnison Family." Charles E. Gunnison completed his education at the Erie academy, and, at the age of 14, found employment as clerk in the general store known as the "Canadian Store," located in the original Reed House Block, on North Park Row. From 1847 to the spring of 1851 he was engaged in a clerical capacity in the Reed store, owned by the late General Charles M. Reed. His banking career commenced April 1, 1851, when he accepted a position with J. H. Williams, banker, Erie. In 1853 he went to Terre Haute, Ind., to assume the cashiership of the Southern Bank of Indiana, where he remained for nearly a year, returning thence to Erie to become a member of the banking firm of C. B. Wright & Co., the members of which were Charles B. Wright, Frank P. Bailey and Charles E. Gunnison. This firm was dissolved in 1858. In 1859, Mr. Charles E. Gunnison associated with his brother, John B. Gunnison, established the tannery business which has ever since been, and is still, conducted under the name of C. E. Gunnison & Co., and is one of the most important and successful industries of Erie. Mr. Charles E. Gunnison re-entered the banking business in the spring of 1866 as assistant cashier of the Marine National Bank, of Erie, with which he has ever since been connected, and of which he became cashier in January, 1889. Aside from his active identification with the business interest of his native city as banker and manufacturer, Mr. Gunnison has contributed, in association with his brother, in a very material way to its growth by the erection of the several large structures connected with the tannery plant on West Eighteenth street, and nineteen dwelling houses, all of which they still own. Mr. Charles E. Gunnison has been a member of the Erie Board of Trade for many years, and acted as vice-president of that body for one year. He was married September 1, 1852, to Jane T. Welsh, a native of the Isle of Man. Their children are: Emma, wife of Dr. David H. Strickland, of Erie; Harry, assistant cashier of the Marine National Bank, who married Lucy, daughter of the late R. S. Morrison, of Erie, and Carrie, widow of the late Frank T. Kimball, former chief clerk of Superintendent J. M. Kimball, of the Erie and Pittsburg R. R. Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Gunnison reside at 151 West Seventh street, and are members of the Park Presbyterian Church.

Albert Benjamin Gunnison (deceased), one of Erie's well-known and successful manufacturers, was born in Beaver Dam (now Greene township), Erie county, Pa., September 1, 1830, a son of Benjamin and Clarinda (Parker) Gunnison. She was a daughter of Jonas Parker of Mill Creek township. Benjamin Gunnison was born in Kittery, Me., May 24, 1796, and came to Erie county in 1815, locating in Mill Creek township on a farm, where he lived two years; he then purchased a property in Greene township, where he followed farming for thirty-five years, when he moved to Erie, still operating his farm in Greene township six years longer; he then sold it to his sons and purchased a fine property in East Mill Creek, where he resided and continued farming for twelve years, then selling his land and moving to Erie, where he died August 18, 1878. He was a son of William and Hannah (Grant) Gunnison, to whom were born fourteen children, of whom Benjamin was tenth in order of birth. William Gunnison was twice married, and took for his second wife Polly Tandy, and to them were born eight children. He was a farmer by occupation, was born at Kittery, Me., March 1, 1753, and died at Fishersfield, Me., March 9, 1831. He was a son of Joseph and Mary (Crocker) Gunnison, to whom were born eleven children, William being seventh in order of birth. Joseph Gunnison was a shipwright by trade, was born in Kittery, Me., October 3, 1713, where he died December 5, 1799. He was a son of Elihu and Mary (Rollins) Gunnison, to whom were born six children, of whom Joseph was fourth. Elihu was twice married, his second wife being Mrs. Marjorie Whittemore, by whom he had no children. He was a shipwright by trade, was born in Kittery, Me., about 1675, and died at said place about 1754. He was a son of Elihu and Martha (Tricke) Gunnison, to whom were born four children, Elihu being the eldest. Elihu, sr., was twice married, and by his second wife had two children. Elihu, sr., was born in Boston, Mass., February 12, 1650, was a shipwright by trade, and died in Kittery, Me., the latter part of March, 1729. He was a son of Hugh Gunnison, who was born in Sweden about 1610, and came to America about 1630. He was twice married, his first wife bore him four children. His second wife was Mrs. Sarah Lynn, who bore him two children, of whom Elihu, sr., was the youngest. Hugh departed this life about 1658 at Kittery, Me. Albert Benjamin Gunnison received his education in the log school-house of his native township, and when 17 years of age shipped as cabin boy on a large passenger steamer on Lake Erie; he was soon promoted to wheelman, and was so employed for about four years. He then came back home and took the contract to build a section of the Erie and Wattsburg plank road, after completing which he followed farming for two years on the homestead farm. He then purchased a mill property in Mill Creek township, comprised of sawmill and woolen mill, and a year later sold the sawmill and rebuilt the woolen mill into a pump factory, where he resided and conducted business till 1872. He then moved to Erie, continuing the pump works for several years, finally building a plant at 233 East Twenty-second street, and moving the machinery to Erie, where he continued the business for several years, and later added a complete set of planing mill machinery, and was about to branch out in building and contract work at the time of his death, which occurred February 5, 1886. Mr. Gunnison was a man of sterling integrity, a high sense of honor, supreme loyalty to his friends, generous kindness to the needy, and marked devotion to his family. Few men possessed a riper and sounder judgment in private and public business. During his residence in Mill Creek township he was long entrusted with the township's most important official duties. After coming to Erie he served as a member of the Select Council. He was trustee of the Erie academy for a number of years, and was county commissioner for six years. In all these he exhibited the same care and prudence and constant watchfulness for the people's interest that characterized him in the management of his own affairs. Unassuming in his manner, and faithful to every trust, he had the confidence and respect of all who knew him. Mr. Gunnison was married May 19, 1853, to Miss Olive M., daughter of Samuel and Olive Low. She was born in Lowville, Venango township, Erie county, October 27, 1831. The union was blessed with eight children: May E., wife of Charles Gunnison, of Erie; Albert (deceased), Merrick L. (see sketch), Ora C. (see sketch), Paul (deceased), Olive A., at home; Mary E., wife of Park Densmore, of Erie, and Jessie C., at home. The family are members of the Universalist Church, of which Mr. Gunnison was a trustee and liberal supporter. He left a fine estate, acquired by careful management and energetic business habits. The family residence is at 259 East Twenty-second street.

Merrick Low Gunnison, senior member of the firm of Gunnison Bros., planing mill, contractors and builders, and dealers in lumber, 233 East Twenty-second street, Erie, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township, January 14, 1857, and is a son of Albert B. and Olive M. (Low) Gunnison. Merrick received his early education in the public schools of his native township, and when 14 years of age his parents moved to Erie and he completed his education at the Erie Academy. He then entered the office of Judge Gunnison for the study of law, remaining two years, when he entered with his father in the present business, continuing till February, 1885, when the father died and the business went into the hands of Merrick and O. C., his sons, under the firm name of Gunnison Bros., since which it has been enlarged and successfully conducted. Mr. Gunnison married, April 29, 1879, Miss Blanche, daughter of John Fairbairn, of Erie, and to them has been born one child, Florence Edith, born March 25, 1883. Mrs. Gunnison is a member of the Park Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Perry Lodge, No. 392, F. & A. M., and in politics he is a Republican. The family reside at No. 125 West Twentieth street.

Ora C. Gunnison, of Gunnison Bros., manufacturers and dealers in lumber, was born in Mill Creek township, Erie county, August 26, 1860, and is a son of Albert B. (whose sketch appears in this work). Mr. Ora C. Gunnison was educated in the public schools of Erie, and then engaged in business with his father, who continued to manufacture pumps until 1883, and then changed to the planing-mill and lumber business, which he has since continued. Mr. Gunnison was married September 20, 1888, to Miss May Loyer, daughter of Mr. George Loyer, of Erie. They have one child, Olive. Mr. and Mrs. Gunnison are members of the Universalist Church; he is a Mason and a member of the A. O. U. W. Politically he is a Republican, and was elected a member of the school board in 1894.

William Saltsman (deceased), was born in Pennsylvania in 1777, came to Erie county in 1796 with Squire Rees, and assisted in surveying the county. His father, Anthony Saltsman, was killed by the Indians on the Susquehanna. He, with other men, was on the ice on the river when they discovered they were pursued by the Indians. The others wore moccasins, and thereby escaped, but Mr. Saltsman had on a new pair of boots which prevented him from getting away, and so he met his death. William was married in 1800 to Jane Stephenson. They had ten children, only one living, Jane, the youngest daughter, a widow. She married Andrew Scott, whose sketch appears in this volume. Mr. Saltsman received his education in the subscription schools of Centre county. He permanently settled in Erie county in 1800, near Wesleyville, where he built a sawmill and afterwards a gristmill, which is still standing. Of the deceased children were Mrs. John Brawley, Mrs. Samuel Brown (mother of William S. Brown), Mrs. Alexander McClelland, Anthony, William, Jesse, George, Mrs. Horace L. Pinney. Mr. Saltsman was successful in his pursuits. In his politics a Democrat. He died in Mill Creek township in 1829.

John R. Saltsman, son of Anthony, was prominent in business circles, and connected with the W. L. Scott & Co. business. He died December 11, 1894, leaving two sons. The elder, Harry, died February 28, 1895.

R. J. Saltsman was born in Erie county, April 24, 1842, son of Jesse Saltsman (deceased), who was born in Erie county, January 6, 1814, son of William Saltsman. Jesse was a farmer and miller for many years in Erie county, where he died in 1876, on his farm. His wife, whose maiden name was Polly A. Shaddock, is still living. They had two children, R. J. and Rose J. R. J. was educated in the Erie Academy, and also in Allegheny College. He was connected with the Lake Shore R. R. from 1862 to 1865. He then engaged in the coal trade, which he has since continued with success. He was married in Erie city, April 25, 1865, to Anna A., daughter of Thomas M. Austin, whose great-grandfather, also his father, were officers in the Revolutionary war.

Andrew Scott (deceased) was born in Harbor Creek, Erie county, Pa., May 27, 1811, and became a permanent resident of Erie when 14 years of age. As a business man he prospered, and as a citizen he was always public-spirited, aiding with liberal hand and hearty effort all projects calculated to enhance public welfare. His private benevolence was as unostentatious as widespread; the poor and suffering appealed to no one oftener, and never in vain; his genial nature and original humor were proverbial. Mr. Scott was high sheriff of Erie county from 1838 to 1841, and postmaster from 1841 to 1845; afterward, and until his death, he was actively engaged in commercial business at the harbor. He died, September 25, 1868, leaving his widow, Jane (a daughter of William Saltsman), two sons, Walter and John R., and three daughters, Isabel (widow of Mr. Reitzel, who has two sons, Walter and Charles, F.), Mary and Hattie. His remains lie in the Erie cemetery. His funeral was one of the largest and most impressive ever witnessed in Erie, and at his grave the whole community were sincere mourners. In politics Mr. Scott was an old-time Whig until the formation of the Republican party, when he united with it. His father, Robert Scott, born in Ireland, came to this country when 21 years of age, locating in Lancaster, Pa. He was one of the pioneer farmers of Erie county, having settled in Harbor Creek township in 1801. He was married to Miss Isabella Allen, of Lancaster. They had seven children: James, John, Martha, Elizabeth, Andrew, Thomas and Harriet. Robert Scott departed this life May 6, 1841, his wife surviving till December 20, 1845.

Walter Scott, former secretary and treasurer of the Erie Gas Company, mayor of the city of Erie, and a member of the firm of Walter Scott & Co., insurance agents, office No. 26 North Park Row, Erie, Pa., born in Erie, July 21, 1846, is a son of Andrew and Jane (Saltsman) Scott, natives of Erie county. He attended the graded schools and academy in Erie. He first engaged in the coal business with his father, in which business he remained until 1864, and then embarked in the wholesale grocery trade. This he carried on four years. After his father's death he took charge of the deceased's business, until 1873, when he abandoned it, and entered the insurance business with Mr. Arbuckle, under the firm name of Scott & Arbuckle, and on the death of his partner Mr. Scott continued the business, taking as a partner Mr. Frank V. Kepler. The style of the new firm is Walter Scott & Co. This agency is the oldest and one of the largest in Northwestern Pennsylvania. It represents fifteen very strong companies, some of them the strongest in the world, embracing fire, marine and accident. Mr. Scott was elected cashier of the Erie Gas Works in 1879, and secretary and treasurer in 1883. He was united in marriage in 1880 to Alice, daughter of Dr. E. P. Hall, an old and respected citizen of Erie, and a druggist of long standing. This union was blessed with two children, Winfield Hall and Carl Andrew. Mr. Scott has always taken a deep interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the city of Erie. Twice he served as chairman of the Select Council, and was also chairman of the Common Council, of which bodies he was a member for seven years. In February, 1893, he was elected mayor of the city of Erie by a Republican majority of 266, and when it is stated that his predecessor was elected by a Democratic majority of 1,400, his standing in public estimation may be better understood. His incumbency has been a marked period of progress in municipal government, and improvement in executive and administrative conduct. During his term as mayor the city's interest account was reduced from $80,000 to $40,000 annually, and marked improvement was effected in the fire and police departments. Mr. Scott is one of the trustees of the Erie academy, and in many ways has made his influence felt in matters pertaining to the general advancement of the city. He stands high in fraternal circles. He is a member of the Elks. In the Masonic order he belongs to Perry lodge, Temple Chapter, Mt. Olivet Commandery, Jerusalem Council and Zem Zem Shrine. A noteworthy incident of Mr. Scott's public life is, that while he was a member of the Select Council the first steps were taken toward the erection of the present fine city hall, and he labored hard for the inauguration of the project—was in fact one of the most active spirits in the work. And as mayor he finally presided at its dedication, several years after the inauguration of the work, in which, as a member of the council committee, he took so prominent a part.

The Selden Family. There are in all communities families whose peculiar characteristics, modes of thought and habits of life, become so identified with their name, as to be always looked for and relied upon, as forming their purposes, moulding their aspirations and determining their actions. Sometimes, through successive generations, these characteristics or idiosyncrasies become fixed and clear; standing out with the brightness of the north star as it guides the tempest-tossed mariner; or, like the course of the pelucid mountain stream, can be traced through successive lives. It is thus, that the biography of such a family becomes interesting, for it instructs and delights the young, refreshes and brightens the memory of the old, and causes the record of the lives of the dead to be doubly precious to the living. The life of Judah Colt, almost the first settler of Erie county, is elsewhere told. That of his nephew, George Selden, and his family, form a fitting continuation of the life of one whose influence for good upon the community has been so lasting.

George Selden, son of Samuel and Deborah (Ely), was born in Hadlyme, New London county, Conn., September 28, 1790. He belonged to that branch of the Selden family which came from England to Hadlyme about 1650, where some of the descendants still reside. His grandfather, Samuel Selden, organized the first company and was elected colonel of the first regiment equipped by his native county for General Washington's Continental army. He was wounded in the service, and died while a prisoner in New York, shortly before the evacuation of that city. George Selden, when about 15 years of age, entered the employ of his uncles, Charles and Joseph D. Selden, merchants in Troy, N. Y. About 1819 he came to Erie, where his uncle, Judah Colt, was successfully located, bringing his family of a wife and two sons. He commenced a general merchandise business on French street, near sixth, which was continued by himself or sons, on that street until his death, May 22, 1857. He was married October 14, 1813, to Miss Elizabeth Grace Card, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Card, of Troy, N. Y. Mrs. Selden died in Erie, September 26, 1827. Their children were Charles Townsend, Joseph, Samuel, Martha, Elizabeth (who married Mr. Samuel M. Fellows, of Troy, N. Y., both deceased); John C. and George. He was remarried June 12, 1839, to Miss Emily Marvin, who died in May, 1856. One of Mr. Selden's chief characteristics was his activity in church work and benevolent enterprises, to which he gave hearty and substantial support. He early united with the First Presbyterian Church of Erie, of which his uncle, Judah Colt, was an elder and main supporter. After the death of Mr. Colt, in 1832, Mr. Selden was, on December 29, 1832, elected an elder and so continued until his death in May, 1857. As described by one who knew him well, "George Selden was tall, slender, dignified, and always commanded the respect of the community. He was mild and reticent in his manners, and while an active business man, had always time to attend to the business of the Church, and was found in his place at the prayer meetings and other public services. Mr. Selden impressed one as being a very good man, with a wealth of sterling qualities covered up beneath his modesty and retiring disposition. He was a valuable counselor. His judgment could always be relied on, not only in the interest of the Church, but in that of his friends." Another describes him: "A man of like spirit to that of his relative, Judah Colt, active in every good word and work. A pioneer in establishing Sunday-school work in this city, although the first impulse came from the Christian heart of Mrs. E. M. Colt, long the superintendent of our Sunday-school, the leader likewise for some time of our church choir. His memory is fragrant in the church of his choice. None name him but to praise him." His children: Charles Townsend, son of George and Elizabeth Selden, was born August 16, 1815, and died April, 1825; Joseph Selden, the second son, was born in Troy, N. Y., August 16, 1817. In 1840, he engaged in business with his father until his death in Erie, January 18, 1852. He was married April 27, 1841, to Miss Joanna Lanman, daughter of Hon. Thomas H. Sill. They had four children, three of whom are living: George Dudley, vice president of the Erie City Iron Works, and for several years the president of the Young Men's Christian Association; Joanna and Emma Josephine; Elizabeth Grace, a young lady of charming manners and rare excellence, who died March 2, 1864. Samuel Selden, who at the time of his death was managing partner of the Selden & Griswold Manufacturing Company, was born in Erie, Pa., July 9, 1821. When a young man he lived for several years on the Island of Cuba, where he had charge of a plantation for Dudley Selden, of New York, after which he returned to Erie and engaged in the manufacture of paper, and afterwards in fruit culture at Mayside, Erie county. In 1868 he removed to Erie, and having perfected some valuable inventions, he united his interests with his brothers and Mr. Matthew Griswold, and established the manufacturing business, which he followed until his death, June 25, 1882. The company still exists, under the name of the "Griswold Manufacturing Company." Mr. Selden was married in Erie, August 12, 1851, to Miss Caroline M., daughter of Dr. C. F. Perkins, of Erie. They have five children: Mary L.; Caroline E., now Mrs. F. B. Brewer; Edward P., treasurer of the Erie City Iron Works; Dr. Charles C., who married Gertrude Twing; and Samuel F., of the Selden Brick Co., who married Miss Sarah Carroll. Mr. Selden was from January, 1866, until his death, an elder and prominent member and supporter of the First Presbyterian Church. Of his children, Edward P., has for some years been an elder of the First Presbyterian Church, of which since 1873 he has been a member. He fills a place as elder, before occupied by his grandfather and father, each of whom served long and faithfully.

S Short

Dr. Charles C. has been for some years fitting for the mission work in China. In this he will be joined by his wife, Gertrude, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. E. P. Twing, who have been in the mission in China, as has their daughter, whose education and acquirements have qualified her for the same field of life in which she commenced before her marriage.

Samuel F. was for several years superintendent of the church Sabbath school, and is now connected with the mission school in the same capacity.

Martha Elizabeth, the only daughter of George and Elizabeth Selden, was born in 1823. She was of uncommon beauty, of charming manners and queenly grace. She was married in September, 1841, to Samuel M. Fellowes, of Troy, N. Y., whither she removed. They had one son, James, who died in infancy. Mrs. Fellowes became the victim of a pulmonary complaint, and she passed away in all her youth and loveliness at the home of her father in Erie at the age of 21 years. As memory reverts to her so young and beautiful, an only daughter in a loving household, a bride, a mother and again childless, and stricken with death in but little more than three years, it seems almost like a dream, yet as recalled, a most charming vision.

John Card Selden, who for nearly twenty years was one of the leading merchants of his native city, was born in Erie November 28, 1825. In November, 1844, he went to Troy, N. Y., where he engaged as clerk in a store and remained until 1850, when he joined his brother George, in California. He returned to Erie in 1853 and became associated with his father in business. He afterward purchased his father's interest and changed the line of business to that of hardware and manufacturing supplies, which he continued until 1872, when he retired. In 1868 he assisted in the establishment of what is now the Griswold Manufacturing Company, and until his withdrawal from active business was associated with his brother George in the Erie City Iron Works. He was a water commissioner of Erie city a number of years. He was always more or less identified and deeply interested in the welfare of Erie's manufacturing industries. He labored for the moral and religious advancement of the community where he was born. His contributions to this end were continuous and liberal. His home abounded in hospitality, and his manners were gentle and prepossessing. His adherence to the right was a tenacity worthy of his Puritan ancestry. For years he was connected with the Bible Society. He was married February 28, 1855, to Miss Lydia M., daughter of Mr. Matthew Griswold, of Lyme, Conn. (sister of Hon. Matthew Griswold). They had two children, Marton (deceased), and Grace Card, wife of Mr. Fred L. Chapin, of the United States navy. Mr. Selden was long a prominent member and liberal supporter of the First Presbyterian Church of Erie, with which he united in 1842. He died May 12, 1888, with the deep respect of the community and the devoted attachment of a large circle of friends. He seemed destitute of faults and died without an enemy. George Selden (at the time of his death president of the Erie City Iron Works) was the youngest son of George and Elizabeth Card Selden. His education was obtained at the Erie Academy, but was completed by private study, reading and especially by his extensive travels. At the early age of 17 he manifested a desire to see the world, and going to New York he shipped on board a merchant vessel (Captain Griswold commanding), bound for the East Indies and China. After four years of seafaring he returned to Erie, where he remained a short time. Recognizing the wide possibilities of the California gold fields, he went thither in 1849, and for four years participated in the well-remembered excitement at that time. He was fairly successful. Returning to his native city he soon became associated with Col. John H. Bliss in the manufacture of petroleum barrels and in other lines of business. In 1866 they purchased the Erie City Iron Works, in which business he was engaged during the remainder of his life. He made and patented many improvements in steam engines, boilers and sawmill machinery; and the world celebrity and markets of the works are largely due to his efforts and ability as an inventor and a business man of tremendous energy and sterling integrity. As Mr. John H. Bliss, his worthy colleague in the upbuilding of this vast institution, remarked of him in conversation: "Mr. Selden was a very uncommon man. He was the greatest man I was ever thrown in contact with. He would have been sure to make a success of any line of business which he might choose to follow. He would have made a most excellent lawyer; had he followed seafaring he would certainly have risen to the command of the best ocean steamers; he would have made a great soldier; he feared nothing; he would have made a splendid governor of a State, etc." Mr. Selden died November 19, 1893. He was married March 4, 1857, to Miss Anna M. (deceased), daughter of Mr. Charles Lawton, of Pottsville, Pa. She died in Erie in March, 1871. Mr. Selden was for thirty-five years a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and was one of its most earnest workers and generous supporters. It will fitly close this sketch of a noted family to give an extract from the discourse of his pastor, Rev. H. C. Ross, at the funeral of George Selden, whose sudden death saddened the community in which he was so generally loved and had been so great a benefactor. "How appropriate the language of scripture, 'Know ye not that there is a prince and a great men fallen this day in Israel?' Yet when one is ready to depart, sudden 'death' means sudden 'glory.' Who could wish wasting consumption, the long fevers, the slow and sure but successive strokes of paralysis? It is a peculiar fact that it was on Sunday that his father and three of his brothers passed 'through the gates into the city,' and it is worthy of more note that they stand an unbroken family before the throne. George Selden was a native of Erie, born on East Sixth street on the 26th of September, 1827, the youngest and the last of the family to survive. At 17 he launched forth on a three years' trip to the Chinese seas. Attracted by the gold fields of California he went out to seek his fortune, and remained for some years, not without a considerable success. His love of travel thus early evinced never waned; he was at home anywhere, as I suppose true travelers should be, and had the delight of seeing the world's great countries and famous cities. His late home tells the story of foreign travel and exhibits works of art from the dreary East and lands of classic story. It was in Erie that he and Col. Bliss built up an extensive business under the name of the Erie City Iron Works. These works are among the largest, if not the very largest, of the kind in the world, and employing hundreds of men; and have carried the name of Erie far and wide. Their letters go through all the earth and their works to the end of the world. His generosity was lavish and graceful. He did not sound a trumpet before him; he did not wait, as so many do, to exercise a postmortem liberality, but he had the satisfaction of distributing with his own hand. The atmosphere was fragrant with his good deeds. The chapel in which we meet to-day speaks of his loving liberality. Many mourn his loss, but remember gratefully that to them his helping hand was as the hand of Christ. Such giving is not strained. It droppeth as the gentle rain from Heaven upon the place beneath; it is twice blessed; it blesseth him that gives and him that takes. How many good qualities clustered and crystalized in his life and what a dowry of blessing God gave to him. He had abounding health, almost unbroken through his sixty-six years, he had business sagacity, the wisdom that plans and the wisdom that executes, capacity to manage great affairs with eminent success. He was frequently consulted on commercial matters, and men were glad to get the results of his experience and thoughtful consideration. He had a quiet self-possession, a calm dignity, with an easy and graceful courtesy. His was a massive strength as of the granite hills, and a kindness sparking like a crystal rill, and as fragrant as the bloom of flowers. He was a representative man; and men of all classes and creeds admired and loved him for his sterling qualities of head and heart. Friends, you know he was a Christian. In Christ, and in Christ alone, can be found in harmonious symmetry at once the righteous man high in the practice of all social virtues, stern in his inflexible adhesion to the utter right and the good man who has won for himself a revenue of affection, at the mention of whose name men's spirit glow as if a sunbeam glided in. That was the secret of George Selden's life. He was true to Christ. For thirty-five years he was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and while she has been enriched by his princely gifts, she counts as greater riches the Christ-like character which was matured beneath her ample folds. Men boast of ancestry; surely it is something to be descended from men who for successive generations have been noted for their adherence to truth, and truth, to Christ. Such is the heritage of those who were nearest to him and mourn him most."

Judah Colt Spencer, president First National Bank, Erie, was born July 1, 1813, in Hadlyme, New London county, Conn., son of William and Deborah (Selden) Spencer; he married Lavinia Stanley Sanford. To this union were born William, married to Mary Richards Du Puy, of Philadelphia, have one daughter, Maude, and one son, Judah Colt; Lavinia D., wife of Bishop Spaulding, now residing in Colorado; Frances L., Catherine, wife of Rev. Robert S. Van Cleve, a Presbyterian minister now residing in Erie. Mr. Spencer is the nephew and namesake of Judah Colt, one of the pioneers of Erie, of whom mention is made in other portions of this volume. When fifteen years of age (1829), Mr. Spencer, then residing with his parents in Connecticut, received and accepted an invitation to join his uncle, and from this date begins his citizenship in Erie. He supplemented the schooling he had received in Connecticut by an attendance of one year at the Erie Academy when his uncle deemed him fit to enter upon his business career, so he was inducted into the office and field work devolving upon the agency of the Pennsylvania Population Company. Upon the death of Mr. Colt in 1832, the entire management of the affairs of the company devolved upon Mr. Spencer. Other pursuits engaged him for a while. In 1852 he began banking (from about this date, until its consolidation with the Buffalo and State Line R. R., he filled the office of secretary and treasurer of the Erie and North East R. R.). He was among the first to apply for privileges under the law authorizing national banks, and the First National Bank of Erie, over which he presided since its foundation until his death, was the twelfth bank incorporated under the new legislation. Mr. Spencer was an original stockholder in many of other Erie's reputable enterprises. For twenty consecutive years he had served as president of the Erie Cemetery Company, and for years he was treasurer of the Agricultural Association of the county. Mr. Spencer early took the stand of a Christian, and for more than two decades was a member of the board of trustees of the Park Presbyterian Church, and was one of the building committee of that edifice when in course of construction. His son inherits the leading characteristics of his father, and acceptably fills the position of president, so long occupied by his father, but vacated by his death in 1885. Mrs. Spencer died September 30, 1886.

Prescott Metcalf, deceased, was prominent among the self-made men of Erie, who took an active part in the development of the city. No one individual is more indelibly stamped upon the community. He was a son of the late Joseph Metcalf, who was born in Putney, Windham county, Vt., January 25, 1813, the evening of whose life was spent in Erie. Prescott Metcalf was one of a family of thirteen children, and at the age of 8 years he commenced to provide for himself, being employed by an uncle, with whom he remained for a number of years. During this period he attended for three months in the year, through three years, the common schools of the neighborhood. At the age of 22 he came to Erie and engaged with his brother-in-law, Ira W. Hart, as manager of a livery stable on Fifth street, where he remained five years. While thus employed he attracted the favorable notice of Rufus S. Reed, the leading business man and capitalist of Erie—whose intuitive judgment of the character and capacity of men was seldom at fault. Mr. Reed engaged him to take charge of a branch of his immense business. Soon afterward the position of steamboat agent at Erie became vacant, which, by the request of his employer, was added to Mr. Metcalf's other duties. Having for some years performed these double duties, he was then entrusted with the general management of their entire shipping and vessel interests at Erie. These trusts were discharged with fidelity, and to the satisfaction of his employer. This was so manifest, and his services so indispensable to his employer, that when another situation, with an increase of salary, was offered to Mr. Metcalf, Gen. Reed candidly admitted that it was out of the question to dispense with his services; that he might make his salary whatever he chose. He remained in Gen. Reed's employ from 1840 to 1862, which embraced the closing years of Rufus S. Reed's career and the most important part of the business life of Gen. C. M. Reed. In these years their steamers and sailing vessels coursed all the lakes from Buffalo to Chicago, and all the vessels were built, equipped, provisioned, cargoeed, furnished, kept afloat and made to pay under the personal supervision of Mr. Metcalf. Steamers of national repute, as the Pennsylvania, Jefferson, Madison, Erie, Buffalo, Missouri, Niagara, Ohio, Louisiana, Keystone State and Queen City, with the brigs Clarion, America, Susquehanna, St. Paul, St. Anthony, etc., were mostly built in those years. There were no railroads to Erie until January, 1852, and the canal from Erie to Beaver (left unfinished by the State) was taken up by a company of which Mr. Reed was president and Gen. Reed contractor. When completed the building, equipment and running of boats was added to their already gigantic shipping interests. In 1843 Gen. Reed was elected to Congress, and while in Washington, his father being in poor health, Mr. Metcalf was required to take entire charge of the business. Although Mr. Metcalf left Gen. Reed's employ in 1862 and went into the coal business for himself, for years he was frequently consulted on matters of importance. During and after his connection with the Reeds, he was identified with many leading enterprises, both in and out of the city. Of these we may name the running of a line of stages between Erie and Pittsburg from 1840 to 1843, the construction of the Northern Canada R. R., in which he was associated with Gen. Reed and Milton Courtright, the Erie Extension Canal, the Erie and North East R. R., of which he was director for many years. He was one of the originators and incorporators of the Erie Cemetery, in the purchase of the grounds for which, with others, he gave his personal guarantee. To him, as one of the principal projectors of the Erie Gas Works, in which he was a large stockholder (carrying the stock when it paid but one per cent on the investment) was the success of that very essential public improvement largely due. During the early years of the oil trade he was manager of its shipment for various railroads. He was one of the organizers of the Dime Savings Bank, trustee of the Erie Academy, director of the public schools, mayor of the city from 1862 to 1865, and an organizer, trustee and liberal contributor to the Park Presbyterian Church. Among other of his enterprises was the erection of the Burdett Organ factory, begun January 2, 1872, and completed and occupied in ninety days. It was operated successfully for a number of years, but was discontinued in 1890. In 1880, associated with Capt. Douglass Ottinger, Joseph P. Metcalf and John Clemens, he built the Malleable Iron Works. In company with Col. Benjamin Grant, he built the Wayne block, on French street, in 1860, and rebuilt it after its destruction by fire in 1868. In 1872 he built the block on the west side of State street, between Seventh and Eighth, and in 1866 his elegant residence, corner Sassafras and Ninth streets—his home until his death, which occurred October 16, 1891 (having survived his wife, who died August 30th of that year). It has since been rebuilt, and is now occupied by Mr. J. P. Metcalf. Mr. Metcalf was married June 9, 1846, to Miss Abigail R. Wilder, a schoolmate, from Putney, Vt. They had five children: Joseph P., William Wilder (who died in infancy), Frederick W. (who died September 2, 1890, at the age of 39 years), Nellie (who died in infancy), and George R. Mr. Joseph Metcalf made his home with his son, Prescott, for the last twenty years of his life, where he died in 1868, at the age of 94 years, being then reputed to be the oldest Mason in the United States. This venerable man, a type, in habit and deportment, of the old school, was a link connecting us with the past, for he remembered distinctly some of the events of Shay's insurrection in 1794. In politics Mr. Prescott Metcalf acted with the Whigs during that party's existence, and then with the Republican party. In his political associations he manifested all his characteristic force and energy. While never a candidate for other than municipal office, he exerted a marked influence, bringing to the support of his favorite candidate all his intensity of purpose and energy of action. The war, with its large levies of men for the army and navy, furnished full scope for the exercise of his versatile abilities. The large reinforcements sent forward from Erie during his occupancy of the mayor's office were largely due to his ceaseless efforts. He had three brothers who were in business in Erie—Samuel H. (who died about 1880), Charles (long in the mercantile and banking business in Erie, later in Toledo, O., and now residing in North East, Pa.), and James (who has been dead several years). He had also three sisters: Eliza (Mrs. Ira W. Hart, who died in 1839), Lucy (Mrs. Ira W. Hart, who died in 1842), and Mary (Mrs. Joseph D. Clark, who died in 1892). To all these Mr. Metcalf was the counselor and firm friend, and managed with success numerous trusts confided to his charge. Such was his career, such the record of his active and successful life. He always lent a helping hand to all those enterprises which in church or state merit assistance.

Joseph P. Metcalf, chairman of the Erie Malleable Iron Company, Limited, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie April 15, 1847, and is a son of Prescott Metcalf. He was educated in the public schools and academy of Erie, the Cleveland Institute of Cleveland, O., and the Eastman Commercial College. He followed railroading in various capacities in and about Erie until 1870, when he went to Nebraska City, Neb. There he formed a partnership in the banking business, which was soon reorganized into the Nebraska City National Bank, of which he was cashier. He remained there about two and a half years, when he returned to Erie and engaged in business with his father. When the Erie Malleable Iron Works was organized he became a member of the firm, and upon the death of Mr. John Clemens, became chairman of the company. The plant covers three and one-half acres, the main building being 585 x 80 feet, and has a capacity which gives employment to 350 men. The products of the concern include all kinds of cast malleable iron, the work being done to order. This is one of the largest, if not the largest, institutions of its kind in the world. Mr. Metcalf was married October 11, 1877, to Miss Celia W. Fletcher, of Lockport, N. Y. The issue of this marriage was five children, four of whom are living: Francis F., Mary Ruth and Celia Margaret. The family attend St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Metcalf is a member. He is a Knight Templar Mason, and a member of the Erie, Kahkwa and Cascade Clubs. Politically Mr. Metcalf affiliates with the Republican party and has served several terms as a member of the City Council.

George Ralph Metcalf, treasurer of the Erie Malleable Iron Company (Limited) and of the Erie Gas Works, was born in Erie, September 26, 1858, and is a son of Prescott Metcalf, whose sketch and portrait appears in this work. His early education was obtained in the Erie academy and high-school, after which he attended a boarding school in Clinton, N. Y., for two years. About a year after completing his education he went to Columbus, O., where he became interested in the coal mining business, which he conducted one year. He then returned to Erie, where he became a partner, and accepted a position as secretary of the Malleable Iron Works, where he remained eight years. At the end of that time, his father's health having failed, he severed his active identification with the Malleable Iron Works in order to take charge of his father's business, which he continued until after his father's death. He then resumed active association with the Malleable Iron Works in his present capacity. He succeeded his father as a director of the Erie Gas Company, of which he became treasurer in 1892. Mr. Metcalf was married September 3, 1885, to Miss Mary, daughter of Capt. J. S. Richards of Erie. This happy union has been blessed with two children, John Richards and George Ralph, jr. Mr. Metcalf is an active member of the various social clubs and societies of Erie, and is president of the Kahkwa Club. In politics he has always been a steadfast supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

Martin Strong, born in East Windsor, Conn., in the year 1770, having for that day received a good common school education, and full of energy, left his native place early in the spring of 1795 to seek and make a home for himself for life. His outfit was a compass and chain, being determined to be ready for a new country in any capacity. On foot he first directed his course to the Wyoming Valley, on the North Branch of the territory; but not being satisfied with the prospects of surveying or procuring land there, he resolved to foot it to Presque Isle, and got to the Indian village at the mouth of Buffalo creek (where the city of Buffalo now stands) in July, 1795. But one white man was then living there, and nothing inviting him to remain, he pushed on, and arrived at Presque Isle the last day of July, 1795. On his arrival there he found Thomas Rees, Esq., land agent, and Col. Seth Reed and family living in self-made habitations. Those two tents were the only evidences of settlement. A company of United States troops were cutting down the forest on Garrison Hill to build a stockade fort, under Capt. Russell Bissell. Gens. Ellicott and Irvine, with a corps of surveyors and engineers, were about to lay out the town of Erie, escorted and protected by a company of State militia commanded by Capt. John Grubb. The Rutledges having been shot but a few days before, by the Indians, as was alleged, it was deemed unsafe to be out much except when prepared for defense. Mr. Strong hired out at once to one of the residents at 50 cents a day, and was set at work in the woods to cut and hew planks (punchions they were then called) to make a floor for a house, which he continued at several days until finished, and then found he must pay for his board, which was 75 cents a day, leaving him in debt 25 cents per day! He refused to pay the difference, and his compass and chain were taken and secreted until he would pay his bill, which soon brought him to terms, and he redeemed them. He then changed to the Holland Land Company's surveys, south of the old State line, since known as the "triangle line," where he soon got into employment as a surveyor. A misunderstanding existed between the "Population" and the "Holland" company as to their rights adjoining the said line. He was assured by Maj. Alden that to locate a tract of land in that district would be safe (which proved correct). He located there for life, made a rude habitation, and became a resident on the Summit, 840 feet above the level of Lake Erie, ten miles south of Presque Isle. There were not half a dozen families then living in what is now Erie county, and none near his location. He determined not to winter there alone. In the month of November, he left his rude home and started in a log canoe manned by himself at LeBoeuf creek (now Waterford), and went down with the current to French creek, and down that to the Allegheny to Pittsburg, and, nothing offering to suit him, he offered himself at auction to the highest bidder to work faithfully, and he assured them he knew how to work, and asked who would give him the highest wages and board him! A good, honest yeoman was declared the highest bidder, at three dollars a month and board, for three months, which he cheerfully accepted, and served so well that his employer kindly offered him fifty cents a month more to remain six months longer. But he declined the advance in wages, and returned by the way he had gone to his rude hut where, in the spring of 1796, he commenced his pioneer life again, and in surveying and clearing land was unceasing in his efforts to procure a home for himself. In 1810 he purchased the tract north of him adjoining, and, by simply building an addition to his original cabin, removed on to that, where he spent the remainder of his life. Mr. Huidekoper, the agent of the Holland Land Company, always employed Capt. Strong to survey, sub-divide and set off, or designate old lines among their lands in this county as long as he was able to attend to it, and ever to his death had entire confidence in his ability and judgment and knowledge of the original lines and surveys. The early opening of the salt trade, and vast amount of hauling incident thereto, made his location on the Summit a sort of depot and a public house desirable and necessary. The location and construction of the Erie and Waterford turnpike past his door greatly added to the business, and during the war of 1812 he enjoyed a fair trade there. His never-tiring industry and unceasing energy extended his domains, and he cleared land far ahead of others. His intelligence and social qualities made him friends, and his industry and good management as early as 1830 placed him in possession of some 800 acres of land, on which were substantial improvements and good buildings, while he had more money at interest than any other farmer in Erie county. When the First Presbyterian Church was built, Capt. Strong was the only man in the county that could lend the necessary money, $800. Capt. Strong was married to a Miss Trask in 1805, who died a few years after, leaving one daughter, who lived until May, 1823. He again married, and at his death left three sons and two daughters, all married and settled in life—Mrs. B. B. Vincent, Mrs. T. B. Vincent, Martin Strong, F. D. Strong and Landaff Strong. He was always a great reader, and always ready to impart from his well-stored mind in conversation. He had a regular system of industry, economy and leisure in their proper places, and though his body long suffered and became impaired, the mind continued clear, bright and undisturbed to the end. After a residence of sixty-three years on the same farm where he located when there were not ten families living in the county, he died March 24, 1858, in his 88th year. He had lived to see the population increase to over 50,000 inhabitants, and all prosperous, and died respected and esteemed by a very large circle of friends and acquaintances. Capt. Strong, in conversation in a circle of friends ten years before his death, remarked "that any person would think him a fool to make the selection he did, when the whole county was open to him." He said: "That was a mistake; he was not a fool, but he misjudged in his selection, like many others, and spent the prime of his life in making him a home, and he thought it folly at that time of life to pull up and begin anew somewhere else."

Charles Hamot Strong was born in Erie, March 14, 1853. He is a son of the late Landaff and Catherine Cecialia (Hamot) Strong, the personal histories of whose paternal ancestors, the late Martin Strong and P. S. V. Hamot, are contained in this volume. Charles H. Strong attended the Erie Academy, and was graduated from Yale College in the class of '77. His business identification is in representing the estate of the late W. L. Scott in various interests. He was married September 8, 1881, to Anna Wainwright Scott, second daughter of the late William L. Scott, whose personal memoirs are contained herein. Mr. and Mrs. Strong have one child, Matilda Thora Wainwright Strong. The family residence is at Sixth and Peach streets, Erie.

P. S. V. Hamot (deceased), was born in Paris, France, November 28, 1784. His father was a captain in the French army and a Royalist, and left France for Russia, where he resided during the "reign of terror." Returning to France, after the establishment of the "Republic," he offered to procure for his son a lieutenancy in the army, but such a position not being in accordance with his tastes, his attention having been turned to the New Republic of the West, he preferred to come to America and try his fortune in a new and strange land. His father consenting, he came to Philadelphia in 1802, with the French consul, as "L'Homme de confiance," as expressed in his passport. The consul died soon after his arrival, leaving Mr. Hamot a friendless youth, and among a people in whose language he was little versed. His self-reliance, peculiarly a trait of his character, did not allow him to despond. A mercantile situation offering, he started for the West, as the clerk of a French house, in charge of a stock of merchandise. The vessel on which the stock was shipped was wrecked on Lake Ontario; but part of the goods were recovered, with which he opened a store at Niagara, Canada; from there he removed to Lewiston, and in 1805, came to Erie. In 1810 he formed a partnership with Messrs. E. & D. Alvord, of Saline, who dealt largely in salt. This business connection continued many years. He was also engaged in general mercantile business on his own account, and was one of the first and most successful merchants in Erie. Mr. Hamot held responsible and honorable offices under the government, being at one time canal commissioner of the state, and at another superintendent of the United States Public Works in Erie. He was the first cashier of the Erie Bank, and one of the principal stockholders. As a business man he was fortunate and noted for his activity and energy in the prosecution of his plans, which evinced sound judgment. He engaged warmly in politics, his sympathies and feelings being with the Democratic party. He was one of the founders and principal stockholders in the Erie Observer. His politeness and hearty hospitality won for him many attached friends. Mr. Hamot was twice married; to Adeline Woodruff, of Lewiston, N. Y., in 1818, who died in 1821; and to Elizabeth Coltrin, widow of Dr. Asa Coltrin, and daughter of George Keefer, of Thorold, Canada, in 1825. Mr. Hamot died in Erie, October 17, 1846. Mrs. Hamot died in December, 1866. Mr. Hamot left four daughters: Mrs. Catherine, wife of Landaff Strong, M. D., Mrs. Mary, wife of Hon. G. W. Starr, and Horense L. Hamot. These survived their brother Eugene who died young.

George William Starr, Erie, Pa., was born at Burlington, Vt., April 14, 1822. His parents were Jesse J. and Harriet (Hall) Starr, both of whom were descendants of pioneer settlers of New England. The founder of the Starr family in the United States settled in Connecticut, from Wales, in 1633. Elias Hall, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Starr, was an officer in the Colonial army, and was wounded at Castleton, Vt., in the skirmish with Burgoyne's invading troops, prior to the latter's defeat at Saratoga. Jesse J. Starr was a hardware merchant at Burlington, Vt., where he resided for more than fifty years. He died in 1860, surviving his wife several years. George W. Starr attended the schools of Burlington; prepared for college at the academy of the same city, and was graduated from Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., in 1842. He began the reading of law under the preceptorship of Stephen G. Austin, of Buffalo, N. Y., and continued with the law firm of Talcott & Houghton (John L. Talcott subsequently became Judge of the Supreme Court of New York, and George Houghton, Judge of the Recorder's Court of Buffalo), and was admitted to practice by the Supreme Court of New York in 1845. He entered upon the practice of his profession at Buffalo, N. Y., and pursued it in that city for several years, when he accepted a position as clerk with his friend, Captain Stephen Champlin, of the United States steamer Michigan. After sailing for nearly two years, he resumed the practice of law at Buffalo. In 1852 he came to Erie. He was engaged in the coal business for some years. In 1877 he was one of the founders of the Erie Forge Company, has been one of its board of directors since its establishment, and the president of that board since 1887. Since the organization of the Erie Dime Bank under its present management, Mr. Starr has been a member of its directory. He is also president of the Erie Cemetery Association; was most active in the founding of the Hamot Hospital, and was one of the incorporators of that institution. He was a member of the first board of trustees of the State Hospital for the Insane, located at Warren, by the appointment of Governor Hoyt, February, 1880, and served on the board of that institution, and the Hamot Hospital, until his acceptance, February, 1887, of Governor Beaver's appointment to the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities of Pennsylvania. Mr. Starr was, for six consecutive terms, a member of the Select Council of Erie, and was presiding officer of that body during the last year of that period, and subsequently served two additional years in the same capacity, being again president during the latter year. He was married October 7, 1851, to Mary A., daughter of the late P. S. V. Hamot, memoirs of whose antecedents and personal history are contained in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Starr reside at 140 East Sixth street, and attend St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of which Mrs. Starr has been a communicant since her girlhood.

The Sturgeon Family.—Of the pioneers of Erie county who became identified with its early settlement, there are family names that continue, through their descendants, to have honorable mention by reason of their participation in local and county government, the affairs of church and state, and who in war and in peace, at home and abroad, worthily maintain the family name, honored and conspicuous. Of these the Sturgeon family deserves notice. This family, according to the early traditions, show that their origin was an English Presbyterian family of that name in the north of England, near the border of Scotland; that they had intermarried considerably with the Scotch; that during the religious persecutions of the seventeenth century the ancestors of the Sturgeon family in America emigrated to the north of Ireland. Some time between 1720 and 1730 several brothers of one family emigrated to America and settled in what is now Dauphin county, Pennsylvania. One of these brothers was a soldier in Capt. Smith's company of the Pennsylvania contingent of the army during the French and Indian war, and was killed at the battle of Quebec. A son of one of the Sturgeon brothers who originally emigrated to America was named Samuel Sturgeon, first married to Margaret _____, who died March 2, 1780, and by whom he had four sons. He died October 2, 1801. William Sturgeon, born July 10, 1768, was the father of: John M., Margaret, Eleanor, Samuel, Maria, William, Thomas J., Judah H., and Jane. He emigrated to Erie county from Lancaster about 1797, and founded Sturgeonville (now Fairview). Jeremiah Sturgeon, born August 10, 1770, was the father of: Samuel C., Robert, Jeremiah, Margaret, Martha and Elizabeth. He emigrated to Erie county about 1797, and settled land adjoining Sturgeonville (now part of Fairview borough). James Sturgeon, born October 27, 1772, moved to New York State. His family were: Andrew Sturgeon, born August 16, 1779, emigrated to Erie county about 1830, and settled land at Fairplain, in Girard township, father of Margaret Sturgeon (married to Thomas Sturgeon); Thomas H., Jane F., Samuel and Andrew (married to Eliza Jane Caughey), father of J. C., Carson J. and Mrs. Mary Platt of Erie; Jeremiah and William. The above-named William, Jeremiah and Andrew Sturgeon are the ancestors of all the Sturgeon family in Erie county. Samuel Sturgeon, sr., married a second wife, and by her had five more children, but none of them emigrated to Erie county, and but little is known of them.

J. C. Sturgeon, attorney (patent law practice), Erie, Pa., was born in Fairview township, Erie county, Pa., in 1841. Facts entering into the genealogy of this subject of this sketch are contained elsewhere in this volume. He received a common school education, then entered Allegheny College, where he took a literary course. In 1863 he left college to enlist in the United States navy, served until the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged; and subsequently, in 1876, Allegheny College conferred upon him the degree of A. M. "honoris causa." After the war he attended Harvard law school, from which institution he was graduated in 1868. He was admitted to the bar, located in Erie, and entered upon the practice of his profession. Shortly thereafter he was elected to the office of district attorney of Erie county. On the expiration of his official term he resumed the general practice and continued therein until 1877, when he removed to Bradford, McKean county, Pa., where he was engaged in looking after his oil interests until 1881, then returning to Erie. Ten years ago he withdrew from the general law practice and has since devoted himself exclusively to patent law practice. He has always been an active member of the Republican party, and was in 1880, while a resident of Bradford, a candidate before the Republican convention for the State Senate. He is a Knight Templar, and was for a number of years commander of Post 67, G. A. R. He was married in 1878 to Eda, daughter of Albert Blakelee, manufacturer of Du Quoin, Ill. Mrs. Sturgeon died in February, 1882, leaving two children, Ralph A. and Berry A. The family reside at 323 West Seventh street, and attend the Park Presbyterian Church.

Carson J. Sturgeon, vice president of the Keystone Electric Company, was born in Girard, Erie county, Pa., April 6, 1845. He is a son of Andrew and Eliza J. (Caughey) Sturgeon, natives of New York and Pennsylvania, of Scotch-Irish ancestry. His parents are both deceased. His father, who was a farmer and mechanic, reared a family of four sons and two daughters, and five of the children are still living: John C., attorney, Erie; Sheldon F., farmer, Woodhull, Ill.; Carson J., Mary J. (Mrs. George Platt, of Erie) and George A., attorney, Pittsburg, Pa. Carson J. Sturgeon was educated in the public schools and academy of Girard, after which he learned the trade of machinist, and was for several years employed at the Grant Locomotive Works, Paterson, N. J. Returning to Girard, he spent two years in perfecting and patenting a lawn mower. In 1883 he helped organize and was made vice president and general manager of the Novelty Manufacturing Company, located at Girard. They manufactured chiefly woodenware for household use. In 1890 the Keystone Electric Company was formed. J. W. Leech, C. J. Sturgeon, Geo. Platt and J. C. Sturgeon being the proprietors. In April, 1891, the company was incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The officers were: J. W. Leech, president; and C. J. Sturgeon, secretary and treasurer. One year later the stock was increased to $50,000, with J. F. Downing, president; C. J. Sturgeon, vice president and general manager; and J. W. Leech, secretary and treasurer. The plant was first located on Peach street, near Fourteenth, but within a year they were obliged to lease the building at the corner of Fourteenth and State streets, which building is now occupied by the Erie Machinery Company. This building was built especially for their use and leased for five years, but the business grew so rapidly that in 1893 they were obliged to purchase a site and build the present plant, which will have to be again enlarged in 1896. The main building is 50 x 100 feet, the engine and testing room 30 x 40 feet, and the boiler room 20 x 40 feet. The buildings are constructed of stone, brick and iron, and are thoroughly equipped with modern improvements. The products of the concern are chiefly electric motors and dynamos, and of these the reversible motor for use in elevators propelled by electricity, and the automatic rheostat for controlling the same (invented by Mr. Sturgeon), form a large proportion of the output. Mr. Sturgeon was married August 29, 1875, to Miss Eliza A. Campbell, of Girard, and has five children: Carl J., Lynn C., Lloyd B., Harry R., and Della G. Mr. Sturgeon and family attend the Presbyterian Church. In politics he is an active Republican.

George Platt, city engineer, Erie, Pa., was born in New Milford, Richfield county, Conn., December 17, 1824. He is the son of the late William and Polly (Allen) Platt, the former a native of Dutchess county, N. Y., the latter of Fairfield county, Connecticut, and both of English descent. William Platt was a coach-maker, an old-line Democrat, and was for one term a member of the Connecticut State Legislature. He died in 1888, at Girard, Erie county, Pa., where he had taken up his residence in 1856. George Platt completed his education at the academies in New Milford, Westport and Wilton, Conn. He then went to sea, and was, at the breaking out of the war, in command of the Sally Magee, a nautical school-ship belonging to the Eagleswood academy. This vessel was, in the summer of 1862, chartered by the United States government as a transport to carry stores to the army at seaboard points, and Captain Platt was retained in its command. After one year of this service he was put in charge of the compilation of fractional interest in the United States treasury department, and in June, 1864, was made acting assistant register, with authority to sign United States bonds. At the close of the war he was employed in special service in the coast survey, and during this period began the study of marine and general engineering. His first important engineering work was the building of a railroad. Captain Platt located in Erie county in 1863, making Girard his place of residence. He was appointed county surveyor October 12, 1872, and held that position until 1885. At the expiration of his last term as surveyor he was made civil engineer of the city of Erie, and is still the incumbent of that office. Captain Platt has been twice married; in 1847 to Sarah A., daughter of Gould Jelliff, of Westport, Conn.; August 1, 1888, to Mary, daughter of the late Andrew Sturgeon, of Erie county, Pennsylvania. The family reside at 323 West Seventh street, and are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Captain Platt is a member of the Masonic order.

Andrew Caughey, The Caugheys, of Pennsylvania, are of Protestant Scotch-Irish stock. Their ancestors left Scotland during the times of religious persecution, and settled in the neighborhood of Donegal, in the north of Ireland. But the new world had greater attractions than the Green Isle, and one of their descendants, Francis Caughey, with hundreds of his co-religionists, emigrated about the year 1750 to Pennsylvania, and found a home with his family in Lancaster county. He bore an active part in the war of the Revolution; and after serving his country and his generation well, he died at the advanced age of 93. He was the father of five children, two sons and three daughters, namely: Andrew, John, Ella, Jane and Elizabeth. Andrew was born in the year 1756, and, like his father, served in the army of the Revolution, participating in the severely-fought battle of Brandywine, in September, 1777. He married about the year 1781, and removed with his family to Erie county in 1803, locating upon a farm in what is now West Mill Creek, some five miles west of Erie on the Ridge road. He died in 1828, at the age of 72. One of his grandsons is still occupying the same farm, Andrew Caughey, the subject of this sketch, was born in 1791, and came, with his grandfather's family to this country. In 1818 he married Martha Canon, daughter, of Daniel Canon, of Fayette county, and niece of John Canon, the founder of Cannonsburg, Pa. Six children were born to them, namely: Nancy C., Samuel S., Daniel C., Francis E., Andrew H. and a daughter that died in infancy. Nancy remained unmarried. She died in 1891, at the age of 71. Samuel S., who was born in 1821, married Nancy D. Davidson, by whom he had four children: Alfred K., Martha E., Frank T. and a daughter that died in infancy. Alfred died in 1888, and Martha E. at an early age, some years before. Frank resides in Detroit, where he is engaged in business. Samuel S. Caughey removed, in 1856, to Kingsville, Ohio, where he made his home for eleven years. On the death of his father and mother, in the winter of 1865, he returned to the farm in West Mill Creek, on which his father had resided for forty-seven years. Here his wife died in 1868. Afterwards he married Mrs. Susannah Brown, a daughter of Joseph Neeley. They removed to Erie in 1882, and five years afterward death claimed his wife. He still resides in Erie. Daniel C., the second son of Andrew and Martha Caughey, married Martha Jane McCreary, daughter of David McCreary. They removed to Kingsville, Ohio, in 1856, where they have since lived. Six children have been born to them, namely: DeWitt C., now living in Iowa; Helen (Mrs. Shank), residing in Millington, Tenn.; Emma, Isadore, Jessie A. and Charles. The latter died young. Francis E., the third son, died in 1845, at the age of 20; Andrew H., the fourth son, married in 1851, Elizabeth A. Reed, daughter of William W. Reed, sr., and great-granddaughter of Col. Seth Reed, the first settler of the town of Erie. Two children were born to them, Lizzie Romaine, who died young, and Reed, now connected with the city engineer's office in Erie. Andrew H., after spending much of his life, first as a newspaper editor, and then as a teacher in the Erie Academy and Lafayette College, studied for the ministry, and was ordained in 1888. He is now preaching in the Presbyterian Church of Kingsville, Ohio. His wife died in 1889. John Caughey, brother of Andrew, sr., was the oldest member of the family. He resided most of his life on a farm in Fairview township, Erie county, and had a family of thirteen children, namely: Andrew Miles Wilson, Francis, William, John, David V., Samuel G., George, Eliza Jane (Mrs. Andrew Sturgeon), Nancy (Mrs. J. B. Johnson), Mary (Mrs. Matthew Johnson), Sarah (Mrs. N. J. Clark), and Susan (Mrs. Jackson), Samuel Caughey, a third son, left three sons, John F., who resides on the farm first occupied by the family in 1803; Samuel Henry, living on a farm on the Lake road, west of Erie, and Lewis, who died in Erie a few years ago. Other members of the family who came to this country in 1803 were: Francis, who was killed accidentally in 1816; Jane, who never married; Nancy, wife of Samuel McCreary, and Eliza, wife of William McCreary.

William Ward Reed, Erie, Pa., was born in Ash-tabula, Ohio, April 1, 1824. He is a son of the late W. W. Reed, the first white child born within the present corporate limits of Erie. W. W. Reed, sr.'s father was Charles John Reed, a son of Col. Seth Reed, the founder of the family, who was before the Revolutionary war a physician at Uxbridge, Mass. Col. Seth Reed won his title in the war for American independence, and was in command of a regiment at the battle of Bunker Hill. Col. Reed, with his wife and two sons, were among the pioneer settlers of Erie, removing thence from Ontario county, New York, in the summer of 1795. The first marriage in the county was that of Charles John Reed to Rachael Miller, on the 27th of December, 1797. The young couple rode to their Walnut Creek home on a sled kept at the fort. He died in 1830, and his wife in 1851. W. W. Reed, sr., married Elizabeth Ingram, daughter of James Smith, a native of Massachusetts, who removed to Oneida county, New York, where she was born. W. W. Reed, sr., and wife located in Ashtabula, where he was for a number of years a prominent and successful merchant. He failed in the panic of 1837, removed to Erie, Pa., in 1845, where he was secretary and treasurer of the Erie Canal Company until his death, September 9, 1851; his wife survived until 1888. William Ward Reed received his education at the academies of Ashtabula and Erie. Leaving school, he was first a clerk for a short time in an Ashtabula (O.) warehouse, and was then for four years in various positions in the lake service. Quitting the water, he was clerk in the general store of the Reed's furnace on the Big Sandy, Mercer county, Pennsylvania, where he remained until the spring of 1849, when he began the practice of civil engineering on the Erie and North East R. R. (now the L. S. & M. S. R. R.) One year later he was promoted to the position of assistant civil engineer. In September, 1851, he went to Canada, where he was for four years engaged in civil engineering on the then Ontario, Simcoe and Huron R. R., between Toronto and Collingwood. For one year following this he was engaged in the construction of the harbor at Collingwood, and was next in charge of the construction of the Niagara road from Clifton to Niagara-on-the-Lake. During the next two years he was contractor's engineer on the Sarnia branch of the Great Western R. R., and next built the aqueduct of the canal near Girard, Pa. In 1859 he was elected general superintendent of the Pennsylvania and Erie Canal, and served in that capacity until the canal was abandoned. In 1867 he was chosen president of the Erie board of water commissioners, and served on that board for twelve years. He was one of the founders and original stockholders of the Second National Bank of Erie, and was for many years one of the directors, and, for a part of the time, vice president of that board. In 1876, 1878 and 1880 Mr. Reed was supported by a large majority of the Republicans of Erie county for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Twenty-seventh district, but having incurred the hostility of the other counties of the district by his fight against the Pennsylvania system of giving all counties, large and small, the same number of delegates in a Congressional convention, he always failed to get the district nomination. He was one of the board of managers of the Hamot Hospital, and has long been a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity and I.

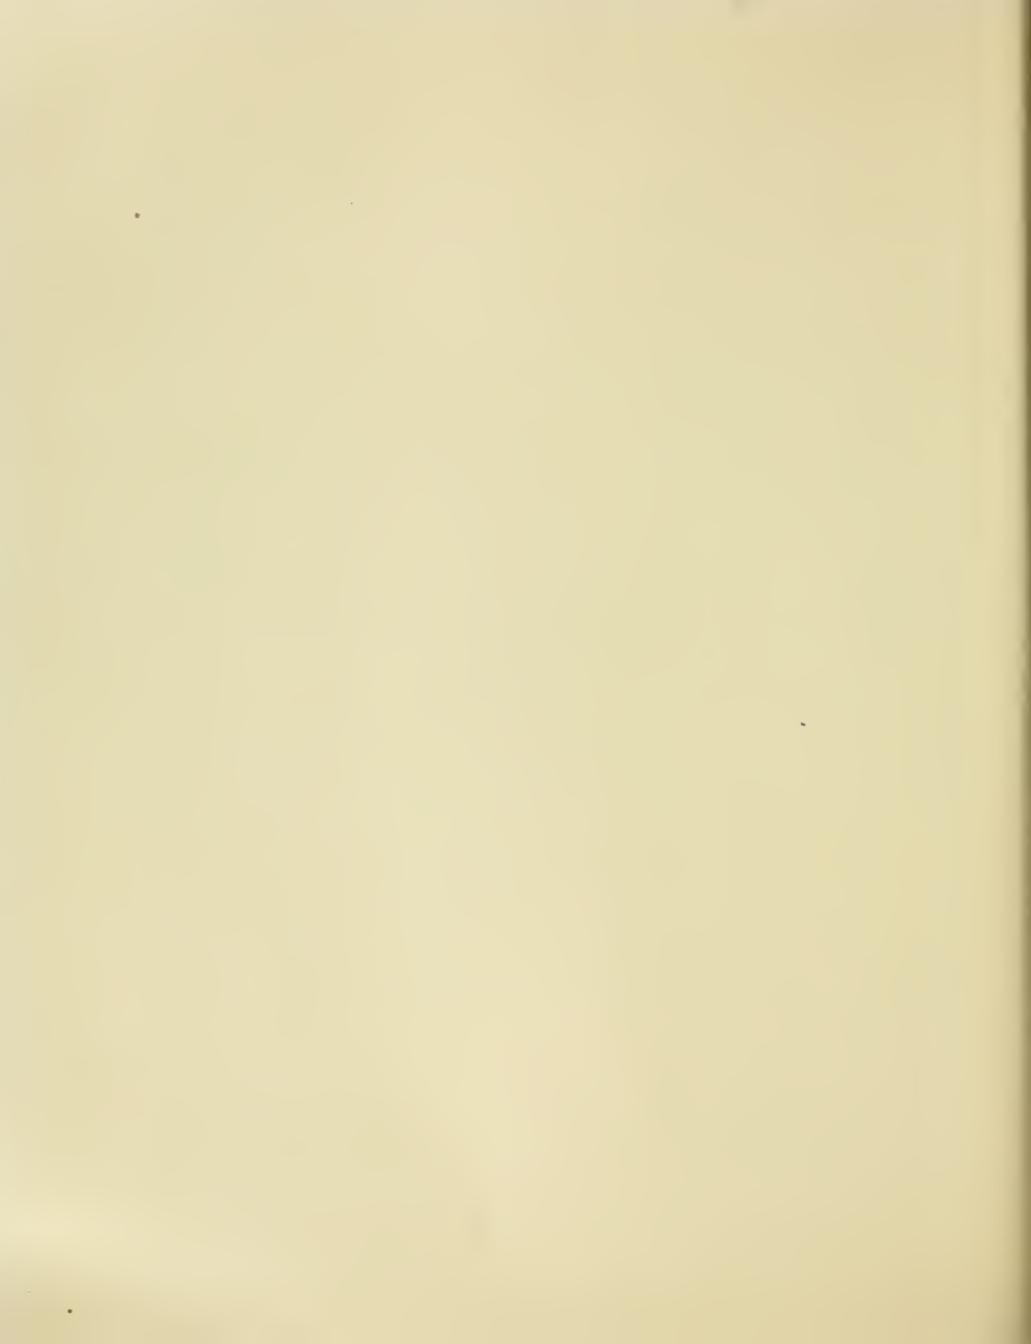

O. O. F. He resides at 17 East Tenth street, and is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of which he has been vestryman for more than thirty years.

Thomas Rees. Few names were more familiar to early settlers than "Squire Rees." None more identified with Erie county's settlement. He was a native of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, and though he did not bring his family to Erie as early as some of the other pioneers, still, he was the first to begin business in the lake region. Mr. Rees, after taking an active share in the stirring events of the Revolution, was appointed deputy State surveyor as soon as the northwest was thrown open to settlement. The commission was dated May 16, 1792. He opened an office in Northumberland county, and in the following year struck out through the forest and reached an Indian village on the banks of Lake Erie, a site now occupied by the city of Buffalo. In 1794 he visited Presque Isle, and made a survey on about 400 warrants issued to him for survey. In the spring of the following year Mr. Rees went to his district with surveyors and others, who wanted to take up land. Mr. Rees was then agent for the Pennsylvania Population Company, and the first sales were all articulated by him. He had a tent on the bank of the bay, which was the first real estate office established in Erie. Mr. Rees was the first justice of the peace appointed in Erie county. In 1802 he removed from Erie to his place in Harbor Creek. He terminated his land agency and laid out his land in farms. They have since been known as the Rees reserve. There he resided until his death in May, 1848. Mrs. William A. Brown, late of Erie, was his niece and a part of his household until his death. It was one of the pleasing reminiscences of the Squire to tell of his entertainment of Louis Philipp in his tent or cabin on the bank of Lake Erie, when, as Duke of Orleans, he was traversing the United States. It will be remembered that from 1830 to 1848, the year of Squire Rees' death, Louis Philipp was upon the throne of France—and in his conversations with Gen. Cass, the American minister at his court, dwelt with emphasis on the details of that trip, including his route through Erie, the king showing a map on which his route or itinerary was traced by the pen of Gen. Washington at Mt. Vernon.

Hon. James D. Dunlap was among the prominent industrial men of Erie who have by their quiet and steady efforts, in their day and generation, helped to lay the foundations of our city broad and deep. Of these the name of James D. Dunlap deserves mention. Even though his career, with all its record of useful public service in the past, with much of promise for the future, was cut short by death, it is gratifying to his friends to review his unselfish work and note the results he obtained; for the public acts of none of Erie's prominent men seemed freer from the taint of selfishness. As Representative, Senator and councilman, school director and author, his work was almost continuous; as Sunday school superintendent, he was also efficient and widely known; as an attorney at the bar, though his practice was much interrupted by public service at the State capitol, yet his masterly Book of Forms will long perpetuate his name; for it shows his familiarity with the practical and business part of the profession he struggled to acquire. His career was connected with the initiation or forwarding of some of Erie's greatest improvements. It is due to his memory that the main part of his useful life should be collated and sketched as one of Erie's benefactors. He was the son of Dr. James and Nancy Dunlap. His father was a physician. The ancestral records of his family, formerly spelled Dunlop, show a Scotch origin, and a descent from the Campbells and Wallaces of that historic land. The family went from Scotland to the North of Ireland. William Dunlap, great-grandfather of James D. Dunlap, having a grant of land in the Colonies, came to Philadelphia before the Revolution. He had four sons, William, James, John and Samuel. James was killed in the battle of Oriskany, under General Herkimer. All the brothers were in that battle. One of these had four sons: James, William, Robert and Livingston. James was a physician, and married Nancy Tuttle daughter of Col. Timothy Tuttle, a colonel in the Revolutionary army. He was in the battle of Bunker Hill, and was of Pilgrim stock. Of their three children, all but James D. died very young. The Tuttle family was early and honorably connected with the settlement of Erie county. They went to Indiana Territory soon after their marriage. There, in the town of Karkaskia, James Dunlap was born on the 15th of January, 1809. Indiana Territory was remote, with neither steam navigation or railroad facilities. The return of Mrs. Dunlap with her infant son was by the way of the Mississippi river to New Orleans, and thence by steamer through the Gulf of Mexico and the ocean to New York, and thence overland to Erie county. The traditional account of this trip seems more like romance than reality; but, in it all, is the figure of the lone, heroic woman, who, with her infant son, endured so much in this long and circuitous journey home to the hamlet of North East. Amid difficulties, which were bravely overcome, Mr. Dunlap, as the companion of his mother, reached the bar, for which he zealously toiled. He was admitted to the bar in October, 1837. Soon afterwards he removed from North East to Erie, and formed a partnership with Hon. Elijah Babbitt, which continued for some time. He was elected to the Legislature from Erie county in 1840, in the noted Tippecanoe campaign, and re-elected in 1841-43 and 44. He was afterwards, in 1845, elected State Senator. While in the House he, by special exertions, secured the incorporation of the Erie and North East Railroad Company, the first link in Pennsylvania in the line of the Lake Shore R. R. Afterwards he aided in securing the charter of the Erie and Pittsburgh R. R., with branches, a franchise most gladly utilized when adverse influences sought to hinder the chartering of roads through Northwestern Pennsylvania. He was for years a school director of Erie, and seemed among the first to grasp the idea of placing the Erie schools upon the elevated plane they have since reached. He was the originator, or most prominent supporter, of the building of the High school building, at the corner of Holland and Seventh streets, and had the satisfaction of witnessing its erection, though, for a while, obstructed by an attempted injunction. The potential character of his vote on an important occasion, when the educational system of Pennsylvania hung in the balance, during his Legislative or Senatorial career, was significantly alluded to as "the casting vote," by one of the educational functionaries of the Commonwealth in an address from the platform on an occasion of state at Erie. For about thirty years succeeding his death his gifted widow, and for much of the time one or both of his accomplished daughters, were employed as teachers in the educational establishment with which he was identified as a founder. These facts caused an association of his family with the schools for almost half a century, his earnest advocacy of the educational interests in the Legislature by Mr. Dunlap being taken into account. In no other family in Erie city was there such a public school record as in his. He was one of the founders of the Seventh Street Methodist Episcopal Church, in Erie. Prior to his coming to this city, that congregation had no place of public worship, except in the court house. It was his happiness, in 1839, to see their church dedicated, and the following year to welcome to its portals the annual session of the Erie Conference. For years he served as superintendent of the Sunday school. His wide reputation in such service was emphasized in the fitting commemorative, or funeral address, of Rev. W. F. Wilson, after his lamented death. In 1854 Mr. Dunlap brought out his first edition of "Dunlap's Book of Forms." It had involved much care and thought, and was a complete success. Its adaptation of forms, its aid in the conduct of business and its consequent prevention of litigation, were most commendable. Two improved and enlarged editions were brought out by him in his lifetime. The work has since, in its wide circulation, become a standard authority and monument to the author's care and ability. He was most happy in his domestic relations. Having, in 1840, purchased the sightly and attractive "Kellogg homestead," on East Sixth street, which, embowered within its trees, its vines and flowers, could be made so beautiful, he embellished it yet more by the addition of fruits, vines and lawns, all cultivated with the most sedulous care. There, for some years, he and his mother made their home, which was a delightful and pleasant resort. On the first day of February, 1844, his mother died, aged 64 years. Afterwards Mr. Dunlap, on the 11th of May, 1853, married Miss Marian Finley Russell, a lady of Scotch parentage, from Belfast, Ireland. Her zeal in church work, and aptness and ability in teaching, had, before her marriage, drawn around her a host of friends. They had three children: Emma, of most cultured intellect, and of charming beauty of character. She died March 23, 1877, after some years of successive service as teacher. Her funeral, on the following Sunday afternoon, from the Seventh Street M. E. Church, was a memorable scene. There teachers and scholars, representative citizens and friends gathered from every part of the city, while the eloquent tribute of her pastor, Rev. William W. Ramsey, is remembered as one of his most feeling addresses during his remarkable pastorate. Mary, after several years of successful teaching in the city schools, was married to Mr. Davis Rees, freight agent of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R.; and Wallace, also in the railroad service, who married Grace Sedelmeyer. Such are the outlines of the life of one who labored long and diligently for Erie's advancement, and from the benefit of whose efforts Erie has long ago derived important fruits. In the long and patient effort to revive the Sunbury and Erie (now Philadelphia and Erie) R. R., between its commencement in 1837 and its revival in 1851, Mr. Dunlap was a patient toiler; in the negotiations and meetings preceding the building of the Lake Shore R. R., he was a faithful worker; in all of this preliminary work his conciliatory manners and wide acquaintance with public men made him efficient. His keen preception forsook the Gen City yet to come on the south shore of Presque Isle Bay; though he was not destined to realize the fruition of his hopes. Like Moses, he saw from afar the promised land, but did not live to enter in. His death was sadly pathetic. While, with other citizens, struggling through the panic, which, in October, 1857, had paralyzed the industries and deranged the finances of our country, he was in March, 1858, stricken with a fatal malady, the result of which no skill could avert. He rapidly sank under its withering touch, and, in the maturity of his powers and with his hopes on life still buoyant, he sank. He died on the 28th day of March, 1858. Of his three children, the eldest was but four years of age. In the confusion and embarrassment of the depression all of his financial plans were frustrated; though happily the rearing and education of his children were committed to competent hands, by whom the work laid down by him was most successfully accomplished.

Geo. B. Kimberly

Nathaniel Willard Russell, the first-born of Hamlin and Sarah (Norcross) Russell, was born in Erie county March 11, 1812. His father came to this county from Connecticut in 1802, and was married here in 1811; had but limited educational opportunities, and did not attend school after he was 15. He remained with his father (his mother having died when he was 19 years old) until March 10, 1833, when he began to earn money for himself by working on a neighboring farm and teaching school. His first purchase of land was forty acres from his father at $10 per acre. October 19, 1836, he left for Harrisburg, Pa., where he obtained a position as clerk in Buehler's Hotel. In April, 1836, by the aid of Gen. Simon Cameron, he was appointed a conductor on the railroad between Harrisburg and Philadelphia, and in June following was promoted to United States mail agent at an increased salary. During the winter of 1838 he was induced to return to Buehler's Hotel and given general charge of the house. This was during the period known as "the buckshot war," one of the most eventful in Pennsylvania's history. March 23, 1839, Mr. Russell was made captain of the packet boat, Thomas Jefferson, of the fast passenger line between Pittsburg and Philadelphia, a position he held for four seasons. During his residence in the east he made annual visits to his parents. The winter of 1840-41 he spent in Erie county, and during this period was married to Miss Eleanor S. Osborn, of Erie, January 14, 1841. March 1st he resumed his place on the canal, Mrs. Russell accompanying him to Harrisburg, and spending the summers with Mrs. Buehler. While there she was seized with bilious fever, which terminated in quick consumption, and Mr. Russell was obliged to bring her back to Erie, where she died on the 6th of January, 1842. In November of the same year he resigned his place on the canal and returned permanently to his old home. Soon after, he purchased a farm of ninety acres, within three miles of Erie. September 1, 1843, he was married to Miss Frances A. Hubbell, of Troy, N. Y. A son was born in July, 1844, to whom the name of Henry Buehler was given. Mrs. Russell died on the 30th of January, 1849, and in January, 1851, he was married (for the third time) to Miss Emily Davison, of Mill Creek. Their only child is a daughter, born May, 1853, who was named Ella Frances Russell (now Mrs. Burton). In April, 1855, Mr. Russell purchased and moved on the tract of land where he was born, and on which he died. The postoffice at Belle Valley was mainly established through his efforts. In 1849 he was appointed aid to Gov. Johnston, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and, in 1868, he was elected justice of the peace, an office he held continuously. Mr. Russell was known in every part of Erie county as one of its wealthiest farmers and most intelligent citizens. He was remarkable for his wonderful memory and was the standard authority on all matters connected with the early settlement of Erie county.

George J. Russell, brother of the late Capt. N. W. Russell, was born in Belle Valley, Erie county, February 14, 1824, son of Hamlin Russell and Sarah (Norcross) Russell. His father came to Pennsylvania from Winstead, Conn., in the year 1802. They were of English parentage, having settled in Connecticut in the year 1664, the first of the family who settled in this country being William Russell, who came here at that date (1664). Benjamin Russell, an elder brother of Hamlin Russell, came to Erie county in 1796. The family have all been farmers, and being above the average farmer in general education, and of unusual energy, have succeeded in becoming important factors in the upbuilding and progress of Erie county. Mr. George Russell, late coroner, and Benjamin S. Russell, a real estate dealer, now living at Jamestown, Dak., are the only living children. Their father was prominent among the first Abolitionists of the country, and died September 19, 1852; their mother February 11, 1831. George received his education in the public schools, and engaged in farming until April 1, 1890. He also taught school winters, between the age of 20 and 24 years. He has held the position of tax collector in Erie county for seven years, and the office of coroner three years, and the office of jury commissioner three years. He was married January 26, 1854, to Arminda J. Hayes, daughter of Lester and Mary (Graham) Hayes; her father was of English parentage and her mother of Scotch-Irish descent. Three children were the result of this union: Minnie M., wife of Rev. H. Webster; Lester Hayes and George B. The family are all ardent Presbyterians. Mr. George J. Russell is a staunch Republican. He has been engaged in farming, and has accumulated sufficient wealth to insure him comfort the balance of his days. The summer of 1850 he went the overland route to California; leaving Independence, Mo., May 27, 1850, he reached the gold mines in Nevada county, California, September 27, 1850, remaining at the mines until the month of June, 1853, when he returned home by way of San Francisco and the Nicaragua route to New York, arriving in Erie July 29, 1853, bringing with him a sufficiency of gold, dug by himself from the mines of California, to buy a fine farm. To the Russell family Erie county is indebted for a great deal of the recorded history of the county, and much of the knowledge we have of the family history of many of the pioneers of the county.

Rev. Robert Reid was the first resident minister in the city of Erie, his home from 1811 to 1844. He was pastor of the Associate Reformed Church, the first regularly organized in Erie, and for years its strongest religious organization. Mr. Reid's high character as a minister, his ability as a theologian and celebrity as an author merit more than passing notice, especially as he labored with untiring zeal for a third of a century in laying deep and broad the foundations of Evangelical religion on the wilderness shores of Lake Erie; seeking to transplant the faith and tenets he had imbibed on the hills of Ireland from his ancestors, who, before that, came with their Bibles and their plighted faith from "the solemn league and covenant" in the mountains of Scotland. The life of such a man, recounted, and his efforts to found a church, as reviewed, will familiarize the reader with the trials and toils of those faithful men who builded better than they knew. Rev. Robert Reid was born at Reid's Hill borough, near Belfast, Ireland, November 5, 1781. He came with his father's family to Philadelphia in 1798. He entered the University of Pennsylvania in 1801, and graduated in 1805, and later from the Theological Seminary of the Associate Reformed Church at New York. He was licensed to preach in 1809. He traveled over much wild country, preaching in many neighborhoods, sometimes with a sermon each day in the week. He came to Erie in 1811, and, in 1812, was ordained and installed as pastor of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, then the only organized religious association in Erie. Afterwards a church of kindred faith was organized in Waterford, to which he ministered for years a part of the time. He officiated as chaplain to Perry's squadron, and to the land forces at Erie in time of war. At the incorporation of the academy, in 1819, he was elected president and so continued for twenty-five years, until his death. For some time he was principal of the academy, and for years afterwards aided as a special teacher. He was married, in 1816, to Elizabeth Calhoun, who died young. In 1828 he married Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Matthew Lind, pastor of the Paxtang Church, near Harrisburg, Pa. He had six children: James Craig, a scholar, engineer and teacher, attorney-at-law and legislator; Dr. Robert King, who located in California; John C., of Stockton, Cal.; Mrs. Ellen, widow of R. T. Stewart (deceased); Elizabeth, the deceased wife of Irwin M. Wallace, of Erie, and Jeannette L., the deceased wife of Hon. George F. Carpenter, of Mansfield, O. (mother of Frank Carpenter, the noted traveler). He was the author of a number of books, indicating learning and research. Rev. Mr. Reid's long, useful and successful life terminated at Erie May 16, 1844, where truly his memory was embalmed in the hearts of his people.

Craig James Reid was born in Erie, Pa., June 18, 1854, and is a son of the late James C. and Louisa Charlotte (Ingersoll) Reid, the former a native of Erie county, Pennsylvania, of Scotch-Irish descent, the latter a native of St. Lawrence county, New York, and of English-Welsh extraction. Their children are: Jessie Louisa, wife of John Livingstone Dinwiddie Borthwick, A. M., chief engineer United States navy. [Lieut.-Com. John Livingstone Dinwiddie Borthwick, born in Philadelphia August 11, 1840; educated in that city and received the degree of A. M.; is a member of the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry, and with it served in the first Shenandoah campaign in 1861; was present at the engagement of Falling Waters, Va.; on being mustered out of the United States service was offered and declined a commission as captain in the Pennsylvania, and a lieutenantancy in the regular cavalry; entered the navy as a third assistant engineer October 8, 1861, and was ordered to the U. S. S. "Itasca"; in that vessel he participated in the preliminary engagements below Forts Jackson and St. Phillip; the removal of the obstructions below those forts; the passage of the forts and the capture of New Orleans; also in the engagements at Vicksburg, Grand Gulf, East Feliciana, Port Hudson, Baton Rouge, Pass Manchac, Donaldsonville, College Point and Red Church, all on the Mississippi river; at Velasco, coast of Texas, and in the preliminary engagements and passage of Forts Morgan and Gaines, Mobile Bay; detached from the "Itasca" and ordered to the "Arizona," flagship of the West Gulf squadron, as engineer in charge, the same position he held on board the "Itasca," January, 1865; detached and ordered to the "Lackawanna" on the destruction of the "Arizona" by fire; detached from the "Lackawanna" and ordered to the "Kineo" March, 1865, as engineer in charge; detached and placed on waiting orders May, 1865; served on board of the "Shamokin," "Kansas" and "Huron" in the West Indies, South Atlantic squadron and West Coast of Africa from June, 1865, till October, 1868; at the Naval Academy as instructor, and in charge of machinery afloat from April, 1869, till July, 1871; on board of the "Michigan" from July, 1871, till July, 1873; on board the "Alaska," European squadron, from August, 1873, till January, 1874; at the Naval Academy as instructor and in charge of machinery afloat from January, 1874, till January, 1877; on board of the "Alliance," "Vandalia" and "Trenton," European squadron, from March, 1877, till July, 1880; on board of the "Michigan" from December, 1880, till July, 1883; on board of the "Trenton" and "Alert," East India squadron, from August, 1883, till September, 1886; at the New York navy yard from April, 1887, to January, 1888, as chairman of the Experimental Board, member of the Board of Inspection and Statutory Board; on board of the "Swatara," flagship of the South Atlantic squadron, and in the East India squadron, from January, 1888, till February, 1891; ordered to the New York navy yard, May, 1891, as a member of the Experimental Board; July 2, 1892, detailed for special duty in the inspection of the tubes for the U. S. S. "Chicago," at the Syracuse Tube Co., Syracuse, N. Y., and as inspector of the construction of the boilers of the U. S. S. "Michigan" at the Lake Erie Boiler Works, Buffalo, N. Y.; ordered to duty on board of the vessel November 19, 1892; while in Chicago, attached to the Naval Exhibit; served as a delegate to the Boiler Makers' Convention of the United States and Canada, and to the Boiler Inspectors' Convention of the same. Promoted to be second assistant engineer August 3, 1895; to a first assistant engineer October 11, 1896; to a past assistant engineer February 24, 1874; to a chief engineer, with the rank of lieutenant-commander, September 7, 1885.] Robert Ingersoll Reid, who was educated at the Erie academy, graduated from the National Academy at Annapolis in 1876, and has been successively promoted to his present position, assistant engineer, United States navy; and Craig J. Reed, who was educated at the Erie Academy, and graduated from the law department of the Union University, at Albany, N. Y., with the degree of L. L. B., in May, 1877. He continued the reading of law under the preceptorship of the late Hon. Judge Henry Souther, and was admitted to practice in September, 1877. He pursued the practice of law for several years, and had during that period editorial connection with the Morning Dispatch, Weekly Gazette and Evening Herald, of Erie. He resides at 719 French street. During the spring and summer of 1884, while engaged in his legal practice, Mr. Reid became suddenly aware that the vision of his left eye had become slightly affected. He thought little of it at the time, but as the trouble showed no signs of abating for several weeks, he was finally forced to consult an oculist, from whom he learned with anything but pleasure that an atrophy of the optic nerve had set in and that in all probability he was destined for a very serious optical contest. The loss of eyesight to one of his temperament and bookish habits was a far from inviting outlook. When the autumn of that year arrived, bringing with it the presidential election, election day spent as challenger at the polls persuaded him that if anything could be done to fully restore his vision it was time to have it done. Hence immediately thereafter he went to New York to get what light he could on the subject. He got it in abundance. The diagnosis of a celebrated metropolitan specialist left him no doubt that he was not only booked for permanent blindness, but that even other scarcely more welcome physical shortcomings were in store for him. In short, he learned that the eye trouble was the forerunner of a latent spinal difficulty which must sooner or later involve the power of locomotion. Thus fortified against the future, he returned home. As he was at this time engaged to be married, his state of mind can be better imagined than described. The outlook as to that auspicious consummation began to darken to that of general gloom. It was certainly asking a good deal of any sensible woman to join forces in so lop-sided an enterprise. But the spirit that is said to laugh locksmiths to contempt proved adequate to the occasion, and the wedding day and total blindness engaged in a neck-and-neck contest and came out just about even. The blind goddess was no metaphor in this case. The quondam vestal who was to supply the perennial light for the unequally illuminated twain was Miss Hattie A. Landon, a native of Erie. It goes without saying that a woman courageous enough to venture upon such an alliance could not be of the scriptural foolish virgin type—lacking in oil—however she may have been otherwise lacking in the eyes of the prudent world.

Returning from the metropolis thus dimly enlightened, he lost but little time in fruitless lamentation. Procuring the services of a reader, he pursued the even tenor of his professional way, very much as if nothing had taken place. This continued for about two years, when, with but little warning, the second part of the medical prognosis put in its appearance, leaving him, so to say, with no legs to speak of. In other words, the nerve trouble took a downward turn and rendered his limbs useless for the purpose of locomotion, thereby putting him into a wheel-chair, apparently to stay. Upon the arrival of this latter catastrophe, he was forced to abandon his active pursuits, and, in the language of the superannuated Elia, he "went home forever."

It was, therefore, at his quiet home, in which he is always "at home to his friends," that the interview here published was had. Replying to a variety of questions, having reference to the daily habits and methods of the efficient blind man, Mr. Reid made answer: "I cordially avail myself of the opportunity presented. It is really quite astonishing, the density of the popular ignorance respecting the blind, their resources and methods. In the decade of my experience as such, I have met a vast number of persons, and these chiefly of the more intelligent classes, and of them all I do not now recall a single instance of an individual possessing so much as even the most elementary knowledge of the educational or other practical methods of daily use to the blind. At furthermost some hazy notion is entertained of the use of the embossed or raised letter method of instruction. Now, the fact is, that the raised letter and its uses bear about the same practical relation to the blind education as does the wooden plow of the middle ages to the magnificent steam mechanism of the agriculture of to-day. All these clumsy systems are now supplanted by what is known as the 'punctograph,' or point writing. The especial merit of this method is that it can be used interchangeably, as writing or printing, and is, in fact, at present so employed in all the institutes for the blind at home and abroad. It consists of points or perforations through paper sheets, producing a series of readable characters. It is written by means of a stylus held in the hand after the manner of a pencil. By placing the paper in the point slate, which consists of a wooden frame with a fastener at the upper end, the writing is produced by the use of steel tablets on the upper and under sides of the paper, the lower half containing the rows of perforations and the upper half a corresponding number of lines of cells through which the stylus passes in making the point characters. In this manner an alphabet of arbitrary point signs is created, which the blind student soon becomes familiar with, and is thus able to write matter which he himself can read. The American Printing House for the Blind at Louisville, Ky., is now turning out a variety of text and other books in punctograph and the days of the raised letter are certainly numbered.

"There are extant two systems of punctograph, known respectively as the Braille and the New York, the latter being the invention of Supt. Wm. B. Wait, the able and scholarly head of the New York Institute, and by him patriotically named after that beneficent institution. This last is rapidly becoming the favorite in this country, though the Braille (so called after its inventor, a Frenchman bearing that name), is much used here and is well nigh universal in the European countries. As the French system was the pioneer, its popularity is to be ascribed to that fact. Personally I am a violent partisan for the New York code, though I read and write both, as well as another point alphabet called the Roman (so called because it is a rude imitation of the capitals of the printed page). This last can be used for correspondence between the sightless and the seeing."

As to matter written by the blind and intended to be read by the sighted, the modern typewriter is the heretofore helmsman of the efficient blind person. Any of the key machines are readily mastered by the blind, and there are not wanting blind typewriter experts fully equipped to compete with his seeing brother in that now all-pervading employment. The Hall typewriter has also proved available for blind use. These two contrivances, punctograph and the typewriter, once thoroughly mastered, the intelligent blindee is moderately well equipped to enter the battle of life, far less handicapped than was his wont half a century ago. But to minimize his present disadvantage, his staunch friend, the ingenious Wait, has, within the past year, brought out the chef d'œuvre of blind devices, the kleidograph. This is none other than a punctograph writing machine. It is the same thing to point writing that the typewriter is to hand writing. It has all the speed and more than the compass of the standard typewriters. Every letter and every one of the signs of the elaborate punctograph code can be produced at a single stroke. By this machine the tedious hand process has been converted into an agreeable pastime, and dictated matter can be transcribed into legible blind literature almost as fast as it can be read. Thus you may readily gather that an up-to-date blindee is far from being the helpless incapable that the uninformed world esteems him. In short, he is so far as capability to manage his own affairs goes, fully the peer of the average seeing man. So far as my own small worldly affairs are concerned, except as to the one thing, reading, I am not necessarily dependent upon anyone for the least assistance in their management. Everything, from drawing a check to writing a book, if need be, can be accomplished easily and expeditiously by the one means or the other, or both combined.

By way of vindication of the foregoing rather sweeping generalization, Mr. Reed was led by easy stages into some allusions to his own achievements. They certainly do warrant his enthusiastic endorsement of the devices mentioned. It will be readily recalled by his many friends that in early manhood he was widely known for his oratorical and recitative efforts. His addresses at the bar and on many public occasions need scarcely be referred to here to awaken memories of them in our readers. His enforced retirement from active efforts in these lines has in no wise prevented him from holding to his old loves for the more private entertainment of his friends on suitable occasions. As a Shakesperian reader he has frequently appeared before appreciative gatherings during his customary outings, and his hearers have included the intelligent and cultivated from nearly all the cities round about. In reference to this edifying penchant and the difficulties that must necessarily lie in the way of its successful accomplishment, Mr. Reed said: "I suppose I have been asked an easy thousand times how it was possible for a blind man to accomplish such seemingly impossible memory feats. Say, for instance, the learning of a Shakesperian monologue. A monologue usually runs about an hour and a half in the delivery (anywhere from ten to twelve thousand words), and my perennial, but always mystifying, reply has been—punctograph. The process is very simple. I set a reader on the play I propose to monologue, having a pencil in his hand. As he reads along he is directed to mark the parts intended to be used. This done, the marked passages are re-read to me, having my kleidograph before me, and in due course of time the punctograph transcription, exactly as I intend to memorize and deliver it, is ready for studying. In this manner monologues of the length described, of Richard II, Richard III, Macbeth and Troilus and Cressida, have been transcribed and mastered, while one of Hamlet has been for some time in readiness for perusal. In addition to poetical transcriptions of a strictly business kind, I have many old favorites in prose and verse, extending from the Gospel of Matthew and the Enchiridion of Epictetus, to the latest contemporary literary excerpt that chances to please me. In short, whatever happens to take my fancy is marked and laid away to be transcribed at leisure. At present rate of accumulation there is not the slightest danger of running out of new matter for an indefinite period."

As to the typewriter, an equally creditable record was made out. "I have never ceased to be thankful," he continued, "that these great boons were, seemingly, thrown in my way by blind chance. During a summer outing early in my blind experience I happened to encounter Prof. A. L. Bohrer, of the Columbus, O., Institute for the Blind. He forthwith called my attention to these assistants to such defectives, and it was entirely due to his urging that I lost no time, upon my return home, in essaying their mastery. How long did it take me to become proficient with either or both? There, I confess, you touch me on a tender point. Frankly, I suspect I would have stood precious near the foot of the class, had there been more of me. As it was, I had only myself to compete with, and I can assure you he proved about all I could stand. The typewriter turned out to be no very tough nut to crack, but punctograph, whew! Time and again I was upon the point of giving it up. Recollect, I was no chicken when I got into this boat. And maturity of powers in other directions does not count in one's finger-tip. Do not ask me to confess how long it took me to become proficient in point. It wears me to recall those struggles. The authorities all agree, however, that children brought up on it cry for it, as against the old embossed letters. Suffice, that to me, despite the test it put me to to learn it, it has repaid me a thousand fold.

"Now, for the story of the typewriter.

"The sine qua non to a happy blind life, is never to be idle. No matter what you do, do something. The thing that an eccentric fate tossed in my path was, to say the least, unique. I fell to writing tragedies. I chanced, not long before, to have read an historical novel touching on life in Athens in the fourth century. Its dramatic possibilities struck me at that time, and, recurred to me again in my dilemma. I recalled enough of it for a ground work and the composition was forthwith begun. In process of time 'Chryseus of Athens' had bloomed into a full-fledged MSS. The prologue and some short extracts have only appeared in print. Its completion by natural transition led to a second similar diversion, and after due gestation 'Julian' made its unheralded entrance into this vale of tears. A third plunge, this time into the Mantuan terror of our school days, and Æneas and Dido flitted into esse. Of these, so far as I recollect, only one soliloquy from the first named has glittered in the public prints. Another gratiation into comparatively modern times, and 'Marie Antoinette' (of which I believe but one short piece of queenly rhetoric was betimes published) was reeled off. This, in turn, was the literary foster parent of that even bloodier effusion entitled 'Robespierre.' These topped off with a rather mild pousse cafe, bearing the title 'The Theorist.' The dramatic olla podrida boiled over at the conclusion of the first act of 'Lycurgus,' and like that truly great but greatly misunderstood law-giver and hero, disappeared into impenetrable gloom, but the typewriter was mastered.

"You have spoken of readers and reading. What is the nature of your reading?" we next ventured to ask. "It is of all sorts," was the reply. "Books, magazines, newspapers, what not. In the main, however, I think I may claim to be a book reader. One of my severest self restraints is moderation in the matter of book buying. True, I buy few works of a purely entertaining nature, though no one enjoys a good novel more than myself. Fortunately, my wife has the same infirmity, and she can be relied upon to keep me well up in contemporary fiction. The North American Review, The Forum and The Arena, I usually make it a point to thoroughly read, year in and year out. As to the other magazines, aside from the serials, they have to take their chance with the newspapers and other literary flotsam. A batch of metropolitan weeklies from different sections keep me in touch with the trend of public thought throughout the country. Still, books are my chief intellectual food. And right here, let me say, that not the least of my many blessings is my wife's aunt, Miss Adelia Barnhart, my fides Achates, to the last ditch. Aside from my regularly retained readers there is no one to whom I owe such perennial thanks as to this faithful and devoted woman. No matter what I want, from the driest and most interminable statistical table to the gloomiest treatise on metaphysics, she stands ready to tackle with the same cheerful patience. As to readers, experience soon taught me that the most satisfactory was an ambitious boy or young man, with a professional career in view. By the aid of such an one, and by observing regular hours, it is truly astonishing the amount of serious reading that can be accomplished within a given time. Through all this, however, two particular themes may be said to be kept pretty well to the fore. From earliest manhood the studies of government and of ethics have had peculiar charm for me. Everything written upon either of these is speedily perused. American political and Constitutional history—everything from the Federalist to the American Commonwealth, and from the Constitution itself to the latest income tax decision by the Federal Supreme Court, comes in for regular exploitation. I have a copy of the Constitution and the great Declaration in punctograph, and have memorized both times without number. Of this study I hope never to tire. As to the other speciality, ethics, truly herein is my soul's delight. If you would save your ears intact, I advise you to beat a retreat before tapping me upon this subject.

"None but the stupidest can escape observing that all the great political and social issues of the future are to be formulated along ethical lines. The man who is not keenly alive to this all-important premise were better out of the world than in it, so far as his future intellectual and moral growth are concerned. Not even electricity itself is destined to cut a more important figure in the material world than is the serious exploitation and application of the moral law to all the relations of human life. The very slums are teeming with it, and as to the intellectual classes, little as they may in some cases suspect it, they are fairly permeated with it, and all that is to make life worth living to any stratum of society, will depend entirely upon their relative appreciation of the importance of understanding what morality is and living up to that knowledge. Philosophy henceforth must cease to be the province of the dreamer and the seer. Skepticism and the lukewarm fads that pass for piety or its reverse, must wax into convictions strong and deep. This 'mighty maze, but not without a plan,' must be examined and its laws explained. Once this is done, the dullest soul alive will drink in virtue as the sun the dew. This world, so fitted for the growth of knaves, must come to be the garden spot for truth. The renaissance of Eden, close at hand, will differ from the vapid one of yore, in that the devil will have fled the chase. When ignorance is clearly recognized, the sole and only Satan feared of men will, like the Moor, be occupationless. All classes from their hearts must hold with Pope: 'The proper study of mankind is man.' God is quite equal, I suspect, to teach the race of man its duty toward Himself. Our prime concern is for our fellow men. To make oneself an all-round worthless man is no mean aspiration; try it once, and in the end, if God be not your friend, the times are out of joint for evermore. When this is so, vox populi suprema lex shall stand in nature with the will divine. 'There are, indeed, as Hamlet says, 'more things in Heaven and earth than are dreamt of in your philosophy.' But there is precious little that is worth knowing in this world that philosophy can not cast light upon. And when the open book of the wondrous past shall cease to be the practically sealed book that it is today, the races of these and future times will have begun how to learn. 'In the corrupted currents of this world,' the human being whom fate has chanced to maim, is by its rude, nay, barbarous decrees, condemned to sink, if he attempt a part. But thanked be God, there is another sphere—a world within a world—where the action lies in its true nature. This is the sphere of ethics. Herein it matters not if one be blind, if one be lame or halt, or be deprived of half his organs, even though he be as short of members as an oyster, the measure of his rights is just the same. All that I have written of late years has been in the nature of ethical discussion. I take small interest, and least pleasure, in aught beside. Here is freedom, or at least the hope of it, and such poor talent as the Lord has given me I purpose for the future to employ in doing what I can, however little, in voicing forth the truth which makes us whole. One thing I beg of you in parting, this: However much or little you may choose to say concerning me and my affairs, say what you say in language light and gay. The blind are proverbially cheerful. Our infirmities are always nicely adjusted to our capacity to bear them. The blindee that is worthy of his state accepts it at its best and is content to 'be in love with night and pay no worship to the garish day.'"—[Ed.

Hon. Isaac B. Gara, the veteran journalist and trusted official, was born at Soudersburg, Lancaster county, Pa., October 28, 1821. He was the son of Patrick and Mary Gara, respectively of Irish and German descent. His education was received at the Lancaster county schools. He entered the office of the Examiner and Herald in Lancaster, to learn the printing trade, and remained three years. At the age of 19, he published a Whig paper in Bellefonte, when Andrew G. Curtin, then a rising young lawyer, became interested in him, and his friendship continued through life. A few years later he connected himself with a Whig paper in Lock Haven, Pa., and then going to Galena, Ill., he became editor and part proprietor in a semi-weekly paper. In September, 1846, he came to Erie, where he located for life. He purchased an interest in the Erie Gazette from Hon. Joseph M. Sterrett, who had founded the paper in 1820. The firm of Sterrett & Gara was then formed, with Mr. Gara as writing editor. As the organ of the Whig and afterwards the Republican party, the Gazette exercised a great influence in the county and Northwestern Pennsylvania. This management continued until 1856, when he assumed sole proprietorship and editor-in-chief. It not only gave Mr. Gara a wide influence, but led to a large acquaintance, especially in Western Pennsylvania and at the State capital. During several presidential campaigns, the railroad war and the war of the Rebellion, the Gazette exercised a marked influence on the moulding of public opinion. Mr. Gara filled a number of offices. He served as enrolling commissioner during the State draft, as trustee of the Marine Hospital and trustee of the Normal School, and as trustee of the Erie academy. In January, 1867, he was appointed by Gov. Geary deputy secretary of the Commonwealth, a place he resigned after two years and three months' service to accept from President Grant the Erie postoffice. He was reappointed in 1873. After his official service he continued to reside in Erie, where his ability as a writer, indicated by frequent contributions to the journals, his public spirit as a citizen and his characteristic courtesy, made him a most popular and respected citizen. He was married in October, 1853, to Miss Calista Ingersoll, of Erie, a lady of fine education and of marked artistic and executive ability. Her zeal and activity in the promotion of charitable work and the advancement of kindred interests, were continuous and successful. Perhaps her greatest success and most lasting work were in the securing of the site and the erection of the Home of the Friendless in Erie. In this her best endeavors were enlisted with success which will long connect her name with one of the best organized and well sustained charities of the city. After Mr. Gara's retirement from the postoffice his life was a typical one, as showing how usefulness and ease could be combined with quiet dignity. In his tasteful home, his days were quietly passed in the society of his devoted wife and a large circle of friends. His love for newspaper work kept him in touch with the current questions of the day. Correspondence, interchange of visits, trips to pleasant resorts, and frequent entertainment of guests, made his latter days pass pleasantly. About a year ago, Mr. Gara, never strong, was taken seriously ill. Though attended and watched with unwearied care, it seemed hard for him to rally. His strength declined from day to day, until on the afternoon of June 15, 1895, he quietly sank to rest. Few persons have been longer conspicuous to the public eye, fewer still, have passed away with such general expressions of regard, which will long indicate the estimation in which Mr. Gara was held by the people of Erie.

Hon. Gideon J. Ball was the eldest son of Sheldon and Jane (Sterrett) Ball. He was born in Erie March 29, 1811. In early life he acquired the art of the silversmith, and was one of the firm of Ball & Ford, which did business for some time on French street in Erie. Part of his early manhood was passed in Buffalo. He returned to Erie and was about the year 1836 elected clerk of the town council, which position he held until he entered public life at Harrisburg. In 1847 he was elected to the legislature from Erie county, and re-elected in 1848. The election in 1848, under the leadership of Taylor as a candidate for president, caused a Whig majority on joint ballot in the State Legislature, and led to the election of a Whig State treasurer by the Legislature. To this responsible position Mr. Ball was elected in 1849, and he acceptably filled the place for one year. He was then appointed chief clerk of the sixth auditor of the postoffice department at Washington, and during most of the time was acting auditor. He returned to Erie and was elected a Representative to the Legislature from Erie county at the successive elections of 1853-4-5-6. During this time he changed his residence from the city to his farm in Mill Creek, to the improvement of which he gave much time and thought, as is now most pleasingly apparent in the fine appearance of his farm on the West Eight street road. He returned to the city of Erie, and was again elected to the legislature in 1860, being his seventh election by the same constituency; each time with a different colleague. The questions to come before this Legislature were of momentous importance. Not only was the war foreshadowed by the election of Lincoln, but all the upheaval which would ensue. The repeal of the tonnage tax, and legislation for the completion of the Philadelphia R. R. were among the great measures to be considered. Mr. Ball's experience and parliamentary skill were needed. He obeyed the summons. At the organization of the Legislature he was offered the chairmanship of ways and means. He declined this honor, but took a leading part in the important legislation in this perhaps most momentous session of the Legislature since the existence of the Commonwealth. It was a gratification to himself and friends at the adjournment to feel that while every assistance had been furnished by the State in aid of the war, and that the completion of the Philadelphia R. R. seemed so near at hand. After the adjournment of the Legislature he was appointed paymaster in the army, with the rank of major, and entered upon his duties. Having served through the war he returned to his home, but for some years performed the duties of an important land agency at Kenovo, on the line of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Under the strain of his service in the war and the important work of his land office his health gave way. He struggled under repeated shocks, from each of which he emerged with less prospects of recuperation. He was most happy in his domestic relation. In early life he married Miss Emeline Hallenback. Their family of four daughters and one son constituted a happy household, assiduous in their devotion to their parents. Of these Misses Helen and Osie are at home; Mrs. George Burton resides in Erie, and Charles E., the only son, is a part of the household. Miss Frank, the youngest daughter, died some years since. Major Ball was of commanding form, wiry physique and magnetic presence. He seemed the beau ideal of a parliamentary leader; of inspiring presence, versatile in resource, that by an experience and training was excelled by few in our State, he possessed many of those qualities that on a large field gave to Henry Clay so much of fame, and led many to trace a resemblance between himself and James G. Blaine. But his keen activities wore upon a frame, which though dominated with great will power, was not made of iron. His long battle with infirmity came to a close and his career ended in death. Few better understood Erie's interests, fewer still toiled harder for her advancement; and now the record of his life is the pleasing contemplation of his devoted family, and its retrospect the agreeable study of those of his surviving friends who understood him.

The David Burton Family.—DAVID BURTON (deceased), son of John and Phoebe (Wooster) Burton, was born in Connecticut, February 16, 1793. He came about 1811 to Erie county, where he spent his life. He was active and energetic, successively as wagon maker, meat dealer, dealer in cattle and coal, and was widely known. He served in the war of 1812 and aided in building Perry's fleet. Mr. Burton married Elizabeth Irvine, born January 1, 1797, who came to Erie county from Lycoming county, Pennsylvania. They had nine children: Peter E., born March 6, 1816, sheriff of Erie county, who died October 19, 1863; John, born October 13, 1818, died April 23, 1863; Andrew, born May 26, 1823, died June 19, 1894, treasurer of the city of Erie; Wooster, born April 16, 1828, died October 28, 1856; A. P., funeral director and undertaker, of Erie; Hannah, wife of M. A. Dunning, born September 16, 1825; Mary Burton, born May 10, 1827, died June 12, 1829; Elsey, born September 19, 1831, died January 15, 18—; Charlotte E., born April 4, 1839, is still living. Mr. Burton died in Erie county, January 30, 1869, and Mrs. Burton, May 9, 1875. A number of their grandchildren are in active life and several in business in the city and county of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Burton were two of the original class, which, formed in 1826, was the nucleus of the First M. E. Church in Erie, now the Seventh Street Church.

Alured P. Burton, the leading funeral director of Erie, was born in Erie, September 4, 1836, and is a son of David and Elizabeth (Irvine) Burton, natives of Connecticut and Pennsylvania respectively. His father and grandfather came to Erie county about 1811, and located in Mill Creek township, south of Erie, where his father cleared a large farm. His father assisted in building Perry's fleet, and was a member of militia during the war of 1812. Later he took up his permanent residence in Erie, where for many years he was engaged in various kinds of business. The family consisted of ten children, four of whom are living: Hannah M., Mrs. M. A. Dunning, Erie; Sarah, Mrs. A. P. Durlin, of Erie; Alured P. and Charlotte E., widow of the late Dr. J. Flouts, of Jersey Shore, Pa., and now residing in Erie. Mr. Burton received his education in the public schools and academy of Erie, and at the age of 14 years began to learn the printing trade, which he followed seven years. He was for some time engaged with his father and brother, Andrew, in the coal business, and was assistant postmaster in the Erie postoffice two and a half years during the postmastership of Judge Sterrett. In 1876 he engaged in the undertaking business, which he has since followed, and in which he has been highly successful. He is one of the most thorough and competent funeral directors in Northwestern Pennsylvania, and his trade is chiefly with the better class of people in Erie and vicinity. He is fully conversant with all the latest methods and devices of embalming, and has the keenest regard for the ethics of the business. He is past president of the Tri-County and the State Funeral Directors' Association, and is a member of the National Funeral Directors' Association. In 1895, Mr. Burton was, without solicitation, appointed by Gov.

Hastings a member of the first State Board of Undertakers, and at the first meeting of that body, held in Philadelphia, November 1, he was chosen treasurer. Mr. Burton was married October 1, 1857, to Miss Susan M., daughter of George W. Brecht, of East Mill Creek. This happy union has been blessed with six children, five of whom are living: Charles H., traveling salesman, with headquarters at Chicago; George D., clerk in the office of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company; Lewis E., stenographer in the office of Jutte & Co., Pittsburg, and Harry and William R., who are associated with their father in business. Mr. and Mrs. Burton are members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Erie, of which they are active workers and generous supporters. In politics Mr. Burton is a Republican, and has served his city as a member of the common council. He is a Knight Templar and Thirty-third degree Scottish Rite Mason, and has held nearly all the offices of those degrees.

Spencer S. Burton, coal dealer, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, January 19, 1846. He is a son of the late Andrew Burton, whose personal history is contained in this volume. S. S. Burton was educated in the public schools of Erie, and when but a school boy, in 1862, went into the naval service on the "Fairplay." After one year's service on this vessel, one of the "Mosquito fleet," which plied the waters of the Tennessee, Ohio and Cumberland rivers, he returned to Erie and enlisted in the 111th P. V. I. Five months later, while engaged in breastworks building at Buzzard's Roost, Ga., he was injured, and was thereafter and until mustered out at the close of the war, on detached duty. Returning to Erie, he entered the employ of Burton Bros. & Co., wholesale and retail coal dealers. Several years later he purchased this company's retail business, and has ever since then and is still engaged in that business, having latterly added thereto the handling of feed, fertilizers, etc. He was married February 13, 1873, to Mary A., daughter of the late Andrew Cosper, farmer, of Mill Creek township, Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Burton have two children: Lois S. and Sarah E.; he resides at 355 West Seventh street. Mr. Burton is a member of the Masonic Fraternity, Knights of Honor, A. O. U. W., National Union, Royal Arcanum and other orders.

Frank C. Burton, chairman of the Bay State Iron Works, Erie, Pa., born in Greenfield, Erie county, Pa., February 13, 1857, is a son of the late Andrew Burton, a biographical sketch of whom appears in this volume. Frank C. Burton was educated in the public schools and Academy of Erie, and then entered the employ of Burton & Siegel, coal dealers, with which firm he was associated until 1879. In that year he went to Oberlin, Ohio, where he spent five months in the study of telegraphy, then going to Colorado to accept a position as telegrapher on the Denver division of the Kansas Pacific R. R. In 1882 he returned to Erie to accept a position with the Stearns Manufacturing Company, with which he was identified until 1890. He then became one of the incorporators of the Burton Machine Company, of which he is now secretary. In 1891 he became identified with the Bay State Iron Works, Limited, acting as secretary of that company until 1893, when it was elected its chairman. He was married December 21, 1888, to Mary M.,

Jacob P. Walther

daughter of John D. Besley, formerly of Erie, now a resident of Toledo, Ohio. Mr. Burton is a member of the Royal Arcanum and National Union.

John Burton (deceased), was born October 15, 1809, in Winsted, Litchfield county, Conn. His father, John Burton, was born in Old Stratford, Conn., and came to Erie county in 1811, settling on the farm afterward owned and occupied by his son, John. While in Connecticut, he was engaged in shoe-making and cattle dealing. The breaking out of the war of 1812, made shipping almost impossible, and Mr. Burton lost heavily on a herd of cattle. He was consequently a poor man when he settled in the wilds of Mill Creek township, Erie county. He was married to Phoebe Wooster, of Connecticut. The result of this union was Sallie, married to Spencer Shattuck; they lived in Mill Creek township till death separated them; Silas, married to Lucretia Miller; he died in Buffalo; David was one of the first coal dealers in Erie; Polly married Calvin Foot, and died in Mill Creek township. Mrs. Phoebe Burton was a member of the Methodist Church, and her two brothers, Daniel and James, were local ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Church. On her demise, Mr. Burton married Hannah Miller, born in Torrington, Litchfield county, Conn., in 1774, and died in 1850. To this union were born William, John, Phoebe, Matilda and Lewis. The former attended the county schools, became able to teach, and with the means thus obtained secured text-books, and recited his lessons to Rev. Robert Reid, of Erie. He subsequently graduated from the Wesleyan University, of Middletown, Conn., and soon after engaged in Allegheny College, of Meadville, Pa., as teacher of languages and mathematics, and in the meantime occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church. Later he prepared himself for the Protestant Episcopal Church, and took charge of St. John's Church, of Cleveland, Ohio, and was afterward transferred to Tecumseh, Mich., where he died in 1856. Lewis attended the county schools, and through means furnished principally by his father, graduated at Meadville, and then preached in the Methodist Episcopal organization at Allegheny City, after having had charge of a similar church at New Castle, Pa. He finally joined the Protestant Episcopal Church, and succeeded his brother in St. John's Church, Cleveland. Here he established two strong branches, known as "St. Mark's" and "All Saints," and had charge of the former; his son Lewis is pastor of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Richmond, Va.; Phoebe Burton married J. B. Stevens, of Harbor Creek; they both died in Illinois; Matilda (deceased) married J. Johnson; John Burton and his consorts were active members of the Methodist Church. He attended the country schools as much as was convenient, aside from the duties required of him by his parents. He was married in 1834 to Charlotte E., daughter of Thomas and Huldah Barnes, natives of Columbia county, New York. This union resulted in four children: J. Antoinette, wife of R. H. Arbuckle; Phoebe J., wife of Jacob Warfel; Lydia M., wife of Heman Sprague, of Toledo; Laura E., deceased when seven years old. His wife dying in 1870, Mr. Burton married, October 8, 1876, Mrs. Margaret McNair, widow of William E. McNair, and daughter of Jeremiah and Jane Montgomery Burford, natives, the former of Fayette county, the latter of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Burton had six children by her first marriage, two now living—Margaret J. and James E. She is a Presbyterian, while her second husband was an energetic Methodist, to which organization he was attached fifty years. He cast his first presidential vote for Andrew Jackson and was always a Democrat. He served as school director, road commissioner, and his full share of other small offices, where pay is not considered. Mr. Burton was the possessor of quite a little fortune, which he alone mainly accumulated by dealings in real estate and stock, together with farming. He died March 30, 1886.

J. E. Burton, farmer, Erie, was born in 1848 in the city of Erie, son of Peter and Sarah (Parker) Burton. Peter E. Burton, a native of this township, was at one time deputy sheriff, and afterward, by election, sheriff of Erie county, serving two terms. He moved subsequently to the farm on the Buffalo road, where he carried on a dairy in connection. His father, David, a native of Connecticut, was a resident of Erie city for several years. Peter E. Burton and wife were parents of eight children, five now living—D. H. Burton (married to Mrs. Whitley, a widow), Isadore (wife of B. B. Whitley; have five children—Jennie, Morrison, Alice, Ray K. and Benjamin B.), Alice (wife of C. F. Diefenbach; have three children—Bessie, Sarah and Harry), Elizabeth (wife of C. D. Riblet; have two children—Ruth and Burton), and our subject, who was married, in 1880, to Ella, daughter of N. W. Russell. To this union were born two children—Florence Edna and Sarah Edith. Mr. Burton keeps cows, and supplies a portion of Erie city with dairy produce. His farm is located on the Buffalo road in Mill Creek township. He is a member of the K. of M.

J. B. Burton, farmer, postoffice, Erie, was born in Columbia county, N. Y., in 1849. At the age of five years he was adopted by John Burton, an old resident of this township, and was given his name. He was educated in the public schools and began early in life farming and milling pursuits. His foster parents, John and Charlotte (Barnes) Burton resided during their married life on the farm now owned and occupied by R. H. Arbuckle. The former died in 1877. Their children were: Antoinette, wife of R. H. Arbuckle; Phoebe, wife of Jacob Warfel, of Erie, and Lydia M., wife of H. C. Sparger, of Toledo, Ohio. October 31, 1872, J. B. married Sophrona, daughter of Isaac Wolf, of Mill Creek township. She died May 1, 1891, leaving one daughter, Edith L. Burton. J. B. Burton began on his present farm of seventy acres in the fall of 1883, and besides managing the same has carried on quite an extensive milling business, having a saw-mill, cider-mill and feed-mill combined. Mr. Burton has been an important factor in many of the municipal affairs of the township, served as assessor for three years, and is counted among its most worthy and progressive citizens. In politics he is a Democrat.

Benjamin Grant (deceased), was born April 24, 1822, in Wayne township, Erie county, son of Joseph P. Grant, a farmer of that township; he received his education at the Waterford academy, and taught school several years to obtain means to enter upon the study of law, which he commenced with Galbraith & Grabani in Erie, and having completed his course was admitted to the Erie bar October 26, 1846. In 1849 he formed a partnership with Judge Thompson, which continued until a short time before the latter's election to the Supreme bench. In all his extended and successful professional career in the several Federal and State courts, Col. Grant's ability as a lawyer, skill as a pleader and fidelity to his clients were conspicuous as well as widely and most favorably known; he had also a strong taste for military matters, and was long one of the most efficient members of the Wayne Guards, and upon the breaking out of the war of the rebellion he was equally active in association with the late Col. McLane in raising the Erie regiment, of which he was lieutenant-colonel, and with which he served until it was mustered-out of service. On returning from camp, among other literary efforts, he prepared the reports known as "Grant's Cases," a standard work among the legal fraternity of Pennsylvania. The Colonel was for many years chairman of the Erie County Law Library; was secretary of the Erie Gas Company; nearly all his active life a vestryman of St. Paul's Church; in politics, a Democrat. He built the block on West Park, near Peach street, and with Mr. Metcalf twice erected the block on French street known as Wayne Hall; he died November 24, 1877, aged 55 years 7 months. His father was born February 18, 1793, married March 22, 1821, to Clarissa Loomis; came to Erie city soon after the war of 1812, in which he served as a commissioned officer, and died in 1868. F. W. Grant, his son, has been a member of the Select Council, is U. S. Commissioner and clerk of the U. S. Court, and resides in Erie.

The Holliday Family.—SAMUEL HOLLIDAY, SR., seemingly the first white settler of Springfield township, was a native of Franklin county, Pennsylvania. His father, James Holliday, was murdered by Indians in the early settlement of Pennsylvania. Samuel came to Erie county in 1796, and purchased 700 acres of land in the borders of Lake Erie. He returned to Franklin county that fall and married Janette Campbell. He came the next spring with his wife, settled in the wilderness and built the first cabin in Springfield. He made valuable improvements and built mills, which were burned in 1836. They reared a family of three sons and three daughters, of whom were Samuel Holliday, born September 27, 1805, who spent his life in that township; he was married in 1840 to Elizabeth Porter, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Porter, among the first settlers of Girard. Samuel and Elizabeth Holliday had eight children, of whom six survived. Of these were Robert P., civil engineer, a resident of Erie county; Capt. Charles C. (lately deceased), who was born April 30, 1843; Charles C., after being educated at Edinboro and Conneaut, Ohio, served in the late war under Col. William Blakely and Gen. Sheridan; he afterward attended the Michigan University at Ann Arbor; he married, October 27, 1881, Mary C. Blakely, of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, daughter of his old commander. He died in 1893, leaving three children. Benjamin W., Wallace, Francis J., and Ada are the surviving children of Samuel and Elizabeth Holliday. William Holliday, son of Samuel Holliday, sr., married Fanny C. Post, a native of Connecticut. They had four children, among whom were Major Samuel V. Holliday, who was born October 2, 1841, in Springfield, Erie county; Eliza J., widow of D. M. Richardson, late of New York State; James C. and William P. Major Samuel V. Holliday attended academies in Erie county from 1853 to 1858.

He entered the third class in the Pennsylvania State Agricultural College in Center county, in 1859, and graduated in 1861; he farmed until his appointment in 1863 or '64 as additional paymaster of the United States army. In 1865 he was ordered to Ft. Monroe, Virginia, and afterward to Norfolk and Richmond. In the same year he was appointed lieutenant colonel of volunteers by brevet, and December 1st was mustered out of service. In 1866 Major Holliday was engaged in farming and stock raising, which he continued until 1882. On November 10, 1864, he married Margaret S. Gould, of Springfield, Pa. To this union were born: William Morris, Anna G., Evan Lee and Fanny L. Major Holliday was elected prothonotary of Erie county in 1884, re-elected in 1884 and served six years. He was appointed commissioner of customs of the United States by President Harrison in 1889 and served four years. He has served as P. E. C. of Cache Commandery, No. 27, K. T., of Conneaut, Ohio, and is a 32d degree Mason. He now resides in Miles Grove, Erie county.

The Himrod Family.—The Himrod family is identified with the settlement and development of Erie county. Their active interests in public matters, in Church and in state, in peace and in war, and in the various lines of industry, have identified them with the county's settlement, its public improvements and many of its leading industries.

Aaron Himrod was the pioneer of the family in Erie county, and the progenitor of most, if not all, of this name. He was born in Badmister, Somerset county, N. J., August 18, 1759, and married Miss Isabella Kirke, April 14, 1789. He lived in Turbot township, Northumberland county, Pa., from his boyhood until his removal to Erie county, Pennsylvania. He was a soldier of the Revolution, and was in the battles of Trenton, Princeton and other engagements. He died in Waterford township, Erie county, Pa., December 4, 1820, in his 62d year. Isabella Kirke was born in Paxton township, Dauphin county, Pa., September 25, 1766, and was married to Mr. Aaron Himrod, April 14, 1789. She died in Waterford township, Erie county, Pa., April 22, 1841, in her 75th year. Following are the children of Aaron and Isabella Himrod: Moses Himrod, born in Turbot township, Northumberland county, Pa., January 19, 1790, married Miss Nancy Latimore, January 15, 1816. They reared a family of eight children. He was a captain in the war of 1815; was a prominent farmer, and successively held nearly all the town offices. His son, Aaron M., married in 1853, Miss Mary J., daughter of David Cook, of Venango county, Pennsylvania. They had seven children: M. L., married but nine months to Miss Mary Mitchell, when he died; Eva A.; Alfred C., died at the age of 21 years; Lee, Frank H., Bell and Carl. Mr. Himrod owned 120 acres of well improved land, which was mostly cleared by himself and on which was a sawmill. Mr. and Mrs. Himrod were members of the Presbyterian Church. He died in Waterford township, September 26, 1886, in his 79th year.

William Himrod was born in Turbot township, Northumberland county, Pa., May 19, 1791, and married Miss Aurelia H. Reed, a granddaughter of Col. Seth Reed, the first settler of Erie, May 31, 1825. Mrs. Himrod died in 1844. He afterwards married

Mrs. Phœbe (Vincent) Bradley, July 9, 1845. He died in Erie, June 21, 1873, in his 83d year. He was prominent in business and religious circles in Erie for a generation. He was sagacious and foresighted, and comprehended the needed changes that were impending in the fabric of our political system, as well as the possibilities of the future. To the solution of these problems he brought to bear his great natural powers. He was a remarkable man, positive, systematic and energetic. He was a pioneer in the iron industry in Erie. He was one of the firm of Johnson, Himrod & Co., and later Vincent, Himrod & Co., established in 1841. Scores and perhaps hundreds of Erie men owed to his energy the acquisition of a trade and of a home. Their firm erected and operated the first blast furnace in Erie about the year 1843, at the corner of Twelfth and French streets. For the life of a generation he maintained a school for the destitute and colored; for nearly a score of years (including the period of the fugitive slave law) at the peril of imprisonment, he kept a depot for recovering and forwarding fugitive slaves. His home for nearly half a century, with its old-fashioned hospitality and genial welcome, was at the corner of French and Second streets, where his Sunday-school was established December 22, 1839, for the colored and destitute. It is still maintained and called "The Himrod Mission," under the active supervision of the inheritor of his name, prompted by the same impulses which, for more than half a century, have been conspicuously exercised for the elevation of mankind. Andrew Himrod, born in Turbot township, September 9, 1792, married Miss Sarah Crawford. He died in Indiana, August 19, 1819, in his 27th year. Mary Foster Himrod (deceased), born in Turbot township, August 13, 1794, was married to Amos T. Woodward, Esq., September 1, 1817. Eleanor McGuire Himrod (deceased) was born in Turbot township, March 12, 1796, and married Mr. Samuel Phœnix March 20, 1822. John Himrod, born in Turbot township, July 17, 1797, married Rebecca Leech June 28, 1827. His second marriage, to Nancy Boyd, was November 25, 1862. He died in Waterford township, March 20, 1880, in his 83d year. Catherine Himrod (deceased), born in Waterford township, January 6, 1799, was married to Samuel Gill. Sarah Himrod, born in Waterford township, July 2, 1800, was married to Mr. John C. Smith, April 4, 1862. She died at Waterford, Erie county, Pa., January 30, 1873, in her 73d year. Simon Himrod was born in Waterford township, January 3, 1802, and married Jane Moore, February 13, 1829. He died in Waterford, May 13, 1874, in his 73d year. Isabella Himrod was born in Waterford township, March 17, 1804, and died at the place of her birth March 27, 1880, in her 77th year. Hon. David Himrod, born in Waterford, May 26, 1806, was married to Miss Abigail Patton, July 4, 1833. He was prominent as a contractor of public works and improvements, and a member of the firm of Vincent, Himrod & Co., which succeeded Himrod & Co., whose industrial plant in Erie, established in 1841, did so much towards reviving the drooping prospects of the city, which had been sorely blighted by the financial disasters of 1836-7 and were so long dormant. The firm erected a blast furnace, the first in Erie county, procuring the ore from the vicinity. He was the inventor or first to introduce a new system of smelting iron ore with bituminous coal. He was elected a member of assembly from Erie county in 1857, and served acceptably.

His striking resemblance to Gen. Simon Cameron was remarkable. He died in Waterford, Pa., November 27, 1877, in his 72d year. Martha Himrod was born in Waterford township, Erie county, Pa., January 4, 1808. She was married to Mr. Thomas Moore, December 2, 1834. She died in Waterford, Pa., February 25, 1861, in her 54th year. Aaron Melick Himrod was born in Waterford, Pa., June 28, 1809. He died young. The children of William and Aurelia (Reed) Himrod were: Philena Hulbert Himrod (deceased), born in Erie, Pa., April 17, 1826; George Himrod, born in Erie, April 17, 1831, married Miss Martha M. Vincent, June 28, 1863, and is now living at Lockport, Ill.; Aaron Himrod (deceased), born in Erie, April 17, 1831; Samuel Himrod, born in Erie, March 17, 1834, lives in Chicago, Ill., and William Himrod, born in Erie, May 13, 1841, was married in Erie, December 11, 1862, to Miss Julia A., eldest daughter of Hon. Besley and Rachael (Evans) Arbuckle. He has been in the industrial and business circles of Erie for the past four years, has been employed as city secretary and treasurer of the board of water commissioners of the city of Erie. Presley Arbuckle Himrod was born in Chicago, Ill., October 23, 1863. He is secretary of the Erie cemetery, and in the firm of Hardwick & Himrod has taken a position as one of Erie's active business men. William DeWitt Himrod was born in Erie, October 31, 1865. He was married in Columbia, S. C., to Miss Edwina Olivette Youmans, April 2, 1891. Harry Reed Himrod (deceased); Ray Himrod, born in Erie, June 16, 1872; Allison Himrod, born in Erie, March 2, 1876; Braiding Himrod, born in Erie, March 11, 1868, and Helen Louise Himrod (deceased); Helen Tilliglast Himrod, born in Columbia, S. C., July 11, 1894.

William Himrod, secretary and treasurer of the commissioners of waterworks in the city of Erie, was born in Erie, May 13, 1841. He is a son of the late William and Aurelia H. (Reed) Himrod. The elder William Himrod was born in Turbot township, Northumberland county, Pa., May 19, 1791. His father, Aaron Himrod, located with his family in Waterford township, Erie county, about 1799, and there spent the remainder of his life as a farmer, and died December 4, 1870. His wife, who was Isabella Kirk, died April 22, 1841. William Himrod, sr., came to Erie in 1810. He was a carpenter and joiner up to 1840, when he was associated in the establishment of the stove, agricultural implement and engine manufacturing works of Johnson, Himrod & Co., a business which continued to be carried on successfully and successfully under the firm names, Vincent, Himrod & Co., Vincent, Tibbals, Shirk & Co., and Tibbals, Shirk & Whitehead, and which today has its outcome in the extensive manufacturing plants, the Chicago and Erie Stove Works and the Erie City Iron Works. William Himrod, sr., made a name that was above reproach, and was a man of the strictest integrity. Progressive in spirit, every good and worthy work found in him a zealous friend and staunch supporter. He was one of the city fire wardens in 1853; a member of the common council in 1856-7; a director in the branch U. S. bank, and one of the incorporators of the Erie cemetery. He was a pronounced and active Abolitionist at a time when that name was a term of general reproach. Throughout a long term of years he rendered all the assistance in his power to fugitive slaves, often sheltering and providing for numbers of them in his own home until they could have safe convoy to Canada. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and became one of its elders. Later he severed his connection with that congregation to become a member of the Park Presbyterian Church. His last act before leaving the former church was to subscribe $1,000 to its building fund. He was an elder of the Park Church until his death. An enduring monument to his memory is the Himrod Mission Sunday-school (now located at the corner of French and Front streets), which he organized December 22, 1839. At that time the question of how to give Bible instruction to the colored people was a harassing one to some of the pastors of Erie. They recognized their duty in that direction, but race prejudice was too strong for them, and the problem remained unsolved until William Himrod, at his own expense, founded the mission which now bears his name. He continued to be superintendent of this Sunday-school as long as he lived, and upon his decease, June 21, 1873, he was succeeded by his son, William, who has ever since had charge of it. The wife of William Himrod, sr., Aurelia H. Reed, was the daughter of George W. Reed, a son of Col. Seth Reed, one of the first settlers of Erie county (see memoirs of the Reed family contained in this volume). William Himrod, jr., received his initial schooling at Miss Coover's, then attended the East Ward school, Erie Academy, and the academy in Waterford, then the best educational institution in the county. Immediately thereafter he became one of the engineering corps of the Sunbury and Erie (now the Philadelphia and Erie) R. R. In 1860 he went to Chicago, where he was engaged in bookkeeping for five years. Returning to Erie, he entered the employ of the Erie and Pittsburgh R. R., holding the position for some years of clerk of the motive power department. In 1869 he was associated in the establishment of a boot and shoe manufacturing business, first under the firm name of Arbuckle & Himrod, and subsequently the Keystone Boot and Shoe Co., limited, of which Mr. Himrod was manager. Upon the failure of this company, he was appointed by the United States government as inspector of dredging in Erie harbor. Upon the completion of this work he was made buyer of lumber for the Erie Car Works, and was engaged in that capacity until 1889. During the following two years he carried on a pig iron, coal, coke, and general brokerage business. In 1891 he was appointed to his present position, secretary and treasurer of the commissioners of waterworks in Erie. He was married December 11, 1862, to Julia A., daughter of the late Presley Arbuckle, a native of Erie county, whose father, William G. Arbuckle, was among the earliest settlers of the county. Five children born of this union survive: Presley A. Himrod, treasurer of the Erie Manufacturing and Supply Co.; W. DeWitt Himrod, engraver and printer, who married Olivette, daughter of Gen. Leroy Youmans of Columbia, S. C. (they have one child, Helen Tillinghast H.); Kay Himrod, an office employe of the Pennsylvania Gas Company; J. Allison Himrod, engaged in business with William DeWitt Himrod, and Harwood Brading Himrod, a student at the Erie high school. The family reside at 922 Myrtle street, and attend the Central Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. and Mrs. William Himrod were among the original members. Mr. Himrod was for a number of years a member of the board of trustees of that congregation. He is a 33d degree Mason and of the York Rite; is Past Master of Tyrian Lodge, No. 382; Senior Past High Priest, Temple Chapter, No. 215; Senior Past Thrice Illustrious Grand Master, Jerusalem Council, No. 33; Past Eminent Commander of Mount Olivet Commandery, No. 30. In the Scottish Rite he is Senior Past Thrice Potentate Grand Master, Presque Isle Lodge of Perfection. He was nine years District Deputy Grand Master for Erie county. Mr. Himrod was chosen May 5, 1874, to succeed his father as one of the incorporators of the Erie cemetery, and on May 4, 1886, was elected one of its board of managers.

Charles Brandes, M. D., office and residence 124 and 126 East Eighth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Hanover, Germany, March 29, 1818. He is the son of Frederick and Hannah (Hotop) Brandes, both natives of Hanover. They reared a family of twelve children, eleven sons and one daughter, all of whom reached the age of maturity. Dr. Brandes, who was the seventh son, received his early education in the schools of Hanover. At the age of 14 he was sent to Brunswick, where he received a regular classical course of schooling. At college Dr. Brandes was a diligent student and was graduated in the regular classical course, or rather in the literary and medical course at Gottingen University, Hanover, in 1843. He then entered the government service, where he engaged in the practice of medicine for eighteen months, which fully fitted him for his profession. Frederick Brandes, the father of Charles, was left an ample fortune by his father, Anton Brandes, who settled in Hanover and spent his later life there, and was a friend of the Duke of Brunswick. In 1845 Dr. Brandes' ambition led him to cross the ocean and seek success in the new world. On reaching America he came to Pennsylvania, and finally settled in Erie, where he has spent the most of his life since in the practice of his profession. As a physician and surgeon Dr. Brandes has won a high reputation. Though having a very large practice that so fully occupied his time, he has taken time to travel extensively, and has visited almost all the civilized countries in the world, and almost every State in the Union. In 1849, during the gold excitement, he went to California, where he engaged in washing gold for two weeks only, though he remained in California for eighteen months, the most of that time in the agreeable companionship of Gen. John A. Suter, meantime practicing medicine. He returned to Erie in 1850 and renewed the practice of his profession. In 1854, during the Crimean war, he visited Europe. The trip was taken for his health, which was greatly benefited. Before his return he made a last visit to his mother in Hanover. In 1855 he returned to Erie, and has since been actively and successfully engaged in the practice of his profession. He has succeeded in accumulating a handsome fortune, and socially has won the esteem of all with whom he comes in contact by uniform courtesy and unassuming deportment. Dr. Brandes was married in Erie in 1846 to Miss Catherine Shank, daughter of Rudolph Shank. Mrs. Brandes was born in Lancaster, Pa., and is of German origin; her paternal and maternal ancestors were among those who came to America with William Penn, and settled on the old Penn manor in Bucks county. This union was blessed with a daughter, Henrietta, who was carefully educated and who was happily married to Theodore N. Fly, who is now (1895) the general superintendent of motive power of the Pennsylvania R. R., and was in 1895 sent to Europe to represent that company in the International Railroad convention. As the issue of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Ely four children were born: Catherine, Gertrude, Carl and Henrietta. Mrs. Ely died in 1880. Her death was a trying ordeal for Dr. and Mrs. Brandes, who idolized their daughter; but the frequent presence of the grandchildren serve to lighten the dreary void occasioned by the death of their beloved daughter. Dr. and Mrs. Brandes are members of the Lutheran Protestant Church. In politics the doctor is a Democrat. He has never accepted any office, except in 1862, when he was appointed government examining surgeon. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

The Judson Family.—The Judsons were among the earlier settlers of Erie county, and Amos Judson one of the first. They came from Woodbury, Litchfield county, Conn. Their family history traces their origin from William Judson, who emigrated from Yorkshire, England, in 1636. He was the progenitor of the family in America. Amos Judson came in 1796. He remained at Greenfield Station two years. He then came to Waterford and worked as a carpenter. He afterwards opened a store and successfully conducted business for fifty years. He never married. Mr. Judson accumulated a large property and was greatly respected. He was joined after establishing himself by his brothers, Seth and Timothy, who came from Connecticut with their families in 1823 or 1824. Seth Judson died in 1856 and his wife in 1858. They had one son, Dr. Wm. Judson, and four daughters: Eunice, Sophia, Mrs. H. R. Vincent and Charlotte. Dr. William Judson was born in Woodbury, Conn., September 7, 1807. He married February 2, 1839, Clarissa, daughter of Thomas King (son of Robert King, one of the first settlers of Erie county); Dr. and Mrs. Judson had five children: Mary, wife of S. Gustine Snowden, M. D., of Franklin, Pa.; Alice F., wife of Charles Himrod, of Chicago; George D., late of Co. E, 83d Reg., P. V. I., who lost his life in the second battle of Bull Run; Alfred died in infancy, and Jessie R., wife of Robert Lamberton, of Franklin, Pa. Dr. Judson served as Burgess of Waterford, and was trustee of Waterford academy many years. He died March 24, 1895. Eunice Judson died unmarried in the early sixties. Sophia, wife of Col. Irvin Camp, contractor and civil engineer, has resided since 1842 in Erie. Col. and Mrs. Camp have one daughter, Mrs. F. F. Marshall, who survives her brother, William (who died young), and sister, Florence, whose death soon after her marriage was so deeply deplored. Mrs. H. Ralston Vincent was another daughter of Seth Judson, who spent her life, after coming from Connecticut, in Waterford, and died some four years since, about the time of her husband's death. She left two daughters, who reside in Waterford. Charlotte Judson, daughter of Seth Judson, died young. Timothy Judson had four sons and one daughter. His son, John P., died in 1849, leaving two sons: P. E. Judson, long proprietor of Eagle Hotel and of the Stone Tavern in Waterford. His daughter, Mary M., married David Kinnaman. Peter P., a justice of the peace in Waterford, of whose family is Effie R., wife of H. C. Stafford, late of the 83d Reg., P. V. I., who was five times wounded in the second battle of Bull Run. He has since served as sheriff of Erie county, and as collector of customs of the port of Erie, under President Arthur. Amos M. Judson, born in Waterford, was admitted to the Erie bar, and afterward volunteered and became first lieutenant and captain of Co. E, 83d Reg., P. V. I. He is now clerk in the treasury department, Washington City. Another sister of Amos Judson is Mrs. Mary A. (Parnlee), widow of Henry R. Whittlesey, who died a year or two ago in Waterford. Her mother was a sister of Amos Judson. Mr. and Mrs. Whittlesey had eight children: Anna M. (Mrs. Tracy) resides in Kansas; Capt. Edward L., an attorney-at-law, in Erie; Henrietta (Mrs. Hiram Rice, of Waterford); Edith, Wilbur, Lincoln (son of Florence) Nebraska; and Alice. Henry R. Whittlesey came from Litchfield county to Waterford, in 1850. He was a justice of the peace ten years, and filled a number of local offices, and was mercantile appraiser of the county.

William Judson (deceased), Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born in Woodbury, Conn., September 7, 1807, and was eldest son of Seth Judson, who came to Erie county in 1823, and died in 1853, his widow surviving until 1858. William Judson was married February 12, 1839, to Clarissa King, daughter of Thomas, and grand-daughter of Captain Robert King, who was born in Carlisle in 1740, and who was prominently identified with the early settlement of Waterford township, being one of the first to bring his family to Erie county. Mr. King received from the government 400 acres of land in Waterford township, known as King's Lots (now in LeBeauf township), in consideration of his making favorable conditions with the Indians. He was a Revolutionary soldier and an officer. (See sketch of King family.) Mr. and Mrs. Judson have had five children as follows: Mary, wife of S. Gustave Snowden, M. D., Franklin, Pa.; Alice F., wife of Charles Himrod, of Chicago; George D., who having enlisted in Company E, 83d Reg., P. V. I., after three weeks' service lost his life in the second battle of Bull Run; Alfred, died in infancy, and Jessie R., wife of Robert Lamberton, Esq., of Franklin, Pa. Mr. Judson was treasurer of Waterford academy for twenty years, and a trustee since 1847, and was Burgess of Waterford for several terms. William Judson died March 26, 1895, and was buried in the cemetery at Waterford.

Col. P. E. Judson, retired, of Waterford, Pa., was born April 28, 1807, in the town of Woodbury, Litchfield county, Conn. In 1814 the family removed to Tioga county, New York, and located on the banks of the Susquehanna river, where they remained until 1823. Judson, when a little older, helping to clear the land and assisting his father at carpentering. Col. Judson, in his own language, thus details some of his early experiences: On a new farm back of the river, speckled mountain trout were plenty in Pipe Creek. I did love to fish, and would go two miles up the creek and fish down. There were wolves, catamounts and wildcats in the woods, and as I had to look after the cows and oxen, father had fixed a weapon of defense for me. It was a two-edged-knife, about six or eight inches long, two inches wide, with a sharp point set in a socket, with a handle four feet long. He directed me to always carry it out in the sugar camp when boiling sap, and on my shoulder, which I did. One afternoon when all alone, except for my plucky little black dog, weighing about twenty-two pounds, I saw a small deer run into a stream of water near by; the stream was high, owing to the spring thaw; the deer was trying to escape from a wildcat that was pursuing it; it got under the driftwood, being wounded and lame. About this time my dog, "Nig," as I called him, smelled the cat, and started after it; I called him back, but he would not come, and as I was as faithful to him as he was to me, started after him; the cat wheeled for battle, struck at the dog, and I struck at the cat, and split his heart in two; he made one or two convulsive kicks. My father was quite proud of my wildcat episode; went to the town of Wappasena (now Nichols) and bought me a pair of cowhide shoes and a jack-knife, and for a while I was the biggest man on Pipe creek. In 1823, I went to Waterford, Erie county, Pa., and worked for Amos Judson, chopping and clearing land, on the Union road, in Waterford township. I also worked with Uncle Seth Judson. I took a job of Amos Judson of cutting five acres of heavy hemlock, pine, beech and maple, logging length, ample two roll piles to the acre. The price was to be five dollars per acre, two dollars in cash and three dollars in store pay; and what four-foot wood I cut he paid me thirty-seven and one-half cents per cord, one shilling cash and two shillings store pay. John A. Vincent helped me to cut the bass wood, six feet long, split fine, for which we got $1.25 per cord, one dollar cash and two shillings store pay. I next went to Warren to attend bar in the Mansion House, remaining one year. Three young men and myself then built a flat-boat and drifted down the Allegheny to Franklin, and from there I walked home, and took a berth in the Waterford Hotel, H. G. Davis, proprietor. Davis was absent two years, and after his return I worked at various places at farm work, later assisting in teaching a geography class, in which the only boy was Clark McSparran, of Erie, the class being composed of girls. I went to Erie and took the Steamboat Hotel, corner of Second and French streets. It had been kept by John Dickson, who went to Meadville, leaving the business in such a shape that I was very much perplexed by the debts, and had it not been for Jonas Gunnison I would not have remained there long. He helped me. Under the tall poplar trees that once stood in front of R. S. Reed's residence, seated on the slab seat, the venerable old man would direct me how to proceed. Among my pleasant acquaintances of that period were Commodore Morris, Capt. James Morris, Lieut. Morris, Capt. M. Conner, Capt. Knapp, Capt. Dobbins, Capt. Reed. I had to go on a trip to Pittsburg while at the hotel on business for Mr. Reed. I made the trip on horseback. Returning to Tioga county, New York, and later descended the Susquehanna on two rafts of boards and shingles for Columbia, Pa. There I took the chances of the river to Havre de Grace, the head of tide water, on Chesapeake Bay. I made six of these trips, down one day and walking back the next day, forty-five miles. It took six men to man a single raft. I returned to Waterford, Pa., in company with an old man of 50 years, who lived at State Line. I next took charge of a boat-load of lumber for old John McKay, and sold it in Pittsburg. Then I took down a boat-load of bark, assisted by A. J. Bracken, who had run to Pittsburg several times. At Pittsburg I could not sell the bark, and as a pilot asked $2.50 per day, I went to a book store and bought a "Loggerhead" of the Ohio river. I finally landed it safely in Wheeling,

Va., made a good sale, returning to Waterford by boat, on foot and in the stage. I took a berth in the Waterford Hotel as barkeeper, hostler, boot black, wood chopper, etc., and worked at anything, until I fitted up the old fort building as a hotel, and opened it the 8th day of May, 1830, having very slender means to fit it up. I still have two of the original twelve chairs that I first bought for the hotel, the rest having burned up in the fire of 1868. By this fire I lost $800 and broke up my business. I next acted as deputy sheriff of the county, and later bought the Eagle Hotel and made several improvements in it. This I conducted for twenty-two years, and three years ago rented it, owing to defective eyesight. In the month of September, 1826, on my way to Tioga county, New York, I stopped off at Niagara Falls, went over to the Canadian side, and saw the drill of British troops. Henry Clay, of Kentucky, was there at the time, in company with his brother-in-law, Gen. Stewart, and both dined at the same table at the Cataract House at which I sat. During the war I supplied the barracks with 100 pounds of meat per day, cut in half-pound pieces. I did all the work myself, in supplying this meat. This does not embrace all the details of Col. Judson's very busy and active life, but gives an idea of the way people had to work in the olden time.

The Justice Family.—CAPTAIN JOHN JUSTICE came to Erie in 1813 as one of the party employed by the Government to build and equip the armed vessels which constituted part of Perry's fleet, on the 10th of September, 1813, and won such renown. He was a successful ship-builder and spent his life in Erie. Mr. Justice married Anna, daughter of John Gray, Esq., one of the earliest citizens of Erie. They had three sons and four daughters: John M., who married Ann Eliza Vesey, of Philadelphia; John M. and Ann Eliza Justice had four sons: Charles, John, William and Harry. William E., who died in California, and Joseph, who died in Erie about ten years since. Capt. and Mrs. Justice's daughters were: Sarah Ann, who married Mr. McCammon, and removed to Wisconsin, where she died; her daughter, Mrs. McFayden, resides in Erie; Rebecca Jane, who married William M. Gallagher (deceased); Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher had three children: George W. (deceased), and Cora, who married John Knoll, and Annie L., who married George Gensheimer, assistant secretary of the board of commissioners of Erie; Mary Eliza, who married William F. Rinderknecht, a native of Germany, an energetic and successful business man, who accumulated a handsome property. Juliette, who married William P. Hayes, a leading real estate dealer of Erie, who did a large business. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes had four children, Frank, William, Boyd and Joseph, all living. Mr. Hayes, who has been a successful land agent for some years, has taken into partnership his son, Boyd. Two of his sons, who have been engaged in the banking business, have acquired distinction as expert bank examiners and accountants in the employ of the U. S. Treasury Department.

The Gallagher Family.—The Gallaghers were among the early settlers of Erie. They resided at an early date on East Second street, west of Parade, near the site of the first settlement of Erie. Their father died, leaving a widow, who lived to an advanced age, and two sons, George W. and William M. George W. was a cabinet-maker, but engaged in commercial pursuits. He was captain of one or more steamers on Lake Erie, but afterwards engaged in the forwarding and commission business in Erie, where he died in 1842. He married Miss Angeline Clough, daughter of Maj. Rufus Clough, a veteran of the war of 1812, who survived him with one son, Thomas, a youth of much promise. At an early age Thomas served as clerk in his father's commission business. He died in 1844, aged 18 years. William M., the youngest brother of George, learned with Thomas Mehauffey the trade of a mason, but did not follow it. He entered commercial business, engaged in navigation and was captain of a freight vessel on the upper lakes. He was afterwards in business for years at the public docks in Erie, where he achieved much success. He was also of the firm of Sawyer, Camp & Co. in their railroad building in the West. Having disposed of his dock business he was appointed by President Taylor collector of customs, which position he filled with much acceptability. He was married in the early forties to Miss Rebecca, daughter of Capt. John Justice (who in 1813 came with shipbuilders in the employ of the United States to build in the harbor of Erie a portion of Perry's famous fleet). Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Gallagher had three children: George, who died February 23, 1889, Cora and Anne, wife of George C. Gensheimer, assistant secretary of the water commissioners of Erie. Mrs. Gallagher, having survived her husband about twenty-three years, resided at the family mansion, No. 822 Peach street.

William F. Rinderknecht, one of Erie's most honored and respected citizens, died at his residence on West Fifth street April 27, 1891. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, January 8, 1818, and was a son of Frederick B. Rinderknecht, who, with his family, came to the United States in 1832. His father, who was a weaver by trade, reared a family of four children: Hetty (Mrs. Meth), William F., Jacob and Kitty. Mr. Rinderknecht's education, which included Latin and Greek, was obtained in the high school of his native town, he graduating at the age of 14 years. Upon his arrival in this country he at once began to look about for something to do, and soon found a satisfactory position with Mr. Conrad Brown on a farm in Mill Creek township, and later with Mr. Samuel Brown, a son of the former, remaining with both two years. He then came to Eagle Village (now South Erie), where he clerked in a general store for Mr. Jacob Hanson five years, and nearly five years in the dry goods store of Brewster, Brown & Co. In 1841 he was elected constable of Erie, the then arduous duties of which position he faithfully discharged for two years. In 1843 he engaged in the grocery business on State street, between Fifth street and North Park Row, and later removed to the corner of Fifth and State streets, continuing in the business until 1866 with a marked degree of success. In company with Mr. John Eliot, he next founded a private banking concern, which was continued for four years. Soon after this Mr. Rinderknecht became president of the Erie Boot and Shoe Company, which position he filled during the life of that institution. He was also for some time identified with the firm of William F. & J. J. Kinderknecht, and for some years previous and up to the time of his death was president of the Erie County Insurance Company. Mr. Rinderknecht was an excellent example of what honesty and industry will do in this great country. Coming here without even a knowledge of our language, he became one of the citizens of this prosperous city and was prominently identified with its growth and development. Not only did he succeed in accumulating a handsome fortune, but his business methods and character were such as to command the respect and esteem of the community in which he had passed the most of his useful life. Mr. Rinderknecht was married March 27, 1845, to Miss Mary Eliza Justice, daughter of the late Capt. John Justice, of Erie. Her mother, whose maiden name was Ann L. Gray, learned to make cartridges for the soldiers of the war of 1812, and lived to again show her womanly patriotism and love of liberty by knitting socks for the soldiers in the war of the rebellion. The Justice family consisted of three sons and five daughters, four of the latter still living. Capt. Justice, who was a ship carpenter by trade, came to Erie for the purpose of building the fleet of gunboats which Commodore Perry used so effectively as to make it one of the chief factors in terminating the war of 1812, which established forever not only our independence, but our supremacy on the south shores of the Great Lakes. Mr. and Mrs. Rinderknecht had born unto them two sons, both of whom died in childhood. They were members, and Mrs. Kinderknecht still is, a member of the First Presbyterian Church, of which they were generous supporters. In politics Mr. Rinderknecht had been a Republican since the organization of the party, and served his city for several terms as a member of the school board, and for four terms was a member of the city councils.

Mrs. Anna E. Pressly, widow of Rev. Joseph H. Pressly, was born January 18, 1829, in Pittsburg, Pa.; her maiden name was Anna E. Smith. She was married May 24, 1847, to Joseph H. Pressly in Allegheny City by his father, Dr. John T. Pressly, a professor in the Theological Seminary in that city. Mr. Pressly was born in Abbeville District, South Carolina, and came to Allegheny in 1832. The family are all members of the United Presbyterian Church, of which the father was pastor from the year 1845 until he died, November 3, 1874. He received his first education at the Western University of Pittsburg, afterward completing a course in Jefferson College at Canonsburg, Pa. His father then insisted on a five years' course of study in the seminary, where he taught, thus fitting the son for the battle in the profession in which he was later to achieve wonderful success as a propounder of the gospel, and this success was no doubt partly due to his early training; yet his benevolence and piety greatly endeared him to those whom he met in life, and added to his power to do good in his chosen field. After leaving the seminary he traveled through the Southern States, preaching at different stations until 1844, when he came as a candidate to the Erie Church, the old pastor, Rev. Robert Reed, having died, and after filling the pulpit a year was formally called to the position which he held until death. The family have been prominently identified with the progress of Erie county during the past fifty years and a work would not be complete without the foregoing sketch.

Orange Noble, founder of the Keystone National Bank, Erie, was born April 27, 1817, at Whitehall, N. Y., son of Salmon and Betsy (Delamater) Noble. The father, who had been a farmer, was a native of Hartford, Conn. His father, when the son was six years of age, moved to Washington county, New York. Mr. Noble was a native of New York. They were parents of seven children. Orange remained on the farm with his father till he was 23 years of age, and was educated at the common schools and the academy in Washington county, New York. January 1, 1840, he married Minerva Keed, who bore him two children—Theodore F. and George H. Early in 1853 Mr. Noble moved to Crawford county, this State, where he entered into partnership with his relative, G. B. Delamater, in merchandising and farming, as well as oil prospecting. By 1863 they had made their fortune. In that year the "Noble well"—the noblest in the world—yielded more than 2,000 barrels per day. In 1864 Mr. Noble became a resident of Erie city. In 1865 he purchased the Bay State Iron Works. At a cost of $135,000, he erected the Noble block in this city (now the Penn building). In 1867 he and others erected the first elevator at this harbor, and in 1869 he became a large owner in the blast furnace. He was a stockholder in the Burrett Organ Factory, the Dime Savings Bank and the Second National Bank, sole proprietor of the Noble Sewing Machine Company, and connected with many minor enterprises. He was founder of the Keystone National Bank and president of the same for twenty years. Mr. Noble was twice elected to the mayoralty of Erie city, and once to a seat in the general assembly. Business reverses have lost to Mr. Noble most or all of his interests in Erie city, but the fact remains that he was one of the first men to develop the city and aid in its present prosperity. When the names of some who are better known for the time being are forgotten, Orange Noble will be remembered as the man who gave the first strong impulse to the new city, and led it into paths that have made it what it is at present. For some years past Mr. Noble has been engaged in agricultural pursuits in Iowa, where he says he has more enjoyment than he did in the days of his greatest wealth and influence. He spends his winters in Erie, where his wife resides. As a matter of interest it may be added that Mr. Noble brought $600,000 in cash to Erie, and that a large share of it was spent in building up Erie institutions, of which others reaped the largest benefits.

Theodore Frelon Noble, secretary and treasurer of the Bay State Iron Works, Erie, Pa., born in North Granville, Washington county, N. Y., October 6, 1847, is a son of Orange and Minerva (Reed) Noble. He completed his education at the Williston Seminary, East Hampton, Mass., was associated with his father in the elevator and blast furnace business above referred to, became identified with the Bay State Iron Works, Limited, in 1884, with which he has since been connected, and is the present secretary and treasurer of the company. He is a Republican and has served the city as a member of the common council. He is a member of the B. P. O. E., K. of P. and A. O. U. W. He has been twice married, his first wife being Eugenia V., daughter of Asaph Whittelsey, of Bayfield, Wis. She died in 1874. His second wife was Mary L., daughter of A. J. Thomas, an old resident of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. Noble reside at the corner of Holland and Fifth streets.

Horace W. Noble, Erie, Pa., was born September 6, 1827, at Whitehall, Washington county, N. Y.; he is a son of Salmon and Betsey (Delamater) Noble, of the town of Whitehall. The history of both sides of his father's house is a very interesting one, being able to trace the genealogy of both back for eight generations. Many of each branch attained especial prominence in the history of our country. The first Noble identified with American history was Thomas Noble, who settled in Massachusetts in 1657, and his sons were the first white settlers in the primitive forests of several of the New England States. Many members of the family were engaged in the great Revolution and also the war of 1812. Elizabeth Delamater was a direct descendant of Claude De Maitre, who settled in Harlem in 1658, born in Picardy, France. The family were engaged principally in maritime commerce, James De Maitre being the first to double Cape Horn, and a strait there bears his name. Horace W. was married October 4, 1853, to Sarah E. Wood, of Monroe, N. Y., who has since died, September 20, 1877. The children who followed this union were Adella F., born June 1, 1855, and died January, 1863; Charles C., born April 16, 1859, living in Waterford with his wife, formerly Jennie Haller, of Parker City, Pa. He is station agent for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Horace A., born November 2, 1860, died December 5, 1864. Mr. Horace Noble married again, June 5, 1879, Susan P. Middaugh, of Allegheny county, New York, daughter of Elijah and Louisa Middaugh. She was born August 28, 1845. He is an ardent supporter of the Methodist Church. He is a Republican in politics. He first engaged in the wholesale coal business under the firm name of Lamb, Noble & Churchill; he then became treasurer of the Alps Fire Insurance Company, which, having met with heavy losses in the great Chicago fire, decided to pay up, reinsure their risks and quit business. He then engaged in the oil business in 1862. The famous Noble & Delamater well was struck on a farm leased by Noble & Delamater. This gave him his financial start in the oil business, which prospered from the beginning. Some years ago he purchased a wheat farm in North Dakota, which has also prospered a hundred fold. He has lived in Erie since 1866, has been identified with much that has been for the good of Erie county. He is a stockholder of the Keystone National Bank, of which he was a director for seven or eight years. His mother's ancestor, Claude De Maitre, was a Huguenot and came to this country on account of persecutions. He was a man of talent and spirit, and possessed of great valor. These characteristics have descended to following generations of the Delamater family, and it is without doubt that these inherent qualities have enabled Mr. Noble to rise above the level and rewards him in his older days with the plenty and comfort that have surrounded him.

Charles C. Noble, ticket agent, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, in 1859, son of Horace W. and Sarah (Wood) Noble. He removed to Erie with his parents in early life, and was educated in the public schools. January 1, 1888, he accepted the position of ticket agent with the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. at Waterford, which position he now holds. In 1887 he was married to Emma V. Dally, of Armstrong county. Mr. Noble is member of the following orders: Elks, Knights of the Maccabees and Railroad Association.

L. W. Olds

Rev. George Armstrong Lyon, D. D., was born in Baltimore, Md., March 1, 1806. He was the son of Samuel and Hetty W. (Broom) Lyon, daughter of Hon. Jacob Broom, of Wilmington, Del., one of the signers of the Constitution of the United States. Dr. Lyon's ancestors came originally from the North of Ireland and England, and in connection with General Armstrong, who married the sister of his grandfather, surveyed and laid out the town of Carlisle. Dr. Lyon was early left an orphan, and made his home with his uncle, George A. Lyon, for whom he was named, a prominent citizen and lawyer of Carlisle. He was educated at Dickinson College, where he graduated in 1824, at the age of 18. He then entered the theological seminary at Princeton, and finishing his course of study, was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Carlisle, on the 9th of April, 1828. During the summer he crossed the Allegheny mountains on horseback and spent the following winter between Fredonia, N. Y., and Erie, Pa. Receiving a call from the Presbyterian Church in each place, for good and sufficient reasons he decided to accept the call to Erie, and on September 9, 1829, he was ordained by the Presbytery of Erie, and installed pastor of the church there. In this capacity he remained the balance of his life, a period of over forty-one years, his death having occurred March 24, 1871, at the age of 65. "He was brought into the ministry just before the great spiritual harvest time of 1830 to 1832, and entered in as a vigorous, earnest and prayerful reaper, and came forth rejoicing, bringing many sheaves with him. The church was greatly edified, and other churches sprang from its roots and grew from its richness." He was a wise and zealous minister, and his undivided time and talents, as well as his own private means, were cheerfully given to advance the purposes and institutions of the gospel in the county and elsewhere. As a preacher, he was distinguished for the grave, affectionate and instructive nature of his sermons, for his logical force, a clear perception of the truth, clearness in stating it, and pungency in applying it. He was also distinguished for the tenderness and spirituality of his prayers, as all who remember them will testify, and for his ready sympathy for his parishioners and friends when in sorrow and in trouble. His warm and practical charity was manifested repeatedly in both public and private actions; his whole soul was in his work, and he loved to preach the great central truths of the gospel; at the same time he kept his heart close to the throbbing pulses of humanity, and his interest in local and national questions which involved the everlasting principles of truth and equity was always keen and strong. He died at Avon Springs, N. Y., whether he had gone, hoping to recuperate his failing health. On Tuesday, March 28, 1871, his funeral services, which were very solemn and impressive, were held in the church in which he had so long ministered, and his body was consigned to the tomb in the Erie cemetery. The funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Richard Craighead, of Meadville, formerly of Carlisle, Pa., though in the services many of his brother ministers of various churches in the city participated. He married Miss Mary Sterrett, of Carlisle, in 1829. They had six children, of whom Catherine and Samuel died in infancy. Margaret A. is the wife of John W. Douglass, of Washington, who was commissioner of the District of Columbia under President Harrison. Alexander McD. was an attorney and paymaster in the army during the war, and died in 1869. George A. is pay inspector in the navy, and W. Wilberforce Lyon, having served in the war, died in October, 1868. After Mrs. Lyon's death, Dr. Lyon, in 1859, married Mrs. Mary A. Burton, who resides in Erie.

The Curtze Family.—The name of Curtze in the city of Erie, borne by a group of it prominent citizens, dates back to 1840. In that year their father, Frederick Curtze, Esq., came to Erie. He was born March 11, 1813, in the principality of Waldeck, Germany, being the son of Rev. Ludwig Curtze, a Lutheran clergyman. Frederick was liberally educated in Germany, being proficient in Latin, English, Spanish and French. He acquired the art of the silversmith also. After spending some time in Europe, including a residence in Vienna, he came to New York in 1836, and remained there two years; thence to Boston for one year; then to Philadelphia. In those cities he worked at his trade. He came to Erie in the spring of 1840, where he engaged in making printing molds for oilcloth, and gave German lessons. The printing mold business lasted five years. He then commenced the manufacture of oilcloth on his own account. After manufacturing for six years, he purchased a farm in Fairview township, on which he resided for six years. In 1858 Mr. Curtze removed to Erie city. There he was elected justice of the peace and continued to serve by re-elections for twenty-five years. His high character, stern integrity, fine education and polished manners gave him an enviable standing in the community with all parties and nationalities. It was a standing most worthily maintained and held until his death, which occurred April 14, 1891. His domestic relations were especially agreeable. In 1844 he married Mary A., daughter of Mr. Abraham Beckman, of Fairview. They had six sons and six daughters: Caroline, wife of Louis Albracht; Louisa, widow of Capt. Jacob Zeigler, who served in the war; Franziska, widow of Henry V. Claus; Hermann J., an attorney of Erie; Charles A., a wholesale grocer of Erie; Adolph, of the firm of Fred Koehler & Co.; Felix F., secretary and treasurer of the Erie Dime Savings Bank; Julius and Oscar, connected with the wholesale grocery of their brother, Charles; Mary, wife of F. Warnath; Sabine, wife of Frederick Mertens, and Adelia, wife of Charles Stohman, of Brooklyn, N. Y. The family are all members of the Lutheran Evangelical Church. Mrs. Curtze died October 25, 1864. Mr. Curtze's personality, ability and culture gave him influence; but there was more: He took a leading part in the formative period of German society in Erie, in the promotion of organized effort toward the improvement, advancement and elevation of his countrymen. In furtherance of this purpose he was prominent in the military organizations of the Erie Artillery Guards, a spirited German company. Of this company he was an officer. He was deacon of St. John's Church, and a maintainer of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church; he was continuously active until the end of his life. He was prominent in the German Beneficial Society, with which he was long identified, having been its treasurer for twenty-five years. Though possessed of moderate means and without a large income, he sedulously attended to the rearing and education of his family. Few parents in Erie gave more attention to this matter; fewer still, were more fortunate in the outcome. The twelve families of whom Squire Curtze was the progenitor, which now have position in the various business, social and religious circles of Erie, are an enduring memorial of the good citizen, faithful parent and remarkable man, who in the person of Frederick Curtze sank to rest on the 14th day of April, 1891, with a character and reputation unsurpassed in excellence by that of any fellow citizen. The tribute implied by the presence of the very large congregation who assembled at St. Paul's Evangelical Church at his funeral were emphasized in the glowing periods of the feeling discourse of his pastor, Rev. Mr. Kern, and Rev. C. Goehling at that occasion. His memory will long be treasured in the city of his adoption.

Hermann Jerome Curtze, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., November 30, 1847. He is a son of the late Frederick and Mary Ann (Beckmann) Curtze, the former a native of Corbach, Waldeck, and the latter of Annweiler, Palatinate, Germany. The former came to the United States, arriving in New York city, October 14, 1836, and located in Erie a few years later, May 2, 1840. The Beckmann family came from Germany and settled in Fairview township in 1837. Frederick Curtze was by trade a silver and goldsmith. Shortly after his arrival in Erie, he took up the vocation of teacher of the German language, and later, and for many years, engaged in business as a manufacturer of and dealer in oil cloths. He was a justice of the peace for twenty years. His wife died October 25, 1864; he died April 14, 1891. His son, Hermann, was educated in the city schools and at Prof. Hermann Leo's select school, Erie. He studied bookkeeping at Hick's Mercantile College, Buffalo, N. Y., and returning to Erie, was bookkeeper for the wholesale firm of Johnson & Brevillier for nearly three years. He then went to Europe and completed his education at the gymnasium of Corbach, the university of Heidelberg, and at the university at Leipzig, taking the degree of doctor of laws (doctor juris utriusque) at the former university. Returning, after an absence of five years, to Erie, he studied law under the preceptorship of Col. Benjamin Grant, was admitted to practice, January 4, 1875, was for a time in the office of Messrs. James C. and F. F. Marshall, and has ever since been engaged in the practice of his profession alone. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum, Knights of Honor, Harugari, Liedertafel and Maennerchor. He was married June 4, 1878, to Henriette, daughter of the Rev. Charles Goehling, then of Brooklyn, N. Y., now retired from the ministry, and residing at New Haven, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. Curtze reside at 136 East Seventh street, and are members of the German St. Paul's Church.

Charles August Curtze, wholesale grocer, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie April 8, 1849, and is a son of Frederick Curtze, whose sketch appears in this work. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 15 years engaged in farming near Erie. After three years passed in agricultural pursuits, he accepted a position with Johnson & Brevillier, where, six months later, he was promoted to traveling salesman, which position he held for over ten years. Meanwhile, however, he, in 1875, in company with J. W. Sualley, under the firm name of Sualley & Curtze, engaged in the manufacture of soap, which he followed one year. On April 1, 1878, Mr. Curtze, in company with E. S. Rice, under the firm name of Curtze & Rice, established a wholesale grocery business at the present location, 529 French street, of which Mr. Curtze has been sole proprietor since January 1, 1888. All kinds of groceries and grocers' supplies are handled, and the territory includes chiefly Western Pennsylvania, the business giving employment to thirteen men. A spice mill, located in the rear of the store, was also established in 1878, which is now the only one in the city. It is known as the Lake City Spice Mills, and its products include all kinds of ground spices. The printed labels of the Lake City Spice Mills bear a printed guarantee of $100 that no adulteration can be found in its spices bearing that label. This fact, set forth in such a material way, has won for these spices a wide reputation and a large sale. Mr. Curtze also puts up the Diamond brand of baking powder and the Keystone brand of coffee, which are favorites with the trade. Among Mr. Curtze's elements of success, and running all through his long business career, has been that of fair dealing, for which he has an enviable reputation. This business characteristic, together with industry, economy and keen business foresight, has won for him the success it is sure to bring all who practice it. Mr. Curtze was married July 3, 1879, to Miss Amanda Emma, daughter of Mr. August Jarecki, of Erie. This union was blessed with four children: Julia, Arthur, Edwin and Adelheid Antonia Caroline, who died at the age of eleven months. Mrs. Curtze died January 22, 1890, and Mr. Curtze was remarried May 25, 1893, to Miss Antonia Caroline Jarecki, a sister of his first wife. Mr. Curtze and family worship at St. Paul's German Evangelical Church, of which he is a generous supporter. Mr. Curtze is a Master Mason, a member of the Knights of Honor, and in his political views has always been a staunch Republican.

Adolph I. Curtze, junior member of the firm of Fred. Koehler & Co., Erie, Pa., was born in Fairview township, Erie county, Pa., June 1, 1853, and is son of Frederick and Anna (Beckman) Curtze, mention of whom is made elsewhere in this work. Mr. Curtze was educated in the public schools of Erie, whither his father had moved when he was but 3 years old. After completing his education he entered the employ of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company to learn the brass finishing trade, where he remained five years. In 1877 he accepted a position as bookkeeper in the office of Fred. Koehler & Bro., and after holding that position for ten years he became a member of the firm, under the present title. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Curtze is a self-made man. Beginning as a brass-finisher's apprentice, he has worked out by his own advancement, until now he is one of the proprietors of the richest brewing institution in Erie. Mr. Curtze was married October 15, 1891, to Miss Essee, a daughter of Mr. Fred. Koehler. Mr. and Mrs. Curtze are members of St. Paul's German Lutheran Church, of which they are generous supporters. Politically Mr. Curtze has always been identified with the Republican party.

F. Felix Curtze, treasurer of the Erie Dime Savings Bank, was born in Erie March 5, 1858, and is a son of Frederick and Anna M. (Beckman) Curtze, whose sketch may be found in this volume. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and in 1873 entered the bank as office boy. Here his good qualities soon attracted the attention of his employers and he was promoted as fast as his age and experience would permit to a position of greater responsibility and trust until 1886, when he became treasurer. During his long connection with the bank his aptitude in doing well whatever devolved upon him in filling the duties of his position, as well as his business methods, have been such as to win for him the confidence of business men generally and to characterize him as one of Erie's shrewdest financiers. He has always at heart the commercial welfare of the city and is personally interested in some of its most progressive manufacturing institutions, notably the Globe Iron Works, which, since his connection with it, is fast becoming one of the leading concerns of its kind in Northwestern Pennsylvania. The firm name is Curtze & Garrick, the junior member and superintendent of the works being Mr. Frank Carrick. Mr. Curtze was married June 30, 1885, to Miss Caroline J., daughter of Frederick and Julia (Parre) Stohhman, of New York. The issue of this marriage is two children, Louise M. and Frederick A. Mr. and Mrs. Curtze are members of the German Lutheran Church of Erie. In politics he has always been a supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

The Arbuckle Family.—The name of Arbuckle is identified with the early settlement of Erie county, though not of the very first settlers. Their arrival was so early, their characters as substantial citizens so pronounced, and their influence so salutary at their various points of settlement that mention is here fittingly made of the family. By reason of removals and other circumstances, the data at hand is not as full and complete as is desirable. Mention will be made of some of those who, coming to Erie early in the century, became conspicuous in their several localities and are yet worthily represented by their descendants. Adam Arbuckle came to Erie early in the century and resided on East Sixth street, between Holland and French. He was the father of William G. Arbuckle, who is now the oldest native born citizen of Erie, and still active, being the superintendent of the public school buildings. He was born on East Sixth street, between Holland and French. Adam Arbuckle was one of the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church, its records speaking of him. According to tradition, some of its early services were held in his East Sixth street residence. There his son, William G., who (since the death of the Hon. James Hoskinson) is the oldest native resident of Erie, was born. He learned the carpenter's trade, married Catherine Bowers, settled in Erie and actively engaged in the business of house building. They were the parents of six children: Richard H., born October 14, 1836, who was for some time clerk in the Erie post-office and a county commissioner of Erie county from 1875-78. He was mercantile appraiser, collector of customs of the port of Erie for four years under President Cleveland, and held many township offices in Mill Creek. He was one of the leading Democrats in Erie county. Mr. Arbuckle was married January 6, 1859, to J. Antoinette, daughter of the late John and Charlotte Burton, of Mill Creek, who had six children: Jennie H., John Burton, Katie, Eliza (deceased), Charlotte, Barnes, William Irwin and Richard Cranch. Of these, John Burton has served a term as city school director in Erie, and is married to Miss Lillian Gross

Kelsey; William Irwin is married to a daughter of Mr. Frederick Clemens. George W., an elocutionist, who resides in the West. Mary E., wife of J. W. Humphrey, of New York; Louisa E., wife of J. K. Hallock, an attorney of Erie, has four children: by her first marriage, Robert H. Porter, by her second marriage, Ruth, Keys and Louisa Hallock; Frank P., superintendent of the American District Telegraph Company, Denver, Colo., and also register of the land office in Colorado under President Cleveland's first administration, and is receiver of the land office under the present administration. Another of the pioneers was William Arbuckle, who came to Erie county and settled in Fairview township early in the century. He came with his wife from Lancaster county, and resided in Fairview from that time until about the year 1851 or '52, when he removed to a farm adjacent to the southeast line of Erie city. He was an elder of the Presbyterian Church at Fairview for twenty-five years, and thirty-one years in Erie. He died in 1863, in his 72d year. It was said of him, by one who knew him well: "He was my beau-ideal of an elder." He was so sedate and bore himself with so much dignity, so simple-hearted, kind and humble, you could not help but love him. I knew him from childhood, but my earliest recollections was that his hair was white as snow. He was rather below middle height, with a calm, sweet face, blue eyes and extremely nervous in his manner. He had four children: Pressly Arbuckle, long conspicuous and one of the most respected citizens of Erie; he was an elder of the First Presbyterian Church, of which his father had been elder a generation before. He married Rachel Evans, of Mill Creek, who died in 1859. Pressly and Rachel Arbuckle had seven children: Two sons died in infancy; Julia, wife of William Hinrod, of Erie; Nancy (deceased), William, who married Miss Farrar; Susan E. (deceased) and Kate, who survives. William M. Arbuckle married Martha Lyman. Of their children William M. and Charles are deceased, also Mrs. Jarecki; while Misses Martha and Della survive. William M. Arbuckle died in 1874, having been for many years clerk of the poor directors. He was one of the originators of the Home for the Friendless. Joseph Arbuckle married Miss McCoy of Franklin county, Pennsylvania, who afterwards died. He later married again. He died some years ago. Mrs. James Scott was also a daughter of Wm. Arbuckle and died young. Joseph and Catherine (Guy) Arbuckle, natives of Maryland, came to Fairview in 1800. They had a family of five children; of these J. G. Arbuckle was born October 12, 1807, in Erie, Pa. He was married January 28, 1828, to Emily, daughter of Spencer Shattuck. They had five children: S. S., Mary A., wife of George McCreary (they have three children and reside near Battle Creek, Mich.); Margaret M., wife of R. Pilkington, of Bradford, Pa. (they have two children) and J. P. William Arbuckle came to Erie county in 1802, when ten years of age. He was married September 28, 1820, to Annis Shattuck. They had seven children: Caroline, wife of W. T. Davison (now deceased), who lived in Springfield township, and had thirteen children: Sophronia, wife of J. H. Allen, has two children; Berkley (deceased), Alfred (deceased), Joseph, in Dakota; William S., married Anna Throne (now deceased), resides in Erie with his two children; Cornelius S. (deceased) and B. P., who was married November 4, 1858, to Barbara Mains; they had five children, Eleanor (deceased), Jennie M., wife of Charles M. Manley; William E., Charles E. and Ada (deceased).

J. P. Arbuckle, farmer, postoffice Erie, son of James G. and Emily (Shattuck) Arbuckle. The father, James G., was born in 1807 in the township in which he spent his life, and died in 1889. The mother was a descendant from one of the early families. She died in 1890, at the age of 77 years and 6 months. They were the parents of five children: Spencer S. (deceased), Catherine (deceased), Mary A. (deceased), formerly the wife of George McCreary; Margaret M., the wife of Robert Pilkington, the latter deceased, and John P. Robert Pilkington died in 1891, from injuries received in an accident. His age was 45 years. His widow, and two children, Mary E. and Ralph Arbuckle Pilkington, survive. James Arbuckle, grandfather of J. P., was a native of Cecil county, Maryland, born in 1768, and settled in Mill Creek township, about the year 1800, and died October 14, 1826, on the farm now owned and occupied by J. P. He married Catherine Guy, also a native of Maryland, who was born November 23, 1768, and died in 1861. It was near the same spot now occupied by the commodious residence of J. P., that these pioneers of the Arbuckle family built their log hut and made their first start in the dense wilderness of the northwest. This particular location is one of the chosen places where a picturesque view of Erie and Presque Isle Bay are a delight. To Joseph and Catherine Arbuckle were born nine children: William, Richard, Elizabeth, Margaret, Mary, Joseph F., of Kingston, DeKalb county, Ill.; John P., James G. and Mary A. J. P. Arbuckle was educated in the public schools, and is not only a thorough-going farmer, but a man of affairs, public spirited in aiding various local enterprises in a commendable way. Mr. Arbuckle is a worthy member of the F. & A. M., and A. O. U. W.

Harrison F. Watson, president of the company which bears his name, is one of Erie's most active and successful business men. He was born near Mercer, Mercer county, Pa., December 5, 1853, and is a son of Robert W. and Amanda (Painter) Watson, who passed the last few years of their life in Erie. In early life his father was engaged in agricultural pursuits, but later removed to New Castle, Pa., where for a number of years he was engaged in various kinds of business. The family consisted of five sons and one daughter, three of whom are living: William L., of California; Harrison F., and Edward, who resides in Michigan. Mr. H. F. Watson received his early education in the public schools of New Castle, and completed it under private instruction in Pittsburg. In 1874 he came to Erie and engaged in the distillation and manufacture of coal-tar products. Three years later he began the manufacture of paper, the mill being located in Fairview township. This mill was operated until 1883, when it was destroyed by fire and was not rebuilt. In 1881 a paper mill was built in Erie and began operations in conjunction with the distillery and chemical works which had been located in Erie from the first. Additional and new department buildings have been added from time to time to meet the rapid increase of business, until now the plant occupies a frontage on East Sixteenth street of the entire square between French and Holland streets, and 230 feet deep. The buildings, which are all connected, are substantial brick structures, and range from one to three stories in height. This gigantic institution runs day and night, gives employment to over 400 men, has a daily consumption of 200 tons of coal and a daily output of an equal weight of paper and chemicals. One of the most unique features of this mammoth concern is the wonderful extent to which it facilitates its own wants. A twelve-inch main brings water directly from the bay; automatic sprinklers are distributed throughout all the buildings and two large fire pumps are capable of supplying eight streams in case of fire. A blacksmith shop and a machine shop, supplied with a steam hammer and other improved machinery, and in which skilled craftsmen are employed, do all the repairing and job work of machinery. Even the printing, which is no small item, is done by the institution's own printing office, while 132 retorts furnish the necessary gas and kindred products. The Erie Dock and Transfer Company, of which Mr. Watson is president, was organized in 1894, and to a great extent co-operates with the paper company. The plans of this company include twenty barges, which will ply upon the water communications of Erie, and will handle nearly all of the in and much of the out-freight of the H. F. Watson Paper Company. The products of the paper company include all kinds of building, roofing and lining papers and materials, waterproof sheathings and asbestos fire-proof papers; also all kinds of asbestos steam pipe and boiler packings and coverings. The territory over which they operate includes the United States and Canada. Branch offices and distributing depots have been established in New York, Chicago and Nashville. Both the capacity and range of territory are greater than any other institution of its kind in the world. The superiority of these products has not only been thoroughly established at home, but it has stood the test of competition of the local manufacturers in various parts of the country. The H. F. Watson Company was incorporated in 1891, with H. F. Watson, president; J. Avery Tracy, vice-president (now deceased); K. W. Potter, secretary; George B. Russell, assistant secretary, and J. H. Armstrong, treasurer. With the exception of Mr. Tracy, the officers are still the same. The capital stock, at first $750,000, was increased to $1,250,000 in 1894. It is an injustice to none to say that the unprecedented and unparalleled success of the great institution has been largely due to the keen business sagacity and untiring energy of the gentleman whose name forms the subject of this sketch. Mr. Watson was married October 25, 1877, to Miss Carrie T., daughter of Mr. J. Avery Tracy, whose sketch appears in this work. This happy union has been blessed with one child, Miss Winifred T. Watson. In politics Mr. Watson is a Republican, and has rendered much valuable service to the party of his choice, but he has never been desirous or willing to enter politics as a seeker of public office. He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and of the various social clubs and societies of Erie.

The Barr Family.—In the settlement of Erie county there were some families whose names became strongly identified with its early development; in that gloomy period it needed great fortitude and powers of endurance; these were a necessary part of the make-up of the generations whose energy and tenacity planted civilization in an inhospitable wilderness. Some of these remarkable men, soldiers in the Revolution, in their associations with the patriots of 1776, had imbibed their spirit and been taught by them how to endure suffering for their country; others still had come from across the sea, especially from the North of Ireland, that historic land, where the very atmosphere seemed imbued with the patriotic and irrepressible love of liberty and hatred of oppression, which drove James II from his throne and welcomed the Prince of Orange. The Barr family represented all of these qualities. The family, as it came to Pennsylvania, were alive to all these kindred impulses. It was their lot to have their part, with others, first in the settlement of Lancaster county. They were a constituent part of that wave of immigration which helped to impress so strongly the Scotch-Irish characteristics upon the province of Pennsylvania. The family of James Barr embraces so many of the active and prominent settlers of Erie county, and they endured so much in their efforts to found their new home in the wilderness, that the sketch of this typical pioneer has been selected for narration. Truly can it be said of him and of his associates, in speaking of the settlement of this lake shore: "All of which I saw, part of which I was." James Barr, sr., came from the North of Ireland to America in 1758. He married Elizabeth Kirk, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. In 1803, they removed from Mifflin to Erie county, and settled on a farm, which he purchased, near the mouth of Twenty-Mile creek, where he resided until 1813, when, his wife's health being poor, they removed to Harbor Creek, and remained with their son James until their respective deaths, hers in 1813, and his May 14, 1823, aged 55 years. He was an elder in the Associated Reformed Church, in Mifflin county, of which Rev. Mr. Logan was pastor, and June 19, 1816, he was installed an elder in the Rev. Robert Reid's church, of the same denomination, at Erie. They had ten children, eight daughters and two sons. The first six daughters were married in Mifflin county, the last two died unmarried. The following is the record: Sarah, born 1772, married Wm. Wilson, who removed to Erie county and owned and occupied the tract three-fourths of a mile east of Harbor Creek Station, now owned by W. W. Davison's heirs, C. F. Kendrick and others. She was the great-grandmother of Mrs. W. S. Brown, James M. Sherwin, and many others here and in the West. Rebecca, born 1774, married Isaac Larimer, who moved from Mifflin county to Ohio. His last son, Isaac, died in California in 1838. Mary, born May 23, 1779, married Andrew Lowry. She was the grandmother of the wife of Wm. C. Culbertson, ex-congressman, and many others here and West. Elizabeth, married George Lowry. She was the grandmother of Mrs. Kate (Fleming) Morris and various others in the West. Anne, married Morrow Lowry. She was the mother of the late Hon. Morrow B. Lowry, and numerous others in Pennsylvania and the West. Jennette L., married Robert Lowry, and afterwards James Malick. She was the grandmother of the late Maj. H. B. Fleming and Mrs. David Caldwell and numerous others. The two remaining daughters died unmarried. James Barr, born in Mifflin county, February 8, 1782, removed to Erie county in 1803, and settled, with his father, at the mouth of Twenty-Mile creek. He married Polly R. Kelley, April 14, 1812. (She was the daughter of John Kelley, who was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1759, and served in the Revolutionary army with Washington at Valley Forge.) After his marriage he moved to his tract of 400 acres, which he owned in Harbor Creek, about three-fourths of a mile east of the present railroad station, and now divided into several farms. He removed from Harbor Creek to Mill Creek about April 1, 1830, to his (Reserve) tract, No. 28, upon which he died April 9, 1835. He left six daughters and two sons living, and one son was born in September, after his death. His widow survived him, and lived on the same farm until March 30, 1880. He was a captain in Col. Philip's regiment of militia, and served in the war of 1812-14. He encamped at Erie, in defense of the harbor, and was a volunteer captain with Gen. Harrison in his Western campaign. His children are: Elizabeth Ann, intermarried with Conrad Brown; Matthew K., intermarried with Laura Wright; Louisa A., intermarried with Richard S. McCreary; George W., intermarried with Julia A. Wilder; Harriet M., intermarried with Luther Wright; Mary K., intermarried with N. Bond; Martha K., intermarried with Jonah C. Munn; Ellen C., died at the age of 18; James M., died at the age of 20. Samuel Barr, the youngest of James Barr's son's children, traveled quite extensively (for that period) when he was young, teaching school in various places, and married Elizabeth Harper, of Meadville. He resided on Reserve tract No. 27, which he inherited from his father. He built a school-house on the northeast corner of tract No. 28, and kept a neighborhood school, of which he was sole director, trustee and teacher. His methods were old-fashioned, but thorough. He died in 1846, leaving a widow, six daughters and three sons. His children are all but one living.

Hon. Matthew R. Barr was born in Harbor Creek, December 25, 1817. In 1830 his father removed to Mill Creek, where he resided until his death, when Matthew was 17 years of age. He never attended school (except for a three months' term in the winter) since he was eight years old. He attended school one winter after his father's death. The next winter he taught a school in one of the rooms of the homestead. He subsequently taught several district schools in the winter and worked on the farm during the remainder of the year. He was married March 31, 1842, and continued to work on the farm and to teach. At the spring election, 1845, he was chosen constable of Mill Creek by his friends, without his consent. They gave as a reason that he must have some business to give a chance for exercise, and to take him from the farm, or he would die of consumption. He served three years and declined re-election. In June, 1848, he commenced service as superintendent at the foundry of Lester, Sennett & Chester, and in 1851, purchased, in connection with Conrad Brown, the interest of Mr. Lester therein. The firm name was changed to Sennett & Co. He was a member of the various firms under the names of Sennett & Co., Sennett, Barr & Co.; Sennett & Johnson; Barr, Johnson & Co., until 1872. He then sold his interest in the business part of the enterprise and retired for the purpose of building the Pennsylvania R. R. from Cambridge to Erie, for which part of the work he had a contract. He spent about $30,000 in prosecuting this work; but the company abandoned the undertaking, made him an "estimate," and paid him only a portion of what he had expended. During his residence in Erie he was a member of the common council, 1855-56, select council, 1856 (resigned), member of the school board several years, trustee of the Erie Academy twelve years, and water commissioner five years. He returned to the farm in 1877. He was afterwards United States collector of customs, 1880-83. He resigned and was appointed Indian Inspector, 1883-4. He resigned and was appointed special agent United States land office, with headquarters at New Orleans, 1884-86. He then resigned and returned to his farm. His children are: Louise, married to H. S. Seaman, Cleveland, O.; Pressly J., married to Lavinia Saunders, Omaha, Neb.; George H., married Mary S. Briggs, Erie; Ellen M., married Capt. J. C. Hilton, Erie; Lester J., married Eliza Thayer, Chicago, Ill.; Laura H., married H. E. McCandless, Anderson, Ind. He has twenty grandchildren and one great-grandson. This sketch of James Barr's family mentions many other persons, who have in their day and generation borne an honorable and important part in the settlement, development, or defense of their country or State. Merely an outline has been given. Did space permit, mention might be made of the careers of the Barrs, Lowrys, Wilsons, Culbertsons, Flemings, Sherwins, Browns, Munns, and many others, lineally or collaterally connected with this pioneer. Yet it has seemed proper to mention one incident, as connected with a turning point in Erie's greatest improvement, where the very life of a great public work was at stake. The item has been rescued from oblivion by the writer, and is now mentioned as a further instance of the power of a casting vote, and another case of an unnamed hero; it is given with the retrospective glance of the writer, at the vital connection then existing between the building of the Philadelphia & Erie R. R. (its life then trembling in the balance) and the advance or blight of the city of Erie. In 1856, after very much of doubt, delay, and despondency, and nineteen years after the charter had been secured for the railroad, while yet without money or powerful backers, the contract for fifty-six miles from Erie, eastward, had been let to a party of eleven gentlemen. S. V. Merrick, being the president of the board, came to Erie, and, after looking over the ground, he asked the contractors to go to work (in a very moderate way), so as to aid the company in getting some legislation they needed. The contract was divided by the contractors into eleven sub-divisions; J. W. Ryan had the first, M. R. Barr had the second, and Wilson King the third. Work was commenced, J. W. Ryan and King sub-letting theirs. Mr. Barr hired men and did the work himself. In that way, they did considerable work. The company had no money, but gave estimates, and the contractors sent their own notes to Philadelphia to Mr. Merrick, and he had them discounted, by placing Erie city and county bonds as collaterals. The contractors received the proceeds with which they paid their men, and also the engineer's salaries; the company failed to get legislation. Mr. Merrick was discouraged, and wrote the Erie contractors to stop work. He said this "enterprise is a stench in the nostrils of Philadelphians. I will sell enough of Erie city and Erie county bonds to take up your notes, and pay you for the work not yet estimated, and then I will close the offices and bid farewell to the Sunbury and Erie R. R." A meeting of the contracting company was called, the situation discussed, and various projects suggested "to put backbone into Mr. Merrick." None, however, would be possible, if the work stopped. This was a vital point. Some one suggested that it would be unfair for those who were doing no work to decide the question of continuing, and that it ought to be left to King, Ryan and Barr. This was agreed to. The three retired for consultation. King said: "Ryan, you and I have sub-let our work, and while we must stand behind our sub-contractors, and not let them fall, yet it is not like standing in the front. Barr is doing his own work, and he must meet the risk in person." Suppose we allow him to decide this question." Ryan said: "That is right." Mr. Barr then said: "I engaged in this enterprise to help to build the Sunbury and Erie R. R., and not with the expectation of making much money, or of getting through without meeting some difficulties, and if the possible success or certain failure depends on me, my decision is, as long as I can buy a pound of meat and a bushel of potatoes to feed my men, the work will go on." This turned the scale, and a committee was appointed to go to Philadelphia, and the project of land subscriptions along the line of the road was started and boomed. The next winter legislation was obtained, and the line from Erie to Philadelphia has been a fact for thirty years. Had Mr. Barr's answer been different, the construction of that road, with all the opposition of powerful rivals to prevent its resuscitation (had it been allowed to be abandoned then) would have been postponed for years.

Conrad J. Brown, County Treasurer, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, May 6, 1849, and is a son of Conrad and Elizabeth A. (Barr) Brown, natives of Erie, Pa. To them were born eight children: Washington, killed in the battle of Fredericksburg in the late war; Mary L. (deceased), Catherine U., Mrs. J. B. Cessna, of Hastings, Neb.; Elizabeth A. (deceased), Conrad J., Mathew M., Martha E., Mrs. J. M. Wright and Hattie (deceased). Conrad J. Brown received his early education in the public schools of Erie and the Kingsville Academy, at Kingsville, O. He has since followed farming. In 1874 he was elected to the common council, serving three years, and, in 1880, was elected to the select council, serving two years, and was again elected in 1886, serving till 1887, when he resigned to accept the position of water commissioner, and creditably held said office till January 1, 1896, when he retired to qualify for county treasurer of Erie county, to which office he was elected at the preceding fall election on the Republican ticket. Mr. Brown was married November 18, 1869, to Miss Lydia, daughter of Marshall Wright, of Kingsville, O., and to them have been born four children: Marshall W., Kate D., Jessie and Conrad. The family are members of the United Presbyterian Church and he is a member of the A. O. U. W., E. A. U., Fraternal Mystic Circle and National Union.

Dr. John S. Carter (deceased), was born in Gettysburg, Adams county, Pa., June 13, 1808, son of Samuel and Nancy (Paxton) Carter, natives of Pennsylvania, of Irish lineage; the former was a mechanic. Dr. Carter received a common school training, and commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Jackson, of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, and here he was engaged in the drug business for a time. In 1836 he removed to Erie city and clerked in the drug store of C. F. Perkins one year, when he bought the latter out, and in 1840 moved into the Reed block, where he remained nineteen years. His brother, who died in 1861, was a partner with him till that date, after which Dr. Carter conducted the business in his own name, and was many years continuously engaged in trade in Erie city. In 1859 he and his brother built a handsome store room, four stories in height, on North Park Row, filled with a stock of pure drugs. The doctor was married in 1836 to Julia E., daughter of 'Squire John D. Haverstick. Of the children born to this union, but one survives—Mary, widow, of the late Hon. E. C. Ingersoll, of Illinois, who survives her brother Samuel, a former resident of New York city, and president of the Carter Medicine Company. Mrs. Carter, dying in 1845, Dr. Carter married, in 1852, Ruth, a daughter of Rev. John Ingersoll, and sister of Hon. E. C. and Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. This lady died in 1881. The doctor consciously took no part in politics. He professed to be a Christian of the primitive order, but was connected with no society or organization.

George Ambrose Allen, attorney, Erie Pa., was born near Pulaski, Mercer (now Lawrence) county, Pa., December 31, 1839. He is the only surviving child of Major William and Mary (Steel) Allen, both natives of Pennsylvania, and of Scotch-Irish descent. Major Allen's father came from Ireland in 1795 and located with his family near Carlisle, Pa., whence they removed to Mahoning, Ohio, where Major Allen was born, August 21, 1803. After the latter's marriage, in 1828, he removed to Pulaski, Lawrence county, Pa., where he lived until 1843, when he purchased what was then known as the McGarvey Mills, in the village of Waterloo (now Polk), Venango county, Pa., where he spent the remainder of his life, with the exception of a period of six years, during which he lived near Meadville, Pa. His wife died May 28, 1856; he survived until June 6, 1881. His life was spent as a miller and farmer. His title was obtained as an officer of the State troops in Mercer county from 1830 to 1840, in the division commanded by General Dick. George A. Allen was educated in the common schools at Polk, the Clintonville Academy and the State Normal School at Edinboro. He then took a classical course under the private tutorage of Prof. William Burgwin. He was admitted to the bar at Meadville, Pa., in June, 1868, and in December of the same year located in Erie Pa., where he entered upon the practice of his profession. He was city solicitor of Erie for one term (1872) and was for one year a partner of Theodore A. Lamb. In 1876 he formed his present partnership association with Louis Rosenzweig, under the firm name of Allen & Rosenzweig. Mr. Allen's law practice has been attended with remarkable success. Mr. Allen was United States district attorney for the Western District of Pennsylvania by appointment of President Cleveland, from December 4, 1886, to June, 1889, when he resigned. He is an uncompromising Democrat and has rendered his party most efficient service. He was a delegate to the State convention in 1872, and again in 1877, upon the latter occasion presenting the name of Judge John Turnkey for nomination to the Supreme Bench. (Judge Turnkey received the nomination and was elected.) Mr. Allen was a delegate in 1880 to the National Democratic Convention at Cincinnati, which nominated General Winfield Scott Hancock for the Presidency, and during that year was chairman of the Erie county executive committee. In 1892, he was the Democratic nominee for Congressman-at-large. Mr. Allen was married July 18, 1865, to Phoebe A., daughter of the late Prentice Burlingham, a manufacturer of Edinboro, Pa. She died April 1, 1884, leaving four children, of whom three survive. They are: J. Maud, wife of William Warner, son of E. L. Warner, of the dry goods firm of Warner Bros., Erie; Mary Edna and George Allen, jr., the latter a student at the Erie high school. The family attend St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

The Davison Family.—The members of this well-known family took an important part in the settlement of Erie county. Indeed the leading incidents of their career, their origin, lineage and faith, their energy, perseverance and integrity coincide almost exactly with that of many who came from the same region to Pennsylvania, during the eighteenth century. Then they came in such numbers as to give their character to some parts of the State. In mentioning these facts now, with a little more than usual detail, some idea will be formed of the remarkable movements under which so many were transplanted from the North of Ireland to Pennsylvania. In 1795 the family of Thomas and Jane (Godfrey) Davison came from the North of Ireland to Philadelphia. There were five sons: Francis, Robert, George, Thomas and Arthur, and one daughter, Elizabeth Jane, who died upon the voyage at sea. Their first settlement was in the interior within the bounds of old Northumberland as formerly constituted. Attracted by the fame of the Lake country, but lately added to Pennsylvania, and before the creation of Erie county, the family came in 1795 to the wilderness region, now embraced in Venango township. It was a wild home, but they were equal to the emergency. The father of the family died a while after reaching Erie county. The traditions of the remarkable characteristics of their mother still survive, while doubtless very much of the energy and perseverance of the four sons, as displayed in their wild home, and their religious zeal as indicated in their conspicuous activity in erecting quite near to their settlement the Middleboro Church (now enshrined in memory as the first church in Erie county) were inherited from their remarkable mother, who closed her long life in 1845, in her 94th year. It was in 1801 that a number of the Davison brothers and others of kindred faith and like purposes assembled in what is now Venango township, and there erected Middleboro Church. There for years in the log church and within its primitive portals as afterward reconstructed the gospel was preached and its ordinances administered according to the tenets of the Presbyterian Church. For years a bright light went from that spot far out in the wilderness. It was a religious center from which powerful influence was long exerted. The old log church is historic, for it is first in the long list of places of worship erected in the county of Erie. The Davison brothers remained for about twenty years in Venango, though one of them (Thomas) died there and was buried in the Middleboro Church yard. The four surviving brothers each purchased a farm and made a home in East Mill Creek, near Belle Valley, where the advantages seemed so much greater than at their first location. Their homes in Mill Creek were long a distinctive feature of that neighborhood. Their influence and support were transferred to the First Presbyterian Church of Erie, of which many of their families were members and George and Robert elders. The formation of Belle Valley Church in 1842, in which some of the families were included induced many of them to change to that. None of the pioneers of this family are now living. But few families exerted a wider or better influence in the first half century of Erie county's settlement. The names of some of these have been obtained and are here given: Francis Davison married Sarah Smith, died February 1, 1860. Their children are: Francis; Arthur, died in August, 1864; Irene, married R. B. Barnes, of Chicago (deceased); Nancy C., died in 1883; Julia married Silas C. Teel, of Erie; Elizabeth, married Cyrus Robinson, in California; Mary, married Mr. Middleton, of Waterford (deceased); her daughter, Mary, survives; Robert, married Sarah Smith, died March 2, 1871, widow died September 15, 1875. Their children are: Elizabeth, wife of John McFarland, of Lawrence county, Pennsylvania; Rosana, wife of Q. McFarland, of Centralia, Ill., died in August, 1891; Robert S., who married Martha Love, died November 11, 1890; Sarah, widow of William Scouler, of Erie; Emily, widow of N. W. Russell, of Belle Valley; Margaret, died unmarried, May 25, 1891. Arthur Davison (deceased), married Elizabeth Wilson, who died in February, 1865. Their children are: William W. (deceased), born August 10, 1815, married Nancy Shaddock; Thomas (deceased), Jane (deceased), Nancy (deceased), married Samuel Caughey; George (deceased), James (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased), John (deceased), George Davison died February 3, 1874. His children are: Robert (deceased), George (deceased), Adaline (deceased), Ann (deceased), married William Foot.

Benjamin Whitman, Erie, Pa., eldest son of George F. and Mary (Hempherley) Whitman, born in Middletown, Dauphin county, Pa., January 28, 1840; attended the public schools of his native town until 11 years of age, when he left home to live with an uncle in Bradford county, Pennsylvania; commenced the printing trade in the office of the Harrisburg Telegraph when about 15; became part owner and editor of the Middletown Journal soon after he was 18; sold out the Journal at the end of six months, and did editorial work in Harrisburg and Lancaster for a time; taught school in Middletown in the winter of 1859-60, and part of that of 1860-61, for the purpose of improving his education; came to Erie county in January, 1861, as assistant editor of the Observer, then owned by Andrew Hopkins; became part owner and editor of the paper in January, 1862, and sole owner in April, 1864; continued to own and edit the Observer until December 1, 1878, since which time he has mainly given his time and attention to business and literary work; was chairman of the Democratic county committee for ten years; has often been a delegate to Democratic State conventions, and a member of the Democratic State committee, and was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention of 1884; appointed a Commissioner of the Erie Water Works in 1881, without solicitation on his part, and held the position until 1887, during which time the system of the department was largely reorganized and the property much improved; wrote the history of Erie county and of its several boroughs and townships for Warner, Beers & Co.'s work, published in 1884; named in 1892, without his previous knowledge, by Governor Pattison, one of the Board of World's Fair Commissioners for Pennsylvania; unanimously chosen Executive Commissioner by the Board, in September of the same year, at a salary of $5,000 per annum; obliged to resign the latter place in the spring of 1893 on account of ill health; but replaced on the Board by the common wish of its members; served on the Executive and Building Committees of the Board; blocked out the plan of State exhibits; helped to plan and fit up the State building, and prepared every important report submitted to the Board; author of the Free Public Library bill, of Pennsylvania, and of the state, county and local historical matter contained in the present book; has delivered numerous political speeches and general addresses, and is a frequent contributor to the press of this county and State. Though often solicited to be a candidate for political office, Mr. Whitman has invariably declined, having no taste nor desire in that direction. He was married, on May 30, 1870, to Mary Emma, eldest child of Silas E. and Julia A. Teel, of Erie. Mr. Whitman has erected a large number of houses in the city, some of which are unusually handsome. He purchased the Wayne block, on State street, near Eighth, May 1, 1894.

Hon. Thomas H. Sill (deceased), lawyer and legislator, son of Capt. Richard L. Sill, of the Revolutionary war, was born at Windsor, Conn., October 11, 1783. He graduated from Brown University, Rhode Island, in 1804. After studying law with Hon. Jacob Burnet, of Cincinnati, Ohio, he began practice in 1809 at Lebanon, Ohio. Failing health soon induced him to relinquish business. After traveling for a year he resumed law practice, opening an office at Erie, Penn., in 1813, being the only resident attorney at that place, where he remained for life. Erie was but a hamlet, the war being in progress, and the brig's Perry's fleet under construction in the harbor, so that upon his arrival he joined the "Minute Men," who guarded the place in momentary expectation of an attack from the British, an apprehension happily dispelled by Perry's victory on the following 10th of September. This, with a subsequent term on the staff of Gen. Wallace, completed his military service. From 1816 to 1818 he was Deputy United States Marshal, and in 1819 Deputy Attorney-General, as such assisting in the first court in Warren county. In 1823 he was elected to the Legislature and in 1826 to Congress. In 1828 he was again elected, being the only anti-Jackson member from Pennsylvania, which indicated his personal influence with his constituency. He declined nomination for the following term, and in 1837 was made President of the United States branch Bank at Erie, holding the position during the existence of the institution. He served repeatedly as Burgess of Erie. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention to revise the Constitution in 1837 and 1838, where among the able men who composed that body he maintained a marked influence. In 1848, as Presidential elector, he voted for Taylor and Fillmore. From 1849 to 1853 he was postmaster at Erie. He was an able and eloquent advocate, a careful and trusted counselor. Among contemporaries of the most respectable positions, he was a man of note and influence. While the qualities of his mind commanded the respect of all, the amiability of his disposition won their affection. He took a lively interest in public matters, especially projects for public improvements, and the cause of education, serving as school director, and for more than thirty years as trustee of Erie Academy. To no one during his career was the public eye oftener turned at public meetings and associations for the promotion of reform; while as the representative of his fellow citizens, old residents yet remember as models of composition and good taste his addresses at the reception of ex-Presidents Adams and Van Buren, and his eulogy upon President Taylor. While his style was chaste, his bearing combined dignity with modesty. As a forensic advocate, he excelled, especially in his calm and logical addresses to juries, and in this respect he had few if any superiors in the circuit of his practice. An early Republican and Whig, he had much to do in shaping the politics of this district. He lived to witness the dawn of Republican supremacy, for which he had labored, and the prosperity of a city in whose early struggles he had been so active. He died on the 7th of February, 1856, "full of honors and of years." Court was then sitting, his contemporary and old friend Judge John Galbraith upon the bench. The announcement of his death by George A. Elliott, Esq., and the addresses of Messrs. Walker, Marshall and Kelso, and with the resolutions adopted, and the feeling response of Judge Galbraith, made an impressive scene long to be remembered. Mr. Sill was married in 1816 to Joanna Boyleston, daughter of Rev. Amos and Joanna (Lanman) Chase. She was a native of Litchfield county, Connecticut, and survived until June 21, 1889, and resided in Erie. He had six children—Richard (deceased), who resided at Erie; Joanna Lanman, who married Joseph Selden (both are deceased); of their children, Elizabeth G. died in 1864; George D., of the Erie City Iron Works; Joanna S. and Emma J. survive; Sarah Hale married Matthew Taylor, who died in 1854; (their son, Rev. Frank M. S. Taylor, rector of Church of the Ascension, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.). Thomas Sill died unmarried; Joseph Sill, and James Sill, attorneys-at-law and ex-Senator, a notice of whom appears elsewhere.

John Depinet

James Sill, lawyer and legislator, Erie, is a son of Thomas H. and Joanna B. Sill, and a native of Erie. After a course of study at the Erie Academy and in his father's law office, he graduated at the New York State and National Law School, and was admitted to the Erie bar, where he has since practiced. He was in 1857 elected district attorney of Erie county, serving three years; was Presidential elector in 1868, voting for Grant and Colfax, and city solicitor of Erie in 1871 and 1872. In 1870, with Judge Greer and others, he organized the People's Savings Institution at North East, having secured the charter of the Union & Titusville R. R., in conjunction with Titusville and Union parties, organized the same as it was afterward constructed. He was elected to the State Senate in 1880 for four years. At the session of 1881, under instructions from the Republican primaries, he supported G. A. Crow for U. S. Senator, and in doing so co-operated with the fifty-six independent Republicans. He served in that session on the appointment and general judiciary committees, and as chairman of the library committee. He introduced and advocated a bill which became a law abolishing all distinction in color in schools; also an amendment to the Constitution relative to representatives in the House, and a bill tendering the marine hospital to the general government for a soldiers' and sailors' home, which ultimately passed the Legislature in 1883. At the latter session he served on the judiciary and appropriation committees, and among the most important bills introduced by him at the latter session, there was enacted one to perfect the title to real estate of descendants, a bill to which he devoted much care, one of importance to titles. In the extra session of 1883, he was active in his efforts to obtain appointment bills, his last speech on this subject having been extensively circulated through the State; his resolutions for the restoration of the land light-house, adopted by the Legislature, were generally approved by his constituents. His bill providing for the probate of wills during the life of the testator passed the Senate, but was lost in the House. He collated the first published history of Erie city, and delivered numerous historical and political addresses, and has for many years contributed freely to public journals. Senator Sill has been an active party worker, having voted with the Whig party while it existed; he represented Erie county in the last Whig State convention in 1855. Joining the Republican party in 1856, he was elected delegate to the Republican State conventions of 1859, '63, '66, 1868 and '78, several times a member of the State committee, and chairman of the Republican county committees of '68 and '67, and of the city committees of '66 and '76, all attended with much labor and success. He declined the tendered appointment under President Lincoln of provost marshal for the Nineteenth district in '63. As member of the bar, much of the time with a large practice, he was in 1875 president of the Erie Law Association, and as a member of the library committee in 1878, initiated and carried out the placing of portraits of ex-judges and deceased attorneys in the court-room. As a member of the city council in 1857-'58, upon a special committee, he proposed a number of reforms which were enacted in the charter for the classification and elongation of terms of councilmen, regulation of an increase of the power of the mayor, etc., until the adoption of the Wallace Act. Upon his return from Harrisburg, Mr. Sill resumed practice at the bar.

Jerome W. Wetmore, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born in Warren county, Pennsylvania, May 1, 1820. He is a son of Lansing and Caroline (Ditmars) Wetmore, the former a grandson of Amos Wetmore and Hugh White, of Whitestown, N. Y., and the latter coming with her parents from Long Island. Lansing Wetmore was prothonotary, clerk of the courts, and register and recorder at the organization of Warren county; afterward practicing law and was associate judge, retiring in the last years of his life to a farm near Warren. He prepared for college at the Warren Academy, and graduated from Union College, N. Y., in 1841. He afterwards engaged in teaching. He was principal of the Warren Academy for one and a half years, and in 1846 removed to Erie, where he taught in the academy for two years. He commenced the practice of law in Erie in 1849, and has been continuously engaged therein for many years. Recognizing the correctness of the adage that the law is a jealous profession, and should not have rivals to distract the attention from its exactions, Mr. Wetmore has yet not strictly followed its requirements, but has yielded to the fascinations of scientific and practical investigations. While engaged as instructor in the Erie Academy he commenced the examination of the relation between electricity and the attraction of gravitation. The statement of the law of universal gravitation seemed not to recognize the effect of motion on gravitation. In the year 1858 he invented the gravimeter to test this effect. By this apparatus it was shown that the attraction from center to center is modified by motion, so that the revolution on the axis is a consequence of the revolution in the orbit. In 1857 he invented, and in 1861-'62 put in operation on the Allegheny river, a shoal water steamboat, which was propelled by projections from the floe of a large wheel running on the bottom of the river. This was a success over the means then used of towing by horses, etc. But it was sunk on an obstruction in going down from Irvin to Oil City. The projection of railroads along the river valleys made it evident that they would supercede other methods of transportation on shoal water rivers, and the experiment was abandoned.

In 1863 Mr. Wetmore patented the original pneumatic door check. In 1865 he patented the joint chimney cap, and in 1869 the surface burning fuel feeder for furnaces and stoves. He has obtained various other patents, some of which were of value, some only a step toward the requirements of success, and some shown by subsequent trial to be impractical, or not reaching the economy necessary for their adoption. In 1889 he built the block at the northwest corner of Seventh and Peach streets for an office and boarding house—since materially enlarged and improved, and now used for hotel purposes and known as the "Kimberly Hotel." In 1888-'89 he built the factory at the corner of State and Sixteenth streets, for Mr. N. A. Watson's boiler injector manufacturing establishment and Lloyd & Sterrett's machine shop, since including the button factory and brass and filter works added by Mr. Watson. Lots, lands and buildings in Erie, Corry, and the townships of Mill Creek, Harbor Creek, Concord, Summit and Fairview have called for more or less attention in their improvement or purchase and sale. Engaged early as a teacher, Mr. Wetmore has continued to feel an earnest interest in educational progress. He brought the attention of the Erie school directors to the improvement in schoolhouse architecture, as shown in Barnard's work on that subject, which resulted in the building of the First Ward schoolhouse, the first advance from the plain, cheap structures theretofore used. He has maintained that variety is needed in our schools to meet the demands of all people, and has strenuously contended for the continuance of the academy, against determined efforts to abolish it. In the railroad war of 1852, Mr. Wetmore took an active part (against a blind infatuation) in favor of the acceptance of the offer of the railroad companies to give, for the peaceable surrender of the break of gauge (the law for which had been repealed) the road to Jamestown and Little Valley, the road to Pittsburg and the location at Erie of the machine shops of the Lake Shore R. R. Company.

Charles M. Tibbals (deceased), late merchant and manufacturer, was born in Pompey Hill, N. Y., May 16, 1811, son of Daniel and Mary (Marvin) Tibbals, natives of Connecticut and of English descent. He came to Erie from New York in 1836, and embarked in business here. He was united in marriage with Delia, daughter of Dr. Otto Lyman, of Cazenovia, N. Y., of English descent. He died in 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Tibbals were the parents of four children: Charles M., jr.; Eliza, wife of William H. Whitehead, member of Erie Rubber Company; Catherine (deceased), and Martha A. Charles M., jr., was born August 28, 1840, acquired his education in Erie Academy and became engaged in 1860 with his father in the industry now known as the Chicago and Erie Stove Company. On the death of his father, Charles continued the manufacture of stoves for a time. He also clerked in Erie city several years. He was married in Worcester, Mass., to Fannie, daughter of Frederick Hancock, of English descent. Mr. Tibbals and wife are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. In politics he is independent. Lincoln N. Tibbals, brother of Charles M., came to Erie with his brother in 1836. He was for years associated with his brother in general merchandizing and afterwards engaged in forwarding and insurance business. He married Miss Mary Haverstick, daughter of John D. Haverstick, formerly of Carlisle. They had seven children, of whom Miss Mary and Henry Tibbals, both residents of Erie, survive. Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Tibbals died in Erie.

John C. Brady, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., born in Fort Dodge, Ia., October 2, 1858, is a son of the late John W. and Amanda (Lott) Brady, the former a native of Connecticut and the latter of New York. John C. Brady completed his education at Lake Shore Seminary, North East, Erie county, Pa., in 1876. He read law in the office of Davenport & Griffith, and was admitted to the bar September 30, 1879, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Erie. Mr. Brady is a stalwart Democrat and has been efficient in party service. In February, 1887, he was elected mayor of Erie on the Democratic ticket, and served for one term. He was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention in 1892. As one of Erie's wide-awake and progressive citizens, since 1889, Mr. Brady has been most effective in his identification with the Erie Electric Motor Company, which operates all the street railroads of Erie, and which has been so important a factor in Erie's suburban growth; he has been vice-president of the company during that period; he is also the president of the Erie-Welsbach Gas Company, one of the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Gas Company, the Jamestown Illuminating Gas Company, the Pennsylvania Oil Company, the Eureka Tempered Copper Company, and of the Real Estate Title Company, of which last named he is also secretary. It was directly through the instrumentality of Mr. Brady that the Metric Metal Company located its large manufacturing plant in Erie. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, Knight Templar, a Mystic Shriner and a member of Mt. Olivet Commandery, Cincinnati Consistory and Alkora Shrine, Cleveland. Mr. Brady was married June 2, 1887, to Harriet Helen, daughter of the late Hon. John W. Hammond, ex-mayor of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Brady have one child, Lois, reside on West Sixth street, and are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

David Kennedy and his wife came from the North of Ireland, it is believed, about 1828. Mr. Kennedy was a weaver by trade, and resided on East Seventh, near Holland street, Erie. Finding the trade of weaving would furnish but little employment, he obtained a privilege of digging clay for making brick in the neighborhood of the old fort, Presque Isle, at the corner of Second and Parade streets, and to the eastward. His enterprise and energy were rewarded with much success, and he continued the business in different localities for over forty years. He purchased the lot at the corner of Holland and Fifth streets, and erected four brick dwellings. He acquired property in different parts of the city and became an influential and respected citizen; was for a number of years a councilman of Erie. Mr. Kennedy had a large family, among whom were: Maria (wife of Gen. John Kilpatrick, sheriff of Erie county), who died leaving one daughter, who also died; Matilda, wife of William C. Warren, a banker in Erie; Jeannette, wife of Hon. Wilson Laird, mayor of Erie, and member of the Legislature; Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Huble (both deceased), and Robert (deceased). After Mrs. Kennedy's death, Mr. Kennedy married Miss Cummings, whose children were: John (deceased), served as a cavalryman in the war; David, who married Miss Hatch, and lives in Erie; Amelia, died young. Several of Mrs. Matilda Warren's children are living, among whom are Miss Jennie and William H., who survived their sister, Mrs. Josephine Justice, recently deceased. Several of Mrs. Laird's children are living, and one of John Kennedy's children. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy were adherents of the United Presbyterian Church. Both have died within the last decade. Though subject to some mutations of fortune, Mr. Kennedy for many years had a large property and influence. By his energy and integrity he secured the respect and esteem of very many who were cognizant of his merits and shining qualities. Cheerful in disposition, industrious in habits, considerate of his duties to society and mindful of his obligations to church and State, Mr. Kennedy made his mark in the community. As adverse circumstances shadowed his later years, those who knew him best remembered with the most satisfaction his record as a man and a citizen, which nearly half a century had made his surroundings so agreeable and his position in the community seem so secure.

Rev. Adolph Leopold Benze (deceased), former pastor of St. John's German Evangelical Lutheran Church, corner of Twenty-third and Peach streets, Erie, Pa., was born in the Fortress of Thorn, Prussia, Germany, September 18, 1833, son of Frederick and Eva Maria (de Konallanski) Benze, the latter of ancient Polish nobility. Frederick Benze, at the time of his son's birth, was cavalry officer in the Prussian army; later he was discharged with the rank of captain and appointed prison inspector of a large district. Frederick B. was the descendant and heir of an old family of Brunswick, whose history is known up to 1650, near the close of the Thirty Years' War. They were located at Velpke, Brunswick, where the venerable family seat, a typical Saxon manse, built in 1729, is still to be seen. As proprietors of noted sandstone quarries, the male ancestors all took to the chisel and made ornamental stone carvings. The vicissitudes of military life forever separated Frederick Benze and his family from these surroundings. Thus Leopold Benze happened to receive his early education at Neustadt, Prussia, and after two years' travel in Germany and Hungary, he came to America in 1854, locating at Lancaster, Pa. He completed his classical education at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, and then entered the theological seminary of the same place, from which he graduated in 1864. He was ordained in the same year by the Evangelical Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania, and was called to the Lutheran congregation at Warren. Here he remained eight years, and left, as a memorial to his skillful administration, a flourishing congregation and a handsome new church edifice. In May, 1872, Rev. Benze received a call to the pastorate of St. John's Lutheran Church, at Erie, Pa., which charge he accepted and held up to the time of his death, January 18, 1891. Mr. Benze, on account of his astonishing activity and success in building up the largest Protestant congregation of Erie, was one of the best known men of the county. He possessed exceptional ability as a pulpit orator, and as such was widely known. His reputation, however, was more than local. A fluent writer and frequent contributor to church and secular papers, he was asked more than once to assume the editorship of one of the best known German papers in the United States. Moreover, he achieved for himself a lasting monument in another department, that of church music, by the publication of a volume of songs. He is generally acknowledged to have been excellent, both as a poet and as a composer. Rev. Leopold Benze was married September 8, 1864, to Miss Elizabeth Kiehl, of Lancaster, Pa. The latter was the daughter of Jacob and Saloma Kiehl, born in Erlenbach, Hesse, October 26, 1839, and was brought to America in her infancy. To this union were born seven children: Charles Theodore, a prominent teacher of languages; Gustave Adolphus, his father's successor at St. John's; Leopold Otto, studying theology at Philadelphia; Marie Louise, a teacher of German in the Erie public schools; Albert Louis, a student of theology at Chicago; Emma C. and Frederick W., students in the Erie public schools.

Rev. Gustave Benze, present pastor of St. John's Church, Erie, Pa., was born in Warren, Pa., January 11, 1867. He received his early education in the public schools of Erie, graduating from the high school in 1884. His classical education was completed at Thiel College, Greenville, Pa., where he took his degree two years later. Then Mr. Benze took up the study of theology, partly at Gettysburg Seminary, where he spent two years, and partly also in Philadelphia, where he graduated in June, 1889. He was ordained the same month, and was called to the Lutheran Churches of Corry and Drake's Mills. The charges required ministrations in both German and English, in addition to which Rev. Benze also preached in the Danish language, which resulted in the organization of a Danish congregation. His rare energy, administrative tact and ability found an enlarged field of usefulness when called to St. John's Lutheran Church at the death of his esteemed father. Under his administration a flourishing German mission has already been planted in East Erie, and all present indications bespeak a bright future for pastor and congregation.

Joseph Johnston, senior member of the firm of Johnston & Brevillier, wholesale grocers, Erie, Pa., was born in Summit township, this county, May 8, 1822, and is a son of Joseph and Fanny (Graham) Johnston. His father, who was a native of County Down, Ireland, came to the United States in 1793, the family locating in Milesburg, Centre county, Pa. Soon after, Joseph, accompanied by his brother James, came to Erie county and Summit township. He cleared and worked a large farm, and for many years carried on an extensive transportation business between Erie and Pittsburg and Bellefonte, by means of heavy covered wagons drawn by four and six horse teams. About 1864 he relinquished the active duties of farming and removed to Erie, where he quietly passed the evening of his life. He was an active Whig and Republican, a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and a devoted friend of his old pastor, Dr. Lyon. He was married to Miss Graham about 1814; she died about 1860. They reared a family of eight children: James, died in Michigan; John, died in Mobile, Ala.; Robert, died in Louisville, Ky.; William, resides in Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Hugh Rutherford, of Erie; Joseph, jr.; Orville, died in Erie, in 1873; James, died in Summit, and George N., who was district attorney of Erie county, and died in February, 1857. Mr. Johnston was remarried, in 1864, to Mrs. George Gallagher, who died in 1887. The gentleman whose name forms the subject of this sketch received his education in the public schools of his native town, and remained associated with his father in business until 1853, when he removed to Erie and entered the grocery business, in partnership with his brother Orville, under the firm name of Johnston & Bro. About 1862, F. Breviller was admitted into the partnership, and the style of the firm became Johnston & Breviller. At the death of Orville Johnston, in 1873, the remaining partners purchased his interest, and have since continued the business with success. About 1858 their store was destroyed by fire, but they immediately resumed business in the Reed House block, where they remained one year. The retail branch was dropped upon removal to the Kinderrecht block, on Canal street, where they continued three years. They then removed to French street, a few doors from their present premises. After remaining there about eight years they removed to 505 and 507 French street, where they have since continued. Mr. Johnston was married October 17, 1850, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Robert Robinson, Esq., of Le Boeuf township. They had no children of their own, but reared four: Anna, wife of E. S. Rice, Esq., of Chicago; Emma, who died at 20 years of age; Miss Jennie, and Charles Funk, of Cincinnati, Ohio. While Mr. Johnston and wife were riding in their carriage, October 26, 1891, the team became unmanageable, upsetting the carriage and killing Mrs. Johnston almost instantly. She was a devoted member of the First Presbyterian Church, and her loss was deeply felt. Mr. Johnston was remarried in October, 1892, to Miss Mary, daughter of the late Hon. S. E. Woodruff, of Erie. They are members of the First Presbyterian Church, of which they are active workers and generous supporters. At the southwest corner of Fourth and Peach streets is one of the most beautiful homes in Northwestern Pennsylvania. It is the residence of Mr. Johnston, erected by him in 1865. For upwards of forty years Mr. Johnston has been looked upon as one of Erie's best citizens and most enterprising business men. He always has the best interests of the community at heart, and is ever ready to give his means and influence in support of every worthy enterprise of a public or charitable nature. In politics he was originally a Whig, but has been a staunch Republican since the organization of the party. He served as a member of the Select Council of Erie for a period of eighteen years, and in 1884 represented the Twenty-seventh Congressional district of Pennsylvania as a delegate to the National convention at Chicago.

Henry R. Barnhurst, general superintendent of the Erie City Iron Works, was born in Philadelphia, September 3, 1846, and is a son of William Barnhurst, one of the first manufacturers of iron and steel umbrella frames in the United States. The family were for many generations residents of Stratford-on-Avon, England, whence Mr. Barnhurst's grandfather came to Philadelphia, in 1810, and established what was then one of the largest brass foundries in this country. William Barnhurst reared a family of three children: Henry R., Mary (Mrs. H. E. Turner, of Philadelphia), and William, who has charge of the sales of the products of the Erie Engine Works and the Union Iron Works in New York. Mr. Barnhurst was educated in the Philadelphia high school, and for a short time after completing his education, clerked in a dry goods store. He then engaged in the mining and shipping of coal, which he continued until 1879, when he came to Erie as treasurer and general manager of the Stearns Manufacturing Company. He continued with, and was largely responsible for the success of this concern until 1890, when he accepted a position with the Union Iron Works, as secretary and manager. He assumed the duties of his present position September 1, 1895. Mr. Barnhurst was married June 3, 1889, to Miss Emily, daughter of Mr. J. N. Gregory, of Philadelphia. This happy union has been blessed with two children: Effie (who married Gustav Kaemmerling, of the United States navy), and Harry, who is draughtsman in the office of the Union Iron Works. Mr. Barnhurst and family are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and he is a Knight Templar Mason. In politics Mr. Barnhurst is a thorough and stanch Democrat, and from 1889 to 1891 he served his adopted city as a member of the Board of Fire Commissioners. This sketch would not be complete without stating that Mr. Barnhurst is one of the finest bass singers in the State. He has sung in nearly all the choirs of the city, and no musical program, made up of local talent, is considered complete without his name.

Elijah Babbitt (deceased), attorney at law and member of Congress, was born in Providence, R. I., July 29, 1795; his father was a mariner, and during many years served as captain in commerce between New England and the West Indies, and later as lieutenant in the Continental army during the Revolutionary war. Some time after its close he moved to the State of New York with his family, and there died, leaving his son, Elijah, in his minority. After the decease of his father, Elijah went to reside in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania. Having acquired an academic education, he studied law in the office of Samuel Hepburn, Esq., a leading attorney in the central portion of the State; was admitted in March, 1824, to the bar in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, and commenced practice. In due time he obtained a fair business. But thinking Erie offered inducements more in affinity with his aspiring ambition, Mr. Babbitt removed there with a well-selected law library. By the aid of a spring wagon and team of horses, the journey of 230 miles, over rough and mountainous roads, was accomplished in nine cold days. That was before the advent of railroads. The same journey may now be accomplished in nine hours over the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Mr. Babbitt arrived at Erie January 26, 1826. He soon rented a suitable office on the west side of French street (then the principal business street), near the corner of Fourth street, put his library on the shelves and hung out his law sign. Erie was then a town of about 900 inhabitants. Mr. Babbitt was admitted as an attorney at the first court held in Erie after his arrival, and at each court next held in the Sixth judicial district, composed of the counties of Erie, Warren, Crawford, Venango and Mercer, and in due time raised himself to the position of one of its leading attorneys. On November 28, 1827, he was married to Caroline Elizabeth, daughter of John Kelso (deceased), one of Erie county's pioneer settlers. Mr. Babbitt was for many years a trustee of the Erie Academy; also an attorney for the borough, and later for the city of Erie, and drew its charter of advancement from a borough to a city. In 1834 and 1835 he was prosecuting attorney for the commonwealth; he was a member of the House of Representatives in 1835 and 1836, and was elected a member of the Senate for a term of three years in 1843, and while discharging the duties of these offices was largely instrumental in effecting and hastening the completion of the state canal to the harbor of Erie. In 1858, the friends of Mr. Babbitt nominated him for Representative in Congress of the Twenty-fifth Congressional district, composed of the counties of Erie and Crawford. After an ardent contest with an able and popular opponent, he was elected by a majority of over 1,500 votes. In 1860, he was, after a like contest, re-elected to the same office by a majority of about 2,500. Our subject was among the first after the slaveholders had inaugurated their war for the destruction of the Union) to advocate on the floor of the House the immediate emancipation of slaves, and their employment as soldiers in the army of the United States. His Congressional record shows him to have been a strict economist in all things, except in those designed for the speedy suppression of the great Rebellion, all of which survived every attorney, judge, law officer, physician and clergyman who were living in Erie when he arrived there. In 1828 Mr. Babbitt aided in the organization of the parish of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church in Erie. It was the first organization (with one exception) of a church of that faith in Northwestern Pennsylvania. It gathered about half a dozen members, and a few others who desired to become such. He was through life among its constant supporters. In 1849 and 1850 Mr. Babbitt joined with others in advancing money to secure for burial purposes seventy-five acres of beautiful forest land adjoining this city, on which the Erie cemetery is located, and in procuring the charter which dedicates it forever to the purpose for which it was purchased, without distinction of religion, class or color. Having lived for almost sixty years on the same spot upon which he had commenced housekeeping, and been for sixty-one years a member of the Erie bar, of which he had long been the nestor, in January, 1887, and in his 92d year, he quietly sank to rest. His fine intellect survived to the last. He was buried from St. Paul's Episcopal Church (of which he was one of the founders) in the Erie cemetery, which he aided in instituting, and of which he was an active corporator till his death.

Hon. George H. Cutler (deceased). The Cutler family is of English origin, New England stock, and noted for its longevity. Thomas Cutler, grandfather of George H., born in Massachusetts in 1736, a soldier in the French war, died in 1855. George H. Cutler was born in Guilford, Vt., in 1809, and is a son of Nahum and Martha (Robbins) Cutler, both deceased, natives of Windham county, Vermont, and Hartford, Conn., respectively. He received a common school education, having a private tutor for the higher branches. He read law with Hon. Judge Ross, of Cortland, N. Y. In 1855 he located in Girard, Erie county; two years later entered the office of Judge Galbraith, of Erie, being admitted to the bar in 1840. He was the oldest practitioner in Erie county. Mr. Cutler was the Democratic candidate for Congress in 1852. In 1872 he was elected to the State Senate, and was chosen speaker in May, 1874, and president pro tem. in January, 1875. He was the last speaker under the old and the first president pro tem. under the new constitution, presiding in the absence of the lieutenant governor. Mr. Cutler married, in Cayuga county, New York, in 1830, Louisa Stewart, a native of Cambridge, N. Y. Six children (two deceased) blessed this union—Marcus N.; George A., who is a prominent member of the bar at Leland, Mich.; Mary, wife of Irvin P. Hinds, of Hinsdale, Ill., and Louisa. Mr. Cutler died in Erie in 1872, being then the oldest surviving member of the Erie bar. His son, M. N., whose long service in the State department at Harrisburg and afterward in the register's office and abstract office in Erie, had made his capabilities so manifest, died in Erie in the summer of 1894.

William Brewster, secretary and treasurer of the Erie and Pittsburg R. R. Company Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, November 20, 1828. He is a son of the late Alexander W. and Susan M. (Jones) Brewster, the former a native of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, and of Irish descent, the latter a native of Connecticut and of Welsh extraction. Mr. W. Brewster's grandfather, Bradford Steele, was a soldier in the Patriot army during the Revolutionary war. Alexander W. Brewster was born in 1798, and came with his father's family to Erie county in 1806. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and finally became one of the leading merchants of that city, and later in life was for some years engaged in business as a manufacturer of woollen goods. He was a valuable citizen and served efficiently in numerous official capacities, among them that of sheriff, and was the last person to hold the office of Burgess of Erie. He was one of the incorporators of the Erie cemetery, and his own was the first interment in that cemetery. He died May 26, 1851; his wife survived until March, 1876. Of their family four children survive: Mrs. L. M. Little, of Erie; Mrs. Frank Milligan, of Chicago, and Chester A. and William Brewster, of Erie. William Brewster was educated in the public schools and at Erie Academy, graduating from the latter institution in 1835. His first business association was as clerk in Canal Collector Colt's office, where he was employed for two years. He was then engaged as one of the engineering corps in the laying out and construction of the Erie and the North East R. R., continuing in that service until the completion of the road, January 10, 1852. For the following six years he was paying teller and bookkeeper in W. C. Curry's bank at Erie.

From 1858 to 1861, he was in the employ of the wholesale grocery firm of Gray & Farrar. He was then for two years clerk under John W. Douglass, collector of internal revenue at Erie, leaving this to re-enter the banking business with the Second National Bank, successor to the private banking business of W. C. Curry. In September, 1866, he severed his connection with the bank to go to Iowa as cashier and bookkeeper for the late William L. Scott and J. & J. Casey, who had large contracts for the extension of the Chicago and Rock Island R. R. to Council Bluffs. Returning to Erie on account of ill-health, Mr. Brewster was, during 1868, secretary and treasurer of the Erie Water Works, and was thereafter in the employ of William L. Scott as confidential clerk and cashier until Mr. Scott's decease, since which time he has occupied the same relationship to Mr. Scott's estate. On August 1, 1870, Mr. Brewster was made secretary and treasurer of the Erie and Pittsburg R. R. Company, which he still holds. He was married October 10, 1871, to Mary, daughter of the late Richard Swan, of Fairview township. Mr. and Mrs. Brewster reside at 156 East Fifth street (where Mr. Brewster was born), and are members of the Park Presbyterian Church.

The Colton Family.—Eli Colton was among the earliest settlers of Erie county. He lived a long life and left a large family. He came from Granby, Conn., to Elk Creek township in 1798. Then his nearest neighbor was three miles distant. During the first winter he lived alone in a cabin or shanty. He married Elizabeth Deitz, who was of German descent, and came from Maryland. They had fifteen children, nearly all of whom lived to the meridian or advanced years of life. The influence of the family was extended. Among them were Eli, who lived to advanced years in Elk Creek township, and Fidelia, who married Ebenezer Matthews, both of whom reside in Elk Creek township. Their son Henry resides in Erie, and another son, Mark D., is in Elk Creek. Of the original family, George W., the eleventh child, was born in Elk Creek December 3, 1819. He was reared on the farm, received a good English education, and followed farming until nearly 30 years old. He spent some time in the West, but returned to Elk Creek township. He was appointed clerk to the county commissioners, came to Erie in 1853, and served as such until 1863, when he was elected prothonotary of Erie county. After serving three years he went to Washington and served as a clerk in the House of Representatives until 1868. He then became secretary and treasurer of the Dime Bank, which he helped organize. He continued this service until about 1876, when he entered the State treasurer's office at Harrisburg, from which, in 1878, he was transferred to the office of secretary of the commonwealth, where he remained until 1883. He was then appointed government superintendent of construction of the United States public buildings at Erie, and so continued until 1886, and retired with Arthur's administration. Mr. Colton was married in 1852 to Mrs. Adelia Benedict. She died February 8, 1878. In December, 1889, Mr. Colton married Mrs. Mary Hoster, who died in July, 1894. Since then Mr. Colton resides with friends in the old family home, on West Fourth street, in Erie.

Robert Cochran (deceased), son of John and Sarah (Lattimore) Cochran, was born at Milton, Northumberland county, Pa., August 10, 1798, and removed with his father's family to Erie, in 1809, and lived the greater part of his life in Erie and its immediate vicinity. In his youth he was employed as a clerk in the land office of the State, when the seat of government was at Lancaster, and, on its removal to Harrisburg, he continued in that position, his father being the head of that office under the administration of Governor Snyder. He was thus early in life brought in contact with the leading men of the State, and in after life received from them proofs of their appreciation of his capacity and fidelity in public position, by having conferred on him important posts of honor and profit. He was postmaster at Erie twelve years, being appointed through the friendship and influence of President Buchanan, who, living in the same city with him in his youth, was an early observer of his fitness for public position. Mr. Cochran was a man of decided and honest character, and never encountered meanness and dishonesty without denouncing them in terms consistent with his own honorable impulses; he was a man of more than ordinary clearness of mind and business capacity, and in the various positions held by him—the postoffice at Erie, and the several local offices of his neighborhood—he always proved himself a capable and accommodating officer. He married Eliza Justice, a native of New Jersey, October 20, 1822, and had nine children: Sarah and Rebecca, twins; Mary, Matilda, Martha, Eliza, John, Harriet and Henrietta; of these Eliza and Matilda are now deceased. Rebecca married Dr. A. Thayer, and had three children: Frank, Hattie and Jessie (deceased). Martha married Edwin Willis (deceased); has two children: John C. and Edwin B.; who married Miss Minnie Welden, of Battle Creek, Mich., and has two children: Jessie Thayer and Vera. Mrs. Cochran died April 19, 1863, and he died December 9, 1869. The Hon. John Cochran was associate judge of Erie county, and built and operated some of the first mills erected in the county; he had, besides Robert, one other son, George Cochran, who was born February 4, 1792, and died on the Erie homestead when about 36 years of age.

Alvin Thayer, M. D., physician and surgeon, Erie, Pa., office and residence 204 West Twenty-sixth street, was born in Erie October 1, 1824, and is a son of Albert and Almira (Glazier) Thayer, the former born at Bellows Falls, Vt., in 1791, and the latter in Vermont in 1807. Albert Thayer received a common school education in his native place, and studied medicine under his father and grandfather, who were both prominent physicians. He came to Erie in 1812, and took up the practice of his chosen profession. He was elected sheriff in 1824, serving three years, when he again took up the practice of medicine and followed it until his death, September 25, 1848. His wife departed this life March 9, 1868. To them were born six children: Plarry, who became a physician and practiced with his brother Albert, in Erie; Albert (father of Alvin Thayer); Zeph, a physician, practiced in Girard, Erie county, until his death; Alvin, also a physician, practiced at Girard; John was educated for a physician, but locating in Crawford county, followed farming until his death, and one daughter. Dr. Alvin Thayer, Erie's oldest and best known physician, received a good common school education and studied medicine for six years under his father. He attended lectures at New Orleans, and in 1840 began the practice of his chosen profession, which he has since followed with marked success. He was married June 5, 1852, to Rebecca, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Cochran. Their children are: Frank, studying medicine with his father; Hattie, and Jessie (deceased), wife of William Rix. Dr. Thayer can trace his family genealogy back to 1540. In Scotland one of his ancestors was physician to Mary, Queen of Scots; several were generals in the American army, and many of the family connections are professional men holding eminent positions. The doctor has occupied the position on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. ten years; was acting surgeon of the 145th Reg., P. V. I., and volunteered as an independent at the battle of Antietam. He is a member of the State Medical Society, of the United States Association. He is a member of the Masonic order, and in politics is a Democrat.

The Crane Family.—In 1797 Abiather Crane, a young survivor from Connecticut, came to Conneaut township. The next year he and his brother, Elihu, located near the present site of Lexington. Both brothers were soldiers in the Revolutionary war. In the spring of 1799, Elihu Crane removed to Elk Creek and located, where a large connection of the name still have their homes. Abiather and the Pomroys are intermarried. In 1809, Abiather Crane and his wife, Ruth (McClelland) Crane, removed to Mill Creek township and purchased a number of outlots between Fifth and Tenth streets, and property on Ninth street, in Erie. This property is now valuable, and included in the city of Erie. Mr. Crane resided with his family on East Sixth street. There he cleared and cultivated a number of acres of land, and also made brick. He had twelve children, all of whom reached their majority. He died in August, 1826, leaving a large family, and some unsettled business, which caused much well-located land to be sacrificed in the settlement of his estate. He had six sons and six daughters: Abiather, who married Margaret Ewing, settled on his father's estate, and died about twenty years ago, leaving one son (George W., who is in business in Erie); Amos B., who died about 1852, unmarried; Henry H., who died unmarried in 1874. He also resided on his father's estate; James M., married Miss Priscilla Roberts and died in 1852, leaving a family, among whom are Mrs. A. H. Williams and Mrs. Williams, wife of Joseph H. Williams, president of the Erie School Board; Mr. Joseph M. Crane also resides on the estate; Orville, who married Miss Eliza Arkenburg, a native of New York State, had his home on the estate until his death, September 5, 1858. He left five children. His son, Charles, who served in the war, and died in 1863; Joseph P., and Frank M., being active and influential citizens of Erie, and Mary and Martha, all of whom reside on the old estate; and William A., the only surviving one of Abiather's children, resides in Michigan. Of the daughters, Eliza married James Love, a farmer of Mill Creek, and died in 1848, leaving two children; William W., who became one of the most influential and wealthy citizens of Mill Creek, and died in 1893; Eliza M., wife of Henry Caughey, of Mill Creek, who survives; Olivia, who died in 1867, unmarried, and Clavinda, who died in 1888, unmarried; Mrs. Harriet Chancellor, wife of Robert Chancellor, died about fifteen years since; Mrs. Orvaline, wife of Capt. John H. Milfar, who died in 1864, also a resident upon the estate, left children; Eliza O., Mrs. Eley, John, William, and Evaline, wife of George Hope, who died many years since, and also had a home on the estate. He left three children, of whom George was killed before Atlanta, under Sherman. The fact of twelve slightly and desirable places of residence having been made from the residence of the estate of Abiather Crane, indicated the care with which his location was made, and his foresightedness as to values. That an important part of the estate is still in the possession of the descendants of the original purchaser, and that it has so remained for nearly a century, indicates a tenacity of purpose on the part of his descendants in keeping with the enterprise of their ancestor, who, almost a century ago, made his first location in the wilds of Conneaut township, and afterwards in what has become part of Erie city. Col. Abiather Crane was one of the first Board of County Commissioners of Erie county, and with the first judge, John Vincent, as one of his colleagues. They purchased the county property upon which the court house and jail now stand. He was an enterprising man. His service in the Revolution was followed by service in the military establishment of Connecticut. He was afterwards a justice of the peace in Erie county, and colonel of the 17th Reg. of Pa. Militia. His commission as a military officer, both in Connecticut and Pennsylvania, are in the possession of his descendants. Mr. Crane died in 1852.

Hon. Joseph McCarter, president of the Second National Bank of Erie, was born in Franklin county, New York, March 20, 1829, and is a son of Joseph and Isabella McCarter, natives of New York, and of Irish descent. At the age of ten years he began clerking in a store in Erie, which he followed until 1852; when he engaged in the grocery business, which he conducted with success for eight years. In 1860 he entered into partnership with Mr. W. J. F. Liddell in what is now the Erie City Iron Works, which was sold to Messrs. Selden & Bliss in 1865. In the same year he built the Erie Car Works, which were very successfully operated for two years, and then sold to the Erie & Pittsburg Railroad Company. Associated with Henry C. Shannon, Orange Noble and Wm. S. Brown, he, in 1867, erected the Erie City Elevator, another institution which has been of great value to the city, and which two years later was purchased by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. In 1870 he became vice-president and general manager of the Second National Bank, and eleven years later was elected to the presidency. In 1873 Mr. McCarter purchased an interest in the Stearns Manufacturing Company, assuming its general management until 1881, at the latter date disposing of his interest therein and since that time he has devoted his time to the banking interests. Both before and since his identification with the bank, Mr. McCarter's business methods, and the dispatch and success with which he manipulates extensive and intricate transactions, have been of a character to mark him as belonging to the front rank of financiers. He was married April 15, 1857, to Miss Eliza J. Moorhead, by whom he has two children, Cora, wife of Lieut. John M. Bowyer of the United States navy, and William J., secretary of the Colby Piano Company. In politics Mr. McCarter identifies himself with the Democratic party, and although not an aspirant for political position, has served his city acceptably as a member of its councils and as mayor in 1881-82. With the best interests of the community always at heart, and with a keen insight of financial affairs, no better authority can be had upon the great questions which affect the commercial interests of the country.

The Teel Family.—JOHN TEEL, first, was a native of Connecticut. He was the progenitor of all of that name in Erie. Mr. Teel came to Erie among the first settlers and died there early in the century, at the age of 97. His son, John Teel, the second, was born near Hartford, Conn., March 31, 1779, came to Erie in 1796, and located about the year 1798 at the southwest corner of Ninth and Peach streets, where he built a commodious house, which continued to be his home for life. It is still occupied by members of the family. He married Esther, sister of George and John Moore, the former of whom was a noted man in Erie, having been a member of the Assembly of Pennsylvania and filled other positions. He removed to Illinois about the year 1836, where he died. Mr. Teel served awhile in the war of 1812. He owned considerable property, embracing the entire front on Peach between Ninth and Tenth streets, and several well-located outlots. He had a large family, among whom were John Teel, third (who died two or three years since); Alexander Teel (deceased); Mrs. J. W. Bates, recently deceased; Mrs. Peter J. Breece; Mrs. Perry Oliver; Ann, who died unmarried in 1838; Norman, who resides in McKeen township, and Silas E., who married Miss Julia Davison, and for some years was in the office of collector of tolls for the Erie canal, and died about thirty years since. Of Silas's children were: Silas E., jr. (deceased); Emma, wife of Benjamin Whitman, and Esther, who married H. H. Whitcare, of Wellsville, O. Mrs. Esther (Moore) Teel died many years since. John Teel, second, died April 21, 1872, aged 93 years, having spent a serene old age in the midst of a community among whom he had resided 76 years, during which time he gained a reputation for honesty and integrity, and became well known as a skillful and successful builder. The widows of John Teel, third, and of Silas E. Teel still reside in Erie.

Edward Cranch, physician and surgeon, office and residence 109 West Ninth street, Erie, Pa., whose earliest known ancestor was Richard Cranch, known as a rigid Puritan and lived at Dartmouth, county Devon, England, about 1610. He was a woolen manufacturer, as was his son Andrew and his grandson John. His great-grandson, Richard Cranch, came to America in 1746, locating in Salem, Mass., as a watchmaker, later becoming postmaster, judge and colonial senator. He was born in Kingsbridge, county Devon, England, October 26, 1726. He married Mary, daughter of the Rev. Wm. Smith. This union was blessed with one son, William, born in Weymouth, Mass., July 17, 1769. This son was educated to the law in the office of Thomas Dawes, of Boston, and went to Washington, D. C., in 1794. He was appointed associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, by his uncle, President John Adams, served five years, and at the unanimous request of the Washington bar, was made chief justice of the same court by Thomas Jefferson, which office he held until his death, September 1, 1855. He married Nancy, daughter of William Greenleaf, of Boston, who was sheriff of Boston during the Revolutionary war, and who first read the Declaration of Independence in that city. To this union were born thirteen children, the seventh of whom was John, born February 2, 1807, at Washington, D. C. He was educated in Columbian University, D. C., graduating in 1826, in the third class graduated from that institution. He then went abroad and studied art in Paris, Rome and Florence for four years; returning, he located in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he resided and followed his vocation for eleven years. He painted portraits of many celebrated men of his time. He married April 15, 1845, Charlotte, daughter of Charles H. Appleton, of Baltimore, Md., and removed to Boston, where three children were born, Hannah, who married Thomas F. Moses, president of the Urbana University, Urbana, Ohio; Richard, died in infancy, and John, died in infancy. The family moved to New York city, where he became a member of the National Academy of Design, with his studio in the Old University Building. Here Edward Cranch was born October 16, 1851. Three years later the family removed to Washington, D. C. The father died January 6, 1891, in Urbana, Ohio, where the mother now resides. The well-known poet and artist, Christopher P. Cranch, was an uncle of the doctor's, and died in Cambridge, Mass., in 1893. Dr. Cranch studied for two years, 1866-68, with his brother-in-law, Dr. T. F. Moses, in Hamilton county, Ohio, and later received a classical education in Washington, D. C., graduating from Columbian University in 1871, at the head of his class with the degree of Ph. B., and from the medical department of the Georgetown University in 1873, taking first honors as valedictorian; he was also a regular graduate of the New York Homeopathic College in 1875. The doctor, commencing the study of medicine in 1871, the same year enlisted in the United States army, and was at once appointed hospital steward, serving in the surgeon-general's office three years; he was then for one year deputy superintendent and resident physician in the New York Homeopathic Surgical Hospital, now known as the Hahnemann Hospital. In that city he practiced till 1875, when he came to Erie, where he has since resided. In 1875, Dr. Cranch was married in Washington, D. C., to Rouette F., daughter of Prof. J. W. Hunt, of that city. She was born near Boston, Mass., and is of English descent. By this union are seven children: Charles E., Arthur G., Raymond G., Walter A., Eliot G., Edith R., and Eugene T. Dr. and Mrs. Cranch are members of the New Church (Swedenborgian). In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the American Institute of Homeopathy. He is also a member of the Pennsylvania board of medical examiners, appointed by the governor; is a member of the Erie County Homeopathic Medical Society, and belongs to the State Homeopathic Medical Society. In September, 1895, he was elected on the advisory board of Dunham Medical College, Chicago. The doctor was one of the original members of the International Hahnemannian Association and is an honorary member of the Post Graduate School of Philadelphia. For years he has made a special study of materia medica, and many of his papers are recorded in the transactions of the various societies. In a local way he does some work as a lecturer on hygiene and physical culture in the Erie Business University. Dr. Cranch has attained distinction in his school of medicine and commands a fine professional business, and is especially interested in the expected

Isador Sobel

Homeopathic Hospital in Erie. He is examining surgeon for the Commercial Travelers' Mutual Accident Association of Utica, N. Y. He and Mrs. Cranch were made members of the Academy of the New Church (Swedenborgian) November 18, 1868. He is a member of the Lincoln Club of Erie, and a member of the committee on legislation of the State Homeopathic Society. Outside of his profession, the doctor has made some study of music, composing several pieces, and writing occasional poems. He has also studied much in the sacred languages; also in chemistry.

James Casey, one of Erie's best known and most public-spirited citizens, died at his residence, at the southwest corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, June 3, 1866. He was born in Buttafin, Cork county, Ireland, December 24, 1814, and was a son of Thomas and Johanna (McCarty) Casey. His parents came to America in 1821, and located on a farm in Canada, where they passed the remainder of their lives, the elder Mr. Casey dying in Canada, and Mrs. Casey in Erie. The family consisted of six children: James, the subject of this sketch; Patrick, who died in Erie in 1892; Hannah, who married Mr. William Delaney, of Erie, both deceased; Miss Ellen Casey, who resides on Fourth street, Erie; Mary, who married Mr. John Harvey, of Dunkirk, N. Y., both of whom are deceased; and John, who was for a number of years in partnership with his brother, James, in the contracting business, and died in Erie, December 28, 1879. Mr. James Casey was educated in the public schools of Canada, and when still quite a young man, engaged in contracting. He removed to Buffalo in 1838, and came to Erie in 1838. His first important contract was upon the excavation of the Welland canal, which was completed in 1848. He subsequently contracted very extensively in the construction of many of the leading railroads of the United States, notably the New York and Erie, New York and Buffalo, State Line, Erie and Pittsburg, Chicago and Rock Island and Canada Southern. He was universally successful in his undertakings, and realized handsome profits. He was a shrewd investor, and despite his life-long and bountiful generosity to the unfortunate and afflicted, became one of Erie's wealthiest men. He was one of the most extensive real estate owners in the city, and even yet it may frequently be heard said: "He was the best landlord in Erie." He always kept his properties in good condition, and his leniency with poor tenants was unparalleled. He sympathized with the laboring classes, and commanded the love and respect of the thousands whom he employed during his long business career. Mr. Casey was married in Canada, in 1835, to Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. Richard Delaney, a native of Ireland. To this union were born eight children, five of whom reached majority: Mary, Mrs. Richard O'Brien, of Erie; Johanna, Mrs. Dr. M. C. Dunigan, of Erie; James F. Casey; the late Very Rev. Thomas A. Casey, and Sister Mary Inez, of the Sisters of Mercy convent, Pittsburg. Mrs. Casey died May 3, 1884. Mr. Casey and family were all devoted members of the Catholic Church, of which they were generous supporters. He was a Democrat in his political views, but never sought public office or political notoriety.

James F. Casey, capitalist and real estate dealer, Erie, was born in St. Catharines, Canada, May 10, 1843, and is a son of the late James Casey, whose sketch appears in this work. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and for some time engaged with his father in his contract work. Later the business in Erie demanded all his time, but he also attended to the financial part of the contracting business. He acted as secretary for his father for nearly thirty years. Since the latter's death he has given his attention to investments, loans and real estate. He is one of the most extensive real estate owners in Erie, and owns considerable farm property in Erie county and in the West. He is also interested in railroad and silver mining stocks. Mr. Casey was married September 14, 1862, to Miss Joanna, daughter of Mr. William Toomey, of Dunkirk, N. Y. This union has been blessed with five children: Mary, Margaret, Inez, James and William. Mr. Casey and family are members of St. Peter's Cathedral, and he has been for several years a member of the Father Mathew Society. He is a Democrat in his political views, and served his city for four years as a member of the common council.

Very Rev. Thomas A. Casey, late vicar general of the diocese of Erie, was the son of James and Mary Casey, both of whom were natives of Ireland, and both of whom died in the city of Erie and are now buried in Trinity cemetery in that city. He was born in St. Catharines, Ontario, on the 1st day of January, 1846, whether his parents had gone from the United States pending the completion of the contract held by his father for the construction of a portion of the Welland canal. His parents returned to the United States in the year 1850. Father Casey received his early education in the common schools of the city of Erie, and his collegiate education was obtained at the Seminary of the Lady of Angeli, Niagara Falls, and the Niagara University, from which institution he graduated with distinguished honor in 1868. He was ordained a priest by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Mullen on the 21st day of February, 1869. Immediately after his ordination he was appointed to take charge of the Catholic Church at Tidouate, where he remained until 1869. In 1870 he was summoned by the bishop to act as pastor of St. Patrick's pro-Cathedral in the city of Erie, and shortly after accepting the duties of that position was appointed by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Vicar General of the Diocese of Erie. He occupied the position of pastor of St. Patrick's pro-Cathedral until the consecration of St. Peter's Cathedral, in August, 1893, at which time he accompanied the Bishop to St. Peter's Cathedral and acted as rector of that congregation until the day of his death, February 9, 1894. On May 10, 1876, Father Casey, accompanied by his brother, Mr. James F. Casey, left Erie for an extended trip abroad, in which they visited Liverpool, London, Paris, Florence, Piza, Genoa, Rome (where they were given an audience by the Holy Father), and many other places of interest. Upon the return trip they made a short tour of Ireland, and visited the birthplace of their parents. In personal appearance Father Casey was a distinguished looking man, being slightly over six feet tall, weighing about 200 pounds, and having an abundance of white, wavy hair. He was exceedingly popular with the clergy under his charge and honored and respected by all citizens with whom he came in contact, irrespective of creed. As a pulpit orator, he had few equals, and no superiors in Northwestern Pennsylvania in profundity of thought, grace of diction, and dignity of appearance. His greatest claim to remembrance, however, lies in his unselfish generosity and the liberality of his donations. Out of the large fortune left him by his father, fully $200,000 was given by him for charitable purposes. His charity knew no distinction either of age, sex or creed; and the unfeigned sorrow manifested at his death by the citizens of Erie is the best tribute that could be paid to the nobility of his life and character. He made heavy donations to the cathedral direct, and to St. Vincent's Hospital and orphan asylum; but the chief monument to his liberality is Villa Maria, to the construction of which he contributed $110,000.

Richard O'Brien was born February 25th, 1825, at Dromic, county Cork, Ireland, son of Richard and Ellen (Ambrose) O'Brien. He left Ireland in 1847, landing in Quebec, Canada. He moved to Erie, Pa. the same year. Immediately after his arrival in Erie he acted as school teacher in and about the Four-Mile creek district. Subsequently he moved to the city of Erie and acted as clerk and bookkeeper in the commercial and commission business of the Erie harbor for a period of nineteen years. When, in 1886, the Erie and Pittsburg R. R. extended its lines to the harbor at Erie, he was appointed the agent for the company, which position he has since continued to fill without interruption. Since his arrival in Erie in 1847, down to the present time, he has been intimately associated with the business and commerce of the harbor at Erie as employe, employer, vessel owner and railroad agent. He was married in Philadelphia, in 1852, to Margaret, daughter of Dennis McCarty, who had been the companion of his childhood at his home in Ireland, and who immigrated to this country, arriving in Philadelphia in 1847. By this union there were born four children: Catherine Annie, now a superior of the Visitation Convent at Georgetown, D. C.; Joseph P., attorney at law, a resident of Erie, Pa.; Ellen I. and Fannie, the former of whom died in 1885 and the latter in 1889. His first wife having died in 1868, Mr. O'Brien, in 1873, married Mary, the eldest daughter of James Casey, of the city of Erie. By this union were born two children—Agness and Mary—both of whom are now attending school at Visitation Academy in Georgetown, D. C. Mr. O'Brien has been a member of the Board of Trade of the city of Erie since its inception, and has been a progressive and public-spirited citizen, his name being found in every movement tending towards the welfare of his adopted city.

Joseph Patrick O'Brien, city solicitor, Erie, Pa., born in Erie, Erie county, Pa., March 18, 1860, is a son of Richard O'Brien, whose personal history is contained in this volume. Joseph P. O'Brien was educated in the schools of Erie, and at the university, Georgetown, D. C., from which latter institution he was graduated in 1880, and from its law department in 1882. Returning to Erie, he continued the study of law with Messrs. Allen & Rosewieg, and was admitted to practice March, 1883. He was appointed by the joint session of councils, May, 1889, to the office of city solicitor, of which he is the incumbent, and the duties of which position he has fulfilled with signal ability. He was married October 7, 1885, to Mary E., daughter of the late John Wynne, whose family, subsequent to his decease, removed from Lock Haven, Clinton county, to Erie, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien are members of St. Peter's. Mr. O'Brien is a stalwart Democrat, a politician in the best sense, a fluent and able speaker, and has rendered efficient service to his party in each political campaign in Erie county since 1883.

James H. Delaney, M. D., specialist, eye and ear, Erie, Pa., is a native of the city of Erie, and was born August 30, 1863. He is a son of William and Hannah (Casey) Delaney, both natives of Pennsylvania. In the family there were twelve children, of whom the Doctor is the seventh. He was educated at Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., where he was graduated in the class of 1883. He immediately entered the Bellevue Hospital, New York, and was graduated from that institution in 1886, with the degree of M. D. He came to Erie, where he engaged in the general practice of medicine until 1890, when he went to Europe and took a special course on the treatment of the diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. When he returned to New York he practiced his specialties one year as assistant to the celebrated Dr. Knapp of that city. At the same time he took an additional course in his specialty in New York, and graduated in 1892. He then came to Erie, where he has since built up a large and lucrative practice in the specialty for which he has so thoroughly qualified himself. The Doctor is a member of the Erie County Medical Society and a member of the Catholic Church.

Captain John B. Dunlap, harbor master of the port of Erie, was born in Erie, April 4, 1834, and is a son of Capt. James and Mary (Boyd) Dunlap. His father was a native of McKean township, Erie county, and his mother was born at the foot of the Cumberland mountains, in Maryland. Mr. Dunlap first settled in Erie county on what is now known as the Ripley farm; Mrs. Rebecca Dunlap settled on a farm in McKean township, now owned by Jackson Koehler. James Dunlap was a carpenter and contractor, the firm name being for many years James and John Dunlap. They built many of the earlier structures in Erie, including the First Baptist Church and the First Presbyterian Church. He was engaged by Tracy & Court-right to go to Dunkirk, N. Y., on important contracts in the harbor long before the New York and Erie R. R. was built. He was commissioned a captain of militia by Governor Porter in 1827, served the city of Erie for six years as a member of the city council, and was harbor master for several years. He was a trustee and deacon of the First Baptist Church for many years. The family consisted of seven children: George (deceased), Jane (deceased), John B., Thomas J., Helen, (Mrs. Jonas Bowers, of Erie), Frank (deceased), and Allene V. (deceased, who was the wife of C. H. Harvey, D. P. S., of Erie). Capt. John Dunlap, son of James Dunlap, was educated in the public schools of Erie and the Erie Academy. He also attended the private school of Miss Mary Coover, who afterward became the wife of Hon. Michael C. Kerr, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives. When a mere lad he ran away from home and for some time drove a team on the Erie canal, later becoming captain of a canal boat. In 1848 he shipped on the revenue cutter Erie, then commanded by Capt. Daniel Dobbins. After a year the Erie went out of commission and he remained for one year aboard its successor, the Ingram. He then entered the merchant service with Captain Thomas Perrin, and continued three years. He was promoted to mate on board the schooner Sea Gull, owned by Andrew Scott and commanded by Capt. P. Murphy, and remained a year. His father having, in company with Mr. George J. Morton, purchased the schooner Armada, he acted as captain of her until 1861. He was appointed acting ensign by Capt. Carter, commander of the man-of-war Michigan, and ordered to Cairo, Ill., where he was examined and ordered to New Albany, Ind., where he joined the gunboat Tusculum, of the Mississippi squadron, whose part in the reduction of Vicksburg and other important naval movements of that war are matters of history. After returning from the war he engaged in the contracting and building business with his father, and after the death of the latter continued the business alone. In 1874 he entered into partnership with Mr. J. Louis Linn, with whom he remained until the death of Mr. Linn, after which he again became sole proprietor of the business, which he continued until 1890, when he retired from active business life. In that year he was made harbor master, the duties of which position he has since faithfully discharged. In 1876 Captain Dunlap had charge of the raising of the famous flag-ship Lawrence, and taking her to the Centennial at Philadelphia. The captain was married April 25, 1854, to Miss Susan, daughter of Capt. John Spire, of Erie. Of the children who were the issue of that marriage, two survive: Martha (Mrs. George Crocker), and Ida (Mrs. Jackson Koehler), both of Erie. Captain Dunlap is a member of the G. A. R., the A. O. U. W. and the Elks. In his political views he has always been a staunch Democrat.

Col. Irvin Camp, C. E., Erie, Pa., was born in Trumansburg, Tompkins county, N. Y., October 31, 1812. He is the only son of Col. Hermon Camp and Cleo Ludlum, the former a successful merchant and president of the Tompkins County First National Bank from its organization up to the time of his decease. He was captain of a cavalry company in the war of 1812. Col. Irvin Camp completed his education at Geneva (now Hobart) College, Geneva, N. Y., during the summer of 1831. His college training embraced a period of five years, one year academic and four years collegiate. On leaving college he came to Erie county, Pennsylvania, and was the second principal of the Waterford Academy for two terms in 1832. Returning home in the fall of 1832, he clerked in his father's store for the next four years. In the early spring of 1836 he was sent by a syndicate, of which his father and self were members, to locate and purchase government lands in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. On returning from the West, in November, he was married to Sophia Judson, niece of Amos Judson, a merchant of Waterford, Pa. In the early spring of 1837 he returned to Waterford and was again, for one or two terms, principal of the Waterford Academy. In the early spring of 1838 he joined at Warren, Pa., the engineer corps under charge of Edward A. Miller, for the original survey of the Sunbury and Erie (now Philadelphia and Erie) R. R.; returning to Waterford late in November, he taught one term in a common school on the grounds of the Waterford Academy. In the spring of 1839 he joined the engineer corps under charge of W. Milnor Roberts, chief engineer, and Milton Courtright, division engineer, for the re-survey of the Conneaut diviion of the Erie and Beaver Canal, and after its completion was appointed assistant engineer on construction between Lockport and the Walnut creek aqueduct, with its office at Girard, till suspension of work, by reason of failure of legislative appropriations for all the canals of the State then under construction. This suspension left the contractors of public improvements in debt to the laborers, farmers and mechanics of Erie and Crawford counties, and the counties along the lines of the north and west branch of Susquehanna canals, and was so wide-spread and distressing that Governor Porter felt called upon to summon an extra session of the Legislature. This resulted in his selection to go to Harrisburg to promote the passage of relief measures, which finally took the shape of an issue of scrip in the form of bank bills, redeemable by the State for tolls on all the completed canals and railroads owned by the State. He remained in Harrisburg some time after the close of the extra session, to settle up with the auditor and treasurer of the State the final estimates of all the contracts of the Conneaut division of the canal, and brought home with him the scrip due to each and all of the contractors thereon, which was gladly received by all of their creditors without a single claim for discount, and thus great pecuniary distress was relieved throughout Erie and Crawford counties, besides many others in the central portions of the State. Some time thereafter he went with William G. Moorhead & Co. as a general assistant on a large contract on the Wabash and Erie canal, below Lafayette, Ind., who received their pay in a scrip similar to that above described, named in that State "white dog" and "blue pup." This brings our biography up to a period, when public works were suspended in nearly all the states. To bridge over this period he utilized his early experience as a clerk in his father's store, and formed a partnership with Smith Jackson, a then leading merchant of Erie, and came to the city as a permanent resident in the fall of 1840. Upon the revival of works, a few years thereafter, he took charge of the supervision and construction of the bridges spanning the Delaware and Hudson canal and the Delaware river, above Port Jervis, on the Delaware division of the New York and Erie R. R., after which he took charge of construction on the Dauphin and Susquehanna R. R. for a short period, when he received a call to come home and take charge of the construction of the railroad from Erie to the State line, over which he brought the first locomotive engine that entered the city of Erie, on the first link of railroad between Buffalo and Chicago, in the winter of 1849-50. In the following spring he went to St. Louis, and there organized the quite notable firm of Sanger, Camp & Co., which constructed and partially equipped 150 miles of railroad between Vincennes, on the Wabash river, and East St. Louis, on the Mississippi river; also a coal railroad between East St. Louis and Belleville, Ill., about sixteen miles in length, and another road from East St. Louis to Alton, Ill., about twenty-six miles in length, making, in all, about 182 miles. Returning from the West, in the fall of 1853, he took an active part in the formation of the railroad firm of King, Brown & Co., and closed a contract with the Sunbury and Erie R. R. Company for the construction of sixty miles of the road, from Erie Harbor to Irvinton, Warren county, Pa., which reached completion under several financial embarrassments during the winter of 1859. About the same time the firm of Thomas Struthers & Co. had finished the construction of six miles of road from Irvinton to Warren, and the Colonel was one of a large and jolly party bringing the second locomotive over the second railroad into the city of Erie. Upon the completion of their contract the firm of King, Brown & Co. was largely a debtor to all of its subcontractors, and the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company was still more largely a debtor to King, Brown & Co., and utterly unable to pay its indebtedness. This condition led up to opening negotiations with the Pennsylvania R. R. Company for means to pay this joint indebtedness and also to provide for the construction of 120 miles of railroad between Warren and Lock Haven, thereby completing a railroad connection from the harbor of Erie to the seaboard, by waters of Delaware river, at the city of Philadelphia. This negotiation dragged along for twenty months and was finally consummated by large concessions on the part of King, Brown & Co. and of Thomas Struthers & Co., which robbed said firms of nearly all their just dues for several years labor and services, rendered often under very discouraging conditions. In illustration of this statement the writer, who was treasurer of the firm, had to spend a large portion of his time in places of public resort to counteract the efforts of two prominent and rich citizens of Erie in decrying the value of the stock and bonds of the railroad company, which the contracting firm was receiving for about three-fourths of their work on their monthly estimates, the cash portion due on estimates the railroad company, for a period of sixteen months were unable to pay. On one occasion the writer was met by one of these prominent citizens and told that his "firm was a pack of imatics, and ought to be sent to a lunatic asylum for continuing work on such terms and conditions," and this man and his coadjutor were both purchasers and shavers of these stocks and bonds, as you may well know. As these men are both dead, we grant them the protection of that kindly maxim: de mortuis nil nisi bonum, and their names are withheld. During a lull in prosecuting work on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., in 1858, Col. Camp went to California, with a view of taking an interest in the construction of a railroad from Fulsom to Marysville, in the valleys of the American and Yuba rivers. While there he participated in the location of said railroad, and planned and made up a bill of material for a timber bridge of 218 feet span across the American river, near Fulsom, the material for which had to be brought from Oregon by vessel. Finding that there were unexpected financial troubles to be encountered, he closed out his interest in the railroad contract, his partners and returned to Erie by ocean steamer and the Panama R. R., after an absence of about six months. The road struggled through to completion, and I was informed by one of my partners, James Y. Sanger, that the bridge was pronounced, upon completion and trial, to be a very graceful and substantial structure. After returning home, Col. Camp was engaged on surveys of railroad lines from Ashtabula harbor to Youngstown, and from the mouth of Grand river to Rock creek, and on the proposed road to Cambridge via Edinboro, and to Millville via Waterford, connecting Erie with the N. Y., P. & O. R. R. Following these engagements he was for six or seven years city civil engineer of Erie. Thereafter, he was for nine seasons engaged on topographic and hydrographic surveys and harbor improvements from Saginaw Bay, on Lake Huron, to Oswego, on Lake Ontario. He then retired from engineering service; but subsequently, upon urgent request of Waterford friends, consented to qualify as county surveyor for the survey of Lake LeBoeuf, under a warrant issued by the Secretary of Internal Affairs to parties composing a club of Pittsburgh capitalists who proposed to make a summer resort on its banks and on the Judge Smith farm close to the borough lines of Waterford. This office he held up to within a few days of September 30, 1895, when he resigned the same in favor of Dan Rice, jr., of Girard borough. Col. Camp and wife reside at 246 West Sixth street, where they have spent, amid pleasant surroundings and kindly neighbors, a happy life of over fifty-three years. Their only living child and daughter is the wife of F. F. Marshall, president of the Marine National Bank and an attorney at law, whose personal history will be found in this volume.

Washington Lafayette Cleveland, one of Erie's honored citizens, died at Clifton Springs, N. Y., October 11, 1884. He was born in Smyrna, N. Y., December 21, 1825, and was a son of Israel and Sally (Tuttle) Cleveland, natives respectively of Rhode Island and Connecticut, and of English ancestry. Mr. Cleveland's grandfather, Israel Angell, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and the value of the services which he rendered his country in her struggle for independence was made a matter of history by General Lafayette, he having conferred upon him the medal entitling him to membership in the Order of the Cincinnati. Israel Cleveland reared seven children. Smith Angell, Seth P., Alexander, Washington Lafayette, Polly (Mrs. N. T. Ferris), Roxana (Mrs. Henry Z. Ferguson, of Cincinnati), and Lysander, of Smyrna, N. Y., the last three only surviving. Mr. W. L. Cleveland, like many other Americans who have made for themselves an honored name, spent his boyhood on the farm and received his early education in a log school house. When he had reached the age of 17 years his educational attainments were such as to guarantee his being granted a teacher's certificate. He taught eight consecutive winter terms of school, working on the farm the remainder of the year. In the meantime he had also learned the carpenter's trade, and in 1850 went to Hawley, Pa., where he worked at his trade for a year. He then went to Hornellsville, N. Y., where he followed his trade until 1861, except a term served as deputy sheriff of Steuben county, and then he removed to Erie. At about this time the oil excitement in Western Pennsylvania was at its height, and Mr. Cleveland, with keen discernment, established an oil refinery in Erie, which he continued with great financial success for six years. He then speculated for a few years in oil lands, in which also he was fairly successful. About 1870 he entered into partnership with Mr. George Selden and Mr. John H. Bliss, under the firm name of Cleveland & Co., and established a foundry, which was practically the foundry department of the Erie City Iron Works. Mr. Cleveland was married July 2, 1851, to Miss Julia Stidd, a native of Pike county, Pennsylvania. To this happy union were born three children, Frank (deceased), whose biography is contained in this work; Della F., who on November 13, 1894, was married to Charles H. Hodges, Esq., attorney at law, New York city, and Miss Jennie R. Cleveland, who was for ten years a teacher in the Erie high school and now resides with her mother at the family residence. Mr. Cleveland was for many years a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Erie, of which he was trustee, steward and Sabbath school superintendent. He had affiliated with the Masonic order during his residence in Hornellsville, and always maintained his membership at that place; he was also a member of the Knights of Honor. In politics Mr. Cleveland was a Republican, and though not a seeker of public office or political honors he rendered much valuable service to his party. Mr. Cleveland was a man who always had the best interests of the community and country at heart. For several years previous to his death he had been an active member of the Board of Trade.

Frank F. Cleveland (deceased) was born in Steuben county, New York, January 11, 1853, and died in Erie, Pa., November 20, 1893. He was the only son of the late Washington Lafayette and Julia (Stidd) Cleveland. Washington Lafayette Cleveland was born in the State of New York November 21, 1825. He was the son of Israel and Sallie (Tuttle) Cleveland, the former a native of Rhode Island, the latter a native of Connecticut, and both of English descent. W. L. Cleveland was brought up on his father's farm, received a country school education, and at the age of 17 received a certificate enabling him to teach, a vocation which he followed for eight winters, working on the farm during the summer months. He learned the carpenter's trade, and worked at this trade until 35 years of age. During this period he acted for a time as deputy sheriff of Steuben county, New York. When the oil excitement broke out in Pennsylvania he started an oil refinery in Erie, Pa., and continued to engage in that business for six years. He afterwards made successful investments in oil lands, and then embarked in the business of manufacturing mill and machinery castings at Erie, under the firm name of Cleveland & Co. His wife, who survives, is a daughter of the late Jonathan O. Stidd. The oldest child, Frank F. Cleveland, was educated in the schools of Erie, was for a time clerk in the Marine National Bank of that city, and in 1880, in connection with William Hardwick, established the Erie Engine Works, under the firm name of Cleveland & Hardwick. He was married in 1874 to Catharine, daughter of Louis Maus.

Col. David S. Clark, one of Erie's most esteemed and venerable citizens, was born near Shippensburg, Cumberland county, Pa., June 10, 1816, and is a son of George and Anna (Sterrett) Clark, natives of Pennsylvania and of Scotch-Irish ancestry. He received his early education in such schools as his native town then afforded, and worked on his father's farm until 1831, when he came to Erie. Here he lived with an elder brother, Mr. James S. Clark, for four years, a part of which time he attended the public schools of the city. Hethen embarked in the mercantile business, which he followed with a marked degree of success until 1852. Soon after this, as chairman of the building committee, he superintended the erection of the First Presbyterian Church of Erie, of which he had then been a member for ten years, and of which he has been elder since 1857. In 1840 he was elected major of the 104th Reg. Pa. Militia, of which, two years later, he became colonel, both by the vote of the regiment and commissioned by Governor Porter. He held the colonelcy for seven years, during which time he faithfully discharged the duties of his position and put forth every effort to further the interests and discipline of the regiment. In February, 1838, Col. Clark performed a feat which should become a matter of history, because it illustrates his force of will power, and because the like never has, and probably never will be done a second time. He had driven a span of horses attached to a sleigh to Buffalo for the purpose of selling them, but finding no purchaser (which he had sought so long, that the sleighing had all disappeared) he made the return trip to Erie upon the ice on the lake without accident. In 1860 Col. Clark associated himself with Messrs. George Selden and John H. Bliss in the oil refining business, which partnership lasted four years, after which he, as sole proprietor, continued the business two years longer, when he retired from active life. Upon the organization of the Erie Cemetery Association in 1852, Col. Clark was elected manager, which he has since continued. He has taken great interest in all the workings of the association, and as a result of his almost half a century of untiring effort, Erie has one of the most beautiful and best regulated cemeteries in the State, and the people of Erie an ideal spot in which to lay to rest the remains of their dear ones who have passed to the great beyond (see Erie Cemetery Association in another part of the work). Col. Clark was married March 25, 1839, to Miss Jane Ann, daughter of Robert T. Sterrett, a pioneer farmer of Erie county. His wife has also been for many years a member of the First Presbyterian Church. In politics Col. Clark has always been a staunch Democrat, but has never been desirous of political office.

Winfield Scott Riblet, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, January 31, 1848. He is a son of the late Jonathan and Sophia (Fluke) Riblet, both natives of Erie. Jonathan Riblet was a son of Michael Riblet, who came from Lancaster, Pa., and located in Erie about 1800. He married Elizabeth Ebersole, was a farmer of Mill Creek township, and died April 23, 1857. Jonathan, his son, pursued the business of cabinet making, and was at one time a partner in that business with his brother, J. Harrison Riblet. Jonathan Riblet died in 1880; his wife in 1892. W. S. Riblet completed his education at the Erie Academy, learned cabinet making, pursued that business for a short time, and then found employment in the office of Jacob Bootz, planing mill proprietor, with whom he remained for ten years. For the following three or four years he engaged in business for himself as a contractor, and, in 1887, entered the employ of Henry Shenk as book-keeper, a position which he still occupies. He is a Republican, and was a member of the Erie school board, from the Sixth ward, from 1877 to 1883. He was secretary of that board for two years. Mr. Riblet was married April 9, 1872, to Affie, daughter of the late Benjamin and Sophia (Parker) Russell, formerly of Erie county, Pa., latterly of Grant county, Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Riblet, with their three children, Scott R., Winifred S. and Bertha B., reside at 454 East Sixth street, and are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Riblet is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of H., A. O. U. W. and E. A. U.

Edward J. Riblet, owner and proprietor of the mammoth furniture store, corner of Peach and Twelfth streets, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, May 13, 1854, in a house that stood on the same corner now occupied by his splendid bank. He is a son of the late John Harrison and Jane (Kilpatrick) Riblet. The former was one of Erie's most estimable citizens. He was born in East Mill Creek, February 28, 1815, a son of Michael and Elizabeth (Ebersole) Riblet, the former a son of John Riblet, who came from Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1802, and purchased a farm in East Mill Creek and followed farming to his death, succeeded by his son, Michael, who also lived and died on this property. John H. Riblet received a common school education, and when 14 years of age, quit the farm and apprenticed himself to the cabinetmaking trade. After completing his apprenticeship he opened a place of business in the city, and for forty-four years he followed the same with marked success. He had associated with him at different times his brother Jonathan, Henry Spooner, A. Sterrett, Josiah Neil and C. F. Bostwick. Mr. Riblet was a very modest gentleman, his aim in life was to build up a business and to acquire a competency that would secure his family, to whom he was remarkably attached. He always avoided politics, although he served with distinction for a number of years in the select council. He was a self-made man, successful through his own efforts. He married in 1844, Miss Jane Kilpatrick, and to them were born three sons and two daughters: Frank H. (deceased), Alfred K., and Edward J., and Etta S., Mrs. C. F. Bostwick, and Miss Anna E. Edward J. Riblet received his early education in the public schools of Erie and graduated from the high school in 1872, and engaged as salesman in his father's store for the following six years, when in 1878 the business was turned over to himself and brother A. K., and they conducted it until A. K. retired from the firm, and accepted the position of general manager, and the business has since been owned and operated by Edward J. It was one of the largest and most complete establishments in the city. Mr. Riblet was united in marriage November 17, 1881, to Miss Emma L., daughter of O. C. Thayer, of Erie, and to them has been born one daughter, May 27, 1883. The family are members of the United Presbyterian Church, and politically Mr. Riblet is a liberal Republican.

Alfred King Riblet, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., April 16, 1850. He is a son of the late John Harrison Riblet (memoirs of whose life are contained in this volume). Alfred K. Riblet was educated in the public schools and in the Erie Academy, from which latter institution he was graduated in 1867. He had prepared to enter Michigan University, Ann Arbor, but through a serious accident was deterred from so doing, being confined to his home for three years. He then entered the employ of J. H. Riblet & Co., manufacturers of and dealers in furniture, the numbers of which firm were the father and the uncle of the subject of this sketch. A. K. Riblet and his brother, E. J. Riblet, subsequently succeeded to and for some years carried on the business as partners. In 1888, A. K. Riblet sold out his interest to his brother, and has since been identified with it as manager. He was married June 14, 1889, to Anna, daughter of John McKnight, an insurance man of Erie. She died June 9, 1891. Mr. Riblet resides at 129 West Eleventh street, and is a member of the United Presbyterian Church.

Thomas Dillon is at the present date (1895) probably the oldest voter in Erie county. He was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, October 8, 1797. His mother, Rebecca Hamilton, was of Irish parentage and Presbyterian faith, and his father, Thomas Dillon, was an English Quaker, consequently the family were brought up in the Quaker belief. They moved in 1797 to a place near the present site of New Lisbon, Ohio, where they remained until the father's death, in 1832, at the age of 69 years. His mother lived to be 94. When 19 years of age, Mr. Dillon was apprenticed to a blacksmith in Fairfield, a small village near their home. Having served three years for board and clothing, he started out to find work where he could get money for pay, the pay in that section being farm produce, and not saleable. He walked 150 miles through November mud and snow, not finding work till he reached Meadville, Pa., where he stayed one month. He then came to Erie, in 1820, working for General Fleming six months; then went to Harbor Creek, where he stayed two years, working at his trade summers, and going to school winters. In 1824 he married Nancy Bonnell, of Harbor Creek; soon after purchased a place in Erie on West Eighth street, near State, living there thirty-eight years, and rearing a family of five children, of whom are now living two daughters in Erie, and a son in Warren, O. Mr. Dillon was collector of school taxes in Erie, and was a member of the first common council of Erie city. He was coroner of the county for twelve years, carried on the business of blacksmithing until he lost the use of his hand, in 1857. He afterward served as wood and hay measurer for a number of years. At the present writing he is 98 years old, and still retains his faculties to a remarkable degree.

The Grubb Family.—Special interest attaches to this family, because its head, Hon. John Grubb, came to the site of Erie in the spring of 1795, as captain commanding a company of state troops. He was sent to guard the surveying party which was to lay out the town of Erie. His company encamped on Garrison Hill. He was there stationed when in June, 1795, Col. Seth Reed and his wife landed. John Grubb was born June 8, 1767, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He was commissioned captain in the 7th Battalion, Lancaster County Militia, October 12, 1792, and September 11, 1794, as captain in 2d Reg. Lancaster brig. In the spring of 1798 he came to Erie in charge of a company of troops and remained about three years. In 1798 he went to York county, Pennsylvania, and married Alicia Cooper. They settled in Mill Creek township on the farm occupied by his grandson, George Reed, where he died June 8, 1845. They had seven children, two sons and five daughters. All are dead and, with their parents, are buried under a pine tree planted by Mrs. Grubb on the old farm, at the death of her first child. Judge Grubb filled many offices, among these were major of militia December 26, 1798; justice of the peace, April 15, 1797, and May 16, 1801; county commissioner, 1813-15; associate judge of Erie county, January 8, 1820, to March 13, 1841. Mrs. Grubb, born in 1777, died August 18, 1844. Judge Grubb closed his useful and honorable life June 8, 1845. Of their seven children, Delia A., Armfield M. (deceased), Mrs. Jane Reed, who died in 1846; Stephen C., who died in April, 1857, were, with their noted father, members of the First Presbyterian Church, of Erie. Benjamin Grubb, brother of the judge, was born March, 1777, married and moved in 1800 to McKean township, where he died in 1845. His widow died in Mercer county at the age of 86. George and John G. Reed, of Mill Creek, are the only descendants of Judge Grubb in Erie county.

Samuel A. Davenport, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., was born near the head of Seneca Lake, Tompkins county, New York, January 15, 1834. He is a son of the late William and Phylance (Tracy) Davenport. William Davenport was a native of New Haven, Conn., and of old Puritan stock, being lineally descended from that distinguished Puritan divine, John Davenport, the first preacher of Fair Haven. Mrs. William Davenport was a native of Vermont, and of Scotch-Irish descent. From his ninth year up to his arrival at maturity William Davenport was a sailor. At the beginning of the war of 1812 he was aboard a merchantman which was captured, but very soon thereafter was exchanged. His patriotic impulses led him to enlist and he served throughout that war. At the close of the war he purchased a farm in Tompkins county, a part of which is that beautifully picturesque spot (now a famous summer resort) known as Watkins' Glen. In 1835 he removed with his family to a farm which he had purchased in Harbor Creek township, Erie county, Pa., where he continued to reside until 1839, when he removed to Erie, Erie county, Pa. He served for a number of years as captain on one or another of the Reed line of steamers, retired from business in 1859, and died in June, 1865. His wife survived until May, 1880. Samuel A. Davenport attended the Erie Academy, read law under the preceptorship of Judge Galbraith, was graduated from Harvard Law University and admitted to the bar in 1855. He entered upon the practice of his profession in Erie, filled the office of district attorney for one term, and in 1871 formed a law partnership with George P. Griffith, which, under the firm name of Davenport & Griffith, continued until 1891, since which time he has been engaged in practice alone. Besides attending with marked ability and abundant success to the interests of an extensive clientele, Mr. Davenport has otherwise contributed materially to the growth and development of this community by his large investments in a number of the leading manufacturing establishments of Erie. He was a member of the firm of Stearns, Clark & Co. (afterward Stearns Manufacturing Company), was one of the founders of the Burdette Organ Company, the Erie Car Works, the Shoe Boot and Shoe factory, the Keystone Boot and Shoe factory and the Derrick & Felgemacher pipe organ factory. Mr. Davenport was married December 31, 1862, to Kate, eldest daughter of the late Hon. John H. Walker, one of Erie's most prominent lawyers and president of the Constitutional Convention of 1873. Mr. Davenport was a delegate to the National Republican Convention which nominated Benjamin Harrison for the Presidency in 1888, and was a delegate-at-large to the National Republican Convention at Minneapolis in 1892.

William R. Davenport was born near Watkins' Glen, Schuyler county, New York, on the 31st of July, 1831. He was the oldest son of Capt. William Davenport, who settled in Erie in 1839. After graduating at the Erie Academy he entered the dry-goods store of Clark & Metcalf, and became their book-keeper. Shortly after the completion of the Cleveland, Painesville & Ashtabula R. R. he entered its employ, and after the consolidation of the different railroads between Cleveland and Buffalo, was appointed agent at Erie. On the 4th of June, 1856, he married Elizabeth W. Shirk, eldest daughter of David Shirk, late of Erie, deceased. He organized the firm of Davenport, Fairbairn & Co., and engaged in the manufacture of car wheels on a large scale—in fact, for some years theirs was the largest manufactory of car wheels in the United States. Afterwards he aided in the establishment of the Erie Car Works, the Erie Fusee Company and the Martel Furnace Company. He was one of the founders of the Young Men's Christian Association, and for a number of years was its president. Through his liberality and earnest efforts the property owned by the Association on the corner of Tenth and Peach streets was purchased. In 1871 he assisted in the formation of the Central Presbyterian Church, and to his generosity is largely due the building now occupied by the church, on the corner of Tenth and Sassafras streets, Erie. When on his way home he was attacked in Buffalo with the sickness which caused his death on the 13th day of December, 1888. Mr. Davenport was a clear-headed and able man, and probably Erie owes as much to him as to any other person for the position she now holds among the manufacturing cities of our country. Mr. Davenport left three children: Mary E., wife of E. W. Sheldon; Charles W. Davenport, of Erie, and Helen L., wife of Edward D. Wetmore, son of Judge Wetmore, of Warren.

David Nicholas Dennis, physician, office Ninth and Peach streets, residence 205 West Eighth street, was born in Grafton, Mass., December 25, 1858, son of Edward Parker and Jessie (Moore) Dennis, the former of Somers and the latter of Oxford, Mass. The family originally settled in Massachusetts as early as 1630. Mr. Edward Parker Dennis was for some time a merchant in Milledgeville, Ga., and afterward a farmer of Grafton, Mass. Mrs. Dennis departed this life in 1860, Mr. Dennis surviving her six years. They had but one child, David N., who was educated in the Worcester Academy, Grafton (Mass.) public schools, private schools in Augusta, Ga., and Worcester, Mass., finally graduating from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in March, 1881. He began the practice of his profession in Philadelphia, later removing to Worcester, Mass., and ultimately locating in Erie, Pa., where as an eye and ear specialist he has established a very large practice and earned an enviable professional reputation that is more than local. Dr. Dennis was united in marriage June 20, 1883, to Camilla, daughter of Alexander and Mary (Yeager) Loder, the former a native of Bellefont, N. J., and the latter of Allentown, Pa. Two children are the result of this union, Edward Parker and Dorothy Moore. Dr. Dennis is a member of the Masonic bodies and the American Medical Society, and is a Republican in politics. He is ophthalmic surgeon of Hamot Hospital.

I. Armstrong Forman, dry goods merchant, Erie, Pa., was born in Bruceton Mills, Preston county, W. Va. He is a son of the late John C. and Anne (Armstrong) Forman, natives of Preston county, West Virginia, the former of English and the latter of Scotch descent. The Formans were Quakers and settled in West Virginia at a time when that portion of the Old Dominion was considered the far west. I. A. Forman received such education as was afforded by the public schools of his native county, during which time he assisted in the work on his father's farm. He then entered a store in Bruceton Mills, and six months later was given a partnership interest therein by his employer. This partnership continued for ten years, when Mr. Forman opened a branch dry goods store at Washington and New Castle, Pa. Four years later he sold out his interest in the Washington (Pa.) store and went into dry goods jobbing at 76 Franklin street, New York city, where he remained for four years. He next embarked in lumbering in Warren county, Pennsylvania, in which business he continued to be engaged for two years. He located in Erie in 1873, and two years later established himself in the dry goods business there at the southwest corner of Park and State streets, remained there two years, re-located in the Scott block, conducted business there for seven years, removing thence to the Masonic Block, 914-916 State street. In 1895 Mr. Forman built the beautiful and substantial three-story business block, Nos. 1013, 1015 and 1017 State street, where the dry goods business of I. A. Forman & Bro. is now carried on. In addition to this material contribution to the growth of Erie, Mr. Forman has built handsome residences, Nos. 139 and 328 West Tenth street. I. A. Forman was married in April, 1870, to Annie, daughter of the late Patrick Faulkner, a lumberman of Warren county, Pennsylvania. She died in January, 1888, leaving three children, Grace, Jessie and Ralph. Grace is the wife of George T. Bliss, a son of John H. Bliss, leading manufacturer of Erie, a sketch of whom is contained in this work. Mrs. Geo. T. Bliss and Miss Jessie Forman are graduates of Rye Seminary. Ralph is a student at Deveaux College, Niagara Falls, N. Y. The family resides at 139 West Tenth street, and are members of the Park Presbyterian Church.

Charles P. Forman, junior member of the dry-goods firm of I. A. Forman & Bro., Erie, Pa., was born in Bruceton, Preston county, W. Va., June 15, 1852. Charles P. Forman received his initial schooling in the public schools of his native town, and then entered the University of West Virginia (Morgantown). After leaving the university he entered the employ of his brother, Mr. I. A. Forman (whose personal history is contained in this volume), then a dry goods merchant of New Castle, Pa. A few years later he went to Princeton, Ill., where he was engaged in the dry goods business for two years with his brother-in-law, Mr. B. C. Fear. Returning to Pennsylvania he for four years clerked in the dry goods establishment of Mr. I. A. Forman, Erie. He then, in connection with another brother, Mr. John Forman, established a general store at Walnut, Ill. Six years later he sold out his interest in this store to his brother, and returning to Erie, re-entered the employ of Mr. I. A. Forman, with whom he has ever since been associated, becoming a partner in the business, under the firm name of I. A. Forman & Bro., in 1889. Mr. C. P. Forman was married October 8, 1879, to Lillian, daughter of the late John Little, whose personal history is contained in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Forman have five children: John, Anna, Hazel, Mason and Lucy, reside at 338 West Tenth street, and attend divine service at the Tabernacle (Church of Christ). Mr. Forman is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

The Hilton Family.—ARCHIBALD C. HILTON, a native of Albany, N. Y., came to Erie about the year 1830. He was a saddler, and engaged in that business for some time. Mr. Hilton married Miss Abbey Cook, daughter of Eliakim and Lucy (Hurlbert) Cook, who had come from Connecticut to Erie county in 1800, and settled in Waterford township. Mr. Cook died in Waterford in 1810, and Mrs. Cook in Erie about 1844. Mr. Hilton was an active, energetic and public-spirited citizen. He was appointed deputy sheriff and keeper of the jail of Erie county, and was also deputy collector of the port of Erie under President Tyler's administration from 1841-45. He died while his family were still young. Mr. and Mrs. Hilton had five children: William E., a machinist for many years, and connected with the waterworks of Erie; Capt. John C., who served in the 145th Reg., P. V. I., where he rose to the rank of captain. He lost a leg, at the battle of Gettysburg, and was promoted to be major and honorably discharged. He was twice elected register and recorder of Erie county (in 1878 and 1881), serving six years. He served as postmaster of Erie under the Harrison administration until 1894. Captain Hilton married Miss E. M. Barr, daughter of Hon. M. R. Barr, collector of the port of Erie, and had four children: Abbie (deceased), Ruth, Sarah and Louise, Sarah, wife of P. D. Faulkner, of Erie; Mary Electa (deceased), and Abbie P., wife of Edmund W. Reed, a postmaster of Erie, his appointment being the last made by President Garfield before his assassination. Mr. Hilton died at the age of 54 years. Mrs. Hilton survived her husband for about forty years, and died February 4, 1894, at the age of 93 years. She was at the time the oldest member of the First Presbyterian Church. The full possession of her faculties and her great intelligence and serenity of mind made her very attractive through the closing years of life.

William Hardwick, president of the Erie Engine Works and of the Union Iron Works, Erie, Pa., was born in England, December 1, 1847. He is a son of John and Ann Hardwick. His parents came to the United States in 1852, and located in Erie, where Mr. Hardwick received his education in the public schools. At the age of 11 years he apprenticed himself to learn the trade of machinist with the Erie City Iron Works. He was for nine years foreman of the shops of the Bay State Iron Works, and for a time had entire charge of the works. In 1879 he entered into partnership with Mr. Frank F. Cleveland, forming the firm of Cleveland & Hardwick, and engaged in the manufacture of engines and boilers. The plant was then located at Twelfth and State streets, but the rapid growth of business soon made greater facilities imperative, and in 1885 the spacious and substantial buildings at the corner of Twelfth and Cherry streets was erected. The main building is 330 x 160 feet, besides auxiliary buildings. The products include all kinds of upright, horizontal, portable and stationary engines and boilers, and the capacity is over 500 engines and boilers a year. The company was incorporated under its present title, June 2, 1893, with a capital stock of $100,000, and with Mr. William Hardwick president and general manager, and Mr. Frank F. Cleveland, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Cleveland died November 20, 1893, and was succeeded by his cousin, Mr. Fred L. Cleveland. The Union Iron Works was established in 1890 by the Erie Engine Works and the Skinner Engine Company, and was designed to furnish a boiler department for these two concerns. The plant, located at Thirteenth and Rasberry streets, occupies in all six acres, and has a capacity of over 100 boilers per month. This concern manufactures all kinds of steel boilers, tanks and plate work. When incorporated the officers of the company were: Frank P. Cleveland, president; Frank Connell, treasurer; and H. R. Barnhurst, secretary and general manager. Mr. Barnhurst was succeeded in 1895 by John W. Hardwick. Upon the death of Mr. Cleveland, Mr. Hardwick became president. Thoroughly conversant with all the details of his business, Mr. Hardwick discharges the arduous double duty of acting as the head of these two large concerns with an ease and dispatch that at once characterize him as belonging to the front rank of those who have made Erie famous as a great manufacturing center. Mr. Hardwick was married October 13, 1866, to Miss Mary A., daughter of John H. Carter, of West Mill Creek, Pa. The issue of this marriage was two children: John W., president of the Erie Manufacturing and Supply Company, and superintendent of the Union Iron Works, and Miss Luanna May Hardwick. Mr. and Mrs. Hardwick are members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Erie, to which he has rendered good service as steward and trustee. He is a Republican in politics, and has served his city as a member of the select and common council, the school board, and is now president of the board of water commissioners.

J. Sturgeon

Henry Shenk, contractor and builder, was born in West Mill Creek township, Erie county, July 31, 1836. He is a son of John and Nancy (Miller) Shenk, the former a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, from whence the family removed by wagon to Erie county when John was but 9 years old. Henry Shenk has two full brothers and one sister, also three half brothers. His early education was such as could be obtained at that time in the public schools of his native town. In the spring of 1853 he decided to become a carpenter, and found work as such at several places in the vicinity of his home. In the fall of the same year he came to Erie and entered the employ of Mr. John Hill, remaining several months, working on what is known as the Paragon and Austin Building, on North Park Row. In the spring of 1854, he went to Girard, Pa., working there and in the country near by for over two years, being employed by different parties. In the fall of 1857, he returned to build a house for his father at the old homestead, which was finished in the early spring of 1859. On the completion of this house, which still remains on the farm, he came to Erie again, working for awhile for Messrs. Crook and Lytle, but in the summer of the same year he went to work for Messrs. Jones and White, with whom he remained most of the time for about three years. He then entered the service of Mr. John Hill again, staying nearly two years. In the spring of 1863, he commenced business with Mr. L. F. Kinsey, under the firm name of Kinsey & Shenk, which continued for several years. The first work done by the new firm was a house, built for Mr. Henry Jarecki, on Ninth street, near State, and which is still standing. After a few years the firm of Kinsey & Shenk entered into a partnership with Mr. Peter Brubaker in the planing-mill business, at the corner of Eleventh and French streets, but this partnership did not last long. Mr. Kinsey sold his interest to Mr. L. F. White, and the firm name became L. F. White & Co.; but this was of short duration, owing to dissatisfaction among the partners, which finally found its way into the courts, and before any settlement was reached the mill took fire and was burned to the ground. Mr. Shenk, by agreement of the partners, then took charge of the company's affairs, and turned all that was left into money, and paid the debts as far as he could. Parties having claims against him gave him plenty of time and he finally paid them all in full. After the planing-mill was destroyed, Mr. Shenk continued the contracting and building business in Erie as best he could, without capital, until 1878, when he concluded to go outside of Erie for business. In the spring of the year he took the contract to build the Bradford, Pa., Oil Exchange, which paid fairly well. In the spring of 1879, he contracted to build the Titusville Oil Exchange. In the summer of 1879, he took the contract to build the Cambria county, Pennsylvania, court house, which was finished the next year in good shape and with fair profit. The same year he took a contract to build a portion of the Huntingdon Industrial Reformatory, and afterwards a contract to complete the same, covering a period of about six years and at a cost of about $900,000, from which Mr. Shenk secured a very handsome margin. In 1882, he commenced doing business in Pittsburg, Pa., his first contract being the Y. M. C. A. building, which was finished on time and excellent satisfaction given. Since then he has continued business there, and has opened an office, with the best of results, having built some of the finest public structures, business blocks, private buildings and residences in the city in the last few years. He built Christ M. E. Church, a magnificent piece of architecture, costing nearly $300,000; the famous Carnegie Library Building, which alone would establish the fame of any builder, and has added much to Mr. Shenk's already well-established reputation. This building, which was dedicated November 5, 1895, cost over $700,000. Besides the large structures in Pittsburg, Mr. Shenk has erected many of the finest buildings in Erie, including the Central High School Building, Downing Block, Government building, Park Opera House, Hamot Hospital, etc. Mr. Shenk is rated as one of the leading builders in the State, and is invited to bid on many of the largest and most important contracts in various parts of the country. His large business has enabled him to accumulate a moderate fortune within the past fifteen years, and he now lives at ease in one of the finest residences in Erie, which he built in 1892. About five years ago his health failed, and since then his business has been carried on by his sons, Charles E. and Wilbur Shenk.

The King Family.—As one of the pioneer families of which several members have been conspicuous and identified with the settlement and development of Erie county and city, the following deserve mention:

Capt. Robert King (deceased), grandfather of Alfred King (deceased), was one of the early pioneers, and the first actual settler of Erie county, Pennsylvania. He came here in July, 1794, by way of the west branch of the Susquehanna and over the mountains, nearly on the route of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. to the Tionesta river, near Sheffield, in Warren county. The following is taken from Whitman's History of Le Boeuf Township, Erie county, Pa. "First land was selected in Le Boeuf, in 1794, by Capt. Robert King, who took up 400 acres at the present Ford bridge." "Captain King retiring to his home in Lycoming county, he brought his family along in the spring of 1795." * * * "Capt. Robert King, the pioneer of the township, had been an officer in the Revolutionary war, and rendered the State important service in securing treaties with the Indians; as a reward for which the Legislature of Pennsylvania voted him 400 acres of land, west of the Allegheny river. It was to take advantage of this bounty that he first visited the township. In company with his hired man he crossed the mountains from Lycoming county, through an almost impenetrable forest, to the present site of Sheffield, Warren county, Pa., where he built a canoe in which they descended the Tionesta and Allegheny to where Franklin now stands. From there they poled the canoe up French creek eighty miles to the site of the captain's future home. On returning to Lycoming county they took a different route eastward from the Allegheny, and when they came back with Captain King's family of five sons and six daughters, it was by way of Pittsburg." He and his family arrived at their new home May 15, 1795, and here the grand old patriot and soldier remained until the day of his death, which occurred about 1826. The captain was a brave and accomplished soldier and officer, and served his country with honor and credit throughout the Revolutionary war. "When Lafayette returned to visit this county, and was at Waterford, the captain, who had a personal acquaintance with him during the struggles and hardships of the Revolutionary war, called to pay his respects to the eminent and patriotic Frenchman. General Lafayette saw him when several rods away, and speaking out, said: 'There comes Captain King,' and advanced eagerly to meet the veteran." Captain King had eleven children. Of these Thomas was most noted. He married Sarah Wilson, a lady of rare intelligence and intellectual vigor. They resided for many years in Waterford township and borough. There Mr. King built the "Stone Tavern," fronting on the park (afterwards kept for many years by Mr. Judson). About the year 1836 Mr. King removed with his family to Erie, where he died in 1848. His widow survived many years. They had three sons and five daughters: Wilson, Josiah, Alfred, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Blaikie, Mrs. William Judson, Mrs. R. W. Clark and Frances (deceased). Josiah went to Pittsburg, where he became prominent as a manufacturer and publisher of the Gazette; Wilson, civil engineer and contractor, was identified with many public works. He was prothonotary of Erie county two terms, and a member of the contracting firms of Sanger, Camp & Co. in the West, and of King, Brown & Co. in the construction of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. He died in Erie.

Alfred King (deceased), the youngest son of Thomas and Sarah (Wilson) King, and grandson of Capt. Robert King, was born in Waterford. He was educated at the academies of Waterford and Erie, graduating from the latter. He then taught for a few years, in the meantime reading law with a view of adopting that profession. Subsequently he was appointed deputy prothonotary and clerk of the courts of the county, and remained as such for six years; he was elected treasurer of the county, and filled that office for two years; after this was elected mayor and served two terms. During the last term he was elected prothonotary and clerk of the courts, filling this place three years. During his public life he engaged extensively in manufacturing here, and also dealt largely in grain (particularly in barley), and was instrumental in giving Erie prominence as a grain depot. His connection with these industries extended over thirty-five years. He was also interested in real estate, both in Erie and in the West, evidences of which can be seen in the place known as Kingtown, which he planted and built up. He married in Livingston county, New York, in 1845, Mary Kenedy, a lady of fine literary attainments, a sister of the Hon. Archibald Kenedy, of that county. They have three sons—Kenedy, Josiah Holdship, first lieutenant in the 8th U. S. Cav.; and A. H., commission merchant of Erie. The family are members of the United Presbyterian Church. Alfred King died in Erie.

Henry Jarecki, one of Erie's most prominent business men and founder of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, was born in Posen, Prussia, January 10, 1826, and is a son of Charles W. and William (Wilchinka) Jarecki. His father, who was an engraver and goldsmith, came to Erie in 1852, where he engaged in the jewelry business with his son, August, and continued until his death, which occurred in 1878, at the age of 72 years. The family consisted of ten children: August, who came to Erie in 1847, since which time he has been engaged in the jewelry business here; Henry, who is the subject of this sketch; Caroline, who married Casper Cantor, of Erie, and died in 1890; Frederick, whose sketch appears in this work; Louise, who married Paul Weber, of New York city; Captain Gustave, who was formerly engaged in banking in Erie, was appointed consul to Altona, Germany, by President Grant, later resigned, and is now residing in Pittsburg; Emma, who married August Drodziewski (deceased), of Erie; Charles and Herman, whose sketches appear in this work, and Theodore, who was bookkeeper for the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, and died in 1890. Mr. Henry Jarecki received his education in his native country, and it was there also, under the well regulated apprenticeship laws that he learned the trade of brass foundry, serving an apprenticeship of seven years. In 1849 he came to the United States and located in Erie. Here he immediately established a brass works on State street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. This was a small affair, with tread power, and capable of melting about fifteen pounds of brass at a time, and yet from that small beginning has grown the gigantic institution which is now giving employment to hundreds of men and brings many hundred thousands of dollars to Erie annually. During the earlier days of the concern its success depended almost entirely upon the persistent energy and shrewd business methods of Mr. Henry Jarecki; upon the organization of the company in 1872 he became president. In later years the active management passed to Mr. Charles Jarecki, and Mr. Henry Jarecki retired from active participation in the affairs of the company, and in 1882 Mr. Charles Jarecki succeeded him as president.

Since that time, as well as before, Mr. Jarecki has been an extensive traveler; accompanied by Mrs. Jarecki, he visited Europe and many of the interesting points in America. For the past several years he and his family passed the winters in California, having taken up their residence in Riverside in 1886. He has since sold his beautiful residence there, however, and now resides in Coronado, which is situated on the opposite shore of Santiago Bay from the city of Santiago. Mr. Jarecki is still one of the heaviest stockholders of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, and also owns a ten-acre orange grove and considerable other real estate in Riverside, Cal. Mr. Jarecki was married March 6, 1851, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary (Becker) Gingrich, a sister of Mr. Henry Gingrich, of Erie. This union was blessed with four children: Albert H., and Oscar H., who hold respectively the position of secretary and treasurer of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company; Mary J., who married William Nelson Mann (Mr. Mann died in California in August, 1890, where his widow now resides), and Miss Martha N. Jarecki. Mr. and Mrs. Jarecki were among the founders of the First English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Erie, now known as the Lutheran Church, of which they are still members, and of which they have always been generous supporters. In politics Mr. Jarecki has always been a staunch Republican and has rendered the party of his choice much valuable service, but he has never been an applicant for public office or political distinction. He has always had the best interests of the community at heart, and has stood ready to encourage any enterprise that would promote the growth and development of the city. There are few if any who have contributed as much to the progress of Erie as Mr. Jarecki. The institution which he founded and fostered is upon a sound financial basis, gives employment to a greater number of men than any other single concern in the city, and enjoys the enviable reputation of never having had the least discord with its employes during nearly half a century of successful operation. It will thus be seen that in the matter of being a benefit to the city, the Jarecki Manufacturing Company stands at the head of the many prosperous institutions of its kind, without which Erie would be but a struggling village on the southern shore of Lake Erie.

Oscar Jarecki, treasurer of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie March 18, 1854. He is a son of Henry Jarecki, one of the brothers Jarecki, whose energy and enterprise have contributed so materially to the manufacturing and mercantile interests and the general prosperity of this community, the details of which are contained elsewhere in this volume. Oscar Jarecki completed his schooling at the Erie academy, and then entered the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, in which he has been successfully promoted, and of which he is now treasurer. He married a daughter of the late D. G. Ormsby, resides at 230 West Ninth street, and attends St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Frederick Jarecki, superintendent of the brass foundry of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, was born in Posen Germany, July 25, 1831, and is a son of Charles W. Jarecki, whose sketch is given in this work. He received his education and learned his trade in his native country, and came to the United States in 1856. He first located in Erie, where his brother, Henry, had established a brass works, and with whom he remained about six months. He then went to New York city, where he followed his trade for twelve years. In 1869 he returned to Erie, and in company with other parties, established a brass works, which he continued until 1889, when he accepted his present position. Since he has had charge of this department he has made several very useful improvements in the machinery and appliances, notably the fire-boxes and the magnetic separator. Mr. Jarecki has perfected a great many inventions, and has had no less than thirty patents issued. Of these perhaps the best known is the Jarecki street gas and water service box, of which there have been over a million sold in the United States and Canada. The Jarecki pump lubricator, which is undoubtedly the best in use, is of his invention, as are also the Jarecki street washer, hydrant and natural gas burner. Mr. Jarecki was married November 14, 1863, to Miss Willhelmina, daughter of Mr. Francis Englehart, of Erie. The issue of this marriage was five children, four of whom are living: Ella, Francis Frederick, John William and Jennie. Mr. Jarecki is a 32d degree Mason, and is also a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of H., Herman's Sons, Harugari, Liedertafel and Maennerchor. In politics Mr. Jarecki has always been a Republican, and, though not a seeker of public office, has done much in the support of his party.

Alexander H. Jarecki, superintendent of the iron foundry department of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, April 19, 1866, and is a son of Charles Jarecki. He was educated in the public schools of his native city, and then took a three years' special course in the Technical and Mechanical Engineering Institute of Boston. In 1889 he secured his present position, which he has since occupied. Mr. Jarecki was married January 10, 1891, to Miss Lucy S., daughter of Mr. James McBrier, of Erie. This union has been blessed with one child, Carl A. Mr. Jarecki is a member of the National Mechanical Engineering Society, and in politics is a Republican.

The McSparren Family.—The first of the McSparrens to settle in Erie county was Archibald, a son of Joseph McSparren, who died at or in the vicinity of Philadelphia some years before the Revolutionary war. The earliest history obtainable of this family places it back in Scotland shortly before the year 1700, when the principal branch moved from Kintore, in Scotland, to Dungiven, county Derry, in Ireland, prior to the persecution of the Protestants by King James. Rev. Archibald McSparren, a clergyman in the Presbyterian Church, in the year 1700, accompanied by a nephew, Archibald McSparren, settled in Dungiven. This nephew seems to have been the direct ancestor of the family in Erie county. His eldest son, Archibald, lived for many years on the old homestead with his parents. His younger brother, James, received a classical education at Glasgow, then studied for the ministry in the university (Academia) of Glasgow. In the year 1720 he was ordained a minister in the Episcopal Church of England, and early the next year was sent by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts of London, a missionary to Narragansett, Rhode Island, where he was delegated to take possession of the church property and to enlarge the work of the church in this country. In this capacity, he was one of the founders of Trinity Church, at Newport, R. I. An extract from the church records at Narragansett, states that May 22, 1722, Rev. James McSparran was married to Miss Hannah Gardiner, a daughter of William Gardiner, of Boston Neck, in Narragansett. After the death of his parents, Archibald McSparran, being in possession of the homestead at Dungeniv, made sale of it, and emigrated to this country in search of his brother James at Narragansett. But the ship on which he embarked made another port, and he settled near New Castle, on Delaware Bay, near the Pennsylvania line. This Archibald had seven children, three daughters and four sons, of whom the latter were: John, James, Archibald and Joseph. The eldest son, John, became a merchant at Philadelphia, and there died. James was a husbandman, lived with his father, came in possession of the homestead and died there. Archibald was in the mercantile business at or near Baltimore. Joseph, the youngest son, was born in this country, and was quite young when his father and mother died, about June, 1751. This son, Joseph, was the father of the Archibald McSparran who settled in Erie county. As near as can be known, Joseph moved to the interior of Pennsylvania with his family, probably locating near Lancaster, where a branch of the family now resides, and on the death of his father, Archibald moved to Erie county, arriving in 1802. Coming to Erie county in the early manhood of his career, Mr. McSparran took an active part in all public works and labored with untiring energy in building up the city. Settling on property on South Park Row, east of the postoffice, he became the owner of the entire block. Here he carried on a merchant tailoring business, and during the war of 1812 Mr. McSparran made the uniforms worn by Commodore Perry and the officers of his fleet on Lake Erie. Mr. McSparran was one of the organizers of the United Presbyterian Church, then called the Associated Reformed Church. On April 12, 1813, he was ordained an elder of the church, and continued in that position during the remaining years of his life. Mr. McSparran was an extensive owner of real estate, holding several valuable tracts in what is now the Second ward; he also bought property, and later erected the Erie City Mills, which are now at the junction of State street and the Lake Shore road. Successful in his dealings, Mr. McSparran was enabled in middle life to retire from active business. He was twice married: His first union was with Miss Margaret McKay, of Waterford, which occurred March 14, 1805. Nine children blessed this union, but one of whom is living, Archibald, of Painesville, O. The other children were: John, Clark, Mrs. Mary Dumars, Mrs. Nancy Mellen, wife of Charles Mellen; Winlock, Robert, Mrs. Margaret Reynolds, wife of John Reynolds, and Eliza. Mrs. McSparran departed this life in 1834. The second marriage of Mr. McSparran occurred September 14, 1849, to Mrs. Henrietta (Moody) Glazier, widow of Jacob Alexander Glazier. Two children were the result of this union: Henrietta, wife of E. D. Ludwig; and Evaline, wife of D. F. Orr, of Baltimore, Md. Mr. Archibald McSparran died January 25, 1857, at the ripe age of 84 years, and in full possession of his faculties. His second wife, Mrs. Henrietta, died September 9, 1888, aged 75 years. Clark McSparran, second son of Archibald by his first wife, was born in Erie, July 2, 1810. He was educated in the public schools of Erie and in the Waterford Academy, from which institution he graduated in 1829. He first clerked in a dry goods store, and in 1833 was appointed cashier of the Erie Bank, which position he retained during the life of that institution. An extensive dealer in real estate, he was more than ordinarily successful. On September 10, 1835, he married Mary Ann, daughter of Chester and Sarah (Steel) Jones, of English ancestry, and a native of Seymour, Conn. Her family moved to Pennsylvania in 1816. Five of the nine children born to this union are living: Albert J., Frank, William, clerk of the Buffalo General Electric Company; Charles Archibald, Erie Malleable Iron Company; Mary Emma, wife of Philip A. Locke. Mr. McSparran departed this life April 18, 1875. Mrs. McSparran still survives him, and is now living with her children, at 110 West Tenth street, Erie. Mrs. Henrietta Ludwig, wife of Emanuel D. Ludwig, the only direct descendant of Archibald McSparran now living at Erie, was born November 12, 1850. Her union with Mr. Ludwig occurred September 15, 1872. Mr. Ludwig was born March 14, 1848, in Berne, Switzerland. He is a son of Prof. E. A. Ludwig, and a grandson of Rev. Emanuel Ludwig, who was the first pastor of the great cathedral at Berne, and whose wife was a niece of Albert Von Haller, who was knighted by Joseph II, of Austria, and who was a great philosopher and scholar. The records show the Ludwigs to be one of the old patrician families of Switzerland. Mr. E. D. Ludwig came to America with his father in 1850. Prof. Ludwig was until 1861 a member of the faculty of Washington College at Lexington, Va., when he came north and finally settled with his son in Erie, where he died in the fall of 1880. Mr. E. D. Ludwig received his education at Lexington and Fincastle, Va. At the age of 16 he left school and started in life as a book agent. He taught a district school one term, and in 1867 entered the insurance business, and in a short time became general agent for his company. From 1874 to 1880 Mr. Ludwig engaged in speculation and manufacturing with more than average success, since which time he has been connected with the Mutual Reserve Association of New York, and is one of its officers. He came to Erie as State superintendent of the Equitable Life. His success in insurance is best attested by the action of the board of directors of his company, who passed a series of resolutions highly complimenting his work. Mr. Ludwig has risen from the bottom of the ladder to the front rank in field work in the insurance business. Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig have two children: Henrietta Daisy, born August 9, 1874, and Albert Archibald Otto, born November 8, 1876.

Hugh Jones, one of Erie's prominent citizens, died at his residence, 807 French street, March 25, 1891. He was born in Bodedern, Anglesea, North Wales, February 15, 1812, and was a son of John Hughes, a Methodist Episcopal clergyman. He was a grandson of Hugh Jones, a great-grandson of John Hughes, etc., the custom of the family being for the eldest son to bear the same names as his father with the order reversed. Mr. Jones had a step-father, whose name was also John Hughes. Hugh Jones was educated in his native country, where he also learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner. On June 19, 1832, he was married to Miss Eleanor Hughes, and came to the United States on his wedding tour. He remained some time in Utica and Buffalo, N. Y., and, in 1836, came to Erie. For the first few years after coming to America he devoted considerable attention to writing poems and articles for Welsh journals; but after reaching Erie he determined to give his whole time and energy to the pursuit of his trade. He was for a time employed by Gen. Reed as ship joiner, after which, in company with John Pinckney, under the firm name of Jones & Pinckney, he established a contracting and building business where the Penn building now stands. Later Mr. Jones became sole proprietor of the concern; but later, when a mill was built at Eleventh and Holland streets, he took in seven partners, among them Mr. John Constable. Later the partnership was reduced to himself and Constable, when the concern was removed to Fifth and Sassafras streets. This partnership was afterwards dissolved, and Mr. Jones established a business at Fourth and Peach streets, at which time he built a residence just north of the First Baptist Church. He then became a member of the firm of Liddell, Kepler & Co., doing the wood-work for the concern until it failed in 1857, by which he was a heavy loser. He then started anew, locating where the First National Bank now stands, and was very successful as a builder. Later he purchased from Carter & Mallory their mill, located at Holland and Eleventh streets, retaining Mr. Mallory as partner and furnishing him the money with which to buy an interest in the business, for which less than five years later he paid Mr. Mallory $20,000. This mill burned in 1875, after which Mr. Jones continued building without a mill of his own, and chiefly upon his own estates. During those years he helped a great many poor people to homes by allowing them to make payment upon the most lenient terms. Many of the leading builders of Erie date their start in business to their connection with Mr. Jones. Mr. John Constable has already been mentioned as a partner of Mr. Jones. The latter was also one of Henry Shenk's first employers, when a young man, he came to Erie to get a start in the world; and the senior Mr. Bauschard and his sons learned their trade with him, and were in his employ for some time. Mr. Jones was doubtless the first architect in Erie, always doing all his own work in that line. When others came and pursued that profession exclusively, Mr. Jones was frequently consulted on practical matters by them and those who employed them. At the time of his death, Mr. Jones was one of the largest real estate owners in Erie, and was one of the best landlords. Mrs. Jones died March 1, 1889, at the age of 72 years and 6 months. The family consisted of five children, two of whom died in infancy. The others were: Elizabeth, Mrs. Charles W. Grist, of Erie; Ellen J., Mrs. George V. Slocum, of Erie, and Hugh Jones, jr., who was for a time engaged in the sale of sash, doors and blinds in Erie, and who died in April, 1889. The last named married Miss Christiana Moore, of Erie, by whom he had one child, Margaretta Christina. An uncle of Mrs. Jones, when a young man, went to India, where he married the governor's daughter, at which his family, thinking that he had married an aboriginal (which, of course, was not the case), were very indignant, but by which he later became the possessor of great wealth. During some civil disturbance her uncle and aunt were killed, leaving an only son, who chanced to be absent from home at the time, the sole heir to their vast estates.

He died single, leaving an estate which is now worth several million dollars, and which must eventually revert to her heirs, among whom are the descendants of Hugh Jones in Erie. There is also quite a large estate of the family in Wales, part of which rightfully belongs to the Eric branch. In early life Mr. Jones was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in which faith his wife and he were baptized and confirmed. He was originally a Whig, and later a Republican, and served his adopted city as a member of the city council. He was one of the first members of the board of trade of Erie. By the will of Hugh Jones, his daughter, Mrs. Ellen J. Slocum, was made executrix of the large estate, from which the other children were to receive certain specified incomes.

George Volney Slocum, agent of the Hugh Jones estate, office 161 East Eleventh street, Erie, Pa., was born in Buffalo, August 19, 1843, a son of Samuel N. and Eliza L. (Sickles) Slocum, the former born in Herkimer, Herkimer county, N. Y., in 1818, a son of Samuel Slocum, a native of New Hampshire; the latter born in Amsterdam, N. Y., in 1823, a daughter of Judge William Sickles. Samuel N. Slocum was for thirty-five years a steamship and railroad ticket agent at Buffalo, where he died, October 7, 1893. Mrs. Slocum still resides in Buffalo, aged 73 years. To this couple were born five children: Adalaid L. (Mrs. John W. Moharg, of Buffalo, N. Y.); George V.; Alice A. (Mrs. William H. Graves, of Buffalo), deceased; Mary J. (Mrs. Dr. C. C. Bingham, of Kansas City, Mo.); and Sidney M., in the insurance business in Buffalo. George V. Slocum received his education in the public schools of Buffalo, and, when 16 years of age, secured a position as helper to the clerk on the Niagara river steamer "Arrow," where he remained two years. He then occupied a position as newsboy on the N. Y. C. R. R., in which capacity he worked one year; he was then made brakeman, and worked six months, when he left and found employment with the L. S. & M. S. R. R., in the same capacity. Eight months later he was promoted to the position of baggage-master and extra conductor; after two years of this service he secured a position as fireman on the same road, and eleven months later was promoted to the position of engineer, and for twenty-three years he served the L. S. & M. S. R. R. as a locomotive engineer. He then opened a grocery store in Erie, on the southwest corner of Eleventh and Holland streets, which he conducted two years, when he was made agent for the estate of the late Hugh Jones, a position he has since held. Mr. Slocum was married, September 15, 1868, to Miss Ellen Jane, daughter of the late Hugh Jones, of Erie. This happy union has been blessed with one child—Eleanor Josephine, who married Mr. Charles H. Lamb, cashier of the Erie Fish Association, by whom she has one child, Eleanor. Mr. and Mrs. Slocum are members of the Episcopal Church. He is a member of the F. & A. M., the K. of H., and in politics is independent.

John W. Leech, secretary and treasurer of the Keystone Electric Company, was born in Leechburg, Armstrong county, Pa., October 8, 1852. He is a son of Addison and Mary (Watson) Leech. John W. Leech was educated in the public schools and Academy of Leechburg, after which he came to Erie and engaged as a bookkeeper at the Anchor Line elevators, where his father was manager, and where he remained for eleven years. He then engaged for two years in the wholesale and retail flour and grain business on North Park Row, after which he took the management of a 5,000 acre wheat farm owned by his father in North Dakota, spending the winters in the East, only that portion of the year on the farm when it required his attention. Having sold a small portion of the immense farm and turned the remainder of it over to the management of his brothers, he became identified with the Keystone Electric Company, as is detailed in the sketch of Mr. C. J. Sturgeon, which appears in this work. Mr. Leech was married May 6, 1878, to Miss Nellie, daughter of Mr. N. J. Clark, of Erie. They have one child, Marion. Mr. Leech and family are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. In politics he affiliates with the Republican party.

Ricardo St. Philip Lowry, deputy collector of customs, Erie, Pa., was born in Philadelphia, Pa., February 25, 1864. He is a son of the late Commodore Reigart B. and Elizabeth (Courtright) Lowry. Commodore Lowry was born July 4, 1826, at La Guayra, Venezuela, at which port his father was the then American consul. He was appointed to the United States navy when only 13 years of age, and continued in the service until the day of his death, November 25, 1880. Before the war he was in command of the U. S. S. Severn, and during the war was first executive officer of the Brooklyn at New Orleans, and later in command of the gunboat Sciota. After the war he was in command of the Sabine at New London, and next of the receiving ship Ohio, in the Boston navy yard. His next service was in command of the Canandaigua. He was in command of the old flag ship Constitution while that vessel was being prepared for her voyage to France and exhibition at Havre as part of the United States exhibit at the Paris Exposition of 1875. At the time of his decease he was on special duty at Brooklyn, N. Y. He was married in 1858, at Erie, Pa., being at the time executive officer of the United States steamer Michigan. His wife (now Mrs. Eben Brewer) is the daughter of the late Milton Courtright, one of the early settlers of Erie county. R. St. P. Lowry was educated in the public schools and high school of Erie, and then took a course in civil engineering in the Shortledge Academy, Media, Pa. Following this he for sixteen months had charge of an engineering corps on the West Shore R. R. In 1883 he went to Norfolk, Va., where he located and surveyed a railroad which was built by his grandfather, the late Milton Courtright. Following this he made the preliminary survey of a proposed railroad from Fort Plain on the West Shore to Richfield Springs and Cooperstown, N. Y. Two years thereafter he was in the employ of the Youghioghy River Coal Company at Ashtabula, Ohio. In 1885-6 he was in the office of Hon. Thomas C. Platt, president of the United States Express Company. Returning to Erie, Mr. Lowry was connected with the Morning Dispatch until 1890, when he embarked in the coal business, being associated with Mr. Wirt McCreary. He was appointed to his present position as deputy under Collector of Customs Nelson Baldwin on February 8, 1894. Mr. Lowry is a Democrat and has done effective work for his party. He was a member of the councils from the First ward in 1887, and was presiding officer of that body during the year. In 1888-9 he was secretary of the Democratic executive committee of the city, and in 1890-91 was chairman of that organization. He was a member of the school board from the Fourth ward from 1890 to 1893, and was secretary of that body during 1892-3. During his secretaryship he rendered efficient service by systematizing the work, bringing the records together in one office, and securing the appointment of a clerk for that body. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and of the B. P. O. E. He was married October 17, 1888, to Annie, daughter of the late George V. Maus, former general freight agent at Erie for the Pennsylvania R. R. Mr. and Mrs. Lowry have two children, George M. and Philip W., reside at 453 West Sixth street, and are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Perry G. Stranahan (deceased), late a farmer and stock raiser in Union City, was a grandson of John Stranahan, a native of Rhode Island, born in 1737, and died March 23, 1798. In September, 1763, before the Revolution, he married Lucy Buck, and settled in Canaan, Columbia county, N. Y. He was a man of wealth. His son, Gibson J. Stranahan, was born in Canaan, in 1786. He married Miss Dolly Devendorf, of Herkimer county, New York, in 1807. He was a resident of Herkimer county for many years, and there followed the occupation of a farmer. In 1836, he, with his family, came West, and settled in Concord township, Erie county, Pa. He entered a large tract of land, and imported 450 fine wool sheep. He became one of the largest stock-raisers of Erie county. He died in 1869. His wife was born in Herkimer county, New York, and died in 1802 or 1803, aged 73 years. She was a daughter of John Devendorf, a native of Herkimer county, New York. He was one of the wealthiest farmers in his county. The parents of P. G. Stranahan had the following children: Daniel V., a prominent physician, who died in Warren, Pa., in 1874; Hon. John D., a farmer; James, a farmer; Perry G.; Franklin B., a farmer; and Margaret E., wife of William A. Mead, a surveyor and farmer of Youngsville, Pa. Perry G. Stranahan was born in Herkimer county, New York, on the 12th of July, 1820. He devoted his early life to work on the farm and in teaching school winters. In 1843 he was married to Miss Louisa, only daughter of P. K. Webber, of Columbus, Warren county, Pa., who was one of the earliest pioneers of that place, and cut away the pines where the village now stands. He and his estimable wife, Annie, resided with Mr. Stranahan. Mr. Stranahan studied law with Horace Hawes, of Erie, who was afterward appointed U. S. consul to the Society Islands. On account of failing health, Mr. Stranahan was compelled to abandon the law. He then came to Le Boeuf, bought a farm on French creek, built, and kept the Moravian Hotel for a number of years. In 1859, when the P. & E. and A. & G. W. railways were being built, Mr. Stranahan saw the opportunity for advancement, and purchased nearly all of the old Miles estate, consisting of several hundred acres of land, upon which a large part of the borough of Union City is now built. He immediately laid it out in village lots, established a real estate agency, and in connection with farming and stock-raising amassed considerable means, and became one of the enterprising and solid men of Union City. He was always foremost in any enterprise which promised its advancement. He was liberal with his means, and assisted the worthy in building up the industries of the place. He lost large sums of money in the stove and barrel works of Union City, and as one of the projectors of the Union and Titusville R. R., he lost thousands of dollars. His name was a tower of financial strength, but the great losses sustained in these calamities almost overwhelmed him. In 1871, he, with others, started the Casement Savings Bank, which did a successful business until 1878, when it succumbed to the general depression of business. A large credit had been loaned the bank, and the obligations could not be met. It may be said to the credit of Mr. Stranahan that he turned over his individual property, and the bank matters were honorably and satisfactorily settled, and without a law suit. He was the only man in the community that helped in the erection of the A. & G. W. Railway; and with this corporation he has been largely and prominently identified. Mr. Stranahan has held a number of offices. In his intercourse he was pleasing, benevolent and cheerful, and reflected the philanthropy which was an innate characteristic of the man. He was happiest when doing good, and always had the interest of the city and locality at heart. He made friends without attempting so to do; was bold and outspoken in his likes and dislikes, and never had a malicious feeling toward an enemy. A self-made man, he had earned the fruitage of his years by his own industry and perseverance; his integrity was never impeached. He was blessed with children, viz.: Sarah M., wife of L. S. Clough, a large lumber dealer; Ellen, wife of E. G. Stranahan, of Cleveland, Ohio; Maggie L., widow of A. F. Bole, a prominent lawyer of Corry, Pa.; Belle L., youngest daughter, widow of C. C. Page (deceased), and William P., bookkeeper, an adopted son, who lived with them since he was a child. Mr. P. G. Stranahan died November 15, 1892, after a long illness. His widow survives.

The Hutchinson Family.—HON. MYRON HUTCHINSON, late of Girard, Erie county, Pa., when quite young, came to reside on the site of Girard. He married a daughter of Mr. Joseph Wells. The latter owned all the land, and erected the first frame building within the present limits of Girard. He gave the public square and facilitated the laying out of the village. The stately brick mansion on the north side of Main street, with the cluster of attractive homes near by, with their beautiful grounds and walks, so long ago as the early thirties, occupied by the McConnells, Websters and Marshalls, and later by the Cutlers and Woodruffs, gave a character to the place and caused it to be noted far and wide as a most desirable place of residence. Girard was then one of the stopping places on the great Ridge road, which, before the day of railroads, was the highway of commerce and of travel between the East and the West. Hon. Myron Hutchinson was a noted man. He was postmaster of Girard, justice of the peace and associate judge of Erie county for ten years. Their family consisted of Monroe Hutchinson, who now occupies the family homestead in Girard; Eliza, widow of David Olin, late of Girard; Lydia (widow of John Clemens, a merchant manufacturer of Erie), who survive their sisters, and Irene and Polly, deceased, and their brother, Capt. David W., who died in Erie. In their home-like mansion, Judge and Mrs. Hutchinson, with their family of four daughters and two sons, dispensed an abounding, warm-hearted and old-fashioned hospitality. Judge Hutchinson died in August, 1859, and Mrs. Hutchinson lived until March 4, 1879. His early education was obtained at Girard, followed by a classical course at Kingsville Academy. He studied law at Girard with Hon. George H. Cutler, and at the State and National Law School at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Before the war, he opened a law office in Erie, in company with J. W. Bridger, Esq., which he continued for some years. He was the captain of the Girard Guards, On President Lincoln's call for troops in April, 1861, he tendered his company, which became Company C, of McLane's Erie regiment. He afterwards resumed practice at Girard. There he was active in all matters of a public nature and a leader on occasions of general interest; patriotic and indefatigable in all that promoted such events. He was a member of the Girard Lodge A. O. U. W., and of Temple Chapter No. 215, R. A. M. He was a charter member of Mt. Olivet Commandry No. 30, Knights Templar, and was at one time district deputy grand master of Masons in Erie county. At the laying of the corner-stone of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, on July 4, 1868, by special authority from Richard Vaux, grand master of the State, he officiated as grand master, when the Governor of Pennsylvania (attended by members of his cabinet) laid the stone. President Cleveland, in 1886, on the recommendation of Hon. William L. Scott, appointed him United States receiver of public moneys at Bismarck, N. D. He removed there, remaining four years. His duties were acceptably performed during his term. He then returned to Erie, resuming law practice. Perhaps no professional duty of his life better illustrated his fine qualities than his continued and successful efforts in obtaining the right of way for the N. Y., C. & St. L. (Nickle Plate) R. R. There his patience, suavity and sense of fairness, were all brought into requisition in the numerous and successful negotiations, all culminating in the speedy construction of the great highway. Another notable occasion in his practice was when it was arranged for perhaps a score of veterans or widows of the war of 1812 to meet at his office to perfect plans for availing themselves of the act of Congress, giving pensions to these aged persons. It was a gathering which aroused some of his most conspicuous and kindest traits of character: Respect for the aged, zeal for their relief, and gratitude for these surviving patriots and widows of veterans. He was, while at Girard, at the head of the fire department. His domestic relations were most agreeable. He married Miss Mary Keyser, of Girard. They had four children: Mrs. Gray Myron, now a clerk in the Fargo land office; Frank and Monroe, residing with their mother in Erie. Capt. Hutchinson's noble qualities of heart prompted him to cling to old friends with unwavering fidelity; he loved social reunions. With so much of his life passed in Erie county, he was an authority on county events, and fondly recalled the memories of those he knew or had met. He was a fine conversationalist, and his narrative of Western experience was always interesting. He was a Democrat, often chairman of the county committee, and delegate to State conventions, and the choice of Erie county Democrats for the Congressional nomination on one or more occasions. Living, Capt. Hutchinson was beloved, and now that he is gone, it is doubtful if a single person can recall an unkind act of his. His impulses were kind, his aspirations patriotic, and his whole life in keeping with maxims of the order in which he earned and maintained such high rank. He died January 19, 1894. Mrs. Clemens has one son, Rinaldo E., married to Miss Anna Hays, of Erie. They have two children, John and Hayes. He succeeded to his father's large business interests and the West Sixth street home. Monroe Hutchinson, Esq., of Girard, has three children: Charles, married to Marion Palmer; Lydia, married to R. E. Taggart, and Edgar. These surviving members of the family, with their children, maintain the prestige and traits of their worthy progenitor.

Col. Jeremiah C. Drake (deceased) was a descendant, on the paternal side, of one of the first English, and on the maternal side of one of the earliest Huguenot-Puritan families of New England. His father was a colonel of militia, and his grandfather was a captain in the Revolutionary war. His ancestors were among the first settlers of the Empire State, and were descendants of the renowned Sir Francis Drake, the first circumnavigator of the globe. Col. Drake was born in Salisbury, Herkimer county, N. Y., April 19, 1824; was endowed with the indomitable energy, the bravery and the uncompromising integrity which so often characterizes persons of Huguenot-Puritan descent. At an early age he embraced religion under the Harmony Baptist Association, and throughout his life adhered undeviatingly with his whole heart and soul to his faith. A few years prior to attaining his maturity he engaged in mercantile pursuits in Wisconsin, whither he had gone in 1843, and during this period held several positions of trust, and although he demonstrated a business ability that would have eventuated in more than ordinary success, he relinquished his worldly pursuits and devoted his time to study, with a view to the gospel ministry. In December, 1847, he was licensed to preach, and soon thereafter returned to his native State to pursue, at the Rochester University, a thorough course of study, preparatory to entering upon his ministerial labors. Although entirely without means when he entered upon his collegiate course, he managed by most industrious application to earn the means of subsistence and to pay the cost of his tuition while taking the full course in the regular time, being graduated from the university in 1852. During this period, also, he gathered and organized a church at Churchville, Monroe county, N. Y., and was ordained its pastor January 22, 1852. After a successful pastorate there of two years he had charge of the Baptist Church at Panama, Chautauqua county, N. Y., which he left four years later to assume the pastoral care of the Baptist Church in Westfield, removing thither in the fall of 1858. Upon the breaking out of the war he resolved to take up arms in defense of his imperiled country, and in August, 1861, recruited a company, was commissioned its captain, and joined the 49th N. Y. V. I., under the command of Col. D. D. Bidwell. He served with his regiment through the entire campaign of the Peninsula, taking active and honorable part in the battles of Mechanicsville, Garnett's Farm, Savage Station and White Oak Swamp. In the fall of 1862, when the 112th regiment was raised in Chautauqua county, Capt. Drake was unanimously chosen to its command, and was commissioned colonel September

2, 1862. During his subsequent two years of service Col. Drake was distinguished for his courage in action, and during a large portion of this time was in command of the brigade. He was occupying this position at the battle of Cold Harbor, where he received a mortal wound and was taken to the hospital, and there, after having delivered to his comrades his last message to his family, with a request that his body be sent home, he asked to be kept quiet, saying: "You will excuse me from talking, for I have but little time to live, and I wish it all to myself." He passed the night in self-communion, enduring the keenest bodily suffering without a murmur or complaint. Towards morning the chaplain recited the words of the apostle: "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." The dying Christian soldier responded, "Amen, amen!" These were his last words. Thus died a good man, and a genuine patriot. But, great as are the honors justly bestowed upon him for the service rendered his country in a most critical juncture, far more honorable were his achievements as a "soldier of the cross," under the Great Captain of Salvation, in the warfare against the kingdom of darkness. Col. Drake was married to Clara Utley, of Boonville, Oneida county, N. Y., August 25, 1852, and to them were born three children: J. Clinton Merl, Jennie Clara and Charles Kessler. J. C. M. Drake, M. D., 720 Sassafras street, Erie, Pa., was born in Panama, Chautauqua county, N. Y., June 24, 1855, and reared in Westfield. His father was Col. J. C. Drake. After receiving a good literary education at Greylock Institute, Massachusetts, he entered Cornell University, taking a thorough literary and scientific course when 20 years of age; after two years he entered Habnemann College, Chicago, graduating in 1880, when 25 years of age. After practicing a year at Westfield, N. Y., in connection with Dr. George W. Seymour, he came to Erie, and has since been identified with the practice in this city. He has worked actively for the development of the social life of Erie city, and enjoys an enviable reputation professionally. Dr. Drake has been president of the Erie County Homeopathic Medical Society, and is a member of the Homeopathic Medical Society of Pennsylvania, of the Medical Society of Western New York, and of the new Homeopathic Hospital and Dispensary Association of the city. He has lived a very active professional life, and is especially skilled in the field of orbital surgery. Dr. Drake's beautiful residence, at 720 Sassafras street, also contains his office quarters, consisting of four separate apartments; first, the office entrance leads to the reception room, adjoining which is the consulting and operating room, with a separate exit to the street; from this open the laboratory and the retiring room. Everything that experience could suggest has been brought into requisition to make the offices convenient and pleasant. Dr. Drake was united in marriage, June 4, 1890, to Miss Cassie, daughter of J. B. Crouch, a leading miller of Erie. They have two children, Benson Crouch, born February 20, 1891, and Clara Louisa, born February 10, 1893. The family attend the Park Presbyterian Church. The doctor is a member of the K. of P., and National Union, and is medical examiner for both. In politics he is a Republican.

Gen. David B. McCreary, attorney at law, Erie, Pa. There will always attach an interest to the pioneer families, which will never probably belong to others who come at a later date, as the former have laid the foundations of social and material growth, and the coming generations can only modify and develop that which they, by their energy and perseverance, established. By their strong arms were the forests felled, the undergrowth cleared away, and the sod broken; by them were the primitive cabin, the log schoolhouse and the church erected. Later inhabitants make further and higher advancements in all these, and proceed to further develop the embryo foundations of the pioneer. To the latter class belongs General McCreary, born February 27, 1826, in Mill Creek township, Erie county, Pa., to Joseph F. and Lydia (Swan) McCreary, natives of Pennsylvania, and the parents of nine children: Samuel S., Richard S., Selina C., John J., Mary E., Jackson, David B., Lydia A. and Martha S. Joseph F. McCreary came to Mill Creek township in 1800 from Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and was a farmer during his life. Gen. D. B. McCreary was brought up as a farmer's son; when a mere lad his tastes inclined to science and literature, which has increased with his years. In his boyhood days he made the best use of such educational advantages as the public schools of his locality afforded and the limited means of his family would allow. He also attended the Erie Academy and the Washington (Pa.) College; later he taught school in Erie, and was principal in the Winchester (Ky.) Seminary, and elsewhere in Kentucky, from 1851 to 1853. While teaching in Erie he read law with Judge John and W. A. Galbraith, and in 1853 began practicing law, forming a partnership with J. B. Johnson. In 1855 he was appointed aid to Governor Pollock, with the rank of lieutenant colonel. Two years later he became associated with Jonas Gunnison, the father of the present presiding judge, Frank Gunnison, and dissolved his partnership with Mr. Johnson, the new partnership continuing until the breaking out of the Rebellion, when he was attached as first lieutenant of Co. B, in what was known as the Erie regiment. He was prominent in the organization of the 145th Reg., P. V. I., of which he was appointed lieutenant colonel, and was subsequently commissioned colonel, and later breveted brigadier general, which position he held at the close of the war. He was confined in Libby, Macon, Charleston and Columbia prisons for ten months. On his return from the war he resumed the practice of law, and, like all who love their profession, has been successful. In 1865, as a token of the esteem in which he was held by the many friends of his resident district, he was elected to the Legislature, and served with credit to himself and his constituents for two terms. In 1867 he was appointed adjutant general under Governor Geary, and served three years. In 1870 he was again returned to the Legislature. He served six years as a State manager of the Dixmont Asylum. In 1888 he was elected as a member of the State Senate from the Erie district for the term of four years, and in 1892 was re-elected to the same body. As State senator Gen. McCreary has served on numerous important committees; among them, for two terms, as chairman of the judiciary general committee. During his senatorial service he has been notably faithful in his attendance upon the sessions of that body, and watchful for the interests of his constituents. It is a pleasure to record him as a gentleman of fine natural endowments and acquired abilities, enviable reputation professionally and socially. He adheres strictly to the principles of the Republican party, and his eloquence as a political speaker is sought in various parts of the State. He is one of the founders of the Park Presbyterian Church of Erie; was married in 1851 to Annette, daughter of the late E. D. Gunnison, one of the early settlers of Erie county. This union has resulted in two children: Sophia, wife of Henry A. Clark, a prominent attorney of Erie and Wirt, who graduated in June, 1884, with honors as cadet midshipman at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and is now of the firm of H. Thompson & Co., Erie, Pa.

R. J. Sturgeon

Winfield S. McCreary, retired farmer, West Mill Creek postoffice, Erie county, Pa., was born October 2, 1847, on the farm on which he now resides. He is a son of Samuel S. and Joanna (Brooks) McCreary. In the fall of 1863 he was taken sick with a complication of diseases and was confined to his bed for eight years. Since then he has been obliged to use crutches. He followed farming for fifteen years and served as township treasurer for three years. Mr. McCreary is a member of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, and in politics, like all the rest of the McCrearys, is a staunch Republican.

Samuel Slater McCreary (deceased), a life-long resident of Mill Creek township, was born September 12, 1812, and died July 31, 1892. He was a son of Joseph F. and Lydia (Swan) McCreary, the former a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and the latter of Dauphin county, who came to Erie county in 1802-3, locating on Walnut Creek. The father of the latter came from Dauphin county and settled in Manchester in 1804. They were parents of nine children, as follows: S. S., Richard F., born in 1814, died in 1881; J. J. (deceased), Selina C., Mary E., Jackson (deceased), formerly of Mill Creek; Gen. David B. McCreary, Erie; Lydia A., wife of William Love, of Mill Creek, and Martha S., wife of Thomas Love. October 17, 1839, Mr. S. S. McCreary married Joanna, daughter of John and Eleanor (McCreary) Brooks, the former of whom came to this county in 1802, settling in Mill Creek township. Mrs. McCreary still survives, at the age of 76 years, enjoying the remaining days of a well spent life upon the farm where she was born. John Brooks was born in 1772 and died in 1857. His wife, Eleanor (McCreary) Brooks, died in 1846. They were natives of Lancaster. Their children were Joanna, born July 8, 1819; Mary J., born May 31, 1821, died October 26, 1850; Eliza B., born August 19, 1823; Harriett, born July 12, 1825, died July 14, 1853, and John C. Brooks, born March 7, 1829, died August 2, 1849. To Mr. and Mrs. McCreary were born twelve children, as follows: Julia (deceased), Washington I. (deceased), John J., married to Mary Easley, have five children (Florence E., Sidney S., Agnes M., Bryant and Dwight); John (deceased) and John J., twins; Winfield, now a retired farmer; Nellie Lydia (deceased, 1893); Sidney B. (deceased), Eva Jane (deceased), Mary A. (deceased), Millie J. and Margaret B. Millie J. has followed teaching as a profession for several years, part of her teaching being among the freedmen of the South. Margaret B., who is a graduate of the Edinboro State Normal School, has been teaching in her own township. The late Samuel Slater McCreary, who for many years lived on a farm situated on an elevation in the central part of Mill Creek township, was a man of great intelligence and strong moral character. He was a great reader, and in order to satisfy this desire he accumulated a library of nearly a thousand volumes. He would work hard all day at his trade and at night would spend his time until the small hours reading by the light of a tallow candle. In politics he was a staunch Republican.

Joseph J. McCreary, retired farmer, West Mill Creek township, was born July 14, 1844, son of Samuel Slater and Joanna (Brooks) McCreary, of Mill Creek township. The former died July 30, 1892, at the age of 80 years; the latter still survives, living on the homestead farm, near her son, at the age of 76 years. Mr. Joseph J. McCreary is the third of a family of eleven children: Julia (deceased), Washington I. (deceased), John J. and John (deceased), twins; Winfield S., Lydia Ellen, Sidney B. (deceased), Eva Jane (deceased), Mary A. (deceased), Milcent J. and Margaret B. McCreary. March 4, 1869, Mr. McCreary married Miss Mary Esling, a native of Germany. To this union have been born five children: Florence, Sidney, Agnes, Bryant and Dwight McCreary. Mr. McCreary has always been a resident of Mill Creek township and highly respected. He has been on his present farm forty-five years. Mr. and Mrs. McCreary are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Cassius McCreary, superintendent of the F. H. Watson Paper Company, Erie, Pa., born in Fairview township, Erie county, Pa., April 8, 1859, is a son of Andrew Franklin and Letitia Isabella (Barr) McCreary. His father was born in Fairview township, one mile north of what is known as the "Old Kentucky Home," and lived there until after his marriage. His grandfather, William B. McCreary, was also a native of Erie county, and a soldier in the war of 1812. His great-grandfather came from New England and was of Scotch ancestry. His maternal grandfather, John L. Barr, was a native of Erie county, and his maternal great-grandfather, who was a Scotch-Irishman, died in Washington, D. C., at the advanced age of 108 years. It will thus be seen that the McCreary and Barr families were among the very first of the sturdy pioneers who undertook the gigantic task of converting this portion of the Lake Erie wilderness into one of the most beautiful agricultural spots on the globe. Andrew F. McCreary followed farming until middle life, when he became a member of the firm of Caughey, McCreary & Moorehead, book-sellers and stationers, Erie, Pa., and is now living in retirement with his wife in Erie. The family consisted of five children, three of whom are living: Emma, Mrs. Richard Pratt; Cassius and John Milton, the last storekeeper of the H. F. Watson Paper Company. Mr. Cassius McCreary was educated in the public schools and academy of his native town, and when quite young accepted a position with Watson & Morgan, who at that time were manufacturing paper in Fairview township. After two years thus employed he was made foreman of the mill, a position he filled for a year and a half. In 1884 he came to Erie as assistant foreman of the mill, which had been previously erected here, and two years later was promoted to his present position. During this long term of service he has discharged the multifarious duties of his position in such a way as to win the respect of those under his charge and the confidence of his employers, and to establish for himself the reputation of being one of the most thorough and practical paper men in the country. Mr. McCreary was married May 8, 1883, to Miss Isabella, daughter of Mr. Peter Heidler, of Fairview township. This union has been blessed with two children, Adriel Raymond and Arloween Isabella. Mr. and Mrs. McCreary attend the Simpson M. E. Church, of which she is a member. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. and is a Republican in his political views.

Hon. John H. Walker (deceased). Few names are more identified with Northwestern Pennsylvania, and none more associated with Erie, than that of the lawyer and statesman now mentioned. He was one of eight children of John and Isabella (McCormick) Walker, born in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, February 9, 1800. His ancestors were of Scotch, Scotch-Irish, and English origin, and among the very early settlers of Pennsylvania. His great-grandfather, William Walker, came to Pennsylvania in 1710—but eighteen years after William Penn. The Walkers settled in Lancaster county. His grandfather, William Walker, afterward removed to Cumberland county and his father, in 1817, removed from Cumberland to Washington county, Pennsylvania. His mother, Isabella McCormick, the daughter of Thomas and Jane (Oliver) McCormick, was born December 29, 1759, on the present site of Philadelphia, Pa. They came from Ireland in 1737. They had two sons, John and William, and six daughters, of whom Isabella was the eldest. The reference to Mr. Walker's ancestry and race will explain his marked tenacity of purpose and rigid pertinacity; while the long identification of the family with Pennsylvania is mentioned as a reminder of his loyalty to her interests. Robert John Walker, United States Senator from Mississippi and secretary of the treasury under President Polk, was the son of John H. Walker's uncle, Jonathan Walker, and was born July 14, 1801.

John H. Walker graduated at Washington College in 1822. He studied with an uncle at Pittsburg, and was the next year admitted to the bar. In 1824 he came to Erie to reside. From that time he was identified for half a century with Erie as a lawyer and public man. He was an advocate of great power, and retained his place as one of the leading men of Northwestern Pennsylvania until his death. His professional career included an amount of continuous and arduous professional work and a prominent, undisputed and well sustained leadership which has few parallels in the State. He was thoroughly Pennsylvanian, by birth, lineage, education and residence. This was strikingly manifest in his conspicuous service in the legislative bodies of the State. In these, his remarkable legislative career has three separate and distinct but equally removed periods of service. His first four years in the Legislature commenced in 1832. The second as senator from 1849 to 1852. The third as delegate at large to the Constitutional convention of 1873-4. As his first service was in the prime of life, the second was in his full-orbed meridian, and the third after he had passed the psalmist's limit. Each period was, in a measure, amid different surroundings of men and of questions. In each period of service his leadership was recognized; for in the first, he was, as chairman of ways and means committee, leader of the House; in the second, speaker of the Senate, and in the third, made president of the Constitutional convention, on the death of William M. Meredith, who, at the head of the Philadelphia bar, and secretary of the treasury under President Taylor, was of national renown. The agitating questions of these respective eras were as different as were the personal surroundings. In the first, the creation of corporations and the construction of canals were foremost; in the second, the building and regulating of railroads were of absorbing interest; and in the third and final service, the restriction of corporations and the curbing of their powers, were uppermost in the minds of the framers of the Constitution. In all of the groups of men and variety of questions, Mr. Walker was a leader of leaders. Sound in his principles, clear in his views of public measures, and earnest in their support, he won admiration and commanded respect. In the halls of legislation, as before courts and juries, his presentation of facts was so clear, and his train of reasoning so cogent, that he generally carried his audience with him. He struck his sledge-hammer blows with tremendous force, and his sarcasm was withering. He seldom lost a cause. Having mastered its fundamental principles, believing its aim to be the enforcement of right and the repression of wrong, he devoted his great abilities to its practice. Though eminently fitted to grace public positions, he was not an officer-seeker. He despised the tricks of the politician. Three times in his long career he accepted public trusts, always to his pecuniary detriment. Each time it was in interruption of professional duties, to him, so much more congenial. Besides, circumstances, and his own convictions, had placed him, in early life, in antagonism to the Democracy in its long and hardly interrupted control of Pennsylvania. Always its opponent, Mr. Walker, on each occasion of his appearance in public position, was found in the leadership of a party of a different name from that borne during his former service. In 1835, as the co-adjutor of Governor Ritner, Thaddeus Stevens and Thomas H. Burrows, he was the leader of the Anti-Masonic majority of the House of Representatives. In 1851-2, as the elect of the Whigs, he presided in the State Senate, and in 1873-4 as the choice of the Republicans, as Meredith's successor in the President's chair, in a body of which Governors Bigler and Curtin, Judge Black and other able men were members. He had passed the meridian of his life when the Pennsylvania Democracy was overthrown, but in the "horrowed time" allotted him, after his three score and ten, he aided in forming a constitution, to protect the people from mischiefs, which as a legislator he had perceived and deplored. He was a public-spirited citizen, keenly alive to the interests of Erie and resolute in their defense. He did much to improve the city, having erected an industrial plant and many dwellings. While in the Legislature he obtained from the State the grant of the beautiful farm for the Alms House and the "Third Section" of land in Mill Creek for the improvement of Erie harbor. He was active in the development of the railroad system centering at Erie and devoted much of his time and means to maintain a plank road.

His domestic relations were unusually happy. In 1831 he married Miss Catherine D. Kelley, a native of New Hampshire. Their home was in an imposing brick mansion on West Seventh street, erected in 1837. He was noted for the love of home, and though Mrs. Walker died in 1869, more than fourteen years preceding the death of her husband, the memory of her grace of manner and kindness of heart, lingers like a spell. After her death Mr. Walker kept open his spacious, elegant home, and by his will directed that for ten years his home, with the furniture and pictures, with all their associations, should be continued as a family household. His exertions in the Constitutional convention told upon his strength, he returned home enfeebled, and, "full of honors and of years," died on the 25th of January, 1875.

His eldest son, MAJ. JOHN W. WALKER, is U. S. marshal of the western district of Pennsylvania. His home is in Erie.

GEN. THOMAS MCCORMICK WALKER, second son of John H. Walker, was born February 4, 1834. After graduation at Princeton, he spent some years in the construction of railroads in Missouri and Illinois. Having returned to Erie, he was active in raising the One Hundred and Eleventh Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, which served until the close of the war. No one was more identified with his regiment than Gen. Walker. He entered as major and rose to be its colonel, and was for his gallant conduct brevetted brigadier-general. While major, in the absence of the colonel and lieutenant-colonel, he commanded the regiment at the battles of Cedar Mountain and Antietam, and for his gallantry was presented with a splendid sword by the ladies of Erie. It was fitly said by the Erie Dispatch, in speaking of the regiment: "It has seen more hard fighting, done more active duty and obtained a wider reputation in proportion to its service than almost any other in the country." His regiment was the first to enter Atlanta, and the last to leave that city, while forming part of Gen. Sherman's army in his "March to the Sea." The visit of the One Hundred and Eleventh Regiment to Erie, in the winter of 1864, was the occasion of a public reception and a great manifestation of affection and esteem for Col. Walker and his men. His military record was a glorious one. He returned at the close of the war and entered business in Erie. In 1870 he was elected sheriff of Erie county; he was chairman of the Republican county committee in 1868-9; was appointed post-master of Erie by President Grant in 1876, and served until 1879; he is now farming in North Dakota. He married Miss Agnes, daughter of the late William M. Caughey, of Erie.

All of Mr. John H. Walker's daughters are living: Catherine D., the eldest, is the wife of Hon. S. A. Davenport, of Erie; the second, Isabella McCormick, is Mrs. H. N. Armstrong, of Missouri; Mary J., the third, is Mrs. Dilman F. Beemer, of Missouri.

Of the sons, George W. Walker, born April 26, 1840, was an attorney at law in Erie, and died August 7, 1871; James Oliver, born June 13, 1842, died April 15, 1844; Quincey Adams, born March 15, 1847, died February 2, 1865; and Harry, born August 5, 1852, died April 6, 1879.

Such is but a meagre sketch of a family that in some of its members has for several generations filled a most important place in Erie. To write their complete biography would require a recapitulation of more of the history of Erie county, of Pennsylvania, and of public events during the last seventy years, than the space now allotted would permit.

James McBrier, president of the Ball Engine Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Allegheny city, Pa.,

of the public and private schools of which city he received his education. He was associated with his father, who was extensively engaged in the sawmill and lumber business, until he was 24 years of age, when, upon the death of his father, he assumed the management of the business, which was successfully conducted by him until 1875, when he removed to Erie. In 1872, Mr. McBrier, associated with other gentlemen, established a wholesale lumber business in Erie, which was continued until 1887. They employed barges and steamers in carrying Michigan lumber, in which they dealt extensively. In 1887, Mr. McBrier became interested in the Ball Engine Company, of which he became president a year later. This institution was established in 1881 and incorporated in 1884. (See chapter on manufacturing.) The present officers of the company are: James McBrier, president; D. N. McBrier, vice-president and secretary, and H. L. McBrier, treasurer. The plant, located at the corner of Twelfth and French streets, occupies a space of about two acres, nearly all of which is covered with buildings. The products of this concern consists of engines only. These are the highest grade and for use in electric light, electric railway and mining plants, have no superior. This is true not only on account of the excellent material and workmanship used in their construction, but also on account of certain special appliances, such as valves, governors, crank shafts, etc., which are superior to those of any other engines. The territory in which these engines are used includes the whole civilized world. The capital stock of the concern is $800,000, and the output from 25,000 to 30,000 horsepower per year. Mr. McBrier is managing owner of three lake steamers of 2,500 tons burden each, and is vice-president of the Lake Carriers' Association. He was married in 1860 to Miss Mary E. White, daughter of the Hon. D. N. White, editor and proprietor of the Pittsburgh Commercial-Gazette, whose ancestors came to Plymouth on the Mayflower. The issue of this marriage has been six children, two of whom are associated with their father in business and another son Fred, was graduated from Cornell University in 1895. Mr. McBrier and family worship at the Park Presbyterian Church, of which he is a trustee. In politics Mr. McBrier is a staunch Republican and an active and efficient worker in the interests of the party. He served as a member of the select council of Allegheny City for sixteen years, and was for twelve years president of that body. Since coming to Erie his support of the principles of his party have been untiring, and during the campaign which resulted in President Harrison's election, he was chairman of the Republican county committee. He always has the best interests of the nation and community at heart and is always ready to give his means and influence to the advancement of all worthy enterprises of a public or charitable nature.

Henry R. Teller, Girard, Pa., was born in Girard township, March 10, 1837, on the farm where his father settled, about three miles west of the borough. The father was a native of New York, and the mother, of Springfield, Pa. Henry Teller, sr., was born January 1, 1802; his parents were Henry R. and Catherine (Macdonald) Teller, natives of Albany, N. Y., and Baltimore, Md., respectively. Henry Teller, sr., came to Springfield in 1825, and moved to Girard in 1826, settling on the farm now owned by Henry R. Teller.

Henry Teller, sr., and Roselinda (Porter) Teller were the parents of seven children, viz.: Isaac (deceased); Jasper, resides in Michigan; Louisa (deceased), married L. G. Pettis, of Platea, Pa.; Samuel, resides in Michigan; Henry R.; John, died in the service, June 29, 1862, and was a member of Co. H, 83d P. V. I.; Mary, married Ira J. Miller, of Franklin, Pa. Henry Teller, sr.'s second marriage was with Jane Cross, of Springfield, Pa., who, dying, left a daughter, Maggie, wife of George W. Kibler, of Girard. Henry Teller, sr., was again united in marriage, this time to Delia Patterson, of Aurora, N. Y. He was prominent in Erie county politics in 1859-60, representing the county in the State Legislature. Henry R. Teller was reared and educated in Girard, and has always made farming his chief occupation. During the war he served in Co. B, 98th P. V. I. In the fall of 1892 he removed to Girard borough, and built a handsome residence, where he now resides. He personally superintends his farm in the township, and also owns considerable real estate in Michigan. Mr. Teller was married April 14, 1861, to Miss Emma, daughter of Benjamin Van Camp, of Girard. They have one child, Summer. Mr. Teller is a member of the G. A. R., and is a Republican. Henry Teller, sr., was prominent in Erie county politics, and served two terms in the State Legislature. He died May 4, 1889, and his first wife died in 1843, and the second wife died in 1864.

Andrew K. McMullen, M. D., proprietor of the Erie Burial Case Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Banbridge, County Down, Ireland, October 12, 1829. He is a son of George and Ann Jane (Kerr) McMullen. The family came to the United States in 1846, and located in Meadville, Pa., where the senior Mr. McMullen's two brothers, Robert and William, were located and engaged with them in the manufacture of carriages, which trade he had followed in his native country. After remaining there for two years he engaged in the manufacture of boat oars, near Conneautville, Pa. This, together with a lumber business, occupied the remainder of his active life. His death occurred at his son's residence, in Erie, June 19, 1890. He was survived by his widow until June 3, 1893. The family consisted of eight children, five of whom are living, viz.: John (engaged in farming in West Virginia); Andrew K.; Hugh (who occupies the old homestead on the farm near Conneautville); Miss Ann Jane (who resides with her brother, Hugh), and George (who is associated with Dr. A. K. McMullen in raising and handling fruit in Morgan Hill, Cal.); William died in Grand Rapids, Mich., March 2, 1891. Dr. McMullen was educated in the public schools of Meadville, and the Edinboro State Normal school, attending the latter for three years. He acted as superintendent for his father until he was 23 years of age, after which he read medicine with Dr. Orin Hough, of Conneautville. Dr. McMullen was quite extensively engaged in the oil-producing business in Warren, Butler and Venango counties, from 1865 to 1874. Associated with Dr. J. N. Bolard, he conducted a medical practice and a drug store in Pit Hole City, Pa., for two years, during the oil excitement there, and then for two years at Tidouite, Pa. While located at the last named place, Dr. McMullen, in 1867-68, went to Philadelphia and completed his medical education. Upon his return they organized a business at Pleasantville, Pa., of which Dr. McMullen took charge, and of which, having dissolved partnership with Dr. Bolard a year later, became sole proprietor. He remained in Pleasantville five years, giving his attention chiefly to the drug business, which he also followed six years in Grand Rapids, Mich., and five years at Meadville, Pa. In 1882 he returned to Grand Rapids and engaged in the lumber business with his brother, William, to whom he sold out in May, 1887, having come to Erie in 1884, and purchased Barry Smith's interest in the Erie Burial Case Company, of which he became sole proprietor in 1886. This company was founded about 1874 by Robert Evans, Emanuel Goodrich and A. Woods, who operated it for a time and then failed, the business being closed out by Mr. John C. Selden, as assignee. The next owners were Mr. Smith and the Caldwell brothers, they later admitting Barry Smith, and from that it was transferred to the present proprietorship. The plant is situated on the Edinboro road, just outside the city limits, and formerly included the finishing room, warehouses and office, which were burned May 21, 1887. Since becoming the property of the present owner, the plant has been increased from two to nine acres, besides the finishing room, warehouses and office, Nos. 1210-12-14 Peach street, which was purchased from the insolvent Bootz Manufacturing Company. New machinery and modern conveniences have been added, so that the output of the concern is over 4,000 caskets a year. The products include all kinds of burial cases and funeral supplies. As has been stated, since coming to Erie, Dr. McMullen has purchased two insolvent concerns, and placed them on a live and profitable basis. The doctor was married October 29, 1872, to Miss Marion Isabella Eddy, daughter of Mr. James H. Eddy, of Warren, Pa. The issue of this marriage was two children: Eddy Dudley (who died in infancy) and Irvine Stewart. The doctor is a Knight Templar Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine, the latter of which he was district potentate in 1892. Politically he affiliates with the Republican party, but he has never been a seeker of public office. He has been for several years a member of the Erie board of trade, and in 1892 filled the responsible position of president of that body.

Hon. Samuel E. Woodruff was born in North Coventry, Conn., March 31, 1817, and died at his residence in Erie, April 15, 1881. His father, Rev. Ephraim T. Woodruff, was a Presbyterian minister, and a nephew of Governor Treadwell, through whose kind offices he received his collegiate training at Yale and Andover Seminaries. His mother, Sally Alden, was a lineal descendant of Capt. John Alden. He removed with his parents to Trumbull county, Ohio, where he remained until 16, when he entered Hamilton College, New York. He subsequently studied law in Cincinnati, and was admitted to practice in 1841 by an examining committee, of which Hon. S. P. Chase and Judge Walker were members. Locating at Girard, Erie county, Pa., in 1844, he applied himself to the practice of his profession, making sure advances in the direction of the success he afterward attained in so large a degree. In 1847 he was married to Miss Eliza Sterrett. His election as district attorney in 1853 afforded an opportunity in a wider field for the display of his legal talents, and enhanced his reputation at the bar. In 1867, upon nomination of Chief Justice Chase, he received the appointment of register in bankruptcy, which position he held until the repeal of the bankrupt law. In 1870 he was the unanimous nominee of his party in Erie county at the primary election for president judge of the Sixth Judicial District. In 1872 he changed his residence from Girard to Erie, and thereafter gave special attention to the increasing demands of his profession, but by no means ignored social claims and questions affecting the general welfare. He was an active member of the First Presbyterian Church. Useful objects of every nature had his cordial co-operation. In politics he was a thorough Republican, and actively participated in contests between the two great parties. Among his professional brethren he was highly esteemed; positive, courteous, firm, yet tolerant, uncompromising opposition to wrong, were elements of his character that made him a strong, influential and useful citizen. Mr. Woodruff's surviving family consists of his widow and daughter Sarah, who occupy the family residence on State street, this city, his son, Thomas S., located at Girard, in the practice of law, and the eldest daughter, Mary S., the wife of Joseph Johnston, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work.

Giles D. Price (deceased) was born in North East, Erie county, Pa., August 23, 1838. He died in Erie, Pa., February 9, 1895. His parents were Erastus and Jane (Cosper) Price, the former a native of New York, of English descent, and the latter a native of Erie county, and of Scotch-Irish descent. Giles D. Price received his education in the public schools of North East, and was thereafter, until his twenty-second year, engaged as a salesman. In 1849 he went to Pike's Peak and worked in the gold regions four and a half years, when he returned to Erie county and engaged in milling in Venango township, where he conducted a prosperous business for ten years. During that time he, for a while, held the office of justice of the peace for Venango township. In 1875 he was elected prothonotary of Erie county, and was re-elected in 1878, serving in that capacity until January 1, 1882. One year later he was appointed clerk to the board of County Commissioners, a position which he held until January 1, 1890, when he accepted the appointment as deputy collector of customs under John M. Glazier, which he held until February 8, 1894. He was one of the organizers of the Erie Chemical Company, and at the time of his death was the secretary and treasurer of that concern. Mr. Price was a Republican, and few men of his party in Pennsylvania were more widely known or more universally respected. He was regarded as an authority on tax revision, and his efforts in the direction of a more fair and equitable system of taxation assessment won for him the support of good citizens generally. His ambition was to attain the office of auditor general, and to bring about a revision of the existing tax laws that would remedy the many defects which are common cause of complaint throughout the commonwealth. He was a candidate for the nomination to that office before the Republican State conventions of 1891 and 1894, but was defeated in both instances. In 1891 he was tendered the nomination for State treasurer, which he declined. He was appointed a member of the commission constituted by the last Legislature to revise the tax laws of the State, and was a man chairman of that commission. Mr. Price was a man of ability and sterling integrity; fair and upright in all his dealings, and fearless and independent in his utterances. He commanded the respect of men in all parties and classes, and his memory will be cherished long after the present generation has passed away. He was married, in October, 1866, to Augusta, daughter of Henry O. Chase, of North East. His wife died in 1892, leaving five children—Harriet Jane, Oliver Cosper, Mabel Gertrude, Eleanor Carr and J. Sanford. The family reside at 430 West Eighth street, and are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Hon. Thomas Wilson was born near Sunbury, Northumberland county, Pa., in 1772. He was a nephew of David Mead, founder of Meadville, and was married in 1812, at Waterford, to Mary Nagler, coming to Erie in 1805. In company with Oliver Ormsby, of Pittsburg, he was engaged in large contracts for supplying all the western United States forts along the western frontier, from Niagara to New Orleans. The year of his arrival at Erie he built two vessels—the Mary, upon Lake Erie, and the Fair American, upon Lake Ontario. They were the best vessels upon those lakes. He afterwards built the Lark at Erie. He had fine business talent, was enterprising and popular, and filled a number of offices, among them that of county treasurer, justice of the peace, member of the Legislature, and was elected to the Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Congresses. He was also prothonotary and clerk of courts. Mr. Wilson died in Erie October 4, 1824, aged 52 years. He had four children: Irene L. (a successful author, and among her works were "Broken Cisterns," "Arthur Singleton" and "Ruth Elmer"); Mary; James and Thorn, all of whom are deceased. His daughter, Jane, died in Erie about 1860, while Mrs. Wilson and Miss Mary died in 1864.

Nelson Seymour, M. D., was born April 17, 1823, at Sandisfield, Berkshire county, Mass. His parents were Allen and Mary (Belden) Seymour, natives of New England, and of English descent. The genealogy of the Seymours is traceable directly to Sir Richard Seymour, one of the younger sons of the Duke of Somerset. Nelson Seymour took his academical course at Winsted Academy, Litchfield, Conn. He then went South to take a position as one of the teachers in the Academy at Lumpkin, Stewart county, Ga. The southern climate disagreeing with him, he soon returned to Massachusetts, and in 1841 began the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. S. B. Parsons, of Sandisfield. Dr. Seymour removed to Erie, Erie county, Pa., in 1842, and continued to be engaged in the practice of his profession in that city until his removal to North East in 1894. Although frequently called to consultation by his brother practitioners, he has retired, so far as possible, from active practice. Dr. Seymour was the first physician of his school in Erie county, and had for many years the leading homeopathic practice. He was married July 6, 1848, to Caroline H., daughter of the late John Johnson, of Bristol, Pa. They had but one child, Florence, who died in 1864, at the age of fifteen. Dr. and Mrs. Seymour reside at 15 Park street, North East.

John F. Flint, M. D., Erie, Pa., was born in Lawrenceville, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., January 11, 1843. He is a son of Warren and Christiana (Barnes) Flint, natives of Vermont. They reared a family of four children: Julia (now Mrs. Charles Olds), George, Harriet (now Mrs. Charles C. Barnes, of Barry, Vt.), and Dr. J. F. The doctor received his early education at the Lawrenceville Academy; later he attended the Erie Academy, where he was graduated in 1869. He then took a full course in the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, and was graduated from the homeopathic medical department in 1881. He has since opened an office in Erie, Pa., which has been the scene of his professional labors ever since. He is a member of the Pennsylvania State Homeopathic Society and of the Erie County Homeopathic Medical Society and the I. O. O. F. In his political views he is a Republican. Dr. Flint was married October 12, 1865, to Louisa, daughter of Willard and Amanda (Blowers) Kingsbury, natives of New York. One child was born to this union, Nettie J., now Mrs. Randolph Shirk of Erie, Pa. Dr. Flint is engaged in general practice in Erie, and is recognized as a skilled physician, a successful surgeon and a careful counselor.

Bester Coleman Town was born in Granville, Washington county, N. Y., June 16, 1820. He is a son of the late Bester and Betsy (Martin) Town, the former a native of New York, and of English descent, the latter a native of Vermont, and of French extraction. They located in North East township in 1824, residing upon a farm in the vicinity of the borough of North East for a few years, and throughout the remainder of their lives in the borough, where the elder Town carried on a general store, and conducted a tavern for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Bester Town had, in addition to the son mentioned above, five children, who arrived at maturity, two of whom are deceased, Morris C. Town, who removed to Elgin, Ill., where he was engaged in business, and died July 31, 1892, and Benjamin Franklin Town, late of North East; the surviving children are: Miss Mary T. Town, who resides at the old homestead in North East; John J. Town, of Des Moines, Iowa, and Joseph I. Town, of Erie, Pa. Bester Town died December 2, 1870; his wife January 22, 1872. Bester Coleman Town attended the public schools of North East, and completed his education in 1838 at the Western Reserve College, then located in Hudson, Ohio. He entered his father's store, subsequently became a partner in the business, and finally its sole owner. He continued to be engaged in merchandising until 1867, and during this period also conducted a flouring-mill, and had large farming interests in North East township. In 1868, he removed to Eaton, Talbot county, Md., where he remained five years, then returning to North East, where he has ever since resided. Shortly after his return, he established a dry-goods, grocery and drug house, which he conducted until his place of business was burned out by the conflagration which, in 1884, destroyed the business portion of North East, when he abandoned mercantile pursuits. Mr. Town has been burgess and school director of North East, and held the office of justice of the peace from 1890 to 1895. He was married in August, 1841, to Juliette, daughter of the late William D. Burdick, an old resident of North East, a native of Shenango county, Ohio, who removed from North East to Ashtabula county, Ohio, where he died. Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Town have four surviving children, Warren Coleman Town, now a resident of Cook county, Illinois; George E. Town, a farmer of North East; Dwight Town, of New York, and Dennison Town, student. The family reside at 5 Gibson street, and attend the Presbyterian Church.

Louis Rosenzweig, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., was born April 25, 1844, in Macon, Ga. He is a son of the late Isaac and Dena (Baker) Rosenzweig, natives of Germany, who were married in Philadelphia, subsequently locating in Georgia, where Mr. Isaac Rosenzweig engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1846 the family removed to Erie, Pa., where Mr. Rosenzweig was engaged in business until his death, October 8, 1884. His wife survives and resides in Erie. Louis Rosenzweig received his education in the schools of Erie, and was for some years thereafter employed in his father's store. He read law under the preceptorship of Edward Camphausen, Esq., was admitted to the bar, and engaged in the practice alone until he formed his present partnership with George A. Allen, the firm being known as Allen & Rosenzweig, and having as large a clientele as any law firm in Northwestern Pennsylvania. He was married October 19, 1864, to Minnie, daughter of the late Jacob Newberger, a merchant of Cumberland, Ind. Four children have blessed this union: Grant L., a graduate of Yale, and now practicing law in Kansas City, Mo.; Bert R., bookkeeper for a wholesale liquor house, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Etta, wife of Isadore Levi, a representative of a Boston shoe house, with headquarters at Buffalo, N. Y., and Miss Harriett Rosenzweig. The family reside at 117 West Nineteenth street, and are members of the Jewish Temple. Mr. Rosenzweig is a stalwart Democrat and has always been actively identified with the work of his party in this county, but has never sought nor held office other than that of school director for two terms of the city of Erie. He is a member of the Masonic order, of the I. O. O. F., K. of P., K. of H. and A. O. U. W.

James E. Silliman, M. D., physician and surgeon, Erie, Pa., was born in North East, Erie county, Pa., June 10, 1844, son of John and Minerva (Chapman) Silliman, natives of Pennsylvania. John Silliman's father was a farmer, born in Ireland, who emigrated to America, settling in Erie county in 1800. John was also a farmer; he was parent of seven children, four of whom are living. Mrs. Dr. Griffin, of North East, is his daughter. Dr. J. E. Silliman, acquired his education in Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa., from which he was graduated in 1871, with the degree of A. B.; three years later he obtained the degree of A. M. He afterward graduated from Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia in 1874 in the regular course, and immediately commenced practice in Erie. He studied medicine under the late Dr. J. L. Stewart, of Erie. In 1878 Dr. Silliman was married to Hattie L., daughter of the late Hugh P. Mehaffey, a native of Erie county, of German and Scotch-Irish descent. Dr. Silliman enlisted in 1865 in the 102d P. V. I., Co. E., serving till the close of the war. He is brigade surgeon of the 2d brig., N. G. P. In 1875 he was elected coroner and served till 1881; was appointed secretary of the Board of Examining Surgeons of Pensions in 1877. He is a member of the Erie County Medical Society, of the State Medical Society and American Medical Association. Dr. Silliman and his wife are members of the First Methodist Church, of which he was steward and a Sabbath school teacher for some years. In politics he is a Republican. Dr.

Silliman has built up a very large practice and is one of the most active men in his profession. He is prominent in the Masonic order, and has served in high official capacities in various branches of that organization.

Louis Streuber, treasurer of the Erie Fish Association and proprietor of the Erie Oil Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Alsace, France, May 1, 1853, and is a son of John and Philippine (Erhart) Streuber, who came to the United States in 1861 and located in Erie. The family consisted of eight children: Frederica (Mrs. J. F. Walther), Charles (deceased), Frederick, Emil, George (deceased), Julia, Edward and Louis. The last named received his education in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 14 years obtained a position in a drug store, which business he followed until 1878, when he engaged in the fish business with great success. In 1893 the present company was formed. Mr. Streuber was married November 23, 1881, to Miss Anna, daughter of Samuel C. and Mary (Hodgen) Harpel, of Lancaster, Pa. They have four children, Florence, Edith, Nielsen and Louis, jr. In politics Mr. Streuber is an enthusiastic Republican, and in 1882 was the choice of his party for mayor of the city, but was defeated with the rest of his ticket. He is a member of the State Fish Commission by the appointment of Governor Beaver. Mr. Streuber is a member of the Knights of Pithias and the Royal Arcanum.

Maj. William W. Tyson, commander at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home of Pennsylvania, Erie, Pa., was born in Baltimore, Md., August 1, 1834, and is a son of William and Anna (Howard) Tyson, the former a son of William, who was also a native of Maryland, whose father came to America and settled in Baltimore about 1756. He was a Scotch-Irishman, and his name was also William. William Tyson, the major's grandfather, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He reared a family of twelve sons, eleven of whom served in the war of 1812. William, the major's father, being only about 12 years old at the time, did not enter the service. Anna Howard, Mr. Tyson's mother, is a descendant of an American family of English lineage. Her father served in the Revolutionary war, and was taken prisoner by the British at the bombardment of Fort Henry. Her mother lived to be 105 years old. William Tyson, the major's father, was a Methodist minister. He settled in Allegheny in 1838, where he died in 1884. His wife died in 1874. They were the parents of six children: Wesley (deceased), Sarah (deceased), Thomas H., of Mt. Pleasant, Ia.; Mary, Mrs. Jacob Consins, of Mercer county, Pennsylvania; William W., and Joseph, of Pittsburg. William W. was reared in Allegheny City and educated in the public schools. When a young man he followed the occupation of stationary engineer, and later engaged in the mercantile business in Allegheny, at which he was engaged at the breaking out of the war. He enlisted in Co. A, 45th P. V. I., as first sergeant, September 6, 1861. This regiment was composed of volunteers from Centre, Huntingdon, Lancaster and Tioga counties, and his company was commanded by Capt. Curtin. Mr. Tyson was promoted to second lieutenant, December 2, 1861; first lieutenant, August 17, 1862; and captain, September 25, 1862. He was assigned to Howard's Brig., Casey's Div., Army of the Potomac, October 28, 1861. After being stationed in Maryland a short time he was transferred to Gen. Thomas Sherman's command in South Carolina, December 6, 1861, and participated in the engagements at James Island and Secessionville. He was then ordered to Newport News, Va., and was assigned to 1st Brig, 1st Div., 9th Corps. Here he had charge of the destruction of bridges on the Potomac Creek and of the accumulated stores. He participated in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam. On the day of the latter battle he was detailed for the purpose of forwarding stores from Frederick City to the Army of the Potomac. He was at the battle of Fredericksburg, and had charge of the transportation of military stores from Newport News to Covington, Ky. He was detailed as provost marshal of the 1st Brig., 1st Div., Army of the Potomac, in May, 1863, and participated in the battles of Vicksburg, Big Black River, Blain's Cross Roads and Jackson, Miss. In August, 1863, he was detailed assistant inspector general of the 1st Div., 9th Corps, on the staff of Gen. Ferrero. Was in the engagements of Blue Springs, Tenn., Leno's Station, Loudonville, Campbell's Station and Knoxville, Tenn. He was wounded in the left foot by a shell at Loudonville. At Leno's Station he was detailed as assistant engineer in building a bridge at Leno's Station across the Holston river, and the erection of Fort Sanders and other fortifications at Knoxville. He was in the engagements of Fort Sanders, Clint's Church and Blain's Cross Roads. In April, 1864, he was appointed inspecting officer of 4th Div., 9th Corps. He was at the battle of the Wilderness, siege of Petersburg, Weldon Railroad and Poplar Springs Church. He was mustered out of service October 20, 1864, at Poplar Springs Church. At the close of the war Mr. Tyson returned to Allegheny City, and in 1866 entered the U. S. internal revenue service. He served as street commissioner of Allegheny City two years, and was inspector of weights and measures in Allegheny county three years. Maj. Tyson was engaged in the foundry business in Allegheny until February 1, 1886, when he was appointed commander of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home of Pennsylvania, at Erie, a position which he has ably and honorably filled since coming to Erie. Maj. Tyson has untiringly devoted his energies to the improvement of the Home, and the results of his efforts are very noticeable to one who would devote any time to investigate the conduct of that institution. There are few, if any, soldiers' homes in the Union that are as well managed as the one at Erie. Mr. Tyson was married June 26, 1855, to Miss Martha, daughter of George W. and Maria (Lytle) Curtis of Centre county, Pennsylvania. George W. Curtis was a California pioneer. Mr. and Mrs. Tyson have had five children, four of whom are living: Mary, Mrs. J. H. Myer, Pittsburg, Pa.; Sarah, at home; Ella, Mrs. J. H. Smith, Pittsburg; and Estella, at home. Maj. Tyson was captain of Co. F, 19th Reg., N. G. P., and later, major of the same regiment, and was a member of Governor Beaver's staff. He has been an active member of the G. A. R. since its organization, and has served in the capacities of vice-commander and department commander. He was the originator of the Union Veteran Legion, and his name appears first on its books. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and the family are members of the Presbyterian Church. He has been for fifteen years a member of the soldiers' orphan commission of the G. A. R. of Pennsylvania.

Samuel F. Chapin, M. D., resident surgeon of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, Erie, Pa., was born in Butternuts, Ostego county, N. Y., November 13, 1834. He is a son of Joseph and Fannie (Farnham) Chapin, the former a native of Springfield, Mass., and the latter of Connecticut. They are both of very old New England families. The doctor is the youngest of ten children. The family settled in Erie county in his early youth, where he was reared, and attended the public schools. In 1856 he entered Yale College, and in 1860 was graduated in the scientific and medical course. He then taught a private school one year, and at the beginning of the war was appointed assistant surgeon in the First Pennsylvania Reserves, and served until September 12, 1862, when he was promoted to major surgeon, assigned to the 138th Reg., P. V. I., and served until the close of the war, having risen through the various grades to surgeon-in-chief of division. He returned to Wattsburg, Erie county, Pa., and engaged in the general practice of his profession. He was appointed surgeon of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, at Erie, Pa., in October, 1889, which position he still holds. He is a member of the military order of the Loyal Legion, Commandery of Pennsylvania; the G. A. R., of which order he served as medical director one term; I. O. O. F., U. V. L. and the Erie County Medical Society, having served one term as president of that body. He served as a member of the board of pension examiners at Erie during the Harrison administration. He is a prominent Republican, and as such, in 1875, was elected to the State Legislature, where he served with so much credit to himself and such satisfaction to his constituents that he was elected to a second term. He founded the Sentinel, at Wattsburg, in 1882, a Republican home weekly that is still published. He was united in marriage September 3, 1869, to Miss Emily, daughter of Rev. B. S. Hill. They have four children: Albert O., Lynn F. (deceased), Eva and Leah. He is a highly respected citizen of Erie county, is a thorough student and skilled physician and surgeon. His experience as the medical companion of the boys in blue on the tented field and in the bivouac of battle, makes the appointment to his present position a very fitting one.

John C. Van Scoter, loan agent, North Park, Erie, Pa., was born in Allegheny county, New York, June 29, 1834, and is a son of Elias and Mary (Halstead) Van Scoter, natives of Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut, respectively. He received his early education in his native county. Opening a dry goods store in Hornellsville, N. Y., he operated it until 1858. In 1860 he came to Erie, Pa., engaging in mercantile pursuits, and later becoming interested in the oil trade, which he continued for four years, when he became interested in lake trade. In 1892 he closed out his lake interests to enter his present business exclusively, having previously devoted a portion of his time to it since 1881. Mr. Van Scoter was united in marriage in 1860 to Miss Helen, daughter of Horace and Hannah (Hall) Morrison, natives of Saratoga county, New York, a Christian lady of rare talent and amiability. She departed this life March 17, 1895. Mrs. Van Scoter was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. In politics, Mr. Van Scoter is a Democrat, and is one of Erie's most respected and influential citizens.

Judson Walker

Jacob Frederick Walther, Erie, Pa., was born in Buchsweiler, Alsace, November 22, 1832. He is the eldest son of the late Jacob and Julia (Keitel) Walther, who came to the United States on the same vessel with Michael Mehl and family in the summer of 1847, both families locating in Erie. The elder Walther was a shoemaker, and pursued that vocation until 1870, when he retired from business. His wife died June 17, 1885; he died April 14, 1893. Jacob F. Walther was educated in the common and high schools of Buchsweiler and at the Erie Academy, and was thereafter employed for ten years as clerk in several business houses of Erie, then going with the firm of Cadwell & Bennett, dry goods merchants, upon their removal to Milwaukee, and remaining with that firm until 1857, when he returned to Erie. In the latter year he founded, in conjunction with Jacob Gabel, a dry goods establishment in the American Hotel building, under the firm name of Walther & Gabel. The partnership was dissolved in the fall of 1860. The following spring Mr. Walther resumed the same business at the same location, where he remained until 1867, when he removed, upon its completion, to his block of buildings (Walther block), at the southwest corner of Eighth and State streets. He retired from the dry goods business in 1885, and has since been engaged as a notary, conveyancer and general collector, with offices at 804 State street. Mr. Walther served as representative from the Second ward of the Common Council of Erie for two terms; in the Select Council for one term, and in the School Board for four terms. He was collector of internal revenue for the Nineteenth district of Pennsylvania, under President Arthur, from March, 1882, until the appointment of his successor, under President Cleveland's first administration, October, 1885. He was married, September 10, 1863, to Frederika, daughter of the late John Streuber, tanner, an old citizen of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Walther have four children: Leonie (wife of George H. Craft, traveling salesman for a Rochester house; they have one child); Walter H.; Emil J. J. (bookkeeper at Johnston's planing-mill, Erie); Ida (wife of William C. Crosby, an attorney at Erie), and Miss Cora. The family reside at 116 East Tenth street, and are members of St. Paul's German Evangelical Church.

The Pollock Family.—Prominent among the early settlers of Erie county were the Pollocks. They were of Scotch-Irish descent. Their progenitor, Charles Pollock, emigrated from Coleraine, County Derry, Ireland, about 1750, and settled in Northumberland county. After the death of Charles, which occurred in Northumberland county in 1795, five of his sons, with their mother, removed to Erie county about 1800. Two of the sons, Thomas and William, after remaining a short time in Erie county, took up land in Clarion county, where they settled, and where many of their descendants are now living, having always been useful and influential citizens. The other three brothers settled permanently in Erie county, purchasing farms in the vicinity of Waterford. Adam, who married Elizabeth Gilliland, owned and occupied a farm about two miles west of Waterford. He died in 1816, leaving an only child, Charles Pollock, who married Elizabeth Wilson Wallace, daughter of Dr. John C. Wallace, and was for many years a citizen of Erie. Charles died in Erie in 1850, his widow and six children surviving. Of the children, Robert and Elizabeth still reside in Erie. Mrs. Pollock and one daughter, Jane, are now dead. Otis Wheeler is a captain in the 23d Infantry, U. S. Army; James is cashier of the Exchange National Bank of Little Rock, Ark., and Charles resides in Blair, Neb. James Pollock, next younger brother to Adam, settled on a farm four miles south of Waterford, on the right bank of French creek, at what is known as Pollock's bridge. He married, in 1801, Mary Steele, his first cousin, and raised a large family. He was a prosperous farmer and received a liberal education for those days. He possessed a high order of intelligence and his judgment was respected. He was known as Captain Pollock, from his being in the service of the United States in 1795, when George Washington was President, as master of transportation of supplies from the Ohio river, near where Cincinnati now stands, to General Wayne and his troops at Greenville, where the permanent treaty of peace was made with the Indians by Wayne, which resulted in the entire cessation of hostilities. When the turnpike was located from Waterford to Meadville he constructed a mile and a quarter of that road. For years after this his house was a stopping place for stage travelers. In 1825 William Morgan, who published the book on Masonry, with his wife, stopped with Mr. Pollock for two weeks, on their way from Virginia to Western New York, and who so mysteriously disappeared in 1826. In 1830 he served as county commissioner. In 1836 he was elected, in company with the late Hon. Thomas H. Sill, as a member of the convention to amend the constitution of the State of Pennsylvania, which met at Harrisburg in May, 1837, and which afterwards adjourned to Philadelphia. That convention contained the best talent and the ablest statesmen that Pennsylvania ever had assembled in one body; such men as John Sergeant, Chauncy, Meredith, Scott, Judge Hopkinson, Biddle, Thaddeus Stevens, James M. Porter, Walter Howard, Dickey and others. Captain Pollock had the universal respect of his associates in that body. Though not a public speaker, his judgment was held in high estimation. He was ever social, friendly and agreeable. His society was instructive and profitable, and particularly so in his later years, as his memory was so accurate with regard to early events. Of his children, two sons are still living, Thomas, in Oregon, and J. Steele, occupying the old homestead at Pollock's bridge. The latter married Mary J. Hamilton December 23, 1852, and had ten children, six of whom are still living. He is a good farmer and a valuable citizen, having always taken an active interest in the politics and public matters involving the welfare of the township and county. Robert Pollock, the younger of the three brothers above mentioned, married Margaret Anderson December 12, 1810. Robert died February 22, 1844. He settled on a farm on the left bank of French creek, directly opposite to the one occupied by his brother, James. After his death his son, Charles J. Pollock, who married Mary Ann Moorehead, of Fairview, inherited the farm and conducted it until his death, which occurred in 1892. James, the only son of Charles J., and grandson of Robert, is the present occupant.

Heman James, born June 20, 1817, in North East, was the son of James James, born August 7, 1789, in Grand Isle, Vt. His forefathers, the De Janes, removed in the eleventh century from France to England, where they received a magnificent coat-of-arms from the crown for meritorious service in the war. It is an old and trite saying, that "blood will tell." So in this family, the valorous blood that in the olden days won the notice and favor of a king, still serves to impress the Janes' name indelibly in the history of our country. James Janes, whose wife was Lucinda Sage, was living, when the war of 1812 broke out, in Canada, where he owned a small farm. He refused to take up arms against this country, and, leaving his property to be confiscated by the English authorities, made his way, after many hardships, to this side, and joined the American forces, leaving his family temporarily, in the unfriendly atmosphere of the enemy's country. The well-known Bishop Janes was also a member of this family. The mother of Samuel J. Tilden, the great New York lawyer and Democratic candidate for President in 1876, was a Janes, and Dr. Janes, of Philadelphia, was of the same family. Mr. Heman Janes has inherited this remarkable strength of character, and his life's history has been a record of earnest and uncompromising struggle on the side of right. Starting on his career without a dollar, he worked at the most menial labor. Believing that right must win, he persevered. His rare energy eventually placed him in easy circumstances. From chopping wood, he entered the dry goods business, but never stood behind a counter until he stood behind his own, in the village of Watsburg; but the field was too limited for the scope of his commercial genius, and while still conducting his store with the greatest success, he branched out into the lumber trade on a large scale, and had soon established a large and exceedingly prosperous business, that soon necessitated the assistance of a partner, in the person of William Sanborn, and thus was founded the well-known and successful firm of Janes & Sanborn. In March, 1860, Mr. Janes' attention was first attracted to the possibilities of the then undeveloped oil trade, and he purchased 200 acres of land on what was known as the "gumbed," in the township of Inniskillen, Ontario, at nine dollars an acre, from the disgusted owner, who was anxious to sell at that price, on account of the "stinking oil." Mr. Janes subsequently sold a large portion of this land for $400 an acre. Before disposing of his Canadian tract he, in March, 1861, leased a body of land at Burning Springs Run, West county, Va., for $5,000. Later he sold a half interest in this lease for $50,000; but the firing on Fort Sumter, and subsequent excitement, compelled him, before the transfers had been fully made, to close out his Virginia lease at a considerably lower figure, and he was barely able to get out of the State in time to avoid coming in contact with hot-headed Southerners, who were feeling very bitter toward Northern men. Mr. Janes was the last "Yankee" to leave, and hastily closed interests representing $100,000 for $7,000, and another Northern man, who was but a few hours later than Mr. Janes, lost his life by even so short a delay. At this time the Tarr farm, which was a little later to cut so tremendous a figure in the oil development, was just coming into prominence, and Mr. Janes, nothing daunted by his disastrous Virginia experience, was one of the first men to grasp the possibilities of that tract of land, and paralyzed not only the owner, "Jim" Tarr, but all the men interested in oil development, by offering him $90,000 for his farm, that a year or two previously was regarded as dear at five dollars an acre. In the development that rapidly took place, Mr. Janes was able to clean up a handsome fortune on royalties, and, in addition, sold back one-half of the farm to Tarr for $40,000, and two-thirds of the remaining half to Clark & Sumner, of New York, for $20,000, leaving him the balance of the farm, which was exceedingly valuable, clear. A little later, after watching carefully the enormous labor and expense required to get the oil to convenient shipping points by teaming, he became the first advocate of piping oil, his crude idea eventually developing into the great pipeline system of to-day. In this connection, Mr. Janes organized a company to pipe oil, and applied to the State Legislature for a charter, but the application was defeated in the House by the then powerful teaming interests, who saw disaster in the success of piping oil. In later years Mr. Janes had the satisfaction of seeing his idea perfected, and also in receiving from Representative Beebe, of Pleasantville, Pa., who led the opposition to his first pipe-line scheme, sincere expressions of regret for the part he had taken in defeating a plan that was to be of such great benefit to the locality he represented. One of the famous law suits of that day was brought by Heman Janes against one of the men who was paying him a royalty, the amount involved being $125,000. Edwin M. Stanton, President Lincoln's great secretary of war, was Mr. Janes' attorney, and was paid a fee of $5,000 for his services in this case. As population grew, Mr. Janes built upon the farm one of the finest hotels ever put up in the oil country up to that date. The rapid oil development attracted Mr. Janes' attention to the necessity for better refining facilities, and he, in connection with Clark & Sumner, to whom he had sold an interest in the Tarr farm, built the first large refinery in the State, calling it the "Standard." Later they sold to Rockefeller, and the latter, when he became the head of the large corporation which was to dominate the oil trade, gave the same title to the big association known ever since as the Standard Oil Company. Mr. Janes' various oil investments were so extensive that it would take too much space to detail them in this brief sketch; but it is sufficient to say that up to that time no one man had made so many bold and masterly moves in the various details of the development of the oil trade, and in suggesting improvements in methods of handling the product. He was especially notable in great financial exploits, involving hundreds of thousands of dollars, and his keen insight as to the value of an investment was never at fault. Many Erie citizens will recall the narrow margin by which Erie missed being the great oil refining center of the United States, when the Standard Oil Company was seeking to locate large refineries on the lake coast. Heman Janes was one of the hard workers who sought to bring this large plant to Erie and had his efforts been properly seconded and encouraged, Erie would have been the big oil refining center, instead of Cleveland. Mr. Janes' activity was not confined solely to trade, and he was one of the founders and earnest workers in the Simpson Methodist Episcopal Church; and was also one of the incorporators of the Chautauqua Sunday School Assembly, acting as one of the trustees for seven years. As chairman of the committee, he was appointed by the Methodist Conference to transfer the property from the camp meeting association to the Sunday School Assembly, of which he was one of the incorporators. He was one of its staunchest friends through its darkest days, and backed it heavily financially. In its present prosperity and success he feels amply repaid for all his trouble. In principle, strictly and aggressively temperate, Mr. James has never used intoxicating liquors nor tobacco in any form, and thereby has set a worthy example to the rising generation. He has had a prosperous career in the lumber business, which he finally relinquished to deal with even greater success in oil and oil lands and real estate, and he now possesses wealth with which to gratify every wish. Mr. James has from boyhood been identified with the Methodist Church, and has ever been one of its staunchest supporters. In his eleventh year his remarkable conversion led to the first revival that ever took place in Erie county, and although his efforts were derided, the "Trundle Bed Prayer Meetings," as enemies styled these gatherings, were the means of converting many people, young and old, to the Lord. In the cause of temperance Mr. James has been especially active, and has had to endure annoyance from those who opposed his views. Aggressive in action, he recognized that the laws relating to the handling of liquor were not observed, and in an earnest, conscientious effort to enforce respect for these laws, he secured indictments from the grand jury against liquor dealers in 1870. This raised such a storm of persecution, that for a time, to protect himself from threatened danger, the mayor brought him a shot gun and seventy rounds of cartridges, and bade him defend himself, if necessary, at any cost. Mr. James was married, October 9, 1838, to Maria M. Rouse, youngest daughter of Judge Rouse, of Erie county. Five children were the result of this union: Margaret Melvina, died at the age of 17; Melancton Wallace, married to Ella M. Smith, now living in Kansas; Caroline R. Vinnie, died at the age of 2 years; Heman D., married to Julia A. Williams, of Chicago, now living in Cleveland, Ohio, and William D., married to Ella Dickinson, of Erie, living in Saginaw, Mich. Heman James has always been too radical in his ideas to make a successful politician, hence has only held one political office in his life, that of school director; in this contest he ran against big odds, that he might further the interests of a school building that needed attention. His first vote was for Fremont, and he adhered to the Republican party until the Prohibition party was started, since which time he has staunchly supported it. A short sketch of this remarkable man was published in 1872 by the Atlantic Publishing Company, under the title of "Representative Men," compiled by Augustus C. Rogers, which particularly emphasizes the sterling worth of this man, and justifies this appreciative sketch. Mr. James lives in an attractive home on Twenty-first street, which is in odd contrast to the little log cabin in which he started life. Upright, temperate, uncompromising in questions of principle, Heman James has aimed to impress the lesson that right firmly adhered to will win against all odds.

The Clark Family.—For the purpose of this sketch, it is not necessary to go farther back than to David Clark, son of one of the early settlers of Windsor, Conn., who left that place and was married in Sheffield, Mass., in 1723. His son, David, was born in Sheffield, and died there December 12, 1824, at the age of 80. The last named was the father of Henry Clark, who was born May 3, 1773, at Sheffield, and came to Erie county when only 16 years of age, in 1795. He settled in Harbor Creek township, took up a large tract of land, cleared and cultivated it, and there lived the quiet and uneventful life of a farmer until his death, January 9, 1859. He reared a family of five sons and three daughters: William, David, Prudence, Joel, Sallie, Henry, Jane and Chauncey. Only two are now living, Joel and Chauncey, residents of Erie. William, his eldest son, born in 1801, was the first white male child born in Harbor Creek township. Henry Alden Clark, grandson of Henry Clark, son of Chauncey G. and Emeline Elizabeth Clark, born in Harbor Creek, Erie county, Pa., January 7, 1850. He attended the Erie Academy in the fall of 1864; State Normal School in Edinboro, Pa., 1865-66; Willoughby Collegiate Institute, in Willoughby, Ohio, from the fall of 1866 to the spring of 1868; taught school the following winter, and from the spring of 1869 to the fall of 1870, attended Erie Central high school, in Erie, Pa., graduated from that school and entered Harvard College in the fall of 1870, and received the degree of A. B. with the class of 1874. During the following year he was engaged in the publication of the "Harvard Book;" entered the Harvard Law School in the fall of 1875, and graduated in 1877; entered the office of Jonathan M. Wood, Esq., Fall River, Mass., in the fall of 1877, and formed a co-partnership with him in February, 1878, under the firm name of Wood & Clark; was formally admitted to practice law in March, 1878; meantime engaged in the publication of the "College Book;" dissolved partnership after a continuance of a little over a year, and started alone. In the fall of 1880 he entered into partnership with Hugo A. Dubuque, under the firm name of Clark & Dubuque, which continued until August, 1882; thence removed to the city of Erie, Pa., being temporarily connected with the Edison Electric Light Company, and Edison Company, for isolated lighting, both of New York, having general charge of the business in the District of Columbia, Maryland, and Western Pennsylvania, and subsequently New York. He resumed the practice of law in Erie, Pa., and in the fall of 1890 bought the Erie Gazette, a paper on which Horace Greely set type in his younger days. Subsequently the Gazette consolidated with the Erie Dispatch Company, limited, and on May 4, 1892, he dropped journalism entirely. In February, 1890, he was chosen chairman of the Republican city committee, and in June, 1890, of the county committee; has been several times delegate to State conventions, and has taken a somewhat active part in politics. He was elected trustee of the Erie Academy November 17, 1893. July 18, 1878, he married Sophy G. McCreary, daughter of General D. B. McCreary, lawyer, Erie, Pa. He has two children, Sophy Annette, born July 13, 1880, and Henry McCreary, born February 10, 1889.

Frederick Wittich, one of the early pioneer settlers of Erie, was born October 17, 1805, in Cassel, Prussia, Germany. He was the son of Adam Eberhard Ernst Wittich and Elizabeth (Staifer) Wittich, of St. Goar, Rhine and Mosel Department, under the sovereignty of Napoleon Bonaparte. In 1810 his father removed to America and settled in York, Pa. His mother died when he was very young, and at the age of 9 he was brought to America and lived with his sister, Mrs. Johnnet Hummerick, of Carlisle, Cumberland county, Pa. About 1826, at the age of 21, he came to Erie, and did business on Eighth, between State and French streets. In 1834 he bought a lot on the southwest corner of State and Tenth streets, near the edge of town. Near this corner was a deep ravine intersecting State street, and in inclement weather it had to be crossed on logs and fallen trees. On this piece of ground, in 1834, he built the first carriage factory in the town of Erie. It was large and complete, and his strict business integrity soon won him a successful trade, which was maintained until about 1867, when he retired and converted the factory into business stands. About 1837 he erected what was then considered a very fine two-story brick residence block, renting it for many years, and being very desirable residence property, always had the best class of tenants. Latterly it was used for business purposes until 1891, when it gave place to the handsome and substantial Wittich Block of to-day. In making the excavation for the foundation of the new structure the logs laid across the ravine for a passage-way above referred to, were found to be in a good state of preservation after the lapse of more than sixty years. June 21, 1832, Frederick Wittich was married by the late Rev. Geo. A. Lyon to Elizabeth Forbes, a native of Dundee, Scotland, born December 31, 1805. She died September 5, 1834, and left two children, Frederick, who died soon after his mother, and James Forbes. Mr. Wittich took for his second wife Miss Mary Berst, Rev. Geo. A. Lyon performing the marriage ceremony, September 27, 1835. Coming as a bride to the modest home just then completed on Tenth street, on part of the lot mentioned above, it has been her cherished home all these years, which she still enjoys, at the ripe old age of 86. The original house is the rear part of the old homestead, the brick addition having been added in 1851. The many years have told on her but lightly, and she is still in the possession of all her mental faculties, taking a lively interest in the affairs of to-day. Erie's Centennial recalled to her mind very vividly the great political rally of 1840, when Erie was filled to overflowing with people from all parts of the State. So great was the crowd that the homes of the citizens were thrown open to the visitors. The parade was grand, and the town rung with the cheers of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too," and the old log cabin, built for the occasion, was the center of attraction. Good old times never forgotten. Mrs. Wittich is the oldest daughter of Conrad and Catherine (Guntner) Berst, the former born in Paulitz, Rhine, Germany, in 1779, and the latter born in Manheim, Lancaster county, Pa. Mr. Berst came to America in 1798, at the age of 19. He was married in 1807, in Manheim, Lancaster county, where his daughter, Mrs. Wittich, was born, November 20, 1809. Her earliest recollection was when her father came hurriedly in the house, amid the sound of fife and drum, caught her up, a little tot, in his arms that she might see the return of the soldiers after the war of 1812, her grandfather Guntner being one of the returned soldiers. Another early remembrance was shaking hands with General Lafayette in 1825, when he passed through Lancaster on his visit, with his son, to America. She was then 16 years old. Mr. Berst left his farm and mill in Lancaster county, and with two-horse teams brought his family and household effects to Erie in 1830. He rented a farm, which is now in the city limits. Five years later he removed to the West, locating on a farm in Indiana. His daughter, Mary, with her husband, Frederick Wittich, remained in Erie. Mr. Wittich united with the First Presbyterian Church under the ministry of Rev. Mr. Lyon, in 1834, and was his life-time friend. His wife added her name to the church roll in 1842. Both remained devoted and devoted members of the church, he to the time of his death, and Mrs. Wittich still retains an active interest in church matters. Their family consisted of eight children: Catherine; William and Frederick, twins; Eliza, Jennett, Mary Elizabeth, Susan Lyne and Johnnet. Frederick Wittich died September 4, 1876, at the age of 71. He was a devoted citizen, gentle and unassuming, and, with all, brave and aggressive in all good works. With a band of co-workers, he was active in the temperance cause. Among his associates in this cause were John Law, James Lytle and Jehiel Towner, all of whom are gone to their reward. Lieutenant William Wittich, with his twin brother, Lieutenant Frederick J. Wittich, at the first call for troops, joined Erie's three months' regiment commanded by Col. McLane. The regiment was mustered in April 28, 1861, and after the expiration of their time the brothers re-enlisted in Co. I, 83d P. V. I., July 29, 1861. After passing safely through the battles of Yorktown and Hanover Court House, in the desperate conflict of Gains Mill, Frederick Wittich was disabled, taken prisoner and sent to that Southern torture pen, Belle Isle, where for five weeks he was compelled to endure the strain that killed many of the prisoners. He was released in time to participate in the battle of Bull Run, where he especially distinguished himself. At Gains Mill the Eighty-third suffered the loss of 265 in killed, wounded and prisoners, having borne the brunt of many a desperate charge, and at Malvern Hill they suffered further heavy loss. In this fight Sergeant William Wittich won his promotion to a lieutenancy by capturing a Confederate battle-flag under heroic circumstances, and received his advancement by order of Gen. Porter, and as a further compliment to his bravery the First division of Porter's corps was passed in review, while the man they honored lay ill in an ambulance, the captured trophy beside him, with the stars and stripes waving over it. It was intended to have Gen. McClellan present, but he was called away on an important mission. The second Bull Run engagement, August 31, 1862, was another disastrous fight for the Eighty-third, and they lost half of their remaining force, and were reduced from regimental to almost company proportions, only seventy-one stacking arms that night at Centerville. Among the killed was Lieutenant William G. Wittich, who had command of the company at the time, one of the bravest men of that heroic band. Not more than 200 feet from where he fell lay his brother Frederick, badly wounded. He had borne his part throughout the day with the endurance and courage of a true soldier, and was promoted to a second lieutenancy, and was again promoted July 3, 1863, receiving a first lieutenant's commission. At the battle of Laurel Hill he was shot through the thighs, and was discharged September 7, 1864, by expiration of his term of enlistment. On his return to Erie he received the appointment to a postal clerkship, and for eight years served in the postal service, when rheumatic troubles, resulting from his wounds, compelled him to resign from the service. He endured much suffering, and finally answered the last roll call January 13, 1895. He expired at the old homestead on West Tenth street, tenderly watched by his venerable mother and loving sisters.

James Forbes Wittich was married in Erie, by Rev. Dr. Cleveland, to Cornelia Scott. They had six children: William, Elizabeth, Earl B., Emily Cornelia, Mary and Jessie. His second wife was Marietta Odell, by whom he had one child. James F. Wittich was commissioned a first lieutenant September 22, 1862, in Co. K, 145th P. V. I. Eliza Wittich was married to Dr. Henry Gilbert in Erie, at the home of her parents, by Rev. Geo. A. Lyon. They had two children, Mary S. and Woodland. Susan Lyne Wittich was married to Alonzo Lucius Littell, November 30, 1870, in the city of Erie, at the home of her parents, by Rev. Geo. A. Lyon. They had three children: Frederick J., Williams S. and Mary Olive. Frederick J. Littell has entered Case School of Applied Science, in Cleveland, Ohio, expecting to take up the four-year course of mechanical and electrical engineering.

Joel Olds was born February 22, 1791, among the granite hills of Alstead, Chester county, N. H. When asked one day by one of his friends why he was not named George Washington, the reply was that "Washington living was not the hero of to-day. One must die to see glory." He was the son of Phineas and Polly (Gale) Olds. In 1795 they moved up among the rugged hills of the Green Mountain State, locating at Williamstown, Vt., among the Gale relations. In the spring of '96 his mother died, leaving him and his little brother, Asa G., with only a father to care for them. (Their father was a zealous Free Mason, and was influential among the order.) Joel attended then the district school, two miles away, and it comes down to us that it was no uncommon sight to see him with dinner basket in one hand, leading his younger brother, trudging o'er the stony way to the little log-house, where they sat on log benches without backs. He grew to manhood, working among the rocks and stumps of his father's acres. He married Rhoda Parker, May 5, 1814. Soon after he, with his father-in-law, Jonas A. Parker, began making preparations for moving to the Western Reserve. Sowing the choicest seeds from the harvest was one principal occupation, particularly the apple seeds, and many a tree is still standing on the Olds farm and on neighboring farms, that grew from that pint of seed which he brought. It was not until 1815 that this little company was ready to start. The snow had fallen and the sleighing was fine. Some of the neighbors had come in to bid them God speed, for on the morrow they were to start. Among the number was Davis Harrington, a young man of the neighborhood, who had long looked with favor upon Katie Parker, a sister of Mrs. Olds. It was a long way to the Western Reserve, and money was scarce. Could he only speak the words? Soon there was a little stir of excitement. Katie's things must be unpacked. A minister was summoned, and then and there Katie became Mrs. Col. Harrington. The next morning two ox-teams, one owned and driven by Joel Olds, the other driven by Ira Parker, with their long sleds loaded with household goods, started on their long journey. Later in the day, Mr. Parker, with the women and children of the party, followed with their horse team, carrying food and cooking utensils. About 3 o'clock each day the horse team would pass the ox teams, and by 4 o'clock put up at some tavern, get the privilege of cooking their food by the great fire-place and spreading their beds, when ever they were permitted. Thus they drove on day after day across the great snowy wilderness of New York State. Arriving in Buffalo, they heard the glorious news that peace had been declared. After six weeks of journeying they stopped at Eagle Tavern, on Federal Hill, and put up for the night. What must have been their disappointment in the morning to find it raining. They tarried until the rain should cease, but to their great dismay the sleighing entirely disappeared, and thus it is that we have in our midst to-day the Oldses and the Parkers. Yes, and even our own Judge Gunnison. See what Trumbull county, Ohio, lost, and Erie gained. What might it have been had it not rained. The rain having ceased, they looked about them for habitations, where they might spend the summer at least. They went south of the little hamlet of Erie, out upon the hills and rented farms for the season. In the spring of 1816 they bought a tract of land, and Joel Olds moved into the wilderness on his own land, cut down the timber, making a log house by a good spring of water, and thus life was begun in earnest. He cleared his land, cutting the fine timber, burning it and selling the ashes to the potash factory in Erie for ten cents a bushel. At the end of ten years he had paid for his farm, and saved enough to take him back to the home of his kindred. Adding to his acres by thrift and industry, he still made his visits back to his old home every decade, each time taking some of his family with him. Ere the sixth pilgrimage was made, he was called to his long home in eternity. His wife dying, he married, in 1838, Miss Juliet Baker, of Windham, Conn., by whom he was tenderly cared for to a ripe old age, passing away July 21, 1872. The love and affection of those two brothers, who were left motherless so young, endured even to the end, and life was lengthened to each of them beyond four score. It was touching in the extreme to see them sit so close for hours, and visit like lovers, as they were indeed. May this beautiful feature crop out in generations that follow. Of the first family but two daughters are living. Mrs. Francis Foster, in Shell Rock, Iowa, and Mrs. Emily Ward, in Marion, Kas. Horace, the son, died in April, 1879, leaving a family who are at present in Des Moines, Iowa. Of the second family, Helen will be remembered by many as a successful teacher in our public schools for several years, married G. E. Noble in 1869, and died March, 1887. The other two are both living in Erie. Miss Sophornia, a teacher in our schools, and Melvin J., so well known as a survivor of the gallant Eighty-third Regiment, that more than a passing notice should be made of him. He enlisted in '61, before he was 16 years old, when no one was allowed to enlist under 18, and none under a required height would be received. He had extra high heels put on new boots, that he might fulfill the law. Such patriotism could not be rejected. His history is the history of the regiment. Being one of the youngest members of his regiment, he now suffers when he should be in his fullest strength, the rack and torture of rheumatism, engendered by exposure in Southern swamps. Can pen describe the history of a faithful soldier? Think what it means to stand as a target for an enemy. Our government can never pay the debt it owes the boys who saved our nation. Mr. M. J. Olds married in January, 1871, Miss Clara E., daughter of Z. L. Webster, Esq., of Summit, and they have two sons: Z. Webster, born in March, 1874; and Leon Baker, born in June, 1889. The farm on which Joel Olds spent fifty-six years of a quiet and peaceful life is still owned by his children, Miss Sophorina and Melvin J. It is pleasantly situated on elevated land, overlooking the city and the lake, two miles from the present city limits. For a beautiful view of the lake no prospect is better. On a clear day the outline of the Canadian shore and Long Point is visible, and at night the flash-light from the same point can be seen. It was a matter of great surprise to them, when they found they could see the lake, the country being all a wilderness at the time, they had no idea they were on such high land.

Extracts from a letter (when postage was twenty-five cents) written by his brother, after he had bought land, raised crops and returned to his father's house.

WILLIAMSTOWN, VT., June 17, 1816.

DEAR JOEL:

We are all well. I wrote one letter and sent by the mail before this. Thomas Howe starts this day with his family for the Ohio. I will send this letter by him. Dial Smith is going to drive his ox-team for him. When he returns he will call and see you. I want you should go and show him my land, then I want you should write to me. What has become of my wheat? You may sell it, and have the use of the money until next spring. How many loads of potatoes did I have? Have you built a school-house yet? How did you make out with your mill? and if any more land has been sold in the neighborhood. My colt is worth seventy dollars, but will not fetch that, for there is no money to be got. Our father has five horses that are fit to work and ride; he says he will send you one next fall or winter. He sold his Dalton farm for one horse and 110 dollars, to be paid in cattle. Last night there was a hard frost; we are pouring water on the beans to save them; on plowed ground I had to kick hard to break the frozen crust. I want you and Mr. Parker to go and burn my piece. Your relations are all well. I am your affectionate brother,

ASA G. OLDS.

JOEL OLDS.

Benjamin F. Sloan, youngest child of William A. and Esther (Crandall) Sloan, was born in Westfield, Chautauqua county, N. Y., March 27, 1813, and moved with his parents to Fairview township, Erie county, Pa., about 1821. He attended the country schools until he was 17. Entered the office of the Erie Gazette in 1836 as an apprentice and served four years. Visited the Southern States in 1841 and 1842, and worked in various offices in New Orleans and Louisville. Part of the latter year was connected with the Louisville Daily Gazette as night editor. In connection with A. P. Durlin, Esq., in 1843, he purchased the Erie Observer and edited it till January 1, 1861, when he sold the office and became a member of the grocery firm of Sloan, Booth & McCreary. Was engaged in the business of oil refining from 1863 to 1868. From 1868 to 1875 was editor of the Erie Daily Republican and the Titusville Daily Courier. Was clerk of the committee on invalid pensions of the House of Representatives during the Forty-fourth and the extra session of the Forty-fifth Congress. Was appointed secretary and treasurer of the Erie water department January 1, 1879, in which position he continued until 1891. Mr. Sloan was married March 27, 1845, to Elizabeth M. Barr. They have had five children, of whom two are living—Clara Virginia (intermarried with H. D. McNaughton, of Rochester, N. Y.), and Charles H. Mr. Sloan was appointed postmaster by President Pierce in April, 1853, and was reappointed by President Buchanan in 1857, serving until the spring of 1861. He now resides with his son-in-law in Rochester, N. Y.

John Depinet, register and recorder of Erie county, Pennsylvania, was born in Erie November 14, 1855, and is a son of Michael and Mary (Erhart) Depinet, natives of Baden, whence they emigrated and located in Erie in 1853. Mrs. Depinet died in 1856. The senior Mr. Depinet was a contractor in brick and mason work, which he followed successfully for many years. Mr. John Depinet was educated in the public schools and Erie Academy, and in 1877 accepted a position as bookkeeper in the office of William Densmore. After five years' faithful service in this capacity, he became a member of the firm of William Densmore & Co., and traveled in the interest of the company. He was elected to his present position in 1890 and re-elected in 1893. In 1891 he was chosen chairman of the Republican county committee, the duties of which position he most efficiently discharged. He has always been a staunch Republican, and has rendered much valuable service to the party of his choice. Mr. Depinet organized and was for several years interested in the Erie base ball club, and other athletic sports which he always tried to keep above reproach. In this, as in other undertakings, he was highly successful, and during his active connection with base ball it received the enthusiastic support and patronage of the public. On June 1, 1895, Mr. Depinet leased the Central Market House, the success of which his able management assures. Mr. Depinet was married October 2, 1882, to Miss Jessie, only daughter of William and Harriet (Dewey) Densmore, of Erie. This happy union has been blessed with two children, Fred E. and Ned E. Mr. Depinet is a Knight Templar Mason, a very active member of the Elks, and is also a member of the Royal Arcanum. He is a member of the Erie and Kalkwa clubs and of the Mænnerchor and Liedertafel societies. Public-spirited and with the best interests of the community at heart, he is ever ready to support and encourage by his means and influence all worthy enterprises of a public or charitable nature.

William Saltsman Brown was born in Erie, Erie county, Pa., November 20, 1826. He is a son of the late Samuel and Elizabeth (Saltsman) Brown, both natives of the Keystone State, and of German descent. Samuel Brown located, about 1810, in Erie, where he was one of the early leading merchants, and where, in 1825, he married Miss Elizabeth Saltsman, the daughter of William Saltsman, one of the pioneer settlers of Erie. Samuel Brown died in 1865; his wife, the following year. William S. Brown was educated at the Erie Academy. His first employment was as clerk in the postoffice at Erie, where he remained for four years, then entering the service of General Charles M. Reed, with whom he was associated for two years. The following four years he was deputy collector of customs at Eric, under Presidents Taylor and Fillmore. Upon the completion of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R., Mr. Brown was made general freight agent at Erie of that road, a position which he held for twenty years. Succeeding this he was treasurer of the Pennsylvania end of the Lake Shore roads, and was one of the boards of directors of the Lake Shore, Erie and Pittsburgh and Oil Creek railroads. He served as collector of internal revenue for the Erie district by appointment of President Grant. He was one of the early stockholders of the Second National Bank of Erie, and has been for many years and is still a member of the board of directors of that institution. Mr. Brown was associated with Orange Noble, Joseph McCarter and Henry C. Shannon in the erection of the first grain elevator at the port of Erie. He devoted eleven years in active service to the cause of education as a member of the Erie board, and was for nine years president of that body. He was married October 19, 1853, to Rosina M., daughter of the late Joseph Winchell, of Erie. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Brown are: Scott Brown, of the Northwestern R. R. office of Chicago; Benjamin B. Brown, of the firm of Brown & Thomas, iron merchants, of Erie; and Mary, wife of Lieut. George R. Clark, of the United States navy. The family reside at the northeast corner of Ninth and Peach streets, and attend the Park Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Brown was one of the founders.

Hugh Brady Fleming (deceased). On both sides the lineage of this gentleman fitly represented those Scotch-Irish elements and reflected the characteristics which history, story and song have so inseparably intertwined with the name of the Keystone—his native state. His father was Gen. James Fleming, who enlisted in the War of 1812 when about 16 years of age. His mother was Rebecca, daughter of Robert Lowry, one of a family of ten brothers, who, coming from the North of Ireland towards the close of the last century, had such a thrilling experience in the land title troubles at the first settlement of the lake shore of Pennsylvania. A notable episode of this strife was the successful journey made by the wife of one of these brothers on horseback through the wilderness to the federal capital, where, by an order of President Jefferson, her husband was released from imprisonment, which he had incurred by disregarding a decree of court in the land litigation. The military record of the family is exceptionally honorable. James Fleming, father of Hugh Brady, served through the War of 1812, participating in the battles of Chippewa and Lundy's Lane, under General Scott, and was wounded at Fort Erie. He completed a long and honorable service in the United States army. He afterwards served many years in the volunteer establishment of Pennsylvania, where, passing through several grades, he became major general. Col. John W. McLane (own cousin of Major Fleming) closed a brilliant career in the War of the Rebellion by his death at the head of the renowned 83d Reg., Pa. V., at the battle of Gaines' Mill. The chivalrous valor shown in the careers of both seemed to corroborate the tradition that they were of kin with Gen. Anthony Wayne, whose name was given to two especially fine military companies before the war, raised and drilled by Captain McLane at Erie. The first, the Wayne Grays, in 1841; the second, the Wayne Guards, organized in 1859; practically it was a military school for the coming war, and, in fact, was the nucleus of the famous 83d Reg., Pa. V. With such an ancestry and surroundings, the record of Maj. Hugh Brady Fleming will not be a matter of surprise. He was born in Rockdale township, Crawford county, Pa., in 1827. His early education was obtained in the common schools, then of the commonest sort. He was named for his father's companion in arms, if not regimental commander, while his brother bore the name of the veteran general under whom his father had fought at Lundy's Lane. All of his early surroundings tended to instill, to cultivate and intensify a love of military life. The science of war, especially as illustrated in the great battles of the period in Europe and America, amounted to a passion with General Fleming, whose prominence in organizing, disciplining and arming the State forces in Northwestern Pennsylvania continued for many years—coincident with his son Hugh's childhood. His fireside was made cheerful by the companionship of his comrades of the War of 1812; while the Patriot War and the "Burning of the Caroline" quickened the interest in military circles, as they brought to the lake frontier Gen. Winfield Scott in connection with the stirring events liable to produce bloodshed and plunge the country into a war with England at any moment. Hugh Brady Fleming was most naturally devoted to military life—it was a logical sequence of his father's career. In July, 1848, in the very month the Mexican war was officially declared at an end, it was on the nomination of Hon. James Thompson, then member of Congress from the Erie district, under the administration of President Polk—William L. Morey being Secretary of War—he was appointed to the West Point Academy. The achievements of our armies had raised the interest in military matters to a high pitch; yet from all of the eight counties of the Twenty-third Congressional District, with their three endowed academies and scores of graduates, Hugh Fleming was named for the cadetship of 1848. The intuitive perception and instinctive acumen of Judge Thompson were well vindicated in the long and distinguished career of his appointee. No doubt the result of the war, as that year announced, with its acquisition of California and Northern Mexico, adding as it did by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, 649,000 square miles of territory to the domain of the United States, while more than 101,000 men had been in the field, involving an expenditure of $100,000,000, intensified the anxiety all over the country to enter West Point. It was a class embracing Generals Phil Sheridan, Henry W. Slocum, A. W. D. McCook, George Crook, T. L. Casey and others destined to win so much renown in the great War of the Rebellion. On the 1st of July, 1852, having graduated, Cadet Fleming was made Second Lieutenant of the 9th U. S. infantry. He was assigned to duty in the distant West, where the army, reduced to a peace footing, was engaged in keeping open communications in the vast region beyond the Mississippi before the organization of Kansas and Nebraska. Circumstances then made him prominent; his first skirmish was while defending Fort Laramie against the Sioux, June 17, 1853; in another fight, August 24, 1854, he was wounded. It is needless to follow Lieutenant Fleming in his long, arduous and brilliant career, which commenced so soon after his graduation. He was on frontier duty at Fort Stillacom, Washington, and operated against the Puget Sound Indians in 1856. The next year he was stationed in Washington Territory (then Northern Oregon), also at Fort Dallas and Fort Walla Walla and on the Spokane expedition. In 1858 he fought the Indians at Tohotsnimme and at Four Lakes, at Spokane Plains and River. He was on frontier duty at Walla Walla, Washington Territory, from 1858 to 1860, and was promoted to be captain of the 9th infantry May 14, 1861. He relieved Kit Carson at Fort Garland, Colorado, and was presented by that renowned frontiersman with the sword he wore when he escorted Gen. John C. Fremont across the Rocky Mountains. It was thus Captain Fleming was thrown into active, prolonged and arduous military service, but the strain of such successive and unremitting effort by day and by night wore upon him. When the War of the Rebellion broke out he sought to place his military education and experience at the service of his country. He was invited by Governor Curtin to take command of a Pennsylvania regiment and a like offer came from the Governor of New York. The Secretary of War refused to accept his resignation, but employed him in mustering, inspecting and organizing the volunteer forces and he remained a captain in the army. Several times after the breaking out of the war he was ordered to the remotest frontier. Honored as he was with the fullest confidence of the War Department, he was detailed to organize troops at Fort Columbus, N. Y. He served as mustering and disbursing officer at Buffalo, N. Y., and at Fort Humboldt, California, and for Nevada and California from 1861 to 1865. After this he was acting assistant provost marshal general and superintendent of volunteer recruiting service in California and Nevada. He returned to frontier duty at Fort Ruby, Nevada, in December, 1865, and July 28, 1866, won his spurs and gold leaf, while attached to the 19th U. S. infantry. He was next assigned to the 5th U. S. infantry in 1869, and in 1870 was retired on account of disease contracted in the line of duty. He had helped to clear the Indians from the plains, but with them had vanished the youth, the vigor and the elasticity of Major Fleming, who at his graduation seemed to possess an iron-clad constitution, fired with the courage of a lion—animated by a spirit of loyalty worthy of the kinsman of Mad Anthony Wayne.

Major Fleming never ceased his studies of military science. He kept up almost to the day of his death with every change in tactics, in arms, engineering, ship building and armor plating. He was genial and companionable, a man of strong friendships, with a high sense of honor, and he would not allow himself to be outdone in his duties to his fellow men or to society. His domestic relations were most pleasant. In 1866, while stationed at Buffalo, he was married to Miss Maria Louise, daughter of Joseph Neely, Esq., of Erie. With his wife, he reported at Fort Garland, where his son, Hugh Neely Fleming, was born in 1868. Upon Major Fleming's retirement from active service he took up his residence at the family home on West Eighth street, Erie. Though offered the chair of military science in the University of California and that of Minnesota he was obliged to decline both on account of ill health. In the vain effort to recuperate that health and vigor, which had been lost in arduous frontier service, he spent much time and very much of means in traveling. His friends noted with anxiety his steady decline. About two years ago the light of his pleasant home went out in the death of his charming wife. Though cheered by the constant companionship and untiring attentions of his devoted son, the sturdy warrior answered his last roll call at his beautiful but darkened home on the 9th of April, 1895.

The remains of the veteran were tenderly placed near to the beautiful Erie Cemetery in a sightly location near to the resting place of his beloved wife and his kinsman, Colonel McLane, overlooking the spot on the lake bluff where General Wayne, on his return from his successful Indian campaign, died and was buried. Kindred in blood and in their unflinching loyalty, though their spheres of activity so widely separated, each found a grave within sound and view of the other, while the name and fame of each will be cherished among its choice legends of history by the Gem City of the Lakes.

F. F. Farrar, late of Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born in Vermont, August 24, 1822, and died at his home near Waterford, April 28, 1895. His father and mother were natives respectively of Massachusetts and New Hampshire. The former, Oliver Farrar, was engaged in the milling business for many years in Vermont, was a Democratic member of the Legislature of that State for several terms, and served the people of the county of his residence as justice of the peace for some years. F. F. Farrar completed his schooling at the Hancock Academy, New Hampshire, and then taught school for one year. Upon attaining his majority he removed to Waterford, this county, and with his brother conducted a mercantile business until 1853, when he withdrew and engaged in farming and the hotel business at Forest Home, Erie county, continuing nearly four years with good success; he then entered a partnership with L. Phelps in the grocery line at Waterford. In one year he sold out and engaged under the firm name of Gray & Farrar in the wholesale grocery business at Erie with his usual good luck up to 1867 or 1868, when he sold and turned his entire attention to the restoration of sulphuric acid at Pittsburgh, in which enterprise he had invested prior to this time; he subsequently took the principal management of the branch business at Titusville and was very successful. At a period during his busy life he was compelled to lay away his first consort, the mother of four children, three of whom are living, viz.: C. W. Farrar, of the Davis, Farrar & Co., Erie; W. W. Farrar, of the American Wringer Company, Erie, and Mrs. Minnie Arbuckle. His second marriage was to Mrs. Mary Day, by whom he had one child, Miss Zoe Farrar. Mr. Farrar was a valued and valuable citizen. During the war he was mayor of Erie, and fulfilled the duties of that office during those troublous times with conspicuous success.

William Reifel, senior member of the firm of William Reifel & Sons, Erie, Pa., was born in the province of Rhein, Germany, January 4, 1838, and is a son of J. P. and Anna Mary (Offenbacher) Reifel. His father, who was a farmer, came to America in 1852 and located in Erie, where he died in 1854, leaving William, an only child. A part of his education was obtained in his native country, and a part of it in the public schools of Erie. Learning the molders' trade in the shops of Sennett, Barr & Co., he followed the occupation eleven years. He then engaged in the grocery business on State street, south of Twelfth, where he remained two and a half years. In 1868 he assisted in the establishment of the Erie Steam Bending Works, and maintained his identity with that concern until 1878, when he engaged in his present business of pump manufacturing. The plant was first located on Myrtle street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, and was removed to its present place in 1888, where it has been enlarged and remodeled until its capacity is between fifteen and twenty thousand pumps a year. The products of the concern include all kinds of wooden, chain and bucket pumps, and the territory over which their sales extend includes all the eastern half of the United States. Mr. Keifel owns considerable other property adjacent to the building which he occupies, and has real estate interests in other parts of the city. Mr. Keifel was married in 1858 to Miss Mary Knochel, of Erie, by whom he had five children, viz: Anna Mary (Mrs. Samuel H. Burdett, of Fort Wayne, Ind.), John P. (president of the Cleveland Dental Manufacturing Company, of Cleveland, O.), Miss Elizabeth, William V. (who died in his 23d year), and George V. (who is in the employ of the Cleveland Dental Manufacturing Company as traveling salesman). Mrs. Keifel died in 1866, and Mr. Keifel was remarried in 1874 to Miss Sophia Fink, sister of Mr. Henry Fink, of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Keifel are members of the St. Paul German Lutheran Church. He has been for thirty years a member of the Sons of Herman, and for twenty-nine years a member of the Erie Liedertafel society, of which he is now president. Politically he is a Republican.

J. W. Hunt -

John Robert Cooney, of the Union Ice Company, Erie, Pa., born in Erie, October 18, 1856, is a son of the late John and Margaret Cooney, natives of county Cork, Ireland, who came to the United States and located in Erie in 1855. John Cooney, sr., was an employe of the Erie Gas Company, and died November 18, 1857. His wife survives him and resides in Erie. John R. Cooney attended the public schools of Erie. At an early age he found employment as brakeman on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., and later with the E. & P. R. R., being thus employed for four years. He next engaged in teaming, and in 1880 founded an ice business, which he conducted successfully alone for ten years, then consolidating his business with that of the Erie Ice Company. In the spring of 1893 this company was consolidated with the People's Ice Company, the aggregation being thereafter known as the Union Ice Company. Mr. Cooney has been twice married: on May 12, 1879, to Emma, daughter of John Crowley, of East Mill Creek, Erie county, Pa. She died in February, 1890, leaving three children, John, Edward and Mamie. His second marriage was to Annie R., daughter Stephen Murphy, a contractor of Erie. The family reside at 437 West Fourth street, and are members of St. Peter's Catholic congregation.

Samuel Myron Brainerd, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born in Conneaut township, Erie county, Pa., November 13, 1842. He is a son of the late Samuel and Olive L. (Nicholson) Brainerd, the former a native of Herkimer, New York, and of English descent, the latter a native of Vermont. The elder Mr. Brainerd was a farmer. He died in January, 1863; his wife survived him less than one month. Samuel M. Brainerd received his early education in the common schools and academy of Conneaut township, and completed it at the State Normal School, Edinboro. He began the study of law with the Hon. George P. Cutler, of Girard, Pa., and continued it under the preceptorship of the late William Benson, of Erie. He was admitted to the bar in November, 1869, and entered upon the practice of his profession at North East, where he remained until 1874, when he removed to Erie to form a law partnership with his former preceptor, William Benson, which, under the firm name of Benson & Brainerd, continued to exist until 1883, when Mr. Brainerd took his seat as a member of the Forty-eighth Congress. Prior to his election to the House of Representatives, Mr. Brainerd served a three-year term as district attorney for Erie county. On his return from Washington he resumed the practice of his profession, having for a time a partnership association with Isador Sobel, and in 1893 formed his present connection with George H. Higgins, the firm being known as Brainerd & Higgins. Mr. Brainerd is known as one of the ablest advocates of the Erie bar, and enjoys a large practice. His election to Congress was a flattering recognition of his ability, and evidence of his personal popularity, for, although a pronounced and uncompromising Republican, he received a majority of 1,000 votes, while the Democratic candidate for Governor, Mr. Pattison, carried Erie county by a majority of over 500. The wisdom of his constituents in sending Mr. Brainerd to Congress was quickly apparent. During the first session he obtained an appropriation of $50,000 for Erie harbor, and an additional appropriation of $100,000 for the construction of the government building at Erie. He restored the land lighthouse, and secured an appropriation for the repurchase of the property on which it stands. He introduced a bill for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home which was favorably reported by the House committee on military affairs. He introduced a bill to equalize compensation for letter carriers and offices of the first and second class; a bill for the payment of unpaid bounties to veterans who were promoted after the last enlistment, besides a large number of private bills for securing soldiers their pensions and back pay. He gave the interests of disabled soldiers his personal attention, and many cases were determined successfully which had been long pending and for years abandoned as hopeless by the persons interested. He obtained a further appropriation of $30,000 for the Erie harbor. Mr. Brainerd was the unanimous choice of his party in Erie county for renomination. He was married December 24, 1866, to Lavina E., daughter of the late Philander B. Chapin, a farmer and an old resident of Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Brainerd have three children, Samuel, Carlton M. and Annie L.; reside at the corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, and attend the First Presbyterian Church. Their son, Samuel, is a clerk in the Erie postoffice, and is married to Rosa, daughter of Herbert Stitt, a farmer and ex-prothonotary of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania. They have one child, Samuel Herbert Spencer.

Clark Olds, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township, Erie county, Pa., July 14, 1850. He is a son of Lewis W. Olds, a prominent citizen of Erie. Clark Olds received his initial schooling in the public schools of Erie, and prepared for college at the Erie Academy under Albion W. Tourgee. In 1866 he entered Michigan University, Ann Arbor, and was graduated from that institution in 1870. During his collegiate course he became connected with the United States lake survey, and after his graduation was made assistant engineer in that service, and continued to be engaged therein until the fall of 1875, with the exception of two years, 1872-3, during which he had leave of absence and attended the university of Leipsic, Saxony. While in the employ of the government and at the Leipsic University, he pursued the study of law, subsequently continuing it at Erie, under the preceptorship of the late William Benson. He was admitted to the bar April 26, 1876, and shortly thereafter was admitted to practice in the United States courts. He makes a specialty of admiralty practice. Mr. Olds is a Republican, and has been actively identified with the work of his party in Erie county. He was married December 13, 1876, to Livia E., daughter of Chauncey Keator, capitalist, of Courtland, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Olds have three children: Romeyn K., Irving S. and Marguerite E., and reside at 216 West Seventh street.

Isador Sobel, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., born August 28, 1858, in New York city, is a son of Semel and Cecilia (King) Sobel, natives of Germany, who came to this country in their youth, and were married in the city of New York, where Mr. Sobel was for many years engaged in mercantile pursuits. He removed with his family to Petroleum Center, Venango county, Pa., and there established a dry goods business, built an opera house, and otherwise contributed to the welfare of the community. A few years later Mr. Sobel removed his family to New York, and transferred his dry goods business to Erie, Pa. Subsequently the family took up its residence in Erie, and here Mr. Sobel continued in the dry goods business for twelve years. The family returned to New York in 1887, and since then have made that city their place of residence. Mr. Isador Sobel received his initial schooling at grammar school No. 3, and completed his education at the College of New York, New York city. Until his 20th year he was engaged in business with his father, and then began the study of law under the preceptorship of Hon. S. M. Brainerd, of Erie. He was admitted to the bar in May, 1888, practiced for two years, when he formed a partnership with his former preceptor, under the firm name of Brainerd & Sobel, which partnership was dissolved two years later, since which time Mr. Sobel has been engaged in the practice alone. He is a Republican, and has been actively identified with the work of his party in this county, having served for three years as secretary of the Republican county committee, and for two years as chairman of that body. He has been twice elected a member of the common council of Erie, serving his latter term as presiding officer. At both of these elections Mr. Sobel led his ticket, at the latter polling a larger vote in the first ward (a Democratic stronghold) than had ever been cast in that ward for any candidate at any election. Mr. Sobel is vice-president of the Republican League of the State of Pennsylvania. He was married March 17, 1891, to Emma, daughter of S. Auerheim, a merchant of Bradford, McKean county, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Sobel have one child living, Jeffrey M. Sobel, reside at 201 East Sixth street, and are members of the Jewish Temple, of which he is the vice-president. Mr. Sobel is a member of the Masonic order, the I. O. O. F., K. of P., Royal Arcanum, Woodmen of the World, Maccabees and Foresters, and B. P. O. E.

George H. Higgins, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born August 5, 1852, at Spartansburg, Crawford county, Pa. He is a son of the late Moses and Nancy (Fralick) Higgins, natives of New York, and descendants of early settlers of the eastern part of that State. George H. Higgins completed his education at Watertown (N. Y.) high school. Returning to Spartansburg he learned the trade of mason, and for five years followed it. For the following two years he was engaged in the lumber business in Rome township, near Titusville, with Mr. C. D. Scott, now of Corry, Pa. He then began the study of law under the preceptorship of S. T. Allen, at Warren, Pa., and was admitted to practice in 1880. While reading law he became interested in oil drilling, and devoted some time to this up to 1882, when he returned to Warren and formed a law partnership with his late preceptor, S. T. Allen, which continued until the death of the latter in 1885. In 1883 Mr. Higgins was appointed district attorney of Warren county to fill the vacancy caused by the death of David Swanson. At the Republican primaries following the expiration of his term, he received the nomination to the district attorneyship, and was elected by the large majority of 3,500. Upon the death of Mr. S. T. Allen, his brother, Mr. O. C. Allen, resigned the postmastership of Warren to become his brother's successor in the law partnership with Mr. Higgins. In 1892 there was added to the firm W. H., son of O. C. Allen, the firm being known as Allen, Higgins & Allen. The partnership was dissolved in 1893, Mr. Higgins coming to Erie, Pa., to form the present co-partnership with Hon. S. M. Brainerd. Mr. Higgins has been twice married, in 1872 to Josephine C., daughter of C. D. Scott. She died August 4, 1890, leaving one son, Weld Higgins, a resident and business man of Erie. Mr. Higgins was married a second time October 10, 1893, to Nancy A., daughter of Moses Starbird, a resident of Corry, Pa. The family reside at 340 West Fifth street and attend the First Presbyterian Church. Mr. Higgins in 1890 received the Republican nomination for the office of president judge of Warren and Forest counties, Pennsylvania. He is a member of the Senate of the National Union, a Pythian Knight and a member of the Royal Arcanum. He is rated with the leading attorneys of the Erie bar, and the firm of Brainerd & Higgins have a large and lucrative practice.

William Gallagher Crosby, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born in Ellicottville, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., October 21, 1866. He is a son of Manley Crosby, a biographical sketch of whom is contained in this work. W. G. Crosby was graduated from the Corry (Pa.) high school June 18, 1884, was for three years thereafter associated with Clark & Warren, oil refiners, of Erie county, and then began the study of law under the preceptorship of Davenport & Griffith, and was admitted to practice in 1889. Two years later he formed a law partnership with one of his former preceptors, Mr. George P. Griffith, under the firm name of Griffith & Crosby, which partnership was dissolved in 1894, by the retirement from practice of its senior member, Mr. Crosby succeeding to the business of the firm. In April, 1896, he formed his present partnership association with Henry E. Fish, under the firm name of Fish & Crosby. Mr. Crosby is a Democrat, and has been actively identified with the work of his party in Erie county. In 1893, he was the Democratic candidate for the office of district attorney. He belongs to the Masonic order and K. of P.

Francis F. Marshall, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born in Girard, Erie county, Pa., May 21, 1835. He is the son of the late James C. Marshall (a biographical sketch of whom is contained in this volume). F. F. Marshall received his education at the Erie Academy and Yale College, from which latter institution he was graduated with the class of 1856. He read law under the preceptorship of his father, and was admitted to practice in 1856. He was appointed United States commissioner under President Lincoln's first administration, in 1861, and was admitted to practice in the United States and Supreme Courts in 1864. He formed a partnership association with his father January 1, 1861, which continued until the retirement of the latter in the spring of 1881. He was elected president of the Marine National Bank of Erie in 1866, succeeding his father, who died May 6, of that year. Mr. Marshall was married June 17, 1862, to Fannie, daughter of Colonel Irvin Camp, whose personal history is contained in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall have three children, Florence M., wife of Surgeon C. U. Gravitt, and Misses Laura F. and May Marshall. The family reside at the corner of Sixth and Sassafras streets, and attend the Episcopal Church.

Henry Earl Fish, attorney, Erie, Pa., born April 9, 1863, in Otsego, Otsego county, N. Y., is a son of Liberal C. and Marion (Briggs) Fish, natives of New York, the former of Welsh and the latter of Scotch descent. Henry E. Fish completed his education at the Gilbertsville Academy in 1881. He then came to Erie and was for ten years employed as one of the official court stenographers of Erie, Lawrence and McKean counties. During this period he took up the study of law, reading latterly under the preceptorship of Judge John P. Vincent and Hon. E. A. Walling, was admitted to practice in February, 1889, and two years later, upon his resignation as court stenographer, entered upon the practice of law in Erie. In April, 1895, he formed his present partnership association with Wm. G. Crosby, with the firm name of Fish & Crosby. Mr. Fish was married June 25, 1889, to Nellie, daughter of the late K. M. Slocum, an old resident of Erie. They have one child, Roger. Mr. Fish is past master of Tyrian Lodge, F. & A. M., an officer of Temple Chapter, Mount Olivet Commandery, a Knight Templar and the A. A. S. R. Mr. and Mrs. Fish attend the Central Presbyterian Church.

Charles Heydrick, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., was born in Oil City, Pa., August 17, 1844. On the paternal side his ancestry is German; Balthazar Heydrick came from Silesia in 1734, and settled at Chestnut Hill, near Philadelphia; his grandson, Dr. Christopher Heydrick, the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, removed from Philadelphia to Venango county, Pennsylvania, in 1816, and became celebrated throughout Northwestern Pennsylvania because of his consummate ability and skill as a physician and surgeon. Of his children, Charles H. Heydrick, lately deceased, was for many years the county surveyor of Venango county, and it was from his hands that the first authentic maps of said county were had. He was also a millwright and master mechanic. Peter C. Heydrick, son of Charles H. and father of our subject, is a graduate of Allegheny College, was one of the founders of Oil City, Pa., and the organizer of the first company formed in this country for the purpose of producing petroleum oil. Mr. Heydrick came to Erie in 1874, and has served the city as a member of its councils for several years. On the maternal side the ancestry is English, his mother's ancestors, the Doughtys, coming from England with William Penn, in 1682. The maternal grandfather, James Doughty, came from Philadelphia to Crawford county, in 1812, and was for many years a member of the faculty of Allegheny College. He was a brother of Thomas Doughty, the father of American landscape painting. Charles Heydrick received his education in the public schools of Erie, taking the full course and graduating from the high school with the highest honors in 1884. He was registered as a student of the law with the late Hon. James C. Marshall and his distinguished son, F. F. Marshall, Esq., and under their careful and exhaustive instruction, laid the foundation for a brilliant career at the bar to which he was admitted June 27, 1887, acquiring within a few years the highest eucum which a lawyer may attain, in a tribute paid to his ability as a jurispudent by the Supreme Court of the State in reviewing a report made by him as master, in an intricate and knotty case, involving many abstruse and delicate principles of both patent and civil law. This extraordinary compliment from the highest jurisprudence in this commonwealth is in itself sufficient testimony of his ability and the thoroughness of his preceptors. Charles H. is a nephew of Judge Heydrick, of Venango county, a lawyer of great worth and ability, and who has also been a member of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. In religion our subject is a liberal Episcopalian; in politics, a Jeffersonian Democrat.

Franklin Lewis Montgomery was born in Sutton, Ontario, Canada, September 4, 1863. He is a son of Dr. John W. and Josephine (Gorham) Montgomery, both natives of Canada. He passed through the public schools to the Kingston Collegiate Institute, Kingston, Ontario, from which he graduated, and entered Queen's University, Kingston, in 1880, of which institution he is an undergraduate. He came to Erie in 1884 and engaged in the fish business as bookkeeper with E. D. Carter. He subsequently engaged with other firms and for himself up to the time of the formation of the Erie Fish Association, in 1892, since which time he has been engaged in the insurance business. Ever since his location in Erie he has devoted much time to the study of medicine, which he began under the preceptorship of his father. Mr. Montgomery is one of the heirs to Alexander Montgomery, sr., who leased some fifty-seven acres of land in New York city to the Trinity Church corporation; these leases expired some eighteen years ago, and the heirs are contesting their right to said property, amounting to $300,000,000 at the present time. He was married December 25, 1888, to Gertrude E., daughter of Leonard H. Hall, of the late firm of Noble & Hall, engine manufacturers. Erie, Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery have two children, Gertrude and John Alexander, and reside at Eighth and Myrtle streets.

Charles S. Burchfield, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born in Edinboro, Erie county, Pa., February 10, 1858. He is a son of the late Robert R. and Emeline (Austin) Burchfield, natives of Pennsylvania, the former deceased, the latter now a resident of Toronto, Kan. The late Robert R. Burchfield was a Union soldier in the war of the Rebellion, was captured at Petersburg, Va., June 22, 1864, and was imprisoned at Andersonville, Ga., until October, 1864, when he was removed to the military prison at Florence, S. C., where he died January 31, 1865, a result of the hardships and privations of his incarceration. Charles S. Burchfield was graduated June 28, 1877, from the State Normal school at Edinboro, where he pursued a two years' post-graduate course. He was elected to the office of justice of the peace in February, 1881, served in that capacity for three and a half years, when he resigned to accept an appointment in the internal revenue office at Erie, under Collector J. F. Walther. While occupying the latter position, Mr. Burchfield renewed, under the preceptorship of Benson & Brainerd, the study of law, which he had taken up before his election to the office of justice of the peace, was admitted to the bar September 6, 1886, and has ever since been engaged in law practice in Erie. He was admitted to practice in the United States Courts July 18, 1889, and was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, April 29, 1895.

John K. Hallock, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., was born in Chagrin Falls, O., April 25, 1844. He is a son of the late Rev. John Keese Hallock, a Methodist minister, who settled in McKean township, Erie county, in 1820. His ancestors were among the first English settlers of the American colonies, the first Hallock family having located on Long Island in 1640. John K. Hallock received his early education in the schools where his father happened to be located, and completed it in the Waterford Academy in 1862. Upon leaving school he took up the study of the law, and was admitted to the bar in Ohio in 1865. He came to the bar of Pennsylvania soon after this, and spent a year in the office of Hon. A. B. Richmond, of Meadville, Pa. He located in Erie in 1868, where he was the first attorney to make a speciality of patent law practice. He is, at present, senior member of the law firm of Hallock & Lord, of this city, whose business consists principally of matters pertaining to patents. Mr. Hallock was deputy U. S. marshal in 1869-70, and was an alternate commissioner of Pennsylvania to the World's Fair in 1893. He was married October 2, 1871, to Louise C. Porter, widow of Maj. Robert H. Porter, U. S. A., and daughter of William G. Arbuckle, whose personal history is contained in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Hallock have three children: John Keese, jr. (a law student), Louise C., and Ruth M., reside at 324 West Ninth street, and attend St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Mr. Hallock is a member of the B. P. O. E., and associate member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Hugh Compton Lord, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born in Mantorville, Minn., January 23, 1867. He is a son of the late Samuel and Louisa (Compton) Lord, the former a native of Meadville, Crawford county, Pa., and the latter formerly of Erie county. The Lords were among the first settlers of Connecticut and the Comptons early settlers of New York State, and both families were of English descent. The late Samuel Lord spent the greater part of his life in Minnesota, where he practiced law for a number of years.

He was an ardent Republican, and rendered his constituents valuable service as a member of both Houses of the State Legislature. At the time of his decease he was holding his second term of office as president judge of the Fifth Judicial District of Minnesota. He died in 1890, having survived his wife one year. After the decease of Judge Lord his son, Hugh, came to Pennsylvania. In 1884 he entered the high school, Erie, and was graduated therefrom in 1887, afterwards taking a post-graduate course of one year. He read law under the preceptorship of Hon. E. A. Walling, was admitted to the bar in December, 1890, engaged in general practice for one year and a half, and then formed his present partnership association with John K. Hallock, Esq., under the firm name of Hallock & Lord, making a speciality of patent law. While a law student Mr. Lord was deputy United States marshal (Harrison administration), a position which he resigned to become eligible for admission to practice in the United States courts. Mr. Lord was married June 7, 1893, to Rena, daughter of the late Richard M. Slocum, of Erie. One child, Louise, born of this marriage, died November 8, 1894. Mr. and Mrs. Lord reside at 309 West Tenth street.

James Wallace Allison, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born at Lake Pleasant, Erie county, Pa., October 15, 1847. He is a son of the late William and Harriet (Carson) Allison, both natives of Pennsylvania, whose parents were among the earliest settlers of the north-western part of the State. William Allison, the grandfather of James W., located at Lake Pleasant during the latter part of the last century, taking up 600 acres of land. The title to the farm owned and occupied at present by J. W. Allison, was never vested in any other name. James W. Allison attended the Waterford Academy, and completed his education at Michigan University, Ann Arbor. He taught school for several years, during which period he was principal of the schools at Fairview and Wellsburg, and was also superintendent of the Mill Creek schools. He also taught for one winter in Erie. At this time he took up the study of law, and was admitted to practice, June 1, 1875. He continued in the practice until the summer of 1881, when, on account of failing health, he devoted his attention to farming. In the spring of 1894, he resumed the practice of law in Erie. He was married October 15, 1874, to Adele, daughter of the late Jacob Fritze, of Watsburg, Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Allison have four children: Ruth, Thomas C., Robert C., and Gertrude. The family reside at Lake Pleasant. Mr. and Mrs. Allison are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Jacob Edward Swap, alderman, Erie, Pa., was born August 12, 1846, at Coeyman's, Albany county, N. Y. He is the son of the late William and Amanda (Carle) Swap, natives of New York, and of German descent. They came to Erie county in 1848, and the following year removed to Springboro, Crawford county, Pa., where they continued to reside throughout their lives, and where the elder Mr. Swap was engaged in undertaking and cabinet making. Jacob E. Swap was attending the public school of his native town, when the war broke out, and, although but 15 years of age, enlisted August 27, 1861, in Co. H, 83d P. V. I. He re-enlisted in the field in 1863, and was mustered out of service May 14, 1865. The Eighty-third was in the Third brigade, First division, Fifth army corps, attached throughout the war to the Army of the Potomac, and is noted for having lost more men killed in battle and from wounds than any other regiment in the service. Private Swap was wounded at Spottsylvania, May 8, 1864, in five places, and has not yet, and never will, entirely recover from the effects of the wounds that day received. An interesting incident in his army experience, was that of being one of a party of six men, or more properly, of five men and a boy (for Mr. Swap was but a boy), which on November 7, 1863, during the engagement at Rappahannock Station, Va., stormed a fortification guarded by a portion of Magruder's Irish brigade, captured twenty-five men, and regained two pieces of artillery, the sight of which, in the possession of the enemy, had prompted the brave and successful attack, which was led by Private Swap. Of the re-enlisted men of Co. H, but five came out of the war alive, and but one of them without wounds. After the war Mr. Swap found employment with the Erie and Pittsburg R. R., and subsequently was appointed superintendent and road-master of the Meadville and Lmesville R. R. (now operated by the P., S. & L. E.). In 1884 he returned to the Erie and Pittsburg R. R., and served as passenger conductor till 1887. He has resided in Erie most of the time since 1867, and is now serving as alderman, to which office he was elected on the Republican ticket in February, 1894. He was married in March, 1868, to Angelina, daughter of the late George W. Luther, an old resident of Erie county, and a descendant of one of the earliest settlers of New England. Three children, born of this marriage, are: Mrs. Grace A., wife of George W. Donald, a printer of Erie; William W., a marine engineer, but now in the employ of the Erie Electric Motor Company; and Charles Swap. Jacob E. Swap is a member of Keystone Lodge, No. 455, F. and A. M.; Temple Chapter, No. 215, R. A. M.; Mount Olivet Commandery, No. 30, K. T.; charter member of Post 67, G. A. R.; charter member, and for two terms colonel of the Union Veteran Legion, No. 13, and charter member of A. O. U. W. Lodge, No. 71, Sharpville, Mercer county, Pa. The family residence is at 210 Peach street.

Max Andrew Krug, dealer in boots and shoes, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., June 13, 1863. He is a son of the late John G. and Mary Louisa (Hlein) Krug, natives of Baden, who came to this country in 1832, locating in New York, where Mr. Krug was engaged in business until 1882, when he removed to Erie. He died August 12, 1864; his wife survives, and resides in Erie. Max A. Krug received his education in the public schools of Erie, and then entered the employ of J. A. Eichenlaub, dealer in boots and shoes, with whom he remained until 1885, when he established himself in the same line at 922 State street. Five years later he opened his present extensive establishment at 1004 State street. He was married June 21, 1887, to Anna, daughter of George I. Behringer, a mechanic of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Krug have two children: Marcella and Clarence, reside at 336 East Eighth street, and are members of St. Mary's Church. Mr. Krug is a member of the B. P. O. E., C. M. B. A., Maennerchor, East Erie Turnverein. He is also a member of the Erie Catholic Casino, the Sommerheim, and the Erie board of trade. He holds several policies of insurance in old line companies, and is a member of the Bay State Beneficial Association. Mr. Krug has been engaged for the past five years in buying, selling and improving real estate, and has during that period erected several residences and substantial business blocks.

Adeodatus Correggio Jackson, chemist, drug and news dealer, Erie, Pa., was born in Buffalo, N. Y., July 4, 1836. He is a son of the late James and Mary Ann (Ball) Jackson, now living, aged 82, the former a native of New Jersey, and of English descent; the latter a native of Erie county, and a daughter of Sheldon Ball, jeweler, one of the earliest settlers in Erie. Sheldon Ball's ancestors were among the first settlers of the Old Dominion. His father and George Washington's mother were first cousins. James Jackson was a portrait painter of distinction, and, at one time numbered among his art treasures miniatures painted by Murillo, Titian, Correggio and Reubens. The Reubens miniature is now in the possession of his son, A. C. Jackson. James Jackson established an academy of fine arts at Baltimore, Md. He died from the result of an accident in 1846. A. C. Jackson was educated in Buffalo, N. Y., was variously employed in the Middle States, studied pharmacy and received his diploma in the State of New York. He came to Erie in 1857, and was for several years engaged in compounding and putting up a remedy of his own, known as Neuralgialine. In 1891 he established himself in the drug, news and stationery business at the corner of Twelfth and State streets, Erie, Pa. He is unmarried and resides with his mother, at 1211 State street.

Frank E. Franz, furniture dealer, Erie, Pa., was born at Lohram, Maine, Bavaria, May 8, 1840. He is a son of the late Michael and Katrina (Brunn) Franz. Michael Franz was a blacksmith and died in 1846. His widow came to this country in 1853 with her two children, Barbara and Frank, locating in Erie, where a daughter, Mrs. Katrina, wife of John Geist, a contractor, already resided. Frank supplemented the schooling he had already received in the Fatherland by a brief term in the schools of Erie, and was, at the age of 14, apprenticed to the trade of cabinet making with the late William Riblet. After mastering his trade he worked at it successively in Louisville, Chattanooga and Indianapolis, returning, after three years, to Erie, where for a time he worked for his brother-in-law, Joseph Zefferer, a furniture manufacturer, with whom, in 1863, he formed a partnership for the manufacture and sale of furniture, under the firm name of Zefferer & Franz. Two years later this partnership was dissolved by the withdrawal of Mr. Franz, who then became associated with August Reinholz in the same business, under the firm name of Franz & Reinholz. Upon the dissolution of this firm Mr. Franz became a partner with William Stark, in the firm of Stark & Franz, furniture manufacturers and dealers. Since Mr. Stark's retirement from the business, January 1, 1886, Mr. Franz has conducted it alone, his present location being at 1122 State street. He was married April 20, 1864, to Mary Ann, daughter of George W. Kuhn, then a shoe merchant of Erie, now a farmer of Harbor Creek township, Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Franz have five children, two sons, Charles and August, engaged in business with their father, and three daughters Anna, Amelia and Amanda. The eldest daughter, Anna, is the wife of Andrew Leib, an Erie merchant. The family resides at 213 East Seventeenth street, and are members of St. Mary's Church.

Burt F. Disbrow, of the drug firm of Disbrow & Suerken, Erie, Pa., born in Lockport, N. Y., July 30, 1871, is a son of William Fairbanks Disbrow and Isabella Cornelia (Griffithwaite) Disbrow, natives of New York, the former of Scotch-English and the latter of English descent. Mr. Disbrow, sr., was engaged in the cooperage business at Lockport for a number of years, and removed his family to Erie in January, 1894. Burt F. Disbrow was educated in the schools of Elgin and Corry, Pa., and then attended the pharmaceutical department of the university at Buffalo, graduating therefrom in May, 1892. Immediately thereafter he came to Erie and purchased a half interest in William Diefenbach's drug store, Eleventh and State streets, under the firm name of Diefenbach & Disbrow. In August, 1893, Mr. Diefenbach retired from the firm, and Mr. Otto C. Suerken became a member of the firm until July, 1895, since when it has been conducted by Mr. B. F. Disbrow. Mr. Disbrow married, June 12, 1893, Virginia, daughter of the late Thomas McManus, an old resident and business man of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Disbrow reside at 264 East Eleventh street.

Edward Hoffman, jeweler, Erie, Pa., was born October 27, 1844, in Loewenberg, Province of Silesia, Prussia. His parents were natives of Prussia, as were their ancestors as far back as the genealogy of the family is traceable. Edward received such education as was obtainable at the parochial schools of his native town, and, at the age of 14, was apprenticed to the watchmaking trade. After serving his apprenticeship of five years, he went to Dresden, Saxony, where he followed his business of watchmaking for one year, when, owing to the breaking out of the Prussian-Austrian war of 1866, and the affiliation of Saxony with Austria, he returned to his own country. At the conclusion of the war he went again to Dresden, where he resumed the watchmaking business at his former location. In 1867 Mr. Hoffman came to the United States to enter the employ (upon the recommendation of his old employer in Loewenberg) of the then firm of Jarecki Bros., jewelers, Erie, Pa., in whose service he remained for five years. In 1872 he visited his old home, and after a tour of some months of Continental Europe returned to Erie, and in conjunction with Mr. Herman T. Jarecki established on Peach street a branch establishment to the latter's State street store. This partnership was dissolved two years later, Mr. Hoffman purchasing Mr. Jarecki's interest, since which time he has conducted the business alone, and is now located at 1508 Peach street. Mr. Hoffman was married, May 20, 1875, to Olga, daughter of August Jarecki, of Erie. Two children were born of this marriage: Arwin, who died in 1889 at the age of 10, and Eulalia. The family reside at Peach and Twentieth streets, and are members of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Hoffman is a Republican, and has served one term as a member of the Select Council. He is an active member and baritone soloist of the Maennerchor, and a member of the order of Maccabees, Harugari, Fraternal Mystic Circle, Liedertafel and Protected Home Circle. Mr. Hoffman was one of the founders of the Maennerchor, and was secretary of the building committee which had charge of the erection of the spacious Maennerchor hall at State and Sixteenth streets.

Clark W. and Lester J. Zuck, of the Zuck Hardware Company, Erie, Pa., are members of the Zuck family, of Erie county, descendants of John Zuck, one of the pioneer settlers who came from Bedford county, Pennsylvania, and located in Mill Creek township, Erie county, in the latter part of the last century. He was of German descent, and intermarried with the Ebersole family, early settlers of Bedford county. John C. Zuck was the fifth child born of this union, and was married, September 22, 1853, to Martha Frey, of this county. They had four children, of whom three survive: Wayne E., married Morilla Moscher, who died in 1883, leaving one child; Lee M., who died in February, 1894; Clark W. Zuck, the second son of John C. and Martha (Frey) Zuck, was born August 1, 1857, in Mill Creek township, was married, September 21, 1881, to Oceana, daughter of John McKee; they have three children, Floyd, Bert and Arthur; he is proprietor of a large garden and fruit farm, four and one-half miles west of the city. Lester J. Zuck, the third son of John C. Zuck, was born September 1, 1869, in Mill Creek township, was married to Mary, daughter of the late Frank Henry, formerly of Harbor Creek township, at one time light-house keeper, and latterly of the Erie Dispatch. Wayne E. Zuck has charge of the home farm. Clark W. and Lester J. Zuck are the proprietors of the Zuck Hardware Company; the former resides in West Mill Creek township, the latter at the corner of Sixteenth and Peach streets.

John Henry Kalvelage, retired merchant and manufacturer, Erie, Pa., was born in Oldenburg, November 4, 1822, came to the United States when a boy, was engaged in business for a time in New York city, where he married Josephine Felix, a native of Bavaria, and located in Erie in 1850. Here he first obtained employment at the docks, then in Kennedy's brick kilns, on Twenty-sixth street, and then established a grocery and restaurant on East Eleventh street, at the same time acting as salesman for an Erie oil cloth firm. He was next in the employ of the Eagle Brewery, in which he afterwards purchased an interest, and later bought out his partner and ran the business alone until 1884, when he sold out to Jackson Koehler, its present proprietor. He then established a hardware store at the southwest corner of Peach and Twenty-fourth streets, where his sons and successors still carry on business. Mr. Kalvelage was a most useful member of the common council and school board of Erie for nine years. He was one of the founders of the St. Joseph's Society, and a member of the Saengerbund and Maennerchor. His wife died February 19, 1895, leaving seven children: Mary, wife of George Kern, foreman of the Eagle Brewery; John M., whose biography is contained in this volume; Catherine, wife of Frank Oberkirch, former general agent for the Pan-American Company, now general agent of the Central Sewer Company, and a resident of Erie; Rose, wife of Charles P. Deuser, and Joseph, Frank and Alois Kalvelage, the three sons and son-in-law being the successors to the hardware business at Twenty-fourth and Peach streets. Mr. Kalvelage resides on Twenty-fifth street, and is a member of St. Joseph's Church, of the board of trustees, of which he was a member for many years, and treasurer of St. Joseph's Society for twenty-five years. Mr. Kalvelage was for a number of years a stockholder and a member of the board of directors of the South Erie Iron Works, and was one of the organizers and directors of the German Fire Insurance Company of Erie.

Peter Wood, chief of the government weather bureau at Erie, Pa., born in Woodville, Prince George's county, Md., October 11, 1858, is a son of the late Peter and Harriet E. (Morton) Wood, natives of Maryland, the former of English and the latter of Scotch descent. Peter Wood, sr., was a planter, one of the trustees of the Charlotte Hall Military School, and during the war was in the United States service as examiner of war accounts in the comptroller's office, United States treasury department. He died in 1874; his wife survives and resides in Washington, D. C. Peter Wood, jr., was graduated from the Washington high school in 1872, spent the following three years in the National College of Pharmacy in Washington, and was engaged in the drug business in the city five years following his graduation as a pharmacist. In July, 1880, he was appointed to cadetship and ordered to a school at Fort Meyer, Va., where he remained until December of the same year, when he was assigned to duty as assistant weather observer in Erie, Pa. After five months' service as assistant he was placed in charge of the office for three months, and in June of the following year was given charge of the office. He remained in that position until May, 1883, when he was transferred to the chief office at Washington. Ten months later he was re-assigned to Erie at the request of citizens, and has ever since remained in charge of that office. Since Mr. Wood's occupancy of the position of weather bureau observer the duties of the office have been increased manifold. He now furnishes daily weather maps to eighty-five postoffices in Northwestern Pennsylvania, Western New York and Northeastern Ohio; duplicates display of the cold wave signals at the headquarters of the fire department, duplicates displays of the wind signals at the harbor entrance and Carnegie docks, and furnishes all newspapers of the city and throughout Erie and adjoining counties with daily reports and forecasts. An interesting incident in Mr. Wood's experience was the discovery one stormy evening in the fall of 1885 of the desperate position of the large propeller John S. Fay, that, with rudder lost, was at the mercy of the winds and waves during the heavy nor'wester, and was being driven onto the shores of the peninsula. Mr. Wood, from the signal tower, noted that the vessel was not in safe bounds, and his telescope revealed her helpless condition. He immediately went with tugs to her rescue, thereby unquestionably saving her from destruction. Mr. Wood has occasionally, by request, lectured upon meteorology and the workings of the weather bureau. It was largely through his personal efforts that Cherry street, between Sixth and Twelfth, was paved with asphalt. He is a Royal Arch and Scottish Rite Mason, is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and was district deputy of that order for a number of years. He is the commander of the American Legion of Honor, and was its representative to the grand council in Philadelphia in 1893. He was married March 22, 1883, to Mary, daughter of Adam Hamberger, a merchant of Erie. Mrs. Wood died, leaving one son, John G., a student at the Jackson school, Washington, D. C. Mr. Wood is a member and trustee of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Joseph Beyer, jeweler, Erie, Pa., was born March 18, 1856, in Hirschberg, Province of Silesia, Prussia, and comes of a race of watchmakers. He was educated in the public schools in Hirschberg, and then learned watchmaking in Loewenberg, near his native town. In 1875 he came to this country to enter the employ of Herman T. Jarecki, in Erie, Pa. He worked for Mr. Jarecki for three years, and was then given an interest in and charge of a branch store established in Bradford, Pa., where he remained for one year. Returning to Erie he embarked in the jewelry and watchmaking business for himself at 1508 Peach street, conducting business there until 1881, when he removed to his present location, Sixteenth and Peach streets. He was married October 22, 1879, to Rosa, daughter of the late Franz Siegel, an old merchant of Erie. Mr. Beyer is an active member of the Erie Liedertafel and Maennerchor.

Rev. James Madison Bray, pastor of Simpson M. E. Church, Erie, Pa., for the five years ending September, 1895, was born June 3, 1838. He is an adopted son of Rev. James Madison and Eliza (Matthews) Bray, natives of Hartford, Conn., and descendants of early English settlers of Boston, Mass. The father of Mr. Bray was John Bray (deceased), a brother of the Rev. J. M. Bray, sr. The former and his wife now reside in Jeddo, O., at the advanced age of 87, both having been born on the same day, December 24, 1807. Rev. James M. Bray, jr., prepared for college at Richmond, O., entered Franklin College, at Athens, O., where he took the freshman and sophomore years, and completed the junior and senior courses at the Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa., from which institution he was graduated in 1863, and received the degree A. M. in 1866. In 1863, prior to his graduation, he was received on probation in the Pittsburg conference, subsequently receiving elder's orders in that conference, and was transferred to the Erie conference and stationed at Dunkirk, N. Y. His ministerial labors have since been in the Erie conference. For eleven years he served within a radius of ten miles, being stationed at Sheridan, Silver Creek and Fredonia. Following this he was at Tidouete, and next at Parker's Landing. He was then for four years presiding elder of Franklin district, including parts of Warren, Venango, Butler and Armstrong counties. After one year at Warren, Pa., and two years at Union City, in 1890 he assumed the pastorate of Simpson Church, Erie, Pa. That congregation had a debt of $500 hanging over it, and worshipped in an old frame structure that was built in 1859. Rev. J. M. Bray first devoted his energies toward the cancellation of the congregation's indebtedness, and then strenuously urged and worked for the erection of a more commodious church edifice. As a result of his endeavors, there now stands upon the site of the original building, at the corner of Twenty-first and Sassafras streets, a handsome and commodious brick and stone structure, erected at a cost of $25,000. The church has a membership of 390, and an average Sunday-school attendance of 250. Simpson Church's Epworth League is a large and successful factor for good. Rev. Mr. Bray was married March 12, 1865, to Minnie, daughter of the Rev. J. E.

Chapin (deceased), late of Westfield, N. Y. Two children were born of this union: Frank C. Bray, born May 7, 1867, and Mary E. Bray, born June 19, 1870. Mrs. J. M. Bray died March 24, 1895. Frank C. Bray is unmarried; was for a time managing editor of the Erie Dispatch, and is now engaged in business in New York city. Mary E. Bray was married April 23, 1891, to Frank E. Wade, a professional musician and musical editor, of Cleveland, O. One son born of this union is Clarence E. Wade. Rev. J. M. Bray is a member of the Masonic order and the Odd Fellows.

Rev. Mr. Bray, after five years service as pastor of the Simpson Church, was in September, 1895, assigned to Mayville, N. Y., by the Erie conference, against the earnest protest of the Simpson Church congregation, who dearly loved their pastor and used every effort to retain him. Mr. Bray's work, while in charge of the Simpson Church, has never been excelled in material results (field considered) in this city.—[Ed.]

T. Howard MacQuerey, pastor of the First Universalist Church, Erie, Pa., was born near Charlottesville, Albemarle county, Va., May 27, 1861. He is a son of the late T. Howard and Sarah J. (Garland) MacQuerey, both natives of Virginia, the former of Scotch-Irish and the latter of English descent. T. Howard MacQuerey, sr., died in 1861; his wife survives and resides in Erie with her son, Howard. He received his early schooling in a parochial school near Charlottesville, from which, however, he was removed at the age of 13 on account of ill-health. For several years he assisted in the work upon the farm and was then, until his 20th year, engaged in mercantile pursuits in Washington, D. C. In 1880 he entered Norwood College, Nelson county, Virginia, and after a three years' course in academics entered the Episcopal Theological Seminary, near Alexandria, Va. He was graduated from that institution in June, 1885, was ordained deacon by Rt. Rev. George W. Peterkin, D. D., Bishop of West Virginia, in July of the same year, and took charge of the Episcopal Churches at Fairmont and Morgantown, W. Va. After eighteen months in this pastorate, he was called to the Episcopal Church of Canton, O., where he remained for five years. In the spring of 1889 he published his book, "The Evolution of Man and Christianity," in which he denied certain of the miracles. This resulted in his trial for heresy by the Ecclesiastical Court of the Episcopal Church in Northern Ohio, January 8, 1891. After more than two months' deliberation, two out of five judges voted for acquittal, and the remaining three for suspension from the ministry for six months, with the proviso that if during that time he should promise to be silent on the points in dispute he should be reinstated. At the end of six months, being unable to make the desired promise, he renounced the ministry of the Episcopal Church and entered that of the Universalist Church. In October of the same year he was called to the charge of the First Universalist Church of Saginaw, Mich., where he remained until December, 1893, thence coming to Erie, Pa., where he has since filled the pulpit of the First Universalist Church of this city. Rev. Mr. McQuerey is the author of "Topics of the Times," which treats of social, industrial and theological problems. He is also an occasional contributor to the Arctia, Popular Science Monthly, Belford's Monthly and other publications.

Dr. Sanford Dickinson, Erie, Pa., who was one of Erie's most loved and honored citizens, died at his residence on East Twenty-sixth street, February 28, 1881. He was born in Norwich, Shenango county, N. Y., September 7, 1806, and was a son of Josiah and Prudence (Taylor) Dickinson, the former of English and the latter of Scotch lineage. They settled in Springfield township, Erie county, some time in the twenties. He obtained his early education in the academy at Norwich, then taught school winters and worked out summers to earn money to complete his education. At the age of 24 years he began the study of medicine, and passed some time under the most excellent tutorage of Dr. Henry L. Mitchell, and was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city, in the class of 1832, and then for a short time practiced with Dr. Mitchell. While looking about for a place to engage in the practice of his profession, he visited Erie county, which he was quick to recognize as a desirable field of labor, and located at Watsburg, whence, after a few years, he removed to Erie. His practice grew steadily from the start, and he soon became one of the most prominent physicians in Northwestern Pennsylvania. He was a great student, and hence a man of profound medical knowledge, varied scholarly attainments and unusual general culture. To him is due the introduction of the alcoholic and opiate treatment in cases of poison by vipers, and puncture in the operations of dissecting, preparing and embalming. This treatment of such cases, which was first used by him in 1854, has since been quite generally adopted by the medical profession. In 1866 he, in company with his son, Mr. John S. Dickinson, purchased of J. F. Liddell & Bro., the large drug store on State street, of which Mr. Dickinson became sole proprietor two years after the death of his father. Since the death of Mr. John S. Dickinson, the business has been conducted by his widow, and is one of the most prosperous and thoroughly equipped stores of its kind in the city. About 1870 Dr. Dickinson had charge of the poor house patients of Erie county, to whom, together with the cases of infirm soldiers and marines of the county, he gave faithful attention for several years. Dr. Dickinson won fame as a medical practitioner; he was also fairly successful in the accumulation of this world's goods; but one of the impulses which lay closest to his heart was that of giving to the poor of the community in which he lived the benefit of the skill and means which it was his lot to possess. It has been often said that he was more solicitous for the care of patients from whom he expected no remuneration than for those who were amply able to provide every means. It was this noble characteristic of a solicitous and conscientious care for the sick and unfortunate that won the hearts of the community where his honorable and useful life was passed. He lived and died the recipient of the prayers and blessings of the poor. The Doctor was married in 1835 to Miss Rebecca Judson, of Watsburg, Pa., by whom he had two children, the late John S. Dickinson, of Erie, and Mrs. Celia Smith, of Pacific Grove, Cal. His first wife dying of fever, Dr. Dickinson was remarried in 1838 to Miss Harriett Maxwell, of Watsburg. The surviving children by this second marriage are: Miss Herprie K. Dickinson, who lives with her mother on East Twenty-sixth street; Ernestine A., Mrs. Henry Shenk, of Erie; Mr. Beverly N. Dickinson, of Quincy, Ill.; Caroline L.; Mrs. O. E.

George Hall

Crouch, of Erie; Alice M., Mrs. W. D. Janes of Saginaw, Mich.; Mr. Kingsley Dickinson, of Erie, and Minnie M., Mrs. Rev. Robert Painter, of Galva, Ill. Dr. Dickinson and family worshipped at the First Methodist Church, of which he was a member and a generous supporter. He was a Republican in his political views, but was never a seeker of public office or political honors.

John Sanford Dickinson, one of Erie's most popular citizens, died June 5, 1888. He was born in Watsburg, this county, April 6, 1837, and was a son of the late Dr. Sanford Dickinson, whose sketch appears in this work. He spent his boyhood, until 10 years of age, in the family of his uncle, a farmer in Springfield township, after which he came to Erie and completed his education at the Erie Academy. About the outbreak of the war he was engaged in the oil business in Canada, but, in 1862, when the Union was in peril, he came to the rescue. He enlisted in the navy at Erie, and went aboard the receiving ship, "Clara Dolson," at Cairo, Ill. He was later transferred to the "Indianola," which was captured by the Confederates in February, 1863. Mr. Dickinson remained a prisoner until the following May, a portion of the time in the horrible Libby prison, which will always hold an infamous place in the history of civil warfare. After being exchanged he went on board the United States steamer "Utah," as paymaster's clerk, and where he remained until June, 1864, when, on account of impaired health, he was honorably discharged. He then entered the Sixth Auditor's office in the Treasury Department at Washington, where he remained nearly two years. In May, 1866, he returned to Erie and engaged in business with his father, as is detailed in the sketch of the latter. Mr. Dickinson was married, April 27, 1864, to Miss Ellen M., daughter of Maj. Robert and Martha Ann (Talbot) Clarke, of Washington. This union was blessed with eleven children, three of whom died in infancy. The others were: Rebecca, Mrs. Charles E. Stratton, of Erie; Robert Clarke, druggist, of Erie; John Sanford, who died at the age of 14 years; George S., physician, Erie; Miss Jane M. and Harriett M. Dickinson; Charles Seymour, student in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, and Miss Cecelia Dickinson, who is still in school. Mr. Dickinson was a Master Mason, and a member of the G. A. R., K. of H., A. O. U. W., and was a Republican in his political views. The family worship at the Methodist Episcopal Church, and have resided at 428 East Sixth street since 1876.

Dr. H. A. Spencer was born in Warren county, Pennsylvania, August 29, 1828, and died in Erie, January 2, 1889. He was a son of the Rev. Matthias and Harriet (Smith) Spencer, the former a native of Connecticut, the latter of New York, and both of English descent. Rev. Matthias Spencer was a Methodist clergyman; removed from New York to Warren county, Pennsylvania, in 1825, and from thence to Wayne township, Erie county, in 1830. They had eight sons, of whom Dr. Spencer was the fifth. He was educated at the Waterford Academy and Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa. In 1848 he entered Cleveland (Ohio) Medical College, from which institution he was graduated in 1851. He practiced medicine at Waterford, Pa., until 1864, when he came to Erie, where he continued to reside, and was engaged in the practice of his profession throughout his life. He organized a corps of surgeons on the P. & E. R. R. in 1864, of which he was surgeon-in-chief up to the time of his death. He was for a number of years surgeon-in-chief of the medical staff of Hamot Hospital. In 1861 he was appointed pension examiner, and was medical superintendent of the Erie county infirmary for five years. He was married, in 1855, to Julia, daughter of J. L. Cook, railroad contractor, and native of Waterford, Erie county, Pa. Of the children born of this union five survive. They are: Mrs. Lena, wife of E. A. Sisson, an attorney at law, Erie; Mrs. Mary, wife of F. H. Thomson, of the Gorham Manufacturing Company, Providence, R. I.; Dr. Boyd C. Spencer; Thomas T., and Roy A. Dr. Boyd C. Spencer was graduated from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1889, practiced medicine with Dr. J. F. Hamilton, of Philadelphia, for one year, and then went to West Superior, Wis., where he was engaged in the practice of his profession for four years, during a part of which period he was county physician of Douglas county. He returned to Erie January 20, 1895, where he is now practicing medicine. Mrs. A. H. Spencer and sons reside at 130 West Eighth street.

James Henry Montgomery, M. D., Erie, Pa., was born in Buffalo, N. Y. His parents were natives of the Keystone State, and of Scotch origin, of a family whose origin is easily traced to 400 A. D. His father, Rev. W. W. Montgomery, was a minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He removed with his family from Buffalo to the western part of the State, where the subject of this sketch was placed in a private school and remained there until prepared to enter college. In 1877 he entered the academic department of Columbia College, where he was graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1881. He soon after entered the medical department of the same institution, then known as the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he was graduated as an M. D. in 1884. He then entered the Roosevelt Hospital as a member of the house staff, and was next appointed as assistant surgeon there, where he remained for two years. He came to Erie in 1886, and has been actively engaged in his profession ever since. He was surgeon in charge of the Hamot Hospital from 1888 to 1892. At present he is one of the attending surgeons of that institution. Dr. Montgomery has been an active member of the Erie County Medical Society for ten years. He is a member of several social clubs in Erie. In politics he has always been a Republican.

H. H. Foringer, physician and surgeon, Erie, Pa., was born at Brady's Bend, Armstrong county, Pa., March 24, 1854. He is a son of Joseph and Hannah (Barthart) Foringer, both natives of Armstrong county, and descendants of old American families. The father died May 28, 1892, and the mother now resides at Brady's Bend. They reared a family of eleven children, eight sons and three daughters, seven of whom are living. The doctor was reared in his native town and educated in the public schools and the Edinboro State Normal School. He began his medical studies with Dr. S. B. Hotchkiss, of Edinboro, as his preceptor. Later he attended the Western Reserve Medical College of Cleveland, O., where he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1883. He returned to Edinboro, and practiced his profession in conjunction with

Dr. Hotchkiss about eighteen months. He then went to Middleboro, Pa., where he successfully followed his profession until the winter of 1889, and after a general review of his medical studies in some of the Eastern Medical Colleges, he located in Erie in the fall of 1889, where he has since been successfully engaged in the general practice of medicine and surgery. Dr. Foringer was married June 11, 1885, to Miss Anna A., daughter of Richard and Lorinda (Strohn) Oweess, of Canada. They have one child, Owen H. The doctor is a member of the Erie County Medical Society, the K. of P. and the Masonic fraternity. The family are members of the Park Presbyterian Church.

A. Z. Randall, M. D., physician and surgeon, Erie, Pa., born in Cold Creek, Allegheny county, N. Y., October 12, 1840, is a son of Dr. Thomas Jefferson and Sarah C. (Wellman) Randall. The father was a native of New York, the mother of Vermont. Dr. Thomas Jefferson Randall was a graduate of Old Fairfeld College, State of New York. Dr. A. Z. Randall received his literary education in the State Normal School at Edinboro, and after completing a long course of study there commenced the study of medicine, with his father as preceptor, after which he attended two full courses of lectures at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor during the years 1862-3-4, and finally graduated honorably at that institution March 30, 1864. He then located at Wattsburg, Pa., where he practiced two years, thence came to Erie, and, with the exception of nearly five years' practice in Crawford county, two years at Union City, and nearly two years at Edinboro, has since been reputedly connected with the medical profession in Erie. He was appointed health officer of the borough of South Erie in 1866, and examining physician of pensioners in 1867, filling that important office until 1875. During 1867 and 1868 he was surgeon for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. at Union City, and was appointed vaccinating physician of the city of Erie in 1882. He was previously elected corner of the county in November, 1881, to serve three years, receiving a very flattering vote from his constituents, and the duties of which office he faithfully performed. He was married April 29, 1863, to Ellen Lucy Congleton, of Edinboro (since deceased), by whom he had three sons, Thomas Carlyle, Elmer E., and Grant A. (deceased). Dr. Randall next married, in 1889, Mrs. Ella Gough, of Harbor Creek, Erie county. He is an active member of the Maccabees and Protected Home Circle, being physician for Alpha Tent, No. 1, of the Maccabees, and Lois Circle, No. 151, Protected Home Circle. He is also medical examiner for Lounsbury Hive, No. 14, Ladies of the Maccabees. Politically he is a staunch Republican. In his chosen profession he is up with the times, and has an honorable reputation as a surgeon and physician and as a man.

Andrew McPherson, M. D., was born November 8, 1839, in the city of Lockport, N. Y., son of Andrew McPherson, from the city of Inverness, Scotland, and Deborah (Freeland) McPherson, of Dutch origin, her family having settled in Pennsylvania, from Holland, early in its history. He came to Erie in 1874, engaging in the practice of dentistry, which profession he had followed since 1862. In the year 1885 he graduated from the Hahemann Medical College and Hospital of Chicago, the largest homeopathic school in the world, and now practices both medicine and dentistry in his commodious and pleasant suite of offices on Peach street (1722). His wife was Miss Lovina Gleason, of Port Colbourne, Canada. Their four children are: A. H., a jeweler; William, a graduate of the Erie Business University, now taking a post graduate course; Florilla, also a graduate and post graduate student of the same school, and Lovina. They are Presbyterians in their religious belief. He is a Democrat. His family are closely identified with the history of our country, his maternal grandfather being a general in the Revolutionary war. Dr. McPherson is one of the founders of the Erie County Homeopathic Medical Society; also a member of the Alumni Association of the Hahemann Medical College.

Wallace R. Hunter, M. D., physician and surgeon, Erie, Pa., born at Stormstown, Center county, Pa., December 26, 1865, is a son of John and Elizabeth (Elder) Hunter, both natives of Pennsylvania. They reared a family of six children. The doctor was educated in the Pennsylvania State College, and in 1886 received an appointment to West Point, through the influence of the late Governor Curtin. After attending the Military Academy one year he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, where he was graduated May 1, 1890, and was immediately appointed resident physician of the University hospital, where he remained about eighteen months, when he was appointed physician at the State Hospital for the Insane at Warren, Pa., where he remained until 1896, when he was appointed acting assistant surgeon to the U. S. Marine Hospital service, and in 1894 he was appointed assistant surgeon of the 15th Reg., N. G. P.; appointed visiting surgeon to St. Vincent's Hospital in 1895. He is a member of the Masonic order and of the Elks.

Ira J. Dunn, M. D., Erie, Pa., is a native of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. He was born November 12, 1863, and is a son of Holton D. and Diantha (Curtis) Dunn, natives of Pennsylvania. Their family consisted of four children: Lizzie R.; Thomas D., a physician of West Chester, Pa.; Ira J., and Arthur D. Dr. Ira J. Dunn was educated in Crawford county. He received his college preparatory education in the public schools, and in 1881 entered Allegheny College at Meadville, graduating from that institution in the class of 1886. He then accepted the principalship of the Linesville public schools, where he remained one year, and, in 1887, resigned the same and entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania. At the end of the year he temporarily abandoned his medical studies and accepted the professorship of Latin in the First district normal school of West Chester. He remained there one year, when he returned to the University of Pennsylvania, and in 1891 graduated from the medical department. He then became assistant surgeon in the Miners' State Hospital, at Hazelton, Pa. He remained there about six months, when he resigned and began a special course on the eye. In March, 1892, he was appointed assistant physician at the State Hospital at Harrisburg, Pa. After nearly a year in that institution, he then returned to Philadelphia and took a special course at the Philadelphia Polyclinic for graduates in medicine, on the eye, ear, nose and throat. He then engaged in practice at Meadville, where he remained but a short time, and, in February, 1894, located in Erie. He was married October 21, 1893, to Miss Addie E., daughter of Frank and Frances Irene (Burnley) Phillips, of Meadville, Pa. The doctor is a member of the American Medical Association, Pennsylvania State Medical Association and the Erie County Medical Society, and politically is a Republican.

J. R. Phillips, M. D., Erie, Pa., was born near Meadville, Crawford county, Pa., January 18, 1851. He is a son of the late Bishop Tyler and Jane (Smith) Phillips, the former a native of Connecticut and of English descent, the latter of Pennsylvania birth and Scotch extraction. Bishop T. Phillips spent the most of his life as an agriculturist of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, where he died in 1876, surviving his wife six years.

Their son, J. R. Phillips, early in life determined upon the practice of medicine as a profession, and to that end, upon the completion of his general education and graduation, in June, 1879, began the study of medicine, under the preceptorship of Dr. E. C. Parsons, of Meadville, Pa. He then entered the Homeopathic Hospital College, of Cleveland, Ohio, from which institution he was graduated in 1883. The following four years he was engaged successfully in the practice of his profession at Corry, Pa. The next two years he spent abroad, and during this period availed himself of the very superior advantages afforded the student of medicine at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, of Berlin, Germany, which institution he attended for four terms. He then returned to the United States. December 3, 1889, Dr. Phillips settled in Erie city, immediately after his return from Germany. On the 20th day of June following he performed at the Hamot Hospital the first ovariectomy in the history of that institution. The patient was Mrs. Alonzo Perry, of Edinboro, Erie county. She was 62 years of age; the tumor weighed sixty pounds, and recovery was uninterrupted and complete. The doctor has operated in similar cases frequently since that time with the best success, and has acquired a very extensive practice. Dr. Phillips is a member of the Homeopathic Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania, the Erie County Homeopathic Medical Society and the Dispensary and Hospital Association of the city of Erie.

M. A. Wilson, M. D., Erie, Pa., physician and surgeon, was born in Westfield, N. Y., December 17, 1851. He is a son of the late Daniel and Eliza (Nixon) Wilson, both natives of the State of New York, the former of Scotch and the latter of Norman and Scotch-Irish descent. Daniel Wilson was a man of uncompromising integrity, a Christian gentleman (although not identified with any church) in all that the phrase implies and a valuable citizen. He died in October, 1883. His wife, who has devoted her life lovingly to the interests of her children, is now spending her declining years in comfort with her son, Dr. M. A. Wilson. John Wilson, father of the late Daniel Wilson, had five other sons, four of whom attained distinction in professional life. Two of these, Henry and David J. Wilson, survive and are physicians of eminence, the former a resident of Oberlin, Ohio, and the latter of Baird, Texas; the latter is now a member of the State Board of Health of Texas. Of the deceased brothers, John Wilson died in early manhood of a disease contracted while teaching school in Louisiana. Alexander Wilson was a graduate of Union College, located at Mineral Point, Wis., where he was engaged in the practice of law, and was for some years prior to his death Attorney General of the State of Wisconsin; George Wilson was one of the leading members of the bar of Chautauqua county, New York, and resided up to the time of his decease at Westfield, a son of the latter, Morton L. Wilson, is now studying medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. M. A. Wilson. Two aunts on the maternal side of the subject of these memoirs, the Misses Ann and Sarah J. Nixon, reside in the vicinity of Westfield, where they are engaged in the successful management of a model farm and vineyard. M. A. Wilson was educated in the academy of his native town, and after taking three full courses of medical lectures graduated from the New York Homeopathic Medical College in 1873. He located in North East, Erie county, Pa., in 1874, and was the pioneer homeopathic physician of that town. He remained at North East for eighteen years and built up a very large and lucrative practice. In 1883 the University of New York conferred upon him the regent's degree in medicine, which includes all systems and schools of medicine recognized by the laws of the State. In 1892 he moved to Erie, where he has been a most successful practitioner. He is now third in seniority of homeopathic practice in Erie county. Dr. Wilson is a member of the Northwestern New York Homeopathic Medical Society and is now president of the Erie County Homeopathic Medical Society. He is thoroughly in touch with modern medical advancement. He took the initial steps toward and labored indefatigably for the establishment of the Homeopathic Dispensary and Hospital Association, of Erie, enlisting the interest and support of his colleagues in the charity, and is justly entitled to a large share of the credit for its existence. Dr. Wilson is a physician of ripe experience and careful judgment, has studied deeply the principles of his school, and at the same time is liberal enough to apply other correct principles of medical practice wherever taught and demonstrated. He was married March 20, 1873, to Anna J., daughter of the late Benjamin Davis Eaton, an old and highly respected citizen of Johnstown, New York, and who was especially active in his identification with the interests of the First Baptist Church of that town. Dr. and Mrs. Wilson have two children, Elva Margaret and Bessie Eliza Wilson, the former a most promising art student and a student of the Erie high school, and the latter a student of the Erie Central school. The family reside at 140 East Eighth street. Dr. Wilson is a member of the Masonic Fraternity, the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Royal Templars of Temperance.

Willard Greenfield, M. D., Erie, Pa., is a native of Cayuga county, New York. He was born November 21, 1826, and is a son of Sherman and Nancy (Siek) Greenfield, both natives of New York. They reared a family of six children, of whom Willard is fourth. Dr. Greenfield was educated in the common schools of Erie county, and at Austintown, Ohio. He began the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. B. E. Phelps at Edinboro, Pa. After studying with him two years, he took a course in the medical department of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, then engaged in the practice of his profession in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, for two years. In 1865 he returned to Edinboro, where he practiced until 1883, when he went to Girard, Pa., where he practiced five years, and then removed to McKean, Pa., and two years later he located in Erie, where he has since been very extensively engaged in the practice of his profession. The winter of 1872-3 he spent at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York. Dr. Greenfield was married April 21, 1852, to Miss Cornelia M. T., daughter of David and Hannah Tyler, of Ann Arbor, Mich. They have five children: Frank G., Willard T., Kittie (now Mrs. Thomas McLaughlin, of Chicago); Minnie (now Mrs. Wm. Hawkins, of Cleveland, Ohio), and Kate E. (deceased). Politically the doctor is a staunch Republican. He is a member of the Masonic order, the I. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W.

Munson C. Smith, M. D., was born in Townville, Crawford county, Pa., December 28, 1864, son of Milton and Sarah (Steele) Smith, both Americans. Milton Smith is a well-known clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal Church, having preached in Fairview, this county, thirty years ago, when that town was a bustling prosperous village. He also has had the pastorate of the Simpson M. E. Church of Erie. A conscientious, earnest worker, he is respected and loved by all who know him. Munson C. first graduated at the academy at Mayville, N. Y., then went one year to Allegheny College at Meadville. He then attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, Md., graduating in the year 1887. Since that time he practiced his profession in Pittsburg for several years, and at last decided to settle in Erie, where he has since continued to engage in the practice of medicine, with decided success. He married July 6, 1886, Miss Carrie Lehman, of Erie, and they had one child, a son, Milton (deceased). The Doctor is a member of the Methodist Church, and in politics is independent, with perhaps a leaning towards the Republican party. A pleasant, genial gentleman, he has many warm friends, who wish him a successful professional career.

Philip Diefenbach, jr., alderman, Sixth ward, Erie, Pa., office 1816 Peach street, was born in Erie, November 21, 1840, a son of Philip and Catherine (Herzer) Diefenbach, natives of Bavaria and Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, respectively. His grandfather, Henry Diefenbach, was the father of six children, viz.: William (deceased), Louis (deceased), William (deceased), Charles (deceased), Philip (deceased), and Catherine, wife of Philip Zaun, of Erie. Philip Diefenbach, sr., received a common school education in his native country, and learned the tailor's trade. He came to America in 1833, and worked at his trade in New York city for five years, and in 1838, with his brother, Charles (who had landed in New York in 1834), he came to Erie, where he followed his trade for eight years, when he and his brother began the manufacture of oil cloths. They also conducted a clothing store in the Reed House block. In 1852 the two older brothers came to Erie, and William was taken into the partnership in both the oil cloth and clothing business. Louis became a farmer in Erie county. They conducted the oil cloth business until the breaking out of the late war, and continued the clothing business till 1868. In 1863 Philip had embarked in the grocery business on Peach street, near Sixteenth, and later he moved his store to 1816 Peach street, where he continued in business, latterly with his son, Philip, until 1873, when he retired. Mr. Diefenbach was a member of the St. John's German Evangelical Church, and was leader of the choir for many years. He was one of the founders of and active workers in St. Paul's German Reformed Evangelical Church, when it was organized, and maintained his active relation with that church until his death. He was the leader of its choir until 1852, when his nephew, Prof. Carl Diefenbach, took charge. Mr. Diefenbach was also a member of one of the first military and string bands organized in Erie, of which his brother, C. F., was the leader. The father of Philip Diefenbach, sr., Henry Diefenbach, came to America from Germany, after the death of his wife, and lived with his sons until his decease. Of his family, Philip, William and C. F. were in partnership in Erie for years; Louis was a farmer in Erie county; Catherine was the wife of the late Philip Zaun, and the mother of Philip, farmer, Mill Creek; Catherine, wife of Thos. Mohr, county commissioner; Margaret, deceased wife of Thos. Mohr; Jacob, farmer, Mill Creek; Mary, wife of Daniel Knobloch, Mill Creek; Elizabeth, widow of Henry Knobloch (deceased); George, farmer, Mill Creek; and Anna, at home. Philip Diefenbach, sr., died in March, 1887, his wife preceding him in death ten days. To them were born nine children, viz.: Margaret (deceased), Philip and John, twins (both deceased), Philip, jr., Catherine, Mrs. Lawrence Messenkopf, of Erie; Elizabeth, keeps house for her brother, Philip; Charles, who was a master mechanic of railroad shops in Port Huron, Mich., and is now superintendent of a marine wrecking company; William (deceased), and Margaret (deceased). William Diefenbach, Philip, sr.'s brother, was married to Elizabeth Herzer (sister of Philip, sr.'s wife), and they were the parents of seven children, of whom Carl was the first born. Carl was for a number of years teacher in the German school in Erie, and was also a prominent musician and leader of singing societies; he was one of the first leaders of the German singing societies in Erie, and was for many years director of the Erie Liedertafel, and later of the Erie Maennerchor; he is organist of St. John's German Lutheran Church. Philip, jr., received his education in the public schools of Erie, and when 13 years of age entered his father's employ in the oil cloth factory, where he remained until the close of the factory in 1861. He lived in Erie for eighteen months, when he went to Corry, Pa., and opened a grocery, which he conducted until 1871, when he sold out, and returning to Erie entered the grocery store previously conducted by his father, at 1816 Peach street; here he continued, until 1873, when he was elected alderman for the Sixth ward, as a People's candidate, and has since devoted himself to the duties of that position. Mr. Diefenbach is a member of St. Paul's German Evangelical Church, of which his father was one of the founders. He is a member of the Harugaris, and in politics is a Republican. He has built himself a cosy office adjoining the old homestead, where he was reared and has lived most of his life; his sister, Elizabeth, is his housekeeper, and lives with Mr. Diefenbach.

Christian Swaley, alderman, 926 State street, Erie, Pa., was born in Manheim township, Lancaster county, Pa., August 9, 1827, son of Christian and Catherine (Shank) Swalley, both natives of Pennsylvania; the former, who died in 1880, was a farmer by occupation, and the latter survived till 1892. Mr. Swalley's great-grandfather came from Switzerland to Pennsylvania in 1750, as did also his great-grandfather on his mother's side. His father removed from Lancaster to Erie county in 1835. The family consisted of nine children: Levi, a farmer; Christian, alderman; Abraham, farmer; Samuel, shoemaker; Joseph W., merchant; Richard B., laborer; Edward S., merchant, and Harriet (deceased). Christian Swalley was educated in the public schools, and followed the shoemaker's trade from 1847 till 1869 in Fairview borough; in 1860 he became a merchant and was also postmaster of Fairview borough, continuing till 1865, when he went on the road as a traveling salesman. In company with P. Minnie, he next engaged in the grocery business from 1865 to 1873, when he became interested in the wholesale coffee, tea and spice trade. In 1876 he was elected alderman of the Third ward and at the expiration of his term was re-elected, and is still serving in that capacity. Mr. Swalley was married September 23, 1850, to Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Anna (Roland) Heiss, both natives of Lancaster county, the former of English and the latter of German extraction. Two children resulted from this union: W. W. Swalley, educated in the public schools and Erie Academy, an engineer on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., and who was united in marriage to Miss Ella Grace; and Emma F., wife of E. L. Cushman, proprietor of "The Corner" restaurant. The family attend the Methodist Church. Mr. Swalley is a member of the Masonic order, belonging to Chapter, Council, Commandery, the Lodge of Perfection and the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Pittsburg, Pa.; he is also a member of the Mystic Shrine, the A. O. U. W. and the E. A. U. In politics he is a Republican; served as school director from 1856 till 1862; was a constable in 1855; county coroner from 1885 till 1888; member of the city council from 1872 till 1875, and alderman from 1876 to date.

F. S. Phelps, editor of the Erie Daily Times, Erie, Pa., was born in Dalton, Mass., October 25, 1855, son of E. N. and Eleanor (Van Bergen) Phelps, both natives of Massachusetts, and of English and German extraction respectively. E. N. Phelps was an architect and master mechanic. He died in Massachusetts in 1870. The mother died in 1853. The family consisted of eight children, of whom F. S. Phelps was the seventh. He received a common school education in Dalton, and while attending the high school, at the age of sixteen, quit to go to Holyoke and learn a trade. At the end of two years he went to Philadelphia to clerk in a clothing store. After four years of this employment he established the Record at Smyrna, Delaware, which he edited for three years. In July, 1884, he came to Erie, and first found employment as a reporter on the Herald, later becoming advertising manager. He next took charge of the Graphic and Observer, and in February, 1894, a consolidation of the plant with the Times took place, Mr. Phelps becoming editor the same year.

Martin Doll, one of Erie's old and respected German citizens, was born in Neugronau, province of Hesse-Nassau, Prussia, May 27, 1812, a son of Cas-per and Mary (Schtemmel) Doll, both natives of Hesse-Nassau. They reared a family of four sons: John (deceased), Casper (deceased), Conrad, resides in Erie, and Martin. Mrs. Doll departed this life June 29, 1814, aged 42 years. Casper Doll for his second wife married Anna M. Zell, and to this union was born one son, George, who is a farmer in Indiana. Casper Doll came to America in 1837, accompanied by his wife and three sons, George, Casper and Martin, and located in Mill Creek township on a farm, where he died February 22, 1866, aged 91 years, having survived his wife ten years and nineteen days. Martin Doll received a common school education in his native country and learned the trade of a shoemaker. He was 25 years of age when he landed in the United States in 1837. He came to Erie and went to work for his brother, Conrad, who had preceded the family to America four years, and opened a shoe shop in Erie. He worked for his brother till 1851, when he went into partnership with him, continuing till 1854, when Conrad retired, on account of poor health, and Martin took as a partner Fred. Diehl, and continued the business on South Park Row until 1865, when he severed his connection with Mr. Diehl, and moved to 1293 State street, where he conducted a shop till 1882, when he retired. He married, July 29, 1838, Miss Anna M., daughter of John Frickhorn, of Erie, a native of Hesse-Nassau, Prussia. To this union were born four children: Margaret, Mrs. John Schabacker, of Erie; John, a druggist of Erie; Conrad, a blacksmith, Erie; and Elizabeth, widow of Martin Schabacker. She keeps house for her father, and is the mother of four children: Ellen (deceased), Ida, Marian and Elmer. Mrs. Martin Doll departed this life March 11, 1888, aged 75 years. The family are members of the German Evangelical Church, and in politics Mr. Doll is a Republican. He resides at 1205 State street, where he owns considerable property. He is a remarkably well-served man, and though past 83 years of age, he is as active and hearty as a man of 30.

John Doll, 1512 Peach street, one of Erie's well-known and successful druggists, was born in Erie, May 30, 1842, a son of Martin Doll. He received a common school education, and in February, 1857, accepted a position in a dry goods store and followed clerking till September, 1866, when he became a partner of H. L. Wilkins in the drug business, at 1512 Peach street, continuing to the death of Mr. Wilkins, in 1881, since which time Mr. Doll has conducted the business. He was married, September 4, 1866, to Miss Margaret C. E., daughter of the late Dr. H. L. Wilkins, of Erie. They attend the First M. E. Church. Mr. Doll is a 32d degree Mason. He was appointed school director, serving one year, then elected to the same office, serving three years. He is one of Erie's sound and successful business men. Mr. Doll resides at 252 West Tenth street, where he built a modern home in the spring of 1896.

Horace C. Hall, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church, corner of Fifth and Peach streets, Erie, Pa., was born in Cortland county, New York, March 24, 1858. He received his early education in the public schools of his birthplace, later attended and graduated at Reid Institute, Clarion county, Pennsylvania, then he took a thorough course in theology at Bucknell University at Lewisburg, Pa., from whence he graduated in 1882, and was ordained pastor of the Sharon (Pa.) Baptist Church August 3d, of the same year. In 1886 he founded the Protected Home Circle, a popular fraternal insurance society, of which he has since been supreme president. March 21, 1888, a Christian and undenominational academical school, under Baptist control, was incorporated as Hall Institute, at Sharon, Pa., in honor of Dr. Hall. After nearly nine years in pastoral charge at Sharon, Pa., Dr. Hall was called to Pittsburg, from whence he came to Erie, and took charge of the First Baptist Church July 3, 1892, where his efficient work speaks for itself. August 26, 1872, Dr. Hall was united in marriage to Miss Dora E. Post, of Centerville, Crawford county, Pa. They have two children, Viola E., aged 12 years, and Horace Leroy, aged 10 years.

H. M. Totman, of the firm of Totman & Jacobson, carriage manufacturers, corner of French and Twelfth streets, Erie, Pa., was born at Thomaston, Conn., February 18, 1853. He is a son of Asahel C. and Martha (Adkins) Totman, the former a native of New York, and the latter a native of Connecticut. The father was superintendent for several years for the well-known Seth Thomas Clock Company. H. M. Totman was the eldest in a family of fourteen children. He was reared and educated in East Bloomfield, Ontario county, N. Y., and when a young man served an apprenticeship at carriage-trimming, which he has since made his chief occupation. In the spring of 1885 he engaged in the carriage manufacturing business at Meadville, Pa., and formed a partnership with Mr. Jacobson, which was successfully conducted until March, 1893, when he came to Erie, and the firm has since carried on a very extensive business. Mr. Totman was married April 19, 1876, to Miss Belle, daughter of John W. and Mary A. (Parker) Thompson. To this union were born seven children, Georgia, Norma, Juanita, Winnie, William, James and Edward. Politically Mr. Totman is a Republican. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church, and he is a member of the P. H. C. and K. O. T. M.

W. E. Hayes, senior member of the firm of W. E. Hayes & Co., Erie, Pa., was born in Greene township, Erie county, Pa., April 22, 1846. He is a son of Lester and Mary (Graham) Hayes, the former a native of Granby, Conn., of an old New England family of Scotch descent. The latter was a native of Erie county, Pennsylvania, and of Scotch-Irish descent. Lester Hayes walked from Granby, Conn., in 1818, to Erie county, when he was 18 years of age. He remained a short time, when he returned to his native town on foot. Two years later he came back to Erie county, accompanied by his brother, Martin, a minister, who later went to Wisconsin, where he died. Lester Hayes followed farming in Greene township, where he settled on his return to Erie county, until the time of his death, which occurred June 19, 1869. The mother died November 4, 1884. They were the parents of eight children: Armina J., married George J. Russell, Erie, Pa.; Myron A. (deceased), Milton (deceased), Calvin C. and Samuel C. (twins), the former a retired farmer at Wesleyville, Pa., and the latter an attorney-at-law, Chicago, Ill.; Eleanor (deceased), Henry H. (deceased) and W. E., who was reared on his father's farm in Greene township, where he received a common school education, and followed farming until he was 33 years of age, when he came to Erie and entered into a partnership with J. E. Patterson, under the firm name of Fatterson & Hayes, house-furnishers, also galvanized cornice manufacturers. This firm continued from 1879 till 1886, when they dissolved partnership, Mr. Hayes taking the house-furnishing department, and Mr. Patterson taking the galvanized cornice works. Shortly after that Mr. D. W. Nason joined Mr. Hayes in the formation of the present firm. They have constantly been increasing their business until they have a complete house-furnishing goods establishment, which is the only one in the city. Their business occupies three large stores, including Nos. 917, 919 and 921 State street. Mr. Hayes was married September 15, 1870, to Miss Mary Adelle, daughter of Capt. Thomas and Emily (Smith) Perrin. The father was a captain on the lake for several years and now resides with Mr. Hayes, and is 84 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes have three children, Clemmna B., a graduate of the University of Michigan, class of '93; Arba W., clerk in his father's store, and Gertrude A. Mr. Hayes served as assessor in Greene township several terms, and justice of the peace two terms. He has been elected to the office of county auditor three terms, and has always been a staunch Republican. The family are members of the Central Presbyterian Church, of which he is an elder.

Edwin S. Rockafellar, vice-president and general manager of the Hollands Manufacturing Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Mechanicsburg, Pa., April 28, 1856, and is a son of John M. and Sarah (Hoffman) Rockafellar, natives of Cumberland and Lancaster counties, Pennsylvania, and of early Holland ancestry. His father, a printer by trade, and later a real estate agent, reared a family of eleven children, five of whom are living, and of whom Edwin S. is the second. He received his early education in the public schools of his native city, and at the age of 13, found employment in a hardware store, where he remained five years. He then took a course in Eastman's Commercial College, after which he secured a position as book-keeper in Pittsburg, remaining five years. In the meantime he had become interested in the firm of John B. Harker & Co., jobbers in hollow ware, and also kept the books of that concern. In 1881 Mr. Harker and he came to Erie and took full control of the hollow ware department of the Selden & Griswold Manufacturing Company. After one year Mr. Harker withdrew and Mr. Rockafellar continued the business alone. In 1887 he began the manufacture and sale of natural gas burners, which were made by contract with the Griswold Manufacturing Company. In 1890 the Hollands Manufacturing Company was incorporated, with Caleb Hollands, president; E. S. Rockafellar, treasurer and general manager; H. L. McWhorter, secretary and treasurer, and K. B. Hough, superintendent. The plant is located at 325 West Twelfth street, and is 150 x 200 feet. Besides the natural gas burners, they now manufacture vases and plumbers' machines and tools. Mr. Rockafellar was married, September 15, 1875, to Miss Mary A. Boileau, of Harrisburg, Pa. They have one child, Lawrence S. Mr. Rockafellar is a Republican in his political views, and was elected a member of the Common Council in 1890, serving until 1894, when he was elected a member of the Select Council. In 1892 he was chosen president of the Common Council, which position he held for one year. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Elks and the A. O. U. W.

Robert B. Hough, Erie, Pa., superintendent of the Hollands Manufacturing Company, was born in Brockville, Ontario, Canada, March 22, 1858, and is a son of John and Ellen (Rogers) Hough, natives of Canada and England, respectively. When Robert was 13 years old the family removed to Erie, so the greater part of his education was received in his adopted city. He learned the trade of machinist at the Erie City Iron Works, where he remained six years. Entering the employ of the Stearns Manufacturing Company, he remained three and one-half years, when he became chief machinist for the Griswold Manufacturing Company, and four years later took the position of superintendent. In 1890 he assisted in organizing the Hollands Manufacturing Company, of which he is the second largest stockholder. Mr. Hough was married, May 17, 1888, to Miss Kate Anthony, of Erie. They have four children: Robert Lay (deceased), John Kenneth, Richard Caleb and Margaretta Ellen. He is a member of the Masonic order, is a Republican in his political inclinations, and was a member of the Common Council of Erie from 1888 to 1890. Mr. and Mrs. Hough attend St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Caleb Hollands, foreman of the molding department of the Griswold Manufacturing Company, Erie, Pa., is a native of England, and was born August 28, 1857. He is a son of John and Elizabeth (James) Hollands, of Sussex county, England. In the family there were six children, four of whom are older than Caleb. Reared and educated in his native land, in 1854 he emigrated to America, settled at Westfield, N. Y., and served an apprenticeship at the miller's trade at that place, and later took full charge of the iron department for the Townsend Lock Company, which position he held for ten years. In 1881 he came to Erie and entered the employ of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, where he worked two years, when he entered the employ of the Griswold Manufacturing Company as foreman of the iron department, which position he now holds. He is also president of the Hollands Manufacturing Company. Mr. Hollands was married in 1857 to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of William and Elizabeth Strain, natives of Ireland. To this union were born two children, Sarah E. (now Mrs. George Hale, of Westfield, N. Y.), and John C., traveling representative for the Griswold Manufacturing Company. Mrs. Hollands departed this life May 28, 1893. Mr. Hollands is a member of the M. E. Church, the Masonic order, and politically is a Republican.

Tobias Meyerhoefer, broker, Erie, Pa., was born in Metzingen, Wurtemberg, Germany, October 14, 1850, and is a son of John G. and Marie (Vockley) Meyerhoefer, who came to the United States in 1854 and located in Erie. The family consisted of five children: Tobias, J. George (commercial agent for the Texas Central and Southern Pacific R. R.'s, with headquarters at Waco, Tex.), John (deceased), Mary (deceased), Elizabeth and Caroline. Mr. Meyerhoefer was educated in the public schools of Erie and the Erie Academy; he also attended several private German schools, and completed his education in Cook's Commercial College, Erie. At the age of 15 years he began the study of telegraphy with the Erie and Pittsburgh R. R. Company. He was then variously employed by the Philadelphia and Erie and the Erie and Pittsburgh R. R. Companies, the Western Union Telegraph Company, and in filling other positions. From 1870 to 1872 he was train dispatcher for the St. Louis and San Francisco R. R. Company at Little Washington and Jefferson City, Mo., as train dispatcher. He was also train dispatcher of the St. Louis and South-eastern, the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern. From 1872 to 1873 he was in the employ of the Missouri Pacific R. R. Company. In 1876 he came to Oil City, Pa., where he accepted a position as book-keeper with the Standard Oil Company, with whom he remained four years. From 1880 to 1881 he acted as chief clerk to the superintendent of maintenance of way of the Pan-Handle R. R., and then for five years took reports and was chief operator for the Western Union Company at Wheeling, W. Va. In 1886 he came to Erie and took the press report for the Erie Dispatch. Mr. Meyerhoefer engaged in the brokerage business in 1887 in the Exchange Building, removing to the Reed House Block, where he has since continued. In 1894 he organized and became part owner of the Erie City Machinery Company, now known as the Lake City Machinery Company, which is one of the many progressive institutions of which Erie is so justly proud. Mr. Meyerhoefer was married December 25, 1882, to Mary E. Kelly, of New York city. He is a member of the National Union and of the Merchants' and the Liedertafel clubs, the Maennerchor Society, and is a Republican in his political affiliations.

Nelson Baldwin, Collector of Customs of the port of Erie, is a descendant of Nathaniel Baldwin, who was one of a colony that emigrated from Buckinghamshire, England, in the year 1638, and settled in Milford, Conn. The late Judge C. C. Baldwin, of Cleveland, O., in his "Baldwin Genealogy," says: "An unusual number of the descendants of Nathaniel have been eminent, and the family generally of high respectability." Among others he mentions Henry, Judge of the U. S. Supreme Court, who settled at Erie in the early part of the century, and whose second wife was a daughter of Andrew Eliott, the civil engineer, who laid out the city; the late Henry P., Governor of Michigan and U. S. Senator; Abraham, Governor of Georgia and U. S. Senator; Simon Baldwin Chittenden, M. C., and Ruth, wife of the famous Joel Barlow, Minister to France. Several of the descendants of Nathaniel bore an honorable part in the struggle for Independence. There were five Baldwins in the Milford colony, all of whom were related to each other as brothers or cousins. The mother of Nelson Baldwin was a Derbyshire, a descendant of an English family which settled in Southern New York in the early part of the last century. She is still living at Sing Sing, N. Y. She married William, who died in 1857. Of their children, three daughters and one son (Nelson) survive. He was born at Harrison, Westchester county, N. Y., February 28, 1846, removing in infancy to Sing Sing, his father having been appointed an officer in the State prison at that place. He was educated in the public schools, learned the trade of a printer and worked at it in several places, but the greater part of the time at White Plains, N. Y., where he commenced his editorial work. Returning to Sing Sing in January, 1868, he established the Democratic Register, a weekly paper, which he published successfully for nearly five years. In October, 1872, his office, together with about twenty-five other business places, in one of which he also had an interest, was totally destroyed by fire, nothing being saved but the books. He re-established the paper, but two months later sold it, and in February, 1878, came to Erie, having been offered employment on the Morning Dispatch as telegraph editor and foreman of the composing room. In December, 1878, he was made managing editor of the Dispatch, which position he held until April, 1882, when he accepted the managing editorship of the Erie Evening Observer. In February, 1885, he became editor-in-chief of the Erie Herald, which position he resigned on December 8, 1893. Without exception his connection with journalism was longer than that of any other newspaper man now living in Erie. On February 18, 1869, he was married to Miss Sarah E. Kowe at Yorktown, N. Y. They have six children, three daughters and three sons, as follows: Anna M., Minnie, Evelyn R., Nelson, Jr., William Harrison and Thaddeus A. The second daughter, Minnie, is an artist of bright promise. Mr. Baldwin was one of the best trained journalists in the profession. As a writer on tariff subjects he acquired more than a local reputation, much of his work having found a place in papers all over the country. A careful and forcible writer and pleasant and genial in his ways, Mr. Baldwin is, on the other hand, of a retiring nature and modest to a fault. He was appointed collector of the port of Erie by President Cleveland and entered upon the discharge of the duties of that office on December 8, 1893.

Frank Asbury Mizener, wholesale dealer in coal and iron, Erie, Pa., was born in Millinburg, Union county, Pa., May 27, 1845. He is a son of the late Rev. David and Elizabeth (Zellers) Mizener, the former a native of New Jersey, the latter of Pennsylvania, and both of German descent. Rev. David Mizener was for more than forty years a member of the Erie Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died in August, 1886, age 76 years, at the residence of his son, the immediate subject of these memoirs. His widow survives and resides in Bradford, Pa. Frank A. Mizener received his initial schooling in the public schools of his native town, attended at the Waterford Academy, and completed his education in the Edinboro Normal School. His first business connection was with Burtiss Bros., oil producers of Titusville, Pa., with whom he remained for two years, thence going to New York, where he was engaged in the oil business until 1871. In October of the latter year he located in Erie, where he was engaged in the insurance business until 1876, when he disposed of his insurance interests to Walter Scott, and embarked in business as a wholesale dealer in bituminous coal, doing a mining and shipping business from mines located in Mercer and Butler counties, Pennsylvania, in which trade he has ever since been and is still engaged. Mr. Mizener is a stalwart Democrat and has long been active in his identification with the interests of his party in Erie county. During the first Congressional campaign of Hon. W. L. Scott, in 1884, Mr. Mizener was chairman of the Democratic city committee. In 1886 (Mr. Scott's second Congressional campaign), Mr. Mizener was chairman of the county committee, and again in 1891, when the Democrats elected E. C. Siegel, their first sheriff in thirty-four years, Mr. Mizener led the campaign as chairman of the county committee. He was elected mayor by councils to fill the unexpired term of Hon. Frank F. Adams, 1896-7. He is now (1895) a member of the Erie board of fire commissioners. Mr. Mizener is a valued and valuable citizen, imbued with that progressive public spirit that is essential to the healthy growth of a community. He has for years been a member of the Erie Board of Trade, and was presiding officer of that body in 1886. He was married October 25, 1865, to Ellen R., daughter of the late Dr. Tolfree, of Augusta, Ga. Four children born of this marriage survive: Mortimer H., Mason P., Miss Nellie T. and Alice B. Mizener. Mortimer H. Mizener is associated with his father in business, married Pauline, daughter of P. Druke, of Shakopee, Minn., and has one child, Frank A. Mizener. Mason P. Mizener is in the superintendent's office of the N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R. Mr. and Mrs. Mizener reside at the southeast corner of Sixth and Sassafras streets, Erie, and are members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Mizener was one of the board of trustees for six years. Mr. Mizener is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the B. P. O. E., and was for seven years a member of the Board of Directors of the N. Y., C. & St. L. railroad.

Richard T. Brown, one of Erie's enterprising manufacturers and ex-president of the Select Council of Erie, was born in Franklin township, this county, October 8, 1859, and is a son of Thomas and Hannah (Jordan) Brown, natives of Ireland. His parents came to the United States in 1826 and located near Lockport, N. Y., where they remained about five years, and then removed to Ravenna, Ohio. After a residence of six years in Ohio they came to Franklin township, where they purchased a tract of 166 acres of the Holland Land Company. This was when the county was new, and they were obliged to clear a spot upon which to build a log house. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Brown's parents were among the sturdy pioneers who converted the unbroken wilderness into happy homes and productive farms. The family consisted of eight children: Edward, John, Michael, Catherine, William, Hannah (deceased), Ann (deceased) and Richard T. The family coming to Erie in 1866, Mr. Brown received his education in the public schools of this city. At an early age he entered the office of the Erie Gazette to learn the printer's trade, which he followed about ten years. He then learned the machinist's trade with the Bay State Iron Works, where he remained four years. In 1884 he, in partnership with C. F. and J. L. Hirt, founded what is known as the Brown Folding Machine Company, for the purpose of manufacturing the folding machine which had been invented and patented by Mr. Brown. Four years later the Messrs. Hirt sold their interest to Mr. Wellington Downing, who became sole proprietor January 1, 1894, Mr. Brown becoming one of the proprietors of the Erie City Machinery Company. This concern manufactures a new and improved folding machine, also invented by Mr. Brown, and the Erie mower. They also do a general jobbing and machinery repairing business. The Erie mower is a high grade, light-draft, changeable-speed machine, which is fast becoming a favorite with agriculturists. Mr. Brown was married September 12, 1880, to Miss Anna J., daughter of Robert and Ellen (Strain) Johnson, residents of Westfield, N. Y., and natives of Scotland. This happy union has been blessed with two children, Lee Anna and Catherine Maude. Mr. Brown is a fourteenth degree Mason, a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Elks and the Royal Arcanum. In national issues he is a Democrat, but in local and municipal politics he throws aside party ties and is governed only by what he thinks is for the best interests of the community. This fair and unbiased method of treating public affairs has made him the choice of the people for more offices than he has been able to accept. He has, however, taken time from his active business to serve his city two years as a member of the common and six years as a member of the Select Council and has faithfully filled the position of president of both of these bodies.

J. Bryce

Bailey P. Nagle, secretary and treasurer of the Pennsylvania Boiler Works, Erie, Pa., was born in Buffalo, N. Y., September 14, 1868, and is a son of Mr. T. M. Nagle, whose sketch appears in this work. He received his education in the public schools of Erie, Pa., and Omaha, Neb., and the Erie high school. He was employed in his father's business, and has held his present position since the Pennsylvania Boiler Works (of which his father and he are almost sole owners) was incorporated in 1890. The plant is located on Twelfth street, east of East avenue. The main building is 500 by 140 feet, besides the auxiliary buildings. The foundry, built in 1892, is 250 by 70 feet. The capacity of the works is enormous. Mr. Nagle was married October 11, 1890, to Miss Lillian Mallery, of Erie. They have two children, Lawrence and Douglas. Mr. Nagle is not an active politician, but is in sympathy with the principles of the Republican party.

Daniel McMahon, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., was born at Jackson Station, Erie county, January 10, 1859, and is a son of Michael McMahon, who came to America from Kirlush, Ireland, about 1851, landing in Quebec, and locating in Erie about two years later. The family consisted of six children: Bridget, John, Daniel, Patrick, Catherine A. and Mary F. Daniel attended the primary schools, and was a student at the academy for a few months, up to the age of 12 years, when he engaged in the merchant marine service, first as a boy on a sailing vessel, followed by service on the United States revenue cutter "Commodore Perry" three seasons, and then on the United States steamship "Michigan" two years, when he again entered the merchant marine service. During this time he had been a careful student, and having qualified himself, passed a critical examination before the United States examining board at Buffalo, and was licensed as a pilot for the lakes, from Ogdensburg to Duluth. In 1880 he was licensed as a second mate, and was employed by the Goodrich transportation Company between Milwaukee and Grand Haven, and later became mate. In 1882 he was appointed weighmaster at the Anchor Line dock, Erie. The following year he accepted a position as bookkeeper for John R. Cooney, and served in that capacity until December 2, 1883, when he was appointed by Governor Pattison as alderman of the Fourth ward, and unanimously confirmed by a Republican Senate. At the next election he was elected in a strongly Republican ward, his plurality over his leading opponent, a veteran attorney with a war record, being 93. Of his administration as sole magistrate in the ward, it can be said that so fair and impartial were his investigations and decisions that not a jury trial was ever demanded. He succeeded in settling many suits, effecting reconciliations and having prosecutions withdrawn, thereby saving much litigation. During this time he was an earnest student of the law, studying under the preceptorship of F. F. Marshall, Esq., and was admitted to practice in 1896. In politics Mr. McMahon is a Democrat, and served as secretary of the Democratic city committee for six years. He was united in marriage, May 6, 1890, to Miss Mary J., daughter of John and Margaret (Kirk) Leyer. Her father was a native of Germany and her mother of Irish parentage. The union has been blessed with one child, Agnes. Mr. and Mrs. McMahon are members of the Catholic Church. He is an active member of the Catholic Benevolent Society, and is a past chancellor of that organization.

Rev. Peter M. Cauley, pastor of St. Patrick's pro-Cathedral parish, Erie, Pa., was born in Rochester, N. Y., December 18, 1855, and is a son of Peter and Catherine (McKensey) Cauley. His parents are natives of Ireland, but came to this country before marriage, which took place in Portage, N. Y.; they now reside with Father Cauley. Mr. Cauley followed the business of quarryman, but in 1858 he removed to McKean county, Pennsylvania, and engaged in farming, where he remained until 1894, when he came to Erie. The family consists of ten children: Terry (foreman in the lumber woods for Col. Kane, of McKean county, Pennsylvania); Rev. Peter M., Winifred and Mary A. (twins), the former now Sister Bernardetta, of St. Francis Asylum, Buffalo, N. Y., and the latter the wife of Mr. Daniel Crowley, of Turtle Point, Pa., and the mother of nine children; Rosa, Sister Bernardine, also of St. Francis Asylum; John, who is engaged in farming at Turtle Point; Rev. Joseph M., who was educated at St. Bonaventure's College, ordained December 25, 1893, and is now assistant at St. Patrick's parish; Stephen, a student in St. Bonaventure's College; Charles, a student in the Erie Business University, and Cassie, a pupil in Villa Marie. Father Cauley received his early education in the public schools of McKean county, Pennsylvania, and his philosophy and theology in St. Bonaventure's College, where he matriculated in 1879, and from which he was graduated in 1887. He was ordained in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Erie, July 24, 1887. He was then assistant at Titusville, Pa., and Warren, Pa., successively, remaining in each place three months. He was next located at Oil City, where he remained one year. After a few weeks passed at Sartwell, Pa., he was placed in charge of a mission at Conneautville, Pa., where he remained four and one half years. He then passed ten weeks at East Brady, Pa., after which he came to Erie, in 1894. It is evident that Father Cauley not only comes of a religious family, but his work indicates that he has marvelous organizing talent that finds scope in his latest field of labor.

Rev. William F. Dwyer, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, Erie, Pa., was born in New London, Conn., and is the only surviving child of Michael and Mary (Crosby) Dwyer. His parents are both natives of Ireland, but were married in this country. In his early youth the family removed to New Haven, and it was here that Father Dwyer received his early education. He matriculated at St. Bonaventure's College, completing his philosophy in 1877, and his theology in 1880, and on the 4th of July of that year, he was ordained at St. Patrick's pro-Cathedral by Bishop Malten. His first appointment was as assistant at the Cathedral, where he remained nine and one-half years, except about three months spent in mission work. In 1890 he was appointed to his present pastorate, succeeding the Rev. James McCabe, who is now pastor at Warren, Pa. Father Dwyer's mother died July 3, 1894, and was buried from St. Paul's Cathedral, Pittsburgh, on July 5. His father, who is over 80 years of age, resides with him.

James F. Love, treasurer of Erie county, was born in West Mill Creek township, Erie county, Penn., December 18, 1843, and is a son of Samuel and Rebecca Jane (Reed) Love. His father, born in Cecil county, Maryland, May 16, 1798, died December 22, 1880, and his mother, born in West Mill Creek, March 11, 1805, a daughter of George Reed, one of the sturdy pioneers of Northwestern Pennsylvania, died May 10, 1891. Mr. Love's great-grandfather, Samuel Love, emigrated from Londonderry, Ireland, in 1754, and located in Cecil county, Maryland, where he married Rosanna Graham, and reared a large family of sons and daughters. The youngest of these, James (Mr. Love's grandfather), married Rachel Henderson, by whom he had five children: Samuel, David and James, born in Maryland; Mary Ann, born in McKean township, and Robert, born in West Mill Creek, whither the family removed in 1806, after living four years in McKean township. Samuel Love, who was a very successful farmer, and who also for several years ran a sawmill in West Mill Creek, reared a family of twelve children, ten of whom reached maturity: Jane, Mrs. William Carpenter, West Mill Creek; Mary Ann, first wife of Jackson McCreary; Martha, Mrs. Robert Davison, East Mill Creek; Sophia, Mrs. John B. Evans, West Mill Creek; Samuel T., deceased, a successful farmer and gristmiller, of West Mill Creek; R. Josephine, Mrs. Jackson McCreary, Erie; Rosanna, Mrs. Wm. M. Brown, West Mill Creek; George Washington, deceased, farmer, West Mill Creek; James F., and C. Elizabeth, Mrs. Conrad B. Evans, East Mill Creek. Mr. Love received his education in the public schools of his native township, and in early manhood engaged in farming, which he has since followed. He now occupies the old homestead farm, and is a thorough and practical agriculturist. He was married August 22, 1867, to Miss Jeannette, daughter of Robert G. and Rebeca (Dumars) Dunn, natives of Erie county, and of Irish ancestry. This union has been blessed with eleven children, nine of whom are living Miss Jessie R. Love, who was graduated from the Edinboro State Normal School, taught two years in the public schools of Tidoute, Pa., and is now teaching in Warren, Pa.; Mabel A., who married George Arthur Reed, M. D.; Brice Dunn, Samuel Robert, George Washington, Rosanna Graham, Emily Jeannette, Clara and Mary Ann. Mr. Love and family worship at the Westminster Presbyterian Church of West Mill Creek, of which they are generous supporters. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and the National Union. In politics Mr. Love is a staunch Republican, and has rendered much valuable service to his party. He has served Mill Creek township as tax collector and school director three years each, and was mercantile appraiser in 1883. He served the State of Pennsylvania as a subordinate officer in the Senate, session of 1891, and in 1892 was elected to his present responsible office. The faithfulness with which Mr. Love has performed all the duties pertaining to these various positions has won for him universal public confidence and esteem.

Oscar J. Fairbairn, formerly one of the proprietors of the Pennsylvania Brass Works, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, May 28, 1867, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Hubbard) Fairbairn, the former a native of New Castle, England, and the latter of Connecticut. Mr. Oscar Fairbairn was educated in Eric Academy. Immediately after leaving school he went to Michigan and entered the employ of the Mantel Furnace Company, in Saint Ignace, Mich. He remained there three years, after which he went to Dunkirk, N. Y., and entered the employ of the Brooks Locomotive Company, where he remained one year, when he returned to Erie, and for three years was superintendent of the Erie Wheel Foundry. In 1893 he engaged in business with Mr. J. G. C. Sewell, and did an extensive business under the partnership name of the Pennsylvania Brass Company. They employed thirty-five skilled workmen in the manufacturing of various articles of brass, principally appertaining to steam machinery, fixtures for engines, boilers, etc. Among some of their specialties which are well known in the machine world are their compression gauge cocks, steam cocks, lubricators, water gauges, steam whistles, etc. Mr. Fairbairn removed to Stamford, Conn., in May, 1895, to take charge of one of the departments of the Blickensderfer Manufacturing Company's Typewriter Works. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church and politically is a Republican.

Anthony Saltsman Pinney, hardware merchant, Erie, Pa., was born in Belle Valley, Greene township, Erie county, March 23, 1845, and is a son of Horace L. and Sarah (Saltsman) Pinney. His father, who was a native of Connecticut, settled in Greene township about 1840 and engaged in farming. Being an educated man, he found it convenient to teach school during the winter months, which he did for sixteen winters; he was also a justice of the peace for twenty-five years. He died February 20, 1878, at the age of 33 years. Mrs. Pinney, before her marriage with Mr. Pinney, was the widow of Samuel D. Shannon, who died in March, 1852, at the age of 80 years. The family consisted of six children, Sarah Ellen, who died at the age of 8 years; Elijah H. and Anthony S. (twins), the former engaged in brokerage and real estate business, Case City, Mich.; Alexander, who is in the employ of Anthony S.; Miss Rose Pinney, and Catherine, who married W. K. Byson (deceased), of Erie. Mr. A. S. Pinney received his early education in the schools taught by his father, and later attended the Belle Valley school and the Erie public schools and Academy. After completing his education he entered the hardware store of McConkey & Shannon as clerk, where he remained until June, 1867, when he was placed in charge of a branch store at 1523 Peach street. In January, 1869, he purchased the branch store and continued to do a flourishing business at that stand until February, 1893, when he removed to his present location, 724 State street. Here he has the most thoroughly stocked and equipped hardware store in Erie, and does both a wholesale and retail business. Besides his Erie interests, Mr. Pinney owns, at Ormond, Fla., a five-acre orange grove, set in 1888, a ten-acre vineyard, set in 1891, and a two-and-one-half-acre lemon grove, set in 1890. Mr. Pinney was married March 4, 1869, to Miss Mary E., daughter of Mr. Allen A. Morse of Erie, whose father was a cousin of the celebrated inventor, Prof. Samuel F. B. Morse. This happy union was blessed with one child, Sarah Ellen, who was married June 4, 1885, to Mr. William F. H. Nick, of Erie. Mr. Pinney is a member of the Masonic order, the K. of P., A. O. U. W., and the E. A. U. In politics he has always been a staunch Democrat.

George D. Williams, a leading retail grocer of Erie, was born in this city December 29, 1846, and is a son of J. B. and Abigail (Bowers) Williams, natives of Albany, N. Y. His father came to Erie county about 1835 and engaged in farming in Mill Creek township until the time of his death, which occurred in 1891. Mrs. Williams died in December, 1886. The family consisted of nine children, four of whom are living: Sylvester, James, George D. and John. Mr. Williams received his education in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 16 secured a position in the grocery firm of Rindernecht & Beckman. Upon the succession of Mr. Beckman to the sole ownership of the business, he remained with him, and became a member of the firm in 1883, the firm name being Beckman & Williams. This partnership was dissolved in 1888, and Mr. Williams established a business of his own at 715 State street, whence he removed to his present place of business at 721 State street in April, 1891. He has a finely arranged and thoroughly equipped business, and carries one of the choicest lines of groceries and provisions in the city. Mr. Williams was married December 23, 1871, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Michael and Mary E. Henry, of Erie. Mrs. Williams died February 1, 1890, leaving two daughters, Eva and Ruth. Mr. Williams was married a second time August 23, 1893, to Miss Cora, daughter of Mr. Kiefer Boedde, of Warren, Pa. The family attend the First Methodist Church of Erie, of which Mr. and Mrs. Williams are members and generous supporters. He is a Knight Templar Mason, a Republican politically, and served the city as a member of the common council from 1886 to 1888.

James P. Hanley, treasurer of Erie city, was born in this city May 1, 1860, and is a son of John and Mary (Lane) Hanley, natives of Cork county, Ireland. His father came to the United States about 1850 and located in Philadelphia, where he remained about five years. He then came to Erie to take charge of the Erie Gas Works and continued as superintendent until 1884, when he retired. The family consisted of fourteen children: Miss Julia, who died December 8, 1893, at the age of 37 years; Minnie, Mrs. J. J. Burgoyne, of Erie; James P.; Catherine E., Mrs. John T. Dillon, of Erie; William, who at the age of 4 was accidentally killed; Rose W., Mrs. D. P. McMahon, of Ellicottville, N. Y.; John R., student in the Chicago Dental College; Joseph A., general delivery clerk in the Erie postoffice; Daniel S., traveling salesman for the Cleveland Dental Manufacturing Company; Edward C., Misses Jennie and Nellie (twins), Agnes V., and Clara. Mr. Hanley was educated in the public schools and in the National Business College of Erie, graduating from the latter in 1877. He soon afterwards secured a position as bookkeeper in the office of Mr. P. F. Miles, then operating a spice mill on Seventh street between State and Peach streets, which he held until the business was discontinued. He next was for one year in the employ of the Burdett Organ Company of Erie, three years in the employ of the Erie Gas Works, one year with the W. W. Pierce Hardware Company, and then accepted a position as ticket agent at the Union depot, remaining there from May, 1881, until October, 1887, when he became interested in the insurance business. In 1885 he was elected as member of the common council, being the only successful candidate of his party in that election. He was re-elected in 1886, and unanimously chosen as chairman of that body. At the earnest solicitation of friends he became a candidate for the city treasurership in the municipal election of February, 1888. He received the nomination, and was elected, and was re-elected in 1890, with a majority of 2,998 votes over two opponents, the largest majority ever given any candidate for any office in Erie city. Mr. Hanley is now serving his third term as treasurer of Erie, which is sufficient evidence of his hold on popular confidence. Mr. Hanley is possessed of a rare combination of industry, honesty and genial sociability. In local musical and dramatic circles he is known as a willing and talented contributor to many of the charitable entertainments. He has also sung in the choirs of several churches of the city. Mr. Hanley was married September 28, 1883, to Miss Mabelle Agnes Barry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Barry, of Chicago. Mr. Barry is secretary of the Chicago Newspaper Union, and president of the Indiana Mineral Springs Company, located in Warren county, Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Hanley have one son, John Barry, who was born January 11, 1885. They are devoted members of the Catholic Church, of which they are generous supporters. Naturally gifted with graceful manners, reared under the refining influences of a model home, and given all the advantages of a modern education, Mrs. Hanley is a highly accomplished lady, and a talented vocalist. She was for some time previous to her marriage the leading soprano in one of the prominent churches of Chicago, and was a great favorite in the many musical events in which she took part. Politically Mr. Hanley is a staunch Democrat, and although he has always been an earnest and ardent worker in the interests of the party, he has never practiced the unlawful methods usually employed by the modern politician in the generally accepted use of the term.

Henry C. Kelsey, treasurer of the Union Ice Company, Erie, Pa., was born in this city October 29, 1844, and is a son of Samuel H. and Mary H. (Johnson) Kelsey, natives respectively of Oswego, N. Y., and Philadelphia, Pa. Joseph Kelsey, the father of Samuel H. Kelsey, removed from Oswego to Erie county, when the latter was a young man, and located on a farm in Mill Creek township. The elder Mr. Kelsey, in partnership with his son-in-law, Henry Cadwell, rented a store at the corner of Fifth and French streets, and for a number of years conducted a hardware and tinning business. Mr. Cadwell afterwards built the large store which still stands at the southeast corner of Fifth and State streets, where he did a very extensive merchandising business. The children of Joseph Kelsey were: Walter, who died in Sacramento, Cal.; Sylvester, who lives near Oswego, N. Y.; Joseph, who lives in Cleveland, O.; Hannah, who married Harry Cadwell, both of whom are deceased; Louise, who married Daniel Ely, and for her second husband Mr. Crandell; Samuel H. and Elizabeth, who married Dr. John Trissler, of Phelps, N. Y., and for her second husband, John Eliot, of Erie. Samuel H. Kelsey was for a few years engaged with the hardware firm, of which his father was a member, after which he occupied a position in the postoffice during the postmastership of Robert Cochran. He then entered the employ of Gen. Charles M. Reed as clerk on a lake boat, commanded by Captain J. S. Richards. After two years he was given a position as an accountant in the office at the docks, in which capacity he remained in the employ of General Reed for upwards of twenty years. When the firm of Henry Rawle & Co. succeeded to the control of Gen. Reed's business, Mr. Kelsey retained his old position under the new management until the dissolution of that company. Associated with his son, Henry C., he, in 1866, established the Erie Ice Company, and placed his son in its management. Mr. Kelsey died August 14, 1892, at the age of 75 years. The family consisted of two children: Margaret, Mrs. Henry Shannon, of Erie, and Henry C. Kelsey. The last-named gentleman was educated in the public schools of his native city, and when but 16 years of age went to Canada, where he passed two years in various positions in the oil fields. In 1862 he returned to Erie and entered the employ of Henry Rawle & Co., where he remained four years. The ice business, which his father established, was the first thoroughly-equipped institution of that kind in the city, and was the nucleus of what is now the Union Ice Company. Under his able management the business grew rapidly and enjoyed great prosperity during its nearly a quarter of a century of successful operation. The present company was organized in 1880, being made up from the Erie Ice Company and the John K. Cooney Ice Company. The People's Ice Company, which was established in 1892, was added to the Union Ice Company in 1893. The members of the present company are H. C. Kelsey, J. R. Cooney, C. M. Briggs and E. D. Carter. These gentlemen have each a thorough personal knowledge of the ice business, and with united interests they make a combination highly worthy of the brilliant success which it has attained. The plants of the company, which are equipped with the most modern and improved machinery and facilities, are located at the foot of Cascade, Chestnut, Sassafras and State streets, and the general office at No. 9 East Seventh street. About 40,000 tons of ice are handled annually, and every effort is made to supply patrons with the best quality obtainable. Mr. Kelsey was married September 3, 1868, to Miss Laura H. Johnson, of Erie. This happy union was blessed with two children, Margaret Shannon, widow of the late Harry Salsman, of Erie, and Miss Blanche Elizabeth Kelsey. Mr. Kelsey is a Knight Templar Mason, a member of the Mystic Shrine, and is also a member of the Knights of Honor. In politics he has always been a staunch Democrat, but the numerous cares of his active business life, together with a distaste for political notoriety, has prevented him from seeking or accepting public office.

Christian Kessler, grocer and wholesale liquor dealer, Erie city, Pa., was born in Bavaria, on November 21, 1842, the son of Henry and Elizabeth (Backfish) Kessler. His mother died in Germany in 1852. His father, who was a quarryman by occupation, on coming to America in 1857, located first in Greene township, this county, and later in Iowa, where he died in 1869. Henry and Elizabeth Kessler were the parents of six children, of whom Christian was the youngest. He went to school in Bavaria until he was 14. The only English education he received was during a period of between three and four months in the public schools of Greene township. He came to Erie in 1859, without a cent in his pocket, and served as clerk in a grocery store for six years. In February, 1865, he engaged in the grocery business for himself at 408 State street, and afterward changed to the northeast corner of State and Fourth streets, where he has remained ever since. Mr. Kessler was married in 1863 to Miss Helen Bloeser, of Erie city, by whom he had eight children, of whom seven are living, viz.: Elizabeth (wife of John Kolb), Helen D., Annie K., Mary J., Clara L., Christian H. and Florence E. Part of the family attend the Central Presbyterian and the balance the German St. Paul's Evangelical Church. Mrs. Kessler died on May 4, 1883, respected and mourned by all who knew her. Mr. Kessler is deservedly regarded as one of Erie's most prosperous, influential and enterprising citizens. He was a member of the common council from April, 1873, to 1875; of the license board from April, 1875, to April, 1876; of the select council from April, 1876, to April, 1878, and from April, 1880, to April, 1882; of the Board of Water Commissioners from May, 1886, to May, 1892; and is one of the incorporators of the Hamot Hospital. Politically he has long been an active and leading Democrat. In local affairs, however, he refuses to be bound by party ties, and supports the men he believes to be most fit and worthy. Mr. Kessler is one of Erie's largest property owners. He owns the premises and built or materially improved the structure at Nos. 401, 402, 403, 404, 406, 408, 410, 729, 1118 and 1129, State street, besides being interested in a number of important enterprises. To Mr. Kessler is largely due the inception and ultimate erection of the People's market house, which has no superior for its purpose in the country. He secured most of the subscriptions to the stock of the market company and superintended the work on and about the building from its start to its completion.

Charles F. Miller, grocer, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie December 13, 1857, and is a son of Charles F. and Augusta (Heininstadt) Miller, natives of Germany. His father, a miller by trade, reared a family of five children, four of whom are living: Charles F.; Gustaf J., druggist, Erie, and Misses Emma and Etta Miller. Mr. Miller was educated in the public schools of Erie, and then engaged in the grocery business, which he has since followed. He was employed successively by Burton & Williams seven years, M. Hartlieb one year, Jacob Fritz four years, Jacob Minnie two years, J. S. Town seven years, and on May 1, 1889, he established a business of his own at the northwest corner of Eighth and Myrtle streets, where he has since remained. Mr. Miller was schooled in the business by the best grocers in the city and is thoroughly conversant with all the details. He carries a full line of fine groceries and also handles meat. Mr. Miller was married September 25, 1884, to Miss Caroline Heyer, of Conneaut, O. He has one child, William H. Mr. and Mrs. Miller attend the German Lutheran Church; he is a Knight Templar Mason, and politically is a Republican.

Alexander B. Aitkin, contractor and builder, Erie, Pa., was born in Airdrie, Lanarkshire, Scotland, May 15, 1837, and is a son of John and Anna Belle (Baird) Aitkin. The family, with the exception of the father (who died in Scotland), came to America in 1857, and located in Toronto, Canada. Mr. Aitkin learned carpentering in Scotland, which he followed in his adopted country. In 1863 he went to Chicago, where, in 1869, he entered the employ of the Burdett Organ Company. In less than two years he was given charge of the bellows and action department. When the factory was removed to Erie, in 1872, he came with it, and remained in the employ of the company until 1885, when he engaged in his present business. He devotes his attention chiefly to contract work in and about Erie. He has occupied his present residence for twenty years, and owns several other houses in that portion of the city. Mr. Aitkin was married November 22, 1866, to Miss Jane McGregor, of Chicago, a native of Scotland, and a daughter of Nevin McGregor. Six bright children compose the family, viz.: Margaret J. (bookkeeper for Halleck & Duncan, of Chicago); Anna Belle (who married Hugh McLean, formerly of Erie, but now of Dakota); Helen M. (who married Mr. Earnest St. John, of Erie); Alexander N. (a carpenter by trade, working with his father); Misses Agnes D., Daisy May and William J. Mr. Aitkin and family worship at the Presbyterian Church, of which they are members. He is a Scottish Rite Mason, a member of the I. O. O. F., and Encampment, and a Republican politically. In February of 1895, he was elected a member of the common council of Erie.

Daniel W. Nicholson, contractor and builder, Erie, Pa., was born in Cape Breton, Canada, March 21, 1843, and is a son of Daniel and Margaret (Munroe) Nicholson, natives of Scotland. His parents were married in Canada, where his father engaged in farming and fishing, and reared a family of ten children, seven of whom are living, and of whom Daniel is the fourth. He received his education in the public schools of Canada, and at the age of 14 years went to sea. When about 18 years old he was given charge of a vessel, and his first trip to Newfoundland was the quickest ever made up to that time. After spending three years in the West Indies he returned to New York, and in April, 1863, enlisted in Co. K, 11th C. V. After three months' service, in the fall of 1864, his health failed while plying on the James river, and he was discharged. He then made another trip to the West Indies, but upon his return to New York, in April, 1865, he was taken seriously ill, and his physician advised him to take a trip inland. He went to Jamestown, N. Y., where he became a bricklayer, and where he remained three years; he continued on with his Jamestown employer two years longer at Warren, Pa. In 1871 he went to Chicago and remained two years, most of which time he was engaged in contracting, which he has continued since coming to Erie in 1873. He built a cottage on the site of his present home, in 1881, and his comfortable and spacious residence in 1891. Mr. Nicholson was married March 16, 1870, to Miss Anna, daughter of Mr. Dennis Collins, of Erie. The issue of this marriage was six children: Misses Maud E., Anna M., Raymond D. (who is a graduate of the Erie Business University), Malcolm H., Allen M., and Mary J. Mr. Nicholson and family worship at the United Presbyterian Church, of which he is a member; he is a member of the A. O. U. W., and usually affiliates with the Democratic party.

Charles Noble Hathaway, contractor and builder, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, September 18, 1835, and is a son of Daniel and Amy (Noble) Hathaway, natives of New York. His father, who was a boat builder, came to Erie about 1830. The family consisted of eight children, five of whom are living: Edward B. (carpenter, Erie), Mary (Mrs. Samuel Cummings, of Erie), Jane (Mrs. William Yager, of Waukegan, Ill.), Charles N. and Sarah (Mrs. Levi P. Hurd, of Erie). Mr. Hathaway was educated in the public schools of Erie, and when about 16 years old learned the mason's trade, which he has since followed. He began contracting in 1861. Most of his business is in and about Erie; but he also does out-of-town work. He built the court house at Warren, Pa.; the Delamater Block, Budd House and Hulings Hall, Meadville, Pa., and in Erie there are such monuments of his work as the Noble Block, the Keystone Bank building, Reed House, Marine Hospital, German Baptist Church, the Sands & Son's building, the county house and the Downing Block. He built his own elegant residence, at 319 West Eighth street, in 1891-2. Mr. Hathaway was married May 16, 1861, to Miss Sarah Shank, daughter of Mr. William Shank, of Erie, by whom he had eleven children: Carrie (who married William Herchert, manager of the Western Union telegraph office at Salamanca, N. Y.), Lizzie (who married H. C. Barlow, freight claim agent of the Erie R. R., with headquarters in New York city), William M. (who is foreman for his father), Frederick D. (also engaged with his father), Charles N. (who died at the age of six years), Jessie, Mary Belle, Harriett Gertrude, George Noble, Joseph Pressly and Frank Koss (twins)—the latter dying at the age of 3 years. Mr. Hathaway is a Master Mason, and politically is a staunch Democrat.

Edward D. Carter, president of the Erie Fish Association and of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Electric Light Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township, Erie county, Pa., January 31, 1853, and is a son of John H. and Anna (Heilkebach) Carter. His father was born in England and came to the United States about 1835, settling on a farm in Mill Creek township, where he is still extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits. The family consists of six children: Mary (Mrs. William Hardwick, of Erie), George W. (dealer in boots and shoes, Erie), Edward D., Alfred (who is in the employ of the Union Ice Company), John L. (who is engaged in farming) and Luella (Mrs. Bacon, of Los Angeles, Cal.). Mr. Carter was educated in the public schools, the Edinboro Normal school and the Iron City Commercial College of Pittsburg. After leaving school he secured a position in a large furniture house in Pittsburg, where he remained two years. He then came to Erie and, in company with his brother George, engaged in the grocery business, which he followed five years. In May, 1876, he went into the fish business, which he has since followed, and upon the organization of the Eric Fish Association, in 1893, was chosen its president. This concern employs about 200 men, operates thirty fish boats and handles about 6,000 tons of fish a year. It will be readily seen that the marketing of this large natural product is a great benefit to the city, as it brings in from the surrounding country several hundred thousand dollars per annum. Mr. Carter was married October 10, 1873, to Miss Clara, daughter of Mr. John Robinson, of Erie. The issue of this marriage is two children, Miss Maud and Carl Carter. Mr. Carter is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Royal Arcanum. In politics he is a Republican, and has served as a member of the Select Council of Erie.

Charles C. Colby, late president of the Colby Piano Company, Erie, Pa., who died April 8, 1895, was born in Bradford, Vt., and was a son of John and Hannah (Rowel) Colby, his maternal grandmother being a direct descendant of Israel Putnam, of Bunker Hill fame. When Mr. Colby was quite young his father, who was a millwright, removed to Springfield, Pa., where he remained for several years and then went to Albert Lea, Minn. This city was surveyed and laid out by Mr. Colby in 1856; it is now the third city in size and importance in the State. Of the five children which reached maturity Charles C. was the eldest. He was educated in the public schools and academy of Springfield, Pa., early manifesting an interest in matters pertaining to music and musical instruments. When a boy he was a skillful performer upon the violin. He followed school teaching for several years, the last three years in the mathematical department of the Chicago public schools. He then went to Minnesota, where he engaged in surveying, which he followed for twelve years. Removing to Carthage, Mo., he engaged in the sale of pianos and other musical instruments. He made the trip to Missouri with two wagons that were built to order, one of which carried a piano. He was accompanied by his 8-year-old daughter, Clara E. (now Mrs. W. M. Thoms), who has since become famous as a piano artist. On one side the canvas top of the wagon containing the piano could be withdrawn, exposing the piano, and thus, with Clara at the piano and Mr. Colby playing the violin, they gave concerts wherever they stopped at night. After remaining in Carthage for six years, Mr. Colby took up his residence in Vienna for the purpose of giving his daughter an opportunity of acquiring a classical education in music and the languages, for which she possessed much natural talent. He remained abroad five years, during which time he visited his native country twice, and then returned to New York city, where he engaged in the manufacture of pianos. Mr. Colby made several valuable improvements in pianos, the most important of which was his improved method of stringing. Finding that he could manufacture cheaper in Erie than in New York, he removed his business to Erie in 1888. The present plant covers a space of over three acres of ground and has a capacity of 100 pianos a week. It is one of the largest institutions of its kind in the world, and is without doubt one of the best organized and equipped. Mr. Colby was the president of the company up to the time of his death, and his son, C. C. Colby, jr., superintendent of the factories; W. J. McCarter, secretary, and J. E. Patterson, treasurer. In addition to the officers, Mr. W. L. Darling, of Corry, Pa., is a director. The salesrooms are located at 1222 State street. In the second story of the building is a conservatory of music which has 350 pupils. The third story is occupied by "Colby Hall," where every season recitals are given by the leading artists of the country. The hall is also used for musical entertainments by the pupils of the conservatory. Mrs. Colby, the wife of C. C. Colby, is quite a noted artist having studied several years at the academy in New York city. She is of French parentage, although born in the United States. She has been an extensive traveler and spent four years in the city of Vienna, Austria. Mr. Colby had four children: Clara E. (who married Mr. William Thoms, publisher and proprietor of the American Art Journal of New York), Charles C. (who married Miss Gertrude Sturgeon, a talented young pianist of Erie), Margaret (who married Mr. Hayes Russell, of Erie), and Miss Pearl L. Colby (who will graduate from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor in 1895).

John J. Burgoyne, liveryman, Erie, was born in Harbor Creek township, Erie county, January 26, 1853, and is a son of James and Rosa Ann (Duggan) Burgoyne, natives of county Donegal, Ireland. His father came to America and located on a farm in Harbor Creek township as early as 1844; he died August 15, 1888. Mrs. Burgoyne now lives on East Sixth street, Erie. The family consisted of nine children, two of whom are living: Miss Susan Burgoyne and John J., who was educated in the public schools, and followed the business of farming until the spring of 1884, when he secured a position as mail carrier in Erie. He held this position for six years and three months, when he resigned, having a short time previously made arrangements to engage in his present business. His stable, located at 701 French street, is one of the most convenient and best regulated in the city. He resides at the corner of Sixth and Wallace streets. Mr. Burgoyne was married November 4, 1880, to Miss Minnie Hanley, sister of City Treasurer Hanley, and has six children, viz.: Sarah F., James and Agnes (twins), Susan, Leo and John. Mr. Burgoyne and family are members of the Catholic Church. Politically he has always been a Democrat.

David Schlosser, lumber manufacturer and dealer, Erie, Pa., was born in Mayence, Germany, December 25, 1844, and is a son of Michael and Barbara (Kapp) Schlosser. His father, who was a butcher and cattle dealer, reared a family of five children, of whom David is the second. He was educated in Mayence, and for some years assisted his father; he also butchered as well as dealt in cattle on his own account. In 1865 he came to the United States and located in Erie, where he followed peddling for two years. He then went to Spring Creek, Warren county, Pa., where he opened a small store, and later engaged in lumbering. In 1873 he returned to Erie and started a planing-mill in the old woolen-mill, at the northeast corner of Sixteenth and State streets, where he remained a year and a half. He then purchased a lot and built a mill on ground leased of the Lake Shore R. R., on Fourteenth street, between French and Holland, where he remained until 1891, when he built his present mill at Fifteenth and Sassafras streets. The plant covers four acres and the power of the mill is sixty-horse. The products include all kinds of wooden material for building purposes.

Mr. Schlosser was married November 18, 1869, to Miss Hannah Davis, daughter of Mr. Henry D. Davis, of Cincinnati, Ohio, by whom he had two children, Harry (who is employed in his father's office), and Benjamin (who is a student in Eastman Business College). Mr. Schlosser and family worship at the Hebrew Synagogue. He is a Master Mason and a member of the I. O. O. F., the A. O. U. W., and the Sons of Benjamin. He is independent in politics and has served the city as a member of the common council two terms; this was during the erection of the City Hall, and he was chosen chairman of the finance committee.

William H. Hill, superintendent of the Erie Gas Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Manchester, England, September 15, 1848, and is a son of William and Eliza (Davis) Hill. His father came with the family to America in 1852, and located in Buffalo, where he has since been in the employ of the Buffalo Gas Light Company, for whom he has acted as foreman for the past twenty-five years. The family consisted of three children, of whom William is the only survivor. He was educated in the public schools of Buffalo, and at the age of sixteen years began an apprenticeship with David Bell, of Buffalo, to learn the machinist trade, which he followed for six years. He then secured a position as engineer on the lakes, which he followed two years, after which he accepted the superintendency of Pratt & Co.'s rolling-mill, Buffalo, where he remained three years. He next entered the employ of the Buffalo fire department, where he continued ten years, being master mechanic for the last eight years of that time. In 1884 he came to Erie to accept his present position. Mr. Hill built, owns and manages the tugs W. L. Scott and Erie. He was married December 12, 1869, to Miss Matilda, daughter of Mr. David Byers, of Buffalo, by whom he has four children: William J., who is a gas fitter in the employ of the Erie Gas Company, Robert D. (engineer of the tug Erie), Etta M. and Frederick Charles. Mr. Hill and family worship at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of which he is a member. He is a Chapter Mason and a member of the A. O. U. W. and the Elks. He is a Democrat politically, and was appointed fire commissioner of Erie in 1888, serving till 1894.

Christian Michael Jacobson was born September 28, 1843, near Copenhagen, Denmark, received a meagre schooling, and was early apprenticed to learn the trade of blacksmith, serving the full term of five years. In 1866 he came to the United States, and found employment in a carriage works at Jamestown, N. Y. Shortly thereafter he went to Fredonia and was employed at that place or in the vicinity for sixteen years in carriage making. Later he formed a partnership with Henry Totman, for the manufacture and repair of carriages and vehicles at Meadville, Pa. In February, 1893, the firm, Totman & Jacobson, removed to its present location, Twelfth and French streets, Erie, Pa. Mr. Jacobson was married October 17, 1873, to Emma, daughter of Andrew Johnson, a farmer of Chautauqua county, New York. Mrs. Jacobson died on February 7, 1893, leaving two children, Emma and Oscar. The family reside at 1225 French street, and are members of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Horace Newell Thayer, manufacturer, Erie, Pa., was born in Burke, Franklin county, N. Y., November

2, 1854. He is a son of Jason P. and Elizabeth A. Thayer, natives of New England, and of English descent. Jason P. Thayer was and is a farmer of Franklin county, New York, and his son, Horace, received only the meagre education attainable in the winter sessions of a country school. From his twelfth year he assisted his father and neighboring farmers, and continued to be so employed until 1871, when he went to Massachusetts, where he found employment as ferryman, having charge of the boat at Smith's Ferry, on the Connecticut river, between Holyoke and Northampton. This position he held for one year. On December 10, 1872, he located in Erie, and was for three years in the employ of J. F. Downing. In 1876, at his earnest solicitation, he was given a place in the Erie chair factory (owned by Mr. Downing), and shortly thereafter was made foreman of that establishment. In 1878, the business of manufacturing children's carriages was added, and the concern was known as the Downing Carriage Company. The following year Mr. Downing's interest was purchased by H. N. Thayer and C. F. Bostwick, who conducted the business until 1886, when Mr. Thayer purchased his partner's interest, and took his brother, Henry N. Thayer into the concern. This partnership continued until 1890, when a stock company was formed by Messrs. J. F. Downing, Wellington Downing, George Talcott, William Town and Henry A. and Horace N. Thayer, which company continued the business until April 1, 1892, when the old plant was utterly destroyed by fire. While the conflagration was at its height, Mr. Horace N. Thayer undertook to lead the firemen into a more advantageous position in their fight with the flames, and in so doing received the brunt of an explosion that very nearly cost him his life. Within two months, however, he had sufficiently recovered to undertake the restoration of the manufacturing plant; new buildings were erected on the old site (East Eighteenth, between German and Holland streets), new and improved machinery was put in, and by November 10 of the same year business was resumed by the present firm of H. N. Thayer & Co., composed of Horace N. Thayer and John A. Lang. The firm manufactures children's carriages, express wagons and carriage hardware. The steel wheel and rubber tire used in the firm's manufactures are the inventions and patents of Mr. H. N. Thayer. Mr. Thayer was married in April, 1879, to Julia K., daughter of William Rowe, an organ builder of Bristol, England, then engaged in the same business in this city. Of five children born of this marriage but two, Clarence and Roland, survive. Mrs. Thayer died February 26, 1894. Mr. Thayer was again married July 9, 1895, to Renè E., daughter of Fayette Langdon, a prominent farmer and apiarist of Franklin county, New York. The family reside at 217 East Seventeenth street, and are members of the First Baptist Church. Mr. Thayer has devoted much time and means to the interests of the church, and was most actively identified in establishing four of its missions: Faith Chapel (now Second Baptist Church), Wesleyville Mission (now Baptist Church), West Eighteenth Street Mission and Hope Mission. A sad loss sustained by Mr. Thayer was in the sudden death of his mother by a railroad accident at Chicago, December 6, 1893. Notwithstanding the business reverses and other misfortunes to which he has been subjected, Mr. Thayer has courageously and industriously persevered, and now has the satisfaction of seeing in the business of his company a far more prosperous condition than has been known in its history, and that it is numbered among the leading and most enterprising of the industries of the Gem City of the Lakes.

Henry Morris Eaton, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born July 18, 1869, at Clarion, Clarion county, Pa. He is a son of Morris and Flora C. (McCrea) Eaton, both natives of Pennsylvania, the former of English and the latter of Scotch-Irish descent. Morris Eaton has been engaged in the oil producing business since the discovery of oil in Venango county, and is a resident of Titusville, Pa. Henry M. Eaton completed his education at Cornell University, from which institution he was graduated in June, 1890. He studied law under the preceptorship of Roger Sherman, of Titusville, was admitted to the bar September, 1891, and soon thereafter removed to Erie, Pa., where he became associated with the editorial staff of the Dispatch, occupying the position of telegraph editor of that paper until September 1, 1894, when he entered upon the practice of his profession. He is a Republican, and is actively identified with his party's interests as a member of the county committee.

Charles Whitehead, president of the Keystone Rubber Works, Erie, Pa., was born near Trenton, N. J., February 3, 1848. He is the son of the late William and Ann Parker (Valentine) Whitehead, the former a native of Saddleborough, England, the latter of New England birth and of French descent. William Whitehead was engaged for many years in the manufacture of woolen and knit goods at Trenton, N. J., during the latter years of his life, near Philadelphia, Pa. His wife died in January, 1859; he died in 1890. Charles Whitehead was educated in the schools of Trenton, and was for several years thereafter associated with his father in the woolen goods manufacture. In 1872 his father and three of his father's brothers established a rubber manufacturing business in which Charles became engaged. In 1882 he came to Erie and, in connection with two brothers, William H. and Nathaniel J. Whitehead, established a plant for the manufacture of rubber goods, which was subsequently operated by a stock company, and known as the Erie Rubber Company, of which Charles Whitehead was president. The company's plant was destroyed by fire in the fall of 1887, but was restored and continued to be operated by the same company until 1894, when it went into assignment. A new company was subsequently established, which is known as the Keystone Rubber Works, of which Charles Whitehead is president. The plant is located at the corner of East avenue and Twelfth streets, and manufactures belting, hose, packing, valves, car-springs, bicycle tires and other rubber goods. Mr. Whitehead is unmarried and resides at 156 West Seventh street.

Henry Butterfield, attorney-at-law, Erie, Pa., was born in 1846, in Buffalo township, Butler county, Pa. He was educated in the public schools at Sharpsburg and at the Western University at Pittsburg. When a boy he removed to the city of Erie, where he has since resided. He was appointed to a clerkship in the office of the prothonotary of Erie county when in his teens, and was subsequently promoted to deputy prothonotary. He was transcribing clerk of the House of Representatives in 1864 and 1865. The same year Governor Curtin appointed him clerk of the courts of Erie county, to fill an unexpired term, and he was subsequently elected for the full term. While filling this office he read law and was admitted to the bar. Soon after he was appointed district attorney to fill a vacancy. In 1873 he was elected a member of the House of Representatives from Erie county, and he served in the session of 1874, when the city of Erie was made a separate Legislative district. At the expiration of his term he was unanimously renominated, but (to use his own language) was almost unanimously defeated by Hon. William Henry, a Democrat. Mr. Butterfield was elected to the Senate in 1875 for the short term, under the new constitution, and was re-elected for a full term in 1876, serving until 1881. He continued in active practice of the law from his admission to the bar until 1892, when he was again elected to the House of Representatives, defeating his Democratic opponent by nearly 200 votes in a strong Democratic district. Mr. Butterfield took a prominent part in the proceedings of the House. He was a member of the committees on judiciary, general elections, federal relations and manufactures, and chairman of the committee on public grounds and buildings, and reported the bill for improving the capitol and building a fire-proof State library, and appropriating $825,000 for the same; member of the special committee to investigate the charges of corruption made against certain members of the House incident to the bill abolishing the public building commission of Philadelphia. Mr. Butterfield is an earnest and eloquent talker, a ready debater, and was a valuable member of the House. Whatever his hand findeth to do, he does with his might, and thus generally succeeds. He is widely known, and has legions of friends who predict for him a promising future. He was judge advocate, with the rank of major-in-staff of Gen. Henry Huidekoper, N. G. P., from 1880 to 1884.

Edward Powell Gould, attorney and member of the Assembly from Erie, Pa., was born in Springfield township, Erie county, Pennsylvania, March 6, 1834. He is a son of the late Nathan Gould, a native of New York, who removed in 1814 to Springfield township, Pennsylvania, where he died in 1879, and Margaret (Nicholas) Gould, who resides in Springfield township, and is now (1895) 87 years of age. Edward P. Gould received his early schooling in the common schools of Springfield township, continued it at the Kingsville, Ohio, and West Springfield, Pa., academies, and completed it at the University of Rochester, N. Y., from which institution he was graduated in 1859. He then began the study of law under the preceptorship of Joseph D. Husbands, of Rochester, N. Y. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted in Co. E, 27th N. Y. V. I., and was, upon its organization, elected second lieutenant of his company. He succeeded to a first lieutenancy February 2, 1862, to its captivity in November of the same year, and was mustered out with his company in May, 1863. In August, 1863, he was commissioned to raise a regiment, and entered upon that duty, and the following month was commissioned a United States general recruiting officer with headquarters in Rochester, N. Y., and continued in that service until January, 1865. The 27th N. Y. V. I., Colonel Slocum commanding (until his promotion to a brigadier generalship), was in the first battle of Bull Run, and participated in all the engagements of the army of the Potomac until it was mustered out. For two years subsequent to the close of the war Colonel Gould was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Rochester, N. Y. Resuming the study of law, he was admitted to practice in 1867. In 1872 he was chosen chief clerk of the State department, Albany, N. Y., a position which he filled for two years. The degree of bachelor of law was conferred upon him in the Albany Law School in 1873. Following his State department chief clerkship, he acted as legislative attorney for several New York city interests, until his removal in 1875 to Erie, Pa., where he entered upon the practice of his profession. From 1883 to 1887, he was associated with the late Samuel L. Gilson. Mr. Gould is a Republican and is the present representative of the Erie city district to the State Legislature. Colonel Gould has been actively identified with the public charities of the commonwealth, is a prominent member of the Association of Directors of the Poor and Charities of the State of Pennsylvania, and was chairman of that association for the year 1893. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and Union Veteran Legion. Mr. Gould was married June 24, 1868, to Mary, daughter of the late Daniel P. Ensign, an old resident and prominent business man of Erie. Colonel and Mrs. Gould and daughter, Miss Edwina, reside at 20 West Eighth street, and are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

D. R. Taylor

Col. Charles M. Lynch, attorney, 505 French street, Erie, Pa., was born at Erie, Pa., April 10, 1842. He is a son of Charles and Mary Ann (Farmater) Lynch, the former a native of Buffalo, N. Y., the latter of Erie county, Pennsylvania. Charles Lynch, sr., is a descendant of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and his wife's father fought in the war of 1812. Charles M. Lynch began the study of law under the preceptorship of the late Col. Benjamin Grant, one of Pennsylvania's leading lawyers in his day. After the breaking out of the war of the rebellion he aided in forming the 14th P. V. A camp was formed at Erie and a regiment of 1,000 men was soon mustered in, with the late General Brown as colonel. Company D, commanded by Captain Lynch, was chosen to carry the colors of the regiment—a charge which they did not relinquish until the surrender of Lee. Owing to bravery and meritorious service Captain Lynch was soon commissioned major, then lieutenant-colonel and breveted colonel. He took an active part in the battles of Antietam, Frederickburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Mine Run, Auburn, Bristow Station, Pollopoteny Creek, Cold Harbor, Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House, North Ann River and the siege of Petersburg, and was in the field until the close of the war, being in command in many of the battles. In the spring of 1863 he was detailed as a judge advocate in the First Division of the Second Army Corps for the trial of cases in court martial. He was badly wounded December 13, 1862, while leading a charge on St. Mary's Height, in the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., and being found by his friends at night, was carried from the field under the guns of the enemy. It was supposed that he was dead, but with careful treatment he recovered, still carrying, however, a memento of the battle—a minnie ball which the surgeon was unable to extract. After regaining his health, in April, 1863, he was offered his discharge, with a recommendation for a pension, by Dr. Clymer, medical director of the Army of the Potomac, and was also proffered a choice of several excellent appointments in the civil service. He returned to the field, and in the second day's battle of Gettysburg was again wounded while leading a charge with the colors in his hand; he remained on the field, however, and continued in the fight until night caused a cessation of hostilities. That day's battle really decided the result of the war, as has been conceded by the foremost generals on both sides. During a charge in the terrible contest at the foot of Round Top, Captain Hilton, afterwards postmaster at Erie, Pa., was shot by an escaping confederate, and fell with his thigh bone splintered close to his body. Col. Lynch, who had captured several confederates, ordered two of them, amidst a deadly fire from their own forces, to assist in carrying the wounded officer to the rear. To aid in this work he also detailed Sergeant Wheeler, of Franklin township, Company D, and a private (who was killed a few moments later by a shot from one of his own troops). In this frightful conflict, where the ground was covered with dead from both sides, there was a large gap left on the right flank of the First Division of the Second Army Corps, which the enemy tried to take advantage of by swinging a large body of troops into the open space to cut off their rear. The Pennsylvania Reserves by that time swept up from the rear and relieved the First Division, which had been out of ammunition for some time, and were fighting hand to hand; the curtain of night fell, and the battle of Gettysburg was won. Col. Lynch, though wounded, was with the regiment the next day, July 2, in the memorable charge of Pickett's division of Longstreet's corps, "which was simply an artillery duel between the two armies, and afterwards a slaughter pen for the confederates." This was the decisive battle of the great rebellion. Col. Lynch again took a prominent part in the charge upon Spottsylvania Court House in the Wilderness campaign. In command of his regiment, he led the charge over the works of the enemy at early daylight, when the Second Corps, with General Hancock in command, surprised and captured the famous Stonewall Jackson brigade, with Generals Johnston, Stewart and a number of field and line officers and twenty-two cannon. Col. Lynch was one of the first over the works, and though wounded, mounted a captured artillery horse and rode through the engagement to the end. The next most prominent battle was that of Cold Harbor, where the Union army charged Lee's breastworks and was repulsed with terrible slaughter. The brigade, in which was Col. Lynch's regiment, with Col. Lynch in command of it, penetrated the enemy's works, but was repelled by confederate reinforcements, and they were unable to carry off the captured cannon. This was the only point in Grant's entire line which penetrated the enemy's works. Col. Lynch's regiment had captured 300 prisoners, who suffered greatly from the fire of their own troops as the Union force was driven back. After retreating a few rods Col. Lynch found a sunken road, where he formed a fort, which was for one week the most advanced position of the Army of the Potomac, until the change of front to Petersburg. In this charge Sergt. James Jordan was the only man in advance of Col. Lynch. During the week that Col. Lynch held this point the lines were so close that the orders given on one side could be distinctly heard by the other. The confederates charged three times to capture this point, but were repulsed with heavy loss. Col. Lynch was in charge at Petersburg, Va., of the most advanced skirmish line, and formed the line across the railroad upon which all the forts were established that remained throughout the siege. He was sent to the extreme left of Petersburg, on a flank movement in support of cavalry, on the 24 of July, was surrounded by a confederate force and captured, fighting, sword in hand, by Gen. Wright's Georgia brigade, and would have been killed after capture but for the interference of Gen. Wright. He was taken to Charleston, S. C., with other prominent Federal officers, and was under fire of the United States batteries shelling the city. While in Charleston he suffered from an attack of yellow fever, and was nursed at the hospital by Dr. Todd, a Kentuckian, a brother-in-law of President Lincoln and a surgeon in the confederate army. While convalescing, Col. Lynch made several attempts to escape, and finally succeeded, passed through the enemy's lines clothed in the uniform of a confederate officer, and after many hardships and perils reached the Union lines at Kingston, N. C., near Newbern. From there he was sent to Washington and reported to Secretary of War Stanton, to whom he gave much valuable information. He was mustered out May 21, 1865. Col. Lynch was married in Erie, Pa., September 9, 1869, to Clara J. Grant, daughter of James and Clara (Faulkner) Grant, both deceased. She was born in Erie, Pa., in 1850, and died December 10, 1890. Their union was blessed with four children: Faulkner G., a member of the city engineer corps, who was married January 8, 1885, to Rose, daughter of the late John McCarthy; Grant R., Clara Louise and Charles M. Lynch, jr. Col. Lynch is a lawyer and has filled numerous offices of public trust, among them that of district attorney; he was collector of internal revenue of the Nineteenth District of Pennsylvania. He is a member of R. W. Scott Post, No. 464, G. A. R., and Encampment No. 13, U. V. L. The family reside at 321 East Sixth street.

David Brown, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie June 7 1855. He is a son of the late David and Catherine (Jann) Brown, both natives of Baden-Baden. David Brown, sr., came to the United States and temporarily located in Buffalo, then coming to Erie, where he was married and resided until his death, July 14, 1866. His wife died February 9, 1889. David Brown, jr., was educated in the parochial school of St. Mary's at Erie, and was then apprenticed to learn the molder's trade. After mastering that he learned the barber's trade, at which he worked as a journeyman for ten years, then (1880) establishing a shop on Ninth street opposite his present location, No. 10 West Ninth street, whither he removed in 1890. He was married September 10, 1878, to Julia S., daughter of James Byrne, an old resident of Erie, and an employe of the Erie and Pittsburgh R. R. Of the children born of this marriage, two, Ruth Anna and Louis Bernard, died in infancy. The surviving children are: James David, Robert Frederick, Catherine Marie and Carl Joseph. The family reside at 518 West Ninth street, and are members of St. Peter's Church.

John Fairbairn, retired manufacturer, Erie, Pa., was born in New-Castle-on-Tyne, England, January 21, 1826. His parents were Stephen and Jane (Jackson) Fairbairn, natives of England, where Stephen Fairbairn was engaged in business with a drug firm. John Fairbairn received a common school education, and then learned the iron molder's trade. He came to the United States in 1846 and located in Erie, where, through his rare ability as a mechanic, untiring energy and enterprise, he became identified with several of the most extensive manufacturing establishments of that city. In 1866 he became a member of the firm of Davenport, Fairbairn & Co., manufacturers of car wheels and railroad castings. The firm was succeeded twenty years later by that of Davenport & Fairbairn. In the meantime Mr. Fairbairn had become identified with the Martel Furnace Company, of St. Ignace, Mich., the Erie Car Wheel Works and the American Fusee Company of Erie. In 1889 he sold out his entire interests in all of these concerns to his partner, W. R. Davenport, and has since lived in retirement. He was married in 1847 to Elizabeth Hubbard, of English descent, by whom he has six children: Anna, wife of William D. Vance, of St. Ignace, Mich.; Frank F. Fairbairn, general agent for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware of the Blickensderfer Typewriter, and proprietor of the cigar store at 620 State street, Erie, Pa., and who married Anna B., daughter of the late Dwight Crowell, of Shelby, Ohio; Blanch, wife of Merrick L. Gunnison, of Erie; John C. Fairbairn, who is engaged in the foundry supply business at Buffalo, N. Y.; Florence, widow of the late William Burt, a banker of St. Ignace, Mich., and Oscar J. Fairbairn, one of the founders and late of the Pennsylvania Brass Works at Erie, and now engaged in business at Stanfield, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Fairbairn reside at the corner of Eighteenth and Cascade streets, and are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

Charles Reuben Glick, merchant tailor, Erie, Pa., was born in Easton, Pa., February 27, 1862. He is a son of the late Moses A. and Abba Glick, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. Moses A. Glick was a contractor and builder in Bangor, Pa., for a number of years up to the time of his death, August 31, 1892. His wife survives, and resides at Bangor, Pa. Charles R. Glick completed his schooling at the academy in Easton. At 18 he commenced to learn the business of tailoring, and was engaged therein for three years at Bangor, Pa. He then went to New York city, where he studied and learned the art of cutting, as taught at the John J. Mitchell Company's Cutting School. He was employed as cutter for various merchant tailoring establishments until 1883, when he opened a store of his own at Bangor, Pa. Two years later he sold out to accept a position in New York city, where he remained for two years. He was next employed at Allentown, Pa., where he remained one year, when he returned to New York city. In 1888 he removed to Erie, Pa., and was employed as a cutter until February, 1893, when he purchased the merchant tailoring business of A. & W. E. Liebel, at 821 State street, which was thereafter conducted under the firm name of Glick & Fitting. In February, 1895, he severed his connection with the above and associated himself with T. A. Robinson in the merchant tailoring business at 819 State street, under the firm name of Glick & Co. Mr. Glick was married to Melissa, daughter of Herman Godshalk, a retired builder and contractor, of Bangor, Pa. One child was born of this marriage, Harvey A. The family attend the First Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Glick is a Mason, Knight Templar and Mystic Shriner. He is one of the trustees of the Custom Foreman Tailors Association of America. He was one of the organizers of the local cutters' society, in which he is an active member.

Rev. Andrew Ignasiak was born in Slawienko, near Obornik, Prussian Poland, November 6, 1862. He is a son of John and Katrina Ignasiak, natives of the same place, where the former still resides, and is engaged in agricultural pursuits, and where the latter died September 5, 1881. Father Ignasiak received his initial schooling in the elementary schools of his native place, then attending the gymnasium, and next entered the American College at Louvain, Belgium, from which institution he was graduated and ordained priest in the Roman Catholic Church in 1886, and given the mission to the Erie (Pa.) diocese. He reached Erie August 21, 1886, and immediately entered upon the charge of St. Stanislaus Church, with which he has ever since been identified. St. Stanislaus was organized in 1885, and the corner stone of the edifice in which the congregation now worships was laid by Bishop Tobias Mullen, October 19, 1884. The structure, located at the northeast corner of East Thirteenth and Wallace streets, was ample for the accommodation of its membership, then numbering about eighty families, and large enough, in the event of its reasonable growth, to contain the congregation for many years to come. Within five years the membership of the parish had increased to more than 300 families, and the building of a new church edifice was necessitated. In 1894 the original structure was removed to an adjoining lot, and a new building is in process of erection on the site of the old one. The estimated cost of the new edifice is $50,000, and its seating capacity will be 1,200. St. Stanislaus' school, started by Father Ignasiak with a daily attendance of sixty scholars during its first session, has now an average daily attendance of more than 250. The services of an assistant were rendered necessary by the growth of the school in 1888, and John Nowak was employed; and in 1892 two additional teachers were added from the Felician Sisters of Detroit, Mich., and in 1893 a third assistant was added. The societies of the congregation are: The Sacred Heart Society, with a membership of 200; the St. Stanislaus Society, numbering 100 members; the Mother of God Society, with 150 members; two ladies' societies, and a young men's society, St. Stanislaus Kotska. The Monuszko Dramatic Society, which gives frequent entertainments for the benefit of the church, and is a healthy social organization as well, is made up of members of the congregation. The parsonage, at 516 East Thirteenth street, which was built by Father Ignasiak in 1887, was destroyed by fire February 8, 1895, and has been replaced by a handsome brick structure.

Alois Nagosky, proprietor of the restaurant at the northwest corner of Tenth and Parade streets, Erie, Pa., was born in Wyszyn, county of Berent, Danzig, West Prussia, June 20, 1851, a son of Jacob Nagosky, who was a prominent hotel man in his native town. He reared a family of eight children, viz.: Alois, John, Joseph, August, Frank, Bonney, Dora (wife of Edward Brinning) and Kate (wife of Adam Cumpinski), all residents of Erie. Alois Nagosky was reared and educated in his native country, and when 21 years of age emigrated to the United States, and, locating in Erie, was employed for a time in the stove works of Black & Johnson. He then secured a position in the Chicago & Erie Stove Works, where he remained for several years. In 1884 he embarked in the restaurant business on the corner of Tenth and Parade streets, and in 1891 built the large store and brick structure he now owns and occupies. Mr. Nagosky conducts what might be well termed an up-to-date restaurant, it being completely equipped with all modern appurtenances, and, in fact, is one of the leading restaurants in the city. He was united in marriage, August 12, 1880, to Miss Minnie, daughter of George Wagner, of Erie, and to them has been born four children: Emma, Dora, Anna and Louise. Mr. Nagosky is a well-informed man, he speaks and writes three languages fluently and accurately, and has demonstrated that he is one of Erie's sound and influential citizens. He is a public-spirited man, always taking a lively interest in all things that tend to the advancement of his adopted city and her industries. He is a member of the Roman Catholic Church, of the C. M. B. A., the St. Benedictus Society, the St. Stanislaus Society, the Catholic Benevolent Legion, the G. H. O., the East Erie Turners and the Knights of St. John. In politics he is a Democrat.

John Robert Cooney, of the Union Ice Company, Erie, Pa., born in Erie, October 16, 1856, is a son of the late John and Margaret Cooney, natives of County Cork, Ireland, who came to the United States and located in Erie in 1855. John Cooney, sr., was an employe of the Erie Gas Company, and died November 18, 1857. His wife survives, and resides in Erie. John R. Cooney attended the public schools of Erie. At an early age he found employment as brakeman on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., and later with the E. & P. R. R., being thus employed for four years. He next engaged in teaming, and in 1880 founded an ice business, which he conducted successfully, alone, for ten years, then consolidating his business with that of the Erie Ice Company. In the spring of 1893, this company was consolidated with the People's Ice Company, the aggregation being thereafter known as the Union Ice Company. Mr. Cooney has been twice married; on May 12, 1879, to Emma Crowley, of East Mill Creek, Erie county, Pa. She died in February, 1890, leaving three children, John, Edward and Mamie. His second marriage was to Annie E., daughter of Stephen Murphy, a contractor, of Erie. The family reside at 437 West Fourth street, and are members of St. Peter's.

Frederick Jacob Rappold, tailor, Erie, Pa., was born in Sterretania, Erie county, Pa., April 29, 1858. He is a son of the late Karl and Justina (Grote) Rappold, the former a native of Stuttgart, Wurtemberg, and the latter of Edemissen and Einbeck, Hanover. The late Karl Rappold coming to the United States, located in Buffalo, N. Y. After a short stay in that city he removed to Erie county, Pennsylvania, establishing a tanning business at Sterretania, where he remained from 1850 until his death in 1878. His wife died in 1881. Frederick J. Rappold went to the village school until his 12th year, when he began work as a farm hand. In 1872 he began to learn tailoring with S. J. Steiner, Erie, Pa., and upon becoming a journeyman, found employment with Daniel Illig, and later with G. B. Keene, both of Erie city. After six years of service with the latter, Mr. Rappold, in 1883, embarked in the merchant tailoring business for himself on Ninth street, opposite his present location, 12 West Ninth street. In 1892 he added to his business a furrier department. He was married June 13, 1888, to Anna Catherine, daughter of Martin Zeeb, an old resident of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Rappold reside at 221 West Eleventh street, and attend the German Lutheran Church.

John J. Roemer (whose real name is von Roemer Starkenburg, but discards all title to nobility like the rest of the family), was born near Elberfeld, in Prussia, August 30, 1843. He is a son of the late Rev. Jno. J. Roemer (Stärkeburg) and Charlotte (von Bartholme) Roemer. Rev. Mr. Roemer came to the United States in 1856, filling the pulpits of the German Reformed Churches in Lewistown, Lockhaven, Pittsburg and other places, and died in Pittsburg May 30, 1888. His wife, the daughter of a major of artillery in the service of the Grand Duke of Berg, was born May 24, 1814, and died in 1889. John J. Roemer graduated from the schools in Elberfeld in 1856 and was awarded the royal Prussian premium for best scholarship, when he prepared to follow his parents to the United States, where they resided. He went into the employ of James Fisk, Jr., at Montpelier, Vt., and in 1857 followed the water both on river and sea. Coming west he was employed by Eli Young in the hotel business, and was soon made manager of Mr. Young's hotel, until August 22, 1862, when he enlisted in the Sumner infantry and served in the West Virginia campaign for nine months and was mustered out as a lieutenant. He then purchased a store at Loweville, Ohio, sold it out after a short stay and came to Erie, where he found employment with W. M. Whitley & Co., coal dealers. He was employed by this firm and its successors (Saltzman & Co.) until 1873, when in connection with his former employer, R. J. Saltzman, he established a coal business in Pittsburg. This partnership was dissolved in 1876, when Mr. Roemer became the senior member of the firm of Roemer, Jones & Co. The firm owned Summer Hill mine, leased other mines and continued in business under that name until 1877, when it became merged in the Erie & Pittsburg Coal and Coke Company, of which J. J. Roemer was president and general agent. During this period he was engaged individually in the coal business on a large scale, employing at one time 2,000 men. At this time he became heavily involved as endorser for the firm of James Ward & Co., Niles, Ohio, through whose failure he lost his all, the earnings of a busy life. He then returned to Erie, and in 1879 started the Boot Manufacturing Co. He sold out his interest in this concern the following year and embarked in the manufacture of wooden novelties, for which business he organized a stock company under the name of the Eureka Manufacturing Company until 1885, when the plant was destroyed by fire. Being used to travel for his own business, he followed, after his failure, the business of commercial traveler until July 31, 1893, when he was appointed deputy collector of internal revenue by Collector Ep. Kearns, was reappointed by the succeeding collector, E. P. Bigler. Outside his regular business he is a journalist and writer of no mean pretention, and his articles appear often in home and other papers.

He contributes to St. Alban's Church, but his attendance is mostly at the First Methodist Episcopal Church. He married May 24, 1886, Celia, daughter of the late Dr. J. H. O'Brien, one of the pioneer physicians of Pittsburg, Pa. One child was born of this union, Bessie, who died April 6, 1892, aged three years and nine months. Mrs. Roemer is a member of the Catholic Church. The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Roemer is at the northeast corner of Second and Myrtle streets. Mr. Roemer takes an active interest in city affairs. He was the first to conduct natural gas in pipes for illuminating purposes, his first experiment being at the restaurant of the late Frederick Struble, Esq., corner of Eighteenth and State streets, the gas coming from the well of the then Fortune Oil Company, whose secretary and manager Mr. Roemer was. The well was located on Mill Creek and French streets, south of Eighteenth street. He was one of the promoters of the ill-fated Pennsylvania Petroleum R. R., which collapsed owing to the panic of 1873, and was identified with a good many other projects calculated to benefit the city.

Alfred Hathaway Murphy, born January 24, 1861, at Erie, Erie county, Pa., is a son of the late Alfred and Lucretia (Randal) Murphy, the former a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and the latter of Connecticut. Alfred Murphy was for four years an officer in the United States navy, attached to the steamer Michigan; was in the employ of the P. & E. shops for some years, and afterwards engaged in the business of contracting for the drilling of gas wells. He died in October, 1891. His wife survives. Alfred H. Murphy received his education in the public schools of Erie, and learned the trade of watchmaking. In 1885 he established himself in the watchmaking and jewelry business, which he has ever since conducted, and which he is now carrying on at 918 State street, Erie, Pa. He was married September 17, 1875, to Carlotta Ward, of Erie. Mr. Murphy belongs to the Masonic order and is a member of the A. O. U. W.

John Henry Collins, Erie, Pa., was born near Carlisle, Cumberland county, Pa., October 5, 1844. He is a son of James and Mary (Gerbrick) Collins, the former a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and of Irish descent, and the latter a native of Maryland and of Pennsylvania-Dutch extraction. James Collins is a farmer of Monaghan township, York county, Pa. His wife died in October, 1883. John H. Collins was educated in the public schools of his native county. At the breaking out of the war he engaged in business with his father, who was conducting a distillery in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania. He enlisted in Co. B, 20th Penn. Cav., at Harrisburg, Pa., served throughout the war, in the first division of Sheridan's cavalry corps, and was mustered out as a sergeant at Cloud's Mills, Va., April 9, 1865. Immediately thereafter he entered the Bryant & Stratton Commercial College, Philadelphia, where he devoted two years to the study of bookkeeping and telegraphy. He then obtained a position as telegraph operator on the middle division of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., being first stationed at Wilcox. He was employed as operator on that division continuously for seven years, and for the following six years was the agent at St. Mary's, on the same road. Tiring of this service, he went to Bradford and invested in oil lands, but this not proving profitable, he, a year and a half later, purchased a livery business at North East, Erie county, Pa., and conducted it for six years. Going to Corry, he was similarly engaged for six years. For one year following this he had charge of Jewett's stock farm. He came to Erie and purchased C. P. Haskins' livery business, at 1112 East Eleventh street. Mr. Collins was married November 9, 1870, to Emma, daughter of the late Isaac Horton, a lumberman of Elk county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Collins and daughters, Maud and Helen, reside at 1104 State street, and are members of the Universalist Church. Mr. Collins is a member of the Masonic order, of the K. of P., and G. A. R.

Perry Arora Gibson, attorney, Erie, Pa., was born in Washington township, Erie county, Pa., August 15, 1857. He is a son of the late Daniel C. and Maria (Conant) Gibson, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of New York. Jessie Gibson, the father of Daniel C. Gibson, came with his father, Nathan Gibson, from Vermont, to the Pennsylvania colony some years before the Revolutionary war, and remained for a time in Crawford county. In 1877 he took out his patent for government lands in Washington township, Erie county, and the title to portions of this land still vests in his immediate descendants. Both Jesse Gibson and his son, Daniel C., pursued farming throughout their lives, and both filled the office of justice of the peace for a long term of years. Perry A. Gibson left the State Normal School at Edinboro to enter the Iowa State University, from which institution he was graduated in the class of '83. Returning to Edinboro, he was for a time engaged in business with his brother, Dr. V. D. Gibson, a dentist. He then read law under the preceptorship of John Prouditt, of Edinboro, was admitted in the United States courts, June 15, 1886, and was subsequently admitted to practice before the Supreme Courts of such States as the character of his business, that of a corporation lawyer, necessitated. Mr. Gibson has been the proprietor of the Wilcox House since October 1, 1890. He was married November 27, 1891, to Elmira, daughter of Charles T. Reeder, a descendant of one of the pioneer families of Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson have one child, Opale Reeder Gibson, and reside at the Wilcox House. The Reeders are Presbyterians, and the Gibsons Methodists.

William James Quinn, undertaker, Erie, Pa., was born in the county Tyrone, Ireland, July 29, 1844. His father died in 1852, and the same year his mother brought her family to the United States, locating in Newport, R. I., where she still resides. William J. Quinn commenced to assist his mother in the support of the family when but 9 years of age, finding employment in a cotton factory, where for several years his hours at hard labor each day were from 5:30 A. M. to 7:30 P. M. At the breaking out of the war he was employed in a lead factory, the business of which was at that period exclusively confined to the making of bullets. On November 28, 1861, William enlisted and was mustered into the service December 21, in Co. A, 1st R. I. Cav. (then known as the 1st New England Cav.), and served until December 1, 1864. His regiment was with the Army of the Potomac, and the middle military division, Major-General Sheridan commanding, Private Quinn's discharge certifies to his brave participation in engagements in Cedar Mountain, Gainesville Station, Groveton Station, Bull Run, Nolan's Ford, Jefferson, Kelly's Ford, Stevensburg, Beverly Ford, Middleburg, Little River, Culpepper, Rapidan, Auburn Station, White House Landing, Malvern Hill, Cedar Creek, and two each at Rappahannock Station and Chancellorsville. After being mustered out he learned the carpenter's trade in Newport, R. I., and Worcester, Mass., and thereafter followed his trade at Newport until 1876, when he established an undertaking business which, two years later, he removed to Erie, Pa., where he has since resided and is still engaged in the undertaking business. He is a Democrat, and has been an active worker for his party. In 1890 he was elected as a member of the common council of Erie, resigning during the latter part of his term to run as Democratic nominee for the select council, to which he was elected in 1892. Mr. Quinn was married April 3, 1883, to Sarah A., daughter of the late Patrick H. McMahon, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Quinn have four children, Mary, Sarah, John, Margaret and, reside at the corner of Fifth and French streets, and are members of St. Patrick's Church. Mr. Quinn is a member of the G. A. R. and the Union Veteran Legion.

C. M. Briggs, Erie, Pa., was born in Rome, N. Y., October 13, 1823. He is a son of Lyman and Abigail (Jefferson) Briggs, natives of Vermont, who located in Erie county in 1844. C. M. Briggs was educated in the schools of Rome, N. Y. He was for a number of years a member of the Erie Ice Company, which in the spring of 1893 was consolidated with the People's Ice Company, and is now known as the Union Ice Company, of which Mr. Briggs is a member. He was married October 9, 1851, to Sarah, daughter of the late Hiram Slocum. Mr. and Mrs. Briggs have four children, Anna, Harriet A., William S. and Ida H., and reside at 314 Sassafras street. Mr. Briggs is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a Knight Templar, and a member of the A. O. U. W. and the Knights of Honor.

Henry James Raymore, secretary and general manager of the Shaw Piano Company, Erie, Pa., was born August 30, 1857, at Worcester, Mass. He is a son of the late James F. and Phebe Anne (Williamson) Raymore, the former a native of Massachusetts and of English-Scottish extraction, the latter a native of Maine and of English descent. The Williamsons were among the early settlers of New England, and one of them was one of the founders of the town of Lovell, Maine. James F. Raymore was for many years associated with the Torry Razor Company, of Worcester, Mass. He died in July, 1893, surviving his wife five years. Henry J. Raymore completed his education with a course in academies, at Stone's Preparatory College School, at Montreal, Quebec, from which institution he was graduated in 1872. He was then employed for four years in the dry-goods establishment of A. A. Murphy, of Montreal. In 1876 he was engaged with Horace Sheldon, dry goods merchant, of Worcester, Mass., and the following year entered the employ of Lucius Mairfield, a dealer in pianos and organs at the same place. After five years of this latter service he went to New York to learn piano manufacturing with the firm of Calen-berg & Vaupel, West Thirty-sixth street, where he remained for one year. He was then appointed general manager for Peck & Son, manufacturers of the Opera piano, New York. He was next engaged for a short time at Cincinnati, with the firm of Smith & Nixon. In August, 1859, he came to Erie, and was for some months associated with the Colby Piano Company. On March 28, 1870, he organized the Shaw Piano Company, with Hon. Matthew Griswold, president; James H. Shaw, vice-president; Matthew Griswold, jr., treasurer; and Henry J. Raymore, secretary and general manager. Nine months thereafter Mr. Shaw died and Matthew Griswold, jr., succeeded to the vice-presidency and Marvin E. Griswold to the treasurership. As general manager of the Shaw Company, Mr. Raymore has been conspicuously successful, having inaugurated many original methods of advertising, and otherwise through his enterprise and energy placed the concern among the leading manufacturing establishments of Erie. Mr. Raymore was married January 17, 1888, to Anna E., daughter of the late Samuel Bond, of Richardson, Merriam & Co., manufacturers of wood-working machinery. Mr. and Mrs. Raymore have one child, Henry Bond Raymore, reside at 361 West Tenth street, and are members of the First Presbyterian Church. Mr. Raymore is actively identified with the work of the church generally, and particularly with its Christian Endeavor organization, being one of the vice-presidents of the State organization, and chairman of the local committee of '36, which, largely through Mr. Raymore's personal efforts, secured the State convention at Erie in that year. Mr. Raymore is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Knights of St. John and Malta, the Knights of Honor, and Tyran Lodge, No. 392, F. & A. M.

Levi Kester, manager of the Erie Transfer Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Hamburg, Erie county, N. Y., December 16, 1829. He is a son of the late James and Emily (Lang) Kester, both natives of New York and of German descent. James Kester was a farmer during the early years of his manhood, but subsequently removed to Buffalo, where he became actively identified with the Old-line Whigs, by whom he was recognized as the proper material for public trusts, and his services were brought into requisition as deputy sheriff, superintendent of workhouse, and in other official capacities. Levi Kester received his education in the public schools of Erie county, New York. His first employment was with the Ohio Stage Company, with whom he remained for nine years. He then entered the service of the Cleveland, Erie and Painesville R. R. as freight conductor, and afterward was employed in both freight and passenger service on the New York Central R. R. In 1867 Mr. Kester located in Erie, Pa., and became identified with the Lake Shore R. R., remaining in its employ until 1875, when he established a livery business at Erie. In 1886 he purchased a controlling interest in the Erie Transfer Company, and has since then been the president and manager of that concern. He was married in 1854 to Elizabeth, daughter of the late Joseph Sharp, a farmer of Mercer county, Pennsylvania. Four children born of this marriage survive: Frank J., Minnie E., and Charles E. Kester and Mrs. Clara E. McConnell, widow of the late Julius McConnell. Both sons are in the Erie Transfer Company, Mr. Frank J. Kester being its treasurer.

John Lawrence Kelley, late proprietor of the Kelley Machine Works, born in Oriskany, N. Y., March 14, 1853, is a son of the late John and Mary (Radigan) Kelley, natives of Ireland, both of whom came to this country in childhood with their parents. Soon after marriage they removed to Niagara county, New York, where, in 1860, John Kelley lost his life by a railroad accident. The following year his family removed to Lockport, N. Y., where John L. Kelley received a meagre schooling. At a very early age he began to assist his mother in the support of the family, and at the age of 15, was apprenticed to the machinist's trade with the Holly Manufacturing Company. He worked at his trade in various places until 1876, when he permanently located in Erie, and was engaged with the Skinner Engine Company until 1884, when he established the Kelley Machine Works, of which he was until recently the sole owner. Mr. Kelley is the inventor of an automatic steam flue-cleaner, and an adjustable steel scraper, an adjustable screw plate, a low-water alarm, a speed indicator, a gauge-glass cutter, and an adjustable hose clamp, all of which have found high favor, and in the manufacture of which he was principally engaged. He was married February 2, 1885, to Addie E., daughter of John Wemple, for a number of years a farmer of Elk Creek township, Erie county, and now a resident of Cattaraugus county, New York. Mrs. Kelley is a descendant of the Sherman family, one of the first to settle in Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Kelley have three children: Lawrence W., Edna E. and John L., reside at 422 West Fourth street, and are members of St. Peter's.

Samuel Weiss, editor and publisher of The People, Erie, Pa., was born in Kaschau, Hungary, July 16, 1862. He is a son of the late Hermann and Katharine (Weber) Weiss, natives of Hungary, where they were married, coming thence to the United States, in 1882, and locating in New York city, where they resided up to the time of their decease, in 1885. Samuel Weiss received his initial schooling in the public schools of his native city, then taking a three-years' course at the Gymnasium, conducted by the Premonstrans order of that city. In 1876 he entered the employ, in Kaschau, of the Panonia Publishing Company, remaining with that company for three years, by which time he had mastered the printer's trade. In 1879 he went to Buda Pesth, where he worked at his trade for one year. During the following two years he was employed in various book, job and newspaper printing offices in Germany and Austria. In July, 1882, he came to the United States, and for one year followed his trade in New York city. In 1885 he embarked in the newspaper publishing business at Kansas City, Mo., where he established a German weekly paper, known as Forerarts, which he subsequently sold. Returning to New York city, he re-engaged in the printing business for one year, and then, first in this country, interested himself actively with the labor movement, filling the highest offices within the gift of the National German-American Typographical Union. From 1886 to 1891 he was editor and business manager of the Buffalo weekly Arbeiter-Zeitung, and during that period established two special editions of that paper, the one for Rochester, New York, the other for Erie, Pa. The latter enterprise proved so successful that Mr. Weiss concluded to permanently locate and establish a weekly newspaper of his own in Erie. On October 1, 1892, he issued the first number of The People, an English people's party organ, which has acquired a good circulation and has a wide political influence. Mr. Weiss became a citizen of the United States by naturalization at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1887. In addition to running the Erie Arbeiter-Zeitung and The People, Mr. Weiss is correspondent of several socialist and labor newspapers. He was instrumental in founding the first labor party organization in Erie, and in that connection has organized a dozen or more trades' unions. He is commander of the Erie City Lodge, No. 185, order of Maccabees, Master Workman of the Lake Shore Assembly, 5773, Knights of Labor, and an active member and official of numerous other societies. He was married at Buffalo, N. Y., to Miss Bertha Redler, a native of Tyrol. Mr. and Mrs. Weiss have four children, Katharine, Esther, Hermann and Nettie, and reside at 351 Short street.

John Carse, Eric, Pa., was born at Belfast, Ireland, April 2, 1819. His parents were natives of North Ireland, and of Scotch descent. John received but little schooling, his services being required at a very early age in helping to till the soil of his father's farm near Belfast, and before John had attained his majority the bulk of this work devolved upon him. The elder Carse, within the next ten years added a second large farm to his previous possessions, and this added so materially to the duties imposed upon his son, John, without giving promise of any considerable personal benefit to him, that he concluded to seek his fortunes in the New World. Accordingly, in 1849, he came to the United States, locating in Erie, and on the very day of his arrival found employment as a buyer of barley for the late Alfred King. He was engaged in this business for two years, and then entered the employ of the late Gen. Charles M. Reed, whose steamboats, sailing vessels and canal boats he had charge of at the Erie docks for many years. He has retired from business, is unmarried, and resides at the Reed House. He served the city for three years as a member of the select council.

Herman Ey, proprietor of the Lake City Machine shops, Erie, Pa., was born in Halberstadt, Prussia, June 2, 1850. He is a son of the late Edward and Elizabeth (Schrader) Ey, natives of Prussia. Edward Ey was a mason by trade, and died in the old country in 1851; his widow married George Koch, who subsequently came to the new world to seek his fortune, finally locating in Reading, Pa., where he was, in 1870, joined by his wife, his step-son, Herman Ey, and his son, William. One year later the family removed to Erie. Herman Ey received his education and learned the trade of machinist in his native town. Prior to coming to the United States he worked at his trade in many of the leading cities of Germany: Leipsic, Berlin, Potsdam, Stettin, Frankfurt-on-the-Rhine and Frankfurt-on-the-Main. In Erie he first worked for the late firm of Barr, Johnson & Co., stove foundries; then for the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, and next for the Bay State Iron Works. In 1876 he entered the employ of the Humboldt Iron Works, with which concern he remained twelve years. He then resumed service with the Jarecki Manufacturing Company as foreman of the machine department. In the spring of 1892 he formed a partnership association with B. T. Jones, under the firm name of Ey & Jones, proprietors of the Lake City Machine shops, at 1219 Peach street. The partnership was dissolved in July, 1895, by the withdrawal of Mr. Jones, Mr. Ey continuing the business. Mr. Ey was married October 14, 1873, to Mary, daughter of the late Balthazar Herbst, a native of Wurtemberg, for many years a resident and tinsmith of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Ey reside at 522 West Third street. Mr. Ey is a member of the I. O. O. F. and Harugary societies.

John Sutter, wreck master of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born near Strasburg, Alsace, August 19, 1835. He is a son of the late John and Mary Eva (Freault) Sutter. His father was a native of Bavaria, went to Alsace when a boy, where he learned carpentry, and met and married his wife, who was a native of Alsace. They then returned to Leimersheim, Rheinpfalz, where they continued to reside until 1853, when they came to the United States, and located in Erie, where the elder Sutter followed the business of carpentry contractor. He died June 23, 1855, and his wife, November 8, 1858. John Sutter, jr., learned the carpentry trade in the Fatherland, worked at his trade with his father in this country until September 16, 1855, when he entered the employ of the Cleveland and Erie (now L. S. & M. S. R. R.), as bridge-builder. One year later he was made road carpenter of the Buffalo and Erie (now the L. S. & M. S. R. R.), in which capacity he remained until the spring of 1862, when he returned to the Cleveland and Erie R. R., and was made car inspector. On the first call for volunteers at the breaking out of the war, he was enlisted for three months' service, and re-enlisted for three years, but furnished a substitute. He occupied the position of car inspector with the Cleveland and Erie R. R., until after the consolidation of the several roads, which formed the present L. S. & M. S. R. R. system. On December 1, 1869, he was appointed to his present position of wreck master and general car inspector and repairer for the Lake Shore road. Mr. Sutter was a Republican up to the second campaign of General Grant for the presidency, since which time he has been active in his allegiance to the Democratic party. He represented the Second ward in the common council of Erie for five years, for two years of which period he was chairman of the police committee. He was a member of the select council for three years, and during that time was chairman of the fire committee. He was president of the German Friendship Benevolent Society for seven years, and resigned only to be re-elected seven years to the same office, of which he is the incumbent. Mr. Sutter was one of the founders and vice president of the Erie City Fund and Building Association. The perils and hardships incident to his long service as wreck master have entailed upon him but one serious accident, that of February 1, 1878, at Ashtabula, when a snow plow, which he was running, collided with a train, which resulted in his receiving injuries that nearly cost him his life and crippled him to such an extent that he was compelled to walk on crutches for three years. He was married May 12, 1859, to Miss Marie Anna, daughter of Bonaparte and Mary Brandt, who settled in Erie from Alsace about 1839. Of ten children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sutter, seven survive. They are: Mary A., widow of the late Frank Mangold, of Erie; John G., recorder of interchange of the L. S. & M. S. and P. & E. railroads; Anna, wife of J. C. Salisbury, of Erie; and Emma, Minnie, Frank and Katrina. The family reside at 1101 Parade street, and are members of St. Mary's Church. Mr. Sutter is a member of the A. O. U. W.

Henry B. Haverstick, insurance agent, Erie, Pa., born in Carlisle, Pa., April 18, 1820, is a son of the late John D. and Sarah (Bennett) Haverstick, natives of Pennsylvania, the former of German, the latter of English descent. They located in 1837 in Erie, where the elder Mr. Haverstick was actively identified with the Whig and Free Soil parties. He was for ten or twelve years an alderman by gubernatorial appointment. He died July 4, 1853; his wife died December 29, 1863. Henry B. Haverstick completed his schooling at the academy, Carlisle, Pa., found employment as a clerk in that town for several years, and in 1839 came to Erie and entered the employ of Messrs. Fleming & Zimmerly. The following year (1840) he obtained a position with Messrs. Rufus S. and C. M. Reed, with whom he remained until 1852. He then established a general store in Erie, which he conducted for the last six years. During the latter period he became interested in the milling business, with which he was identified until 1874. He then went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he remained for two years in the interests of the Life Association of America, at St. Louis. He returned to Erie in 1876, and has since been associated with the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of Newark, N. J., Pittsburg agency. He was married June 18, 1844, to Elizabeth M., daughter of the late Dr. Henry Dittenbaugh, of New York city. Three children born of this marriage survive: Belle, wife of Isaac R. McNary, chief engineer, U. S. navy, of New York; Minnie Miranda, wife of Frank J. French, publisher, of New York, and McCaulay Haverstick. The latter was born March 18, 1858, in Erie, was educated in the Erie Academy, and at the age of 15 became a messenger in the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., with which company he has ever since been connected, receiving promotion from time to time until 1883, when he was appointed cashier of the freight department in Erie, which position he now holds. He is unmarried, a member of the Masonic order, past master of Keystone Lodge No. 455, and resides with his parents at 125 East Sixth street. Mr. Henry B. Haverstick is a staunch Republican and has served the city government for a number of years in both branches of council. He has been a communicant of the Episcopal Church for sixty years, and his family are members of St. Paul's of which Mr. Haverstick was made charter vestryman July 26, 1856, and continued a vestryman more than twenty years; was also the church treasurer for a number of years.

M. B. V. Gifford, born in Venango township, Erie county, Pa., July 31, 1837, is a son of William S. and Sidney (Allison) Gifford, the former a native of Vermont, and a farmer by occupation; the latter of Pennsylvania and of English descent. They were the parents of nine children: John (deceased), Nancy E. (deceased), William L. (deceased), Catherine A. (deceased), Robert J., a farmer on the old homestead in Venango township, Erie county; George W. (deceased), M. V. B., Lucy J., widow of Dana Truck, resides in Wayne township, Erie county, and James E., who died from wounds received at the battle of Malvern Hill. Captain Gifford attended the common school and Waterford Academy, was reared on the farm, in early life taught school, and was thus engaged when hostilities were inaugurated between the loyal North and rebellious South. He at once enlisted in Co. K., 83d P. V. I., and was soon after appointed orderly sergeant, from September 12, 1861, to October 1, 1862. He was then promoted to the position of first lieutenant in Company A, and in 1864 was made captain of the same company. He was in all the engagements his regiment participated in, and was several times wounded; on the first occasion at Malvern Hill, where his brother James received his death wound; again at Fredericksburg, and later at North Anna. He was discharged October 1, 1864, and returned to Erie county. In the summer of 1865 he went to Crawford county and was engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1870 he went to Colorado, where he was engaged for ten years in farming and stock-raising. Returning to Erie in 1880, he was appointed deputy prothonotary and served one year. He was then made money tender clerk in the Erie postoffice, serving as such for three years. In 1885 he was elected sheriff of Erie county on the Republican ticket, and served the full three-year term. Captain Gifford was married in 1866 to Miss Mary Amelia, daughter of William Allison, a leading farmer of Erie county, and to the union have been born three children: The first died unnamed in infancy; William Pitt and Pearl Vincent, both attending the Leland Stanford, jr., University of California. Mr. and Mrs. Gifford are members of the Central Presbyterian Church of Erie. He is a member of the G. A. R. and in politics is a Republican.

Henry Kessler, grocer, 436 West Eighteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born at Teschenmeschel, county Rokenhausen, Rhine-Bavaria, Germany, August 12, 1856, son of Henry and Philippina (Lanzer) Kessler. Henry, sr., was born November 25, 1828, a stone-cutter by trade, and father of six children: Henry, eldest; John, born August 3, 1858, was educated in his native country, where he learned stone-cutting. He came to America in 1874, and was married March 28, 1883, to Miss Minnie Garnow of North East township, and has four children: Nettie M., Albert H., Julia G. (deceased), and John E.; at present he is clerking for his brother, Henry, in the grocery business; Philippina (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased), Karl (deceased), and Karolina (deceased). All the family were born at Rhine-Bavaria, Germany. Henry Kessler, sr., died January 26, 1878. His wife came to America, July 6, 1886, and has made her home with her son, Henry, since. She was born July 18, 1832. Henry Kessler, sr., was a son of John H. and Elizabeth (Backfisch) Kessler, natives of Germany. He was a farmer and owned and operated a large stone quarry. He was father of six children: Henry (deceased), Jacob, a carpenter in Erie; Elizabeth (deceased), John, a carpenter in Erie; Charles, a wagon maker near Chicago; and Christian, a grocer in Erie. John H. Kessler was a son of Christian Kessler. Henry Kessler learned in his native country stone-cutting, and at the age of 16 came to America and arrived at Erie on September 6, 1872. He acquired his education in his native land and attended the Erie grammar schools one term. He then clerked for his uncle in the grocery business until the spring of 1878, when he, at the age of 21, entered into partnership with his employer, and remained in that position until the fall of 1882. At that time he established himself on West Eighteenth street, where he, in the year 1887, built the block in which he still conducts his business. He has been married twice, his first wife being Juditha Riedinger. To this union were born two children, Karoline P. and Klara B., both of whom died in infancy. His wife was accidentally burned by gasoline September 28, 1891, causing her death the same day. Mr. Kessler, in trying to save her life, was so badly burned that his life was despaired of for several months. He was married the second time April 25, 1894, to Mrs. Georgianna (Pembroke) Ross, widow of Charles D. Ross. Mr. Kessler is one of eight that founded the German Temple congregation in Erie, November 14, 1888, being appointed the elder for this local district by the district board of America, which position he still holds, conducting divine services every Sunday. He is also one of the founders of the Temple Mission and Benevolent Association of America, to which he was elected as a director, which meets quarterly at the church of the German Temple congregation, Buffalo, N. Y. It is also to be stated that he was appointed as a branch agent of the American Express Company money order department two years since. He is affiliated with the F. & A. M., the I. O. O. F. and K. of P. In politics he is a liberal Republican.

Adolph Leopold Benze.

Conrad Flickinger, hardware and house furnishing goods, and senior member and chairman of the Flickinger Roofing and Cornice Company, store and office 408 West Eighteenth street, works 424 and 426 West Nineteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born at Hert, Rhinephaltz, Bavaria, February 20, 1845, a son of George and Anna (Major) Flickinger (deceased), both natives of Germany. George Flickinger (deceased), was a brickmaker by trade. He came to the United States in 1852, and, locating in Erie, followed brickmaking for more than twenty years. He died April 16, 1887, and his wife August 24, 1885. To them were born six children: Conrad, Caroline (deceased), Eugene, a shoemaker in Jamestown, N. Y.; Mary A., Mrs. Wu, T. Reichert; and William B., of Downing & Flickinger, insurance, of Erie. Conrad Flickinger was 8 years old when the family came to America. His schooling was in the public school of South Erie and the old West ward school, and in 1861 went to Waterford and engaged with G. A. Hein to learn the tinner's trade, remaining with him three years. In August, 1864, he enlisted in the United States navy and was assigned to duty on the U. S. S. General Burnside, upper Tennessee fleet. He was discharged in June, 1865, and returned to Erie, where he worked at his trade till March, 1866, when he opened a shop of his own near Twenty-sixth on Peach street, and two years later built a store on Peach, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, where he was in business till 1872. He then moved to his present location, and has since done a large and lucrative business. In 1892 the Flickinger Roofing and Cornice Company was incorporated and has since prospered. Mr. Flickinger was married September 24, 1867, to Miss Anna Gertrude, daughter of John and Martha Schaefer, of Erie. Eight children have blessed this union: Emma, Mrs. A. J. Fox; Hattie, Elizabeth, Conrad B. and Clarence, died in infancy; George C., Frederick G. and Laura B. The family are members of St. John's German Evangelical Lutheran Church. Mr. Flickinger is a member of the I. O. O. F., Erie Lodge, No. 871; the A. O. U. W., Erie Lodge, No. 44; the G. A. R., Post 67; the F. & A. M., Perry Lodge, No. 392; Knight Templars, Mt. Olivet Commandery No. 30. In politics he is a Republican.

J. G. Krug, the enterprising boot and shoe merchant at 912 Parade street, Erie, Pa., was born in Passaic, N. J., August 18, 1855. His parents, John G. and Mary Louisa (Uhlein) Krug, were natives of Baden, Germany. They emigrated to America in 1853 and settled in New Jersey. They reared a family of seven children, of whom J. G. is the eldest. The family moved from New Jersey to Erie in 1864. J. G. Krug engaged in the shoe business for himself October 3, 1878, and has since devoted his entire attention to that line of trade. In 1883 he built the block which is now occupied by his business. He was married September 21, 1880, to Miss Elenora Brinig, of Erie. They have three children, Elenora, Edward G. and Edna L. Mr. Krug is a member of the C. M. B. A., and politically is a Democrat. The family are members of the Catholic Church.

Frank J. Detzel was born January 24, 1859, in Erie county, the son of Matthias and Apoline Detzel, who came originally from Bavaria, Germany, to Erie in the year 1856. Matthias first engaged in farming in Mill Creek township, and in 1865 engaged in the grocery business on State street, between Eleventh and Twelfth. In 1886 he built on Parade street the first grocery in that part of Erie. While in the grocery business he also engaged in contracting, and in 1873-4 received the contract for paving Sixth street from French to Parade, and Parade street from Sixth to Eighteenth with Medina stone; also laying the Parade street sewer in 1869. The paving contract was the largest ever let by the city of Erie. He is yet living on Parade street, at No. 1306, where he is engaged in the restaurant business. He had twelve children, three of whom are now living: Frank J., Wm. Fison, on the Erie police force, and Joseph E., assistant postmaster. Frank J. received his education in the Erie parochial and public schools, and succeeded his father in the grocery business in 1881. He was married June 30, 1881, to Ida R., daughter of Jacob and Caroline Heidt, also of Bavaria, Germany. The result of this union is five children: Bertie L., Edward M., Olevia, Louisa and Florence. The family are Catholics, being members of St. Mary's Church. Frank J. is a member of the C. M. B. A. and the East Erie Turners. He is a radical reformer in politics, and while he has always supported the Democratic ticket thinks it has room for improvement. He served one term as school director, was a delegate to the Democratic State convention at Harrisburg, and was also on the county and city committee. He has always been successful in business at 1304 Parade street, where in 1892 he built a large and handsome three-story building of brick at the northwest corner of Thirteenth and Parade, and fitted it up with all the latest improvements and conveniences for conducting the grocery business, put an elevator in from basement to top, uses the basement, ground floor and third floor for store purposes, and furnished the second floor for a home, which he occupies with his family. Mr. Detzel possesses the grit and energy native to the German element that have so enriched our fair land, and deserves the prosperity and plenty that nature and fortune have endowed him with. Erie owes to his family much of its wonderful advancement.

Frederick E. Mertens came to Erie county in 1868 from Germany, and is now one of Erie's successful business men, in fact is proprietor of the nickel plating and finishing factory at the corner of Parade and Thirteenth streets, which employs twenty-five men, furnishing the means of subsistence to that many families, and is one of the important industrial plants of this great city. This factory was started in 1880 for manufacturing and plating and finishing the products of many other of Erie's manufactories. The principal and most important article manufactured is a high and low water indicator and alarm for steam boilers.

Charles William Nick was born July 28, 1860, at McKean, Erie county, the son of C. Earnest R. Nick and Mary (Veit) Nick, who came from Estling, Germany, to the United States in 1853 and 1840 respectively; his father was a farmer by occupation and is at present living in Summit township, this county, the father of seven children, of whom Charles W. is the eldest. John H., a farmer; Clara; Emma, wife of S. G. Beckman; Minnie; Ernest G., a dairyman, and Bertha. Charles W. was educated in the Erie public schools, and having a fascination for the drug business, engaged in it at a very early age in the year 1884. He started in the drug trade for himself on Eighteenth and Chestnut in 1885, he then moved to Twenty-fourth and Peach, where he remained until May, 1895, when he sold his business to a Mr. Dumars. He has since erected a factory for the manufacture of several proprietary preparations which he proposes to engage in on quite an extensive scale, manufacturing a full line of remedies from sarsaparilla, smartweed, lake-weed and the numerous medicinal herbs that are natives of this part of the State. The preparation of which he will make a specialty is his Max-i-mus, a horse and cattle powder. He is well-known throughout the country, having sold his remedies from a wagon the past four years. He married March 8, 1883, Mary E. Pollock, daughter of Matthew G. and Margaret (Dunn) Pollock, of Irish-French parentage. They have three children, Carl Theodore, Walter Earnest and Mary Gertrude. They are United Presbyterians and Mr. Nick is a staunch Republican; he is a member of the Masonic fraternity and also a member of the Knights of Pythias. He was one of the incorporators of the Mutual Building and Loan Association of Erie, of which he is a treasurer. The association is purely an Erie enterprise and has a capital of one million dollars, and has met with phenomenal success since the date of its organization.

Jacob Fritz, grocer, Erie, Pa., was born in Heimersheim, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, September 9, 1841, and came to America when ten years of age with his people, who settled here. He is a son of George John Fritz, who was the father of four children: Elizabeth, wife of Lawrence Kostert, a merchant of Erie; John and George (farmers of West Union, Iowa) and Jacob, who, when 14 years old, began the trade of cabinet-making, which he followed for four years; then he began merchandising and has since been very successful in the grocery business in Erie. Mr. Fritz was united in marriage in 1865 with Elizabeth Althoff, born in Eringshausen Kreis, Koblenz, Prussia. To this union was born eleven children: Helen, Martha, Kate, Elizabeth, George, Florence, Walter John, Jacob, jr., Frank Fenner, Clarence E. and Carl E. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Fritz has always taken an active part in developing the social and industrial life of Erie.

Michael Hespelcin, 1026 Parade street, Erie, Pa., is a son of Valentine and Wilhelmina (Schaper) Hespelcin, both natives of Germany. Valentine Hespelcin came to America and located at St. Mary's, Elk county, Pa., where he remained till 1858, when he moved to Erie, Pa., where he died July 14, 1894, aged 76 years. Mrs. Hespelcin still resides in Erie, aged 69 years. To them were born eight children: John (deceased), Minnie (deceased), Frank (deceased), Elizabeth (Mrs. John Schriber, of Erie), Mary (Mrs. John M. Schriber, of Erie), Julius (a shoe merchant in Baltimore), George (a mission father, at present, 1895, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.) and Michael, who received a common-school education at St. Joseph's parochial school, South Erie, and when 12 years of age secured a position as cash boy in the store of I. A. Forman & Bros., where he remained one year. He then went to work for the Lovell Manufacturing Company, staying three and one-half years, then he found employment with Nick Ultsch, in his shoe store, remaining three years. He then went to Baltimore, and was in his brother's shoe store eight months. Returning to Erie, he was employed in J. G. Krug's shoe store, six months, and then became manager for the Eichenlaub estate of the shoe store at the corner of Tenth and Parade streets. Two years later, with E. A. Flugel, he bought out this store, and at the end of three years Mr. Hespelcin bought out his partner and conducted the business one year, then moved the stock to his present location, where he has conducted the business till 1895. Mr. Hespelcin was married, June 27, 1894, to Miss Catherine E., daughter of Francis Reilly, of Erie. They have one son, Joseph G., born March 30, 1895. Mr. and Mrs. Hespelcin are members of St. Peter's Cathedral. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., Fraternal Mystic Circle, and Alphonis Society, of Erie.

Henry S. Bemis, grocer and dealer in boots and shoes, Erie, Pa., was born in Venango township, Erie county, Pa., in 1864. He is a son of Sumner and Eleanor (Henton) Bemis. His mother was of German and Welsh descent, she was a native of Wales. His father, born in New York State, has made farming the business of his life, and still resides on his farm in Venango township, this county. His wife died there in November, 1884. Of their ten children, five are now living in Erie county. Seth, a resident of Greene township; Sumner, jr., resides in Venango township; Elmer E., farmer, Venango; Henry S., merchant, in Erie; Gara, resides with his father on the farm. Henry S. Bemis was reared in Venango township, Erie county, Pa., attended the common schools and worked on the farm with his father until he reached majority, and then followed farming as a business in Venango township until 1891, when he came to Erie and embarked in his present business. In 1895 he bought land and built a store and residence on Parade street, where he is now engaged in business. He has met with more than average success in business since he started out for himself. He was united in marriage in 1889 to Miss Jennie M., daughter of Thomas and Mary (Williams) Carr. Her parents were of Irish-Welsh origin. They have four children. They belong to the Presbyterian Church. Politically he is a Republican.

Abraham John Louch (deceased) was born in Dublin, Ireland, May 20, 1832. He was a son of the late Charles Lilley and Mary Maria (Moulton) Louch. Charles L. Louch is a descendant of the original Norman family of that name, who came to England with William the Conqueror in 1057. It is supposed that the original name was Louche, and that in the course of its anglicization it became first Lowche, and then Louch. It is under these latter names that the arms of the family now in use are registered in the Ancient Heraldry Books of England, and are to be found in Sussex, from which county the great-grandfather of Abraham went to Ireland in 1700. Mary Maria (Moulton) Louch was the daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Abraham Moulton, of Moulton Hall, Norfolk, England, an officer of dragons in the English army. His daughter was born in Lisbon, Portugal, during the campaign under Sir John Moore. Abraham J. Louch completed his education at King's College, Dublin, from which institution he was graduated in 1846. Two years thereafter he was in the employ of Robert Mallett & Sons, manufacturers of railroad supplies, and then went to sea, apprenticed to Fox & Crosby, ship owners of Dublin. In July, 1850, he found himself in port at Erie, and thereafter until the breaking out of the war was engaged in the lake service as master and captain of various sailing craft. In 1861 he enlisted in the service of the United States navy, and continued therein until October, 1865, filling successively the ranks of first master's mate, ensign and master. He was for a time in charge of the recruiting service on the lakes for the navy, and in the spring of 1864 joined the Gettysburg as executive officer. He was transferred from the Gettysburg to the Mackinac and served as the executive officer until after the fall of Petersburg, Va., when he was placed in command. This vessel went out of commission in May, 1865, and her commander returned to his home in Erie. He received an honorable discharge with the thanks of the naval department October 6, 1865. He then purchased a small vessel and engaged in the importing business. In 1866 he was appointed to the command of the United States steamer Watchful, lighthouse tender, a position which he resigned a year later to assume the duties of inspector of customs at Erie, which latter office he held nine months. He then went to Buffalo, where he for one year engaged in a commercial brokerage business. This proving distasteful to him, he returned to sailing, and was in 1869-70 pilot of the revenue cutter Perry. In 1871-2-3 he was master of the United States steamer Search, in the lake survey service. He then returned to the merchant service, and continued to be engaged therein until 1888, when he established a sail and awning manufacturing business in Erie, which he continued until his death, March 30, 1895. Mr. Louch's political affiliations were with the Republican, Greenback and Populist parties. He was the Greenback candidate for coroner in 18—, He was on the People's ticket for the Assembly in 1892, and was the nominee of the same party for State secretary of internal affairs in 1894, when he ran 1,000 votes ahead of his ticket. He was married February 6, 1853, to Mary, daughter of Peter and Mary Doyle, of Dublin. She died in May, 1877, leaving five children: Charles Moulton, a sailing master; William E., a lake engineer; Abraham J., sailor; Mary Ann, wife of William Schaa, a Pittsburg and Erie R. R. employe, and Ella Marca Louch. The family are Romanists and reside at 355 West Second street.

William Loesch, nurseryman, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, August 17, 1837, and is a son of the late Lawrence and Margaret (Daub) Loesch, natives of Bavaria, where they lived until after their marriage. They came to the United States in 1836, locating in Erie, where Lawrence Loesch was engaged in butchering until his death in 1864. His wife died in 1863. William Loesch was associated in business with his father until the latter's death, and for a short time subsequent thereto continued in the butchering business. In 1865 he obtained an omnibus line in Erie, which business was in 1870 purchased by and became merged in the street railway company. He then re-engaged in his old business. In 1875 he built a large packing house at the corner of Twenty-first and State streets, which was blown down shortly after its completion, involving Mr. Loesch in a heavy loss and leading him to sell out the site of the packing house and its ruins to Hon. M. B. Lowry. Mr. Loesch continued butchering until 1890, when he embarked exclusively in the business of importing German prune trees, in which he is still engaged. He has since added a full line of nursery stock and shrubs. He married, in 1857, Margaret, daughter of the late Peter Simon, an old resident of Erie. They have four children, Joseph, Edward, Ida and Mary. Joseph is an Erie butcher, and married Emma Dranze; they have two children, Harry and Annie. Edward is also a butcher; he married Rose, daughter of George McClellan, of East Mill Creek, Erie county; they have two children, Frederick and Annie. Ida married Frederick Miller, a plumber of Erie. They have three children, William, John and Frederick. Mary married H. A. Ross, of Corry, Pa., a conductor on the P. & E. R. R.; they have one child, Charles. Mr. and Mrs. William Loesch reside at the corner of Twenty-first and Holland streets.

Morril Wilson Smart, cashier of the Erie Electric Motor Company, Erie, Pa., born in Crocyden, N. H., September 6, 1830. He received a common school education, occupied several clerical positions, was clerk in the postoffice at Battle Creek, Mich., from 1845 till 1849, when, lured by the startling discoveries of gold in California, he went to the Pacific coast, where he remained for two years, whence he returned considerably poorer, but very much wiser. In 1860 he took up his residence in Greenville, Mercer county, Pa., and was for a period of twenty-nine years thereafter employed as an American express messenger and United States mail agent on the R. & P. R. R. In 1864 he removed his family to Erie, Pa., where they have ever since resided. In 1890 Mr. Smart assumed the duties of the position he now occupies, and has had thirty-three years' experience in the United States mail service.

John and George Steimer, brothers, Erie, Pa., were born in Bavaria, the former in 1837, and the latter in 1839. John came to the United States when 15 years of age, and was followed by his brother, George, eight years later. Both located, immediately upon reaching this country, in Erie, where they have ever since resided. John was a carpenter by trade, and pursued the business of carpentry contracting until May, 1894. George was a cooper, and followed that vocation until 1874, when he opened a saloon at Twelfth and State streets, removing subsequently to Myrtle and Twelfth, then to Eighteenth, near Wayne, and in May, 1894, became associated with his brother, John, in the same business at Eighteenth and Parade. In April, 1895, John sold his interest to his son, Valentine, and the restaurant is now conducted under the joint proprietorship of George and Valentine Steimer. John Steimer married Lena Nellis. They have eight children: Valentine, John, Edward, Julius, Kate, Mary, Minnie and Elizabeth. Valentine was born in Erie, February 15, 1863. He was married to Marian, daughter of the late Sebastian Kirschner, a carpenter and contractor of Erie, and has one child, Eveline Marie. The family reside at 438 East Tenth street, and attend St. Mary's Church. Edward Steimer, a molder by trade, married Kate Gilloyle, of Erie, and has one child, Edward; Kate Steimer married William Eistert, a molder, and has four children: Mary Steimer married Edward Blenner, restaurant keeper, at Eleventh and Ash lane, and has two children; George Steimer married Minnie Simons, who died, leaving three children: George, Frederick and Joseph, who reside with their father at the corner of Eighteenth and Parade streets, and are members of St. Mary's Church.

William Michael Zimmer, merchant, Erie, Pa., was born in Gebelarod, Hesse-Darmstadt, April 30, 1856. He is a son of the late Conrad and Elizabeth (Erb) Zimmer, natives of the same place, who came to this country in 1873, and located in Erie county, Pa., where they continued to reside throughout their lives, for a time on a farm in West Mill Creek township, and latterly in the city of Erie. Conrad Zimmer died in January, 1892, and his wife died in February, 1893. W. M. Zimmer received his education in the schools of his native place, for a time assisted his father in farming, and was then for two years an employe in the Krupp Gun factory. He accompanied his parents to the United States, attended school for six months in Mill Creek township, and, in April, 1874, came to Erie and obtained a position as clerk in J. F. Decker's store on West Eighteenth street, where he remained until 1880. On February 12, 1880, he established himself in the grocery business at 542 West Eighteenth street. Two years later he purchased the block at the southeast corner of Eighteenth and Cherry streets, removed his grocery to that location and added to it a dry goods and boot and shoe department, and there continued business for twelve years. Mr. Zimmer has served the city government as a member of the common council from the Sixth ward. He was married March 27, 1881, to Anna, daughter of the late Daniel and Mary (Harding) Houck, of McKean township, Erie county, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmer have four children, Blanch, William, Harry and Charles, reside at 1815 Cherry street, and are members of the English Lutheran Church.

Thomas Pickering, liveryman, Erie, Pa., was born in East Islington, Yorkshire, England, June 27, 1845. He is a son of the late Harland and Elizabeth (Day) Pickering, who came to this country and located in Trafalgar township, Ontario, in 1848, where Harland Pickering pursued farming throughout his life, and died in 1874. His wife survived until 1885. Thomas Pickering received a common school education, assisted his father upon the farm until 1866, when he came to Erie, soon thereafter removing to the oil regions, where he was engaged in business for seven years. Returning to Erie in 1873 he established a livery business on Eighteenth street, between Peach and State, where he remained twelve years, when he removed to his present location, 145-147 West Eighteenth street, where he built in 1885. Mr. Pickering is a Republican, was a member of the select council from the Third ward, a member of the school board from the same ward and is now a member of the select council from the Sixth ward. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. and B. P. O. E. He was married January 12, 1874, to Katherine, daughter of Antone Knoll, an old resident and business man of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Pickering have one child, Hutz, a student at the Erie Business University, and reside at 145 West Eighteenth street.

Leslie B. Moore (deceased), Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, May 25, 1822. He is a son of the late John T. and Sarah Anne (Russell) Moore. John T. Moore came from Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, and located at Waterford, Erie county, Pa., in 1798, and settled in Erie in 1816. He served in the war of 1812, and followed hotel keeping in Waterford and Erie. Leslie B. Moore had a common school education, and then learned the trade of stationary engineer, which avocation he pursued until 1872, when he retired from business. He was married December 25, 1847, to a daughter of the late Thomas Stewart. He came to Erie in 1819, removed to Pittsburg in 1820, and returned to Erie in 1832, where he continued to reside throughout his life, being engaged in business as a contractor. He was a valuable citizen, contributing freely of time and money toward every public, educational and Christian enterprise. He held numerous positions of trust, among them those of Burgess, director of the poor and assessor. He was one of the founders and a liberal supporter of the First Baptist Church. Mr. Moore died in 1877. Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Moore had four children, three of whom survive. John B. (deceased) was a civil engineer. The surviving children are: Edson T. Moore, of the firm of Moore, Winschel & Co., carpet dealers and drapers; Anna L., wife of L. E. Foot, of the Lake Shore road, of Erie (they have two children, Clara H. and Frank A.); and Stewart L. Moore, general ticket agent of the Northern Pacific R. R., with headquarters in St. Paul, Minn. Edson T. Moore married Georgia, daughter of Capt. ——— Davis, of Erie. They have two children, Edna and Lillian. Stewart L. Moore married Miss May Norwood, of Quincy, Ill. They have one child, Lillian. Mr. and Mrs. Leslie B. Moore and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Foot reside at 248 West Eighth street.

Samuel Heiss, grocer, Erie, Pa., was born in Fairview township, Erie county, Pa., November 10, 1843. He is a son of the late Samuel and Anna (Roland) Heiss. Samuel Heiss enlisted September 2, 1861, at Mishawaka, Ind., in Co. I, 9th Ind. V. I., as a private and served with that command until January 18, 1863, when he was discharged to re-enlist in the marine service, being assigned to the United States steamer Diana. His battle list includes: Greenbrier River, Buffalo Mountain, Va., Shiloh, siege of Corinth, Duck River, siege of Vicksburg, Austin, Miss., Tenees Bayou, Richmond, La., Sunnyside Landing, Coalman Cross Roads, Port Gibson, Grand Gulf, Red River expedition and Lake Village, La. He was in the hospital at Corinth, Hamburg and Evansville about three months in 1862 with lung trouble and general disability, and May, 1863, was paralyzed by the discharge of cannon, but recovered speedily. He was discharged at Vicksburg, January 18, 1865. Three brothers, Elan W., Daniel B. and David G. Heiss, also served in the War of the Rebellion, the two former in the 48th Ind. V. I., and the latter in the 9th Ind. V. I. Elan Heiss died at Corinth, Miss., July 7, 1862. David G. Heiss died shortly after the war closed. The maternal great-grandfather of the Heiss brothers was a soldier in the patriot army during the War of the Revolution. Samuel Heiss is one of the proprietors of a prosperous grocery business at the corner of Eighteenth and Poplar streets. He has served as a census enumerator for the Tenth Pennsylvania district, and is now serving his fourth term as a member of the Erie school board and was for two years presiding officer of that body. He is a member of Strong Vincent Post, No. 67, G. A. R. He was married May 6, 1875, to Minnie Bach, who was born in Germany March 8, 1851. Mr. and Mrs. Heiss and children, Minnie, Leona and Ruby, reside at 1710 Poplar street.

Henry Clay Aubrey, commercial traveler, Erie, Pa., was born in McKean township, Erie county, Pa., September 1, 1842. He is the youngest child of the late James and Nancy (Harrison) Aubrey, the former a native of Vermont and of English-French descent, the latter a native of New York and of English-Irish descent. John F. Aubrey the grandfather of the immediate subject of these memoirs, was surgeon of the Queen's Legion of Field and Hospital, and volunteered a surgeon to the United States in the war of 1812, a service which cost him his rank and fortune. His son James, born in 1800, was a farmer and stock dealer until his death (May 6, 1856), in McKean township, where his father had located his family in 1812. He was a good citizen and filled numerous positions of trust. Henry C. Aubrey was educated in the public schools of McKean township and at Waterford Academy. He enlisted April 17, 1861, in Co. A, Erie Zouaves, Capt. T. M. Austin. August 9, 1862, he re-enlisted in the 45th P. V. I., which regiment served in the 1st div., 2d army corps. He was at Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Mine Run and the battles of the Wilderness. At the battle of Gettysburg he was shot through the right thigh, and was in consequence furloughed for six weeks. At the battle of Cold Harbor, June 3, 1864, his right arm was shot off, and he was discharged from the service September 13, 1864. Returning to Erie county, he attended the Edinboro Normal School, and thereafter taught school at intervals and in various places until 1869, when he started into business as a commercial traveler, selling goods through the oil regions of Pennsylvania. The following year he went to Lincoln county, Nevada, where he established a real estate and general collection agency, which he conducted until 1872, when he returned to Pennsylvania and found employment on the Advocate in Pittsburg. After a short period of service to that journal he re-engaged in business as a commercial traveler, handling goods for numerous establishments, in which business he is still engaged. He is a Republican and was his party's candidate for clerk of the courts, and for member of the Assembly. While a resident of Waterford he was seven years (1875 to 1882) a justice of the peace. He was married September 24, 1874, to Phoebe J., daughter of the late William Barnett, a farmer of Waterford township. She died March 24, 1886, leaving four children, Vere P., William H., Anna C. and Florence E. Aubrey. He was married a second time to Carrie E., daughter of the late Mr. Carlin, a farmer of Conneaut, Ohio. Two children have been born of this marriage, Ruth M. and Glenn C. Aubrey. The family reside at 1813 Holland street and attend the First Presbyterian Church.

William Graham (deceased), one of the earliest settlers of Erie county, was born in Bellefonte, Centre county, Pa., November 21, 1795, coming to Erie county with his parents in 1803. They located about six miles south of Erie, in what was then Crawford county (now Summit township, Erie county). He lived with his parents until 1818, when he purchased the farm he ever after lived on from George W. Reed. Mr. Graham endured all the hardships incident to clearing and cultivating a new country. He came all the way from Centre county on horseback, through dense and boundless forests, broken here and there by narrow paths, only to be followed by the blazed trees along them.

He was the oldest of a family of seven children, all of whom are now deceased. Mr. Graham was a soldier in the war of 1812, serving with credit, although but 17 years of age when war was declared. He was a man of sterling honesty and uprightness. For twenty years he acted as a justice of the peace, conducting the affairs of his district in so successful a manner that it was rarely heard of in court. He died August 24, 1882, aged 86 years. He left two children, Jackson J. Graham and Maggie E., wife of the late Clark Ewing. Jackson J. Graham was married in 1864 to Lavina E., daughter of the late James Robinson, of Mill Creek township, Erie county. She died February 20, 1890, leaving one daughter, Emma E. Graham.

Clark Ewing, Erie, Pa., who married Maggie E., daughter of William and Elizabeth Graham, was born in Erie. He was a student at Columbia Law College, New York, studied law under the preceptorship of Judge Wm. A. Galbraith, was admitted to the bar December 24, 1863, and in the same month went to Titusville, Pa., where he formed a law partnership with F. B. Guthrie. He was married February 16, 1865, and died October 10, 1869, leaving two children, William G. and Echo E. Ewing. Mr. Ewing was zealously devoted to his profession and enjoyed a lucrative practice. He was likewise an active and stirring politician, and exerted much personal influence in the Democratic party. He was a public-spirited citizen, an open-handed friend, possessing the warmest of hearts and the most generous of dispositions. His professional career was characterized by such integrity, ability and energy as gave promise of distinction and eminence, and won for him the confidence of his fellow-citizens. His widow resides at No. 137 East Eighth street, Erie Pa. Her son, William G. Ewing, was married September 8, 1892, to Jennie, daughter of Alexander Maxwell, an old resident of Erie. Mrs. Clark Ewing's daughter was married April 14, 1891, to Thomas W. Walker, of the Erie Paper Company.

Nicholas Lochner (deceased), Erie, Pa., was born in Mirsbach, Bavaria, September 2, 1824, and died at Erie, Pa., September 26, 1889. He was a son of Peter Lochner, a native of Bavaria, as were their ancestors as far back as the genealogy of the family is traceable. Nicholas Lochner was a farmer in the fatherland, and when, as a young man (1852) he came to this country, he pursued the same calling for one year in Cataaugus county, New York. He then came to Erie, and found employment with Joseph Seelinger, grocer, with whom he remained for three years. Following this, he was with A. Steimer, grocer, for one year. He was next engaged, for three years, in selling oil-cloths for Edward Camphausen and George Killing. In 1859 he had charge of a feed store for John Eliot, and while thus engaged ran a restaurant of his own on Turnpike street. In 1860 he was foreman of a coal gang for Scott & Hearn, and also conducted a restaurant at the foot of State street. In 1861 he started a flour and feed store at 1214 State street, with A. Meyer, under the firm name of Meyer & Co. This partnership was dissolved in 1868, Mr. Meyer purchasing the interest of his partner, who then embarked in the fish business with Jacob Heidt and John A. Sutter. In 1870 Mr. Lochner established himself in the grocery business, at the corner of Twenty-eighth and Parade streets, removing one year later to the store which he built at Twenty-sixth and Parade, where the business has ever since been carried on. He was an active Democrat, and served as alderman from 1872 to 1877, and as a county committeeman for several years. He was married twice; in 1861 to Caroline, daughter of Michael Kuhn, an old resident of Erie. She died in 1871, leaving five children, Amand, Josephine, Mary, Charles and Caroline. His second marriage, January, 1872, was to Mrs. Milleck, of Erie, by whom he had no children. She survives, and resides at Twenty-sixth and Parade. Amand Lochner, the eldest son, was born October 2, 1862, educated at the public and parochial schools of Erie; entered his father's store when 14 years of age; became his partner at 21, and succeeded to the business at his decease. He was married, September 6, 1887, to Lena, daughter of Frank Mangold, an old resident and business man of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Amand Lochner have three children, Caroline, Charles and Julia, and reside at 414 East Twenty-sixth street. They are members of St. John's Church. Mary Lochner is the widow of the late John Lochner, of Pittsburg, Pa. Charles Lochner is engaged in the gentlemen's furnishing goods business at Twenty-sixth and Parade streets. He married Mary, daughter of P. McEnery, a farmer of Greene township, Erie county. Josephine and Caroline Lochner are unmarried.

David F. Diefenderfer, lake yard master of the P. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born September 6, 1844, in Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, and is a son of the late Solomon and Nancy (Ahner) Diefenderfer, natives of Pennsylvania, the former of Swiss descent, the latter of Dutch descent. They removed to Mercer county during the childhood of David, where they continued to reside throughout their lives. Solomon Diefenderfer was born September 9, 1801. He died March 25, 1884. His wife was born July 18, 1801, and died October 11, 1880. David F. Diefenderfer received such education as was afforded by the public schools of his native township. The year subsequent to his arrival at maturity was spent in assisting in the work upon his father's farm. In 1855 he came to Erie, and found employment in the freight service on the old Erie and Pittsburg R. R., then owned and controlled by the late William L. Scott. He continued in the employment of that road until it became a part of the Pennsylvania system. He has ever since been in the employ of that system, having been successively promoted until 1885, when he was appointed to his present position, that of yard master at the lake yards of the Pennsylvania lines at Erie. Mr. Diefenderfer was married in August, 1873, to Elizabeth Rosebaugh. She died February, 1879, leaving one son, Frank H. Diefenderfer, now an employe of the Pennsylvania lines at Erie. David F. Diefenderfer was again married to Frances J., daughter of the late Festus Giddings, own cousin of the late distinguished Abolitionist, Senator Joshua R. Giddings, of Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Diefenderfer reside at 415 Chestnut street, and are members of the Central Presbyterian Church, of whose board of trustees he was a member for eight years. Mr. Diefenderfer is a member of the A. O. U. W. and K. of H.

Frederick Winschel, merchant, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, July 17, 1847. He is a son of the late John Michael and Mary Conn (Hammer) Winschel. The former was born in 1814 and the latter in 1813, in Neupfotz, Rheinisch Bavaria, where they were married and whence they came to the United States in 1841, locating at Erie, where they continued to reside throughout their lives. John M. Winschel was for many years the leading stone mason and contractor for masonry in the city of Erie, and laid the foundations of many of its most important structures. He was run over and killed at the Union Depot crossing by a Lake Shore engine, July 11, 1893; his wife died in 1877. Frederick Winschel was educated in the parochial and public schools of Erie, learned the shoe-making trade, and followed that vocation from 1862 to 1882. From 1875 to 1880 he was the proprietor of a custom boot and shoe shop. After his return to Erie he became identified with the business department of the Observer, with which he remained two and a half years. For six months thereafter he was engaged in the insurance business with Frank Schlaudecker. In June, 1885, he was appointed superintendent of letter carriers at Erie, a position which he occupied throughout the entire term of Postmaster Shannon, and for six months under Postmaster Hilton. In January, 1890, he was associated with E. F. Moore in establishing a carpet and drapery business, with which he is still connected, and which is carried on in the Kessler Block, 1118 State street, under the firm name of Moore, Winschel & Co. He was married March 31, 1867, to Rose, daughter of John Altermatt, a pioneer citizen of Erie, where he still resides, and is (1895) in his 93d year. Mr. and Mrs. Winschel have two children, Miss Rose Elizabeth, a teacher in the public schools of Erie, and Josephine Mary Winschel. The family reside at 150 West Thirteenth street, and are members of St. Peter's Cathedral. Mr. Winschel is a member of the Knights of Honor and Woodmen of the World.

Jonas Bowers, contractor, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., May 8, 1830. He is a son of the late John and Ann (Quakenbosch) Bowers, the former a native of New York, and of English descent, the latter a native of Holland, whose parents came to the United States, locating in Erie. John Bowers settled in Erie in 1804, where he was married and was for many years engaged in business as a carpenter and joiner. He died in 1851; his wife died in 1860. Jonas Bowers received a common school education, learned the carpenter's trade and worked with his father until 1854, when he formed a partnership with the late Capt. James Dunlap, with whom he was engaged in the business of pier-building until 1879, since which time he has been engaged in the same business alone. Mr. Bowers built the public docks of Erie, and was engaged upon other improvements in that city, and has done much work for the government in pier-building and pile-driving. He was married January 5, 1854, to Helen Susan, daughter of the late Capt. James Dunlap. Four children have been born of this union: Mary, wife of James Culver, an oil dealer of Erie, to whom three children have been born, Frederick, Florence and Clara; George Bowers, an employe of Trask, Prescott & Richardson, who married Cora, daughter of Dr. D. P. Robbins, of Erie, and who have two children, Ruth and Evert; Harriet, wife of Frederick Sullivan, an employe of Foreman Bros., dry-goods merchants of Erie, and who have one child, Seward; and Frank Bowers, unmarried, an employe of Trask, Prescott & Richardson. Mr. and Mrs. Bowers and son Frank reside at 152 West Second street. Mr. Jonas Bowers is an active member of the A. O. U. W. The family attend the First Baptist Church of Erie.

Robert T. Walker, superintendent of street work, Erie Water Works, Erie, Pa., was born in Pittsburg, Pa., August 10, 1845. He is a son of the late Robert and Rachel (Firman) Walker, the former a native of England and the latter of Ireland. The firmans came to the United States in 1828, and settled in what was then known as "Jerusalem," now the Fourth ward of the city of Erie. Thomas Firman, the head of the family, was engaged in contracting, and latterly was a farmer. The elder Robert Walker came to the United States when a young man, and in 1840 located in Erie, where he married, and was for a time engaged in the meat business in the old market house in West Park. He was for a time interested in the construction of the old Erie and Waterford plank road. During the latter years of his life he was a railroad contractor, and was identified with the construction of a number of railroads in the southeastern part of Ohio, Illinois and Missouri. He died in 1855. The son, Robert, received his education in the public schools, and in 1859 he commenced to learn the trade of a blacksmith with James M. Zuck and brother, on the corner of Sixteenth and Peach streets, where Zuck's blacksmith shop now stands, and followed it principally up to 1886, excepting two years (1862-3) spent in the oil regions. Returning to Erie, he purchased the interest of James M. Zuck, and from 1870 to 1874 he was proprietor of the Erie City Hotel and livery stable, at Eighteenth and Peach streets. In 1874 he sold a half interest in the livery business to Thomas Pickering, and the firm was known as Walker & Pickering. Later he sold his entire interest to Mr. Pickering and became interested in the Union Carriage Works. This business he sold in 1876 to Mr. Merrill, of Titusville, Pa., after which he was a member of a number of firms engaged in blacksmithing in Erie. In 1886, he was appointed superintendent of streets for the city of Erie, and in 1890 was made superintendent of construction of the P., S. & L. E. R. R. from Lockport to its connection with the Nickel Plate. In 1891 he was appointed to his present position, as superintendent of street work for the Erie Water Works. Mr. Walker served one term as a member of the common council from the Sixth ward. He is a member of a number of beneficiary orders and the Erie Mennerchor. He was married August 8, 1868, to Anna B., daughter of Anton Knoll, an old resident and well-known veteran musician of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have one daughter, Margaret E., an accomplished musician on the violin and piano. They reside at No. 132 West Twentieth street.

Henry Clinton Stafford, Erie, Pa., was born in Waterford, Erie county, Pa., January 29, 1842. He is a son of the late Henry Clinton and Elizabeth (Leland) Stafford, the former a native of New York, and of English descent, the latter a native of New Jersey and of English-Dutch extraction. The Stafford family located in Erie county about 1822, and the Lelands several years later. Henry C. Stafford, sr., was born in 1814, was married in Waterford, and pursued farming and worked at his trade (that of mason and bricklayer) in Waterford township throughout his life. He held numerous township offices, and was one of the founders of the First Methodist Church of Waterford, built the church structure, and was one of its officers for many years up to the time of his death. He was an honored and useful citizen and a Christian gentleman. He died in February, 1880, and his wife in September, 1889. Henry C. Stafford, jr., completed his education at the Waterford Academy, learned his father's trade, worked at it and upon his father's farm until 20 years of age, when, in response to his country's call for volunteers to suppress the rebellion, he enlisted June, 1862, in Co. E, 83d P. V. I., and was immediately sent to the front with the Army of the Potomac. At the second battle of Bull Run, August 30, 1862, private Stafford was most terribly wounded, receiving two gunshot wounds in the left leg, one through the left lung, one through the left shoulder, one through the left arm and one through the neck, besides which he received a number of minor wounds from small fragments of an exploded shell. He was left on the field of battle for dead, and was so reported. He remained there prostrate, unattended and unconscious, for two days and nights. His first clear recollection was that of ascertaining his whereabouts the following December, when he was very slowly gaining a feeble hold upon life in Mercy Hospital at Washington, D. C. He received his discharge January 29, 1863, and returned home. He was given a position at Waterford in the office of Provost Marshal Hugh Campbell, ex-colonel of the 83d P. V. I., who had also been seriously wounded at Bull Run. At the close of the war, in consequence of the abolishment of this office, Mr. Stafford found employment as manager of the general store of Campbell & Fotheringham, at Waterford. Two years later both these gentlemen went West, and Mr. Stafford returned to his farm, where he remained until 1873. During this period he held the office of constable, tax-collector and deputy sheriff under General Thomas Walker. In 1873 he was appointed deputy under Sheriff Hyner, and in that year removed to Erie to assume the duties of that office. In 1876 he was re-appointed deputy under Sheriff Stuerzick, and in 1879 was the Republican nominee for the office of sheriff, to which he was elected by the very large majority of 3,000. He served the full term, giving the county efficient service. On July 17, 1883, he was appointed by President Arthur collector of customs for the port of Erie, which appointment was confirmed by the United States Senate December 26th following. Shortly after President Cleveland's inauguration Mr. Stafford resigned the collectorship, his resignation to take effect from the qualifying of his successor, but he was not released from the duties of that office until January 1, 1886. For two and a half years thereafter he was employed in the business department of the Erie Dispatch. He was then appointed as tax-collector, to which position he has been successively appointed each year since, and is now an incumbent. He was married January 5, 1865, to Effa R., daughter of Peter P. Judson, one of the pioneer residents of Waterford township, and for many years connected with all of the leading industries of that community. He and his wife still survive and reside in Waterford, where they have spent a happy married life together of sixty-seven years. Mr. and Mrs. Stafford have four surviving children: Phebe E. (wife of Charles A. Ashen, bookkeeper and telegrapher at the Pittsburg docks, Erie), Peter P. Stafford (a clerk in Dr. B. A. Smith's pharmacy, Erie) and William C. and James G. Stafford. Mr. and Mrs. Ashen reside at 922 Chestnut street. Mr. and Mrs. Stafford and sons reside at 112 East Eighteenth street, and attend the First Methodist Church. Mr. Stafford is a member of Strong Vincent Post, G. A. R., the Union Veteran Legion and the Erie Mænnerchor.

Christopher Byron Aaron, Erie, Pa., was born near Williamsport, Pa., February 18, 1850. He is a son of Jacob and Agnes (Fossler) Aaron, natives of Bavaria, where they were married, and where he was engaged in the wine business. They came to the United States in 1848, locating near Williamsport, Susquehanna county, Pa. Here he engaged in farming and continued to reside until 1856, when he removed to Erie. He was first engaged in hotel keeping at the corner of Peach and Fourteenth streets, and was for a short time thereafter engaged in Harbor Creek township, but returning to Erie April 1, 1865, he became a railroad contractor, in which business he was engaged until 1875, when he retired. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Aaron reside at 406 West Eighteenth street, and are members of the English Lutheran Church. Their son, Christopher B. Aaron, was educated in the public schools at Erie, learned the trade of barber, and opened a shop at 402 West Eighteenth street, where he was engaged in business until 1869. In the latter year he went to the oil regions and found employment at an oil refining establishment in Titusville. A year later, upon the death of the proprietor of the Lowry House, Titusville, Mr. Aaron rented that hotel and continued to manage it until its destruction by fire in 1874. Following this he was engaged two years in running the Duff House, Titusville, and for the next two years was proprietor of the Franklin House of the same place. In 1879 he returned to Erie and opened a restaurant at 402 West Eighteenth street, continuing it until April 1, 1887. He was then engaged for several years as agent for the Eureka Mineral Springs Company, of Saegertown, Pa. In 1889 he was appointed collector of city taxes for the Third ward, Erie, a position to which he was reappointed each year until the spring of 1895. From 1890 to 1895, with the exception of one year, he also acted as school tax collector for the same ward. Mr. Aaron has contributed in a material way to the growth of Erie by the erection of a substantial business block at Nos. 402, 404 and 406 West Eighteenth street and dwelling houses at 421, 423 and 425 West Sixteenth street, at 1810 Chestnut, 1718 Chestnut and his own handsome residence at 1716 Chestnut street. He was married January 11, 1876, to Anna Louise, daughter of Christopher Wittwer, a native of the canton of Berne, Switzerland, and now a resident of Monticello, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Aaron have two children, Elgie May and Lora, a pupil in the High School class of '97, reside at 1716 Chestnut street, and are members of the English Lutheran Church. Mr. Aaron is a member of the A. O. U. W.

David Henry Edwards, Erie, Pa., was born in Utica, N. Y., March 29, 1837. He is a son of the late David and Ellen (Morris) Edwards, natives of Bala, North Wales. The Morris family came to the United States and located in Oneida county, New York. David Edwards came to America when a young man and settled in Utica, where he was married and engaged in business until his death. His wife survives and resides in Utica. David H. Edwards was educated in the public schools and high school of Utica and at the Whitestown Academy, and then took a commercial course at the McCreary & Shields Business College, receiving his diploma therefrom in June, 1877. He then started for the far West, but obtaining a book-keepership with the firm of William Lawrence & Co., stock dealers, of Delaware, Ohio, he remained with that firm three years and then located at Cranesville, Erie county, Pa., where he established a general store, which he ran in connection with the postmastership for nine years. In 1889 he came to Erie and engaged in business as manager of the People's Shoe Store. While thus employed he received the Republican nomination for county auditor. He was elected and served a full term of three years, during the first year of which he continued his association with the People's Shoe Store. During the last year of his term as auditor he received the appointment of chief clerk under Poltmaster Hilton. The latter position he resigned July 5, 1894, to accept the position of office manager and bookkeeper for the Lake Shore Nurseries, with which he is still connected. He was married March 2, 1880, to Mary L., daughter of John Godenow, who came from Oswego, N. Y., and settled in Cranesville, Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards have three children, Lottie, Frank and Ellen, reside at 420 Chestnut street. Mr. Edwards is a member of the Knights of Honor.

Bennett Thomas Jones, partner in the Lake City Machine Shop, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., December 21, 1855. He is a son of the late Bennett and Nora (Griffin) Jones, the former a native of Wales, and the latter of Ireland. They were married in Erie. During the war Mr. Bennett Jones was assistant engineer on U. S. S. Michigan and subsequently served as engineer of the Erie Water Works. Both Mr. and Mrs. Jones died in February, 1892. Bennett T. Jones received his education in the public schools of Erie, learned the machinist's trade in the Erie City Iron Works, and has been variously employed in that vocation ever since. He was for two years in charge of the radiator department of the Jarecki Company's Twelfth street manufactory, and in 1892 formed his present partnership association with Herman Ey in the establishment of the Lake City Machine Shop. Mr. Jones is also night foreman of the Erie forge. He was married April 12, 1883, to Rose, daughter of Robert Reed, a farmer of Crawford county. She died July 17, 1892, leaving three children, Reed Bennett, Nora Gertrude, and Anna Bernice. Mr. Jones resides at 423 West Eleventh street, and is a member of St. Peter's Church.

B. E. Town

Michael Foran, Erie, Pa., was born in county Tipperary, Ireland, in 1828, came to the United States in 1849, and located in Erie in 1851. He found immediate employment as a railroad repairer, and was thus engaged until 1858. During the railroad war of 1852 he was one of a number of the employes of the Cleveland and Erie R. R. whose work was torn up by citizens, as fast as completed, and who were each day subjected to arrest and incarceration over night, only to be bailed out by the railroad company and put to work the following day. Mr. Foran had this unpleasant experience for many days, and until the cessation of hostilities. He was married in 1853 to Joanna Crotty, also a native of Tipperary, Ireland. They have had eight children, of whom a daughter and six sons survive. The daughter is Miss Mary Foran; the sons are Richard Foran, a freight conductor on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R.; William and Edward Foran, grocers at 810 West Twelfth street, Erie; Thomas Foran, telegraph operator for the Pennsylvania Company at Erie; John Foran, car repairer of the Pennsylvania Company at Erie, and Michael Foran, an employe of Trask, Prescott & Richardson, Erie. John Foran married Margaret Maloney, of Erie county. The family reside at 818 West Twelfth street, and are members of the Roman Catholic Church.

Charles Morgan Samuel Martz, groceryman, Erie, Pa., was born at Girard, Crawford county, Kan., January 17, 1875. He is a son of James G. and Anna Morgan Martz, natives of Erie county, Pa., the former of German and the latter of Scotch-Irish descent. James G. Martz is a son of the late Samuel Martz, who located at Lowville, Erie county, Pa., about 1832, and followed farming throughout his life. His son, James, was the proprietor of a general store in Greenfield township until 1869, when he removed to Girard, Kan., where he was engaged in the grocery business until 1878, when he returned to Erie county and repurchased his old store in Greenfield. In November, 1890, he sold out and retired from business. He removed to Erie in 1892, where he now resides at the corner of Twentieth and Brandes streets. Mr. and Mrs. James G. Martz are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Their children are: Warren and Charles M. S. Martz. The former is engaged in business at Ashtabula, O., and the latter is proprietor of the grocery at Eighteenth street and East avenue. He completed his education at the Ohio Normal University, Ada, O., in 1892.

George Burgess Morgan, contractor, Erie, Pa., was born in Greenfield township, Erie county, Pa.,

February 22, 1852. He is a son of Charles and Ann (Boyd) Morgan, the former a native of the county Kent, England, and the latter of county Down, Ireland. Charles Morgan was born January 13, 1815, and his wife August 8, 1812. Both came to the United States in childhood with their respective families, the Morgans locating in Chautauqua county, New York, whence they removed in 1828 to Greenfield township, Erie county, and the Boyds taking up their permanent residence immediately upon their arrival in this country, in 1822, in Venango township, Erie county. Charles Morgan was married in Venango township, and followed farming there for a short time, then removing to a farm which he had purchased in Greenfield township, where he has ever since resided, and where he has been engaged in farming principally, and from time to time in mercantile pursuits. He has held numerous township trusts. His wife died November 16, 1891. George B. Morgan was educated in the schools of Greenfield township. In 1875 he went to Girard, Crawford county, Kas., where he was engaged for two years in purchasing grain and as agent for the sale of nursery stock. Returning to Pennsylvania in 1877, he established a general store in Greenfield township, where he was engaged in business for eight years. In 1886 he purchased a farm at Shattuck's Corners, Greenfield township, where he started another general store, which he ran in connection with the postmastership until 1890. In 1893 he established a store at Ashtabula, Ohio, which he sold a year later and returned to Erie county. On April 1, 1894, he opened the grocery at the corner of Eighteenth street and East avenue with Charles Martz, to whom he sold his interest in August of the same year. Since January 1, 1895, Mr. Morgan has been associated with Elmer Wright in the Fairview Heat and Light Company, which has the exclusive right to pipe and furnish gas to that borough; he also does a contracting business in drilling gas, oil, artesian and ordinary wells. Mr. Morgan is a Democrat, and has been a delegate to numerous county conventions. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and Protected Home Circle. He was married December 21, 1855, to Edith, daughter of the late Samuel Crawford, a native of Scotland, but for many years prior to his death a farmer of Greenfield township, Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan have two children, Charles and Kittie May, and reside at Eighteenth street and East avenue. They reside on the corner of Twentieth and Brandes streets.

Charles Volland, grocer, Erie, Pa., was born in Saxe-Weimar, Germany, March 1, 1842. He is a son of the late Leopold and Frederika (Hage) Volland, natives of Germany, where they were married, and where he was engaged in cabinet making until 1854, when they came to the United States, locating in Erie county. Leopold Volland followed his trade in Erie for some years, and then purchased a farm in Mill Creek township, where he spent the remainder of his life. He died in 1869, his wife in 1876. Charles Volland had a common school education, learned the printer's trade and worked in Erie newspaper offices until 1860. He then went to Titusville, where he learned the cooperage trade and was engaged in that until 1878. Returning to Erie, he was variously employed until 1880, when he established himself in the grocery business at the corner of Eighth and Ash streets, his present location. He was a member of the Common Council of Erie in 1884. Mr. Vollard was married, November 14, 1869, to Margaret, daughter of Leonard Hodam, an old resident of Erie. Their children are: Louisa, wife of August Albrecht, shipping clerk with C. A. Curtze, Erie; Charles F., clerk in his father's store; Henry Emil, plumber, and Minnie, August, Adolph, Elizabeth, Mary and Frederick. The family reside at Eighth and Ash streets, and are members of the German Lutheran Church.

John Bryce, V. S., Erie, Pa., was born in Mt. Pleasant, Brant county, Ontario, Canada, in 1845, and is one of a family of five brothers and two sisters, the children of George and Margaret C. Bryce, who came from Doune, Scotland, in 1843. The continuous residence for over fifty years in one of the oldest settlements of Ontario has made Mr. George Bryce and his family well known amongst the early Canadians, not only for the sterling worth of the old pioneer, who is now approaching his eightieth birthday, but also because of the prominent positions his sons have made for themselves in the different places they have made their homes. The eldest son, the Rev. Prof. George Bryce, S. L. B., was amongst the earliest settlers from ——— to go to the newly created Province of Manitoba. Leaving his University and Theological Seminary in 1871, the professor was commissioned by the Presbyterian Church of Canada to establish a college near Fort Garry, on the Red River of the North, as a center of learning for the Presbyterian youth of the colony. He has seen his work grow into the Manitoba College, the most prominent of the several colleges of the University of Manitoba. He has been successfully employed by the government of the province in organizing the public school system of Manitoba, and in acting as a member of the several boards of provincial school commissioners, which have given to the Province of Manitoba its splendid system of national schools. John Bryce, V. S., the subject of this sketch, the second son of the family, after obtaining his education in the old-time academy of his native village, passed into his father's shops, where during the next few years he laid the foundations of that accurate knowledge of horses which was subsequently developed during a full course at the famous Ontario Veterinary College in Toronto, founded by the Edinburgh professor, Dr. Andrew Smith. Practicing his profession for a year or two in the city of Brantford, near his native home, he decided next to remove to Erie city, Pa., in 1872. Since then Erie has had the benefit of the early training and ripened experience of Dr. Bryce. Unlike too many amongst those practicing the veterinary art, Dr. Bryce has looked upon it as a real profession, and has ever endeavored to maintain its position as such rather than degrade it to the position of a mere business of money making. In connection with the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery, Dr. Bryce established a livery business on French street, between Fourth and Fifth. In 1887 he purchased the site of his present establishment, at Fifth and French streets, and built and has since occupied this structure. In 1892 he purchased the stock and business of Elliott Bros. at 190 West Twelfth street, and established it as the People's Hack and Livery Company. He made still another addition to his business in 1894 by the purchase of the livery stock at the old Knoll stables, at 20 West Eighteenth street.

He was for a number of years one of the executive committee of the Erie County Agricultural Society. Finding that there was need for developing a taste for high-class animals, Dr. Bryce has, during the past ten years, made a specialty of placing carriage horses on the market, and not a few of the finest turnouts of Erie city can be traced to Dr. Bryce's wise selection and good judgment. He was married in June, 1877, to Belle Forbes, elder daughter of the late Robert and Agnes (Gourley) Liddell, and granddaughter of James Liddell, two families who came to Erie county about 1830, and who have been the pioneers in the iron business in Erie, and the originators of what has since developed into the Erie City Iron Works. Mrs. Bryce has always taken much interest in art work and has aided home art by often exhibiting fine embroideries, china and oil paintings, and has just finished two portraits in oil of members of her own family. Dr. and Mrs. Bryce have three children: George Liddell, Roland Forbes and Marion, reside at Fifth and French streets, and are members of the First Presbyterian Church, on the board of trustees of which Mr. Bryce has twice served. The only living sister of Dr. Bryce is Mrs. Dr. Marquis, of Brantford, Ontario, whose husband has attained to local celebrity in his profession, and has delegated the family honor to the keeping of his sons, two of whom, Drs. Arnold and John Marquis, represent the allied professions—medicine and dentistry. Robert H. Bryce, of Winnipeg, the third son, has for years been prominently engaged in mercantile pursuits in Canada, and for twelve years has been one of the most prominent merchants of the prairie province. Peter H. Bryce, M. A., M. D., of Toronto, is the next son. He has occupied, after graduating from Toronto University and other colleges, several positions of honor in Canada, and has during the past thirteen years held the honorable and important position of chief executive health officer of Ontario, under the government of that province. Alexander Bryce, of Toronto, the youngest son of this family, has similarly made a name for himself in a special line of business, having been amongst the first to enter into the supply of dairy products to Toronto in a thoroughly scientific manner. He is now the controller of the largest dairy in the province of Ontario, and has for years carried on the successful industry under the apt and euphonious name of the Hygienic Dairy. The history of this family adds but another to the many familiar instances of how the sturdy Scotch character has impressed itself upon every country where Scotland's sons have made their homes, and shows how integrity, intelligence and perseverance "Shall be a' the gree' for a' that."

Gabriel Huff, retired millwright, Erie, Pa., was born in Ontario county, New York, February 27, 1831. He is a son of the late Moses and Maria (Hoppough) Huff, natives of New Jersey, and of Dutch descent. Moses Huff was a farmer, living latterly in Orleans county, New York, where he died in 1889; his wife died in 1891. Gabriel Huff received a common-school education, and then learned the trade of millwright under his uncle, M. De L. Hoppough, with whom he worked in Ontario, Livingstone and Monroe counties, New York, until 1851. During this period (in 1848) he came to Erie to build the City Mills, then operated by the late Clark McSparran and John R. Dumars. In 1851 Mr. Huff removed to Erie, where he continued to be engaged in millwrighting until 1893, except for a period of four years (1860 to 1864), when he built a mill and was engaged in milling at Kingsville, Ohio. He was the leading millwright in Erie for many years, building and rebuilding many of the leading milling plants of that city, among them the Canal, Fairmount, Merchants, City and Hopedale mills. In 1893 he lost his right hand and retired from active business. He was married, June 30, 1851, to Fannie, daughter of the late John and Eliza (Ensign) Compton, natives of New York, and of English descent, who removed from Livingston county, New York, to Erie county, Pennsylvania, in 1836, where John Compton was a farmer and distiller, and conducted a general store until 1848, when he removed to the city of Erie. At the later place he formed a partnership association with Henry B. Haverstick (still a resident of Erie), in connection with whom he built and operated a distillery, and established a general store at French street and North Park. He died May 16, 1873, surviving his wife ten years. Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Huff have two children, Mrs. Flora Hathaway and Mrs. Anna, wife of Charles E. Thomas, a soldier of Erie. The former has two children, Harry Reed and Fay Compton Hathaway. Mr. and Mrs. Huff and daughter, Mrs. Hathaway, reside at 2116 Peach street, and attend St. John's Episcopal Church. Mr. Huff is a member of the A. O. U. W.

Charles Henry Yeager, Erie, Pa., was born in Girard, Pa., July 15, 1858. He is a son of Louis and Josephine (Seideneck) Yeager, the former a native of Hesse-Cassel, and the latter a native of Hanover. They came to the United States immediately after their marriage in 1857, locating in Girard, where Louis Yeager still resides, and is engaged in business as a dealer in boots and shoes. His wife died in 1883. Charles H. Yeager completed his education at the Girard Academy, and was for four years thereafter clerk in the dry goods department of David Olin's general store, Girard. In 1877, he became associated with the dry goods establishment of I. A. Forman, Erie, Pa., with whom he remained two years, then entering the dry goods store of Warner Bros., by whom he was employed until 1890. Since then he has been engaged in the real estate business, as a purchaser and improver of vacant lots, and has during his short, but active and energetic career, erected sixty dwelling houses within the corporate limits of Erie. With such an outcome to his enterprise, when not nearly arrived at the zenith of his powers, it is safe to predict that Mr. Yeager is destined to become a most important factor in the growth and development of the Gem City of the Lakes. In addition to the above business, Mr. Yeager is also engaged as a dealer in underwear and hosiery. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum, National Union, and Equitable Aid Union. He was married September 28, 1882. Mr. and Mrs. Yeager reside at the corner of French and Ninth streets, and attend the Central Presbyterian Church.

Bartholomew Golden, only son of John Golden, was born in Leitrim, Ireland, in 1807. He came to the United States in 1834, and was engaged as a railroad contractor up to the time of his death. In the course of business he had a contract on the New York and Erie R. R., and in 1853 located in Erie, where the members of his family continued to reside. Upon the completion of this road Mr. Golden took a contract for the construction of a road in Iowa, under the firm name of Golden & Richardson, and removed to Burlington where he died in 1856. He was married February 9, 1834, to Eleanor, daughter of Edward Benson, a native of Sligo, Sligo county, Ireland. She died in August, 1882. Mr. and Mrs. Golden were Roman Catholics, active in church work generally, and were particularly interested in the Father Mathew temperance movement. Mr. Golden gave liberally of his means, and devoted his time zealously to the movement in the United States to ameliorate the sufferings of the people of Ireland during the famine of '46. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Golden but two survive: T. G. Golden, general superintendent of the International and Great Northern R. R., with headquarters in Palestine, Tex., and Mary V. Golden, who has been principal of three of the public schools of Erie, Nos. 5 and 13, and the ungraded school, and is still teaching in the Erie schools. T. G. Golden married Elizabeth N. Black, of Richmond, Ind. They have four children: Alice, Frank, Walter and Robert, and reside in Richmond. Of the deceased children of Mr. and Mrs. Golden, two others, Anna and Caelia, were also engaged as teachers in the public schools of Erie. Miss Anna was a lady of decided literary ability, and, while yet a school girl, was a contributor to numerous magazines and newspapers, among the latter the Erie Observer and the Buffalo Sentinel. She died February 6, 1876. A local paper, speaking of her death, said: "Miss Golden was not less noted for exceptionally high culture and accomplishments than for a sagacity and judgment of peculiar penetration and force. While yet a young girl some of her productions obtained wide publicity and commendation. Her excessive devotion to study and to the interests of her school, which was very dear to her, undermined her health and brought her to an untimely grave." Miss Caelia became the wife of J. J. Hendricks, formerly of Erie, now of Oil City, Pa. She died in June, 1876, leaving three children: William, Frank and Alice. Katherine, for some years teacher of music and organist of St. Patrick's pro-Cathedral after her marriage, in 1866, to C. S. Bonner, resided in Indianapolis. She died in Pittsburg, Pa., April, 1878. After the death of his father, John Benson, the eldest son then living, gave up his idea of studying law and took charge of a railroad office at St. Louis. During the late civil war he assisted in recruiting a cavalry company in the 11th Kas., under Col. J. P. Root, and received successive promotions from corporal to major. He was taken prisoner at Lexington, Mo., September 20, 1861. After serving two years, he was mustered out of service because of ill-health. In 1864 he married Fannie, only child of James Lindsey Thompson, of Middleton, Mo., and for three years later was engaged in the cotton business in New Orleans. He died in 1867, leaving two children, Robert and Martha, still residents of Missouri. James P., the fourth son, although but a lad of 16, near the close of the war, left home and served his country by entering the telegraph corps of lieutenants at Chattanooga, under command of Col. Vandusen. He was afterwards for years an operator for the Western Union Telegraph Company at Erie, Pa. While holding office with this company at Pittsburg and Cincinnati, he became a member of the Merchants' Exchange of those cities, and transacted mercantile business in addition to telegraphy. He died in New York city June 9, 1884. Alice, a girl of great promise, died in 1872, at the age of 18, one year after graduating from the Erie high school. Three other children, Patrick Henry, Edward and Ellen, died in early childhood.

Levi H. Roland, junior member of the Public Grocery Supply Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Lima, Ind., February 9, 1862, and is a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Garlock) Roland, natives respectively of Lancaster and Erie counties, Pennsylvania. His father came to Erie county at the age of 21 for a few years, was married, and then removed to Indiana, where he remained four years, after which he returned to Fairview township, where he is still engaged in farming and merchandising. The family consist of six children: May (Mrs. John D. Blake, of Fairview), Emanuel W. (in business with, and the immediate senior of Levi H.), Frank (who was killed in May, 1884, at the age of 18, by an accident), George (who is engaged in farming in Fairview), and Charles (who is shipping clerk for Levi Bros., Erie). Mr. Roland was educated in the public schools, and at the age of 19 secured a position in the grocery store of George S. Stone, Avonia, Pa., where he remained five years. He then purchased the business of Mr. Stone, conducted it for fifteen months, and sold it back to him. After following farming for two years he came to Erie, and entered the employ of Schabacker Bros., grocers, where he remained three years. In 1891 he, in partnership with his brother, Emanuel W. Roland, established a grocery and general store at 563 West Eighteenth street, which they still continue. In August, 1894, the Public Grocery Supply Company was organized, and under the able management of Mr. L. H. Roland, has since done a thriving business. They carry a full line of groceries and provisions of all kinds, and do business upon the cash sale and small profit plan. Mr. Roland was married September 23, 1885, to Miss Dilla A. Taggart, of Fairview, and they have one child, Ralph Leon. Mr. and Mrs. Roland are members of the English Lutheran Church. He is a Republican in politics, but has never been a seeker of public office or political distinctions.

John J. Flury, liveryman, Erie, Pa., was born in Harbor Creek township, Erie county, Pa., October 27, 1854, and is a son of Jacob and Mary (Ward) Flury, natives of Pennsylvania. His grandfather, Jacob Flury, was an early settler in Harbor Creek, and his maternal grandfather, John Ward, was among the early settlers in Meadville, Pa. His father, who was a farmer, and later a bookkeeper, reared a family of six children: John J., Leon G., Sarah W., William H., Edward and Mary. John J. Flury followed farming until 1890, when he removed to Erie, and engaged in his present business. His stable is located at No. 14, and his residence at No. 15 East Eighth street. Mr. Flury was married March 25, 1879, to Miss Emma A. Ore, of Harbor Creek. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., the American Mechanics, and is a Republican in politics.

Orr G. Metzner, proprietor of one of the leading meat markets in Erie, was born in North East township, Erie county, Pa., May 24, 1860, and is a son of John and Catherine (Wallace) Metzner, natives of Germany and England respectively. His mother's father was of Scotch extraction, and her mother of English. John Metzner (deceased) came to America in 1846 and located in Erie, where he was for a short time employed at the Farmer's Hotel. He then engaged with X. Meyer to learn the butcher's trade, with whom he remained for some years, after which he bought a farm near North East, where he remained until 1865, when he came to Erie and engaged in the butchering and meat market business at 924 Parade street, where he continued until he retired from active business in 1892. The family consisted of two children, James William, who died at the age of 17, and Orr G., who was educated in the public schools of Erie, and took private lessons in bookkeeping. He learned his trade with his father and has always followed the business. In 1882 he engaged in business for himself on Parade street; but after a year and a half sold out to his father, with whom he again united in business. In 1886 he located at his present place of business, No. 13 West Seventh street. Three years later he purchased the lot and erected the present substantial and commodious building. It is 26 x 100 feet and two stories high. The first floor front is occupied by the salesroom, which is undoubtedly the finest in the city. The rear portion is employed as boiler and engine-room, sausage factory, steam-rendering and smoking rooms, and the equipment is as complete as possible for the size of the plant. Chicago beef is handled exclusively, but other meats are obtained from the surrounding country. The superior quality of his goods, together with fair dealing and constant application to business, has won for Mr. Metzner a lucrative trade, and his patrons are of the better class of people. Mr. Metzner was married December 30, 1889, to Miss Carrie Firch, of Erie, by whom he has two children, Maxwell and Webster. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and in politics is a Republican.

Frederick Warnath, merchant tailor, Erie, Pa., was born in Prussia March 2, 1852, and is a son of Christopher and Lillian (Ballunait) Warnath. His father, a farmer, reared a family of six children, two of whom are living, Frederick and Marie (widow of the late Earnest Arnold of Erie). Frederick was educated and learned his trade in his native country. In 1878 he came to the United States and located in Erie as coat-maker for Marks & Meyer, where he remained four and a half years. In 1882 he formed a partnership with his brother, Martin J. (the youngest of the family, who came to America in 1875, and who was for four years, 1878-82, cutter for Marks & Meyer), and located at 924 State street, where the business has since been located. Since the death of his brother, July 5, 1887, Frederick has conducted the business alone. This was difficult for him at first, for he could speak but little English; but he has surmounted all obstacles and now has a lucrative business and caters to the better class of customers. He resides at 826 Holland street. Mr. Warnath was married May 11, 1882, to Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. Frederick Kurtze, of Erie, by whom he has one child, Oscar J. Mr. and Mrs. Warnath are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; he is a member of the I. O. O. F., and a Republican in his political views.

Seth Todd Perley, attorney at law and claim agent, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, in 1840, and is a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (McCartney) Perley, the former a native of Massachusetts, of English lineage, and the latter was born near Dublin, Ireland. His father, who was a newspaper editor and publisher, came from New York to Erie in 1840, bringing printing material with him, and established the Erie Chronicle. The elder Mr. Perley continued this publication until 1855, when he turned it over to his eldest son, Captain James Perley. He was elected prothonotary of Erie county in 1851, and served three years, but declined re-election. He afterwards removed to Washington, D. C., where he died in 1881. The family consisted of ten children, seven of whom reached maturity, and of whom Mr. Seth Todd Perley is the only one now residing in Erie county. He was educated in the Erie and Girard Academies, and studied law under Col. Benjamin Grant and Hon. Edgar Cowan, the latter a United States Senator from Pennsylvania. Mr. Perley has held many responsible positions in Washington; for four years he was in the treasury department. On his return to Erie, in 1865, he immediately engaged in the practice of his profession, which he has since continued.

W. H. Dickson, one of the leading gun and lock smiths of Erie, Pa., was born in Worcester, Mass., September 11, 1844, and is a son of George and Maria (Brooks) Dickson, natives of Massachusetts, and of early Irish and English ancestry. His father, who was a farmer, died when W. H. was a mere lad, leaving four children, W. H., Martha, Sarah and Charles. He was apprenticed at the age of 7 to learn the gunsmith's trade. After serving his time he worked as a journeyman in Boston, Mass., and Newport, R. I., for several years; he also worked one year in Canada and one year at Niagara Falls. In 1864 he went to Corry, Pa., where he established a business of his own, and where he remained for five years, when he removed to Erie. He first located at 1109 State street, but five years later built and removed to his present place of business, at 25 West Seventh street. By constant application and fair dealing, together with a thorough knowledge of his trade, he has established and maintained a lucrative business. He carries a full line of firearms, ammunition, fishing tackle and hunting accoutrements, and pays special attention to gun and lock repairing, bell hanging, speaking-tube construction, adjusting and repairing, and all kinds of saw-filing, setting and adjusting. After coming to Erie, he lived for a number of years at 314 French street, and then built his present comfortable home at 345 West Seventh street. Mr. Dickson was married, in 1864, to Miss Patrica Madden, of St. Catharines, Canada. They had one child, Nettie, who has been a successful teacher in the public schools of Erie, and who is a highly accomplished oil and crayon artist, taking first prize for oil painting at the art exhibit in New York city in 1869. He was married a second time to Miss Susan Vosburg, of Erie; she died August 29, 1890. Mr. Dickson had an adopted daughter, Miss Mattie Dickson (deceased), who taught for some time in No. 9 public school, Erie, with a marked degree of success. Mr. Dickson and his daughter are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; he is a Republican in politics and is a director of the Lincoln Club of Erie.

Philip W. Dietyly, proprietor and owner of the Erie Machine Shop, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, September 26, 1861, and is a son of Uras J. and Caroline (Reaser) Dietyly, natives of Switzerland. His parents came to the United States in 1853 and located in Erie, where his father followed tailoring until his death, in 1875. Mrs. Dietyly is still living. The family consisted of three children: Joseph (retired), Philip W. and Louise (Mrs. W. S. Corbett of Erie). Mr. Dietyly was educated in the public schools of Erie, and then learned the machinist's trade, which he followed five years. For the next four years he was a lake engineer; then he started the first oil route in Erie, which he continued three years. In 1885 he established the Erie Machine Shop, at the corner of Twelfth and State streets, where he continued until 1894, when the present substantial brick plant was built, at the corner of Thirteenth and Peach streets. The building is 66 x 160 feet, and about thirty skilled workmen are employed. The products of the concern include all kinds of asphalt machinery, pumping and boring machines, and wire nail machines; they also do job work and repairing. They built the first asphalt roller in Erie, and the plant of the Erie Paving Company, now occupied by Henry Mayer & Co. Mr. Dietyly was married November, 1891, to Miss Mary E., daughter of Albert and Deborah (Fogg) Milks, by whom he has two children, Uras A. and Hazel S. Mr. and Mrs. Dietyly are members of the Central Presbyterian Church; he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and politically has always been in sympathy with Republican principles.

Joel Bradford Irons, D. V. S., Erie, Pa., was born in Conneaut township, Crawford county, Pa., July 8, 1850, and is a son of James K. and Rachel (Brooks) Irons, natives of Pennsylvania and of English ancestry. His father, whose business was that of moving buildings, reared a family of seven children, of whom he is the fourth. He was educated in the public schools, and for a few years was engaged in training and handling horses, which gave him a practical knowledge of horses and their diseases and treatment. He was twice elected justice of the peace, but before the expiration of his second term he entered the Ontario Veterinary College, from which he graduated in 1883. He then returned to Linesville and engaged in the practice of his profession. In the spring of 1892 he removed to Erie and located on Twelfth street; he has been located at 144 West Fourteenth street since the spring of 1894. Dr. Irons has already a large practice in and about Erie, and has been called to various parts of the State and even other States. He has done the veterinary work of the well known horsemen, Powell Brothers, of Shadeland, Pa., for over twelve years. He has the keenest regard for the ethics of his profession and has a high standing not only with the public, but among his brother veterinarians. He has been a member of the Pennsylvania State Veterinary Medical Association since 1890, of which he is the only member in Erie. Dr. Irons was married July 23, 1870, to Miss Clara Sterling, of Summerhill, Crawford county, Pa. The issue of this marriage was two children, Miss Cora M. and Bessie K. Politically the doctor has always been a Republican.

Henry Gillen, one of Erie's oldest and most respected citizens, was born in York county, Pennsylvania, December 18, 1817, and is a son of Patrick and Mary (Bridenbach) Gillen, natives of Ireland and Pennsylvania, and of Irish and Hohlhand ancestry. In his father's family there were thirteen children, of whom he was the third. At the age of 13 years he engaged to learn the cigar making trade, which from dislike he followed but a short time. He came to Erie about 1830, and soon afterward entered the employ of Mr. Thomas Mehauffey to learn the mason's trade, and he followed it until his retirement from active business life in 1836. Very many of the buildings standing in Erie to-day were erected during the long period in which Mr. Gillen was engaged in the building business as journeyman and contractor. For over twenty-one years he was in partnership with the late Samuel Cummings, under the firm name of Cummings & Gillen, and during that time they did some of the finest building in Erie. He built his present residence in 1846. It was through habits of industry and economy during his younger years that Mr. Gillen succeeded in establishing a business of his own, and after that it was by good management and a thorough knowledge of his trade that he succeeded in accumulating quite a handsome fortune, so that now, in his declining years he can live with his family in contentment and ease. Mr. Gillen was married January 1, 1852, to Miss Jane Levisa Poore, daughter of Mr. William Poore, a native of Massachusetts, but at that time residing six miles south of Titusville, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Gillen have three children: Hattie Alice (widow of Samuel Reed Thorn, of Allegheny, Pa., who now resides with her parents), Nellie May (Mrs. J. T. Brindley, of Erie), and Miss Florence Lillian Gillen. Mr. Gillen and family are members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Erie, of which he was the builder. In his political views he was originally a Whig and has been a Republican since the formation of the party.

Rev. Stephen E. Aaron, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, Erie, Pa., was born on a farm in Clarion county, Pennsylvania, November 10, 1868, and is a son of Jacob and Emily (Cummings) Aaron, natives of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. The family were among the early German settlers in southern Pennsylvania. Jacob Aaron resided on a farm, but gave most of his time in pursuit of his trade, which was that of carpenter; he now resides in Brookville, Jefferson county, Pa. The family consists of seven children, of whom one other besides Father Aaron has determined to devote her life to the service of God and the Church, viz.: Catherine, now Sister Margaret, of Villa Maria. Father Aaron received his early education in the St. Nicholas parochial schools, near Crates, Pa., and in September, 1884, matriculated at St. Bonaventure's College, from which he was graduated in 1891. On January 1, 1892, he was ordained a priest by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Mullen in St. Patrick's pro-Cathedral, Erie. He was immediately appointed an assistant at the Cathedral, where he continued until after the death of Father Casey, when he was, on January 1, 1896, appointed to his present rectorship. Endowed with a robust physique, a strong intellect, a deep religious nature, and with all the essential qualifications of an eloquent and persuasive pulpit speaker, there is no doubt that he will prove himself highly worthy of the distinction conferred upon him in being selected for this most important charge, and that he will win for himself a place in the esteem and reverence of his congregation and the community in general, similar to that held by his illustrious predecessor.

Rev. James Lachermaier, rector of St. Michael's Church, Erie, Pa., was born in Newark, N. J., February 20, 1849, and is a son of Jacob and Margaret Barbara (Leidig) Lachermaier, born respectively July 9, 1820, and June 9, 1815, in Bavaria, Germany. His father, who was a stone-cutter by trade, came with his wife to the United States in 1846, and located in Newark, N. J., where he died February 28, 1859; he was survived by his widow until January 13, 1892. The family consisted of two children, James, and Elizabeth, who died March 22, 1869. Father Lachermaier obtained his early education in the parochial schools of St. Mary's Church, Newark, and in 1862 matriculated at St. Vincent's College, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, where he continued five years. He then passed one year at St. Francis Xavier's College, New York city, from which he was graduated in 1868, with the title of Bachelor of Arts. From 1869 to 1871 he studied theology at St. Vincent's Seminary, and was ordained a priest December 21, 1871. Father Lachermaier said his first mass in his native town, in the presence of his mother, and was then appointed assistant to the Very Rev. J. D. Cody, rector of St. Titus' Church, Titusville, Pa. From February 25, 1872, to October 1, 1885, he had charge of St. Walburga's Church (German) at Titusville, after which he came to Erie to take charge of his present congregation. Father Lachermaier is a public-spirited priest, and is always ready to contribute to the support of every worthy enterprise; he is a member of Branch No. 99, of the C. M. B. A., and has always been a Democrat in his political views.

Rev. Bernhard Hermann Kloecker, rector of St. Joseph's Church (German), Erie, Pa., was born in Wesel, Westphalia, Germany, February 17, 1852. He obtained his early education at the gymnasium in Munster, Westphalia, from which he graduated in 1873. He then entered the American College of St. Mauritz at Munster, and studied philosophy and theology at the Royal Prussian Academy of Munster. Father Kloecker was ordained a priest May 26, 1877, at Osnabruck, Hanover, and arrived in the United States on November 2 of that year. His first appointment was that of assistant to the Rev. M. A. De LaRoque, of Warren, Pa., and in the following year was made the first resident rector of the Catholic Church at Kane, Pa., from which place he also attended the Catholics of the neighboring places in McKean, Elk and Forest counties. While located there he established a parochial school in 1879, built a parsonage in 1880, and in many other ways advanced the spiritual welfare of the faithful of the parish. On August 4, 1887, he came to Erie to assist the Rev. J. A. Oberkofler, rector of St. Joseph's Church, whose health had been failing for some time. Father Oberkofler died January 16, 1889, and two days later Father Kloecker was appointed his successor. (A history of St. Joseph's Church will be found in another chapter of this work.)

Henry Clay Lerch, foreman of the Philadelphia and Erie car shops, Erie, Pa., was born in Pottsville, Pa., June 17, 1844, and is a son of William and Mary E. (Dafen) Lerch, natives respectively of Easton, Pa., and North Yarmouth Plantation, Md. Adam Lerch, who came from Germany and located in Philadelphia about 1734, had four sons, two of whom settled in Easton, one in the Susquehanna valley and one in

New York State. The Dafen family is of English extraction, and Mrs. Lerch's grandmother was a daughter of Roger Sherman, who was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. William Lerch came to Erie about 1872, where he served for three years as a member of the Select Council. Of his children, five reached majority: George, who while a member of Co. H, 124th P. V. I., was killed at the battle of Antietam; William, who was a lieutenant in the same company, was for ten years mail agent on the Erie and Pittsburgh R. K., and is now a clerk in the Erie post-office; Catherine E., who married Capt. Louis Luckenbill, of Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania; Rogers Sherman, who served a term of enlistment in the 2d Regt. of the District of Columbia; re-enlisted in the 21st Pa. Cav. and served until the close of the war; is now an alderman in Duluth, Minn., and Henry C., who received his education in Pottsville, where in July, 1862, when scarcely 18 years old, enlisted in Co. H, 124th P. V. I. He participated in the battles of Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and, of course, many minor engagements, and was discharged at expiration of term, in June, 1863. He then returned to Reading, Pa., where he finished and worked at his trade (carpenter) until 1865, when he went to New York city, where he remained but a short time, and for the next five years followed his trade in Albany, N. Y. In 1870 he came to Erie, where he engaged in carpentering and contracting. In 1874 he entered the employ of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company, and was promoted to foreman in 1884. He has under his charge and direction from 75 to 150 men. Mr. Lerch was married March 18, 1870, to Miss Mary E., daughter of Mr. Richard Groom, of Albany, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Lerch are members of the First Baptist Church, of Erie. He is a member of the G. A. R., the P. O. S. of A., and in his political views is a steadfast Republican.

Morris Schaffner, senior member of the firm of Schaffner Brothers, wholesale butchers, Erie, Pa., was born in Hehsloch, Hessen, Germany, January 4, 1808, and is a son of Henry and Regina (Sedel) Schaffner. His father, who was a butcher by trade, reared a family of seven children and died in Germany in 1838. Mr. Schaffner received his education and learned his trade in Germany. He came to the United States in 1881 and located in Cleveland, Ohio, where for two years he followed his trade as journeyman, and then established a retail business of his own. In 1887 he came to Erie and opened a meat market at 1317 Peach street, where he remained a year and a half. He then established a wholesale slaughter house at Twenty-seventh and State streets and removed to his present location, Eleventh and Wayne streets, in 1891. The plant covers about five acres and has a capacity of 100 head a week. The products of the concern include all kinds of domestic dressed meats, which are kept in cold storage and always in good condition for market. The business, which is exclusively wholesale, is the largest local concern of its kind in the city. The firm consists of Morris and Jacob Schaffner, the former residing at 2111 Peach street and the latter at 153 East Eleventh street. Mr. Schaffner was married November 28, 1886, to Miss Carrie Schuster of Buffalo, by whom he has three children: Milton, Alfred and Minnie. Mr. Schaffner and family are members of the Jewish Reformed Church. He is a member of the

K. and L. of H. and I. O. S. B. In politics Mr. Schaffner is a staunch Democrat and is an active worker in the interests of his party.

Gustav A. Ebisch, late of Erie, Pa., who at his death, May 1, 1890, was superintendent of the stove foundry of Black & Germer, was born in Hartenstein, Saxony, Germany, December 21, 1838, and was a son of Frederick and Johanna (Neuber) Ebisch. His father started to America in 1853, but died at sea; his family landed in Erie and located in safety. There were four children: Ernest, of Warren, Pa.; Johanna (Mrs. John Schoenfield), of Erie; Louis, who is in the employ of Black & Germer; Gustav A. and Theresa (Mrs. Otto Germer), of Erie. Mr. Gustav A. Ebisch received his education in Germany, but learned his trade in the moulding department of what is now the Black & Germer foundry, where for several years previous to his death he filled the position of superintendent. Mr. Ebisch was married October 21, 1859, to Miss Mary A., daughter of Christian and Christina (Keppel) Schwingel, of Erie. Mrs. Ebisch was born in Huron, Ohio, where her mother died when she was but six months old. She came to Erie with her father at the age of 3 years. She still resides in the family residence at 319 East Ninth street, which they rebuilt and occupied in 1870. There were five children: Charles G., William C., Mary F. (Mrs. Charles A. Sessauer, of Erie), Miss Elizabeth K. and Otto F., who is in the employ of the Colby Piano Company. Mr. and Mrs. Ebisch were members of St. Paul Evangelical Church; he was a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Knights of Honor, and was one of the founders of the Erie Liedertafel Society. In politics he was a Republican, and for a term of three years served as a member of the school board. Mr. Ebisch was a good citizen and he died lamented by a host of friends. He left his family well provided for.

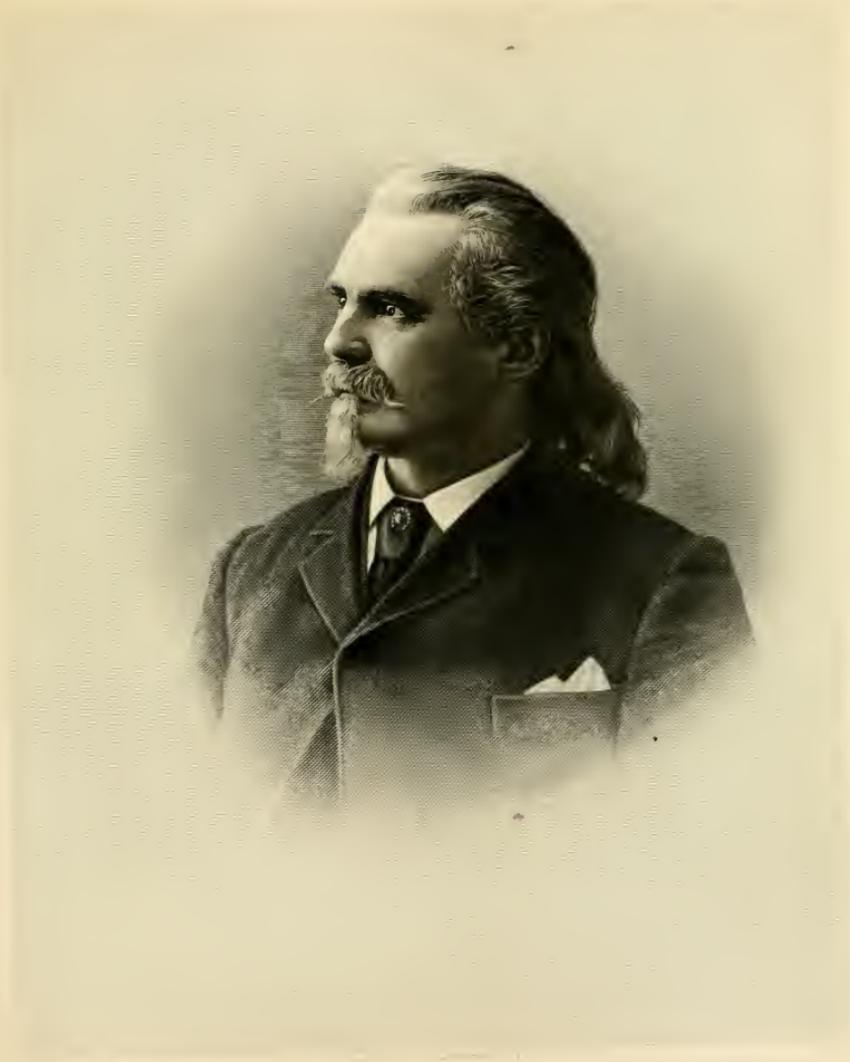

Charles G. Ebisch, superintendent of the foundry department of the Black & Germer stove manufactory, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie March 21, 1860, and is a son of the late Gustav Ebisch. He received his education in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 12 years began his trade with his father. With the exception of two years spent in Cincinnati, Ohio, he has been for twenty-three years in the employ of the present concern. Upon the death of his father, in 1890, he succeeded to the superintendency, the duties of which he has faithfully discharged. Not only has he filled every requirement of his employers, but his treatment of those under his charge has been such as to merit their universal respect. Mr. Ebisch was married November 9, 1888, to Miss Stella E. Temple, of Coopers-town, N. Y.; they reside at 457 East Sixth street. In politics Mr. Ebisch is a Republican.

Frank Rodolphus Simmons, one of Erie's most prominent and successful men, was born in East Springfield, Erie county, Pa., March 3, 1845, and is a son of Elliott and Mary (Hart) Simmons. The elder Mr. Simmons, born May 20, 1820, in Jamestown, N. Y., is still living in East Springfield, and his wife, born August 3, 1825, in Weston, Windsor county, Vt., died May 27, 1851. The family consisted of two sons, of whom Frank Rodolphus was the elder; the other, Herman Simmons, born January 24, 1848, died January 15, 1862. The earliest definite knowledge now obtainable of the Simmons family in this country is that of Jonas Simmons, born in Berlin, Rensselaer county, N. Y., March 11, 1758, a descendant of the earliest settlers of that town and county, and of Dutch ancestry. He and his ancestors took an active part in the French and Indian war and in the Revolutionary war. Though not a regularly enlisted soldier, he experienced many of the hardships of border warfare, which is always more cruel and harassing than military service. The family removed to Chautauqua county, New York, about 1809 or 1810. Mr. Simmons' maternal ancestors were English, by name of Hart, and Scotch, by name of Lawrence. His great-grandfather, Lawrence, entered the Revolutionary war at the age of 16, and served until its close; he was one of the latest survivors of that great struggle for liberty and independence, dying at his home in Vermont at the advanced age of 96 years. His grandfather, Lawrence, had three sons in the war of 1812. In 1825 Mr. Peter Simmons, a son of Jonas Simmons, and the grandfather of Mr. F. R. Simmons, settled on a farm in Springfield township, Erie county. The family consisted of four sons, of whom the only survivor, Elliott, prosecuted the tanning business until 1873, when he retired from active life. There are now no known relatives living in this vicinity by the name of Simmons, except Elliott and Frank Rodolphus Simmons; a cousin of the latter lives in Dakota. Mr. Simmons' early education was obtained in the public schools of Springfield, and in 1870 he completed the classical course of Oberlin College, Ohio. He then accepted the principalship of the graded schools of Utica, Ohio, which he held for three years and was highly successful as an educator. In 1873 he, in company with Joseph Osborne, a practical tanner, established a tannery in Girard, which they operated until the death of Mr. Osborne in 1875, Mr. Simmons doing the buying and selling at 126 Peach street, Erie. He then removed to 136 East Ninth street, where he has since continued dealing in hides, wool, pelts, tallow, leather and findings. In 1889 he built a cold storage plant at 132 East Ninth street, where he has since done an extensive business in wholesaling butter, cheese and eggs. The plant is one of the largest in the city, and is thoroughly equipped with modern conveniences. During the summer season sufficient quantities of butter and cheese are obtained from the creameries of Western Pennsylvania, but in the winter chiefly Elgin butter, from Illinois, is handled, thus giving his patrons the best that the market affords. Mr. Simmons was married September 11, 1872, to Miss Susanna, daughter of William and Sarah (Reed) Alsdorf. Mrs. Simmons' paternal ancestors were among the earliest Dutch settlers near Schenectady, N. Y., her great-grandfather having been a Revolutionary soldier. Her mother was descended from Scotch-Irish ancestry, all of whom were Covenanters in faith, as was she also. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons have one daughter, Miss Edith May Simmons, who was educated in the Erie high school and Rye Seminary, New York. They reside at 122 West Twentieth street, and are members of the Central Presbyterian Church, of which they are generous supporters. Mr. Simmons is a Republican in his political views, and has served as a member of the select and common councils of the city. He is one of Erie's most public-spirited citizens, and is ever ready to assist by his means and influence any enterprise that will strengthen her institutions or improve her commercial environments.

Patrick P. O'Brien, painter and contractor, Erie, Pa., was born in Waterford county, Ireland, December 5, 1860, and is a son of James and Joanna (Dwyer) O'Brien. His father, who is a railroad contractor, came to America in 1864, located for a time in Lake Superior, and is now a resident of Madera, Cal. The family consisted of ten children, eight of whom are living: Patrick P., Ellen (Mrs. Simeon White), John (telegrapher), Joseph (printer), Annie, Maggie, Mary and Thomas F., all of whom are in California except Patrick P. He was educated in Notre Dame University, Indiana, and studied law with Henry Nunn, Esq., of St. Paul, Minn. He was admitted to the bar in 1883, but did not engage in the practice of the law. He soon after went to Omaha and took a position as painter in the coach department of the Union Pacific railroad shops, where he remained until the spring of 1887, when he removed to Erie. Since coming here he has conducted a very successful painting business, employing from ten to twenty-five men. He does all kinds of house painting and interior finishing and decorating. His fresco work in the Villa Maria is undoubtedly equal to the finest in the city; he also finished the woodwork of St. Peter's Cathedral. He built his own comfortable home at 806 West Eleventh street in 1892. Mr. O'Brien is an occasional contributor to current literature, and from 1890 to 1891 was manager and editor of the Truth, a Sunday labor paper then published in Erie. Mr. O'Brien was married July 19, 1885, to Miss Mary, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Callahan) O'Connor, of Erie. Mrs. O'Brien and her parents were natives of Cork county, Ireland. After coming to America they resided for several years in Canada, where Mr. O'Connor was engaged in furnishing wood and other supplies to railroads by contract. They then removed to Erie, where he accepted a position with the Erie Forge Company, with whom he remained until his death, which occurred in 1893, at the age of 79 years, having survived his wife fourteen years, she dying at the age of 60 years. Besides Mrs. O'Brien there was one son, Cornelius, who died in Erie in 1890, at the age of 49 years, leaving a widow and five children, Maria Patricia and Joseph C. Maria, though scarcely 7 years old, has already acquired considerable fame as a pianist and singer. She is under the instructions of Sister Emaculate, of Villa Maria, and is now in her third year of music. Her parents have allowed her to appear in public a few times within the past year, when she has surprised the audience with her ability, and received complimentary notices from the press. If the indications of such early childhood can be relied upon she certainly bids fair to one day occupy a high place in the musical world. Her natural aptitude for music may be accounted for by the fact that her mother, who sings in the choir of St. Peter's Cathedral, has quite a thorough knowledge of music, and the O'Connor family are quite musical. Master Joseph also has a taste for music, and sings to his sister's accompaniment. Mr. O'Brien and family are devoted members of St. Peter's Cathedral, where he has charge of the renting of the pews and the collection of rents therefor. He is a member of the C. B. L. and the Lincoln Club. In politics he is staunch Republican, and in 1893-5 represented his ward in the common council. During his term of office he faithfully discharged the several duties pertaining thereto and secured many needed and valuable public improvements for his constituents.

J. H. Edwards

George L. Kent, grocer, Erie, Pa., was born in Waterford township, Erie county, October 3, 1860, and is a son of Henry and Mary J. (Kelley) Kent, natives of New York State, and of English and Irish ancestry. His great grandparents, Nathaniel and (Nancy) Jones Kent, lived in Kent, England, and came to America in 1777; the former was a sea captain, and his grandfather, Nathaniel Kent, was born on the sea, during the voyage to America. His grandmother was Mary Tyler. Henry Kent, who is a miller by trade (and is still living), located in Waterford township in 1854. The family consisted of ten children, seven of whom are living: Lodemia (Mrs. O. L. Knapp, of Greene township, Erie county), Oscar H. (carpenter, Erie), George L., Ella (Mrs. William H. Compton, of Erie), Elmer G. (carpenter, Erie), Kolla M. (telegrapher), and Cassius, a fireman on the P., S. & E. R. R. Mr. Kent was educated in the public schools, and for some time followed farming. He spent two years in the oil regions, after which he returned to Harbor Creek township and re-engaged in farming. He then came to Erie, purchased a home at the corner of Reed and Twenty-fifth streets, and continued farming until 1893, when he engaged in the present business. He carries a full line of groceries and is building up a good trade. In politics Mr. Kent is a Republican.

Nathaniel J. Whitehead was born in Trenton, N. J., November 30, 1855, son of William Whitehead, born in England in 1810 and Ann Valentine Whitehead, who was born in New Jersey. John and Anna Whitehead, parents of William Whitehead, settled in Pennsylvania at Harbor in 1817. Nathaniel J. Whitehead received his education at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., graduating in June, 1879. His first employment was in the general offices of the Philadelphia & Erie R. R. during the years 1873 and 1874 and till June, 1875 at which time he entered the Military Academy. After graduation in 1879 he served as lieutenant of Co. D, 4th U. S. infantry, and was stationed at Fort Laramie, Wyoming, until 1883. He was married September 4, 1879, to Nannie S. Campbell, daughter of Charles Campbell, of Virginia. They have two children, Charles Campbell and Katherine S., both attending the Erie high school. Since 1883 Mr. Whitehead has been prominently identified with the manufacturing interests of Erie, being treasurer of the Keystone Rubber Works, engaged in manufacturing rubber goods for mechanical purposes.

John Elliott, one of Erie's best citizens, was born in Barnard Castle, Durham county, England, June 8, 1828, and is a son of Archibald and Hannah (Beckton) Elliott. Of his father's children, two are living, the other being a sister living in England. He received his education in his native country, and learned the cabinet-making trade. In 1849 he came to the United States and located in Rahway, N. J., where he remained about six months, after which he visited his uncle, the Rev. John Elliott, who was a Protestant Methodist minister. He next spent a year in Wheeling, W. Va., after which he went to Ohio, and finally located in Cleveland. There he entered the employ of the

C. C. C. R. Company. He was later placed in charge of the car shops of the Cleveland, Painesville and Ashabua R. R. at Erie. In 1870 he accepted a position as superintendent of the Erie Car Works, the duties of which he faithfully discharged until the discontinuance of the works in February, 1893. During this long term of service he always commanded the respect of his men and the confidence of his employers. Although Mr. Elliott chose this as his adopted country, he refused to become a citizen until he was satisfied that slavery was to be abolished. Then, although he knew that it would make him eligible for military duty, he declared his intention and became a citizen. He enlisted in Erie in Co. M, 18th Pa. Cav., and served until he was sent home from the hospital. He was in Carlisle barracks when President Lincoln was shot. Mr. Elliott was married September 14, 1851, to Miss Pernelia B. Townsend, of Cleveland. The issue of this marriage was five children: Minnie (who died at the age of 7 years), Annie (who married John Miller, of Providence, R. I.), Mary (who married Walter R. Barnes, contractor, Erie), Archibald (who died at the age of 7 years) and Effie, an accomplished young lady and quite an artist, who died at the age of 27 years. Mr. Elliott and family attend the Simpson Methodist Church, of which he is the oldest male member. He is independent in his political views, and has served his city as a member of the school board.

William C. Shaw, junior member of the Shaw Bros. Laundry Company, Erie, Pa., was born in New Bedford, Mass., June 30, 1855, and is a son of Frederick P. and Mary (Maxfield) Shaw, natives of New Bedford. His great-grandfather emigrated from England and was among the early settlers of New England. Frederick P. Shaw, when a young man, learned the cooper trade, but was later engaged in the wholesale grocery business for thirty-five years in one store in New Bedford. He was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature, and also held various municipal offices in his native city. He died in 1872 at the age of 72 years. Mrs. Shaw is still living at the advanced age of 84 years. The family consisted of six children, five of whom are living, viz.: Capt. Charles F. Shaw, treasurer of the New Bedford Street Railway Company, and senior member of the Shaw Bros. Laundry Company; he is also secretary of the New Bedford board of trade; he has served his State as a member of the Legislature, and at that time acquired considerable fame by paying his fare on railroads while carrying passes in his pocket. Marion, who married Maj. Edwin Dews, of New Bedford; Miss Anna V.; Florence C., who married Arthur R. Brown, attorney-at-law and judge in Red Cliff, Colo., and William C., who was educated in the public schools and Friends' Academy of New Bedford, and then spent two years in a coffee and spice store; he next spent four years in the confectionery business in New Bedford, and also in Providence, R. I., after which he accepted a position with the Troy Steam Laundry, of Providence, where he remained five years. In 1885 he came to Erie and, in partnership with Mr. J. E. Jeffers, established a laundry where the present one is located, at the northwest corner of Peach and Fourteenth streets. His partner was merely a silent partner, and sold his interest to Charles F. Shaw in 1881. All the most modern and improved machinery has been put into the plant until it is one of the largest and most completely equipped in the State. Under the able management of Mr. W. C. Shaw the business of the concern has grown in magnitude and popularity until it is the most extensive in northwestern Pennsylvania. In 1892 Mr. Shaw had conferred upon him the distinguished honor of being elected president of the National Laundry Association. He is a Knight Templar Mason, and is at present treasurer of Zern Temple of the Mystic Shrine; he is also treasurer of the Merchants' Club, and it was largely due to his efforts that the charity fair was held under the auspices of the Elks in the winter of 1893-4, and was made such a brilliant success that $5,678.98 was turned over to the bureau of charities. It will thus be seen that Mr. Shaw takes an active interest in all worthy enterprises of a public or social nature. He was a member of the Erie Orphans Society, of which he was elected president in 1888. He was married January 29, 1889, to Miss Edith P. Green, of Providence, R. I. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw attend the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Henry William Zeiser, blacksmith, of the firm of Zeiser Brothers, Erie, Pa., was born in Lancaster, N. Y., August 25, 1865, received his education in Fairview township, Erie county, and learned his trade with Herman Frank, of Sterrettania. After serving an apprenticeship of two years he returned to Fairview and worked at his trade for a year. He then came to Erie, where he remained two years, and after a few months employment in Buffalo, entered into his present partnership. His comfortable residence at 826 Walnut street, was built in 1891. Mr. Zeiser was married September 16, 1891, to Miss Anna M. Nellis, daughter of Mr. John Nellis, of Mill Creek township. To this union were born two children, Winifred and Martha. Mr. Zeiser and family are members of St. Mary's Catholic Church. In politics Mr. Zeiser sustains the man and principles at issue rather than party.

Jacob Zeiser, senior member of the firm of Zeiser Brothers, blacksmiths and horseshoers, at 714 Chestnut street, Erie, Pa., was born in Lancaster, N. Y., in July, 1864, and is a son of John and Barbara (Jerke) Zeiser, natives of Germany. His father, who was a plasterer by trade, removed with his family from New York State to Fairview township, Erie county, in 1877, and there followed his trade until his death, in 1889. Mrs. Zeiser died in 1882. The family consisted of eleven children, six of whom are living: Jacob, Henry W., John (clerk in George D. Williams' grocery), Miss Mary, Charles (who is in the employ of his brother), and Miss Florence. Mr. Zeiser was educated in the public schools of Fairview, and at the age of 17 years engaged with Julius Bush of that place to learn the blacksmith trade. After two years he came to Erie and worked for different parties until 1884, when he engaged in business for himself. The firm is now Jacob and Henry W. Zeiser, and they are doing a thriving business. Mr. Zeiser was married October 19, 1882, to Miss Catherine Kennedy, daughter of Mr. Cornelius Kennedy, of Erie. This happy union has been blessed with one child, Charles J. Mr. and Mrs. Zeiser are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Zeiser is not bound in his political views by party ties, but votes for the best principles and best candidates.

Charles Huster, wholesale liquor dealer, 1213 Parade street, Erie, Pa., was born in Abbig, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, March 29, 1856, and is a son of Jacob and Catherine (Metz) Huster. The family came to America in June, 1872, and located in Erie. Mr. Huster was educated in Germany, and after coming to Erie learned the trade of shoe finisher at which he was employed four years. He then went into the grocery business on Peach street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third, which he continued two years. He then became proprietor of the Farmers' Home Hotel in South Erie, where he remained four years, after which he went to Oil City and became interested in the Continental Refinery, of which he was secretary two years and president two years. In 1890 he returned to Erie and engaged in his present business at 916 Parade street, and in 1891 purchased and removed to his present place. Mr. Huster was married May 13, 1879, to Miss Anna W., daughter of Mr. Peter Eichenlaub, of Erie. The issue of this marriage is three children: Katherine Maria, Margareta Maria and Karl August. Mr. Huster and family are members of St. Mary's Catholic Church. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., the Uniformed Knights of St. John, the Benedictus Society and the East Erie Turners, being trustee of the latter society. In politics Mr. Huster is a staunch Democrat, and served his city in 1892-3 as a member of the common council.

John Miller, manufacturer of metal corning and roofing, and dealer in hardware, tinware, lamps, etc., at 617 West Eighteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, April 10, 1850, and is a son of Egid and Johanna (Schwartz) Miller. The family came to the United States in 1852 and located in Erie, where his father died in 1878 and his mother in 1879. The family consisted of two children, Agnes (Mrs. August Scheiver, of Erie) and John. Mr. Miller was educated in the public schools of Erie, and when 17 years of age engaged with Mr. George Carroll to learn the tinmer's trade. After working two years his health failed, but after a year's recuperation he again took up his trade in the employ of the South Erie Iron Works, where he remained four years. He afterwards worked eight years for N. Murphy and five years for C. Flickinger, and, in 1887, engaged in business for himself. He has a large, well regulated and well equipped shop and is doing a thriving business. Mr. Miller resides at 615 West Eighteenth street. August 10, 1875, he was married to Miss Louisa, daughter of Mr. Peter Schreifer, of Erie. The issue of this marriage is five children, Mary, Annie, Joseph, Agnes and John. He and his family are members of St. Michael's Catholic Church, and in politics he is a Democrat.

Peter Wehan was born July 5, 1862, in Greene township, Erie county, a son of John Wehan, a farmer now living in Greene township. He is of German parentage, and has lived many years in Erie county. Peter Wehan was married September 26, 1888, to Rosa Kredler, daughter of John and Katherine Kredler, who were Germans. Three children were the result of this union: Albert, Wilhelm and Katherine. The family are Catholics, Mr. Wehan being a member of the C. M. B. A. Peter Wehan is engaged in the grocery business on the corner of Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue, and has been prosperous in business. He is a Democrat, and one of the popular men of that locality commonly known as Warfletown, having served two years in the common council from that district.

John Buettner, 2623 Chestnut street, Erie, Pa., born in Mill Creek township, March 7, 1862, is a son of Nicholas and Margaret (Harding) Buettner, both natives of Germany. This family came to America in May, 1860, and located on a farm in Mill Creek township, Erie county, where he remained a few years, when he moved to Erie, and for the past thirty years has worked in the freight depot for the P. & E. R. R. Company. To Mr. and Mrs. Buettner have been born nine children: Frederick J., foreman at the Erie Pail Factory; John (deceased), George J., a moulder by trade, works in the Watson Paper Mill; John, Christian J. and Daniel, both moulders and both reside in Erie; Nicholas (deceased), Helen M., resides with her parents, and Wanda (deceased). Mr. and Mrs. Buettner are members of the German Lutheran Church. John Buettner was educated in the common schools of Erie, and when 14 years of age began working on the farm in summer, attending school each winter until 17 years old, when he engaged with F. A. Clemens as clerk, in the Fulton market, where he remained six months, when he began work in the Erie Pail Factory for Howe, McClure & Co., where he is still employed; for the past nine years he has been head turner in this institution. Mr. Buettner built his present comfortable home in 1889. This gentleman was united July 6, 1882, to Miss Henrietta, daughter of Frederick and Helen (Berchtold) Seachrist, natives of Germany. She was born March 23, 1865, and was the youngest of a family of six children, four of whom are living. To this union have been born four children, Leo Nicholas Frederick (deceased), Edward Christian, Lillie Susanna and Ella Helen. Mr. Buettner was elected a member of the common council on the Republican ticket in the spring of 1894; he is on the committee on streets, bridges, sidewalks and grades, also gas, public grounds and printing. He was on the first committee appointed on the street market question, and is one of the nine councilmen whose votes did away with Erie's street market. This gentleman has been active in Republican politics, has been several terms on the county and city Republican committees. He is a member of the Protected Home Circle, P. O. S. of A., South Erie Turners, of which he is treasurer, and St. John's Beneficial Society. Mr. and Mrs. Buettner are members of the German Evangelical Lutheran Church. Mr. Buettner is a grandson of Conrad Buettner, who was a soldier under Napoleon the First, in the wars with France and Russia.

Julius Fuhrman, 563 West Twenty-sixth street, was born in Harburg, Germany, September 11, 1860, a son of Peter and Christina (Loendorf) Fuhrman, both natives of Germany. Peter Fuhrman came to America, in 1881, and located in Erie, where he followed his trade (cabinet making) until his death, in November, 1890, in the 54th year of his age. He was the father of nine children, five of whom are living, and all residents of Erie: Jacob, works for the Colby Piano Company; Frederick, a cigarmaker, with Wingerter Bros.; Julius, Minnie, Mrs. Christian Nelson, of Erie, and Robert, at present in the employ of the Colby Piano Company. Mrs. Fuhrman, wife of Peter Fuhrman, and mother of the above children, resides with her daughter, Mrs. Nelson. Julius Fuhrman received his education in his native country, and came to America in the fall of 1878, and soon after engaged as carpenter on a German merchant vessel, bound for South America. After this voyage he accepted the same position on board an American merchantman; a year later he accepted a position as carpenter on board the United States naval training ship, "Colorado," a position he held until 1880, when he was transferred to the United States ship, "Michigan," on Lake Erie, where he remained for one year. Following this he worked eighteen months at ship building in Erie, then for the Burdett Organ Company, until that factory was closed; he was for a short time thereafter in the employ of the Pipe Organ Company, on Nineteenth street, and next engaged with the Colby Piano Company as foreman of the veneering department, a position he held until the spring of 1892, when he accepted a position with the Shaw Piano Company. Later he established the Penn Carpet Cleaning Works, at 563 West Twenty-sixth street, where he is conducting a prosperous business. Mr. Fuhrman was elected on the Republican ticket, from the Sixth ward, to the common council, in the spring of 1894. He is on the finance committee, the committee on health, water and markets, and docks, harbor and police. He was one of the nine councilmen whose votes abolished Erie's street market. He is a member of the K. and L. of H., German Friendship Association, Erie Männerchor Society, South Erie Turners, K. O. T. M., and the Sixth Ward Republican Club. Mr. Fuhrman was married May 8, 1884, to Barbara, daughter of Philip Ohmann, of Bavaria, Germany, and to them have been born five children, two of whom are living: Tina, born March 7, 1886, and Peter, born August 11, 1888. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

John Schneider, wagon maker, residence and shop 2836 Pine avenue (formerly Watsburg road), Erie, Pa., born in Baden, Germany, October 11, 1847, is a son of George and Susanna (Bardon) Schneider, both natives of Germany. George Schneider was a brick-maker in his native country, came to America with his family in 1847 and located in Erie, where he secured a position as foreman on the building of the public dock; after the completion of this he worked two years as a coal heaver on this dock, when he was made foreman of a gang of men in the building of the Watsburg road. After this he followed farming three years on Walnut creek; he then moved to the Wagner farm, Mill Creek township; later he purchased this property and followed farming till his death, which preceded that of his wife. There were seven children: Henry, a laborer, residence south of city limits on Peach street; John; Mary, Mrs. August Schaffer; Christian, a blacksmith by trade; Margaret, Mrs. Frederick Zeisinger; George, a motorman, and Peter, all of whom reside in Erie and Mill Creek township. John Schneider was six months old when he came to Erie. He received no early education, beginning work as a mere child on the farm; when 14 years of age he operated a threshing machine, following this for five years; he then took up the carpenter's trade, following this for one year; he next engaged with Jacob Thern on Peach street to learn the wagon-making trade, remaining with this gentleman seven years; then, after working one year for the Erie Fusee Company, he again took up his trade, and after working one year for Conrad Schmall, he opened a shop for himself on Peach street, south of the Erie Iron Works, where he remained until the spring of 1881, when he removed to his present location and worked for Charles Haskins three years; later he rented the shop from Mr. Haskins and operated it two years, and in 1886 purchased it and has since followed his trade. Mr. Schneider was united in marriage May 25, 1875, to Miss Mary Ann, daughter of Andrew Garries. Two children have been born to this union, Anna E., a graduate of Clark's College, and Leonard. Mr. Schneider was elected a member of the common council on the Democratic ticket, serving one year, during which he was on the finance and health, water and market committees. He was re-elected to the common council in the spring of 1893, and served as a member of the committees on streets, sidewalks, bridges and grades, police, railroad, docks and harbor, and his vote was one of the nine that did away with the Erie street market. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., and himself and family are members of St. John's German Catholic Church.

Frederick Gingenbach, machinist, residence 1222 German street, Erie, Pa., born in Wuertemberg, Germany, September 19, 1833, is a son of Jacob F. and Sarah (Harr) Gingenbach, both natives of Germany. He was a weaver by trade in his native country, and came to America in 1847 and located in Erie, where he worked as a laborer until his death, in 1880, aged 80 years. Mrs. Gingenbach departed this life in 1873, aged 72 years. To them were born three children: Frederick, John, a moulder in the Chicago and Erie Stove Works, Erie, Pa., and Catherine, wife of Michael Rentz, of Erie, Pa. Frederick Gingenbach was 14 years old when he came to Erie with his parents. He received his education in his native country, and when 15 years old engaged as clerk for Lester, Sennett & Chester, on State street, with whom he remained four years, and when 19 entered the employ of Sennett, Barr & Co. to learn the machinist's trade, for whom he worked four years. He then worked at his trade for Little & Marsh for three years; for Charles Lovering in the Bay State Iron Works twelve years. He was then appointed tax collector for the Second ward and served as such for three years; following this he worked six months for Skinner & Wood at his trade, and again entered the employ of the Bay State Iron Works, where he is now employed. Mr. Gingenbach was married January 8, 1856, to Mary C., daughter of Peter Simon, of Erie, Pa., and to them have been born nine children: Elizabeth S., wife of Wm. Blosser, of Erie; Margaret L., wife of George Meyer, of Erie, Pa.; John F. (deceased), John F., born June 8, 1863, a machinist in the employ of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company; Peter W., born November 25, 1865, a machinist in the employ of the Bay State Iron Works; Katherine B., a trained nurse, resides at home; Frederick C., born November 6, 1871, a machinist employed by the Brown Folding Works; Rose B., and Caroline W. Mr. Gingenbach was elected a member of the common council in 1865 and served two years. He has been chief engineer of the Erie Fire Department and is at present a member of the select council from the Second ward, elected in the spring of 1894. He is a member of the F. and A. M., the I. O. O. F., the A. O. U. W. and the German Friendship Benevolent Association. He is a Republican in politics, and the family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

Albert I. Doerr, real estate and insurance agent and alderman of the Fifth ward, 2405 Peach street, Erie, Pa., born in Sugar Valley, Clinton county, Pa., September 29, 1873, is a son of Joseph and Henrietta (Schroeder) Doerr. He is second in order of birth in a family of five children: Charles (deceased), Albert I., George W., a school teacher, at present attending State College; Esther and Maude. Albert received his early education in the public schools of Erie and graduated from Clark's College; he then studied law two years under Isador Sobel, Esq., and is at present studying under ex-Judge John P. Vincent. He opened his present real estate and insurance office March 7, 1895, and was unanimously elected alderman for the Fifth ward on the Republican ticket in the spring election, 1895. He enjoys the distinction of being youngest alderman in the State of Pennsylvania; also the first to hold that office in South Erie. Mr. Doerr passed a creditable examination under the civil service and was appointed to a good position in the Erie postoffice, which he declined. He is one of the promising young men of Erie, with a bright future before him. He is an earnest worker in the ranks of Republicanism, and active in all projects tending to develop his section of the city.

William J. Grant, ex-chief of police, Erie, Pa., born in Ireland May 11, 1849, is a son of James and Ellen (Redman) Grant, both natives of Ireland, who came to America and located in Erie, Pa., about 1850, where the former died in 1856 and the latter in 1884. William, the only child of this union, received his education in the public schools of Erie, and May 1, 1862, enlisted in the U. S. navy and served on board of the U. S. S. Michigan on the Great Lakes until May, 1864, when he was honorably discharged to re-enlist in September of the same year, serving on board the Reindeer and the U. S. S. Abena to the close of the war. He then returned to Erie and worked at carpenter work until 1867, when he secured a position on the Lake Shore R. R. as brakeman, was soon promoted to conductor. In 1881 he was appointed on the police force of Erie, Pa., serving till 1885 as patrolman, when he was promoted to captain, and in 1889 was made chief of police, serving till February, 1895, when he was succeeded by Chief White, he still retaining a position, however, as office man. Mr. Grant was married July 21, 1871, to Miss Mary E., daughter of Robert and Anna Stewart, of Erie, Pa., natives of Ireland, and to them have been born eight children: John P. (deceased), Nellie, Anna (deceased), William J., jr., Robert E., Daniel J. (deceased), Frank (deceased) and Harry. Mr. Grant is a member of the C. M. B. A.; in politics is a Democrat and the family are members of the Catholic Church.

George J. Goadling, manager Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, at Erie, Pa., was born in London, England, May 7, 1841. His parents emigrated to America in 1843. Young Goadling learned telegraphy in the railroad office, at Erie, Pa., in 1859, and was made extra operator on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern system, finally drifting to the old Exchange street depot, Buffalo, N. Y., for the same company. He then accepted a position in the train dispatcher's office of the Ohio and Mississippi R. R. in Cincinnati, thence to superintendent's office of the Marietta and Cincinnati, in the same city. Upon Capt. Samuel Bruch, at Louisville, calling for volunteer operators for army service, Mr. Goalding offered his services and was accepted. He was sent to Gen. Burnside's headquarters on Fourth street, Cincinnati. Desiring to go to the front, he was directed by Capt. Bruch to report to Capt. W. L. Gross, at Danville, Ky., and on reaching there was ordered to proceed immediately to Cumberland Gap, where he remained during the siege of Knoxville, handling many of Burnside's messages brought through Longstreet's lines by scouts, to be wired from the Gap to Gen. Grant at Chattanooga, via Louisville and Nashville, and other matter to Washington. After Gen. Burnside's relief by the 16th corps under Gen. Sherman, Mr. Goalding was ordered to Knoxville, thence to different points in East Tennessee, and was in that section during the last Wheeler raid, and in communication at one time with Norris and Allen, the rebel operators at that command, who had tapped the Federal wires near Strawberry Plains. They were seeking information, but were unsuccessful, Mr. Goalding recognizing Norris' "Morse." In 1865 Mr. Goalding was, at Nashville, discharged from military service, with many others, by Capt. Van Duzer, their service being no longer required. Returning North at once, he was made manager of the Western Union Telegraph office at Atchison, Kan., in October, 1865, and on completion of the Kansas & Pacific R. R. as far west as Junction City, was transferred to the latter office as manager. Coming East later on, he was employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company, at Louisville, Ky., for several years, part of the time as assistant chief, then night manager and inspector for the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company, putting in the first "stock tickers" in that city. He left Louisville to take a position with the same company at Cincinnati, and shortly afterward accepted a place in Erie, his old home, where he remained with the Western Union Telegraph Company until December, 1888, when he resigned to accept the management of the Postal Telegraph Company's office at the same point, which position he still retains. Mr. Goalding was one of the original members of the Old Time and Military Telegraphers' societies, attending the first meeting and organization at Cincinnati, in 1880. In August, 1879, he was complimented by being commissioned colonel and aid-de-camp by Gov. James B. McCreary, of Kentucky.

William W. Harper, district agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, office 816 State street, Erie, Pa., was born in Campsie, Shropshire, Scotland, August 29, 1844, is a son of William and Mary (Hay) Harper. He is fourth in a family of nine children, and received his early education in his native land. He learned the machinist's trade, devoting five years to become proficient; he then followed his trade one year in Glasgow, and, in 1868, came to America and located in Lawrence, Mass., where he followed his trade two years. In 1870 he went to Toronto, Canada, following his trade there for four and one-half years, and he then opened a grocery store, conducting it for four years, when he was appointed engineer in the civil service department of the Government building, serving eighteen months. In 1880 he came to Erie and worked at his trade for the Stearns Manufacturing Company till 1886, when he accepted his present position. Mr. Harper was married September 7, 1868, in Lynn, Mass., to Miss Mary, daughter of James and Margaret (Martin) Tweed, natives of Scotland. Six children have blessed this union: William R., a student in theology at Brown University; James L. (deceased); David W., was for three years in the Erie postoffice, and later in the railway mail service, and at present with his father in the insurance business; Margaret M., Eva H., and Ruth D. This family are all members of the Baptist Church. Mr. Harper is a member of the F. & A. M. and is in sympathy with the Republican party.

George W. Cochran, D. D. S., office Downing Building, Erie, Pa., was born in Toronto, Jefferson county, Ohio, July 28, 1861, a son of John and Susan (Cravord) Cochran, both natives of Ohio and parents of six children: Amanda C., Etta V., C. Spencer, John P., George W. and Lizzie A. George was educated in the public schools of Steubenville, Ohio, and, in 1879, entered a dental office, where he worked two years, after which he attended the Ann Arbor (Mich.) Medical College for one year, and the dental department of the same institution for a year; after this he attended the Philadelphia Dental College, at Philadelphia, Pa., and was graduated from said school in the class of 1885-6. He opened an office in Toronto, Ohio, the same year, and successfully practiced his profession, and in 1890 he located in Erie, Pa., where he has since followed his chosen profession. Dr. Cochran employs two assistants and enjoys a large and lucrative practice among the best citizens of Erie. He makes a specialty of dentures, crown and bridge work. Dr. Cochran was united in marriage July 28, 1886, to Miss Anna, daughter of George Carlyle, of Toronto, Ohio, and to them have been born two children: Celia M. and Willard C. Dr. Cochran is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P., National Union, Knights of St. John and Malta. He is a Republican in politics, and the family are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

Adam W. Wingerter, senior member of the firm of Wingerter Bros., cigar manufacturers, 926 State street, third floor, born in Erie, Pa., December 29, 1858, is a son of Peter and Maggie (Nepper) Wingerter, natives of Leinersheim, Germany, who came to America about 1849, and located in Erie, Pa., where he followed his trade, contracting and building, until his death, June 7, 1875. Mrs. Wingerter departed this life May 4, 1864. To them were born six children: John, a boss builder, in the employ of T. M. Nangle, Erie, Pa.; Philip, steward for the Jefferson House, Toledo, O.; Marion, Mrs. John Staub, of Denver, Col.; Adam W.; Peter, foreman for Hugh Lyons & Co., of Lansing, Mich., and George B., junior member of the firm of Wingerter Bros. Adam W. Wingerter received his education in the public schools of Erie, and early in life engaged with Hugh Jones, of Erie, Pa., to learn the carpenter's trade, with whom he worked three years. He followed carpentry work about seven years, working in Erie, Pa., Cleveland, Ohio, and, later going to Colorado, where he worked at his trade, until he and his brother, George B., opened a cigar factory in Central City, Colo., where they operated two years, and returned to Erie, Pa., and in 1885, opened their present business, which is one of the largest in the city, employing thirty-two hands, and turning out the choicest cigars found in Northwestern Pennsylvania. Among their famous brands we mention "Wingeter Bros.' Bouquet," "Family Doctor," "The 926," "Henry Clay," "Lady May," "Roman Eagle," and "Green Eagle," any and all of which are established favorites. They employ one man on the road, and Adam looks after the city trade. Mr. Wingeter was united in marriage, June 5, 1890, to Miss Jessie, daughter of William and Margaret (Johnson) Tate, natives of Scotland, and to them have been born one child, Ethel. Mr. Wingeter is a member of the Catholic Church, and Mrs. Wingeter attends the United Presbyterian Church. In politics he affiliates with the Democratic party.

George B. Wingeter, junior member of the firm of Wingeter Bros., cigar manufacturers, 926 State street, third floor, Erie, Pa., born in Harbor Creek township, Erie county, Pa., August 18, 1862, is a son of Peter and Margaret (Nepper) Wingeter. He is the youngest in a family of six children, was educated in the public schools of Erie, Pa., and early in life learned the cigar-making trade with Manley & Co., with whom he worked about ten years. He then worked with E. A. Fette, for four years, when they went to Colorado and manufactured cigars for several years. In 1883 he and his brother, Adam W., opened a factory in Central City, Colo., and two years later sold out, and returned to Erie to open the present plant. Wingeter Bros. are up to date business men, and are beyond doubt among the most progressive and successful cigar manufacturers in Erie. They manufacture over a million and one-half of cigars yearly, and their goods are among the choicest found in Northwestern Pennsylvania. George was married February 6, 1889, to Miss Katherine, daughter of John and Katherine (Diefenbach) Fisher. They have one child, Emery. Mr. Wingeter is a member of the Catholic Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

Stephen D. Wager (formerly of the Reno-Wager Co., manufacturers of wagon supplies, 10 and 12 East Twelfth street, Erie, Pa.), born in North East township, Erie county, Pa., November 3, 1835, is a son of John B. and Elizabeth (Staley) Wager, natives of New Jersey, to whom were born two sons, Manderville and Stephen D. Stephen was reared and educated in Belle Valley, Erie county, Pa., and worked on the farm until 18 years of age, when he came to Erie and learned the carpenter's trade, working at it for ten years in Erie and Detroit, Mich. In August, 1862, he enlisted in the United States navy on board the gunboat Carondelet, under Admiral Porter, of the Mississippi squadron. He was with the fleet that ran the blockade at Vicksburg April 16, 1863, and the five hours' fight at Grand Gulf. Was also at the siege of Vicksburg, where they did more or less fighting every day for two months. Was discharged September 10, 1863, his term of enlistment having expired. He was drafted in service again in March, 1864, served three months in the 93rd P. I. After his discharge he returned to Erie and engaged in the photograph business, which he followed for twenty-six years. From Erie he went, in 1878, to Indianapolis, Ind., and, in 1885, went to Florida, where he spent four years. He then returned to Indiana, and three years later came back to Erie and bought a half interest in the present industry in March, 1894. Mr. Wager was married August 8, 1865, to Miss Susan, daughter of Johnathan and Sophia (Fluke) Riblet, of Erie, Pa. She died October 8, 1873, and he again married November 20, 1882, to Miss Margaret A. Lowry, of Jessamine county, Kentucky. They are members of the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. Wager was elder in the Chestnut-street church for a number of years. He is a Prohibitionist in politics.

Edward A. Stuebgen, insurance office, No. 15 West Eighth street, Erie, Pa., born in Erie December 17, 1852, is a son of Carl G. and Wilhelmina (Wickenhagen) Stuebgen, natives of Saxony, Germany, who came to America early in the thirties, locating at Saxonburg, Butler county, Pa., where they remained until 1844. In 1843 he took up the ministry, preaching the German Lutheran doctrine. He served some time in Clarion county, Pennsylvania, and later in Wheeling, W. Va. He came to Erie in 1846 and served as pastor of St. John's German Evangelical Lutheran Church till 1853, when he retired from the ministry and went to Wisconsin, where he engaged in the milling business, successfully operating a grist and saw-mill until 1867, when he disposed of his milling interest and engaged in farming until 1872. He then returned to Erie and embarked in the insurance business, which he successfully followed till 1880, when, owing to ill health, he disposed of the business to his son, and lived in retirement till his death, which occurred June 17, 1889. Mrs. Stuebgen departed this life November 29, 1891. There were four children born to this union: Laura, Mrs. Charles Imig, of Sheboygan, Wis.; Emma, Mrs. George Pope, of Erie; Bertha, Mrs. Wm. J. Livingstone, of Lincoln, Neb. (deceased), and Edward A., who received his early education at Sheboygan, Wis., and learned the machinist's trade, which he followed until 1874, when he engaged in the insurance business, representing the Continental of New York; Hamburg-Bremen, Germany; the Agricultural; the Pacific, of New York; the Milwaukee Mechanics' Insurance Company, of Milwaukee, Wis.; the Allemannia Fire Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pa., and many other prominent life, accident and fire insurance companies. Mr. Stuebgen was married June 11, 1889, to Miss Rosa, adopted daughter of August Roemer, of Erie, Pa. To them is born one child, Carl Edward. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Erie Liedertafel and Erie Mannerchor, and in politics is a Democrat.

John W. Shatto, train dispatcher for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., in Erie, Pa., was born in Newport, Perry county, Pa., September 11, 1851. He is a son of Solomon and Catherine E. (Free) Shatto, natives of Perry county, Pennsylvania, parents of eight children: Mary E., Mrs. Frederick Rohler, of Harrisburg, Pa.; John W., George W., a conductor on the Pennsylvania R. R. at Harrisburg, Pa.; Solomon, jr., train dispatcher for the Pennsylvania R. R. at Harrisburg, Pa.; Ida M., Mrs. John Sauserman, of Newport, Pa.; Harvey J., train dispatcher at Pittsburg for the P., C. & St. L. R. R.; Harry B. (deceased), and Brant, telegraph operator for the Pennsylvania R. R. at Harrisburg, Pa. John W. received his education in his native town, and was employed in a drug store for one year; after which he learned telegraphy at Newport, and was employed at various places between Altoona and Harrisburg on the Pennsylvania R. R. for about one and one-half years, when he accepted a position as operator at Irvinton, on the P. & E. R. R., where he was employed from 1869 till 1871, when he came to Erie, and soon after was made train dispatcher for the Western division of the P. & E. R. R., a position he has since filled. Mr. Shatto is a member of the F. & A. M. and Royal Arcanum.

John A. Steinmetz, funeral director and embalmer, No. 1513 Peach street, Erie, Pa., born November 26, 1869, is a son of Charles Gustave and Charlotte Marie (Helmka) Steinmetz, both natives of Germany. Charles Gustave Steinmetz, a tailor by trade, born in Northeime, Germany, February 26, 1837, is a son of Philip Henry and Christina (Dusterdick) Steinmetz, the former born in Northeime, Germany, October 11, 1815. This family came to America in 1847, and located in Erie, Pa., where Philip H. followed tailoring. A few years ago he retired, and is still living, hale and hearty. Charles Gustave Steinmetz was 10 years of age when the family came to America, and soon after adopted his father's trade, and has since followed it, having been employed as follows: Five years with Mr. Lytle; ten years with Baker & Ostheimer, and since 1881 he has worked for Charles S. Marks & Co. He married August 31, 1861, Miss Charlotte Marie Helmka, who was born in Ambeck, Germany, August 12, 1837, and came to America in 1857. This union is blessed with six children: Philip (deceased), Philip G., assistant in the undertaking business to his brother; John A., Hattie T., Mrs. Harry Will, of Erie; Edward (deceased), and Harry F., a clerk in Haviland & Hunter's drug store. The family are members of the Luther Memorial Church. John A. Steinmetz was educated in the public schools of Erie, and worked for several years in an art store in Erie. In 1894 he took a thorough course in the United States School of Embalming of New York, graduating in May, 1894. He then spent a short time in New York, working for a large undertaking and embalming establishment, and, returning to Erie, opened his present place of business March 18, 1895. He carries a large and complete line of undertaking supplies, employs a lady assistant, and will, no doubt soon be one of the leading funeral directors. He is a member of the Independent Order of Foresters, of the Protected Home Circle and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Steinmetz has long been a zealous Republican, and at the election in November, 1895, was chosen county corner by the flattering vote of 3,323 over his principal opponent.

John W. Henry, captain of the police force, was born in Erie, Pa., November 17, 1847, and is a son of Michael and Mary Ann (Fogison) Henry, natives of Ireland and England, respectively. The former was a contractor by occupation and came to America about 1830, and to Erie about 1832, with his mother, his father having died in his native country. He married Miss Fogison in Erie, and to them were born eleven children: William (deceased), George P. (deceased), John W., Mary E. (deceased wife of George Williams, of Erie), Harriet (wife of William Irvin, of Erie), Emma (deceased), William M. (deceased), Clara (deceased), Kate (wife of John Pressly, of Erie), and Jessie. Mrs. Henry departed this life June 10, 1865, aged 43 years. Mr. Henry again married, his second wife being Miss Jane Warren, of Erie, and to them was born one child, James A., a traveling salesman of agricultural implements. Mr. Henry, sr., departed this life January 14, 1892, aged 72 years. John W. Henry was educated in the public schools of Erie, and when 17 years of age enlisted in the United States navy, on board the gunboat "Reinder," of the Mississippi squadron, under Admiral Porter, participated in all the battles of this fleet, and was honorably discharged at the expiration of his term of service, and, returning to Erie, went to work under his father, with whom he remained one year. He then took charge of a gang of men for McCarter, Shannon & Brown, and later was employed in the same capacity by McConkey & Shannon. After this he worked as brakeman for the L. S. & M. S. R. R. four years, when he went to Summit township and followed farming eight years. Returning to Erie, he was again employed as brakeman in the L. S. & M. S. yard one winter. The following summer he employed a gang of men unloading boats at the Erie dock, and during the winter months he operated a milk route in Erie. In April, 1881, was appointed a patrolman on the Erie police force, serving in said capacity till June, 1893, when he was promoted to the position of captain. Mr. Henry was married December 24, 1869, to Miss Maggie Ryan, of Erie, and to them have been born ten children: Mary Ann (deceased), Michael J., proprietor of a billiard room on State street, Nellie, George I. (deceased), Harry P., a machinist at the Erie City Iron Works, Maggie, Laura, Josephine and William. Mr. and Mrs. Henry are members of the United Presbyterian and Catholic Churches, respectively. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., United Workmen, K. O. T. M., and the G. A. R. His father was a member of both branches of the city council for many years and served as poor director for six years. Capt. Henry is a man well qualified for his position and a gentleman of high standing.

Mrs. Anna T. Donovan, proprietress of the Troy Steam Laundry, at 416 State street, Erie, Pa., located in Erie with her parents in 1864. She was educated in the public schools of Erie and St. Patrick's parochial school, and in 1878 she and her mother embarked in the laundry business. Two years later she purchased her mother's interest, and has since successfully conducted the business. She owns the handsome laundry building in which the Troy Laundry, one of the largest and most successful in the city, is located. It is equipped with all the latest improved machinery and employs from twenty to thirty hands. Mrs. Donovan was married in 1880 to Wm. J. Hefferan, of the U. S. S. "Michigan," and to them were born two children, Gertrude and Jennie. Mr. Hefferan departed this life October 25, 1890. Mrs. Hefferan was again united in marriage January 8, 1895, to Richard Henry Donovan, first sergeant of marines, U. S. S. "Michigan."

Charles Beck, merchant tailor, 1008 State street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., September 25, 1848, and is a son of Adam L. and Margaret (Hart) Beck, natives of Bavaria, Germany, who came to America in 1847, and located in Erie, Pa., where Mr. Beck followed the tailoring business till his death. They were parents of two children: Charles, and Anna, widow of Charles H. Weber, of Erie. Charles Beck was educated in the public schools, and learned the tailoring business under his father, with whom he worked till 1870, when he went to New York city, and learned cutting. Returning to Erie, he worked as cutter till 1883, when he went into business with J. and M. Straus, with whom he continued till 1888, when he opened an establishment by himself. In 1891 he built his present large and commodious block, and in 1894 built his handsome residence at 323 West Eighth street. Mr. Beck employs from fifteen to twenty experienced tailors, and enjoys a large and lucrative trade among the best people of the city. He was married to Miss Mary E., daughter of Frank A. and Mary (Spath) Weber, natives of Baden, Germany, who came to America about 1845. This union has been blessed with five children: Henry W. (deceased), M. Elenora, Charles (deceased), Aloysius and Joseph. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Beck is a member of Erie board of trade, the C. M. B. A., the Erie Maennerchor, the Merchants' Club, the Erie Sommerheim, the St. Benedictus, the G. H. Q., and the Legion Club. In politics he is a Democrat.

John S. Scheer, dealer in confectionery, tobacco and cigars, 903 3rd street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, November 25, 1859, and is a son of John A. and Kate (Kent) Scheer, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1844, locating in Erie, Pa., where Mr. Scheer followed contracting and building. He was the father of four children: Lizzie, Mrs. George Strohmeyer, Effie, Mrs. Chris. Shaw; Sophia, Mrs. Elmer Buckwall, and John S., who was educated in the common schools of Erie, and when 17 years of age, in 1876, went to Philadelphia, and worked for Riley & Sargeant, on the Centennial grounds, during the exposition. He then went to work for the Union News Company, operating on the Baltimore and Ohio, Cincinnati Southern, Chesapeake and Ohio and the L. S. & M. S. R. R. After seven years he was promoted to the office superintendency, Cleveland, Ohio., and three years later was made superintendent of the Southern division of the Union News Company, with headquarters at Cincinnati, a position he held for four years. In 1891 he came to Erie, and embarked in his present business. Mr. Scheer was married November 25, 1885, to Miss Florence E., daughter of James and Sophia (Bentz) Ritchie, of Berca, Ohio. They are members of the Catholic Church. He is a member of the K. O. T. M., and Woodmen of the World, and in politics is a Democrat.

John R. Sherwood, painter, grainer and decorator, residence 236 West Tenth street, Erie, Pa., born in Washington township, Erie, county, January 29, 1829, is a son of Cyrus and Harriet (Atwater) Sherwood, natives of Cayuga and Seneca counties, New York, respectively. Cyrus Sherwood, a farmer and lumberman, was a son of John Sherwood, also a native of Cayuga county, New York, a farmer by occupation, and a soldier in the war of 1812. He came to Erie county in 1813, and purchased a farm in Washington township and followed farming till his death, which occurred in the 63d year of his age. He married Rosannah Miller, and to them was born ten children: Burnett and Burham (twins); Burnett resides in Edinboro a retired farmer; Burham resides in Union City, a retired farmer; Parker, a retired Methodist minister, resides in Ohio; Stephen, Frederick W., and Losina, Mrs. A. H. Drake, of Cambridge, Pa., Cyrus Sherwood was born in Seneca county, New York, and when 12 years of age came to Erie county with his parents. When 21 years of age he purchased a farm in Washington township, and later built a sawmill, operating them both until his death. He married Harriet Atwater, of Seneca county, New York, and to them were born nine children: Frederick W. M., a farmer in Washington township; Rosannah, Mrs. A. Z. Brown, of Waterford township; John R.; Sarah A., Mrs. Ellsworth Stancliff, of Waterford township; Asaph, a tanner in Titusville, Pa.; Mary (deceased), Emmaline (deceased), Cyrus, a farmer in Waterford township, and Harriet, Mrs. Martin Sherwood, of Washington township. Mrs. Sherwood lived until her 69th year. John R. Sherwood was reared on a farm, educated in the common schools, and worked in his father's sawmill until 22 years of age; he then went to Crawford county and worked in a steam sawmill for two years, and, in 1853, came to Erie and engaged with his uncle, Alanson Sherwood, to learn the painting trade, with whom he remained ten years. In 1860 he branched out for himself, following his trade until 1873, when he took charge of a book and wall paper store, in which he had purchased a half interest four years before. He operated the store until 1887, when he sold out and again took up his trade, which he has since successfully followed, employing from four to ten men. He built his present home in 1858, rebuilt it in 1870, and again rebuilt it in the winter of 1894-5, this time making it one of the most comfortable homes in Erie. He also owns the adjoining house, having built it in 1890. Mr. Sherwood was married January 1, 1856, to Miss Susan B., daughter of Fitch Hyatt, of Forestville, N. Y., and to this union has been born one child, Nellie H. The family are members of the Central Presbyterian Church. He is a member of Tyrian Lodge No. 362, F. and A. M., which he has been master four years, and has represented it four different times; he has served in the select council four years, and was president of the body one year; he has been a member of the common council two years and was on the old fire committee and was the first appointed fire commissioner in Erie. He is a Republican.

George Kuch, proprietor of the restaurant 901 West Fourth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie August 16, 1852, and is a son of George and Grace (Weiss) Kuch, natives of Germany. He is a meat dealer by trade and came to America in 1848, locating in Erie, where he followed his trade until his death, April 6, 1893, in the 72d year of his age. Mrs. Kuch departed this life in her 47th year. They were the parents of six sons: George, Philip, meat dealer 431 2nd street; Charles (deceased), Otto, meat handler, employed with his brother, Philip, residence 618 West Fourth; Edward, meat dealer, store and residence 803 West Fourth street, and William, a gardener in Mill Creek township. George Kuch was educated in the public schools of Erie, and in 1871, when 19 years of age, opened a shoe store, conducting it for three years; after this he was employed as clerk for H. V. Claus two years and seven months; was then employed about a year in the Erie Transfer Company office; he then clerked one year for Adam Hinds, when he secured a position as lookout on a freight boat on Lake Erie; here he was employed a year; following this he clerked one year for Daniel Hartleb, and again entered the employ of the Transfer Company; leaving there in the spring of 1882, he purchased a restaurant, which he conducted four years at 928 West Fourth street; he then built his present place and operated it for six years, when he engaged in the meat business with his brother, Philip, for a short time; he then engaged as driver for Jackson Koehler, and April 1, 1885, again entered the saloon business at 901 West Fourth street. Mr. Kuch was married September 30, 1873, to Miss Rice, daughter of Frederick Behning, of Erie. To them have been born six children: Frederick (deceased), Lillie, Katie, George, Philip (deceased) and Walter. The family are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Encampment, K. of P. and Harguaris. Mr. Kuch served three years as county assessor for the Fourth ward and in politics is a Democrat.

H. C. Cherry

Louis Mertens, of the Keystone Brass Works, 1017-1019 Peach street, was born in Germany February 3, 1855, and is a son of Charles and Wilhelmina (Albrecht) Mertens, natives of Germany. He was third in order of birth in a family of five children: August, Frederick E., Louis, Augusta and Sophia. Louis was 15 years of age, when his mother, with her five children, came to America. Her husband having died in Germany, Mrs. Mertens, wishing to give her children all the advantages possible, and not being satisfied with the future prospects in Germany, brought her children to the United States and located in Erie in 1870. Here Louis learned the brass finisher's trade and has followed it to the present time. He was in the employ of Hays & Co. for a number of years, and was foreman of that institution from 1887 to 1892, when he associated himself with C. F. Bostwick in the Keystone Brass Works. Mr. Mertens was married July 6, 1889, to Miss Amelia, daughter of Henry Goss, of Erie, and to them have been born three children: Augusta, Amelia and Oscar. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., F. and A. M. In politics he is a Republican.

Charles F. Bostwick, of the Keystone Brass Company, 1017 and 1019 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in Otsego county, New York, March 16, 1844, and is a son of William and Maria (Mott) Bostwick, both natives of Oneida county, New York. He is the eldest of three children born to the above union. A brother, John M., is treasurer of the Niagara Falls Upper Bridge Company, and resides in Buffalo, and a sister, Lizzie, wife of W. C. Marsh, a merchant at Bridgewater, N. Y. Charles was reared on a farm and was educated in the common schools of his native place and the Winfield Academy, and worked on his father's farm until October, 1865, when he came to Erie and secured a position with Peckham, Hoag & Co., lumber dealers, with whom he was employed until 1869, when he associated himself with Harrison Riblet in the sale of furniture, doing business for ten years, under the firm name of Riblet & Bostwick. In 1869 he severed his connections with Mr. Riblet, and bought an interest in the Downing Carriage Works in 1880, continuing in said company to 1886. In March, 1887, he started the Keystone Brass Works, with John McConnell and E. S. Noyes, jr., as partners in the business. One year later Mr. McConnell withdrew from the firm and the business was conducted by Bostwick & Noyes until April, 1892, when Mr. Noyes retired; he was succeeded by Louis Mertens. Messrs. Bostwick & Mertens employ seventeen skilled workmen and do job work largely, manufacture brass specialties of all kinds. In the summer of 1892 the company purchased and moved to their present location, 1017 and 1019 Peach street. Mr. Bostwick was united in marriage June 18, 1868, to Miss Henrietta S., daughter of Harrison and Jane (Kirkpatrick) Riblet of Erie, and to them have been born four children: Harry W., a bookkeeper; Frank (deceased); Bertha E., wife of H. H. Sanford, of Erie, and Anna M. The family are members of the First Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Bostwick has been an elder for the past eighteen years. In politics he is a Republican.

Andrew P. Jansen, captain of the Life Saving Station, Erie, Pa., was born in Sweden, March 8, 1850, and is a son of John and Eliza (Olson) Jansen, both natives of Sweden. John Jansen, a farmer by occupation, departed this life April 5, 1866, aged 52 years. Mrs. Jansen still resides in Sweden, aged 78 years. To this couple were born seven children: August, a ship carpenter, resides in Erie; Johannas (deceased); Johannas, a farmer in Sweden; Andrew P.; Anna, Mrs. Charles Matson, resides in Sweden; Henry, a school-teacher in Sweden, and Mary, Mrs. Yohan Anderson, living in Sweden. Andrew P. Jansen received his early education in his native country, and was employed as a sailor on merchant vessels till 1881, when he came to America, and, locating in Erie, worked as a ship carpenter until the spring of 1884, when he secured a place as surfman in the life saving crew, which he held until the spring of 1891, when he was appointed captain of the station, a position he has since creditably filled. Mr. Jansen was married February 10, 1891, to Mrs. Johanna (Johnson) of Erie, born in Sweden September 26, 1861. They have one son, Joseph Andrews, born December 3, 1892. They are members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and he is a member of the Lake Shore Lodge, No. 718, I. O. O. F., and in politics is a Republican.

Jacob F. Siegel, oil and coal dealer, office 1121 State street, Erie, Pa., yard Eleventh street and F. & E. R. R., was born in Bavaria, Germany, May 12, 1845, and is a son of Frederick L. and Katherine (Zimmer) Siegel, both natives of Germany. The father came to America in 1853, locating in Erie, where he followed the grocery business. His death occurred in 1867. There were four children born to the above union, three of whom are living: Jacob F., Louis A., of Bloomington, Neb., a real estate, loan and insurance agent, secretary, treasurer and abstract clerk of Franklin county, Nebraska, and Louisa, widow of Frank Schlaudocker, of Erie, Pa. Jacob, the eldest of the family, received his education in the public schools at Erie, and entered the employ, as bookkeeper, of W. C. Curry, banker, with whom he remained about six months, when he secured a position as bookkeeper for Siegel, Carver & Co., a large grocery firm, with whom he was employed two years. He then accepted a position and was for seven years chief clerk of the Erie and Pittsburgh docks, under Mr. Richard O'Brien, manager. After this he was employed by Burton Bros. & Co., coal shippers, until they went out of business, when he entered the employ of the Standard Oil Company, first as clerk, then as manager, which position he held for seven years, when he was sent to Pittsburg to act as manager of the Standard's interests in that city, and creditably filled all these positions with honor and to the entire satisfaction of his employers. In 1890 he started in his present business, and by close attention and careful management he enjoys to-day a large and lucrative trade. He employs from eight to ten men, and handles all kinds and grades of oil and coal. Mr. Siegel was united in marriage in October, 1871, to Miss Margaret, daughter of William O'Brien, of Staten Island, N. Y., and to them have been born six children: Frederick W., superintendent of his father's coal yard; Charles L., bookkeeper; Joseph O., Etta, Anna and Walter W. Mr. Siegel is a member of the Royal Arcanum, the K. of H. and North Star Council, N. U. In politics he is a Democrat, and has served twice in the city council. He is one of Erie's self-made men; thorough and successful in business, kind and loving in his family, pleasant and agreeable in his social life, a man honored and respected by all.

H. C. Missimer was born near Pottstown, Montgomery county, Pa. The family is a very numerous one in that section and came originally from the border country, between France and Germany, to Maryland, nearly two centuries ago. Mr. Missimer was educated in the common schools and prepared for college at the Hill school, at Pottstown, Pa., and when only 14 years of age had read the usual requirements for college preparation. He graduated at the Yale University in 1863, receiving the degree of A. B., and was one of the honor men of his class. Three years later he received the degree of A. M. from the same institution. He was engaged in the early part of his life in general business for a short time, but in 1872 commenced teaching as a regular profession. At New Brighton, near Pittsburg, he organized the schools and placed them upon a permanent working basis. He was then called to Erie, where he had charge of the high school as principal for a period of nearly eighteen years. He started in with an enrollment of about 100, and his first graduating class had six members. The enrollment now reaches nearly 600, and the graduating classes now run beyond fifty. In 1890 Mr. Missimer became superintendent of schools, and his work has been instrumental in making them thoroughly efficient in an educational sense. Mr. Missimer has lectured some and written articles for the reviews. His productions are received as authority on educational topics, and some of them have been incorporated in the reports of the National commissioner of education. He is a man of positive convictions and strong common sense. He has never been led away by new fangled systems, and at the same time has kept abreast with the times. He has cut out of the course of study in the public schools much that has been easily spared. Formerly the course before the high school covered ten years. Now the course of study is easily completed in all its details in seven years. His idea of the functions of the common schools is a very sensible one, and if more adhered to by educators in general, would do away with much of the contention that exists about public school affairs. He believes and carries out the idea that children should be taught those fundamental principles of knowledge which will enable them to afterwards master the things peculiar to their chosen profession or calling, without spending valuable time in acquiring that which is of no practical use, and will sooner or later be forgotten. In 1875 Mr. Missimer was united in marriage to Emma, daughter of Hugh P. Mehaffey, a native of Erie. Six children were born to this union.

Thomas H. Cole, deputy register and recorder of Erie county, Pa., was born May 28, 1841, at Papineau, Canada, of mixed Irish and Scotch parentage. His father, Robert Cole, who was an officer in the British army, was a native of Dublin, Ireland, and his mother, Ellen McDougal, was a native of Glasgow, Scotland. When Mr. Cole was but 2 years old, his mother died, and his father with the family moved first to Kingston, and afterward to Montreal, Canada, where Thomas attended a private school until the death of his father, which occurred when he was 11 years of age. In 1853, being but 12 years old, he emigrated to the United States, working, and attending the public schools as the opportunity was presented, and at the breaking out of the war he was living in Troy, N. Y. Enlisting April 15, 1861, he served under Patterson in Best's Battery; under Banks in the Shenandoah Valley; afterwards with the Twelfth Army Corps, with which he served in every battle in which it participated up to May, 1864, when, after returning from veteran's furlough, he was transferred to Mendenhall's Battery and attached to the Fourth Corps, participating with it in the battles at Columbia, Spring Hill, and Franklin, Tenn., November 28, 29 and 30, and at Nashville, Tenn., on December 15 and 16, 1864. After the close of the war, Mr. Cole located in Erie, entering the establishment of Edson & Churchill as bookkeeper, where he remained until 1872. From 1872 until 1884 he was engaged as a commercial traveler. Entering the mercantile business in 1885, he had the misfortune to be burned out in 1886, and in 1887 became superintendent of the Erie Boat and Shoe Company. In 1891 he was appointed deputy register and recorder by John Depinet, the register and recorder for Erie county, Pennsylvania, which position he holds at the present time. On April 21, 1870, Mr. Cole was married to Minnie W. Caldwell, a native of Erie, whose father, J. F. Caldwell, was born in Mill Creek township, Erie county, Pa., and her mother in Carlisle, Pa. The union was blessed with two sons, Harry N. and Whitman W. Cole, both of whom are now with their parents. Mr. Cole has been a member of Perry Lodge, No. 392, F. & A. M., since 1868, and served as worshipful master during 1887 and 1888; he is a member of Temple Chapter, No. 215, R. A. M., and a member of Active Lodge, No. 61, A. O. U. W. In 1867 he became a member of the G. A. R., and has been elected and served four terms as commander of Strong Vincent Post, No. 67, Department of Pennsylvania, also serving on the department staff, and was a member of the national staff and a delegate to the national encampment held at Louisville, Ky., in 1885. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics he has always been a Republican, and has given that party his ardent support.

Frederic Ingham Kennedy, treasurer of the Spring Valley and Youghiogheny Coal companies, office Scott Block, residence 511 Chestnut street, Erie, Pa., was born November 10, 1866, and is a son of Silas E. and Arabella (Ingham) Kennedy, natives of Canada and Ireland, respectively. The family came to Erie in 1864, and Mr. Kennedy, sr., has followed railroad work since. He is at present lost car agent for the Erie & Pittsburg R. R. Company, with headquarters at Lawrence Junction, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy are parents of two children: Frederic and Maud. Frederic I. received his education in part in the public schools of Erie, graduating from the Erie Academy in the spring of 1884. He worked one year as clerk and bookkeeper for the Humboldt Iron Works, when he secured a position as clerk for the Youghiogheny Coal Company at Ashtabula, a position he held until the fall of 1887, when he was made cashier. Serving as such at Ashtabula till 1891, when he was transferred to Erie and made treasurer of said company, and also of the Spring Valley Coal Company, a position he has since creditably filled. Mr. Kennedy was united in marriage September 10, 1889, to Miss Emma, daughter of Rev. J. B. and Esther (Collins) Espy, natives of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, and to them have been born two children: Dorothy and Frederic L., jr. Mr. Kennedy is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Chapter, Commandery and Mystic Shrine. The family attend the M. E. Church. In politics he affiliates with the Republican party.

Patrick Murphy, one of Erie's old and respected citizens, residence 402 East Sixth street, was born in Waterford, county Waterford, Ireland, January 15, 1823, a son of James and Ellen (Mansfield) Murphy, the former born on the Welsh Mountains, in county Kilkenny, Ireland, in 1786. He was a produce dealer by occupation and departed this life in 1861, his wife surviving him only a few months. To this couple were born five children, viz.: James (deceased), Patrick, Mary, John and William. Patrick Murphy received a common school education in his native country and when 14 years of age shipped on board a merchant vessel in the North American trade, as boy before the mast, serving three years. He then shipped on H. M. S. "Montreal" as sailor, serving two years. He came to Erie in 1842 and was employed in fitting out the United States "Michigan," and August 18, 1844, sailed in her on her trial trip, pending her acceptance by the Government. She was accepted and put in commission September 26, 1844, and Mr. Murphy was made quartermaster, serving three years. He then re-enlisted and was made captain of the hold, serving as such two years; he was then promoted to quarter-gunner, then to boatswain's mate, and, in 1861, was made acting master mate. The boat went out of commission the same year, and Mr. Murphy went to Cairo and enlisted in Admiral Porter's fleet, where he served eight months as acting ensign. He was taken sick and, returning home, three months later, having regained his health, he went to New York city and enlisted on the U. S. S. "Metacomet," under Com. J. A. Jouett. He was in the big fight at Mobile Bay, and in 1870 received a medal for gallantry and personal valor while in this fight, and during his whole term of service on board the "Metacomet," where he served as chief boatswain mate. He returned to Erie in 1865, and two weeks later again enlisted on the "Michigan" and soon after was rated quartermaster, and was made pilot the same year. He was appointed boatswain January 28, 1882, by President Arthur, and so served till 1885, when he was relieved on age with three-fourths pay and has since lived in retirement. In 1853-4-5-6-7 he owned and commanded a schooner, the William Adair, in the freight trade, and from this he won the title of captain. Mr. Murphy was married December 26, 1845, to Miss Bridget, daughter of Michael Calligee, of Erie, a native of county Galway, Ireland, and to them have been born two children, James, an actor, at present in Cleveland, and William P., who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy are members of the Catholic Church, and he is a member of the G. A. R. Mr. Murphy purchased his present residence in 1889, and it is a model home. He also owns several other properties in Erie. In politics he is a Democrat.

Herman F. Stearns, broker, of the firm of Stearns & Ferguson, brokers, office Reed Block, Erie, Pa., was born in Strasburg, Germany, August 18, 1859, and is a son of August and Mima Stearns, natives of Germany, to whom were born six children: William, foreman in Miller Brothers Paint Works, Cleveland, Ohio; Ernest, proprietor of a restaurant in Cleveland, Ohio; Gustavus, a merchant tailor in Cleveland, Ohio; Albert, traveling salesman for a Chicago wholesale millinery house; Bertha (deceased), and Herman F., who received his early education in his native country, and when 10 years of age, in 1869, his parents came to America, locating in Cleveland, Ohio, where he completed his education and learned telegraphy, soon after securing a position with Schofield, Shurmaer & Fiegle, oil refiners, with whom he remained two years. After this he was employed two years in the general offices of the Cleveland Kolling Mill Company. He next entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Co., working for them eleven years, the last six years in the Cleveland office. In 1888 he went to Painesville, Ohio, where he opened a broker's office, which he conducted for one year, when he went to Ashtabula, Ohio, in the same business for one year. From here he went to Norwalk, and while there opened five offices in Michigan, which he also operated. In 1890 he came to Erie and opened an office as manager for H. B. Gladwish & Co., conducting it for about three and one-half years. He then bought a half interest in the cigar, tobacco and bicycle business with Frank Fairbairn, but at the end of one year he again entered the broker business with T. Meyerhoefer, and in 1895 became a partner under the firm name of Stearns & Ferguson, and is now successfully conducting the business. Mr. Stearns was married April 12, 1883, to Miss Ella, the daughter of James and Caroline (Paine) Ford. She is a great-granddaughter of General Paine, of Revolutionary fame. To them have been born four children: Carl F., Ethel G., Howard F. and Louis Grant. Mr. Stearns is president of the Erie Wanderers Cycle Club for the fourth term. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum, National Union and the Woodmen of the World. In politics he is a Republican.

John Nowak, teacher of the advanced class of boys in the Polish school, corner of Twelfth and Wallace streets, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany April 17, 1869, and is a son of Albert and Lena Nowak. Mr. and Mrs. Nowak came to America in 1870, locating in Dunkirk, N. Y., where he worked as laborer. Mrs. Nowak died in Dunkirk August 5, 1887, aged 34 years. There were seven children born to this union, but John is the only one living. He received his education in the public schools of Dunkirk and in St. Mary's parochial school of the same city, and after teaching one year in that city came to Erie in 1888 and accepted his present position soon after the school was founded, and has since acted as head teacher. The school was founded in 1886 by Father A. Ignasiak and was taught by him two years when Mr. Nowak took charge. He has three Felician sisters and an average attendance of 300. Mr. Nowak was married August 8, 1894, to Frances, sister of Rev. Father Ignasiak, and resides near the school at 509 East Thirteenth street. He owns his comfortable home and is a man of energy and ability, with a bright future before him. He is organist at the Polish Catholic Church and director of the choir; is a member of the C. M. B. A., C. B. L. and Polish Roman Catholic Union. He is notary public, steamship agent, real estate and loan agent. In politics he is a Democrat.

Phineas Wheeler, mail carrier, Erie, Pa., was born in McKean township, Erie county, Pa., June 5, 1831, and is a son of James and Bathsheba (Crandall) Wheeler, natives of Warren county, New York. To this union were born nine children: Emeline (deceased), wife of Daniel Salisbury; Miles W., a farmer in Fairview township; Jane A., widow of the late Rev. Mr. Richens, of Springfield, Pa.; Henry H., resides in Oregon; George (deceased); Susan M., Mrs. Sherman Joiner, of Springfield, Pa.; Phineas; Sarah, Mrs. Aaron Salisbury, of Lenark, Ill., and William W., of Ashtabula, O. Phineas Wheeler was educated in the public schools of his native place, and when 17 years of age he came to Erie and secured a position in the store of Thomas Evans as clerk; later he returned home and worked on the farm one and one-half years; then he returned to Erie and worked four and one-half years in the Union depot restaurant. He then went to Illinois and worked in an eating house three years; from there he went to Saybrook, O., and followed farming one year. In the spring of 1862 he enlisted in the 53d Ill. V. Cav., under Colonel Cushman, and was sent to St. Louis, where he remained until the battle of Shiloh, when his company was detailed as escort for General Halleck, serving as such only a short time. Following this he was detailed as nurse in the hospital at Corinth, Miss., and while here was taken seriously sick, and finally discharged, in July, 1862, and returned to Illinois, when, after a short time, he went to Erie, and in 1863, located in Iowa and followed farming for three years. Then returning to Erie he worked one year for French & McKnight and in April, 1867, was appointed a mail carrier, and has held the position since.

Mr. Wheeler was married December 17, 1864, to Miss Sarah A., daughter of Samuel and Mahala (Sturdevant) Betts. Three children have blessed this union: Jennie C., Mrs. Walter P. Page, of Erie, Pa.; Jessie J., a teacher in Bucknell Institute, Lewisburg, Pa., and Mabel E., at home. The family are members of the Church of Christ. Mr. Wheeler is a member of the United Workmen, G. A. R., and the National Association of Letter Carriers. He is the oldest employe in the Erie postoffice, having been in the service for twenty-eight years, and has served under eight postmasters: Hon. Joseph M. Sterrett, Hon. I. B. Gara, Col. Thomas M. Walker, Isaac M. Moorehead, E. W. Reed, H. C. Shannon, Capt. J. C. Hilton and Hon. C. S. Clark.

Joseph B. Weber, mail carrier, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, February, 1856, and is a son of Matthias and Frances Weber, natives of Prussia, who came to America and to Erie in 1853, where Mr. Weber (the father) found employment at the docks. Matthias Weber, father of Joseph B., died in 1867. He left a widow and four children: Joseph (deceased), Mary (deceased), Joseph B. and John, a machinist residing in Erie, who ranks among the most prominent and influential citizens. Joseph received a common school education, and early in life engaged to learn the cigar-making business, which he followed one year. He next worked ten years in a brick yard, and after that was engaged in other business for two years. Then he was a stationary engineer for eight years. He then went into the restaurant business for one year, worked four years as a polisher in the Erie Nickel Works, and in 1885 received an appointment as mail carrier, and has since been in the postoffice service. Mr. Weber was married June 22, 1889, to Miss Kate M., daughter of George and Margaret Kessler, of Erie. To them have been born five children: Joseph (deceased), Etta, Bertha (deceased), Josie and Georgie. The family are members of the Catholic faith, attending St. Mary's Church. Mr. Weber is a member of the C. M. B. A. and the National Association of Letter Carriers. In politics he is a Democrat.

Harry L. Wilson, general superintendent of the Erie City Iron Works, Erie, Pa., was born in Pittsburg, Pa., July 14, 1845, and is a son of Andrew S. and Mary (Hunzeker) Wilson. His father, who was a manufacturer of saddle trees, reared a family of five children, four of whom are living, and of whom Harry L. is the eldest. His father died while serving on a hospital boat at the siege of Vicksburg; his mother died in 1892. Mr. Wilson was educated in the public schools of Pittsburg, and at the age of 17 years engaged to learn the trade of boiler maker. In 1868 he entered the employ of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company as journeyman in the boiler-making department of their shops, where he remained seven years. He then came to Erie and entered the employ of the Erie City Iron Works, where he remained three years, the greater part of which time he was foreman of the sheet-iron department. He next accepted a position with the Stearns Manufacturing Company, as superintendent of their boiler department, where he continued nine years. He then associated himself with Mr. L. D. Davis, under the name of the Humboldt Iron Works, and engaged in the manufacture of engines and boilers, but after a few months abandoned this project to accept a position as superintendent of the boiler department of the Erie City Iron Works. The duties of this position were so faithfully and efficiently discharged by him, that in February, 1894, he was made general superintendent. Mr. Wilson was married February 12, 1872, to Miss Ida, daughter of Mr. Hawley Carey, of Erie. This marriage has been blessed with four children: Harry C. (assistant foreman in the boiler department of the Erie City Iron Works), Emma Maude, Lula and Ethel. Mr. Wilson is a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Erie, and his family of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum, the National Union and the Elks, and in politics is a Republican.

George A. Gaither, superintendent of the molding department of the Chicago and Erie Stove Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Des Moines, Ia., January 18, 1868, and is a son of Charles A. Gaither, whose sketch is contained in this work. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 17 years engaged with the Chicago and Erie Stove Company to learn the molder's trade. He must have been an apt apprentice and an efficient journeyman, for in seven years from the time he began to learn his trade he was promoted to his present position, where he has charge of between seventy-five and eighty men. Mr. Gaither was married May 13, 1890, to Miss Georgia, daughter of Mr. Henry C. Halsey, of Erie. The issue of this marriage is one child, Vernon Halsey. In politics Mr. Gaither is a Democrat. In September, 1895, he entered into a partnership with Hon. Chas. M. Reed, Henry C. Kelsey, John R. McDonald and Fred Clark, and organized the corporation known as the Erie Foundry Company, of which he is superintendent.

Eben H. Norris, professor of music, Erie, Pa., was born in Clymer, Chautauqua county, N. Y., February 22, 1854, and is a son of Eben H. and Elmira (Gilson) Norris, natives of New York and Pennsylvania respectively. The Norris family were among the early settlers near Albany, N. Y., and were probably of English ancestry. The elder Mr. Norris was a merchant, and reared a family of four children: Miss Dora V. (who died in Erie, December 16, 1894), Ada (who married Mr. James McCreary, of Fairview, Erie county), Mr. Cass L. and Mr. Eben H., who was educated in the public schools of Erie, and for several years followed the occupation of clerking. At the age of 14 he began his musical studies, and for the last twenty years has been engaged in teaching. He teaches piano music only, in which he is the senior male teacher in the city. He always has a large class of pupils, and enjoys the patronage of the better class of people. Not only in the city, but also in the surrounding country is Prof. Norris' skill as a musician and ability as an instructor well known, and when he has time for them he has many students from various portions of Erie county. He has resided at 819 Peach street since coming to the city, in 1898, his present comfortable home having been built in 1884. Though not an aspirant for public office or political emulation, he is an advocate of the principles of the Republican party.

Albert E. White, ex-chief of police, Erie, Pa., was born in Birkenhead, Cheshire, England, May 11, 1852, and is a son of James and Mary (Jamison) White, of Welsh and Irish ancestry, respectively. His father, who was a surveyor of the Liverpool custom-house, reared a family of eleven children, seven of whom are living, and of whom Albert E. is the second. He was educated in his native country, and in 1873 came to the United States, locating in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he engaged in shipping produce and provisions to Glasgow, London, Liverpool and Hull, which he continued four years. In 1878 he went to Chicago, where for two years he did a brokerage business, after which he returned to Cincinnati and engaged in the brokerage and real estate business. He was for thirteen years a member of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce. In 1888 he went to Findlay, Ohio, and established a brokerage office there, which he continued three years. In 1891 he came to Erie as manager for Armour & Co., filling that position until 1894, when he became engaged in auctioneering. He was appointed chief of police of Erie February 12, 1895, and resigned in December. Mr. White was married December 17, 1877, to Miss Eleanor Donnelly, of Cincinnati. The issue of this marriage is three children: Marshall, Staunton and Eleanor. In politics Mr. White is a Republican, and he is a member of the Elks.

William C. Ebisch, chief mailing clerk in the Erie postoffice, was born in Erie February 26, 1862. His father was the late Gustav A. Ebisch, who came from Germany at the age of 15, and located in Erie and became one of its leading citizens. Mr. W. C. Ebisch was educated in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 13 years entered the office of Johnson, Black & Co. (now Black & Gerner), where he remained three years. On March 1, 1878, he entered the postoffice as assistant mailing clerk, which position he held until 1885, when he was promoted to his present office. This long term of service in a responsible position, and subsequent promotion, speaks for itself. Mr. Ebisch devotes his leisure moments to the raising of fine poultry. He was one of the chief movers in the organization of the Northwestern Pennsylvania Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association, and is chairman of the executive committee. By virtue of this position he had sole charge of the Poultry exhibit which was held in Erie from January 29 to February 2, 1895, and it was largely due to his untiring efforts that this, the first affair of its kind ever attempted in Erie, was made a decided success. He deals quite extensively in high-bred poultry and is a frequent contributor to poultry journals. Mr. Ebisch was married January, 1884, to Miss Lena Ruth Gusman, of Titusville, Pa.; they have one child, George Raymond. Mr. and Mrs. Ebisch are members of the German Lutheran Church, and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

Jacob Malthaner, contractor and builder, Erie, Pa., was born in Bavaria, Germany, October 30, 1852, and is a son of John P. and Eva Barbara (Hoffman) Malthaner, of whom father, who was a farmer, had seven children, of which Jacob is the fifth. He was educated in his native country, and came to the United States in 1872, locating in Erie. He first found employment in a brickyard, where he remained a short time. Then he worked for a few months in the yard and framing gang of the Erie Car Works, after which he engaged with Mr. Joseph Sellinger to learn the trade of carpenter and remained in Mr. Sellinger's employ for three years. He worked as a journeyman till 1884, when, in partnership with Adam Anthony, he engaged in business for himself. One of their first contracts was the building of St. Joseph's Church, which occupied two years. Mr. Malthaner is also the builder of the Church of the Sacred Heart, now in course of construction. He built his own elegant home, 2630 Myrtle street, in 1891. Mr. Malthaner was married July 18, 1874, to Miss Katherine Madlener, who was born in his native town. They have two children, John P., who works with his father, and Marion. He and his family are members of St. Joseph's Church, and he is a member of several of the religious societies connected therewith. In politics Mr. Malthaner has always been in sympathy with the principles of the Democratic party.

Hugh N. Fleming, inventor of the Fleming mail catcher and deliverer, Erie, Pa., was born January 2, 1868, and is a son of Hugh B. and Maria L. (Neely) Fleming. Hugh B. Fleming (deceased), one of Erie's best known men, was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, November 17, 1827, a son of James and Rebecca (Lowry) Fleming. James Fleming was a soldier in the war of 1812, was twice wounded, once at Fort Erie and again at Lundy's Lane. He was made brigadier general at the close of the war, and died at Cranestown, Pa. There were ten children born to James and Rebecca Fleming: W. Scott, Andrew, Henry, John, Hugh B., Robert, James, Mary, Phoebe and Elizabeth. Hugh B. Fleming was educated in the common schools of Crawford county, and in 1848 entered West Point, graduating from the military academy in 1852. Mr. Fleming was married March 14, 1867, to Miss Maria L., daughter of Joseph and Matilda (Moorhead) Neely, of Erie, and to them was born one son, Hugh Neely. He was reared and educated in Erie, and attended Phillips' Academy at Andover, Mass., later graduated from Yale College in the class of 1889. He was employed in the office of the Youghiogheny Coal Company as bookkeeper and clerk for about two years, and for the past three years has devoted his attention to inventing. His most successful invention, "The Fleming Mail Catcher and Deliverer," is a device to deliver and take on mail from a moving train. It is a new invention, but promises to be in universal use before many years. Mr. Fleming is a member of the Loyal Legion and the Sons of Revolution.

Delmer J. Young, dealer in paper stock, Holland, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, April 20, 1868, and is a son of Henry D. and Vinnie M. (Cochran) Young. Henry D. Young, retired, was born in Manchester, Vt., in 1837. He is a son of Samuel B. and Elizabeth (Way) Young. Samuel B. Young (deceased) was born in Danby, Vt., in 1812, and was a son of David and Mary (Eggleston) Young. David Young, who was a native of Scotland, was the youngest of three brothers, two of whom, James and John, fought under Wellington at Waterloo. David came to America in 1806, locating in Vermont, and followed the manufacture of woolen goods. He was also in the mercantile business, and owned and operated large farming interests. He was in command of a regiment at Plattsburg, N. Y., in the war of 1812, and represented Danville, Vt., in the State Senate for twenty-one years. David Young married Mary, daughter of Benedict Eggleston, a Revolutionary hero, who served seven years in that war, and wintered with Washington at Valley Forge. To them were born five children: Samuel B., David, Alexander, Fannie and Alice. Samuel B. Young, the eldest of this family, received a college education, and early in life learned the tinsmith trade, which he followed during his life. His death occurred in 1892. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Lyman Way, of Connecticut, and to them were born two children: Henry D. and Charles K., who is now postmaster at Manchester, Vt. Henry D. Young received an academic education and learned his father's trade (tinsmith), which he followed in his native place until August 10, 1863, when he enlisted in Co. C, 14th Reg., Vt. Vols., was made captain of his company, and participated in all the battles of this regiment till September 30, 1864, when he was discharged, and, returning home, went into business with his father for three years. In 1867 he came to Erie and became interested in the manufacture of paper and the paper stock business with John K. Cochran, doing a large business for eleven years, when Mr. Cochran died. The business was continued by Mr. Young for several years. He finally retired, turning the business over to his two sons. Mr. Henry Young was married to Miss Vinnie, daughter of John K. Cochran, of Erie, and to them have been born two sons: Henry (deceased) and Delmer J. Delmer J. Young was reared and educated in Erie, and when 18 years of age began work under his father in the paper stock business, continuing for two and one-half years, when he and his brother took sole charge of the industry, conducting it until the death of Henry C., the senior member of the firm, and the business is now managed by Delmer J. Young. It is the only place of its kind in the city, does a large business, paying out $900 per week for paper stock, old iron, brass, copper, rubber, etc., and employs twenty hands. Mr. Young is a member of the Fraternal Mystic Circle. His residence is 255 West Eighteenth street.

Peter J. Emling, of the firm of Kuhn & Emling, cigar manufacturers, 264 East Eleventh street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie September 9, 1860, and is a son of George and Barbara (Sutter) Emling, natives of Erie and Alsace, Germany, respectively. George Emling was born in Erie in June, 1837, a son of Peter, who was born in Bavaria, Germany, and came to America in 1834, and located in Erie in 1835. George received a common school education and learned the cooper trade, following it for some years, when he secured a position as car inspector on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., which position he held until his death, February 4, 1885. He leaves a widow and five children: Peter J.; Mary, wife of J. F. Rogan, of Erie; George F., a boilermaker by trade, resides in Erie; Joseph M., car inspector for the L. S. & M. S. R. R., and Emma, wife of Harry Baker, of Shenandoah, Pa. Peter J. Emling was educated in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 14 years secured a position as clerk in a grocery store. This he followed one year; he then drove a milk route for six months, when he engaged with Manly & Co. to learn the cigar-making business, continuing with them for three years. He then worked at the trade for Conrad three months, next engaging with L. A. Dibble two years; after this he worked one year as manager of the billiard room in the old Ellsworth House. Then he went to Conneautville, Pa., and worked at his trade for M. A. Kessler two years. Returning to Erie he worked for Wingeter Bros. one year, and April 15, 1887, formed his present business connections. Mr. Emling was married May 9, 1889, to Gertrude Schaefer, of Erie, Pa., and to them have been born three children: Royal P. J., born December 21, 1890; Clayton E., born August 22, 1892, and Tobias W., born April 21, 1894. Mrs. Emling is a member of the German Lutheran Church; Mr. Emling of the German Catholic faith. He is a member of the Elks, Knights of the Golden Eagle, East Erie Turners and the G. H. O. of W. B. In politics he is a Democrat, and is one of the promising young business men of Erie.

Joseph F. Kuhn, senior member of the firm of Kuhn & Emling, cigar manufacturers, 264 East Eleventh street, Erie, Pa. This business was established April 15, 1887, by Joseph F. Kuhn and Peter Emiling, two well-known young men of Erie, both of whom have spent many years in mastering the art of cigar-making. They now employ some expert cigarmakers and four boys, and turn out some of the finest cigars found in Northwestern Pennsylvania. Among the leading brands of this well-known factory are the famous "El Presidente," "Our Special," "Kuhn & Emiling's Extra," and the "K. & E." They turn out from 45,000 to 50,000 cigars a month, and also operate a retail department. Joseph F. Kuhn was born in Erie, August 5, 1856, and is a son of Jacob and Theresa (Ductinger) Kuhn, both natives of Germany. Jacob Kuhn came to America, May 17, 1840, and located in Erie, where he has since engaged in cooping. To Mr. and Mrs. Kuhn have been born eight children: Joseph (deceased), John, a painter in Erie; Sophia, a wife of Charles Veit, of Erie; Theresa, Joseph F., Philippina, of Erie, and Fannie and Mary (twins), the former the wife of William Emiling, of Erie. Joseph F. received a common school education, and when 13 years of age entered the employ of H. Sternes to learn cigar-making. He spent three years under Mr. Sternes, and then worked four years for R. Hunt at the trade. He then spent ten years traveling, and visited and worked in twenty-seven states. He returned to Erie, and worked for R. Pfister one year, then six months for Wingerter Bros., when he formed a partnership with Peter J. Emiling, and opened their present place of business. Mr. Kuhn was married March 1, 1892, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Conrath, of Erie. They have one child, Irene, born September 21, 1894. Mr. and Mrs. Kuhn are members of the German Catholic Church. He is a member of the G. H. O. of W. B., and of the Cigarmakers' International Union 107 of Erie, holding card 2386. In politics he is a Democrat.

Henry Holmwood, grocer and meat dealer, 928 East Sixth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Rosebay, Lunenburg county, Nova Scotia, May 31, 1843, and is a son of Henry and Sarah (Massey) Holmwood, natives of Mayfield, Sussex county, England, and Glasgow, Scotland, and of English and Scotch origin, respectively. Mr. Holmwood was a sea captain in the merchant trade. He died in 1859, aged 45 years. His wife died in 1857, aged 35 years. To this couple were born five children: Henry; John, a sea trader and ship owner, resides in Lockport, Shellburn county, N. S.; George, died aged 22 years; William, a sea captain, and Robert, died aged 20 years. Henry Holmwood received a thorough common-school education, and until 25 years of age worked on the home farm. In 1868 he came to America and located in Erie, Pa., where he secured a position in the Anchor Line freight house, where he remained five years. He then enlisted on board the revenue cutter "Commodore Perry," under Captain Ottinger, serving three years as seaman and two years as quartermaster, when the boat was mustered out of service and he received an honorable discharge. General Garfield was once a passenger from Erie to Buffalo on this boat during Mr. Holmwood's term of service. He opened his present grocery business in April, 1880, and five years later built his present store building, and in 1893 built on and added the meat business to his grocery trade. Mr. Holmwood was married, October 30, 1869, to Miss Jane, daughter of Richard and Bessie Tanner, natives of County Cork, Ireland, where Mr. Tanner died, Mrs. Tanner then coming to Erie to live. To them have been born three children: Thomas, Sarah and Robert. The family are members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Holmwood is one of the progressive business men of his ward, speaking both German and English fluently. He is a member of the K. of P., and saw some military service under the British flag in Nova Scotia. One of Mr. Holmwood's experiences was to have a narrow escape from shipwreck on the New Foundland coast, at Cape St. Georges, in mid-winter of 1867, while acting as pilot on the schooner "William." This vessel left port in company with two others, both of which were wrecked, the "William" barely escaping a like fate. Twenty-eight men were lost. Mr. Holmwood has had exciting experiences on the Labrador coast, where he sailed for some years in a semi-arctic climate.

Michael Lysaght, grocer, 702 East Eleventh street, Erie, Pa., was born in county Limerick, Ireland, in 1839, and is a son of Thomas and Mary (Deere) Lysaght, both natives of Ireland. To them were born three sons: Thomas, Terrance and Michael. In 1852 Michael left Ireland and located in Canada, where, one year prior, his father and two brothers had gone. Here he remained for about ten years and then went to Springfield, Mass., where he was employed for three years by the United States government. After this he went back to Erie, Pa., and went to work in the boiler shop for the Erie City Iron Works, remaining in the employ of this institution for about twenty-five years. In the year of 1890 he built the store on the corner of Eleventh and Reed streets, rented it for two years. After quitting the boiler-making business, in 1892, he sold groceries on commission for one year, and in the spring of 1893 opened his present place of business in the building he had built two years before, 702 East Eleventh street. Here he has since followed successfully his chosen business. He carries a full line of staple groceries, and by prompt and honest dealing has built up a large and lucrative trade. Mr. Lysaght was married in May, 1856, to Mary, daughter of John Shanahan, of Canada, a native of Ireland. This union was blessed with four children: William (deceased), James (deceased), Mary, wife of John H. Rensford, jr., of Erie, a railroad conductor, and John, who died in the 28th year of his age. Mrs. Lysaght departed this life September 11, 1892, aged 60 years. Mr. Lysaght is a member of the Roman Catholic Church, and is a member of the C. M. B. A. He was elected school director from the Second ward in 1889 and again in 1892. In politics he is a Democrat.

Martin Sitterle, city assessor, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, February 18, 1849. He is a son of John B. and Helena (Fleishman) Sitterle, both natives of Germany. John B. Sitterle was a farmer in his native country, came to America about 1848, and located in Erie, Pa., where for some years he worked as a mason-tender, and later he established quite a business building gravel houses. He died in 1885, aged 74 years. His wife departed this life, June 15, 1894, aged 78 years. There were three children born to this union: Martin; Joseph, a molder in Mansfield, O., and Catharine (Mrs. Adam Hoffman, of Erie). Martin Sitterle received his education in the parochial and public schools of Erie, and when 14 years of age, entered the employ of Tibbals & Shark, to learn the molding trade, and followed this trade in Erie until 1891, with the exception of six months, in 1865, when he worked in Rochester and Albany, N. Y.; again in 1877 he left Erie for fourteen months, working at his trade in Beaver Falls, Pa. In 1891, Mr. Sitterle retired from the hard labor of his chosen trade, and has given his attention to the city assessorship. He was elected assessor from the Second ward first in 1885, and held the office until 1892, when he was elected city assessor, and is still holding that office. Mr. Sitterle was married August 20, 1838, to Miss Barbara, daughter of Valentine Walter, of Germany, and to them have been born ten children: Peter (died in infancy), Jacob, John B., clerk in a tea store on Parade street; Kerte, Joseph, a cigar-maker by trade; Charles A., George F., Mary M. and Ida. The family are members of the German Catholic Church, and Mr. Sitterle is a member of the C. M. B. A. He is a man of firm integrity, respected in the community, and has accumulated a fine property. In politics he is a Democrat.

James Franklin, manufacturer of ice cream, factory and residence 714 Sassafras street, Erie, Pa., was born in Pendleton county, Kentucky, in 1838, and is a son of James and Harriet (Bell) Franklin. Mr. Franklin, sr., was one of the most prominent colored men of Pendleton county. He purchased his liberty and rented and operated a large farm for some time in said county. He later went to Canada, and returning to Kentucky died there in 1870, aged 70 years. His wife, Harriet Bell, was a slave, and after having borne him seven children, was sold and torn from her husband and family. James Franklin was the youngest of this family, and the only boy, and was six months old when his mother was sold away from him. He was reared in slavery, and in 1853 he ran away from his master, and located in Windsor, Canada, where he worked as a laborer for some years, later moving over into New York State, and in the spring of 1856, he came to Erie, Pa., and secured the position of janitor for the P. & E. R. R. Company's office, a position he held fifteen years, and in 1881, began the manufacture of ice cream, in a modest way, and from this beginning he has gradually improved and increased his business. In 1890 he bought his present fine brick home, and fitted up the basement as a factory, where he turns out ice cream that in quality cannot be excelled in Erie. During the warm months of summer he throws open his large double parlors, and sells cream to the best people of Erie by the dish, but his business is to manufacture and sell in quantities. Mr. Franklin was married December 5, 1865, to Miss Emma S., daughter of Isaac and Mahala Simpson, both free, the former a native of Lancaster, Pa., and the latter of Cumberland, Md. She was fourth in order of birth in a family of six children, and received a good common school education. To Mr. and Mrs. Franklin have been born nine children: William B., cook in Des Moines, Ia.; George W. (deceased), Minnie A., Charles S., Anna E., Archibald D., Louis Toyler, Carl H., and Leata. Mr. Franklin is a member of the A. M. E. Church, and they are among the best and most respected of colored families in Erie.

Dugan Bros., livery, sale and boarding stables, 414 French street, Erie, Pa. Edward J. Dugan, the senior member of this firm, was born in Harbor Creek township, Erie county, February 21, 1862, and is a son of John and Eliza (Daugherty) Dugan. Mr. Dugan received a common school education and followed farming at home until 1890, when he took charge as foreman of the large farm for Mrs. Judge Talcott, where he remained one year. After this he came to Erie and was employed in the electric light plant for two years, and in February, 1893, with his brother, John P., bought out his present business. John P. Dugan was born April 6, 1863, received a common school education and worked on the home farm till 1889. From 1889 to the spring of 1893 he took fence and ditch contracts. In February, 1893, in partnership with his brother, he embarked in the livery business. They are enterprising young men and conduct a first-class stable, average about fifteen horses, and pride themselves on owning nothing but good stock. They enjoy a lucrative business.

Frank A. Jacobs, owner and proprietor of the livery and team contracting stables in the rear of 153 West Fifteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Chautauqua county, New York. He received his education in the Chautauqua county public schools and in 1862 enlisted in the 12th Pa. Cav., and was in active service until the close of the war. He then located and operated a livery business on the Schaffer farm in Venango county, Pennsylvania, for a short time, and following this embarked in the oil refining business in the same county till 1873. He then went into the hotel business in Westfield, N. Y., for a year, and in 1874 came to Erie and embarked in the livery business, and in 1889 built his present place of business and makes a specialty of team contract work. He keeps fifteen head of horses and makes a point of keeping them busy. Mr. Jacobs is a member of the I. O. O. F., the A. O. U. W. and the G. A. R. His residence is 153 West Fifteenth street. In politics he is a Republican.

Charles P. Haskins, boarding, sale, livery and hack stable, 1010 and 1012 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in DeKalb, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., September 14, 1853. He is a son of Hiram M. and Angeline (Smith) Haskins, both natives of St. Lawrence county, New York. Hiram M. Haskins was a millwright by trade and was considered the best in his section. He died in 1871, aged 44 years. Mrs. Haskins died in 1869, aged 37 years. To them were born four children: Hiram F., a large ranch owner in Idaho; Charles P., Ata (deceased) and Ada, Mrs. Herman Stephen, of Erie. Charles P. Haskins received a common school education and worked at home until 17 years of age, when he engaged to learn the blacksmith trade, which he followed for three years in his native county; he then traveled and worked in several of the large cities for three years. He came to Erie county in May, 1874, and worked for W. A. Brace in Greene township for two and a half years, when he came to Erie and opened a shop, in the fall of 1876, at Twenty-first and Peach streets, which he operated for three years; he next owned a shop in Marvintown for three years. After this he became interested in a livery stable at 115 Peach street, but two years later sold out and moved to 112 East Eleventh street. Three years later, on account of poor health, he sold out, and for eighteen months succeeding bought and sold horses.

John Garse

In the fall of 1892 he bought from Dr. George W. Bell his present livery business, one of the largest and most complete in Erie. The building is 70 by 165 feet and has accommodations for sixty horses, and he keeps a stock of thirty horses, has several hacks for funerals, weddings and calls, and turns out some of the finest rigs to be had in the city. Mr. Haskins operated the city police patrol wagon for a long time. He buys and sells large numbers of horses and is an enterprising business man. He married September 25, 1875, Miss Sarah F., daughter of Henry O. and Eliza Root, of Summit township. Mr. and Mrs. Haskins attend the Universalist Church. Mr. Haskins has served three years in the common council and two years in the select branch. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., E. A. U., Elks, and is a charter member of the Merchants' Club. In politics he is a Democrat.

Capt. John Stevens Richards, now president of the W. L. Scott Company, was born June 5, 1821, at the Richards homestead, located on the south side of Second street, between French and Holland, Erie, Pa. Captain Richards is a son of the late John and Anne (Hinton) Richards, natives of Cardiganshire, North Wales. John Richards, the elder, went to sea, from his home in Wales, at a very early age, and had circumnavigated the globe three times when he landed in New York city, and apprenticed himself to the then great ship-building firm of Brown & Bell. At the breaking out of the war of 1812, Brown & Bell were engaged by the government to construct war vessels, afterward designated as Perry's Fleet, and John Richards happened to be one of a considerable number of men forwarded from New York to Erie, where the vessels were built, to engage in such construction. Subsequently, and throughout his life, he made his home at Erie, and at various times sailed the lakes, but finally engaged permanently in ship building, and had for many years charge of the construction of all of the then noted "Reed Line" of steamers and sailing vessels plying on the lakes. The Hinton, with whom he intermarried, as above mentioned, were among the very early settlers of Erie county, and were also natives of Wales. He died in Erie, in 1845; his wife in 1874.

The John Richards family consisted of Thomas, who, at his death, at Chicago, in 1849, was in command of the steamer "Niagara," of the Reed Line; Mary, wife of Capt. D. P. Dobbins, who died at Buffalo in 1886; William, located in New York, with the firm of Marsh & Willis, Pearl street, died in 1845; John Stevens, born, as above stated, in 1821; Anne, wife of Mr. John H. Vincent, now resident of New York city; Hannah, who married Mr. John C. Beebe, resident at the Beebe homestead, East Sixth street; Helen, wife of Mr. T. B. Wilcox, of Chicago, now a resident of that city, and Eleanor, who died in 1895.

John Stevens Richards received his early schooling in what was known as the "Yellow Meeting House," on Sassafras street, between seventh and eighth streets, this city; afterward attended the Erie Academy, during the years when that institution was presided over successively by A. E. Foster, Reid T. Stewart and James C. Reid; was then for several years engaged in the ship yard, with his father, but finally engaged in sailing, and continued thereat for twenty-three years, during which period, after various promotions from subordinate positions, had commanded successively of the steamers "Ohio," "Queen City," "Keystone State," "Western World," the latter plying between Buffalo and Detroit, and lastly, the steamship "Milwaukee," forming a connection with the Detroit & Milwaukee Railway, between the city of Milwaukee and Grand Haven, Mich. On retiring from command of the last named steamer, in the following spring, being in 1863, became a member of the firm of Henry Rawle & Co., shippers by lake of bituminous coal, which firm was succeeded by that of Richards, Pelton, Reed & Co., the latter firm being dissolved upon the abandonment of the Erie Extension Canal. In 1871 he became associated with the firm of John Hearn & Co., with which firm and its successors, W. L. Scott & Co. and the W. L. Scott Company, he has ever since been identified.

Captain Richards for many years has been identified with the Hamot Hospital Association, being at present president of its board of managers, a member of the board of directors of the Second National Bank, and a vestryman of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

He was married September 19th, 1853, to Adelaide, daughter of the late David McAlister, a pioneer resident of Erie, from Jefferson county, New York. Three children born of this union survive: Harry, now a resident of Minnesota, who married Sarah, daughter of John Eliot, of Erie; Mary, wife of Mr. George R. Metcalf, of Erie, and Adelaide, wife of Mr. W. W. Michener, of Chicago.

The family homestead is at No. 220 West Ninth street.

Joseph Haggman, practical horse-shoer and proprietor of the sale stable, 1225 and 1229 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany July 10, 1856, and came to America with his parents in 1857. They located at Gloversville, N. Y., and here Joseph received his early education; he also attended the public school at Amsterdam and Hill's Corners, N. Y., and came to Erie with his parents in 1872. He is the eldest of a family of nine children: Joseph, Charles, Levi, Mary (Mrs. Eugene Lyons, of Erie, Pa.); Matilda (Mrs. Allen, of Erie, Pa.); Amelia (Mrs. Frank Sloum, of Erie); Louisa, William (whose sketch appears in this work), and Anna (Mrs. Charles Parker, of Erie). Joseph Haggman, when 21 years of age, went to work for Charles Schaffer, to learn the blacksmith trade, and after thirteen months' apprenticeship, took charge of his father's shop for seven months. He then bought a half interest in a shop, but sold out six months later and began work for John Hult. Thirty days later Mr. Haggman bought him out and operated the shop on Twelfth, between State and Peach streets, until 1884, when he moved to his present location, having purchased the fall before. Here he has built up a trade that has placed his establishment in the front rank, and Mr. Haggman is regarded as one of the most practical and best posted men in his business in Erie. He has had instructions from Prof. William Russell, of Cincinnati, and has fine specimens of his own dissecting, showing the horse's foot and lower leg, and he takes pleasure in showing all his customers how and why horse-shoeing should be done by none but experienced men. Mr. Haggman superintends all the work done in his shop. He employs four skilled workmen, and his shop is one of the most complete in Erie. The forges are blown by electricity. He has lately added a sale stable to his business, and buys and sells all grades of horses. Mr. Hagmann was married April 30, 1879, to Miss Amelia, daughter of Jacob Thren, of Erie. To them have been born two children: Carl and Emma J. The family attend the German Lutheran Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the Erie Mennerchor, and is treasurer of the Sixth Ward Republican Club. His residence is 2732 Peach street.

William C. Hull, practical horse-shoer, 1115 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in Summit township, Erie county, Pa., March 15, 1859, and is a son of John and Harriet (Pogson) Hull, the former a native of Erie county and the latter of Mansfield, England. William was reared on the farm, educated in the public schools, and when 16 years of age branched out for himself and worked as a farm hand for about two and one-half years. He then went to North East, and took charge of a dairy and milk route for about two years. He then went to Minneapolis and worked for the Minneapolis Harvester Works six months, and then came back to Erie and worked a short time for the Erie City Iron Works. Returning to North East he worked eighteen months for H. D. Selkregg in a hardware and grocery store, at the end of which period he went back to Minneapolis and began his trade as horse-shoer; here he worked for two and one-half years, and came back to Erie and opened a shop at 18 West Eighteenth street, in February, 1886, and conducted same for two and one-half years, then moving to his present location, where he does a large and lucrative business. He employs two men and superintends all work himself. Mr. Hull was married July 14, 1886, to Miss Anna B., daughter of Blaine Crawford, of North East. This lady departed this life May 28, 1892, aged 35 years, and Mr. Hull married, May 19, 1894, Miss Hattie, daughter of Ellery Gould, of Erie. They have one son, born February 23, 1895. The family attend the Chestnut Street Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Home Circle and the Jr. O. U. A. M. In politics he is a Democrat. The family reside at 163 West Twentieth street.

Peter J. Crowley, livery, sale and boarding stable, 112 and 114 East Eleventh street, Erie, Pa., was born in Harbor Creek township January 21, 1860, and is a son of Thomas and Catherine (O'Brien) Crowley, of Harbor Creek township. Peter received a good education, finishing at the State Normal School at Edinboro, and when 20 years of age, went to Bradford, Pa., and embarked in the oil business, which he followed for three years, when he purchased a livery business and conducted it with marked success till April, 1895, when he disposed of this interest and came to Erie and bought out the stable and business of John H. Collins, where he proposes to conduct a business second to none in the city. Mr. Crowley was married February 22, 1886, to Miss Annie, daughter of Thomas Sheehan, of Wellsville, N. Y., and to them have been born two children: Loretta and Francis. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Crowley is a member of the K. O. T. M. and K. of P. In politics he is independent. His residence is 205 East Eleventh street. Thomas Crowley, farmer, Harbor Creek township, was born in Ireland, and came to the United States in 1836, locating where he now resides and has since followed farming. He married Miss Catherine O'Brien, and to them have been born seven children: Richard, an oil producer in Boliver, N. Y.; Michael, a partner of Richard's; Mary, at home; Dennis (deceased); Peter J. and James, at home.

John Wieczorek, grocer, 655 East Thirteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany June 14, 1864, and is a son of John and Frances (Dybalski) Wieczorek, both natives of Germany and of Polish origin. John received a common school education in Germany, and, in 1881, came to the United States and located in Erie, where he worked four months on a farm. Later he secured a position in the Jarecki & Hays Brass Works, where he remained twelve years, and resigned to engage in his present business, which he opened to the public in February, 1892. He carries a full line of staple groceries and canned goods, salt and smoked meats. Mr. Wieczorek is thoroughly Americanized and enjoys a large and lucrative trade. He was married July 6, 1887, to Miss Antonetta Naguszewska, and to them have been born one son, John, born August 4, 1893. The family are members of the Polish Catholic Church, and are among the most intelligent and respected Polish people in Erie.

William Pressley Meehan was born December 22, 1859, son of William and Catherine (Bickett) Meehan, who were of Irish parentage. They settled in Erie county in 1845, and engaged in the business of carriage and wagon building. William Meehan died in November, 1887. Mrs. William Meehan still lives in Erie. David B. Meehan, a son, is carrying on a branch of his father's business on Twelfth street. William P. Meehan was educated in the Erie public schools and high school. He married Mabel Humphrey, daughter of Jonas A. Humphrey, M. D., a physician of long standing in Union City, and Jane (Abbey) Humphrey. Three children followed this union: Glenius Humphrey, Ruth and Helene Gertrude. The family are Presbyterians and Mr. William P. is a member of the order of Foresters and National Union. He is a Republican in politics and was a member of the National Guards for five years. He was with I. A. Forman for sixteen years and at the end of that time decided to enter business for himself, which he has run successfully for the past four years. He has made a specialty of handling a high grade of men's, women's and children's underwear and hosiery, and so careful has he been to deal in goods of fine quality the fact has become known, "If you get it from Meehan it is good." Buying, as he does, direct from the mills, and going direct to the consumer, he is able to sell to the trade at about jobber's prices. He is the selling agent for Ball Bros' custom shirts. The Ball brothers for forty years supplied the fine trade with custom shirts. Mr. Meehan has a fine business, and is one of Erie's progressive merchants.

Daniel J. Kramer, cigar manufacturer, residence and factory No. 720 West Eighth street, Erie, Pa., was born in St. Catharines, Canada, March 14, 1861, and is a son of John and Mary (Maloney) Kramer, natives of Germany and Ireland, respectively. John Kramer was a carpenter and joiner by trade, who came from his native country to Canada, where he continued following his trade in his new home. His death occurred in 1879, at the age of 56 years. To this couple were born eight children, five of whom are now living:

Margaret, Mrs. George Begy, of St. Catherine's, Canada; Daniel J., John, a painter in Erie; Frank, a paper hanger in St. Catherine's, and Esther, Mrs. Edward Buscheon, of Brockville, Canada. Daniel J. Kramer received a common school education, and when 12 years of age began the cigarmaking trade in his native town, where he worked for seven years. He then worked in Toronto, Canada, six months, then going to Tilsonburg, Canada, two years; Warsaw, Ind., six months, and in December, 1883, he came to Erie and went to work at his trade for George Bartles, remaining in his employ seven years. In the fall of 1890 he, with William Hense as a partner, opened a factory at 636 West Sixth street, and at the end of six months moved to 552 West Fifth street, where six months later Mr. Hense retired from the business, and Mr. Kramer continued in that location till May 1, 1895, when he moved to his present place. He manufactures an average of 20,000 cigars a month, and among his leading brands are: "Marinola," the "Henry Clay," and "Kramer's Home Comfort." He handles at retail a full line of smokers' goods and employs an average of four men. Mr. Kramer was married October 8, 1891, to Miss Mary, daughter of Patrick and Ellen Leonard, of Erie. One son has blessed this union, Frank, born August 6, 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Kramer are members of St. Andrew's Catholic Church. He is a member of the C. M. B. A. and the K. O. T. M., and is an honorary member of the Cigarmaker's Union. From 1888 to 1892 he was an active organizer for the Central Labor Union, and has always taken great interest in labor organizations. In politics he is independent.

Conrad Deck, cigar manufacturer, No. 305 French street, Erie Pa., was born in Wollmesheim, Lannndau Phalz, Bayern, Germany, February 6, 1837, and is a son of John and Margaret (Welsh) Deck. He received a common school education in his native place, and learned the cigarmaker's trade with John Koggendorf in Lannndau, Germany. After finishing his trade he worked as a journeyman for Joseph Miller, in Goldramstein, for three years. He came to the United States in 1861 and located in Erie, going to work for George Bartles, where he remained for one year. He then worked eighteen months for C. M. Conrad, when he bought him out and conducted the factory on Fifth street, between State and French streets, till 1866. He then entered into partnership with M. W. Mehl and operated a factory on French street, opposite the Reed House. Eight months later he sold his interest to Mr. Mehl and opened a factory of his own at 703 State street, where he remained until 1870, when he moved to Parade street, between Tenth and Eleventh. In 1877 he moved to 3130 French street. Three years later he located on Park Row for four years, and in 1884 moved to his present location, where he has since operated. He averages 50,000 cigars a month, and in addition handles a full line of smokers' goods and chewing tobacco, and among the leading brands from his factory are: "La Flor de Victor Hugo," "Henry Vane," "Little Dick's Havana Filler," "Seal Brand," "Bachelor of Arts" and "Henry Clay." Mr. Deck was married June 16, 1863, to Miss Anna M., daughter of Nicholas Hoffman, of Erie, and to them have been born twelve children: Margaret, Mrs. Valentine Renner, of Erie, John, selling cigars on the road for his father; Conrad, jr., a cigarmaker in his father's factory; Adam N., also his father's employ; William P., in the same factory; Annie H., Bernard M., in the cigar factory; Kate, Samuel (deceased), Amanda, Ida and Edward. The family are members of St. Mary's German Catholic Church. He is a member of the C. M. B. A. and Herman Sons. In politics he is independent.

William Schneider, cigar manufacturer and retail dealer in smoker's goods and chewing tobaccos, 910 Parade street, Erie, Pa., was born in Mackinaw, Mich., February 13, 1854, and is a son of Adam and Christian (Beck) Schneider, both natives of Germany. Adam Schneider was a tanner by trade, and came to the United States in 1848, locating in Erie, where he secured a position as bartender. After a short stay in Erie he went to Michigan, with others, to build and operate a tannery. Here he remained till the fall of 1854, when he moved to Venango, Pa., and operated a small tannery until the breaking out of the late war, when he enlisted and served his country well and faithfully, and at the close of the great struggle returned to Erie, where his family had located, and went to work for Hays & Co. tanners. After a short time he was elected constable, and soon after made one of Erie's first policemen, a position he held until his death, after nineteen years' service. He was for a time captain of the force, and at one time acted as chief. He died January 26, 1878, aged 49 years. William Schneider was about 7 years of age when he, with his mother, came to Erie, and soon after was sent out in the country to work for his board and go to school. In this way he received his education. When 16 years of age he entered the cigar factory of Conrad Deck, of Erie, to learn the trade, and three years later went to Lockport, N. Y., where he worked for three years. He then came back to Erie, and, after a trial at the business for himself, and a short time on the road selling cigars, took charge for Stark & Dibble of their factory, and managed it from 1879-1882. He next went in business with George Straub, and, three months later, bought him out and continued the factory where they had located in the Academy of Music building for about a year longer. Then he moved his business to Eighth street, where he continued for two years and bought out G. M. Conrad, corner Eighth and Parade streets, where he remained for one year, and then built his present place in April, 1885, where he has since turned out hundreds of thousands of choice cigars. He employs, on an average, six skilled workmen, and sells an average of 40,000 cigars a month. His leading brands are: "The Amendment," "Buds," "Hamus," "Nation's Favorite," "True Blue," "Hard Apert," "Grand Eagle," "High Light" and "Novelty." He also manufactures a smoking tobacco, "Schneider's Natural Leaf," and handles, at retail, a full line of smokers' goods and chewing tobacco. Mr. Schneider was married, in December, 1878, to Miss Mary, daughter of Charles Brager, of Erie. To them have been born seven children: Mena, Mary and William (twins), Christina, Lilla, Florence and Henry. Mrs. Schneider is a member of the German Catholic, and Mr. Schneider is a member of the German Protestant Church. He is a member of the Elks, I. O. O. F., Golden Eagle, K. O. T. M., East Erie Turners, 9 H. D., German Friendship, and Erie Mannerchor. He was a charter member of, and organizer for, the Cigarmakers' Union, No. 107. In politics he is independent. Mr. Schneider is a stockholder in the Parade Street Market Company.

Frank Boinski, mason, and proprietor of the cigar, tobacco and confectionery store, 601 East Fourteenth street, corner of Ash Lane, was born in Prussian Poland September 8, 1861, and is a son of Antonis Boinski. He received a common school education in his native country, and came to the United States when 20 years of age, in 1881, and located in Erie, when he went to work in the car shops for nine months, when he secured a place in Weschler's malt house, where he worked for four years. He then engaged to learn the plastering and brick-laying trade, and has successfully followed that trade up to the present time. In 1890 he bought a lot at the corner of Fourteenth street and Ash Lane, and one year later built a large dwelling with a store front. He rented the store-room till the fall of 1893, and in November of that year he opened a meat market and operated it for nine months, when he sold out and the room was vacant till February 15, 1895, when he put in a small stock of candies, cigars and tobaccos, and it is in the charge of his wife during his working hours. Mr. Boinski was married January 22, 1888, to Katherine Wiciorock, and to them was born, October 11, 1891, a son. The family are members of the Polish Catholic Church, and he is a member of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of America, the Catholic society of Thaddeus Kosciuszko. In politics he is independent. By hard study at home he has mastered the English language, and is one of the successful Polish residents of Erie and a respected citizen.

William Bell, jr., one of Erie's best known and highly honored citizens, died at his residence, 618 Sassafras street, July 9, 1890. He was born in Westfield, N. Y., April 5, 1828, and was a son of Col. William and Nancy (Shipboy) Bell. His father was born in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, October 14, 1791, and removed to Westfield in 1802, where he followed farming, grist-milling and merchandising until shortly before his death, which occurred August 23, 1872. He took an active part in the war of 1812 and reached the rank of colonel. He was an esteemed and useful citizen, and for many years a ruling elder of the Presbyterian Church at Ripley, N. Y. His wife, to whom he was married July 16, 1819, died January 31, 1842. The family consisted of twelve children: Miss Eleanor, who died at the age of 26 years; John, Mrs. James Johnston, of Westfield, N. Y.; John, who resides at Harbor Creek, Pa.; Clarissa, Mrs. Gilbert T. Elison, of Erie; Joseph, who is the subject of this sketch; Miss Nancy, of Erie; Arthur, who was drowned in his father's mill-pond at the age of 7 years; Alexander, who resides in Harbor Creek; Arthur (deceased); Miss Sarah, of Erie, and Eugenia, who died in infancy. Captain Arthur Bell, the father of Col. William Bell, was born in Paxson, Dauphin county, Pa., January 12, 1752. He took part in the Revolutionary war and removed with his family to Western New York in 1802. He located at a point on the McMahon tract, three miles west of Chautauque creek, where the town of Westfield now stands. He was one of the founders of the Cross Roads Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member until his death, August 6, 1834. Captain Bell married Miss Eleanor Montgomery. Not only is it seen that the Bell family were among the earliest settlers in Southeastern Pennsylvania, but that they were in a later generation prominent among the sturdy pioneers who converted the wilderness of Western New York into one of the most productive and beautiful agricultural sections in the world. William Bell, jr., received his education in the public schools of his native town, and in early life assisted his father in the various lines of business which he pursued. Later he assumed charge of the mercantile business, which he continued until 1857, when he removed to Erie. His first location here was in the store now occupied by Murphy Bros., North Park, where he did a general dry goods business. He next removed to the store-rooms now occupied by Henry Beckman & Son, where he did a thriving business until he sold out to Warner Bros. After that he gave his time chiefly to the management of his real estate, and supervised personally the erection of the Herald building. His residence on Sassafras street was erected in 1864 upon the site of the old "Yellow Meeting-House." After retiring from active business Mr. Bell became interested in the Marine National Bank, of which he became a director and vice-president. Mr. Bell was a man of many noble characteristics, chief among which was his love of home and an ever-ready sympathy for the poor and unfortunate. He took a deep interest in the Home of the Friendless and the Erie Charity Society. He was very much interested in the education of the masses, and once made the city an offer of building, at his own expense, an industrial training school, if the city would furnish the teachers, but the city was deprived of this valuable institution by those who had the authority of accepting or refusing his magnanimous offer. He was a Republican in politics, but had an inborn distaste of political notoriety. Once, however, in 1865-6 he accepted a position as a member of the city council. Mr. Bell was married April 21, 1852, to Miss Caroline, daughter of Mr. Jeremiah Mann, of Ripley, N. Y. Mr. Mann was for many years engaged in merchandising and was an active promoter of the early railroads in his vicinity. To Mr. and Mrs. Bell were born five children, two of whom died in infancy. Augusta, married Mr. Wilbur F. Smallwood, resided in Sherman, N. Y., and died in May, 1889; Caroline, married Mr. George T. Clarkson, an oil manufacturer of Pittsburg. Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson have one child, William Floyd. The youngest surviving child of Mr. Bell is William Bell, of Erie. Mrs. Bell died March 12, 1875, at the age of 47 years. Mr. Bell was married a second time, May 12, 1855, to Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. Samuel Meyers, of Fairview, this county. The family worship at St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church.

John Berst was born in Manheim, Lancaster county, Pa., September 3, 1808. His father, Conrad Berst, was born in Plantz, Germany, in the year 1779. In 1798 he came to America and settled at Manheim, Pa. He was married to Catherine Guntner, of Manheim, in 1807. They had eight children. When the war broke out in 1812 he enlisted in the American army. About 1827 he left Lancaster county and journeyed westward, settling in Butler county. In 1830 he removed with his family to Erie. He rented a small farm south of the city, and in 1834 leased the Reed farm. His eldest son, John, was married to Elizabeth Miller, of Erie, February, 1836. Her family had also come to Erie from Lancaster county. They had six children, Henry, Catherine, Jacob, Hiram, John and Titus. Shortly after his son's marriage, Conrad left Erie for the far West and settled in Kosciusko county, Indiana. Three children remained in Erie, John, and two married daughters, Mrs. Frederick Wittich and Mrs. August Wittich. Mr. John Berst remained on the Reed place until 1866, when he removed to his own farm, west of the town. In 1842 he had bought of Joseph S. Colt about seventy acres of land, extending from Cherry to Liberty and from Seventeenth to West Twenty-sixth. In 1861 he bought the property on the west side of State street, between Eighth and Ninth, where, just before the panic of '73, he built the block bearing his name. In 1886 he mourned the death of his faithful wife. He lingered in very poor health until April, 1888, when he quietly passed away, leaving four sons and one daughter. Of these Henry, the eldest son, is living at the old homestead on Twentieth, between Cherry and Poplar streets, a member of the Lutheran Memorial Church, and in politics has always been a Republican. Catherine A., wife of Hobart Hogan, whose personal history is contained in this volume. Jacob married Mary Geist March 8, 1866; they have four children: Rose M., wife of J. A. Maahs, living in Florida; Bessie, Edmund L. and Maud. Jacob was superintendent of the Erie City Passenger Railroad Company from 1868 until 1888, when it was purchased by the Erie Electric Motor Company. Hiram L. was married December 26, 1867, to Mary E. Sampson, daughter of James and Harriet Sampson, of Miles' Grove. They live in a beautiful home at the corner of Twentieth and Poplar streets, with five children: Harriet; Jessie M., a graduate of Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa.; William L.; Marion, and Ruth. The family are members of Zion's Lutheran Church. Hiram is a Republican in politics, and is at present engaged in subdividing his property and building homes for working men, which he allows them to purchase on easy payments. John, jr., married Miss Sarah E., daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth Brabender, on January 9, 1873. He died March 10, 1882, leaving three children: Mabel E., wife of W. Fred Wood, of Twentieth and Cherry; John F. and Irene L., who still occupy their father's home, on the southwest corner of Twentieth and Cherry streets. They are members of Zion's Lutheran Church. Titus, florist, was born April 10, 1847; enlisted in the army July 18, 1864, at Philadelphia, in Co. F, 19th Reg. P. V. L.; alumnus of Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, 1872; commissioned to inquire into the condition of the Methodist Church in the Sandwich Islands, 1875; member of the school board 1878-9; secretary of Erie City Passenger Railway Company for several years. Married Mary G., daughter of George M. and Elizabeth (Beaver) Brabaker, February 22, 1877, Millersburg, Pa.; Mrs. Berst's mother is a niece of Thomas Beaver, Danville, Pa., and a cousin to ex-Gov. James Beaver. Mr. Berst and family are members of the First M. E. Church, and reside with their two children, Charles B. and Clara Lois, on a beautiful place at Twentieth and Poplar streets, where are also located his floral gardens and green houses. Titus, like his brothers, is a Republican in politics.

John Sullivan, city assessor, residence 236 East Second street, Erie, Pa., was born in Bantry, county Cork, Ireland, February 15, 1840, and is a son of Thomas and Ellen (McCarthy) Sullivan, both natives of county Cork. Thomas Sullivan was a farmer by occupation, and died in 1886, aged 68 years. His wife departed this life in 1893, aged 90 years. To this couple were born five children: John, Michael, a farmer on the old homestead in Ireland; Thomas, a gold miner in Australia; Humphrey, county assessor for the First ward, Erie; and Margaret, wife of John Donovan, of Ireland. John Sullivan was reared on a farm, educated in the common schools, and worked on the home farm till his 23d year, when he came to America, landing in Boston in 1863, where he worked as a laborer till 1871, when he came to Erie, arriving May 24. He secured work at the Anchor Line elevators, and in 1874 was made time-keeper and served for four years. He continued in the employ of the company till 1887, when he was elected ward assessor, serving till 1893, when he was elected tax collector for the First ward, serving four years. Mr. Sullivan was married, in 1865, to Miss Ann, daughter of Timothy Dillon, of Roscarbeg, county Cork, Ireland. To them have been born eleven children: Nellie, Margaret, a dressmaker; Thomas, a conductor on the Erie street railway; Mary, a dressmaker; Kate, Hannah, Julia, John (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased), Humphrey and Annie. Mrs. Sullivan departed this life November 1, 1888, aged 39 years. The family are members of St. Patrick's Catholic Church. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., Branch 12. In politics Mr. Sullivan is a Democrat, and is an honored citizen of his ward.

Joseph Depinet, brick mason and contractor, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie November 6, 1809, and is a son of Michael Depinet. His father, who was a brick-layer, followed the trade for about thirty years in Erie, and died in 1881 at the age of 48 years. He was born in Bavaria, Germany, and came to this country when a young man. The family consisted of eleven children, eight of whom are living: John, Joseph, Lena (now Mrs. Charles Leingang), Benjamin, Mary (now Mrs. Charles Fuhrmann), Henry, Paulina and Michael, all residing in Erie, except Benjamin, who is a citizen of Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Depinet was educated in the public schools of this city, and then learned the trade of a mason, which he has since followed. He has been in business for over six years, and during that time has done some fine work in and about Erie. Among other structures, he has done the brick work in whole or in part, on the Nagosky, Demuling and Detzel buildings, Parade street; the Henry Kneib Block and the Kessler Block, State street; the Shaw piano factory, the Metric Metal Works, the People's Market House, the Heigel Block on West Eleventh street, and the residence of E. B. Hough and Charles Yeager. He also built the Presbyterian Church in West Mill Creek, and the new building of the Redemptorist College in North East. Mr. Depinet was married June 21, 1867, to Miss Rose K. Staab, of Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Depinet are members of St. Joseph's Catholic Church. In politics he has always been identified with the Democratic party.

Robert T. McClure, chairman of the Erie Pail Factory, limited, Erie, Pa., was born in Milflin township, Allegheny county, Pa., in 1842, and is a son of Robert and Elizabeth (McClure) McClure, natives of Pennsylvania, and of Scotch-Irish ancestry. His grandfather and great-grandfather, both of whom were John McClure by name, purchased a large tract of land (probably from the State), located near Pittsburg. This tract has since been sub-divided and laid off in lots, some of which are still owned by descendants of the original purchaser. A large farm was sold to the city of Pittsburg for a poor-farm, and was used as such until 1836, when it was sold to the Carnegie Company for half a million dollars. Besides being an extensive farmer, Robert McClure was one of the pioneers in the mining and boating of coal down the river. Mr. McClure's mother was a daughter of the Hon. Francis McClure, at one time associate judge of Adams county, Pennsylvania. The family consisted of nine children, three of whom are living: Francis N., a retired farmer, living in Varsaill township, Adams county, Pa.; James P., a carpenter by trade, who was disabled in the army, and lives in Sewickley, Allegheny county, and Robert T., who is the youngest of the family. The last-named gentleman was educated in the public schools of his native town, and the Iron City Commercial College of Pittsburg, being graduated from the latter in 1857. After completing his education he entered the employ of his brother-in-law, who was engaged in the planing-mill and lumber business in Pittsburg as accountant, and continued with him for seventeen years. In 1875 he came to Erie, and in company with Mr. H. J. Howe, under the firm name of Howe, McClure & Co., operated the Erie Pail Factory in connection with the attorney of the owners, Bennett, Law & Spencer, who founded the institution, in 1865. In 1874 Howe, McClure & Co. purchased the business, and conducted it under that title until 1887, when Mr. McClure became chairman, and Mr. T. W. Shacklett, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Howe continued a member of the firm until his death, which occurred in 1886. The plant, which occupies two and half acres, was destroyed by fire, September 24, 1894, but was rebuilt about a third larger than before, and was ready for occupancy, January 1, 1895. The products of the concern consist of all kinds and sizes of wooden pails and packages, and the capacity is over four thousand pieces per day. It is one of the largest institutions of its kind in the country, and under its present management is one of the many fine manufactories of which Erie is justly proud. Mr. McClure was married July 18, 1881, to Miss Jeanette Brankston, of Pittsburg, Pa., who, with her husband, attends the United Presbyterian Church. Their elegant residence, at 520 West Eighth street, was completed in 1890. Though Mr. McClure has never been an office-seeker, he has always been very active in support of the principles of the Republican party.

John S. Hicks, ice cream manufacturer, confectioner and baker, Erie, Pa., was born in Virginia, February 14, 1845, and is a son of John S. and Maria (Foster) Hicks. His father deserves great credit for accomplishing what he did under the adverse circumstances under which he labored. He was a slave, but being more than ordinarily intelligent, and possessed of an indomitable will, but, perhaps, most of all, being desirous of marrying a free woman, he bought himself, it being illegal for a slave to marry a free woman. Mr. Hicks received enough education to enable him to get on very nicely with the ordinary affairs of life. He has been in his present business since 1864, removing from Virginia to Springfield, Mass., in 1862. He remained there until 1871, when he came to Erie, and in 1878 engaged in business for himself. He was located at 1406 Turnpike street for three and a half years, and then removed to 1216 State street, where he remained nine years. In 1882 he purchased the lot and built a brick veneered structure, which he occupied until 1882, when he built his present substantial three-story building at 1218 State street, the second story of which he occupies as a residence. The third story is rented for dwelling purposes, and the first floor is used as an ice cream parlor and store-room, while the basement is used as a factory. This is one of the largest ice cream plants in the State, the capacity being 120 gallons per hour. By fair dealing and a thorough knowledge of his business, Mr. Hicks has established a lucrative business, and has succeeded in accumulating comfortable means for himself and family. The temporary building which he built at 1216 State street in 1882 was replaced by a handsome and substantial brick structure in 1894. Mr. Hicks was married June 1, 1884, to Miss Frances Reinbold, a daughter of Mr. John Reinbold, of Erie, by whom he has one daughter, Miss Ida Louise Hicks. Mr. Hicks and family are members of the First Baptist Church, of Erie; he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and in politics is a Republican. Mr. Hicks deserves a great deal of credit for his industry and enterprise. He is one of the most prosperous and influential men of African descent that ever lived in Erie.

Louis Eichhorn, baker, No. 308 West Eighth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Bavaria, Germany, October 18, 1851, and is a son of Philip Peter Eichhorn. His father, who was a tailor by trade, and died in Germany, reared a family of three children, Jacob, tailor, Erie; Louis and Elise, who married Henry L. Brevillier, of Erie. Mr. Eichhorn came to the United States in 1866 and located in Erie, where he learned his trade. From 1874 to 1891 he, as a member of the firm of Harr & Eichhorn, located at 1316 Peach street. Upon the death of Mr. Harr, in 1891, Mrs. Harr took sole charge of the business and Mr. Eichhorn built his present place of business, which is a substantial brick structure 41 x 165 feet and two stories high, the second story being used as a residence. Four men besides Mr. Eichhorn are employed in the bakery and two wagons are kept in constant use. Mr. Eichhorn was married November 22, 1875, to Miss Ottilie Finster of Erie, by whom he has seven children, Edith, Louis H., Annie, Elise, Otto, August and Charles. Mr. Eichhorn and family attend St. Paul German Lutheran Church of Erie. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the D. O. H., and in politics is a Republican.

Barney Nagosky, merchant tailor, at 928 Parade street, Erie, Pa., was born in West Prussia, Germany, May 18, 1869, and is a brother of Mr. Alois Nagosky, a more exhaustive sketch of whom appears in this work. He was educated in his native country, and came to Erie in 1886, where he learned his trade and followed it for some time as a journeyman. In 1894 he engaged in business for himself at 238 East Eleventh street, and in April, 1895, removed to his present location. Besides his merchant tailoring department he carries a good assortment of gentlemen's furnishing goods, and is doing a prosperous business. He is unmarried, and resides with his brother, Alois. He is a member of the Catholic Church, of the St. Benedict Society and of the C. M. B. A. He is also a member of the East Erie Turner Society, and is a Democrat in his political views.

Joseph Malinowski, meat dealer, No. 561 East Thirtieth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Poland, September 15, 1850, and is a son of Jacenty and Karalina (Miskiel) Malinowski. His father, who was an extensive farmer, reared a family of nine children, of whom Joseph is the youngest. He came to the United States in 1863 and located in Buffalo, where he engaged in laboring, and where for seventeen years he was in the saloon business. During a part of the time he was in Buffalo he was a special member of the police force. In 1880 he went to Detroit, Mich., where for nine years he was employed in a rolling mill. He then returned to Buffalo and resumed the restaurant business, and was for a short time conductor on a gravel train. In 1891 he came to Erie and engaged in his present business on Fourteenth street, and purchased, built upon and removed to his present location in 1892. He has a well-equipped shop and market, and resides in the second story of the building. Mr. Malinowski was married, April 22, 1876, to Miss Annie Ribicki, of Buffalo. They are both members of the Catholic Church.

Jesse Roberts, junior member of the firm of Walker & Roberts, proprietors of the Erie Lithographing and Printing Company, Erie, Pa., was born in West Philadelphia, Pa., June 30, 1851, and is a son of Hiram C. and Hester Ann (Haupt) Roberts, of Scotch and German ancestry. His father, born in Plymouth, Montgomery county, Pa., August 23, 1819, died in Erie October 28, 1891, and his mother, born in Upper Dublin, Pa., July 4, 1820, resides with him. His father, who was a carpenter and contractor, reared a family of five children, three of whom are living: Jesse, Miss Ellen Naneth Roberts and Isabella Brant, who married Mr. John Hamberger, real estate broker, Erie. Mr. Roberts was educated in the public schools of Conshohocken, Pa., graduating from the high school. In 1896 he began a printer's apprenticeship in the Erie Dispatch office, where he remained continuously for twenty-five years. He left the Dispatch on December 1, 1890, and on January 1, 1891, associated with Mr. F. J. Walker, who had established the Erie Show Printing Company, located at 10-22 West Fourth street. In August, 1891, a lithographing department was added, the adjacent building west of the original location being purchased for its occupancy. About this time the firm name was changed to the Erie Lithographing and Printing Company. They do all kinds of circus, theatrical and commercial lithographing, printing and engraving. The business has grown rapidly from the start and is in a flourishing condition. Mr. Roberts was married June 18, 1891, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Elias and Phoebe Reiddle, of Erie. The issue of this marriage is two children, Gertrude Hester and Isabella Phoebe. Mr. Roberts and family worship at the First Baptist Church of Erie. In politics he is a Republican.

Andrew F. Voelk (deceased) was one of Erie's enterprising manufacturers and respected citizens. He was born in Lichtenfels, Bavaria, Germany, March 8, 1837, where after his school days and at the age of 14 he was apprenticed to learn the trade of a machinist. In 1854 he came to the United States and located in New York, where he remained two years. Coming to Erie, he continued in the same line of business until his death, which occurred at his residence, No. 137

East Tenth street, September 7, 1894. When Liddell & McCarter founded the machine shop at the corner of Twelfth and State streets which was the nucleus of the Erie City Iron Works, Mr. Voelk was made foreman of the works, a position he held for eleven years, when, in company with other parties, he founded the Humboldt Iron Works on the site now occupied by the Golby and the Hicks blocks, on State street. This concern has since become the Davis-Farrar Company, manufacturers of marine engines, boilers and pumps. In 1885, in company with Mr. P. W. Dietley, he founded the Erie Machine Shop, referred to elsewhere in this work. In 1893 he sold out his interest and made a trip to Europe, where he visited the scenes of his childhood. On his return, he became the chief mover in the establishment of the Gem City Manufacturing Company, located on Fourteenth and Holland streets, which has since done a flourishing business. Mr. Voelk was married in 1856 to Miss Louise, daughter of Christian Reiser, of Erie. Her father left France and located in Erie, when she was 9 years old. This union was blessed with seven children, three of whom are living: Misses Louise and Anna Voelk and Mr. Fred Voelk, who is interested and employed in the Gem City Manufacturing Company's Works. In politics Mr. Voelk was a Republican.

Adrian J. Mitchell, veterinary surgeon, Erie, Pa., was born in Livingston county, New Jersey, May 28, 1853, and is a son of Abram J. and Mary E. (Wright) Mitchell. When a boy he attended some of the rural schools, but the greater part of his general education was received in the academy at Springfield, N. J. In 1874 he matriculated at the American Veterinary College of New York city, where he remained one year, and afterwards, in 1877-8, attended the New York College of Veterinary Surgeons. In 1882 he accepted a position as veterinarian for Asa Burnham's racing horses, and continued such throughout the circuit. While acting in this capacity, and located at Coney Island, he studied incidentally with that eminent veterinarian and member of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, Dr. J. A. Going, of New York city, who conferred upon him a certificate of recommendation. In the fall of 1882 he entered the Ontario Veterinary College, but on account of severe and repeated attacks of sciatic rheumatism, he was not graduated until December 31, 1885. Even after the completion of his course he was taken home in a helpless condition. This illness also vanquished one of his fondest hopes, that of completing his education in Paris. As soon as his health was sufficiently regained he began the practice of his profession, which he followed in Oil City, Titusville and other places in Pennsylvania, and, in 1888, came to Erie, since which time his office has been at 1227 Peach street. In the rear of his office, and attached to it, is his veterinary hospital, which is one of the finest in northwestern Pennsylvania. Soon after coming to Erie Dr. Mitchell's superior knowledge of veterinary surgery and medicine began to attract the attention and patronage of many owners of valuable horses, notably the late Hon. W. L. Scott, who, at that time, had upon the Algeria Farm between $300,000 and $400,000 worth of high-bred running horses. There probably is not a veterinarian in America who has operated upon a greater number of valuable horses than Dr. Mitchell, and it is conceded that he has the largest practice in Erie. The doctor was married December 25, 1880, to Miss Clara Dross, of Gowanda, N. Y. This union has been blessed with two children, Adrian, a student in the Erie Academy, and Miss Luella, a student in the Central high school. Dr. Mitchell is a member of the A. O. U. W., and is a Democrat in his political views.

Adolph Schroeck, contractor and builder, Erie, Pa., was born in Hoerd, Germerheim, Rheinpfalz, Germany, October 20, 1854, and is a son of John Conrad and Mary Anna (Moser) Schroeck. His father, who was a cabinetmaker by trade, reared a family of four children, of whom Adolph is the second. One day, when about 16 years old, he was driving his father's team, and a company of soldiers seized it. But, instead of abandoning the team, he accompanied it, and thus, without his parents' knowing his whereabouts, he served two months in the army, after which he escaped and returned home. In 1872 he came to the United States and located in Erie, where he entered the employ of S. Kirschner to learn the carpenter's trade, with whom he remained five years. He then followed his trade for two and a half years in the oil region, after which he returned to Erie and entered the employ of Constable Bros., with whom he remained in all about five years. In 1880, when he had been in the employ of Constable Bros. about six months, he visited his native country, remaining abroad about six months. In 1884 he engaged in business for himself, in which he has since been highly successful. He does all kinds of building, from foundation to finish, including interior decorating and papering. He built his planing-mill, at 902 East Eleventh street, in 1889, and has since added to it from year to year. The products of the mill include all kinds of dressed and manufactured lumber, but for his own use exclusively. The fine residences and other buildings which he has erected in Erie are too numerous to mention. He built his own comfortable home at 906 East Eleventh street in 1888. Mr. Schroeck was married April 15, 1880, to Miss Mary Eva, daughter of Mr. George Boehm, of Hoerd, Germany. This union has been blessed with eight children, Mary Magdalena, Anna Catherine, John Adolph, Mary Annie, Peter Adam, John Frederick, Elizabeth, Clara (deceased) and Rosa. Mr. Schroeck and family are members of St. Mary's Catholic Church, and he is a member of the C. M. B. A. In politics he is not bound by party ties, but gives his vote to what he considers the best interests of the community.

Edward W. Constable, senior member of the firm of Constable Bros., Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, December 19, 1850, and is a son of John Constable, whose sketch appears in this work. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and then clerked for six years in a grocery store in Titusville, Pa., after which he followed bookkeeping for five years in Erie. In 1878 he, in company with his brother, William H., purchased of Constable & Ramsey their mill at the northwest corner of Fifth and Sassafras streets. This partnership lasted two years, after which he conducted the business alone three years, and then admitted his brother, Charles A., to the partnership. The mill burned in November, 1888, and was rebuilt immediately, and was again in operation in the spring of 1889. The products of the mill include all kinds of manufactured lumber and building supplies, not only for their own building, but for the trade. There is also carried a large stock of builders' hardware. Among the fine buildings which they have erected may be mentioned the residences of Davenport Galbraith, George D. Selden, J. P. Metcalf, E. Camphausen, Dr. J. C. M. Drake, J. B. Crouch, Otto Germer, jr., Thomas Hemphill, etc. Mr. Constable was married in June, 1878, to Miss Alice E. Roberts, of Erie, who died in 1883. He was remarried, July 2, 1890, to Miss Mary K. Evans, daughter of John Evans, formerly of Grand, Pa., but now of Benton Harbor, Mich. In politics Mr. Constable has always been a Republican, and has rendered much valuable service to the party of his choice.

John Constable, one of Erie's oldest and most highly respected citizens, was born in a suburb of London, England, January 11, 1811, and is a son of Robert and Harriet (Perkins) Constable. He was educated and learned his trade in his native country, and came to the United States in 1838, locating in Buffalo, N. Y., where he remained four years. He then went to Florida, where he was employed in an arsenal for nearly a year, after which he returned to Buffalo. In 1839 he started for Pittsburg, where his brother, Nathaniel, afterwards national quartermaster in the late war, was engaged in the manufacture of safes. He left Buffalo on the steamer "Robert Fulton," but when he reached Erie, he found that his trunks had been put off at Dunkirk, N. Y. While waiting for his trunks he sought and found employment in Erie, where he has since remained. Thus, by mistake, as it were, Erie gained one of her best citizens. His first employer was Col. Seth Reed, and his first work was upon the Reed House. After some time employed as journeyman, he engaged in business for himself in contracting and building. Among his first buildings were the stores now occupied by P. Minning & Sons and the residence of Joseph M. Sterrett, at Fifth and Holland streets. In company with Hugh Jones, he built what was then known as the East and West Ward school houses, at that time the only school buildings in the town, and other buildings. He was also for a time in partnership with Samuel Cummings. In later years we find such monuments to his work as the Park Presbyterian Church, Dime Bank Building and Scott Block. He built a mill on the present site of the one now owned and operated by his sons, on the old canal, and was the first to use the power of its water. Mr. Constable was married in 1829 to Miss Elizabeth Pettitt, by whom he had five children: John, who was born in England, and who died from disease contracted in the late war; George, who was in the circus business for a number of years, and was drowned by the bursting of a boiler on the Ohio river, near Cairo, Ill., in 1874; Thomas, who is employed on the lakes; Harriet, who married George McGowan and died in Titusville, Pa., and Washington, who is a glazier in Erie. Mrs. Constable dying in 1835, Mr. Constable was remarried in 1838 to Mrs. Eliza (Culp) Reinhardt, who had one son, William, and by whom he had four children: Edward W. and Charles A., whose sketches appear in this work; Louisa, Mrs. H. C. Sanderson, of Scranton, Pa., and Herbert, who is engaged in the furniture business in Boston. Three of Mr. Constable's sons were in the late war: Thomas, one year in the navy and the 83d P. V. I.; Washington, in the 145th P. V. I., was for a time in Libby Prison, and John, already mentioned; William Reinhardt was also in the 83d P. V. I., Mr.

Patrick Murphy

and Mrs. Constable have for many years been members of the Baptist Church, and he is the oldest member of the I. O. O. F. and Encampment in Erie. In politics he is a Republican, and was for many years a member of the city councils.

Charles A. Constable, junior member of the firm of Constable Bros., manufacturers, contractors and builders, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie November 29, 1856, and is a son of John Constable, whose sketch appears in this volume. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and learned his trade with his father, after which he spent five years working at his trade in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. He then returned to Erie and entered the employ of his father, and later of Constable Bros., who succeeded his father in business. Upon the death of Mr. William H. Constable, in 1878, Mr. Charles H. Constable took charge of his estate and continued the management of it for three years, when he became a member of the firm, which has since been composed of Edward W. and Charles A. Constable. The plant is located at the northwest corner of Fifth and Sassafras streets, and occupies an area 165 feet square. The business of the concern includes all kinds of building from foundation to finish, and gives employment to about 175 men. The products of the mill are all kinds of finished and manufactured lumber for building purposes. In the southeast corner of the plant is the store, which carries a complete stock of builders' hardware and furnishings. The institution as a whole is one of the most complete and thoroughly equipped in Northwestern Pennsylvania. Mr. Constable was married May 30, 1885, to Miss Clara J., daughter of Mr. Edmund Wilson, of Edinboro, Pa. This union has been blessed with one child, Addie. They reside at 419 Sassafras street. In politics Mr. Constable is a Republican, and served the city as a member of the common council for the terms from 1881 to 1883.

Edward Mehl, superintendent of the docks and the lake and rail shipping of the W. L. Scott Company, Erie, was born in Erie, September 1, 1855, and is a son of Anthony and Maria Anna (Raeder) Mehl, natives of Bavaria, Germany, who came to Erie about 1845 and here learned the carpenter trade, which he followed the greater part of his life. The immediate family consisted of two sons, Philip J., who was superintendent of the erection of the main building of the Mid-Winter Fair in San Francisco in 1895, and is now superintendent of construction of a large public building now being constructed in Sutoro park in that city; and Edward. The latter named gentleman received his early education in the public schools of his native city, and was graduated from St. Vincent's College, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, in 1877. Soon after completing his education he secured a position as clerk to Paymaster A. D. Bache, United States steamer "Michigan," where he remained one year. In 1880 he entered the employ of the W. L. Scott Company as shipping clerk at the soft-coal dock. The officers of this company have always been quick to recognize and appreciate merit, and Mr. Mehl was rapidly promoted until he was made superintendent of the soft coal shipping, and, upon the death of Mr. John R. Saltsman, superintendent of the hard coal shipping, December 14, 1894, he was promoted to his present position. Mr. Mehl is a charter member of the Erie Club, and is also a member of the Kahkwa Club. He is a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church, of which he is a generous supporter. He affiliates with the Democrat party, but has never been a seeker of public office or political preferment.

William A. Walker, chief engineer of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Electric Light Works, Erie, Pa., was born in Gowanda, N. Y., June 17, 1866, and is a son of Josiah W. and Anna M. (Chapman) Walker, natives respectively of New York and New Hampshire, and of English ancestry. His father, who was a molder by trade and died in 1880, at the age of 47 years, reared a family of eight children, three of whom are living: Anna, Mrs. Samuel W. Shearer, of Erie; William A., and George W., the last foreman of the printing office of the H. F. Watson Paper Company. Mr. Walker was educated in the public schools of Warren, Pa., and also of Erie, and after leaving school entered the machine shop of the Brooks Locomotive Works, of Dunkirk, to learn the machinist's trade. After completing his apprenticeship he began firing on the Rochester division of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg R. R.; he also fired on the N. Y. C. & St. L. R. R. and the Pittsburg, Youngstown and Ashtabula R. R., in all about five years. In 1891 he accepted a position with the H. F. Watson Paper Company as stationary engineer, and was made foreman of the gas works of that concern soon after the establishment of that feature. He continued in that position until he accepted his present one, October 1, 1894. Mr. Walker was married, October 22, 1889, to Miss Lila M., daughter of Mr. Daniel Wendler, of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Walker attend the Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Independent Order of Foresters, and is a Republican in politics.

Charles H. Klemm, constable for the Fourth ward, Erie, Pa., born in Bremen, Germany, January 24, 1853, is a son of John B. and Anna (Fouch) Klemm. His father was a member of the police force of Bremen for twenty-eight years, and for a portion of that time a sergeant of police. The family consisted of thirteen children, nine of whom are living, six in America and three in Erie. Mr. Klemm was educated in his native country and also attended night school to some extent after reaching the country of his adoption. When but 13 years of age he came to America unaccompanied by any of his relatives and located in Baltimore, Md., where his brother, Charles H., had emigrated. He remained in Baltimore three and a half years, during which time he learned the cigarmaking trade, which he then followed successively in Brooklyn, N. Y., six months; Union City, Pa., fifteen months; Cory, one year; Milwaukee, Wis., one year; Chicago, one year, and Cleveland, Ohio, six months, whence he came to Erie March 18, 1873, and worked at his trade nine years. In 1882 he was elected to his present position, and at the expiration of each term since has been re-elected. He was also collector of city taxes in 1889 and 1890. Mr. Klemm was married August 18, 1873, to Miss Mary Straub, of Erie. The issue of this marriage was ten children: Jacob, Charles V., Anthony, Edward, Adeline, Eva, Walter, Clara (deceased), Roy Valentine, Dora and Benjamin. Mr. Klemm is a member of the I. O. O. F., and the Herman's Sons. In politics he is a staunch Democrat.

James C. Williams, superintendent of the machinery construction department of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, was born in Brantford, Canada, April 29, 1843, and is a son of John and Rachel (Farry) Williams, natives of Wales. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and at the age of 12 years began to learn the machinist's trade, which he followed in various places till 1881, when he accepted his present position. He resides at 324 East Sixth street. Mr. Williams was married August 19, 1870, to Miss Anna Elizabeth Schriber, of Meadville, Pa. They have four children: Carrie, Mrs. Frank Stoughton, of Erie; Charles F., Ernest and Walter. Mr. Williams is a Scottish Rite Mason, and is also a member of the Elks, the G. A. R., the Erie Merchants' Club and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. In politics he is a Democrat, and has served his city as a member of the common council one term and the select council two years.

Rudolph Conrader, superintendent of the brass-finishing department of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, November 13, 1858, and is a son of Marcus and Loretta (Bartelles) Conrader, natives of Germany, who emigrated to Erie, in 1848. His father, who was a painter by trade, died in 1892; his mother is still living. The family consisted of five children: William, superintendent for Henry Shenk, Pittsburg, Pa.; Herrman, for many years a barber in Erie, but now residing in Jacksonville, Fla., on account of poor health; Charles A., of the firm of Jenkins & Conrader, Erie; Rudolph, and Laura, clerk in the dry goods store of Trask, Prescott & Richardson, Erie. Mr. Conrader was educated in the public schools of Erie, and, in May, 1872, entered the employ of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, to learn the brass-finishing trade, where he has since continued, excepting 1882-33, when he worked in brass shops in various places in the East. He has held his present responsible position since May, 1887. There are from 115 to 120 men employed in his department, and nearly as many machines. Many of the machines used are of his invention, and nearly all of them bear the touches of his mechanical genius. Among the many machines which he has invented and patented may be mentioned a metal ball machine, a grinding machine, a billiard-ball machine, and many others, nearly all of which he has sold to the Jarecki Company. Mr. Conrader was married June 11, 1885, to Miss Sophia Smith, of Erie. They had three children: Edwin K., who died in 1892, aged 6 years; Anna L., and Alfred E. Mr. and Mrs. Conrader attend the Universalist Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Maccabees and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. In politics he is a Republican.

Charles A. Conrader, of the firm of Jenkins & Conrader, contractors and builders, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., July 24, 1852, and is a son of Marcus and Loretta (Bartelles) Conrader. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 19 years engaged with Mr. John Miller to learn the carpenter's trade. He remained with Mr. Miller five years, two years with Mr. White, and three years with John J. Hogan. In 1876 he was appointed stroke-oursman of the Erie life-saving station, to succeed Clark Jones, where he served four years, with much credit to himself and satisfaction to the general public. He was then employed for two and a half years upon the interior woodwork of St. Peter's Cathedral, doing nearly all the carpenter work on the ceiling, which will long bear evidence of his superior workmanship. He was also employed for several months upon the fine woodwork of the Villa Maria. He then entered the employ of Henry Shenk, as foreman, and as such built the St. Michael's and Simpson Churches. In 1894 he entered into partnership with Mr. William A. Jenkins, and they have since done an extensive general building business. During the season of 1894 they built the addition to the gas works, the German Baptist Church, the Siegel Block, the McCarter Block, the Bacon House, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Electric Light Works, the new porch of Hon. C. M. Reed's residence, and numerous other buildings. Mr. Conrader was married in October, 1873, to Catherine, daughter of Mr. Barney Daugherty, of Erie, who was killed in 1894 while tearing down the old Market House. This union has been blessed with seven children: Charles, George, Susan, who died at the age of 6 years, Rudolph; John, August and Ray. In politics Mr. Conrader has always been in sympathy with the principles of the Republican party.

William McWhorter was born in Cincinnati, Cortland county, N. Y., August 10, 1831, is the son of Zuriel and Polly (Fairchild) McWhorter, and is of Scotch and English ancestry. His grandfather came to Cortland, Cortland county, in 1780, and was a practicing physician there for over forty years, and was prominently connected with several business interests of the place. His youngest son, Zuriel, was educated to succeed his father in the medical profession, but it afterwards proving distasteful to him, he gave it up and engaged in fruit farming. In 1825 he married Polly Fairchild, and reared a family of seven children, of whom William was the second, and the only one residing in Erie. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and at the age of 16 years engaged with Captain Benjamin Burdett, of Buffalo, in the piano making trade, with whom he remained four years. It was during this time, in 1851, that he made his first trip to Erie to look after some business for his employer. In 1852 David Benson, of Cincinnati, N. Y., a friend of Mr. McWhorter, purchased the business of Capt. Burdett, and Mr. McWhorter took a contract of him to manufacture the actions, which he did for four years. He then began selling pianos in Buffalo on his own account, which he followed for three years. From 1855 to 1861 he traveled very extensively through the South in the same line of business, and was in Frankfort, Ky., when Fort Sumter was fired upon. In 1857 Mr. McWhorter purchased a fruit farm in LaSalle, N. Y., upon which he lived for many years previous to coming to Erie, and upon which he raised large quantities of all fruits grown in that climate. He removed to Erie in 1885, and sold the farm in 1891. But during all these years he combined the management of his farm with the piano business. In 1882-5 he traveled throughout Eastern Pennsylvania and Western New York in the interest of Denton & Cottier, extensive piano dealers of Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. McWhorter was married September 7, 1864, to Miss Helen, daughter of Joseph B. Moorhead, of Moorheadville, Erie county. The issue of this marriage has been seven children: Joseph B. Moorhead, in Gallien, Ill.; Mary, who died at the age of 19 years;

Harry L., bookkeeper for the Griswold Manufacturing Company and secretary of the Hollands Manufacturing Company; Frank, who died at the age of 2 years; Bessie, Eleanor and Robert. Mr. and Mrs. McWhorter are members of the Park Presbyterian Church.

Frank E. Wade, secretary of the board of poor directors of Erie county, was born in Union township, this county, October 11, 1853, and is a son of William R. and Angeline (Northrope) Wade. His father was a native of Bradford county, Pennsylvania, but removed to Chautauqua county, New York, with his father, Charles Wade, when a small boy. About 1845 he went to Union township, Erie county, Pa., where he engaged in the lumber business, afterwards building a mill and marketing his lumber in Erie. He also owned and managed a large farm, and was one of the most prosperous citizens of that township. He was a staunch Republican and a persistent worker in the interests of his party. He held nearly all the township offices, and from 1885 to 1891 was one of the commissioners of Erie county; he died in 1891. The family consisted of seven children, six of whom are living: Frank E., William H., farmer in Concord township; Elmer A., in the employ of the Colby Piano Company, Erie; Carrie E., who married Mr. J. R. McCrea, farmer, Concord township; Fred J., who is a driller in Indiana, and Bert S., who is in the employ of the American Wringer Company, at Williamsport, Pa. Mr. Frank E. Wade was educated in the public schools of his native town and the Union City high school. In 1868, his father having traded his mill for a large farm, and removed thereon, he divided his attention for the next two years between farming and attending school. In 1870 he went to Spring Creek, Warren county, Pa., where for nearly four years he worked in a saw mill. He then returned to Concord township, Erie county, and followed farming two years, after which he resumed the lumber business at Concord Station, acting in the various capacities of clerk, foreman, log measurer, etc., which he continued for five years. In 1884 he went to Beaver Dam, Pa., to take charge of a store for Mr. D. S. Lyons, where he remained until January 1, 1890, when he accepted his present position. He resides at 1916 Sassafras street. Mr. Wade was married July 15, 1873, to Miss Lottie M., daughter of Mr. A. J. Rice, of Riceville, Crawford county, Pa. The issue of this marriage is three children, Susie A., Roy A. and Marjorie. Mr. and Mrs. Wade are members of the Simpson M. E. Church, of Erie. In politics he is a Republican, and while living in Union township held the office of assessor, and in Concord township, the office of assessor and school director.

George Feningham, retired, Erie, Pa., is a native of Strausburg, Germany, was born September 29, 1830, and when 3 years of age came to Erie with his parents, Philip and Catherine (Henk) Feningham. The father was a pump-manufacturer in Erie for many years, and died October 5, 1882, aged 81. The mother died in 1846. In the family there were six children, of whom George was the third. Mr. Feningham spent his boyhood days in Erie, was educated in the public schools, and, when 19 years of age, commenced an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade with James Scott, a contractor at that time. He followed his trade in Erie until 1856, when he went to Edinboro, Pa., where he followed the same kind of business until 1863, when he went to Girard, Pa., and about ten years later returned to Erie. Here he followed general contracting and building for about twenty years. During the last two years, on account of ill-health, he has been unable to give his business personal attention, and has been practically compelled to retire. He was married in 1854, to Jane Ensworth, of Wattsburg, Pa. To them was born one child, Linnie, now Mrs. J. J. Kibler, Girard, Pa., when a legal separation took place, and Mr. Feningham afterward married Miss Jane Fiedler. After being married six years she died, in 1878, leaving no children. Mr. Feningham has been collector of taxes in his ward one term, is a member of the Masonic order, and has spent a life of business activity in Erie county.

Harry W. Lewis, letter carrier, Erie, Pa., was born in Harbor Creek township, Erie county, Pa., August 30, 1840, and is a son of Marcus and Lucy (Allen) Lewis, the former a native of Vermont, and of Revolutionary stock, his paternal grandfather having served in the Continental army, and the latter a native of New York, and a grand-niece of Ethan Allen. Harry N. Lewis is the seventh in a family of ten children. He was reared in Harbor Creek township to the age of 15, when the family removed to Fairview township. He was educated in the common schools, and worked at home on the farm until the war broke out, and May 21, 1861, he enlisted in Co. K, McLane's Reg., which went out in answer to the three months' volunteer call. He remained in this regiment until July 29, 1861, when he enlisted in Co. G, U. S. Reg. Cav., under Capt. John Irwin Gregg. Mr. Lewis' service was altogether in the army of the Potomac. At the battle of Gettysburg, he was taken prisoner, and was imprisoned at Bell Island and Libby, when he was paroled and later exchanged, and then engaged in the service, under Sheridan, and served with him until he went to the Shenandoah Valley. As a soldier Mr. Lewis has a record that is equalled by few. He participated in nearly all the engagements of the army of the Potomac, having been under fire 108 times. He was in thirteen general battles, twenty-one cavalry fights, and numerous skirmishes. Three of his brothers were also in the service. James served in the 76th Reg. P. V. I., three years; Horatio was first lieutenant in Co. D, 145th P. V. I., and died from wounds received at Gettysburg. Marcus died at Smithland, Ky., while in the service of the navy. After over three years of service Mr. Lewis was discharged, July 29, 1864, at City Point, Va., when he returned to Erie county, and followed farming until 1881. He was postmaster of Swanville four years. In 1881 he received an appointment as custom-house inspector, and removed to Erie, and served two seasons. In 1889 he was appointed mail carrier, in which employment he is at present engaged. He was married January 10, 1865, to Miss Susan, daughter of Samuel and Mary M. (Heiss) Myers, of Fairview township. They have six children: Mary, Mrs. A. M. Sloan; Birdie (deceased); Alice, a teacher in the public schools at Erie; Millicent, now Mrs. Jerome Sternberg, jr.; Emma and Harry M. Mr. Lewis is a member of the Royal Arcanum and the G. A. R. The family attend the M. E. Church, and politically he is a Republican.

Harry Turner, locomotive engineer on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born August 5, 1844, in Durhamshire, England. His father served for many years in the English navy. Harry came to America in 1859 and served an apprenticeship at the machinist's trade in the L. S. & M. S. shops in Cleveland, Ohio. After completing his trade he worked there as journeyman a short time, when he went to Akron, Ohio, and worked at his trade three years. He then took a position on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. as fireman, and about two and a half years later was promoted to the post of engineer. After running the freight engine a while he was given a mixed run of passenger and freight, and in 1884 he was assigned on the fast mail and limited between Cleveland and Erie. This is one of the fastest runs in the country, making but one stop, which is at Ashtabula. He was married December 25, 1872, to Miss Rubadell, daughter of James L. King, of Erie. They have two children, Laura and Charles. Mr. Turner settled in Erie about the time of his marriage. He is a member of the Masonic order, United Workmen, and B. of L. E. He is considered one of the best engineers on the road, and the confidence of his superiors is evinced by giving him the management of the responsible run to which he is now entrusted. He is possessed of those qualities of nerve and skill so requisite in the modern locomotive engineer and is a typical railroad man.

Edward Kraus, merchant, Erie, Pa., born in Germany July 20, 1845, is a son of Joseph and Margaret (Hoe) Kraus, and the younger of two children. The family emigrated to America and settled in Erie county when Edward was about 3 years of age. He was reared and educated in Erie county, and served an apprenticeship at the painter's trade; he next engaged in the handling of meats a short time. Later he became interested in the restaurant business in Erie and followed it fifteen years. In 1890 he constructed a large modern brick block at 810 Parade street, where he is engaged in his present business. He was married February 11, 1873, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Metz) Huster. They have ten children, Edward, John, George, Alois, Charles, Elizabeth, Clara, Amanda (deceased), Emil and Mary. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Politically Mr. Kraus is a Democrat.

Palmer E. Eggleston, foreman for the Lovell Manufacturing Company, Erie, Pa., was born at Geneva, Ashtabula county, O., February 10, 1859, and is a son of Erastus and Sarah (Nichols) Eggleston, the former a native of Winstead, Conn., and a descendant of one of the oldest New England families. He came to Ohio in 1844, and always engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements, and was during his day superintendent of several leading firms in that line. He died September 12, 1888, and his wife died about a year later. In the family there were seven children, all of whom are living: Foster, superintendent of the Jackson State Penitentiary, of Michigan; Orlena, married Mr. Freeman Thorpe, well-known artist in Findlay, O., has painted many celebrated pictures, with which the citizens of Erie are familiar; Viola, married S. H. McKenstry, of Geneva, O.; Palmer E., Charles Homer, Cleveland, O.; Lettie, married Charles Mahlen, of Titusville, Pa. Palmer E. Eggleston was reared and educated in his native town, and since his boyhood has been more or less engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements in various parts of the country, having made that branch of industry his special study. In April, 1883, he came to Erie and accepted the position as foreman of the Lovell Manufacturing Company, which position he has since held. He was married, December 25, 1880, to Miss Winnifred, daughter of John and Melissa (Murphy) Moreland, of Geneva, O. They have had two children, Olive and John, both deceased. Mrs. Eggleston is a well-known musician in the city of Erie. She devotes most of her attention to vocal music, and at present sings in the First Presbyterian Church choir, where she has been engaged for some time. Mr. Eggleston's position is one of great responsibility, and is due to his skill and faithfulness. He is a man thoroughly qualified for the trust and responsibility which is imposed upon him. Politically he is a Republican.

M. A. Cray, conductor on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born at Fairview, Erie county, Pa., August 19, 1857. He is a son of William and Johanna (Collins) Cray, the former a native of Drewscourt, parish of Ballyhagan, County Limerick, Ireland, and was born September 21, 1829; the latter was a native of England and was born January 20, 1832. She was the only daughter of John and Catherine (Burke) Collins, natives of Ballyhagan, County Limerick, Ireland. The latter was born in 1803, and died April 1, 1883. William Cray, M. A. Cray's father, emigrated to America, accompanied by his wife and her mother, in November, 1850, and after a stormy voyage of seven weeks, landed at Castle Garden, N. Y. They immediately came west and settled in Erie county. Mr. Cray immediately obtained work on the Waterford plank road, where he remained a short time. About this time the L. S. & M. S. R. R. was under course of construction, and he entered the employ of that company, and remained with them until 1873, the last ten years of which he was section foreman. In 1873 the family removed to Erie, where the father died September 17, 1890, and the mother now resides at Conneaut, Ohio, with her daughter. William and Johanna Cray were the parents of six children, viz.: John, born January 17, 1851, married Miss Rose Clark, of Swanville, Pa. He lost his life in an accident on the E. & P. R. R. at Albion, February 24, 1885; James, born March 19, 1852, married Miss Julia Leach, of St. Catharines, Ontario; he is an engineer on the N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R., and resides at Conneaut, Ohio; William, born March 19, 1853, married Miss Ida Rapp, of Sharpsville, Pa.; he is a conductor on the E. & P. R. R. and resides at Erie; Nellie, born May 25, 1854, married James Jewett, conductor on the L. S. & M. S. R. R.; she died January 19, 1882; Michael A., and Catherine, born May 15, 1863, married Patrick O'Brien, engineer on the N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R.; they reside at Conneaut, Ohio. Michael A. Cray attended the public schools until he was 14 years of age, when he commenced his career as a railroadman. He entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., first as water boy, then worked as trackman, switchman, brakeman and fireman. He served in the latter capacity three and a half years, when he concluded to follow some other occupation, and accordingly entered the employ of the Erie City Iron Works, where he remained two years. During this time railroading had its old-time fascination for him, and, unable to stand it longer, he entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company as brakeman March 7, 1881. He was promoted to conductor January 10, 1887, which position he has since satisfactorily held. Mr. Cray was married September 15, 1881, to Miss Arvilla, only daughter of Charles Newton, who at that time was an engineer on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., but on account of poor health retired from railroad and went to Michigan and now resides at Addison, that state. Mr. and Mrs. Cray have eight children, viz.: Charles, born October 30, 1882; Nellie, born February 24, 1884; Arthur, born September 25, 1885; Emma, born January 10, 1887; Edna, born December 24, 1888; Porter, born February 1, 1890; Paul, born December 15, 1892; and Marie, born February 27, 1894. He is a member of the O. R. C., the C. M. B. A. and the P. V. R. He is one of the responsible and respected citizens of the community.

Homer M. Hill, general insurance agent, Erie, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township, August 12, 1843, and is a son of George and Orpha (Miner) Hill, the former a native of Walpole, Mass., and a son of George Hill, whose father (George) was an English soldier, and came to America in the British service during the Revolution. He was here but a short time when he deserted the king's cause and joined the American army. At the close of the war he settled in Canton, Mass., married, reared a family, and died there. His son, George (Homer's grandfather), was married in Canton in 1817, and came to Erie county a few years later. He was a woolen manufacturer, and built two woolen mills in Erie county—one in the Second section of Erie, on Cascade creek, and another on Mill creek, on the Lake Pleasant road. He spent the latter part of his life in Ashtabula, Ohio, where he died March 28, 1851. He reared a family of nine children: George (deceased), Elvina, Harvey, Mary (deceased), Washington Albert, Naomi (deceased), Perry and Porter (twins, both deceased) and Clinton. George Hill (Homer's father) was a contractor and builder, and followed that occupation nearly all his life in Erie. He died in 1882. His wife, Orpha Miner, was a native of Erie county, and a daughter of William Miner, who was of New England stock, and one of the pioneers of this section. Mrs. Hill now resides in Erie. In the family were two children, one who died in infancy and Homer M. He was educated in the public schools of Erie and the Iron City Commercial College, Pittsburg. He first engaged in the mercantile business about two years, and entered the employ of the Lake Shore and Erie and Pittsburg railroads. He remained here until the war broke out, when he served as clerk in the provost marshal's office until Lee's surrender. He then entered the employ of Noble, Brown & Co., coal merchants, as bookkeeper, and, in 1867, entered the employ of J. F. Downing, general agent, and served in the capacity of adjuster, inspector and special agent until 1892, when he engaged in the general insurance business for himself. Mr. Hill was married, August 29, 1883, to Miss Minnie B. Torrey, of Erie. They have two children: George Torrey and Douglas Homer. He is a member of the Masonic order, 32d degree Scottish Rite, past master of Keystone Lodge, past high priest of Temple Chapter, past T. I. G. M. of Jerusalem Council, past T. P. G. M. Presque Isle Lodge of Perfection. He is treasurer of Keystone Lodge and of Temple Chapter; is a member of the Masonic board of trustees, a member of Mt. Olivet Commandery, Pittsburg Consistory, and Zem Zem Temple Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Royal Arcanum and National Union. Politically he is a Democrat.

F. A. Sherrer, contractor and dealer in cut stone, corner of Fourteenth and French streets, Erie, Pa., was born in Cleveland, O., January 16, 1866, and is a son of A. and Elizabeth (Lebens) Sherrer, natives of Germany, now residents of Unionville, O. In the family there were five children: William, A. W., F. A., and Julia, married Dr. Sherwood, Unionville, O. Fred was reared and educated in the city of Cleveland, and learned the stone-cutter's trade with his father, who was at that time a stone dealer and contractor in Cleveland. In 1885 F. A. Sherrer came to Erie and associated with his brother, William, in his present business. In 1894, William retired from the firm, and was succeeded by his brother, F. A. Mr. Sherrer was married, January 12, 1893, to Miss Marie Alge, of Findlay, O. They have one child, Therese J. F. A. Sherrer is the leading stone contractor in the city of Erie, and his work is not by any means confined to the city limits. He has done a large amount of building throughout the country. A. W. Sherrer was born in Detroit, Mich., December 25, 1863. He also learned the stone-cutter's trade with his father in Cleveland, and had always been engaged as a journeyman stone-cutter in various parts of the country, up to the time of going into business. He is a natural mechanic, and has had a vast amount of experience in all kinds of stone-cutting, which places him an expert second to none. He is an enterprising man, stands high in the business community, and is a well-informed advocate of the Democratic party.

W. G. Kline, Erie, Pa., chief postal clerk on the N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R., between Chicago and Cleveland, is a descendant of one of the old pioneer families of Erie county. He was born in Fairview township, November 16, 1863, and is a son of John A. and Rosanna (Barri) Kline, the former a native of Fairview, born in the same house as W. G., and the latter a native of Switzerland. The parents now reside in Fairview township. John A. Kline's father, also John A., settled in Erie county, about the year 1818. He came from Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and died comparatively young, leaving a family of small children. W. G. Kline was educated in the public schools of Erie county, and in the Iron City Commercial College, of Pittsburg. In 1885 he received the appointment of railway postal clerk, and worked about eight months on the line between Cleveland and Syracuse. He was then transferred to the western division, and has since worked between Chicago and Cleveland, and has been successfully promoted through all the intermediate clerkships to which his high standards of examinations have entitled him, and in 1889 he was made chief postal clerk between Chicago and Cleveland, having charge of eleven men on his run. He was married June 21, 1889, to Miss Frona, daughter of Israel Heidler, of Fairview township, who is also a descendant of one of the pioneer families of Erie county. They have two children, Edna Eva and Ruth G. Mr. Kline is one of the most popular and efficient clerks on the road. He is an unassuming gentleman, who is thoroughly master of his business. He is a member of the Railway Mail Service Mutual Benefit Association, and in his political principles he is unwaveringly Democratic.

Guy Johnson, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., thoroughly understands the duties accompanying the occupancy of the right side of the locomotive cab. He is a native of Summit township, Erie county, and was born May 14, 1851, and is a son of S. F. and Jane (Ward) Johnson, both natives of Erie county, descendants of the early settlers in Erie county, and of old New England stock. They now reside in Michigan. In the family there were eleven children, namely: James, killed by lightning on Lake Michigan, while in the sailing service; Perry, killed by the explosion of engine No. 1063 on the P. & E. R. R., at Irvington; Cyrene, resides in Kansas; Harry, lives in Dakota; Thomas, Miles Grove, Pa.; Guy, Leslie, Kansas; Fayette, Oil City, Pa.; Malcolm, Oil City; Hattie, Michigan. Guy was reared and educated in his native township, and at the age of 14 years entered the employ of the Lake Shore (now the L. S. & M. S.) R. R., as brakeman, working on the Erie and Buffalo division, and on the Cleveland and Erie division about two years. He next worked in the machine shop at Erie about one year, and then worked as a stationary engineer in Erie about two years, when he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, as fireman, and in 1878 was promoted to the post of engineer. Mr. Johnson is a man possessing all the qualities of the efficient modern locomotive engineer. He had the remarkable experience of losing three drive wheels off a four-wheel driver locomotive. This was in the accident of engine No. 81 at Swansville, on the Lake Shore road. Mr. Johnson has gone through several wrecks, but fortune, coupled with good management, has always seemed to favor him, and he has always come out of the debris, fresh and new. He was married in June, 1873, to Miss Helen, daughter of James and Mary (Russell) Hugaboon, who were also early settlers of this county, both now deceased. They have four children: Fred E., locomotive fireman; Gertrude L., Maud A., and Jessie Inez. Mr. Johnson is a member of the E. A. U. B. of L. E., and is a Republican.

James D. Fiscus, jail warden, Erie, Pa., a native of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, was born December 21, 1838, and is a son of John and Bridget (O'Brien) Fiscus, the former a native of Ireland, and the latter of Pennsylvania. In the family there were six children, of whom James is the eldest. He was reared and educated in his native county, and assisted his father, who was a stock dealer and drover, until 1860, when he went to the oil country. Here he engaged in contracting and operating, and in 1865 went to Ripley, N. Y., where he remained one year. In 1867 he moved to North East, and kept for one year the hotel known as the Brawley House; he then took charge of the Depot Hotel, which he operated three years, and, in 1879, he went to Bradford, Pa., where he remained until 1885, and served in that city on the police force during that time, and in 1885 he returned to North East, during which time he served one term as borough constable. He then received an appointment as commissary clerk of the Fort Peck Indian agency in Montana, which occasioned his removal to that territory. After having served his term he returned to Erie, and in September, 1891, was appointed jail warden, which position he has since held. Mr. Fiscus is well known in Erie county political circles, and is a staunch Democrat.

Mathew L. Kinsey, mail carrier, Erie, Pa., was born April 3, 1864, at Port Colborne, Canada, and is a son of Levi and Jane (Ramey) Kinsey, who are descendants of the pioneer families of Stone Bridge, Ontario. Mathew is the youngest of four children. The family moved to Erie in 1865, where Mathew L. was reared and educated. He early began an apprenticeship at the molder's trade, which he followed until November 5, 1891, when he was appointed mail carrier in the city of Erie, which position he has since held. He was united in marriage, April 16, 1885, to Ida, daughter of D. K. Dean, of Erie, Pa. They have two children, Ethel and Madge. Mr. Kinsey is a member of the I. O. O. F., the National Association of Letter Carriers, and politically is a Republican. The family are members of the M. E. Church.

Charles Steen, patternmaker, Erie, Pa., is a native of Denbighshire, North Wales, and was born June 5, 1829. He is a son of John and Sarah (Holloway) Steen. They were the parents of four children: Thomas, died in England; John, lives in Cheshire, England; Mary, widow of Charles B. Jones, North Wales, and John. The father died at the age of 89, and the mother at 94. Charles was reared and educated in his native town, and, when a young man, served an apprenticeship at his trade at Wrexham, Wales. He then went to Derbyshire, England, and remained in the employ of the same firm seventeen years. In 1869 he came to America and located in Erie, where he remained a short time, when he went to Warren, Pa., and worked at his trade two years, and removed to Tidonts, Pa., where he remained one year. He then came to Erie and was employed in the Erie Car Works from 1872 to 1874, when he entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. company as patternmaker in their shops at Erie, where he is still employed. Mr. Steen was married, March 25, 1853, at Pentrich, Derbyshire, England (in an old historic church that bore the bullet imprints of the chivalric days of Cromwell), to Miss Sarah, daughter of John and Jane Walker, of Derbyshire, England. To this union have been born seven children: John W., Warren, Pa.; Thomas (deceased); William B., Erie, Pa.; Anna May, married Henry F. Lillibridge, Erie, Pa.; Oswald (deceased); Frank, Youngstown, Ohio, and Jennie, married Arthur Thompson. Mr. Steen is a member of the A. O. of U. W., the Pennsylvania Voluntary Relief, the Mutual Benefit Association of the E. & P. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a thorough Republican.

M. W. Brundage, Erie, Pa., is a native of Campville, Tioga county, N. Y. He was born September 17, 1853, and is a son of Charles I. and Frances Mary (Smith) Brundage. The former was a native of Walkill, Orange county, N. Y., and the latter a native of Susquehanna, Pa., and a daughter of Col. Rufus Smith, who was a very prominent man of Eastern Pennsylvania and a resident of Susquehanna. Charles I. Brundage, the father of M. W., was a steel worker by trade, and worked on the construction of the N. Y. & L. E. R. R. He was drowned in Lake Erie in the spring of 1855, at the explosion of the "Mayflower." He was a son of Michael Brundage, who was also a native of Orange county, New York. Michael was a son of Richard, who emigrated to America from Metz, France, in 1789. He was compelled to leave his native land for having taken part in an insurrection against the government. He settled in Orange county, New York, and followed farming during the remainder of his life. The mother of M. W. died in Erie April 14, 1891. In the Brundage family there were four children: Hattie (deceased), Emeroy, Binghamton, N. Y.; Margaret, now Mrs. E. A. Tuttle, of Franklin, Susquehanna county, Pa., and M. W. Brundage, who was reared in Franklin, Susquehanna county, Pa., with his grandfather, Col. Smith. He received a public school education, and when a young man entered the molding department of the N. Y. & L. E. R. R. shops at Susquehanna, Pa. Here he served an apprenticeship at the molder's trade and worked there as journeyman until 1881, when he went to Chicago and remained until 1886, during which time he was employed by the Crane Bros. Manufacturing Company, The Allen Paper Car Wheel Company, and the Pullman Company. In 1886 he came to Erie, entered the employ of the Erie City Iron Works and remained but a short time, when he was employed by the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, where he is at present engaged. Mr. Brundage was married October 5, 1881, to Miss Metta Z., daughter of George N. Brown, of Susquehanna, Pa. They have two children, Genevieve and Frank Edward. Mr. Brundage is a member of the K. of P., the E. A. U., and the Brotherhood of Machine Molders, and politically is a staunch and active Democrat. The family are members of Chestnut Street Presbyterian Church, where he is choir leader. He is a musician of considerable talent and has been a member of a great many bands in places where he has traveled throughout the country. He can play almost any instrument found in the average brass band.

James H. Ray, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Buffalo, N. Y., May 16, 1861, and is a son of John G. and Margaret (Nolan) Ray, natives of Ireland, and now residents of Erie. The father is a machinist. They were the parents of seven children: William E., Erie; James H., John J. (died at the age of 21), Thomas F., of Erie; Mary A. (died at the age of 21), Maggie (died at the age of 9 years), George B., Erie. The family settled in Erie in 1868. James was reared and educated in Erie, and, when about 11 years of age, entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company, in their shops in Erie, and served five years at the machinist's trade, when he went firing for that company. In 1885 he was promoted to the post of engineer. He was married August 17, 1891, to Miss Mary Dalton, of New Castle, Pa. They have one child, Margaret. Mr. Ray is a member of the B. of L. E. and the Pennsylvania Relief. He is a popular and successful railroad man.

A. B. Heard, a native of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, was born May 31, 1842. He is a son of Randolph and Mary (Hamilton) Heard, the former a native of Trenton, N. J., and the latter of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Randolph Heard was a son of George and Acha (Warner) Heard. They settled in Crawford county in 1796, when Randolph was about 1 year old. They reared a family of seven children: Randolph (deceased), Fannie (deceased), Mary (deceased), Louis (deceased), James (deceased), Johanna (deceased), and George (deceased). When George Heard settled in Crawford county it was a dense wilderness, and there was a great deal of trouble with the Indians there for several years after his settlement. He built his first log cabin in Meadville, on the present site of the trotting park there. He spent his life in pioneer farming and lumbering, and died in 1844, aged 79 years. His wife died in 1812, when comparatively a young woman. His son, Randolph, A. B. Heard's father, was a soldier in the war of 1812, under Capt. Blystone. He received from the government 100 acres for services rendered in that war. He married Mary Hamilton, November 13, 1817. She was a native of Philadelphia. They were the parents of ten children: James H. (deceased), Latvia, married Gideon Hart, of Crawford county (deceased), George (deceased), Jane (deceased), Mathew (deceased), Marion J. (deceased), Louisa (deceased), Mary (deceased) William H. (deceased), and A. B., the only surviving member of the family. Randolph Heard died November 9, 1882; his wife departed this life May 16, 1873, and their remains lie side by side in the old Carnal cemetery, at Moshertown, Crawford county, Pa. A. B. Heard was reared in Crawford county, and spent his early days on a farm. He received a common school education. Since his boyhood days he always showed an intuitive knowledge of horses, and early in life engaged in the buying and selling and speculating in horses. He removed to Erie in 1878, and engaged in the livery business, which he followed four years, at the same time deeping up his business in the traffic of horses. He has taken some of the finest blooded horses in the country to the large cities, and sold them for handsome prices. He has sold a great many fine horses in the city of New York, and has made that city the chief market for his sales. During late years he has been interested in oil production in Forest and Elk counties, Pennsylvania, where he has met with good success. Mr. Heard was married July 3, 1871, to Miss Jane A., daughter of R. R. Snow, of Cambridge, Pa. They have one child, Jennie May. He is a prominent Republican, having been candidate of that party for sheriff of Crawford county, in 1877. He was defeated and accepted the situation gracefully. He is a member of the K. of H.

B. P. Diffenbaugh, engineer for the Edison Electric Company, was born in Erie, March 24, 1850, and is a son of Benjamin and Lavina (Pickett) Diffenbaugh. Benjamin Diffenbaugh, sr., was a native of Lancaster, Pa., and was born in 1796. He came to Erie county in 1835, and followed blacksmithing. He had one of the first shops in Erie. He served on the U. S. S. "Michigan," seven years. He died at Hicksville, Ohio, in 1882. He served as private in Co. C, 146th Reg., P. V. I., during the rebellion, until the battle of Fredericksburg, when he received a wound that disabled him, when he was discharged. He was twice married, first to a Miss Wagner, who died, leaving five children. He afterward married Lavina Pickett, by whom he had four children, of whom Benjamin is the second. His mother died in 1877. Benjamin was reared and educated mostly in North East, and when 11 years of age, went to live with an uncle in Canada, and remained there about three years, when he returned to North East, where he remained until he was 20, when he went to the oil country. From there he went to Ohio, and lived in Bloomville ten years, and was engaged in the manufacturing of boat oars. In 1884 he came to Erie, where he has since been employed as engineer for the Edison Light Company.

He was married September 2, 1878, to Miss Effie Sankey, of Bloomville, Ohio. They have three children: Forrest, born March 10, 1881; Lavina, born January 12, 1883, and Gail, born June 17, 1885. Mr. Diffenbaugh is a worthy citizen, and politically is a Democrat.

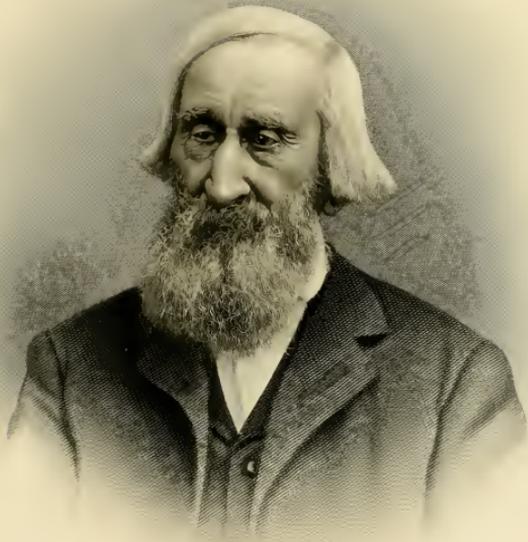

Charles Daugherty, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., a native of Summit, Cambria county, Pa., was born March 22, 1849. He is a son of Cornelius and Mary Magdalene (Nagle) Daugherty. In the family there were eight children: James (deceased), Susanna (deceased), Sarah (deceased), Venetice, resides in West Virginia; Mary (deceased), Johanna, now Mrs. Patrick Finely, of Ashtabula, Ohio; Agnes and Charles. The father was born and reared in Summit, Cambria county, Pa., till the age of 10, when his brother-in-law, with whom he was living, moved to Pittsburg and took Charles with him. He received most of his education in Pittsburg, and when yet a boy entered the employ of a navigation company as messenger boy in that city. He engaged in firing on the P., Ft. W. & C. R. R. March 18, 1864, when he was 15 years old, and September 14, 1868, when 19 years of age, was promoted to the position of engineer. In February, 1880, he resigned his position on this road to take a passenger run on the E. & P. R. R. between Erie and Pittsburg, where he is still employed. Mr. Daugherty has had more adventures than the average railroader. He performed a remarkable feat while running on the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne and Chicago R. R., which is thus related: While approaching a bridge at Clinton with his train, running about the speed of fifteen miles, he saw a small child on the track in the middle of the bridge. He used all efforts to stop his train, but as he neared the child, he saw that he could not stop in time to save its life, so he left the cab, hastened out on the running board to the pilot of the engine and jumped on the bridge ahead of the engine, which was still under pretty good speed, ran ahead, grabbed the child and made his way across the bridge just ahead of the engine, and thus saved the life of the child, although greatly endangering his own. Mr. Daugherty has been seriously injured twice in his experience of railroading. At Ensworth, while looking back at his train out of the cab window, he was struck on the back of the head by an inclining telegraph pole and was knocked insensible from his engine; he was in a head-end collision at Middlesex, where the engineer and fireman of the other engine were killed and Mr. Daugherty saved himself by jumping just as the engine struck and was hit by some flying missile on the forehead, which inflicted a very ugly wound and disabled him from duty for over six months. He was married May 14, 1868, to Miss Myra, daughter of Russell and Nancy (McCandles) Hurd, of Allegheny City. To this union have been born eight children: William P. (deceased), Estella (deceased), Edmund, Norburt, Ida and Eva, twins (deceased), Flora and Joseph. Mr. Daugherty is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the C. M. B. A., and politically is a Democrat. The family are members of the Catholic Church.

E. J. Oliver, engineer of the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., is a native of Erie county. He was born in Fairview township, June 16, 1855, and is a son of J. M. and Sarah Oliver, the former a native of Lancaster, Pa., and the latter of Lockport, N. Y. The father was a miller by occupation. He settled in Erie county in 1850, and kept hotel in Erie a short time. In the family there were three children: J. W., miller, Des Moines, Ia.; E. J. and Ida. The father died in 1890, and the mother now resides in Erie with E. J. Mr. Oliver received his education in the public schools of Erie county, and when a young man, engaged as hardware clerk in Erie, where he spent four years. He then entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., on the Buffalo division. This was in 1877, and he remained there four years. He then entered the employ of the Erie Car Company as engineer. His old desire for railroading returned in a short time, and he secured a position as fireman on the E. & P. R. R., and August 13, 1888, was promoted to the position of locomotive engineer, which he still holds, to the full satisfaction of his employers. He possesses the qualities requisite for a good engineer. Mr. Oliver was married, September 13, 1881, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of Capt. John Fisher (deceased), who was one of Erie's best known and highly respected citizens. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver have two children: Jessie (deceased, 1886) and Joseph. He is a member of the B. of L. E., the E. A. U., and the Pennsylvania Relief. Politically he is a staunch Republican.

Charles Fitzmaurice, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born at Sharpsville, Mercer county, Pa., May 9, 1863. He is a son of Thomas and Anne (Shannahan) Fitzmaurice, both natives of Ireland. The father came to America and remained in New York a short time, when he went to Sharpsville, Pa., where he followed contracting and building to the time of his death, which occurred in 1873. They reared a family of ten children: Margaret (deceased), James, master mechanic for the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, Ill.; Thomas, conductor, Erie, Pa.; John Fitzmaurice, engineer on the N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R.; Ella, married Matthew Donahue, conductor on the E. & P. R. R., Sharpsville, Pa. Charles; William, engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Sharpsville, Pa. Charles was reared in his native town, where he received a public school education, and, at the age of 15, entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company as engine wiper, at Sharpsville. He worked there two years, when he was given a position as fireman, although but 17 years of age. In 1888 he was made an engineer, which position he has since faithfully and efficiently held. He has been remarkably successful since he assumed control of the throttle. He has been in one wreck, and that was when running. This was a head collision, near Rochester, Pa. In this, both engines and twenty-seven cars were completely demolished, and Mr. Fitzmaurice escaped with very slight injuries, by jumping. He was married, June 7, 1893, to Miss Mary Flaherty, of Jamestown, Pa. They have one child, William Edward. Mr. Fitzmaurice is a popular railroad man, and is considered one of the most competent and careful engineers on the road. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Politically he is a Democrat.

Thomas Jefferson Downing, passenger conductor on the Erie and Pittsburg R. R., Erie, Pa., is a Pennsylvanian by birth. He was born at Sharpsville, Mercer county, June 17, 1855. He is a son of Thomas and Phoebe (Cary) Downing, the former a native of George Stough.

Indiana county, Pennsylvania, and later a pioneer of Mercer county, where he became an extensive and prosperous farmer, and the latter of Mercer county, Pennsylvania. Thomas J. Downing's grand-parents, John and Nancy (Baux) Downing, were married March 20, 1817. John Downing was a native of Vermont, and a soldier of the war of 1812, participating in the battle of Lundy's Lane, on the American side. This couple were the parents of eleven children, of whom Thomas, sr., was the eldest. The latter reared a family of nine children, namely: John; Melinda, now Mrs. Uriah Snyder, of Ohio; Mary, wife of G. D. Gilson, of Greenville, Pa.; James L., Sharpville, Pa.; Anna, Sharpville, Pa.; Thomas J., Erie, Pa.; Harkness W., Sharpville, Pa., and Jerome H., Newark, N. J. The father died December 24, 1888, aged 69 years 9 months and 20 days, and the mother, December 3, 1893. Thomas Jefferson Downing was reared and educated in Mercer county, and, in 1879, entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Co., in the capacity of brakeman. He was at that time a resident of Sharpville, Mercer county, Pa. In 1885, he was promoted to a conductorship, which position he still holds. He was married May 1, 1879, to Miss Carrie J., daughter of George and Lydia (Fink) Woodling, of Sharpville, Pa. To this union were born four children: James A., born October 4, 1880; Frank and Fred, twins, born March 23, 1883; Fred died October 17, 1889, and Frank died October 29, 1889; and John K., born March 23, 1885. Mr. Downing is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, the F. and A. M., and politically he is a Republican.

Harry A. Ross, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Marilla, Erie county, N. Y., June 2, 1855, and is a son of David and Mary E. (Koot) Ross, both natives of New York, and of old New England stock. The family came to Erie county, Pennsylvania, in 1868, and the parents now reside in Corry. They reared a family of five children: Ellen E., married Thomas E. Willis, Meadville; Harry A., C. B. E., now Mrs. D. T. Fleming, Corry; C. E., Union City, and Jesse (deceased). Harry A. was educated in Corry, and when a youth followed lumbering and running a stationary engine. In 1874, he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company, as brakeman. After working there awhile he went to work on the N. Y., P. & O. R. R., as brakeman, and in 1880, he entered the employ of the P. & E. Company, and in July, 1890, was promoted to the position of conductor, which position he now holds. He is faithful to duty, and very popular on the road. Mr. Ross was married March 16, 1881, to Miss Mary, daughter of William and Margaret (Simmons) Loesch, of Erie. To this union has been born one child, Charles Edward. Mr. Ross is a member of the I. O. O. F. In politics he is a Republican.

John W. Etter, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., is a native of Erie, and was born October 24, 1849. He is a son of Jacob and Philippine (Reichard) Etter, both natives of Germany. The father was a ship carpenter, and came to America in 1847, at the age of 32, and settled in Erie county. He followed farming in Greene township, where he died in December 3, 1893. His wife died May 17, 1879, aged 65 years. They were parents of eight children, and J. W. is the sixth. He was reared and educated in Greene township, and worked on his father's farm until the age of 20, when he commenced railroading as brakeman. He has worked on the L. S. & M. S., the P. C. & St. L. R. R., but chiefly on the P. & E., where he is at present employed. In 1879 he was promoted to a conductorship, which position he has since held. His railroad experience has been comparatively free from accidents, except one wreck that he was in at LeBeuf, where he was buried in the wreck for two hours, and had his leg broken, besides several injuries of a lesser nature. He was married June 25, 1874, to Miss Sophia, daughter of Jehew Frer, of Erie. They have one child, Clara. Mr. Etter is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, the Pennsylvania Relief, and is a Republican. The family are members of the M. E. Church.

Christopher Little, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, May 7, 1845, and is a son of William and Sarah (Rose) Little, both natives of Salina, near Syracuse, N. Y. They were married in their native town and came to Erie in 1834, where the father worked at the cooper's trade to within a few years of his death, which occurred June 4, 1881, at the age of 65. The mother now resides with Christopher. They were the parents of eight children: Laura, now Mrs. Finel, Erie; Lafayette, Erie; Anna, now Mrs. Wesley Hess, Erie; William, Erie; Christopher, Asle, Erie; and Henry (deceased). Christopher Little was reared and educated in Erie, and spent his early boyhood days on the farm, and May 3, 1863, he enlisted in the United States navy. He immediately went to the Brooklyn navy yard and went on board the United States steamship "Mackinaw," of the North Atlantic Squadron. He was in the engagements before Ft. Fisher, Petersburg, Richmond, Dutch Gap and Wilmington, N. C., and at the bombardment and capture of several small forts. He was mustered out of service May 17, 1865, at Portsmouth, N. H., when he returned to Erie and, October 25, 1865, entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company. In 1880 he was promoted to the position of conductor, and is regarded as one of the most trustworthy employes of the road. Mr. Little was married, July 10, 1870, to Miss Rose Landand, of Erie. They have eight children: Frank, A. C. (deceased), John H., Augusta May, Nellie S., Lydia May, A. C. and Christopher (deceased). Mr. Little is a member of the G. A. R., and is a Republican. He cast his first vote for Lincoln, in North Carolina, at the age of 19 years.

William L. Fogel, engineer on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Altoona, Pa., August 7, 1865. He is a son of Louis and Mary E. (Stains) Fogel, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Pennsylvania. The father came to America in 1840, at the age of 12, with his mother, who was a widow. He spent his early days on a farm, and when yet a youth was engaged as teamster in hauling coal. In 1862 he commenced firing a locomotive on the Pennsylvania main line, and eighteen months later was promoted to the post of engineer. In 1865 he resigned his position on the P. R. R., to accept a similar one on the P. & E. Here he remained until 1872, when he resigned and entered the employ of the Union Pacific, on the Rocky Mountains. He remained there but a short time, when he returned to the employ of the P. & E. R. R., and ran on that road until the time of his death, which occurred in 1892. The mother now resides in Erie.

They were parents of fourteen children: George F., born April 6, 1860, and died May 3, 1860; Julia A., born May 16, 1861, now married to John Collins, engineer, Raleigh, Pa.; John C., born February 26, 1863, and died June 14, 1872; William L.; James B., born June 14, 1867, conductor on the P. & E. R. R.; Eric; Charles G., born February 17, 1869, and died September 24, 1889; Benjamin F., born December 6, 1871, and died September 30, 1872; Mary M., born July 3, 1872, and died June 11, 1873; Nettie G., born April 21, 1875; Anna F., born December 11, 1876, died January 11, 1877; Ruby E., born February 18, 1878; Rosa P., born May 11, 1879, and died August 2, 1879; Cora M., born August 22, 1880, and George W., born in December, 1882. William Fogel was reared and educated in Erie to the age of 9 years, his parents moving here when he was 3 months old. When he was 9 years of age his parents removed to Kane, where he attended school until about 18 years old, when he worked at brush making two years. He then commenced working as engine-wiper in the round-house at Kane, and in a very short time went firing, and, October 12, 1893, was promoted to the position of engineer, and is one of the reliable young engine drivers of the road. He has many friends along the P. & E. R. R., as well as in Erie. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Relief, and is a Republican.

Isaac Carey, engineer on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Erie January 20, 1865, and is the only child of Albert and Maggie Carey, both natives of Pennsylvania and now residents of Kane, Pa. The father is also a locomotive engineer on the P. & E. R. R., and one of the old time railroad men of that road. When Isaac was two years of age the parents moved to Union City, where he attended school until 15 years of age, when the family returned to Erie. At the age of 17 he went on the P. & E. R. R. as fireman, and eight years later was made an engineer, which position he has since held. He is a very successful railroad man and well understands the management of the throttle. Mr. Carey was married January 25, 1887, to Miss Laura Gould, of Erie. They have one child, Madge. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and is a Republican.

John Adam Durfield, engineer on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., has spent thirty-three years of his life in the locomotive cab, nearly thirty-two of which he has stood by the throttle. He is the oldest engineer in service, although not in years, on the P. & E. R. R. He was born in New Orleans February 4, 1841, and is a son of Harmon B. and Barbara Durfield. Harmon Durfield was a native of Holland and his wife of Bavaria. He was a salt-water sailor and during his service on the seas visited many of the important parts of the world, having sailed on the three principal oceans and circumnavigated the globe. The family came to Erie when Mr. Durfield was a child. The father went to sea again and remained but a short time, when he returned to Erie and was employed in fitting up the U. S. S. "Michigan," and afterwards served on her over twenty-five years. He was signal master and hoisted the first flag that ever floated from the foremast of the "Michigan." He was at one time engaged as wheelman in the Reed boats. He died in October, 1887, aged 76 years. His wife now resides in Erie, aged 78. They reared a family of eight children, of whom J. A. is the eldest. He was reared and educated in Erie and when 12 years of age went on the "Michigan" as ward-room boy for three seasons, and attended school in winters. He then served an apprenticeship at blacksmithing and worked at his trade in Cincinnati two years. In 1862 he returned to Erie and entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. as fireman. At the end of eighteen months he was promoted to engineer and ran freight one year, and since that time has hauled a passenger train and has scarcely missed a run. He is considered a very careful and competent engineer, and has never had an accident in any way attributable to him, but he has averted many disasters by his cool, clear and quick judgments. Mr. Durfield was married in August, 1865, to Miss Martha C., daughter of E. B. and Sara P. (Bolsby) Willis, of Wilcox, the former a very extensive railroad contractor, who was killed in a railroad wreck in Ohio December 3, 1868. Mrs. Willis died May 2, 1881. She was a daughter of Captain Bolsby, of Revolutionary fame. The Bolsby family came to America in 1715 from Holland. Mr. and Mrs. Durfield have one child, John H., musician, Erie. He is a graduate of the Grand Conservatory of Music of New York, and a member of the National League of Musicians. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church, and both the father and son are members of the Masonic order and the I. O. O. F. The father is also a member of the K. of P., and has always been a Republican.

John P. Sipple, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in the city of Erie, November 3, 1847, and is a son of John N. and Christiana (Fueisler) Sipple. Mrs. Sipple is a daughter of Lewis Fueisler, who was one of the pioneers of Erie county. John is the youngest in a family of four children. After the father's death, the mother now removed to and resides in Swanville. Mr. John P. Sipple was reared and educated in Erie, and when 18 years of age engaged as brakeman on the E. & P. R. R., and after working there three years entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company, and in 1873, he was made a conductor, which position he at present holds. He was married September 7, 1871, to Miss Elizabeth Shilling, of Erie. They have seven children: John J., Henry L., William J., Arthur P., Cassie C., Joseph D., and Bertha S. Mr. Sipple is a member of the Pennsylvania Relief Association, and politically is a Democrat.

L. B. Meagher, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, April 24, 1862, and is a son of Lawrence and Ellen (Ryan) Meagher, both natives of Ireland. They came to America, in 1858, and settled in Erie, where they now reside. L. P. Meagher was reared and educated in Erie, and at the age of 12 entered the employ of the Anchor Line Company. He remained in the employ of that company until 1887, when he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company, as brakeman. In 1889 he was promoted to the position of conductor, which he still holds. He was married May 2, 1893, to Miss Rose, daughter of Andrew and Caroline (Hanger) Lutz. Mr. Meagher is a member of the Pennsylvania Relief Association, and politically is a Democrat.

C. W. Fales, conductor on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., Erie, Pa., born in Erie, August 18, 1849, is a son of P. H. and Mary (Geer) Fales, the former a native of Massachusetts, and the latter of Pennsylvania. The father followed the life of a sailor, and was one of the men employed in fitting out the U. S. S. "Michigan." He was accidentally killed on the L. S. & M. R. R. track, January 19, 1888. The mother died in 1876. In the family were seven children, of whom C. W. is the second. He was reared and educated in Erie, and at the age of 18 commenced an apprenticeship at the tinsmith's trade. This he followed three years, and then entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company, where he remained two years, after which he went to work for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company. In 1885 he was promoted to the position of conductor, in which capacity he has since served, both to the satisfaction of the company and its patrons. Mr. Fales was united in marriage, September 15, 1881, to Miss Kate Geist, an esteemed young lady of Erie. He is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, the A. O. U. W., the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and politically is a Republican.

M. Kane, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Ellicottville, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., August 18, 1854. His parents, Thomas and Julia (Dugan) Kane, were natives of Canada. The father was a farmer by occupation. He died in Wilcox, Pa., in 1864. The mother now resides in Kane, Pa. They reared a family of six children: Bridget (now Mrs. Daniel Nolan, of Reynoldsville, Pa.); Anna (Mrs. Wm. McDonough, Brooksville, N. Y.); M., Patrick, Toledo, Ohio; Mary (now Mrs. M. S. Connors, Columbus, Ohio), and John (deceased). When M. Kane was about 10 years old, the family moved from New York to Wilcox, Pa. He attended the public schools until he was 12 years old, when he went to work as a water boy on a section of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., and worked on the section until he was 17, when he went on the road as brakeman. He was employed on the eastern and western divisions in that capacity until 1879, when he was made a conductor, which position he has since held, without losing as much as thirty days' time, and his career has been remarkably free from accidents on the rail. Mr. Kane was married November 4, 1879, to Miss Genevieve, daughter of J. S. and S. A. (Ditman) Grove, of Erie, both of whom are natives of New York, and reside in Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Kane have two children, Mayes and John. Mr. Kane is a member of the I. O. O. F., and the K. of P., and politically stands on an independent platform.

Thomas Fitzmaurice, passenger conductor on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Lockport, Niagara county, N. Y., October 26, 1854 (see sketch of brother, Charles Fitzmaurice). The family removed to Sharpville, Pa., in 1861, where Thomas received his early education. At the age of 16 he engaged as an apprentice to the molder's trade, and at the expiration of three years entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company as brakeman. In 1880 he was promoted to the position of freight conductor, and in 1890 was made a passenger conductor, in which capacity he has since been employed. He was married May 17, 1883, to Miss Emma Guckenbiel, of Erie. This union has been blessed with four children: Edward, Thomas, Maria and Raymond. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., the Order of Railway Conductors, the Pennsylvania Relief Association, and politically is a Democrat.

W. H. O'Brien, locomotive engineer, Philadelphia and Erie R. R., Erie, Pa., is a native of Warren, Pa. He was born January 5, 1859, and is a son of Kennedy and Mary (Clamfot) O'Brien, the former a native of Ireland and the latter of Pennsylvania. The father died September 24, 1878, aged 58 years, and the mother died August 15, 1886, aged 60. They reared a family of five children: Daniel (deceased), Bridget, who married James Malloney, of Corry, Pa.; Patrick H. (deceased), Mary and W. H., who was reared and educated in Warren, and when a young man engaged as clerk for Metzger Bros., in Irvineton, Pa., where he remained three years, and at the same time served as deputy postmaster. August 13, 1877, he engaged as fireman on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., and July 8, 1882, was promoted to the position of engineer, and since that time has been exceptionally successful and fortunate in the management of the machinery in his charge. He has never had the slightest accident. Mr. O'Brien was married June 28, 1888, to Miss Ella Ripley, of Erie. They have four children: Henry, born July 18, 1889; Mabel, born April 20, 1891; Bessie, born March 12, 1893, and Willie, born April 29, 1895. Mr. O'Brien is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and is a Democrat. The family reside at the corner of Reed and East Eighteenth streets, Erie, Pa.

Asel Brown, locomotive engineer, Philadelphia and Erie R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, March 13, 1844. His parents, Richard and Sarah (Fracksby) Brown, were natives of Pennsylvania (both deceased). In the family there were twelve children, of whom Asel was the sixth. He was reared on a farm in Huntingdon county, received a common school education, and when the Union was endangered by the rebellious hand of secession, he enlisted, August 7, 1861, in Co. O, 147th P. V. I., and did valiant service for his country on some of the bloodiest battlefields of the late war. He was transferred soon after enlistment to Co. B, and participated in the battles of Antietam, Chancellorsville, second Bull Run, Lookout Mountain, Wanchess Valley, Missionary Ridge, Atlanta, Ga., Raingo, besides scores of skirmishes. He was one of the fortunate few who went through so much hardship and danger without receiving a single scar. At Antietam a musket ball passed through the leg of his trousers, and at Atlanta his blouse was pierced by a ball. He was discharged December 28, 1863, by reason of re-enlistment as a veteran volunteer, and July 15, 1865, he was honorably discharged by the general order of the war department. He then returned to Huntingdon, where he began his railroad experience as a fireman on the Huntingdon and Brownport R. R. He was employed here but a short time, when one day the event tenor of duty was rudely interrupted by the explosion of the boiler of his engine, and he was hurled a great distance into the air and landed on the fifth car from the engine. Besides the serious shock he received he was terribly scalded. His clothes were torn from his body, even to his boots and buckskin gloves, and in the melee $500 which he had in his pocket evaporated—at least he never found it. After this accident he was unable to work for a year. It did him more personal injury than the whole rebel army had succeeded in doing. In 1867 he entered the employ of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company, and in 1870 was promoted to the position of engineer. His experience as an engineer has been comparatively uneventful and free from accidents. He was married in 1874 to Miss Catherine Burke, of Erie. Two children have been born to this union, Walter and Stella, both at home. Mr. Brown is a member of the U. V. L. and the G. A. R. Politically he is a staunch Republican.

Frank D. Foote, locomotive engineer on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., Erie, Pa., born in Mill Creek township, Erie county, June 26, 1852, is a son of Warren and Martha Jane (Whiteford) Foote, the former a native of Mill Creek township, born April 26, 1821, and the latter a native of Belfast, Ireland, born May 14, 1828, who came to America with her parents, when she was 8 years old, and died June 8, 1888. Warren Foote now resides in Mill Creek township, where he has made farming the chief occupation of his life. He is a son of Capt. Warren Foote, a New Englander, who was one of the pioneers of Erie county, and served as captain in the war of 1812. Warren and Martha Jane (Whiteford) Foote were parents of three children: Virgil, now of Cedar Falls, Ia.; Frank D., and Besdena (deceased). Frank was reared on his father's farm in Mill Creek township, and received a common school education. At the age of 21 he engaged in the mercantile business, and shortly after went to the oil country, remaining two years. In 1878 he entered the employ of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company as fireman, and in 1887 was promoted to engineer, which position he has since held. Mr. Foote was married, September 23, 1880, to Miss Hattie J., daughter of Isaac and Fannie L. (Heidler) Wolfe, of Mill Creek. To this union has been born two children: Maud Myrtle and Marshal Warren. Mr. Foote is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the A. O. U. W., and is a staunch Republican.

Frank Delos Walbridge, engineer on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., Erie, Pa., born in Springfield, Erie county, June 11, 1854, is a son of John S. and Jane C. (Mallory) Walbridge, the former a native of Sharon, Vt., and the latter of Argyle, N. Y. John S. Walbridge came to Erie county in 1829, and settled on a farm in Springfield township, Erie county, where he died, May 3, 1859, aged 50, and the mother died in 1871, aged 70. She was a daughter of Maj. Mallory, who served in the war of 1812. He came from New England, prior to the war of 1812, and settled in the very heart of the wilderness, in the western part of Erie county, cleared up a farm and reared a family of nine children. John S. Walbridge was a son of John Walbridge, who came from Vermont, with his family, in 1829, and settled in Springfield township, Erie county. They drove the entire distance with an ox team, and for several years Pittsburg was their nearest market town. He reared a family of six children: John S. (deceased), Henry D. (deceased), Lucia, who married Lorenzo Harvey; Marcia, who married Perry Devore; Jenette (deceased), and Millie. John W. and Jane (Mallory) Walbridge were the parents of eight children: Mrs. Jacob Moore, Pawnee City, Neb.; Charles F., Beatrice, Kas.; Mrs. Florence H. Jordan, Pawnee City, Neb.; C. H. Harbor Creek township; A. M., East Springfield; and Lydia, Mrs. Delos Morgan, Beatrice, Kas. (she died April 2, 1885), and Ida M., Mrs. Charles Church, of Erie. F. D. Walbridge was reared and educated in Springfield township, and spent his early life on a farm. At the age of 14 he engaged as a clerk in Henry Beekman's grocery store, and in 1871 entered the employ of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company, and worked in various capacities until 1876, when he engaged as fireman, and four years later was made an engineer. His service, both as fireman and engineer has been on the way freight, and he is the oldest way-freight man on the road. Since 1876 he has not lost thirty days, nor had the slightest mishap. Mr. Walbridge was married, May 31, 1880, to Miss Ida M., daughter of Christian and Eliza (Blenner) Smith, of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Walbridge are the parents of four children: Harry C., born December 7, 1881; George Artur, born December 6, 1883, and died July 23, 1885; T. Delos, born March 31, 1887, and Earl G., born November 12, 1892. Mr. Walbridge is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Royal Arcanum, P. O. S. of A., and is independent in his political views.

Andrew J. Woods, engineer on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., Erie, Pa., born in Ogdensburg, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., April 9, 1852. He is a son of William and Annie (Fleming) Woods, the former a native of England and the latter of Ireland. The family settled in Erie in 1835, where the father died April 1, 1872, and the mother February 23, 1890. They were the parents of nine children, three of whom are living: Andrew J., John and James. They are all locomotive engineers. Andrew J. was reared and educated in Erie, and in 1867 engaged in railroading. He worked in various capacities until 1870, when he began firing, and in 1878 was promoted to engineer. He has been running in the passenger service since 1890. Few engineers have a record as free from wrecks and accidents as Mr. Woods'. It is safe to say that he has never cost the company a cent outside the ordinary wear of machinery. He was married June 19, 1882, to Miss Margaret Anderson, of Kensington, Columbiana county, Ohio. He lives on the old homestead, on the corner of Fifteenth and Parade streets.

Shelden M. Moore, 647 East Twenty-first street, Erie, Pa., may be termed a compound railroad man, as he combines the unusual acquirements of passenger conductor and engineer. The American Railway Journal is authority for the statement that the P. & E. R. R. is the only road in the United States that has the distinction of employing the same man in these two capacities, and this the only case of the kind on that road. Mr. Moore was born January 5, 1845, in Hiram, Geauga county, Ohio. He is a son of Milton M. and Mary L. (Sheldon) Moore, both natives of Ohio. The mother died at the age of 22, when Shelden was 3 years old. He was the only child. The father is a physician now at Wesleyville, Pa. He came to Erie county in 1857, and two years later brought Shelden M., who attended school at Wesleyville until the breaking out of the war, when, although but 16 years of age, enlisted as a private November 8, 1861, in Erie in Co. F, 111th P. V. L., 2d Brig., 2d Div. 12th and 20th army corps. He was promoted to sergeant in the early part of 1863. His experience in battles include the engagements of Cedar Mountain, second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wauhatchie, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Ringgold, all the engagements of the Atlantic Campaign and the march to the sea through the Carolinas. He received a gunshot wound in the right knee at the battle of Peach Tree creek, and two years previous he was sick with the typhoid fever at Harpers Ferry Hospital. In December, 1863, he was furloughed at Wauhatchie, Tenn., and re-enlisted in Co. F, 11th Reg., and rejoined his company in March, 1864, at Chattanooga, Tenn. He was discharged in Washington, D. C., by general order of the war department July 20, 1865, and returned to Wesleyville. He then went to the oil country for about a year and a half. From there he went to Saginaw, Mich., and followed lumbering until 1869, when he returned and entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. as brakeman, and in six months went firing. In 1871 he was promoted to the post of engineer, and in 1883 was made a passenger engineer. In 1890 he was also appointed a first-class passenger conductor. Mr. Moore was married March 19, 1868, in Wesleyville, Pa., to Miss Mary, daughter of Robert and Susan (Nichols) Blackwood, of Wesleyville. She was born March 20, 1848. Her mother is dead and her father resides in Wesleyville. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are the parents of three children: Francis M., engineer on the P. & E. R. R.; Robert M., fireman on the P. & E. R. R., and Kittie A., at home. Mr. Moore is past O. D. in Captain John M. Sell Post, No. 479, G. A. R.; is a member of the E. A. U., and has always been a Republican. His grandfather was a soldier in the war of 1812.

Myron Palmer, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., was born in Edinboro, Pa., October 25, 1852, and is a son of Stephen M. and Dorothy (Hamilton) Palmer, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Erie county, Pennsylvania. The father died in 1890, aged 96 years, and the mother in 1879, aged 72 years. Myron is next to the youngest in a family of eleven children. He left home at the age of 10 and worked on a farm two years, and when only 14 years old engaged as fireman on the Lake Shore R. R., and when 18 he was promoted to the post of engineer. He has worked on every division of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., from Buffalo to Chicago. In 1873 he resigned his position on that road to accept a passenger run on the E. & P. R. R., which he still holds. During his long career as a railroad man he has never had a wreck of any importance. Mr. Palmer was married March 23, 1875, to Miss Mary H. Greeher, of New York City. Four children have been born to them: Fanny, George (deceased), Edna, and Harry (deceased). He is a member of the Masonic order and United Workmen.

W. W. Irwin, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., 455 West Eleventh street, Erie, Pa., is a Canadian by birth, and was born in the county of York, March 12, 1846. His parents, Eli and Mary (Crane) Irwin, both deceased, were also natives of Canada. They reared a family of six children: John, Chicago, Ill.; Henry (deceased), Samuel, Ohio; Hattie, now Mrs. Keuben Kennedy, Toronto, Canada, and Milton, Fort Scott, Kan. Mr. Irwin was reared and educated in his native county, and, when a young man, learned the miller's trade and worked at it in Canada until he was 27 years old. He then came to the States and located in Erie. He immediately entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company, in the capacity of brakeman, and in less than one year was promoted to the position of fireman. He served in that capacity seven years and ten months, and was promoted to the post of engineer, which position he has since faithfully and efficiently held. Mr. Irwin is a thorough mechanic, and possesses lots of nerve and good judgment, which makes him one of the best engineers on the road. His coolness and quickness of action has averted many smash-ups. He has had some very narrow escapes, but has always remained on his engine and has never yet been implicated in the slightest wreck. He was married September 18, 1872, to Miss Emily Burns, of Toronto, Canada. Three children have been born to this union, and of whom is living, Georgianna. Mr. Irwin is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the United Workmen.

C. H. Sullivan, passenger conductor, L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Harperfield, Ashtabula county, Ohio, July 11, 1844. He is a son of John G. and Harriet C. (Hopkins) Sullivan, both natives of New York. The former was a son of Potter Sullivan, who was a well-known Methodist minister, and preached for several years in the Pittsburgh Conference. The family settled in Elk Creek township, Erie county, about 1835. In 1860 John G. Sullivan removed to Ohio, and now resides at Geneva, O. His wife died in 1851. They were the parents of two children, C. H. and E. P. (deceased). Mr. Sullivan was reared to the age of 8 years in Erie county, when he went to live in Cherry Valley township, Ashtabula county, O. During the war he enlisted as teamster and served one year. At the close of the war he engaged in the lightning-rod business in New York State, which he followed three years. In 1868 he entered the employ of the Lake Shore R. R. as brakeman, and at the end of two years was promoted to a freight conductorship. He ran a freight train until 1889, when he was promoted to a passenger train, and now has a very desirable run from Cleveland to Buffalo. In his railroad experience Mr. Sullivan has been very free from those accidents incidental to the average railroader's life. He was united in marriage December 15, 1869, to Miss Francis Olmstead, of Ashtabula, O. They have three children: Warner H., brakeman on the L. S. & M. S. R. R.; Carl, also brakeman on the L. S. & M. S., and Elsie, Mr. Sullivan is a well-known railroad man and a highly respected citizen. He has resided in Erie over twenty years. He is a member of the A. O. of U. W., and the E. A. U. The family are members of the M. E. Church, and he is a strong advocate of Prohibition and an adherent of that party.

Simon Reed, 631 East Twelfth street, Erie, Pa., one of the representative railroad men of Erie county, Pennsylvania, is in the employ of the P. & E. R. R., in the capacity of conductor, and has served that corporation in that capacity longer than any other man in Erie. He was born in Sullivan county, New York, November 19, 1847. His parents were Patrick and Ellen (Clifford) Reed. They were both natives of Providence, R. I., of New England stock, and among the oldest families in the United States. The family moved from New York to Pennsylvania in 1858, and settled in Ridgway, Elk county, Pa., where the mother died in 1878, and the father in Erie in 1892. They reared a family of six children, four of whom are now living. Simon Reed was reared in Ridgway, Pa., and in his earlier days followed lumbering, rafting, etc. In 1867 he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. as brakeman, and in 1872 was promoted to the position of conductor, which position he has since held to the full satisfaction of all concerned. He has never been concerned in any wreck or accident worthy of mention. Politically, Mr. Reed has always been a Democrat, and has been very active in party organization and work. His party has on numerous occasions offered to make him its candidate for various offices, but each time he has refused. On two occasions he was solicited to become its candidate for sheriff of Erie county. He has on several occasions represented his party at State and other conventions. Mr. Reed was married July 15, 1867, to Miss Lydia Starks, of Madison, Lake county, O. They have three children, Kate P., Annie E. and S. H. Mr. Reed is a member of the K. of H. K. of P., and Order of Railway Conductors. He has resided in Erie since 1869.

J. F. Hunt, locomotive engineer, L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born at Ripley, N. Y., May 24, 1855. His parents died when he was an infant. He was adopted by a farmer when his parents died, and was reared on a farm near Ripley, N. Y. He entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Company, April 15, 1871, as fireman in the Cleveland yard. In 1875 he was appointed to engine hostler in the Erie round-house, and in 1879 was made an engineer. He has since been one of the faithful and efficient employees of the road. The fact that Mr. Hunt is a survivor of one of the most terrible railroad accidents in the annals of railroading, "The Ashtabula Disaster," makes the history of his life one of interest. Nearly everyone, who is old enough, will remember that on December 29, 1876, the Ashtabula bridge gave way with an L. S. & M. S. passenger train. There may be some people who will not recall the past, but Mr. Hunt will assure you that he is not one of those people, for he never will forget it. Dan McGuire was the engineer and Mr. Hunt was the fireman on the head engine of the train, the "Socrates," No. 156. He was placed in a perilous position, and it was only his rare nerve that enabled him to escape with a very severe cut on the head and a terribly burned hand on that occasion. Outside of his experience in that frightful wreck he has been very fortunate, and it can be said that he was exceedingly lucky to have escaped with his life on that occasion. He was married, December 22, 1881, to Miss Emma Valtz, of Erie. They have the following children: Edna May, James Raymond, Blanche Louisa and Caroline Sophia. Mr. Hunt is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

William Carnes, conductor on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born at Ridgway, Mercer county, Pa., March 16, 1858. He is a son of Godfrey and Mary Jane (Harrish) Carnes, both natives of Sharpville, Pa., and the former of Holland and the latter of Irish descent. The mother died in 1863 and the father now resides at Sharpville. They were parents of three children, our subject being the only one now living. He was reared and educated in Mercer county, Pennsylvania, and before beginning railroading he worked in a blast furnace three years. On April 22, 1881, went on the E. & P. as brakeman. In March, 1890, he was promoted to conductor, in which capacity he has since been employed. His railroad experience has been very lucky, and he has a good clear record. Mr. Carnes was married, August 9, 1883, to Miss Esther, daughter of Henry and Matilda Stuart, of Greenville, Pa. This union has been blessed with three children, viz.: Frank Scott, Tillie Estella (deceased) and Mary Helen. He is a member of the O. R. C., the P. V. R., and is a Republican.

Alfred W. Phillips, 133 West Thirteenth street, Erie, Pa., one of the well-known engineers on the E. & P. R. R., was born in Sharon, Mercer county, Pa., December 20, 1850. He is a son of John and Margaret (Clark) Phillips, both natives of Pennsylvania, and of old American families, the former of Welch, and the latter of Irish descent. Col. Samuel Clark, Alfred's maternal grandfather, served under Commodore Perry, in the battle of Lake Erie. Alfred W. was the sixth in a family of nine children. His father died in 1874, and his mother in 1883. He was reared and educated in Sharon, Mercer county, Pa., and, when a young man, worked with his father, who was a tanner by trade. Later he entered the employ of the Sharon rolling mills four successive summers, attending school in the winter. He worked in the Sharon foundry one year, then worked in a flour and feed store eighteen months. He then learned the machinist's trade in the shop of Wm. McGilnary & Co. On account of shop work injuring his health, he went on the E. & P. R. R. as fireman, September 28, 1873, and was promoted to engineer, October 24, 1880. He has been in the employ of the Pennsylvania Company in that capacity ever since, except one year, which he spent in California for the benefit of his health. He took up a farm in California, and was also engaged as locomotive engineer on the Central Pacific R. R., for four months during this time. His railroad experience has been very free from accidents of any kind. Mr. Phillips was married May 26, 1881, to Miss Anna Hamilton, of Allegheny. She died July 20, 1884, leaving one child, James Marshall. He was again married, in 1889, to Miss Cora B. Dyle, of Mahoningtown, Pa., where his family now reside. They have one child, Anita Elizabeth. Mr. Phillips is a member of Erie Lodge, No. 49, A. O. U. W., Amazon Lodge, No. 326, Mahoningtown, Pa., and Friendship Lodge, No. 339, B. of L. E., Youngstown, Ohio.

Emery D. Scott, conductor on the P. & E. division of the Pennsylvania R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, August 19, 1854, and is a son of Ezra D. and Mary (Hinton) Scott, the former a native of New York, and of New England stock, and the latter of Erie county, and a descendant of one of the oldest families in the State, who were early settlers in this county. They reared a family of six children, viz.: Emery D.; Jennie, married Joseph Mortz, of Corry, Pa.; Mamie, married Nelson Caspino; M. E., conductor on the P. & E.; Mrs. Wm. Hasbrook, Corry, Pa. Mr. Emery D. Scott was reared in Union City, educated in the public schools of that place and Edinboro Normal School. When a boy he engaged in clerking in a dry goods store in Union City. He remained there until he was 16 years old, when he entered the employ of the W. N. Y. & P. R. R. Company, in the capacity of brakeman. He worked there three years and enlisted in the U. S. navy, on board the U. S. S. "Michigan," and shortly after was drafted to the U. S. S. "Brooklyn," which was in port in Boston. This was about the time of the perpetration of the Virginia atrocity by the Spaniards in Cuba, and the Brooklyn was ordered to Key West and cruised around Cuba until the difficulty was settled and returned to Pensacola, Fla., where Mr. Scott was discharged. He then went to Texas, and was yard master for the St. L. & I. M. R. R. at Texarkana three years, when he returned to Union City and entered the employ of the P. & E. as brakeman. June 26, 1881, he was made a conductor, in which capacity he has since served. He was married September 17, 1880, to Miss Addie E. Boyd, of Warren. They have four children, viz: Melvine C., born June 11, 1882; Emery B., born September 21, 1884; Robert E., born August 27, 1886, and Effie May, born January 21, 1891. Mr. Scott is a member of the O. R. C. and the P. V. R.

Henry Weber, locomotive engineer on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., was born February 1, 1860, in Scott county, Minnesota. He is a son of Nicholas and Elizabeth (Lachen) Weber, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Prussia. They moved from Minnesota to Erie in 1870. They were the parents of eleven children, viz.: Henry, our subject; Thomas; William, who was an engineer on the L. S. & M. S. R. R.; He died April 11, 1895, aged 30 years; Lizzie (deceased), Frank, Katie, Christopher, Ferdinand, Mary, Edward and Lucy. Mr. Weber was educated in the public schools of Erie, and when yet a boy returned to Minnesota, where he remained about three years. He then returned to Erie and entered the employ of the Lake Shore R. R. Company at Erie as caller. In 1885 he went on the road as fireman, and in 1891 was promoted to engineer. He is very popular and is considered a careful and competent railroad man. Mr. Weber and his brother Frank have 500 acres of timber in Oregon, which they bought in 1892. They also own city property in Portland, Ore., and have been very successful in their Western speculations. Frank lives in Portland, where he moved in 1890. Mr. Henry Weber is a member of the B. of L. E. and politically is a Democrat.

Frederick Hoffman, conductor on the E. & P. division of the Pennsylvania R. R., was born in Erie, Pa., February 12, 1857, and is a son of Philip and Marie (Siener) Hoffman, the former a native of Germany, and the latter of Canada and of French extraction. The family settled in Erie in 1840. There were eight children, viz.: George (deceased); Mary, Mrs. Charles A. Spadican, Erie; Elizabeth, Mrs. John Rue, Denver, Colo.; Kate, Mrs. Thomas Kene, Erie; John S., brakeman, Erie; and Frederick, our subject. The father was a building mover by occupation. He died, January 28, 1887, aged 73 years. The mother died, October 28, 1866. Frederick was reared and educated in Erie, and when 10 years of age, went to Boone, Ia., and worked in a restaurant about eight months. He then traveled throughout the West, and worked in various places, and finally returned to Erie and commenced an apprenticeship at moulding, with the Jarecki Manufacturing Company. After learning his trade he entered the employ of the Griswold Manufacturing Company, where he remained a short time, and went on the L. S. & M. S. as brakeman, one season. Then went on the P. & E. as brakeman. He then took a trip through the South and West for about a year, when he returned to Erie and resumed his former occupation with the P. & E. After a short stay, went west again. Upon his return he re-entered the employ of the P. & E. as brakeman, and in 1882 went to work in the same capacity on the E. & P., and was promoted to conductor, March 17, 1889. He was married September 15, 1889, to Miss Louise, daughter of Henry and Margaret (Cashner) Hempe, of Newark, N. J. The father is now dead and the mother resides in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman have four children, viz.: Frederick Louis, born January 25, 1881, and died August 26, 1886; Marie, born January 28, 1883; Bertha, born October 22, 1887, and George Henry, born July 29, 1889. Mr. Hoffman is a member of the O. R. C., the P. V. R., and politically is a Democrat.

Louis E. Feisler, conductor on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Swanville, Erie county, September 20, 1848. He is a son of Ernest and ——— (Gernlo) Feisler, both natives of Germany. The father was a farmer by occupation in this country, although in Germany he served an apprenticeship at the tailor's trade. Our subject is the youngest in a family of five children. He was reared and educated in Fairview township, and when 13 years old he went to work on the L. S. & M. S. as water boy. Later worked as a section hand, and finally went on the road as brakeman. After serving in that capacity for five years, was promoted to conductor. He then retired from railroading a short time, and in 1874 returned in the capacity of brakeman again, and was promoted to his present position in 1883. Mr. Feisler has been twice married. First, November, 1871, to Miss Mary Bowers, of Swanville. To them were born six children, viz.: George E., Lewis L. (deceased), Charles A., Frank, Dora (deceased), and L. E., jr. Mr. Feisler died in April, 1885. He was again married, October 20, 1890, to Miss Ella Forbes, of Ashtabula, O. He is a member of the K. O. T. M., and is an old-time Democrat.

James C. Benson, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa. This gentleman is a Kentuckian by birth and was born at Flat Rock December 11, 1862. He is a son of Hamilton H. and Lydia B. (Doyle) Benson, the former a native of Waterford, Pa., and the latter of Amboy, Ill. The father was a civil engineer by profession and followed that line of work throughout the west and south and in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. In 1868 he returned to his native town (Waterford), where he now resides. The Benson family are of Scotch-Irish descent. James C. Benson is the eldest in a family of four children, viz.: James C.; Paul A., attorney, Erie, Pa.; Mabel, bookkeeper for the Tribune Bicycle Company, Erie, and Joseph V., fireman on the P. & E. R. R. James C. Benson was reared at Waterford and was educated at the Waterford Academy and Mt. Union College, Ohio. He was united in marriage January 23, 1886, to Miss Lena, daughter of Lafayette and Sarah (Benson) Phelps. They have one child, Leah Mabel, born September 1, 1888. Mr. Benson is a member of the I. O. O. F. Encampment and the P. V. R., and politically is a staunch Republican.

Chas. E. Diefenbach, locomotive engineer on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., is a native of Erie county, and was born in Mill Creek township March 4, 1855. He is a son of Louis and Phoebe Diefenbach, both natives of Germany. They emigrated to America in 1853, settled in Erie county and followed farming. They were the parents of four children, viz.: Henry, locomotive engineer, was killed in a railroad accident in the West August 6, 1886; John, carpenter, Erie; Adam (see sketch in this volume) and Charles. The father died February 22, 1886, aged 82 years, and the mother now lives with Adam on the corner of Wayne and Twenty-second streets, Erie. Charles was reared on his father's farm and educated in the common schools of Erie county. In 1875 he went on the P. & E. R. R. as fireman, and April 16, 1890, was made an engineer. He was united in marriage September 10, 1878, to Miss Barbara, daughter of Benjamin and Barbara (Byers) Warfel, of Lancaster, Pa., where the mother now resides. The father died in 1886. Mr. and Mrs. Diefenbach have had two children, viz.: Martha, died in infancy, and Charles Edwin, born July 1, 1883. Mr. Diefenbach is a member of the P. V. R. and politically is a staunch Democrat.

James Burke, locomotive engineer on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa. This well-known and thoroughly experienced railroad man was born in Ireland fifty-three years ago. He is a son of John and Alice (Kelly) Burke. The family emigrated to America in 1854 and settled at Lorain, O. Here James received a common school education and worked on a farm until 1860, when he entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., Toledo division, taking care of engines. About six months later he engaged as fireman on the New York Central R. R., from Buffalo to Corning. He remained there about eighteen months, when he accepted a position on the Buffalo division of the L. S. & M. S., as instructor of firemen in the use of coal burners. He served in this capacity about one year. He then went to the oil regions of Pennsylvania, where he remained nearly three years. Then he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company as fireman, and, in 1866, went on the E. & P. R. R. as engineer, and two years later returned to the P. & E. as engineer and has been in the employ of that company ever since. During all his railroad experience he has never had a single accident that was in any way attributable to him, although while a fireman he has gone through some severe smashups. Mr. Burke has been twice married. First, in 1864, to Miss Kate Lynch, of Crawford county. They had two children, Edward and William, both locomotive firemen. Mrs. Burke departed this life July 3, 1871. He was again married November 2, 1872, to Miss Eliza Hughes. They have four children, viz.: Theresa, Emma, James and John (deceased). Mr. Burke is a member of the C. M. B. A. and P. R. D., and views politics from a purely independent standpoint. The family are members of the Catholic Church.

Henry J. Bennett, foreman of the Pennsylvania R. R. (P. & E. division), round house, Erie, Pa., was born in Ashford, Kent county, England, August 3, 1856. He is a son of George and Anne (Bailey) Bennett, both natives of Lancashire, England. They reared a family of five children, of whom Henry was the youngest. The father was a machinist by trade, and for several years was manager of the Southeastern R. R. Works at Ashford. He died in 1892 at that place, his wife having died ten years previously.

Henry J. was reared and educated in his native town, and after graduating from the Ashford grammar school, taught school one year, when he commenced an apprenticeship in the Southeastern R. R. shops at Ashford. After completing his trade he took charge of the machinery of the Granville Hotel at Ramsgate, England, for one year, when he went to Brighton and entered the employ of the London, Brighton and South Coast R. R. He remained in the employ of this company about three years, part of which time he was engaged in the construction of ocean steamship machinery. In 1882 he came to America and entered the employ of the West Shore R. R. as round house foreman and dispatcher at Kingston, N. Y., and was in the employ of this company in various capacities at Camos, Frankford and Albany. In 1886 he entered the employ of the N. Y., L. E. & W. R. R. as foreman in their shops at Susquehanna, Pa. After remaining there about a year and a half he came to Erie and entered the employ of the Pennsylvania R. R. Company in his present capacity. Mr. Bennett has been twice married, first to Miss Emma Andrews, of Ashford, England, in 1880. To them were born two children, Robert George Elsie and Olive Anne. Mrs. Bennett departed this life May 29, 1891. Mr. Bennett was united in marriage the second time April 17, 1895, to Miss Addie May Graham, of Erie. Mr. Bennett is a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Masonic order and the Episcopal Church, of which he is secretary.

Joseph A. Cox, engineer on the P. & E. R. R., was born in Broadtop City, Huntingdon county, Pa., September 8, 1868, and is a son of John Thomas and Harriet Cox, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania. In the family were eight children: Louisa, Mrs. William Warren, of Erie; Rosetta (deceased); Joseph A.; Mary Emma (deceased); Harriet Margaret, Mrs. Charles Emery, Erie; Virginia, Mrs. Tillman Rauch, Elmira, N. Y.; Elizabeth L., and James. The family settled in Erie July 2, 1874, where they have since resided. Joseph was reared and educated in Erie, but after the age of 11 he never had an opportunity to attend school, for at that age he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company as a water boy on the work in grading for the present freight depot. His next occupation was tallyman, and February 17, 1881, he engaged as messenger boy in the yard master's office, which position he held until May, 1886, when he secured a position as fireman, and in March, 1892, was promoted to the position of engineer, which post he now holds with much credit to himself. Mr. Cox was united in marriage May 24, 1894, to Miss Mary Hutchinson, of Petersburg, Pa. She is a daughter of William and Isabel (Hillard) Hutchinson of that place. Mr. Cox is a member of the B. of L. E., the P. O. S. of A., and the Pennsylvania Relief.

S. F. Lytle, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Wilmington, Lawrence county, Pa., February 10, 1856, and is a son of Jonathan and Mary (Brandon) Lytle, the former a native of Center county, Pa., and the latter of Virginia. Jonathan Lytle was a foundryman by occupation and was the first to convert a charcoal furnace into a black coal furnace. He came to Mercer county in 1857, where he followed his occupation until 1871, when he was compelled to retire on account of failing eyesight, caused by an accident. He died May 30, 1889, and his wife died January 18, 1893. They reared a family of six children, viz.: Ida R., Kate, Curly, J. B. (deceased), S. F. and Charles. S. F. was reared in West Middlesex, Mercer county, Pa., where he received a common school education, and at the age of 14 commenced an apprenticeship at the finishing trade, which he followed three years. He then worked in a dry goods store about three years, followed furnace work until 1877, when he entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company as brakeman, was baggage master for a while, and in 1885 was promoted to freight conductor, and in 1892 to passenger conductor. Mr. Lytle was married September 15, 1881, to Miss Laura Durst, of Transfer, Mercer county. They have one child, Carrie M. He is a member of the O. R. C., the Royal Arcanum and Masonic order. The family are members of the English Lutheran Church, and he is a Republican.

Peter Wood.

Thomas Fleming, passenger conductor on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Erie, Pa., was born December 12, 1849, at Erie, Pa., and is a son of George and Caroline (Simms) Fleming; the former a native of Erie and the latter a native of Crawford county. George Fleming was a son of Benjamin Fleming, who settled in Erie county in 1810. Benjamin came from the New England States and was of Scotch origin. He was a salt-water sailor, and was a sailor under Commodore Perry, in the battle of Lake Erie, on board the "Niagara." The Cleveland weekly Herald , of September 15, 1890, in giving an account of the inauguration of the Perry statue states the following: "Ben. Fleming, of Erie, Pa., relates the following of his experience; he was a sailor on board the 'Niagara,' in the battle of Lake Erie. His recollection of the historical event, in which he was an actor, is fresh, and his description is given with an animation seldom seen in one so aged. He says: 'The 'Niagara' was not so badly impaired when Perry came on board, as the enemy's fire had been directed at the flag ship. Every man had made up his mind not to give up the ship before Perry came on board, but after the flag came, not an inch could be forced from them while a plank lasted.'" Benjamin Fleming reared a family of five boys and four girls; three of the girls are now living, but the sons are all dead. Benjamin Fleming died in 1870 aged 96 years. George and Caroline (Simms) Fleming were the parents of three children, viz.: Thomas, James V., conductor, Buffalo, and Ella, now Mrs. James Mitchell, of Erie, Pa. The father died in May, 1890, and his wife nine months later. Thomas Fleming was reared and educated in Erie, and, May 10, 1864, enlisted in the 4th Reg. U. S. Artillery for three years, as musician. During the war his services were confined to the vicinity of Nashville, Tenn. He was honorably discharged May 10, 1867, when he returned to Erie and entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Company, as brakeman. In 1880 he was promoted to freight conductor, and in 1890 to passenger conductor. He has never had an accident on the rail in his life and has never been suspended. He was married, March 30, 1870, to Miss Julia Gibson, of Guelph, Ont., who was a native of England. They have five children, viz.: Clarence, Sarah, George Edward, Walter and Ralph. Mr. Fleming is a member of the I. O. O. F.

G. E. Martin, conductor on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born at Elgin, Erie county, Pa., June 18, 1858, and is a son of Harry and Phoebe (Whitney) Martin, both natives of Erie county. The father now resides at Elgin, and the mother died in 1862. G. E. was the only child; he was reared in Elgin and educated in the public school; he learned the miller's trade with his father; his grandfather was also a miller by trade. Mr. Martin followed that occupation until 1887, when he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company, as brakeman, and in 1892 was promoted to conductor. He was married, October 1, 1881, to Miss Fannie E. Alden, of Beaver Dam, Wayne township, this county, a daughter of Joseph and Ann (Miller) Alden. The former died September 18, 1869, and the latter now resides in Wayne township. Mr. and Mrs. Martin have one child, viz.: Gary E., born December 7, 1884. Mr. Martin is a member of the O. R. C., and politically is a Republican.

I. F. Bumpus, railroad conductor, Erie, Pa., was born at Ypsilanti, Mich., January 15, 1852. He is a son of Isaac F. and Phoebe (Vanderhoff) Bumpus, the former a native of New England, and the latter of Michigan. Mr. Bumpus never knew what it was to have either a father or a mother. His mother died when he was but 1 year old, at which time his father was engaged in driving an overland stage coach in California, where he died three years later, just as he was about to return East to see his 4-year-old son, whom he had never seen. There was but one other child in the family, a sister, who died before I. F. was born. When his father died, he was adopted by an uncle, who resided in Albion, Erie county, Pa. Here he was reared and given a good common school education, and when a boy, followed the occupation of driving on the canal in the summer time, until 1872, when he entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company as brakeman, and served in that capacity nine years, when he was promoted to conductor, which occupation he has since held. Mr. Bumpus is considered one of the trustworthy and competent employes of the Pennsylvania Company. His career as a railroad man has been uninterrupted by any suspension since he began that occupation, which of itself is the best evidence of his caution and competency on the rail. He was united in marriage, January 1, 1874, to Miss Alice A. Hewitt, of an old and respected family, of Albion, Pa. To this union has been born six children, viz.: Harry, Martha, Gertrude (deceased), Florence, Grace and Forest. Mr. Bumpus is a member of the O. of R. C., and is a Republican.

George Haybarger, locomotive engineer, Erie, Pa. This gentleman is a member of one of the oldest families of Erie county. He was born in Mill Creek township April 11, 1849, and is a son of Elias and Magdalena (Gingrich) Haybarger, the former a native of Lockport, Erie county, and the latter of Buffalo. They were parents of ten children, viz.: Mary Catherine, born June 12, 1845, and died August 25, 1835; Levi, born May 6, 1837, and died June 25, 1874; Eliza Ann, born May 28, 1841, died January 9, 1842; Elizabeth, born March 26, 1844, now resides in Michigan with her father; Margaret, deceased, October 29, 1846; George, born April 11, 1849; John C., born July 23, 1851, died, February 21, 1852; Daniel, born November 11, 1853, died March 22, 1854, and Presley, born March 30, 1858, died February 12, 1859. The father, Elias Haybarger, removed from Erie county Sturgess, Mich., in 1874, where he now resides. His wife died October 29, 1887. Elias Haybarger is a son of George, who settled in Erie county about the year of 1800. He was a native of New England, and served in the war of 1812, under Commodore Perry, in the memorable battle of Lake Erie. When he came to this county he settled in Lockport, where he reared a family of eleven children, viz.: Elizabeth, born May 12, 1798 (deceased), married James Nutica (deceased), of Ohio; Polly, born August 10, 1800 (deceased), married Solomon Zuck; John, born May 5, 1803 (deceased); Maxyon, born June 1, 1805 (deceased); Rebecca, born June 9, 1807 (deceased), married Henry Kaufmann; Elias, born September 10, 1809, who resides in Michigan; Lucinda, born October 5, 1811, married Richard McCreary; Lindisa, born December 9, 1814 (deceased), married Ira Randall; Eli, born February 1, 1815 (deceased); Orilla, born February 9, 1821 (deceased), married John Wolf; Caroline, born June 4, 1823, married Henry Wolf, and now resides in North East. George Haybarger was reared and educated in Mill Creek township, and lived on a farm until 1882, when he entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company as fireman, and in 1892 was promoted to locomotive engineer. He was married February 6, 1873, to Miss Lydia, daughter of Adam and Caroline (Spingler) Kandecker, both natives of Wurttemberg, Germany. The father died June 8, 1894, and the mother now resides in Erie with Mrs. Haybarger. To this union were born two children: Walter, born February 16, 1876, and Mary Ve, born June 20, 1881, and died December 6, 1884. Mr. Haybarger is a member of the A. O. U. W., and the family are members of the English Lutheran Church.

John S. Welsh, conductor on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa. This gentleman was born at Venton, Venton county, O., December 25, 1854. He is a son of James and Mary (Cullinan) Welsh, both natives of Ireland. They emigrated to America in 1852 and settled at Vinton, and in 1855 came to Erie county, and settled in Fairview township, and later moved to Erie, where the father died in November, 1888, and the mother now resides on the old homestead on Poplar street. In the family there were six children and John S. was the only son. He was reared in Fairview township, educated in the public schools, and in 1868 entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Company as a section hand, and in 1878 commenced braking on that road and ten years later was promoted to conductor. During all this time he has been employed on the Cleveland and Buffalo division. Mr. Welsh was married January 21, 1880, to Miss Addie Irene, daughter of John A. and Elizabeth (Andrews) Pogson, of Erie. Her parents were natives of England. They settled in Erie in 1828. The father died in 1888 aged 88 years and the mother now resides in Fairview township. Mr. and Mrs. Welsh have had four children, viz.: Lot, Earl (deceased), Ines Goldenine, May (deceased) and Addie (deceased). Mr. Welsh is a member of the A. O. U. W., and politically is a Democrat.

John F. Lane, passenger conductor on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Rochester, N. Y., September 20, 1840, and is a son of Amias and Mary (Barry) Lane, both natives of Quebec, Canada, the former of Irish and the latter of French descent. They settled in Rochester in 1837, and in 1861 removed to Marshall, Mich. The father was a cooper by trade and always carried on quite an extensive manufacturing business in that line. He was also quite an extensive politician of his day, and always devoted considerable attention to all political campaigns. In the family there were seven children, viz.: Margaret (deceased); William (deceased); John F., our subject; Daniel, manager of the Standard Oil Company, Muskegon, Mich.; Mary, now Mrs. Connors, Jackson, Mich.; Elizabeth, Mrs. Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich., and William, 2 (deceased). The father died in Jackson, Mich., in 1888, and the mother died in Marshall, Mich., in 1862.

John F. was reared in Rochester, and received a high school education, and when he was a boy, naturally spent considerable time in his father's cooper shop, although without any intent or effort to learn the trade, and early in life engaged in clerking in Rochester, and when the family removed to Michigan, he accompanied them and followed the same occupation there, but soon tired of the small salary and long hours of a clerk, and decided to try some other vocation and with his limited knowledge and experience at the cooper trade, he decided to make that his first venture. He accordingly found employment and was a successful journeyman from the start. He followed that occupation three years. Starting in Marshall, Mich., he worked in several towns in that State, and in Chicago, New York and various other cities and towns throughout the country. In 1865 he entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Company as brakeman on the Erie division, and in 1868 was promoted to freight conductor and took his first passenger run in 1872 and ran local passenger until 1890, when he commenced running on the through passenger from Toledo to Buffalo, where he is at present employed. Since he has been connected with the passenger service, his long record has been uninterrupted by a single accident, and he is regarded as one of the most experienced and competent conductors on the road. Mr. Lane was united in marriage October 4, 1870, to Miss Mary E. Challice, of McKean, Erie county. To this union has been born one child, Eva, who now resides at home. He is a 32d degree Mason and a member of Evergreen Lodge, No. 222, F. & A. M.; Conneaut Chapter, No. 76, R. A. M.; Conneaut Council, No. 40, R. & S. M.; Rose Chapter, No. 22, O. E. S.; Al Koran Temple, Mystic Shrine; and Cache Commandery, No. 27, K. T. Politically Mr. Lane is a Democrat.

J. H. Hunt, passenger conductor on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born at Belle Valley, Mill Creek township, Erie county, March 9, 1842. His parents were Henry and Mary (Simons) Hunt, the former a native of England and the latter of Pennsylvania. They reared a family of eight children, viz.: John, Lovell; Edwin (deceased); Harriet (deceased); William (deceased); Henry (deceased); J. H.; Charlotte, Mrs. E. L. Whittlesey, Erie, Pa.; Sarah, Mrs. Edward Wood, Waterford, Pa. The mother died in 1850 and the father in 1875. J. H. Hunt was reared on his father's farm in Belle Valley and was educated in the common schools of Erie county, and before he was 21 years of age he worked as a farm laborer five years. January 28, 1863, he entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Company in the capacity of brakeman, and one year later was made a freight conductor, and in 1872 was given a passenger run, in which capacity he has since served. He now has charge of one of through passenger trains between Cleveland and Buffalo. Mr. Hunt has been a very successful railroad man and is fully worthy of the great confidence and trust imposed in him by the company. He is a man of genial disposition and has many friends, both among his co-employees and the patrons of the road. He has never been suspended for a day since he entered the employ of the company, and since he has had charge of a passenger train not a single life has been lost among his crew and but one among his passengers. He was married October 3, 1868, to Miss Isabel Daugherty, of Erie, Pa. They have four children, viz.: Winfield Scott, Mary Blanche, John Edwin and Clara Jane. Mr. Hunt is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and politically stands on purely an independent basis.

Henry Wedgege, locomotive engineer, Erie, Pa., is among the faithful employees of the P. & E. R. R. He was born March 8, 1856, at Hanover, Germany, and is a son of Henry and Rachel (Nulty) Wedgege, both natives of Hanover, and now residents of Erie. The father is a carpenter by trade, which occupation he has followed all his life. They reared a family of eight children, viz.: Rachael, Mrs. Michael Mehl; Amelia, Mrs. Martin Lambain; Henry; Augusta; William; Alvina; Albert, professional base ball player; and Harry, fireman on the P. & E. The family emigrated to America in 1868. Henry entered the employ of the Byron-Johnson Stove Works, where he remained for a short time, when he went to work in the hook and staple factory, where he remained until 1870. In 1871 he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company as fireman, and on April 2, 1880, was made an engineer, which position he has since held. Since he has been running he has been one of the fortunate few railroad men who have not been concerned in any railroad accident of importance. Mr. Wedgege has been twice married. First, in 1878, to Miss Louise Rice, of Erie. They had two children, Ada and Louise. Mrs. Wedgege died April 22, 1880, and he was again married August 30, 1883, to Miss Anna, daughter of Robert and Susan (Nichols) Blackwood, the former a native of Belfast, Ireland, and the latter of Cattaraugus county, New York. To this union has been born one child, Florence. Mr. Blackwood now resides at Wesleyville at the age of 84. He came to Erie county with his parents in 1818 at the age of 6 years. The family started for Ashtabula, O., but by reason of a severe storm and shipwreck was driven ashore at Erie. Mr. Wedgege is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

A. J. Holmes, locomotive engineer on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born in Hamburg, N. Y., September 16, 1854, and is a son of Abel V. and Elizabeth (Dimmock) Holmes, natives of New York. They were the parents of four children, viz.: A. J., Jerome, in the West; Charles, conductor on the C., C., C. & I. R. R., and Abel, Iowa City. The father is now dead, and the mother resides at Iowa City. Mr. Holmes was reared and educated in North Evans, N. Y., where in early life he worked on a farm. He then followed public works until 1873, when he entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Company as brakeman, and, in 1873, was promoted to fireman, where he worked until 1875, when he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. Company as fireman, and, in 1882, was made an engineer, in which capacity he has since served. Mr. Holmes is considered a careful official, yet he has experienced his share of unavoidable railroad accidents. He was in a head-end collision at Lovell, in which both engines were completely demolished, and he escaped uninjured by jumping; when he was firing, his engine was derailed at Cummings by a misplaced switch, and the engine rolled completely over, but he escaped by jumping. He is one of the few railroad men who can truthfully say that he has fired the old wood-burners, which he did on the L. S. & M. S. He was married, October 20, 1876, to Miss Theresa, daughter of James and Mary (Riley) Hennessey, natives of Ireland. To this union have been born five children, viz.: Alfred, born June 25, 1883, died February 14, 1890; Mary, born June 14, 1885, died February 14, 1890; Anson, born September 16, 1887; Annie, born May 9, 1892; and Walter, born September 22, 1894. Mr. Holmes is a member of the C. M. B. A., and politically is a Democrat. The family are members of the Catholic Church.

Andrew A. Burke, locomotive engineer, Erie, Pa., is one of the most popular and well-known engineers on the E. & P. R. R. He was born in Ireland in 1847, is a son of John and Mary (Colleran) Burke, and is the only surviving member of a family of five children. His father died in Ireland in 1858, and his mother now resides in the city of New York. Mr. Burke was reared and educated in his native country, and when 18 years of age joined the Royal Irish Police, in Clifton, County Galway, Ireland, where he served three years. In 1869 he came to America and remained in New York a short time, where he had several relatives, and in May, 1869, he settled in Erie. After working one year in the E. & P. shops he went on the road as fireman, and in 1873 was made an engineer, and has since managed the locomotive, much to his own credit and to the satisfaction of his employers. As he himself says, he has had the ordinary ups and downs incident to a railroad man's life, but generally he has been very successful. He was married March 4, 1869 (just before leaving Ireland), to Miss Theresa McGinness. To this union was born eight children, five of whom are living, viz.: Henry E.; Isabella, married W. J. Reynolds, Clarendon, Pa.; Mary, Theresa, and John Charles. Mrs. Burke departed this life April 27, 1881. He was again married June 30, 1886, to Miss Mary Burke, of Warren, Pa. They have five children, viz.: Andrew, Augusta, Frederick (deceased), Margaretta and Geraldine. Mr. Burke is a member of the C. M. B. A., the B. L. E., and politically is a staunch Democrat.

S. H. Fletcher, locomotive engineer on the P. & E. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born July 25, 1865, in North Anson, Me. He is a son of David P. and Olive (Gatchell) Fletcher, both natives of Maine, and of old New England stock. The father went west in 1867 and engaged in mining pursuits at Nelson Gulch, near Helena, Mont., which he followed until his death, which occurred January 29, 1881. In the Helena Weekly Herald of February 3, 1881, appears the following article: "The death of David P. Fletcher takes from our midst one of the truest hearted men that ever lived. He came to Helena in the early days and engaged in mining pursuits at Nelson Gulch, near Helena, following this vocation for years. Mr.

Fletcher was a native of North Anson, Me. His funeral took place this afternoon from the Masonic Hall, and his remains were followed to the grave by a large concourse of the fraternity and many friends." In 1874 Mrs. Fletcher, with her son, S. H., then about 10 years old, went from Maine to Helena. In making the journey it was necessary to go to Corinne, a town twelve miles west of Salt Lake City, on the U. P. R. R., and to go from there to Helena, a distance of 500 miles through the mountains by stage coach. At this time there were many hostile Indians on the war path in that section, and the stage coach, which preceded the one on which Mrs. Fletcher was a passenger, was attacked by Indians. After four years of regular pioneer life "in the wild and woolly West" Mrs. Fletcher returned to North Anson. She now resides in Erie. In the family there were three children, viz.: S. H., Caroline, born in Helena, Mont., and Thomas R., born in North Anson, Me. Mr. S. H. Fletcher was educated in North Anson, Me., and Helena, Mont., and in May, 1882, came to Erie and entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. as fireman. In 1889 he was made an engineer, and is one of the youngest engineers on the road, yet one of the most competent. He was married October 2, 1889, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of Newton and Mary (Stout) Wells, of Kenova, Pa., where Mr. Wells served as postmaster for twenty years. They have one child, David S. Mr. Fletcher is a member of the B. of L. E., the I. O. O. F., the P. O. S. of A. and the Pennsylvania Volunteer Relief.

Jacob Coppersmith, locomotive engineer, Erie, Pa. This gentleman, who is one of the popular employees of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Company, was born in Erie, August 21, 1850. He is a son of John and Annie M. (Gerber) Coppersmith, both natives of Switzerland. The father was a surveyor in his native land, and came to America in 1832, and settled in Erie, where he followed fancy gardening, until the time of his death, which occurred June 8, 1862. The mother died January 23, 1884. They reared a family of twelve children, of whom our subject was the youngest. He and Wm. S., of Mill Creek township, are the only surviving members of the family. John P. died in Libby prison. He was a member of Co. 1, 145th P. V. I. He was captured at Fredericksburg, Henry C., who served in Miller's battery, 111th Reg., died at Alpine, Ga., while in the service. Jacob was reared and educated in Erie, and at his father's death, succeeded him in his business a short time, when he went to work in Erie cemetery one season, and then was engaged in pump-making for L. W. Olds, until 1870, when he went on the L. S. & M. S. as fireman. November 27, 1872, he was promoted to engineer, and has since been employed on the Buffalo and Cleveland division in that capacity. He is a member of B. of L. E., and K. of P., and is a Republican. Mr. Coppersmith was married January 26, 1882, to Miss Louisa U., daughter of Christian and Mary Ann (Reiser) Beary, of Erie, and natives of Switzerland. They have two children, Charles W., and Rose D., the latter deceased.

W. M. Gray, locomotive engineer on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., Erie, Pa., was born at Painesville, Ohio, August 19, 1852, and is a son of Elroy and Sarah (Kent) Gray, natives of New England. They were the parents of five children: Frances, drowned in the Grand river, Ohio; Leroy, died at Painesville, in 1888; he served in the 29th Reg., O. Vols., throughout the war; Colburn, died in New Orleans, with yellow fever; Sarah Ann, married C. A. Smith, Erie, Pa., and W. M. Gray. The father was a member of the 29th Reg., O. Vols. He was killed at the battle of Gettysburg, and is buried on the field in an unknown grave. His wife died in 1892. Mr. Gray comes from a military family. His grandfather, Elmiah Gray, served in the war of 1812, and his grandfather, Kent, was a commissioned officer in the Revolutionary war. W. M. Gray was reared in Painesville, educated in the public schools and Austinberg College, and when 13 years of age enlisted in the U. S. navy at Memphis, Tenn., and served as powder boy on the U. S. gunboat, "Roanoke," fifteen months, when he was discharged at his own request. He then went to Denver, and remained a short time, when he returned to Chicago. He then went to Pittsburg, and from there to the Pennsylvania oil regions in the midst of the oil excitement. He ran a pump in the oil regions two years, and in 1863, went to Cleveland, where he entered the employ of the Cleveland and Pittsburg R. R. Company, as switchman, where he remained but a short time, when he went to breaking on the L. S. & M. S. In October, 1873, he was promoted to the post of fireman, and, in 1879, to engineer, in which capacity he has since served. He has run on the road a great deal, but at present is employed in the Erie yards. Since he has been running he has never had an accident of any kind, or lost a day by suspension. Mr. Gray was married November 11, 1874, to Miss Elizabeth Welter, of Erie, Pa. To this union were born nine children: Emma (deceased), William, Emma, Agnes (deceased), Josephine, George, Jackson, Frances, and Arthur (deceased). He is a member of the B. of L. E., and politically is a thorough Republican.

B. J. Hannon, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., is a native of Clifton, County Galway, Ireland, and was born April 5, 1856. He is a son of John and Bridget (McGinness) Hannon. The former now resides in Erie, and the latter died in Ireland. In the family there were four children, viz.: B. J., Mary, Lucy and Lizzie. In 1866, the father, with the two eldest children, emigrated to America and located at Erie, where he has since resided. In 1875, B. J. returned to Ireland and brought his two remaining sisters to this country, who also reside in Erie now. B. J. Hannon, after receiving a good common school education, in 1871 entered the employ of James Cooper, as clerk in his grocery store in Erie. He remained there a short time, when he entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. as timekeeper in their office in Erie. In November, in 1872, he went firing on the same road, and March 23, 1878, was promoted to engineer, which position he has since held. As a railroader, Mr. Hannon has had a few accidents and as good a record as any man on the road. He was married, September 18, 1879, to Miss Mary Ellen, daughter of Bennett and Hanora (Griffin) Jones, the former a native of Wales, and the latter of Ireland. Mr. Jones served on the U. S. S. "Michigan" twenty years and eleven months, enlisting June 30, 1848. At the time of his discharge, he was third assistant senior engineer. He died February 19, 1893, his wife having died only two weeks previously. Mr. and Mrs. Hannon have had four children, viz.: John (deceased), Nora Loretta,

Mary and Jennie. Mr. Hannon is also engaged in the grocery business. His business is located in a handsome brick block on the corner of Seventh and Poplar streets, which is owned by him, and was built in 1894. He commenced the business the same year. He carries a very complete stock of groceries, and is doing a prosperous business. He is a member of the B. of L. E. and the C. M. B. A.

Thomas H. Dickson, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., is a native of Ireland, where his parents, Robert and Essie (Hamilton) Dickson, still reside; they are also natives of Ireland, but of Scotch descent. Thomas was reared and educated in his native land, and at the age of 15 came to America and settled in Sharon, Pa. At the age of 17 he took out naturalization papers, and was made an American citizen, in Mercer, Pa. There he worked for a coal company as messenger and office boy for a short time, when he entered the employ of the Middlesex Coal Company as locomotive fireman, which he followed about two years. He then came to Erie and went to work in the E. & P. shops as an apprentice at the machinist trade. After learning his trade and working at it a short time he engaged as fireman for the same company, and after firing about one year he was made an engineer in 1878. Since his promotion Mr. Dickson has continued in the employment of the company in that capacity. As a railroad man he has had considerable experience, and on several occasions has had close calls. Although he has never been concerned in a railroad wreck which was in any way attributable to his negligence, he has been the victim of several exceptional smash-ups, but has always been fortunate enough to escape unhurt; yet he has never been known to leave his engine, regardless of the apparent danger. He was married, April 16, 1877, to Miss Lizzie McCrea, of Erie, Pa. They have five children, viz.: Thomas A., Robert S., Nellie G., William J., and James Douglas. Mr. Dickson is a member of the B. of L. E., the A. O. U. W., and the Masonic fraternity, in which he has received all the degrees, except the Consistory; he is also a member of Mystic Shrine.

John E. Hall, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa., is one of the veteran railroaders of Erie county. He was born in Plattsburg, N. Y., September 11, 1836, and is a son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Broslens) Hall, both natives of Vermont, and of New England stock. The father was a sailor, and owned a vessel on Lake Champlain, where he was drowned when John E. was 8 years old. The mother died in Buffalo in 1881. The family moved to Buffalo in 1850. When John E. was a young man he worked as a farm laborer, later at a milk dairy in Buffalo. In 1864 he entered the employ of the N. Y. C. R. R. as brakeman, which he followed but a short time, and, in 1865, came to Erie and entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. as brakeman. Shortly after he was promoted to the position of fireman, and in 1868 was made an engineer, which position he has since held. He ran on the road until 1882, when, on account of his long service, he was given an easier position, running a locomotive at the Pittsburgh docks, at Erie, Pa. During Mr. Hall's railroad experience he has "pulled" all kinds of trains over the road. He has usually run freight, and has repeatedly refused to take a regular passenger run. During all his railroad experience he has had but one accident, in which he struck a Lake Shore train that was across the E. & P. tracks, in the Erie yards. On this occasion he was thrown out of the cab window and had his back severely injured. Mr. Hall was married, April 10, 1856, to Miss Sarah A. Johnson, of Buffalo. They have four children, viz.: Charles, round-house foreman of the P. S. & L. E., in Greenville, Pa.; Ida, principal of the Erie Shortland School; Herbert, brass finisher, Erie, Pa., and John, brass finisher, Erie, Pa. Mr. Hall is a member of the Pennsylvania Voluntary Relief, the A. O. U. W., and the K. of P., and in politics is perfectly independent.

John T. Jourdan, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa. This gentleman is one of the popular young engineers of the Pennsylvania R. R. system. He is an Erie man by birth. He was born February 9, 1862. He is a son of John and Mary (Horgan) Jourdan, both natives of Ireland and early settlers in Erie county. The father worked on the construction of the Lake Shore R. R. and is at present employed by that company. The mother died in 1884. John is the youngest in a family of four children. He was reared in the city of Erie, where he received a good common school education, and at about the age of 14, commenced work as office boy in the master mechanic's office of the E. & P. R. R. at Erie. He remained there but a short time, when he began work in the machine and boiler shops, and in 1878, when he was about 17 years of age, he commenced firing on the road, and in August, 1885, was promoted to engineer. Outside of the regular routine of mishaps of a railroad man's life, Mr. Jourdan has been very fortunate, and has never been connected with any accident of any account. He was united in marriage February 24, 1892, to Miss Mary T. McCarthy, of Sharon, Pa. Mr. Jourdan is a member of the B. of L. E., the Penn. Vol. Relief and the C. M. B. A.

J. B. Weindorf, locomotive engineer on the E. & P. R. R., Erie, Pa. This gentleman was born in Erie, October 15, 1851. His parents, Jacob and Mary Ann (Stringer) Weindorf, were natives of Germany; the former was born in Hessen Darmstadt, and the latter came from Mainz. They emigrated to America in 1840, and went directly to Cleveland; but the same year removed to Erie, where they permanently settled. The father learned the carpenter's trade in his native land, which he followed in Erie during his life. He was employed most of his time for the Reed estate. He also worked on the building of the "Michigan." He died in 1858, aged 53 years, and the mother now resides in Erie, at the age of 76. They reared a family of eleven children: Teresa, now Mrs. Fred Shade, of Erie; Barbara, Mrs. Andrew Crawford, of Titusville, Pa.; Peter, carpenter, Lincoln, Ill.; Etta, married John Longnecker, Erie; Kate, Mrs. John Freeman (widow), Erie; J. B.; George, conductor on the P., F. W. & C. R. R., Chicago; John, boilermaker, Erie; Edward, machinist, Erie; Mary, Mrs. Will Lawrence (deceased), and Martin, clerk, Erie. J. B. Weindorf was reared in Erie and educated in the public schools. At about the age of 14 he commenced life as a stationary engineer in Cook's shingle factory, Erie, then worked a short time in the Erie stove factory, in the same capacity, when he entered the employ of James Cook as engineer in his planing-mill. In 1869 he entered the employ of the E. & P. Company as engine wiper. At the end of about six months he went on the road as fireman. In 1872 he was promoted to the post of engineer, which position he has since held. He ran freight until 1888, when he was promoted to the passenger engineer service from Erie to Pittsburg, making the run of 150 miles one way every day. According to the average of 150 miles per day during the time that he has been running in the passenger service, not counting extra runs, he has covered over 341,600 miles, or a distance of nearly fourteen times around the earth. During his entire experience at railroading he has never had an accident of any account, and is considered one of the most careful, yet fearless, engineers on the road. Mr. Weindorf has been twice married, first to Miss Eliza Sheridan, of Erie, in 1878. She departed this life in 1882, leaving two children: Mary B. and Bessie Genevieve. After remaining a widower over nine years, Mr. Weindorf was married to Miss Anna Sheridan, also of Erie. He is a member of the B. of L. E., P. V. R. and C. M. B. A.

John M. Kalvelage, formerly a restaurant proprietor, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, December 17, 1858, and is a son of John H. Kalvelage, whose personal history is contained in this volume. John H. Kalvelage settled, September, 1857, in Erie, where his son was reared and educated. He remained with his father, who was a brewer in Erie, until 1884, when he engaged in the hardware business about two years; he then engaged in the bakery and confectionery business at 714 State street, which he continued about two and a half years. In 1889 he bought the restaurant at 366 West Eighth street, where he remained until 1895, when failing health compelled him to quit business. Mr. Kalvelage was married July 16, 1879, to Miss Rosalia, daughter of Michael and Anna (Klein) Oberkirch, natives of Prussia. To this union were born six children: George J., Robert J., Bertha K., Felix P., Edith and Arthur A. The family are members of the Catholic Church, and Mr. Kalvelage is a member of the Elks and of the C. M. B. A. He was grand marshal of the Grand Council of the C. M. B. A. for two years, beginning in 1897, and has also been district deputy of the Grand Council. Mr. Kalvelage is a prominent Democrat and has served in the city council of Erie one year.

Charles Franklin, commission merchant and wholesale dealer in produce, 1802 State street, Erie, Pa., was born in Washington, D. C., June 5, 1865. He is a son of Julius and Anna (Hudson) Franklin, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Philadelphia, Pa. Julius Franklin came to America when 26 years of age, and he was a well-known literary man, as well as a translator and teacher of languages, being the master of seven languages. He spent his life in literary work in Philadelphia, excepting a term that he held a position in the United States treasury in Washington, D. C. He revised the Bible, and in 1876 wrote a Centennial History of the United States, which was published by the Jones Publishing Company of Philadelphia, and was the author of several other literary works. He died in 1884 in Philadelphia, Pa., and his wife now resides at Atlantic City. They were the parents of thirteen children, six of whom are living.

Charles was reared and educated in Philadelphia, and followed professional base ball playing until he was 21. He then went to New York and enlisted in the United States navy on the U. S. S. "Richmond," which immediately went on a cruise to South America. They sailed around Cape Verde to Uruguay. This was during the Brazilian revolution, and the "Richmond" was ordered from Uruguay to Rio Janeiro, Brazil, to protect American interests there. They were anchored in the harbor of Rio Janeiro when Dom Pedro abdicated the throne, and Mr. Franklin had the honor of assisting to fire the first salute in honor of the new republic. They then returned north and he was transferred to shore duty at Philadelphia. From there he was ordered to Erie to the U. S. S. "Michigan." In April, 1890, he was discharged at his own request. He then entered the employ of F. K. Simmons, and in 1892 engaged in the commission business for himself. He controls a large and growing trade and is a thorough and competent business man. Mr. Franklin was married June 13, 1890, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Grine, of Erie. He is a member of the United Workman, and is a Republican.

George E. Getchell, chief engineer at the Colby Piano Factory, Erie, Pa., was born at Groveland, Mass., June 6, 1856. He is a son of O. L. and Martha W. Getchell, both natives of Maine. His great-grandfather Getchell, was a native of Scotland. The father now resides in Erie. The mother died when George E. was 7 years old. The family, which consisted of the father and four children, came from the East to Dunkirk about 1856. They resided there about six years. His father, O. L. Getchell, enlisted in the Union army in August, 1862, and served until the close of the war, when the family removed to Titusville, and came to Erie, in November, 1866. When a boy George worked at various occupations, but stationary engineering has been the chief pursuit of his life. He followed that occupation through the oil district of Pennsylvania, and had charge of the machinery of the Erie Boot and Shoe Company for five years. In October, 1888, he entered the employ of the Colby Piano Company, where he has since been engaged. Mr. Getchell was married November 11, 1884, to Miss Kate Roth, of Erie, Pa. They have one child, Cassie M. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Association of Engineers, P. O. S. of A. and Protected Home Circle.

John F. Sutton, chief engineer for Fred. Koehler & Co., Erie, Pa., was born in York county, Pennsylvania, February 2, 1844. He is a son of Macague and Mary (Daily) Sutton, both natives of Pennsylvania. The father died in 1869, and the mother when John was a child. When he was 3 years old his father moved to Baltimore, Md., where he was reared and educated. When 16 years of age he began an apprenticeship at the machinist trade. Before he had served his time, the war broke out, and as Baltimore was immediately the scene of great military display, and although 17 years of age, his patriotism was his dictator, and he resolved to join the warring legions of his country. He accordingly joined the 1st Pa. Rifles at Baltimore, while on their way to the front, and served with them as a citizen in the first battle of Bull Run. He regularly entered the service, April 25, 1862, in Co. C, 1st Pa. Cav., for three years, at Catletts Station, Virginia, and moved to Falmouth, Va. He was assigned to a cavalry brigade on the last of May, and moved into the Shenandoah Valley, reaching Fort Royal, June 1, and participated in the campaign against Jackson. He reached Manassas, June 25, and the 29th was assigned to the 3d Corps, Army of Virginia, and participated in the operations, under Pope. He then encamped at Munson's Hill, and later participated in the Fredericksburg campaign, and encamped at Belle Plain Landing. He then participated in the Chancellorsville campaign, serving in the 2d Div. Cav. Corps, 2d Brig. And in the Gettysburg campaign, 1st Brig., 2d Div. He served in Sheridan's Cav. Corps in the Wilderness campaign, and participated in all the operations of the cavalry of the army of the Potomac until the surrender of Lee. On September 9, 1864, he was transferred to Co. D. He was injured by being thrown from his horse in a cavalry charge at Upperville, Va., June 18, 1863, was captured by Mosby's men, near Warrenton, Va., and after eight days' journeying towards Andersonville prison, escaped from the guards at night while they were asleep, and returned to his command, after an absence of sixteen days. On his way back he was re-captured by the Confederates, but that was a time when his life was more sacred than the truth, and he deceived his captors by the story that he was a deserter, whereupon they commended his manly attitude and permitted him to go on his dangerous journey. Before letting him go, however, they christened him a faithful deserter, by putting the muzzle of a loaded revolver in his mouth, to impress him with his weakness in the hands of the Confederacy. At Gettysburg he was dispatch carrier for the staff of General Meade, and had two horses shot from under him in that battle, and lost the hearing of one ear by the concussion of a cannon. At Salem, December 24, 1863, he captured two Confederate officers. At Cold Harbor he received a gunshot wound in the left leg; at Hatches' Run he led the charge into the rebel works, and alone, captured three rebel officers, for which act he received a special furlough from Gen. Meade. The last nine months of his service he was detailed with eleven others as advance guard of the brigade. During his service he had four horses shot from under him. He participated in over fifty actions, and was honorably mustered out April 25, 1865, in front of Petersburg. At the close of the war he started for Salt Lake City, with a prairie train, but stopped at Fort Riley, and returned to Jefferson, Mo., where he entered the employ of the Missouri and Pacific R. R. Company, as fireman, and remained one year. He then spent over a year in Missouri hunting, and returned to Baltimore, and remained a short time, when he came to Pennsylvania and fire on the P. & E. R. R. From there he went to Chillicothe, Ohio, as fireman on the Cincinnati and Marietta R. R., for a short time, when he was promoted to engineer. He then returned to the P. & E., and accepted a position as fireman. In 1881 he entered the employ of H. F. Watson & Co., of Erie, as chief engineer, and remained six years. He then entered the employ of the Erie Rubber Company as chief engineer, where he remained three years. In 1890, he accepted his present position, where he has charge of the entire propelling machinery, with several assistants. Mr. Sutton was married in 1875, to Miss Mary Hassett, of Warren, Pa. They have had eight children, one of whom is living, John Henry, born January 24, 1887. Mr. Sutton is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Stationary Engineers, K. O. T. M., Knights of the Golden Eagle, the Union Veteran Legion, the Improved Order of Red Men and the United Workmen. Politically he has always been a Republican.

George W. Tompkins (deceased), late of Erie, Pa., was a native of Delhi, Delaware county, N. Y., born September 18, 1834, a son of Jacob and Mary (Hull) Tompkins, the former a native of Long Island and the latter of Litchfield county, Connecticut. The Tompkins family moved to Wesleyville when George W. was about one year old, where the mother died November 3, 1865, aged 72 years, and the father May 24, 1871, aged 81 years. They were the parents of six children: Elnathan Hull, born February 18, 1839, died June 1, 1876; known as the "King of Lake Erie," where he was employed in various capacities for sixteen years, two years of which were spent on the U. S. S., "Michigan." In the autumn of 1865 he entered the employ of the P. & E. R. R. at Corry. He served as a faithful employe of that company until the time of his death, which occurred November 27, 1894. He was one of the most successful and experienced conductors on the road, and had worked for the company nearly as long as any man in a like employment on the Western division of the P. & E. R. R. He was married January 16, 1867, to Miss Anna J., daughter of Jeremiah and Jane (Vaple) Akerly, of Greene township, Erie county, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Tompkins were parents of five children: William, a well-known carpenter and builder of Erie, who was reared and educated in Erie and commenced the carpenter's trade when 17 years old and has successfully followed it since; Herbert George, carpenter; Nellie Y.; Marion Louisa and Merrick W. The family reside on East Eighteenth street and are members of the Episcopal Church.

Nickolas Leuschen, owner and proprietor of the Mystic Steam Renovating Works, Erie, Pa., was born in Buffalo, N. Y., May 19, 1847. He is a son of Mathias and Katherina (Uhlmann) Leuschen, the former a native of Prussia and the latter of Wurtemberg, Germany, who came to America July 6, 1845. The father was a Prussian soldier. He emigrated to America in 1843 and settled in Buffalo, where he was married February 23, 1846, and June 9, 1849, came to Erie, where he died August 5, 1869. His wife now resides in Erie. They were the parents of ten children, viz.: Nickolas, our subject; Peter, Erie, Pa.; Elizabeth, now Mrs. Loth Mader, Erie; Mary Magdalena, Mrs. Frank Wuenschel, Erie; George (deceased); Mary (deceased); John (deceased); Margaret (deceased); Frank, Erie; Henry, marine engineer, Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Leuschen was reared and educated in Erie, and when a boy followed various occupations and finally learned the potter's trade with Webb & Kellogg, Erie, Pa. He enlisted July 29, 1864, in the United States navy, and served in the West Gulf Squadron, under Admiral Thatcher, until the close of the war. He was then sent to the Pacific coast to serve on the U. S. S. "Lancaster," which was then at Panama. During his service on board this vessel he went to the Sandwich Islands, and from there to San Francisco. On May 28, 1866 he was transferred to the U. S. S. "Saranac," which was under command of Gustavus H. Scott, a cousin of William L. Scott. This vessel was ordered north in the interest of the American whalers, and was compelled to put in at Puget Sound on account of a leak, as a result of a three days' storm. While here their orders were countermanded, the old "Shenandoah," the terror of the American seamen, which they were after, having been captured in the meantime. After making a cruise of the Sound they proceeded to San Francisco, and from there were ordered to the Mexican coast to re-capture the Keokuk, which had been taken as a contraband of war. After capturing their prize they returned to San Francisco and again cruised along the coast from San Francisco to Panama, after which they again returned to San Francisco, where he was discharged July 28, 1867, and given transportation to Erie. While Mr. Leuschen was in the service he took a complete course in navigation, under the private instruction of an officer who had taken a particular fancy to him. When he returned to Erie he resumed work at the potter's trade, which he followed a short time, when he commenced work at the carpenter's trade, which he followed until 1871, and then he went to Foxburg and clerked in a hotel for nearly a year. Returning to Erie, he entered the employ of Diefendorf & Gross, in the upholstery business, and, in 1876, engaged in his present business. In 1883, in company with his brother, Peter, he started the first steam renovating works in Erie. He is not only the oldest established in his line in Erie, but the leader. He was married April 28, 1873, to Miss Rosina E. Richter, of Erie, a native of Strasburg, Germany. She died March 13, 1885, leaving no children. Mr. Leuschen was married again March 9, 1892, to Miss Katie E. Richter. They have two children, viz.: Peter Alphonso and Marie Lorena. Mr. Leuschen is a member of the St. Benedictus Society; Robert W. Scott Post, G. A. R., of which he was commander three years; the Elks; the Mannerchor Society; an active member of the Erie Yacht Club, and has always been a very active Democrat and hard worker for the party. He was one of the organizers of the Democratic Society of Erie. In 1894 he was a candidate for the Legislature on the Democratic ticket.

J. M. Mc Nerney, chief engineer for the H. F. Watson Paper Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Dunkirk, N. Y., May 18, 1864. He is a son of Michael and Nora (Maloney) Mc Nerney, natives of Ireland, and now residents of Dunkirk. J. M. is the eldest of a family of ten children. He was reared in Dunkirk, where he received a common school education. When he was 13 years of age he engaged as a teamster, which he followed about five years, when he entered the employ of the Brooks Locomotive Works at Dunkirk. He worked there two years in the forging department. He then came to Erie and secured a position with the Watson Paper Company as fireman, and shortly afterward was made one of the assistant engineers. In 1889 he was appointed chief engineer of the entire establishment. Mr. Mc Nerney has six assistant engineers and twenty firemen under his charge. The machinery which he has charge of aggregates over three thousand horse power. He was married in February, 1883, to Miss Mary E. Marcus, of Dunkirk. They have two children, Herbert and Edward. Mr. Mc Nerney is a member of the National Association of Engineers and of the K. O. T. M.

George Byron Meeker, retail dealer in fresh and salt meats, 502 Walnut street, Erie, Pa., born in McKean township, Erie county, Pa., January 24, 1856, is a son of Gideon Meeker, a farmer of Strerrettania, who was born in McKean township, a son of John O. Meeker, who was born in New Jersey May 14, 1785, and was married October 26, 1813, to Jerusha Wilcox, born in Massachusetts July 30, 1797. They were the parents of eleven children, viz.: William C., Sarah A., Gideon, Lois S., Lucinda, Charles A., John, Isaac N. (deceased), Clarinda J., Mary R. and Louise E. Of this family Charles A. and Isaac N. were soldiers in the war of the rebellion; the former was a private in the 83d Reg., P. V. I., wounded and died in hospital October 4, 1862; the latter was in an Ohio regiment, but his last year was in the marine service on the Alabama river. John Oliver Meeker was a soldier in the war of 1812-14, and was stationed at Erie under Capt. Foster; he was one of McKean township's earliest pioneer settlers, and died March 30, 1854. His wife died January 10, 1830. Gideon Meeker married, April 15, 1852, Fanny Rhodes, born March 10, 1830, daughter of Jacob and Annie (Rhorer) Rhodes, natives of this state. Nine children were born to this union, viz.: Mary L., Mrs. R. S. Dunn, of North East; Emma A., Mrs. G. T. Blatz, of McKean township; George B., John O. (deceased), Gideon E., a carpenter for the L. S. & M. S. R. R., resides in Erie; William P., proprietor of a drug store, McKean, Erie county; Martha J., Clarence A., sells pianos and organs on the road and resides in Oil City, and Glenn E. Mr. Meeker owns and operates an excellent farm of 130 acres one mile from Strerrettania. Himself and wife are members of the Methodist Church, and in politics he is a Republican. George B. Meeker received a common school education and worked on the home farm until 21 years of age. He then followed butchering two years, after which he bought a farm in McKean township and continued farming till 1893, when he sold his farm and moved to Erie and engaged in the meat business at 410 West Eighth street, for a few months, and in June of that year moved his business to his present location, where he has since conducted a large and lucrative business, enjoying the patronage of the best people of that section of the city. He makes a specialty of Swift's dressed meats and gives the business his personal attention. He was married January 8, 1879, to Miss Belle, daughter of Charles Osborn, of Summit township, and to them have been born two children, Fannie M. and Pearl A. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Meeker was for three years a school director, during his residence in McKean township. He is an ardent supporter of the Republican party. Mr. Meeker built his comfortable home at 414 Walnut street in 1894.

Frank A. Blum, dealer in fresh and salt meats, 1621 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in Baden, Ger-

Charles Burdett Chidester, physician and surgeon, Erie, Pa., born in Parkman, Ohio, October 17, 1858, was educated at Hiram College; at the Medical Department of the University of Michigan, and at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, Md., from which last he was graduated March 4, 1881. He practiced medicine in Ohio until 1890. On the 13th of November, 1884, he married Minnie, second daughter of Waterman S. and Caroline B. Hodges, of Middlefield, Ohio. They had two children: Rose Ann, born July 15, 1886, died August 8, 1886, and Frank Charles, born May 5, 1888, died May 16, 1888. Mrs. Chidester died May 12, 1888. Her memory will always be dear to a large circle of friends, by whom she was loved and admired for her vivacity and refinement of manner, and a remarkable sweetness of disposition. Her ancestors were pioneers in Middlefield, from North Bradford, Conn. He was married February 19, 1889, to Mrs. Ella J. Durban (nee Vance), of Collingwood, Ohio; born July 16, 1850, at Fairview, Erie county, Pa., and he removed to Erie in 1890, where he now has an extended and lucrative practice. He is a member of the Ohio State Medical Association and one of the founders of the Geauga County Medical Society, serving as its president two terms.

They have two daughters—Minnie Ada, born December 25, 1889, at Burton, Ohio, and Mabel Olivia, born May 11, 1891, at Erie, Pa.

Mrs. Chidester's great-grandfather was Patrick Vance, who settled in Erie county, in 1797. His son, Thomas Vance, lived on a farm near Fairview, a part of which is still in possession of Mrs. Chidester. He had three children: Thomas Vance, jr., who afterward lived on the farm; Jane, who married Franklin Willis, of Fairview, April 14, 1842; and Margaret, who died unmarried. Thomas Vance, jr., born July 16, 1821, married Elizabeth Olivia Weidler, February 17, 1848, died December 7, 1887. She was born August 21, 1829, and died February 18, 1855. They are buried at Fairview, Erie county, Pa. Her maternal grandfather, Daniel Weidler, a pioneer in Erie county, was born in Lancaster, Pa., February 12, 1805, and married September 15, 1827, Catherine Frissler, in Lancaster. He died September 3, 1874; she died May 19, 1855. They are buried in Fairview. Their children were Elizabeth Olivia (born August 21, 1829, died February 18, 1855), Michael George, Samuel, Daniel, Samuel S., Anna Amelia, Catherine Atlanta, John A. and Mary A.

Dr. Chidester is the son of Julius and Eliza Harriet (Mastick) Chidester, whose other children were Mary Eliza, born at Canfield, Ohio, June 28, 1854, married Andrew L. Caryl, of Marysville, Ohio, and William

A., born at Parkman, Ohio, January 5, 1861, died at Claridon, Ohio, November 8, 1875.

Julius Chidester, born in Canfield, Mahoning county, February 21, 1826, was the son of Erastus and Lydia (Sackett) Chidester, besides whom three brothers and two sisters reached maturity. He married at Burton, September 24, 1850, Eliza Harriet Mastick, of Claridon, Ohio, and went to housekeeping at Canfield; they lived here two years, and in Geauga county twenty-three years engaged in stock business—then took a flock of 500 sheep to Mercer county, Illinois. After arrival there wolves were very savage, many times attacking the sheep in droves, and were with difficulty beaten off with dogs and guns. Here he also engaged in shipping stock to Chicago. At this time he resides with his wife on a farm near Fairview, Erie county, Pa. While a resident of Claridon, Ohio, he was township officer eight years; also a member of the board of Geauga County Agricultural Society eight years.

Eliza Harriet (Mastick) Chidester was born in Claridon, Geauga Co., Ohio, May 16, 1831, daughter of Owen Mastick, who was born in Grafton, Vt., December 20, 1802; married, January 3, 1830, Harriet, daughter of Ephraim and Susannah Cook. He died in Tampa, Fla., December 20, 1884. Their other children were: Maryett Lydia Lavinia, Julius Cook, and Owen Burdell.

Owen Mastick, son of Nathaniel Mastick and Lydia (Caryl) Mastick, was born in Norfolk county, Mass., July 8, 1772. His wife, Lydia Caryl, was born in Norfolk, Mass., February 22, 1773, and died in 1857. He was a leader in his county, and the first to import Morgan and Blackhawk horses and Durham cattle into Ohio. For seven years he was justice of the peace, ten years township trustee, a school director and militia captain.

John Mastick, father of Nathaniel, was the only son of John Salter, of a wealthy Holland family, born in 1717, was stolen by a British press-gang at the age of nine years, put aboard of a man-of-war, and held in the service nine years. Taking advantage of the first opportunity to escape when the ship lay in Boston harbor, he "swapped" clothes with a stone-mason, assumed the name of John Mastick, and though pursued and wounded escaped, settled, and married Sarah _____, who was born in Farmington, Mass., and raised a family. An advertisement in after years appeared in a New York paper for the heirs of this Holland house. His eldest son gathered together the proofs, and started for Europe, but was never heard from.

Harriet (Cook) Mastick, the third child in a family of four sons and five daughters, was born September 27, 1804. She died May 20, 1894, aged ninety, and was buried at Ridgeville, Ind. Her mother, Susannah Ives, was married December 16, 1779, to Ephraim Cook, who was born December 21, 1775, in Cheshire, Conn., son of Elam Cook, born in 1733, in Cheshire, Conn., son of Capt. Ephraim Cook, born in 1704, in Cheshire, Conn., son of Samuel Cook, who came from England.

Erastus Chidester was one of seven brothers—Hezekiah, Philo, Erastus, William Rush, Julius, Velorus and Royal Canfield; all but the last were born at Cornwall Bridge, Conn. His birth was on March 23, 1789, son of William and Martha (Dean) Chidester. He married Lydia Sackett, at Canfield, Ohio, in 1813, and they raised a family of three sons—Clark, Julius, and William N.—and two daughters—Caroline and Martha. He moved to Richland Grove, now Swedonia, Mercer county, Ill., where they celebrated their golden wedding in the fall of 1863, and here resided till his death, March 10, 1866. His wife, Lydia Sackett, who survived him several years, was born November 1, 1790, afterwards went with her eldest son, Clark Chidester, to Fairfield, Jefferson county, Iowa, where she died February 23, 1872, at the mature age of eighty-two years, and was buried at Brookville, Jefferson county, Iowa.

William Chidester, born in Williamstown, Mass., in 1757, was son of William Chidester, who, with his brother Jonathan, emigrated from Wales to America. The latter settled in New Jersey, the former in Williamstown, Mass. When quite young the Indians attacked the town, killed a number of the inhabitants and carried away several women and children, among whom was Mrs. Carter, sister-in-law of William, sr. Together with Mr. Carter and others he followed their trail, and overtook them near Wilkesbarre, Pa., where a battle ensued, and both were killed. William, jr., soon after went to live with his uncle, Hezekiah Carter, who resided in Cornwall, Litchfield county, Conn., and was brought up by him. He married Chloe Peck, in 1779, by whom he had one son; but his wife and son died in less than two years.

The following account of the father, William Chidester, and his journey to the then West, is from the lips of his son Erastus: "William Chidester was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, at first drafted as a militiaman under Samuel Canfield, of New Milford, Conn. He enlisted in the company of Capt. Theo. Woodbridge, Eleventh Connecticut line, under command of Col. Honan Swift, in which he served four years. He participated in the battles of Brandywine and Monmouth. At the expiration of his term, he was discharged, returned to Cornwall, and married Martha, daughter of Thomas Dean, of that place. He began keeping house near Cornwall Bridge, and followed his trade of tailor here for three years. He then bought a nearby farm on which he lived until 1802, when he exchanged it for land in Canfield in what was then called New Connecticut in the Northwest Territory, later known as the Western Reserve, State of Ohio. He left Cornwall April 27, 1802, arriving at his destination, Canfield, Ohio, June 2. His large family and household goods and stores were conveyed in two wagons, one drawn by a team of horses, the other by oxen, with a led cow. His route was up the Hudson to Newburg, where he crossed in a pirogue, at one load. Thence proceeded to Easton on the Delaware, which was crossed in a flat-boat, in two loads; thence by a then lonesome and dangerous road, over the Allegheny Mountains to Fort Pitt; crossing the Monongahela here, they journeyed down the south bank, over a mere trail in the rough hills to Beavertown. They forded the Ohio about a mile and a half below, thence reached Canfield, Ohio, in two and one-half days. He selected plot No. 15 first division in the woods, the next house west of his being then fifteen miles distant. Three years afterward he removed to plot No. 18 in the third division, where he lived, and in 1811 built a frame house for his son Royal Canfield Chidester, the first white child born in that settlement. After the admission of Ohio in 1803, he was elected justice of the peace, which office he held until his death, February 26, 1813. He also served as township trustee, and commissioner of Trumbull county. His wife Martha survived him a number of years, and drew a pension, on account of his services in the Revolution."

C. B. Childs U. S.

many, October 9, 1838, a son of the late John and Elizabeth (Zimmerman) Blum, the former a carpenter by trade. Frank A. received a common school education, and when 17 years of age became apprenticed to a dealer and handler of meats. He followed this business in his native country until May, 1873, when he came to the United States, and, locating in Erie, engaged two years at his trade, and in the spring of 1875 opened a market on Peach street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth, which he operated for three years, when he sold out and bought a place on Peach, west side, above Fifteenth street, where he conducted a market for ten years. He sold this and opened an establishment at 749 East Eighteenth street, operating it for seven and one-half years, when he moved to his present location, which he had built in 1893. He also owns the building known as 1617 Peach street. Mr. Blum was married, October 6, 1875, to Miss Carrie Armbruster, and to them have been born four children: John K., Bertha, Mary and Frank. The family are members of the German Catholic Church. Mr. Blum served three years in the common council, from the Fifth ward. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., and in politics is a Democrat. His place of business is 24 x 70 feet, and he employs two men and does a large and lucrative business, making a specialty of domestic meats. Residence 1621 Peach street, upstairs.

David P. Robbins, M. D., journalist and writer, was born in Dearborn county, Indiana, November 3, 1845, son of Jeremiah and Clarendia (Johnson) Robbins. His paternal grandfather, Peter Robbins, of English descent, was born in Wheatfield, Conn., in 1755, served as aid-de-camp to Gen. Washington in the struggle for independence, after which he married a Welsh lady and located in western New York, where he practiced medicine and compiled a large treatise on the "Vegetable Materia Medica," having continued in active business to the age of 96 years. He left a large family of descendants in the Empire State. Jeremiah, the father of David P., with several other families, embarked on a flatboat at Olean, N. Y., in 1835, six weeks later landing at Vevay, Ind. He was a brick manufacturer, farmer, and practiced eclectic medicine. Our subject was youngest of a family of twelve children, and had good educational advantages in childhood. He was an industrious scholar, and before the age of 15 served as a medical student in his father's office, later taking a course at the Fairview Academy, and for a year attending the seminary at Mt. Sterling, Ind. The Rebellion coming on and guerrillas infesting the border, Mr. Robbins enlisted in the "Home Guard" service of Southern Indiana, and was several times called to arms in defense of the border. He was in the fight against the intrepid guerrilla, John Morgan, who, with 5,000 Confederates, raided across Indiana and Ohio. Before the age of 18 years, he enlisted in the 117th Reg., I. V., participating in the forced marches and sharp skirmishes through Kentucky and Tennessee. Overcome by hardships and prostrated by fever, late in October, '63, he was removed from Greenville, Tenn., to the hospital at Knoxville, where he made a speedy recovery, and his medical knowledge soon gave him a place as hospital steward, in which capacity he served during the trying times of the Longstreet siege. Receiving his discharge in 1864, he proceeded to the Michigan University at Ann Arbor, from whence he was graduated with the degree of M. D., March 29, 1866, receiving the highest honors of his class, when but little past 20 years of age. The following summer he practiced in Osgood, Ind. On his 21st birthday anniversary, November 3, 1866, Mr. Robbins was married to Rose E. Durham, of Cambridgeboro, Pa., who was also 21 years of age on her wedding day. Mrs. Robbins' paternal grandparents, James Durham and Moor Fullerton, located in Crawford county, in 1797, and her maternal grandparents, Pilgrim F. Isherwood, settled in LeBoeuf township, Erie county, the same year, and his future wife, Rebecca Allford, came to McLallen's Corners, Erie county, in 1811. Her father and mother were born, married, and spent long lives at Isherwood's Corners, between Cambridge and Waterford. After his marriage, Dr. Robbins located for practice at Mill Village, and in 1869 removed to Cambridge, where in April, 1872, he commenced the weekly Index, and has since largely been engaged in journalism. Defective vision caused him to make a tour to the Rocky Mountains in 1877, and the following year he inaugurated a bureau of correspondence, which was used for several years by numerous northern papers. After selling the Cambridge Index, he purchased the Union City Times, which was burned April 24, 1879, but at once replaced. While owner of this office, he started branch papers at Wattsburg and Waterford, but his vision being again threatened, he removed to Erie in 1880 and entered the drug trade. For five years he was again in medical pursuits, practicing for a year or two in the Clarendon oil fields, while owning a drug business in Erie. In 1885, for sanitary reasons, he located in the South, and commenced publishing a health magazine in Orlando, Fla. The "Health and Happiness," met with good success and had many Northern subscribers, when its career was closed by the yellow fever epidemic. Dr. Robbins returned to Erie in the summer of 1888, and soon became the business manager of the Morning Dispatch office, where he continued until declining health compelled his resignation in 1891, since which time he has been continuously engaged in historical work. Politically, Dr. Robbins has always been independent, voting for men and measures, instead of blindly adhering to party. Religiously, he is also of independent, humanitarian or liberal belief, and has taken a great interest in fraternal and beneficiary orders. He is a member of the different Masonic bodies, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, and a dozen other orders, in most of which he has passed the chairs and held other positions of honor. Dr. Robbins and wife have four children: Cora L. (wife of George L. Bowers, engineer of the Downing Building), who has a well-earned reputation in portrait and other art work; their children are Ruth and Everett; Dwight J. Robbins, secretary and editor of the Advertiser Printing Company, Limited, married to Jennie Snyder, have two children, Bertha Marcella and infant daughter, Wilson S. Robbins, printer, formerly connected with the Advertiser Company, married to Clara Miller, have one child, Helena C. Robbins, student at the grammar school.

Edward Driscoll, contractor, residence 219 French street, Erie, Pa., was born in county Cork, Ireland, June 22, 1842, a son of Dennis and Margaret (Fleming) Driscoll, both natives of county Cork. The former died in Ireland in 1869, and the latter in Chicago in 1874. Edward Driscoll received a common school education, worked on the farm, and followed fishing to the 24th year of his age, when he came to America, and after working two months in New York city, he came to Erie July 1, 1866, and went to work at the docks unloading lumber from barges by contract; this he followed till 1880, when he began building sewers by contract for the city of Erie, and has since followed that business, having built miles of the sewers in this city. He was married January 25, 1875, to Miss Johanna, daughter of Michael Holland, of Ireland. They are members of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, and Mr. Driscoll is a member of the C. M. B. A. He built his home in the fall of 1889, and in addition, owns two houses on East Second street, between French and Holland. In politics this gentleman is a Democrat, and is one of Erie's well-known and successful Irish citizens.

William F. Reichert, retail dealer in fresh and salt meats, market and residence 602 West Eighteenth street, Erie, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, January 31, 1852, son of Simon and Dora (Lang) Reichert, the former born in Wurtemberg, May 17, 1802, the latter born in the same place October 19, 1813. They were married July 9, 1837. He was a farmer in his native country, and in 1854 came to the United States and located in Girard, Erie county, Pa., where he worked at farming till his death, which occurred January 25, 1888, and where his widow still resides. To Mr. and Mrs. Reichert were born ten children: Caroline, born November 20, 1839; Christ, born October 31, 1840; Jacob, born February 3, 1843, died December 27, 1882; Simon, born April 3, 1845, died December 27, 1847; Dora C., born October 19, 1846, died October 7, 1847; Charles A., born December 18, 1847, died January 3, 1848; Christina, born February 6, 1849, died March 7, 1849; William F.; Louis, born November 5, 1856, died November 8, 1856, and Charles, born January 20, 1858. William F. Reichert was 2 years of age when the family located in Erie county. He received his education in the public schools and Girard Academy, and when 14 years of age began working as a farm hand, following that occupation for four years. He then went to work for Jacob Lang, in the meat business in Girard, where he remained two years, when he removed to Erie, February 6, 1872, and worked for Charles Petrie at the meat business for one year; then he and Philip Busche opened a market on Peach street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth, conducting it two years; they then moved to Sassafras street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth, and operated a market one year longer, when Mr. Reichert withdrew from the firm and opened a market at 602 West Eighteenth street where he has since enjoyed a large and lucrative trade. He was married May 2, 1876, to Miss Anna M., daughter of George Flickinger, of Erie, and to them have been born two children: George W., employed in the market, and Carrie D. The family are members of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church. Mr. Reichert is a member of the A. O. U. W. and St. John's Benevolent Association, and in politics is a Republican.

Leemhuis Bros. (P. L. and F. G.), Erie, are the sons of Rev. E. Leemhuis, a German Lutheran minister, now deceased, and Etta (Bolsuums) Leemhuis, also deceased, who came from Hanover, Germany, about 1846, settling in Terre Haute, Ind., in 1876. They came to Erie, where the brothers, P. L. and F. G., have since engaged in the business of carriage and wagon building. Peter L. was born April 18, 1851, at Lafayette, Ind., and married, February 10, 1880, Miss Etta Hirt, of Erie. Four children bless this union: Katrina, Karl, Miriam and Peter L., jr. He has been for fourteen years a deacon in the Lutheran Memorial Church; was councilman from the First ward for five years, and, like his brother, is a staunch Republican, he being now president of the First Ward Republican Club. F. G. was born in December, 1854, in Pittsburg. He married Mary Luke, of North East, May 30, 1880; they have two children, Walter and Roland. Their present business was started in July, 1876, and includes the manufacture and repair of all kinds of carriages and wagons. Most of their work is custom-made, and they are able to build a conveyance of any description, great care being taken to have the work first-class in every respect. This integrity of purpose, to have nothing but fine work, has made them very successful in their business, and they may well be claimed with Erie's prosperous manufacturers. Every dollar they possess has been earned by hard work; besides, they have given work to some fifteen hands, which they employ.

Frank P. Siegel, wholesale and retail dealer in fresh and salt meats, 508 West Twelfth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, November 19, 1868, a son of Frank and Elizabeth (Miller) Siegel, both natives of Germany. They came to the United States in 1865, and, after living two years in New York city, came to Erie, where they now reside. Mr. Siegel being employed at the Malleable Iron Works. To them were born eleven children, seven of whom are living, viz.: Pauline, wife of John Eisworth, of Erie; Frank; Edward, proprietor of a meat market at Twenty-third and Myrtle streets; Louis, in the employ of his brother Frank; Jacob, also in his brother Frank's employ; Catherine and Abellonia, both at home. The family are members of the German Catholic Church (St. Joseph's), and in politics Mr. Siegel is a Democrat. Frank P. Siegel received his education in St. Joseph's parochial school, and, when 13 years of age, began the meat business, in the employ of C. B. Lawrence, with whom he worked for three years; he then worked one year for Emanuel Lawrence; then four years for Frederick C. Meiser, and, in the spring of 1888, opened a market for himself at Twenty-second and Peach streets, which he conducted for two years. He then went to Meadville and worked at the business one year, when he returned to Erie and opened his present place, 508 West Twelfth street, as a retail market. One year later he added the wholesale feature, and has since enjoyed a large and lucrative business. He kills his own meats, buys them all in the immediate neighborhood, and makes a special feature of the marine trade. He was united in marriage, February 7, 1895, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Michael Meyer, of Erie. They are members of St. Peter's Cathedral, and he is a member of the Butchers' Protective Association, and the Butchers' Association, No. 1. In politics he is a Democrat.

George Brown, retail dealer in fresh and salt meats, 323 Myrtle street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie April 23, 1859, is a son of George and Mary (Huber)

Brown. George Brown, sr., born in Germany in 1815, came to the United States in 1844 and located at Erie, where he engaged in the butchering business, following it until the time of his death, which occurred November 20, 1893. He married soon after his arrival in America Miss Mary Huber, and to them were born four children: Christina (deceased), Mary (deceased), Elizabeth and George, who received a common school education in the public schools of Erie, and when 16 years of age embarked in the butchering business, buying and slaughtering for the market then operated by his mother. The business was so conducted to the death of Mrs. Brown, January 20, 1892, when he took the management. Mr. Brown married April 4, 1877, Miss Ruth C., daughter of Obediah Spencer, of Erie, and to them have been born seven children: George O., works for his father in the market; Mary E., Edna H., Bertha A., Frank B., Carl C. and Ezma K. The family are members of the Episcopal Church and Mr. Brown is a member of the K. of P. and in politics is a Republican. He is one of the successful meat dealers of Erie, having from the first (1869) enjoyed a large and lucrative trade among the leading people in his vicinity. He employs two men and gives the business his personal attention.

Philander Edson (deceased) was born in Athens, Pa., September 26, 1828. He is a son of Chelous and Julian Bloomfield Edson. He was a wagonmaker by trade and served his apprenticeship in Bloomfield, Crawford county, Pa., where he was reared, educated and followed his trade until he accumulated enough capital to engage in business. He went to Townville, Pa., in a general store and later went to Erie and engaged in the dry goods business in partnership with G. T. Churchill. They also operated a cloak factory and several branch dry goods stores. In 1875 he went to Jamestown, Pa., in the general mercantile business, where he remained six years. In 1883 he went to Jackson, Mich., and was engaged there in the mercantile business until 1886, when he returned to Erie. He was a member of the Baptist Church, in which he was an active worker, and was a deacon in the First Baptist Church of Erie for several years. He was also superintendent of the Baptist Sunday-school and of the North Star Mission, and was for a long time leader of the choir. Mr. Edson never took any active part in politics, although he was elected justice of the peace in Crawford county and served one term. He was married October 6, 1850, to Miss Sally Ann Bardsley, of Crawford county. They had four children, viz.: Edward (deceased), Emma (deceased), W. N., Erie, Pa., and Lulu (deceased). Mrs. Edson died March 29, 1876, and he afterward married Miss Jennie Ross, of Erie, Pa., a native of New York State. To this union was born one child, Mable, now of Oil City, Pa. Mr. Edson died December 17, 1894, and his wife December 11, 1894. W. N. Edson, assistant cashier for Armour & Co., Erie, Pa., was born in Erie September 2, 1867. He was educated in the public schools of Erie and Jamestown, N. Y., and when the family removed to Jackson, Mich., he ran a tobacco store at that place one year. He then went to Parma, Mich., as agent for the American Express Company, where he remained until 1886, when he returned to Erie with his parents. He then served an apprenticeship at the machinist's trade with the Stearns Manufacturing Company, and later had charge of their store rooms and acted as shipping clerk until the fall of 1894, when he entered the employ of Armour & Co. in his present capacity.

Frederick W. Hale, manager of the Erie Branch Provision House of Armour & Co., 1316 Sassafras street, Erie, Pa., was born in Brantford, Ontario, Canada, February 12, 1862. He received his early education in the public schools and Collegiate Institute at Brantford, Ontario, and in 1878 went to Chicago to work for W. C. Hatley in the pork packing business, remaining in his employ till 1881, when he established a business of his own as the Hale Packing Company, continuing for five years, and then accepted a position with Armour & Co. as manager of their Sandusky branch, where he remained one year and was transferred to Erie as manager of the Erie branch, August 15, 1893. Mr. Hale was married November 11, 1885, to Miss Kate, daughter of Samuel Coffman, of Hyde Park, Chicago, and to them have been born two children: Geraldine and Samuel. Mr. and Mrs. Hale attend the Church of Christ. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum. The family reside at 455 West Seventh street.

John J. McMahon, chief of the Erie fire department, residence 314 West Fifth street, Erie, Pa., born in Erie March 27, 1857, a son of Michael and Mary (Lehan) McMahon. He was educated in the public schools of Erie, and when 12 years of age began a sailor's life as a boy before the mast on Lake Erie, working as such for two years, when he began firing a tug boat, so continuing for two years. In the spring of 1873 he was granted an engineer's certificate and served as engineer till 1877, when he took charge of a tug as captain from the port of Toledo for two years, when he again accepted a position as engineer, serving till 1885. June 1, 1885, he was appointed an engineer for the Erie fire department at No. 1 engine house, serving till January 15, 1894, when he was promoted to the position of chief of the fire department. Chief McMahon is the right man in the right place. He has done much to bring the department up to the standard of excellence it enjoys to-day. Through his efforts the firemen have been uniformed. On his recommendation two new engine houses are about to be built. New and improved fire alarm boxes, with key protectors, have been added; a twenty-five foot ladder and two six-gallon Babcock fire extinguishers have been purchased for each horse carriage; three new engines, a Manning, an American and a sixty-gallon Holloway Chemical engine have been secured. He has framed and adopted new rules and regulations for the department, and as the father of the civil service rule, necessitating the passing of rigid examinations, medical, mental and athletic, in order to be appointed a fireman. These and numerous other features in the line of improvement were brought about by Chief McMahon, and have made the Erie fire department recognized as one of the best in Pennsylvania. Mr. McMahon was married August 15, 1878, to Miss Anna, daughter of Isaac Bowers, of Erie, and to them have been born nine children: Anna (deceased), Josephine, John, Edward, Daniel, Mary, Valentine (deceased), Robert and Maurice. The family are members of St. Patrick's Catholic Church. Chief McMahon is a member of the C. M. B. A., the Marine Engineers' Benevolent Association, and in politics is independent.

Louis E. Hubbard, until recently of the firm of Hubbard & Laws, dealers in meats, 412 West Eighth street, was born in Erie, August 13, 1862, and is a son of Richard B. and Mary E. (Snell) Hubbard. Louis E. received his education in the public schools of Erie, and when 19 years of age, entered the employ of T. M. Nagle, and later found employment with the Stearnes Manufacturing Company, where he spent four years in learning the machinist's trade. He then worked for the Erie Engine Works for six years, and then moved to Oregon, and went in partnership with Mr. D. S. Keep, as Keep & Hubbard; they opened and operated the Commercial Bank, at Cottage Grove, for two and one-half years. Mr. Hubbard sold his interest, and returned to Erie, and January 6, 1894, in connection with Harry Laws, opened in the meat trade. The market operated by this firm was in all particulars an up-to-date business house. They personally waited on all customers, and kept constantly on hand a full and choice variety of fresh, smoked, salt and canned meats, fish, poultry and game, and by close attention to business built up a large and lucrative trade. He disposed of his interest to his partner in 1895. Mr. Hubbard was married July 18, 1887, to Miss Mary Emma, daughter of Leander Dobbins, and to them have been born two children: Mateel E., born September 16, 1888, and Richard L., born March 21, 1893. The family attend the First M. E. Church. Mr. Hubbard is a member of the K. of P. and Royal Arcanum.

Harry W. Laws, of the firm of Hubbard & Laws, dealers in fish and salt meats, 412 West Eighth street, Erie, Pa., born in London, England, November 3, 1866, is a son of William and Elizabeth (Patten) Laws, both natives of England. William Laws was a meat cutter by trade, and with his family came to America about 1870, and located in Erie, where he followed his trade for about fifteen years, and where Mrs. Laws and the children still reside. There were eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Laws: William, employed by the Black Manufacturing Company; Elizabeth, wife of Joseph Fletcher, of Erie; Annie, bookkeeper for Kellogg & Yates, Chicago; Harry W.; Katie, a milliner; Minnie, clerk in the Bon-Ton millinery store; Frank, employed in a restaurant, and Edith, wife of George Matthews, of Wellsburg, Pa. Harry W. Laws received his education in the public schools of Erie, and when 14 years of age went to work for his father in the meat business, remaining five years. He then worked for seven years for the Erie Malleable Iron Company, and then opened a meat market at Fourth and Sasfras streets, continuing in the business for one year, when he sold out and again entered the employ of the Malleable Iron Company, remaining several months, when he again engaged in the meat business. January 6, 1894, he formed a partnership with Louis E. Hubbard, and opened the present business, which the firm conducted till November 1, 1895, when Mr. Laws assumed entire control of the business. He handles a full line of fresh and salt meats, canned goods, game and fish, and enjoys a large share of the best patronage of Erie. The Laws family are members of the English Lutheran Church, and in politics Mr. Laws is Independent.

Philip Kuch, wholesale and retail dealer in fresh and smoked meats, 431 State street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, May 14, 1854, is a son of George and Grace (Weis) Kuch, natives of Germany. George Kuch came to America about 1849, and located in Erie, where he followed the meat business. He died April 6, 1893 in the 71st year of his age. Mrs. Kuch departed this life, in 1868. To this couple were born six sons: George, Philip, Charles, killed by the accidental discharge of his gun while hunting; Adolph, employed in his brother Philip's market; Edward, meat market, and William, a farmer in Mill Creek township. Philip Kuch received his early education in the public schools of Erie, and when 15 years of age went to work for C. Kessler, as delivery clerk, a position he held for sixteen months, when he entered the employ of John Abell, in the meat business, with whom he remained until April 1, 1883, when he bought his employer out, and has since conducted the business. He operates one of the most complete markets in this city, and handles all kinds of fresh and smoked meats, poultry and game in season, and enjoys a large and lucrative trade among the best people of Erie. Mr. Kuch was united in marriage December 22, 1873, to Miss Mary, daughter of Jacob Langnecker, of Erie, and to them have been born six children: Clara, Charles W. (deceased), Bertha (deceased), Bertha, Mary L. and Philip H. The family are members of the St. Paul German Church. He is a member of the K. O. T. M., Harugaris and German Benevolent Association of West Erie. In politics he is a Republican.

Edward Kuch, dealer in fresh and salt meats, 801-803 West Fourth street, Erie, Pa., born in Erie, July 25, 1860, is a son of George and Crescent (Weis) Kuch. Edward Kuch received his education in the public school of Erie, and when 17 years of age, secured a position in the planing-mill department of the Erie car shops, where he was employed for six years. He then entered the blacksmithing department of the same institution, and worked for four years, and, in 1887, opened a meat market at the corner of Fourth and Cherry, which he conducted for a short time only, disposing of it to his brother Philip. April 1, 1889, he purchased from his father his present business. He handles a full line of fresh and salt meats, and enjoys a large and lucrative trade. The stand has been operated as a market by father and son since 1870. Mr. Kuch was married August 7, 1883, to Miss Christina, daughter of John Wilk, of Erie, and to them have been born five children: Minnie, Charles, Florence, Edward (deceased) and Edward. The family attend the German Evangelical Lutheran Church. Mr. Kuch is a member of the Harugari and West Erie Benevolent Association. He has been six years a member of the Democratic city committee, and is one of the representative Democrats of his ward.

Philip Chor, dealer in fresh and salt meats, corner of Twenty-first and Plum streets, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany, November 28, 1853, a son of Peter and Katrina (Beldeman) Chor, both natives of Germany. Philip Chor, after receiving his education and learning the details of the meat business in his native land, came to the United States in the spring of 1884, and located in Cleveland, O., where he entered the meat trade. He remained in Cleveland two years, and came to Erie in the spring of 1886, going to work in a market for a short time. Later he opened a market on Brown avenue, for a short time only, when he again worked in a market at Seventeenth and Walnut streets. Later he branched out for himself, opening a market in Marvintown, where he remained one year, when he moved to West Twentieth street, and in the spring of 1894 he built his present home and place of business, corner of Twenty-first and Plum streets, opening it in June, 1894. Mr. Chor enjoys a large trade and handles only the choicest goods in his line. He was married September 20, 1890, to Miss Marion, daughter of Andrew Gehrlin, a native of Germany. She was born February 17, 1867, and came to America in July, 1888, alone, and located in Erie. Mrs. Chor is a member of the German Catholic Church. Mr. Chor is a member of the German Lutheran Church, and one of Erie's most respected and successful German residents.

Peter Grant was born January 15, 1839, in Ireland. His parents, Paul and Catherine (McCardle) Grant, never left their native home, in the parish of Mullabon, town of Cargin, Silver Bridge, and are now both deceased. Mr. Grant sr., died in 1853, and Mrs. Grant in 1870. Mr. Grant left his native home April 8, 1863, coming to this country, and settled in Erie in July of the same year. He worked on the docks in Erie harbor as a laborer for eight months, when he went to New York, and was working there at the time of the "draft riots" in that city. Imbued with a spirit of American patriotism Mr. Grant returned to Erie and enlisted in the United States navy as second-class fireman. He was sent to Cairo, Ill., where, in 1864, he commenced his service on the "Great Western." But at that time the fighting on the Mississippi river was practically at an end, and at his own request, he was transferred to the monitor "Osage" of the Gulf Squadron. He was with that ironclad in the engagements in Mobile bay, and was aboard her when she was blown up by a rebel torpedo on March 29, 1865. After that engagement Mr. Grant was taken sick with salivation of the mouth and was confined in the hospital for one month. He was then sent to Annapolis, Md., where he completed his two years' enlistment on the United States monitor "Tonawanda," and received his discharge on September 29, 1866. Mr. Grant then returned to Erie and was married to Miss Helen Hancock, daughter of George and Mary (Plunkett) Hancock, on November 20, 1866. Mrs. Grant was born in Erie May 3, 1845. Her father was a native of Londonderry, Derry county, Ireland, and her mother was born in Dublin. They had eight children and Mrs. Grant was the sixth child. Mr. Hancock died in 1853, and his wife in 1887. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Grant have no children. After his marriage Mr. Grant went to Michigan, where he worked in a sawmill at New River, until 1867, when he returned to Erie and purchased the property on East Third street, where his home is now located. He then commenced contracting for the city of Erie, and in the course of his work has laid many miles of sewer and pavements in the city streets. Mr. Grant is a Democrat, and, while he has never held office, he has always taken an active interest in party politics in Erie county, and has attended every state and national Democratic convention since his permanent residence in this city. Mr. Grant receives a small pension from the Government and is a member of Scott Post, No. 464, G. A. R.

Professor John Caspar Diehl, principal of the Erie High School, was born in Erie, Pa., January 12, 1865. He is a son of Frederick and Barbara Catharine (Doll) Diehl. His parents were natives of Germany. His father came from Germany to America when he was only 17 years of age and settled in Buffalo, N. Y., and subsequently removed to Erie, Pa., where he still resides. His father has been a merchant in Erie for many years. He now resides at 441 West Seventh street. His place of business is No. 29 South Park Row. Prof. Diehl is a member of a family of three children, two boys and one girl: George Frederick, bookkeeper with the Coiby Piano Company; John Caspar, principal of Erie High School, Erie, Pa.; Minnie Margaret, at home. Prof. Diehl was educated in the graded schools and high school. He then entered Oberlin College, Ohio, in 1883, remaining one year, then Yale College (now University) in 1884, where he was graduated in the class of 1887. The same year he accepted a position as teacher in the Erie High School, and has been connected with the school ever since. In 1890 he was made principal, and has served in that capacity with marked success. He was married, December 21, 1893, to Miss Anna Belle Ingham. Her parents were born in Ireland, and came to America in 1870. Mr. and Mrs. Diehl have one child, a son, Frederick Breckton. They are members of the Methodist Church. Prof. Diehl is a member of the Masonic fraternity. Politically he is a Republican.

Hobart Hogan, brick manufacturer, Erie, Pa., was born February 6, 1852, at Central Bridge, N. Y., the tenth of twelve children of Isaac and Polly Lynch Hogan, of Welsh-Irish parentage. He came to Erie county about the year 1870, working at the trade of carpenter. He married December 3, 1873, Catherine Berst, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Miller) Berst, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania; after a few years he engaged in contracting and building, and was very successful, and about three years ago decided to go more extensively into the business of building. He built a brickyard for himself with a capacity of 8,000,000 bricks. This yard covers a territory of eight acres, and has proven itself a prosperous enterprise. Three children have been born to him: J. Reed, born November 14, 1874, attended the Erie Business College one year, and is now assisting his father in the brick business; George H., born August 16, 1877, attending High School class of '98; Minnie A., born July 15, 1881. He is a Presbyterian in his religious belief; a Republican in politics; was a member of the common council two years. He has five acres of fruit land in a thriving condition. The number of houses around him, which bring him an income, testify to the success he has had in life. He started without a dollar, and is what we would call a self-made man.

Charles E. Royer, eldest son of Anthony B. and Nancy J. (Hamilton) Royer, was born in Washington township, Erie county, October 26, 1849. The mother was of Puritan-French birth and the father of French-English parentage. His paternal great-grandfather was one of Lafayette's soldiers, one of the many brave sons of France who risked their lives in the cause of freedom and America, who, after the close of the Revolutionary war, settled in or near Philadelphia. Squire Philip Royer (paternal grandfather) married Elizabeth Leeds, of Sheffield, England, and was the only one of a family of seven to emigrate to the (then) far West, making the trip from Philadelphia, as was then the custom, by wagon, in the year 1829, and settled on the "Moravian Mission" land, French creek flats, near where the P. & E. R. R. now crosses French creek at Le Bœuf station, where he raised a family of seven boys and four girls, only two of whom ever left Erie county to live. One, Samuel J., sought his fortune in the West in 1834, and now resides at Chippewa Falls, Wis. The other, George W., settled in Ohio after the Rebellion. Jones B. and George W., the two youngest boys, were members of the 14th Reg., P. V. I., and were both wounded at the battle of Gettysburg. His maternal great-grandfather (Hamilton) came from Connecticut and first settled at Williamsport, Pa. Remaining there but a short time he removed to Erie county, near Edinboro, in the year 1819, and with his brother purchased 800 acres of land, which they proceeded to clear and cultivate. James Hamilton (maternal grandfather) married Susanna Skelton (of French descent, whose family came from Philadelphia in 1798 and whose mother was a cousin of "Mad" Anthony Wayne) and raised a family of three boys and four girls. John, the youngest son, was a member of the 5th Pa. Cav. during the Rebellion and was killed at Culpeper Court House. James, the eldest son, was also in the army and now resides in Crawford county, and with Mrs. Sophia Stark, of Erie, are the only two of the family living. Charles E. received his early education in the public schools of West Mill Creek, with a few terms at the Edinboro Normal and the Erie high school. By occupation he is a pattern-maker, having learned his trade at the Bay State Iron Works, and for a number of years he had charge of the pattern department of the Skinner Engine Company, but is now with the Jarecki Manufacturing Company. He served five years in the famous old "Erie Guard," and with them assisted in quelling the great riots of 1877. He was chief musician of the 17th Reg., N. G. P., in 1879-80, and was at one time a member of the celebrated "Knoll's Band," and later with the "Governor's Guard Band." He is a member of the C. M. B. A., C. B. L., Catholic Casino, "Legion Club" and St. Francis DePaul Society. Charles E. was married September 26, 1883, in Erie, to Miss Josie A. Carney, daughter of John Carney, of Irish parentage; they have one child living, Ellen J., now attending the Villa Maria Academy, this city. Mrs. Royer is Supreme Recorder of the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association, which position she has held since the organization of the society in 1890. She is also a member of St. Peter's Aid Society. They are both ardent Catholics and members of the Cathedral congregation. Mr. Royer is independent in politics. He has two brothers living in Erie, Clinton and Ross, and one sister, Mrs. Perry Baer. One thing remarkable in regard to his family is the wonderful longevity. Of his father's family of eleven, two died in childhood, and his father's death, in 1889, was the first death among the children in nearly sixty years. Eight of the eleven are still living, the eldest nearly 80 years of age and the youngest past 50. His grandfather was 84 when he died and his grandmother 86. His paternal great-grandmother was killed by falling down stairs at the age of 98 years. The Royer family inherit those earnest, steady characteristics that endure with time, and these concentrated energies have been used for the good of mankind and upbuilding of their native land.

John Leary was born in the year 1830 in Coulman, County Wexford, Ireland, and at the early age of 14 left his home in Ireland to try his fortunes in America. He settled in Erie county, and the first years of his life were toilsome ones. Mr. Leary arrived in Erie in the fall of 1844, on the steamer "United States." Capt. Downs and John Knobloch brought him, with other passengers, to the foot of State street on the transfer scow used for that purpose, and when young Leary offered them eighteen cents, all the money he had, for the trip, they declined to take any money from him, twenty-five cents being the regular fare. Mr. Leary's first employment was with Mr. Matthew Barr, as tender for the plasterer who was then plastering Mr. Barr's new brick house in Weigeltown, now one of the old landmarks of that locality. After two weeks of this service he found employment driving a cart for Laird Foster and John O'Brien. Then he worked for John Fagan, doing chores and going to school; a month later he found work on the same terms with Patrick O'Brien. In the spring he made application for a place on the revenue cutter "Erie," but was rejected because his father was not a citizen of the United States. His next employment was on a farm in North East at six dollars per month. After working a while he settled up with his employer, receiving a piece of cloth for his pay, and this he traded to Barney McGuire for two days' board at Four-Mile Creek. He next went to Freeport and loaded lumber for Alexander Pope on a vessel his son had charge of, for a shilling an hour, working twenty-seven hours without rest. This was practically the first money earned by Mr. Leary, and he felt rich in its possession. He continued in Mr. Pope's employ, burning lime and receiving fifty cents a day and fifty cents a night in payment. Later returning to Erie, the gunner of the revenue cutter "Erie," Adilee McGill, sent ashore for him. He went aboard, was introduced to Capt. O'Connor and shipped as boy on the cutter at ten dollars per month. The same fall the cutter went ashore at Ashtabula and was wrecked. The following spring Mr. Leary shipped aboard the "Ebert," an iron steamer engaged in the lake survey, as wheelman and leadsmen. While so engaged a survey was made of the islands at the head of Lake Erie. Mr. Leary handling the lead in most of this work as well as in the soundings of Erie harbor at a later date. As an illustration of the manner in which young and unsophisticated boys fared in the service in those days, we cite the following incident in Mr. Leary's experience on board the "Ebert." The second engineer, John Montgomery, sold young Leary an old watch that would not keep time, and by specious representations made him think it was a fine time-piece, finally getting him to promise him eighteen dollars for it. After a day's trial Mr. Leary declined to keep the watch, and Montgomery undertook to enforce the bargain by telling his victim that he must keep the watch or leave the ship. The captain told the boy that he need not leave, and when Montgomery heard of this, about 4 o'clock in the morning he went to Mr. Leary and told him he must take the watch or a licking, and thereupon struck the boy a stunning blow on the head, quickly following it up with another, when his victim turned and defended himself, which led to a general row, and finally to Mr. Leary's discharge, although Mr. Montgomery continued in his place on the boat. After leaving the "Ebert" Mr. Leary shipped as wheelman aboard the steamer "Louisiana," Capt. Thos. Richards, for the season of 1848. The next season, when Capt. Richards was transferred to the "Keystone State," one of the finest passenger steamers on the lakes, he took Mr. Leary with him as wheelman of the new boat. A little later Capt. Richards was taken sick, and had to be left in Chicago, where he died July 15, 1849. When the body was being brought home to Erie on the "Niagara" she was passed by the "Keystone State" bound up, and while passing, Capt. Stone of the latter boat, requested Mr. Leary to hoist the colors at half-mast and toll the bell, as a mark of respect for the dead commander, who was one of Mr. Leary's warmest friends. That evening while the "Keystone State" was passing the "Empire State" on Lake Huron Mr. Leary's judgment and prompt action averted a collision. The watch on the "Empire State" was careless, and although there was plenty of sea room, it was only by turning the wheel hard-a-port that the two boats avoided a collision. Mr. Leary was at the wheel, and the "Empire State's" paddle-box just grazed the "Keystone State," and the former boat passed on almost ignorant of the narrow escape they had had. Shortly after Capt. Richards' death Mr. Leary quit the lake service and engaged in plank road and then in railroad construction. His first substantial money was made as a contractor on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., he having built many miles of that iron highway. Later he became the owner of the magnificent stone quarry at Garland, Pa., on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., and now supplies Erie with most of the sandstone used in the city. This business is an extensive one, as well as profitable to Mr. Leary. After attaining to a position of affluence, he panic of 1873 left him almost penniless, but pluck and ambition have again placed him in an independent position financially. Mr. Leary is one of Erie's substantial but unassuming citizens, and is one of the men who has helped to make Erie the prosperous city it is, he having been one of the active spirits in securing legislation and funds for the construction of the Erie and Sunbury road. On the 14th of July, 1848, he was united in marriage to Mary, daughter of James and Mary Dunbar, of Erie. Nine children have blessed this union, three of whom are living: Mary, wife of William Hickey, of Erie; they are the parents of three children, Genevieve, Marie and Naomi. Mr. and Mrs. Hickey live with her father, as does also the youngest child, Catherine. Frank, the only living son, is married to Jacobina, daughter of Jacob Weschler, of Erie. They live in Erie and are the parents of four children: William, Marie, Katrina and Josephine. The family are all ardent Catholics and attend St. Peter's, of which they are members. Mr. Leary takes but little interest in politics, and is a Democrat.

Jeremiah H. Canty, a prominent railroad contractor of Erie, was born in Harbor Creek township, this county, July 3, 1840, and is a son of Jeremiah and Mary (Forest) Canty, natives of Cork county, Ireland. His father came to America in the early twenties, the voyage occupying four months. He landed in Quebec and made the trip thence to Erie by wagon. He located on a farm in Harbor Creek township, which he occupied until his death, January 26, 1882, at the advanced age of 86 years; his wife had died February 22, 1872, at the age of 72 years. Of his children four reached majority, Johanna (deceased), who married

William Connell; he died in the navy soon after the close of the war of the Rebellion. Timothy, who died at the age of 22 years; Mary (deceased), who married John Melaven, of Erie, and Jeremiah H., who was educated in the public schools of his native town and St. Francis College, Columbia county, Pennsylvania. Just before the close of his second year in college, his father's health had so failed that he was obliged to return home. After a year at home he engaged in the grocery business on Fifth street, between State and French streets, where he continued three years. He then removed to Harbor Creek, where he followed farming for five years. In 1870 he began railroad contracting, which he has since followed. To enumerate all the contracts which he has taken and executed during this quarter of a century of successful business, would be impossible. It will suffice to mention a few of the more important ones. His first contract was that of grading thirty-six miles of the Canada Southern R. R., of which he broke the first ground. He also built all the side tracks of that road from St. Thomas to Detroit, and the yard at the latter place. This occupied four years, after which he filled contracts for the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw R. R., which occupied two years. He then built twenty miles of grading for the Stratford and Huron R. R. in Canada. In 1880 he removed to Milwaukee, Wis., where for nine years he was engaged in contracting for the Wisconsin Central. In 1888 he went to Tennessee, where he built five miles of road for the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis R. R., after which he did a year's contracting for the Nashville and Knoxville at Lebanon. He then removed to Nashville, where he admitted to partnership Mr. Frank R. Davis, and they took a contract of building a twelve-mile dummy line, upon which there was heavy cutting and tunneling; they also had contracts in other places at that time, and later built the West Point branch of the Louisville and Nashville. He was in partnership with Mr. Davis for about two years. Mr. Canty's next contract was that of building a railroad for the Southern Iron Company from their mines to the Aetna furnace, a distance of eighteen miles. In 1892-3 he laid forty miles of track for the Louisville and Nashville, between Dixon and Clarksville. He next built ten miles of narrow-gauge road with bridge and all complete, which was owned by a lumber company in Missouri. In the fall of 1894 he did quite an extensive job of street filling for the railroad companies of East St. Louis, and is now doing some work for the Louisville and Nashville R. R. Mr. Canty was married September 17, 1862, to Miss Mary, daughter of Michael and Anna (Giles) Hendrichs, who were born near Dublin, Ireland, and came to the United States in 1850. They first located in Jersey City, and in 1856 came to Erie. Mrs. Hendrichs died in 1874, and Mr. Hendrichs at the advanced age of 84 years. Mr. and Mrs. Canty are the parents of five children: Frank J., received his early education in the Milwaukee high school and was graduated from Lawrence University. After completing his education he secured a position in the freight claim department of the Chicago and Milwaukee R. R.; later was agent of freight of that road at Chicago and has been for three years adjuster for the American branch of the Lon Lon Guarantee and Accident Company in Chicago. He is also pursuing the study of law in the Chicago University. Mary Josephine, now Sister St. Rogue, completed her education in Toronto, and became a nun of the order of Loretta. She was one of the founders of Loretta Academy, Englewood, Chicago, and is the only American in that institution. Anna spent two years at school in Joliet, Ill., and one year in Toronto, graduating from the latter. Harriett May died August 29, 1817, at the age of 16 years. Frances U. graduated from the Erie high school, and after one year passed at Loretta Academy, Niagara Falls, was graduated from that institution. The children all have diplomas and have a taste for music and art which were cultivated in their education. Mr. Canty and family are members of St. Peter's Cathedral. In politics he is a Democrat, but he has never been a seeker for public office.

William Patterson Atkinson, general manager of the Herald Printing and Publishing Company, Erie, Pa., was born in the county of Durham, England, June 10, 1842, son of James and Ann (Patterson) Atkinson, natives of England. James Atkinson was a miner, and came to this country in 1844. William P. Atkinson received his education in Schuylkill county, this State, and learned the trade of printing on the Pottsville Miners' Journal. In 1860 he started the St. Clair Sentinel, which he published until March, 1862, when he closed the office and enlisted in Co. G, 48th P. V. I., serving two years and five months; was actively engaged in five battles, viz.: Second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chantilly, South Mountain and Antietam; while on detached service he published a paper called The Kentucky Loyalist for nine months in Lexington, Ky., which attracted considerable attention on account of its pronounced Union sentiments in one of the border States. On retiring from the service, he went to Philadelphia, resuming his trade, and, in 1867, came to Erie city, and had charge of the Dispatch job office until 1869, when he purchased the Daily Republican, which he sold to J. E. Ashby & Co., in May, 1870, remaining in charge of that plant until November, 1880, when he purchased the "Economy Printing House," which was merged into the Herald office in October, 1882. He was in charge of the printing department of this office until July, 1895, when it was reorganized into a stock company, under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and Mr. Atkinson was appointed its general manager. He served as member of the select council during the years 1874-5-6. Since 1872 he has published annually the Erie city directory. Mr. Atkinson was united in marriage, July 17, 1867, with Caroline, daughter of Joseph Jackson, from which union seven children were born, five of whom are now living: Anne C., Harry J., Tillie E., Sarah J., and Josephine C. In April, 1892, his wife died, and he was again married, on June 5, 1894, to Annie Cowan, a daughter of his former wife's sister. The family are Episcopalians, and Mr. Atkinson is a member of the Masonic order, the Grand Army of the Republic, and several assessment orders.

Stephen W. Bolles, present publisher and editor of the Erie Dispatch, the Dispatch-Gazette and Evening News, is the son of Nelson K. and Malvina Whitford Bolles. He was born at Springboro, Crawford county, Pa. On his father's side he is descended from English and Welsh stock, and his ancestry early settled in Massachusetts and Connecticut and now form a large family. His great-grandfather served in the Revolutionary war. John Bolles, father of Nelson K. Bolles, went west in 1820, settling in Genesee Falls, afterwards in Cattaraugus county, New York, where he died. Stephen Whitford, his mother's father, was an early settler of Beaver township, Crawford county, coming with his father, Oliver Whitford, from Ticonderoga, New York, in 1838. Oliver Whitford's father, Constantine Whitford, came from Scotland, settling in Rhode Island, and served seven years on a man-of-war, under Admiral Hopkins, in the American Revolution, dying at the age of 104, at Ticonderoga, N. Y., where he had moved in 1800. Oliver Whitford was born in Rhode Island, in 1790, and died at the age of 80, in Beaver township, Crawford county, Pa. The parents of Mr. Bolles moved to Wisconsin, in 1868, residing for the most part in Waushara county, where, by private instruction and the common schools, their eldest son received his education. He went with his family to Minnesota, and afterwards returned with them to Springboro, where his parents still reside. He taught school in Crawford and Erie counties, and did newspaper work in several western cities, after graduating from the State normal school at Edinboro. Going west in August, 1888, as principal of Deñance College, he resigned to become editor of the Republican Express, and though not yet a citizen of Ohio, was made secretary of the county committee. In June, 1889, he resigned to go as State editor of the Toledo Daily Blade, Nasby's paper, and passed through the grades of city editor, staff correspondent, associate editor and managing editor, which position he held until he resigned, October 8, 1894, to come to his native State. He served for five years as a member of the Republican committee of Toledo and Lucas counties, was four times a delegate in State conventions, a delegate to three conventions of the Republican National League, chairman of the county convention, and one of the list of speakers in the campaign of 1891 to 1894. December 1, 1894, Mr. Bolles bought of the Dispatch Publishing Company, Limited, the newspaper properties they had owned, and has since published them. He was married, in 1893, to Helen Perigo, daughter of Lieut. William H. Perigo, of Toledo, O., and has one child, a son, William Perigo Bolles, born in 1893.

William James Robinson was born at LeBeauf, Erie county, Pa., March 7, 1854, of Scotch-Irish ancestry. His father, William Robinson, and his mother, Ann Eliza Ford, were natives of Erie county. His grandfather, John Robinson, was born in County Cork, Ireland, emigrating to this country about the year 1800, and settled in Eastern Pennsylvania. In 1805 he removed to Erie county, and bought a large tract of land in LeBeauf township. Subsequently he built a distillery, and continued in that business for many years. His great-grandfather, on the maternal side, was Capt. Robert King, a soldier and officer in the Revolutionary war, and a personal friend of Gen. Lafayette. Capt. King had also rendered the State valuable service in securing treaties from the Indians, as a reward for which the Legislature of Pennsylvania voted him 400 acres of land west of the Allegheny river. Capt. King, it is said, was the first actual settler in Erie county, having removed there from Lycoming county, in 1794. Mr. Robinson was educated in the public and select schools of Mill Village, Pa., and subsequently completed a commercial course. His boyhood was spent on the farm. In 1877 he engaged in general merchandising in Mill Village, near the place of his birth, and continued in active business for ten years. He bought in 1800, an interest in the Erie Daily and Weekly Dispatch, and in April of the following year became general manager of the Dispatch Publishing Company, limited. Under his management the company bought the old Erie Gazette, and established in 1822, the Erie Evening News. On September 1, 1824, Mr. Robinson sold his newspaper interests, and organized the Dispatch Printing and Engraving Company, becoming the president and manager of that company. He is also a member of the firm of Robinson & Sawdey, real estate and insurance agents. Mr. Robinson early in life took an active part in politics, casting his first vote for Gen. Hartant, for governor of Pennsylvania, in 1875. He was the following year elected a member of the Erie County Republican Executive Committee, and has since been continuously identified with the organization, serving as secretary for three years, and chairman one term. In 1826 he was elected treasurer of Erie county, serving three years. He was a delegate to the Republican State convention of 1879, 1887 and 1889. He belongs to the stalwart element of the Republican party, inheriting much of his zeal for the party from his father, who was a Whig, and an uncompromising Republican.

John Beatty

Hon. David T. Jones, manager of the Erie branch of the Atlantic Refining Company and the Eclipse Lubricating Oil Works, was born of Welsh parentage, in Marion county, Ohio, February 25, 1828, and is a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Thomas) Jones. His father followed agricultural pursuits, the chief products of which at that time and in that section of the State were pork and new corn whisky, which were shipped and marketed down the Ohio river. When Mr. Jones was but a few months old his parents moved to Delaware, O., where they passed the remainder of their lives. Mr. Jones was educated in the public schools of Delaware and Ohio Wesleyan University, attending the latter in 1845-6-7, when Bishop Thompson was president and Bishop Harris tutor. After completing his education he rented a small tannery, which he operated for ten years, when he sold the business, on account of the supply of bark in that locality being nearly exhausted. In 1850 he came to Erie and built the second oil refinery in the city, and one of the first in Pennsylvania, on the northwest corner of Sixteenth and French streets, where he has since continued. For the operation of his first plant he used the first engine manufactured in Erie, which was one and one-half man power. As there were no railroads at that time leading to the oil fields, oil was transported by horses. In 1876 Mr. Jones sold his business to the company which he has since represented in Erie. All the illuminating oil is now refined in the oil regions, but the lubricating oil is manufactured at Tenth and Wayne streets, where the plant covers an entire square. Mr. Jones was married October 17, 1847, to Miss Mary Millice, a native of Lexington, Va., but at that time a resident of Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have one child, Cassius E., who married Miss Myrtle Craig, of Clarion county, Pennsylvania, and resides in Erie. He is in the employ of the Eclipse Lubricating Oil Company, in Franklin, Pa. Mr. Jones has been a vestryman of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church for twenty-eight years, and is a Knight Templar Mason. Before Mr. Jones was 17 years of age he was a director of the party who operated the underground railroad, now well-known in history. He enlisted during the war, but soon after secured a substitute. In politics Mr. Jones is a staunch Republican, and has rendered much valuable service to the party of his choice. He was a member of the select council for several years, and in 1877 was the successful candidate of his party for the office of mayor of Erie, to which position he was re-elected a year later, for a term of two years, without opposition.

Simon Peter West, pastor in 1894-5 of the A. M. E. Church, Erie, Pa., was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, June 18, 1858. His parents, James and Sarah West, were from Loudon county, Virginia; the former died May 10, 1870; the latter survives and resides at Uniontown, Fayette county, Pa. Rev. S. P. West was educated at the high school, West Alexander, Washington county, and the California State Normal School; graduating from the latter institution with the degree B. A., in 1886. In 1887 he was teacher of music and drawing in the public schools of Washington county, and then for one year took charge of a school in Luzerne township, Fayette county, Pa. He was for three years principal of the colored schools of Uniontown, Pa., and during this period held the position of census enumerator. In 1890 he received the degree of M. E. D., from the California State Normal School. In 1891 he began the study of theology in Brownsville; joined the A. M. E. conference at Oil City, Pa., in October, 1892, when he was appointed to the pastoral charge at Erie. He was reappointed to the same charge, and ordained deacon in 1893, and was again reappointed by the Wheeling conference in 1894. The Erie A. M. E. Church was founded in 1875 by that veteran organizer, Rev. J. M. Morris, now of Brownsville, Pa. It has had twelve pastors in the order named: Reverends Wheeler, Phillips, Ross, Herbert, Griffith, Russell, Palmer, Burrell, Brown, Till, Pride and West. Its present membership, thirty-nine, is the largest in its history. It has a flourishing mite missionary society and a Sunday-school, with an average attendance of more than forty persons. The church edifice is a wooden structure, presented to the congregation by the Y. M. C. A., and was removed to its present location on Seventh street, between Holland and German, in 1881, the lot having been purchased from Dr. Wallace. Rev. Mr. West was married December 24, 1890, to Dora, daughter of Sydney and Eliza Banks, of Brownsville. They have three children: James, Anna E. and Jessie M. Rev. Mr. West is a member of the Erie City Lodge 3509, G. U. O. P. E., and a past officer in that lodge. He is also a past officer in Phoenix Lodge, No. 11, K. P., and also a member of the uniform rank of that order, and a member of the Pythagorean Commandery 68, K. T. Mr. West was transferred to another charge in the fall of 1895.

The Vosburg Family.—In 1818, Robert and Abigail (Tisdale) Vosburgh, the former from Kinderhook, N. Y., and the latter from Taunton, Mass., after a brief stay in Ohio, came to Erie and made their home for life. They had nine children, and became identified with Erie. Of their children, Robert filled a position, for about forty years, in the New York Custom House, and died in Brooklyn, in December, 1889; George W. has been about forty-two years engaged in the Cleveland depot of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Company; Richard was drowned; Henry and Israel perished in the destruction of the steamer "Erie," August 9, 1841; Charles died in Erie in 1880, and Fitz James at Oakland, California; their daughter, Susan, wife of W. H. Dickson, died in Erie in 1892, leaving Albert sole survivor of the original family in Erie. He has continued his father's business in Erie, much of the time on the same spot. Of this large and well-known family, Robert resided about fifty years in New York city, and was engaged for a long time on the Hudson river and Long Island sound steamers. He was for a while on the "Great Western" steamship which, with the "British Queen," formed the first regular steam line after the practicability of ocean steam navigation had been demonstrated by the "Great Western" and "Sirius." His duties for so many years in the New York Custom House were so acceptably discharged under successive administrations as to cause his long retention in office. Mrs. Dickson closed her long life in 1892, with the respect of a wide circle of friends. Albert Vosburgh is among the active, zealous Republicans of Erie. For many years he co-operated with William D. Fortin, of Philadelphia; William Nesbitt, of Altoona; Robert Stewart, of New Castle, and others in securing to all equality before the law. No one regarded with more intense satisfaction the great changes in the fabric of society. He has traveled extensively. Few are better posted in current and local history. He resides in the family mansion, so long associated with the name. The residence of the Vosburghs, in Erie, is exceeded in time by but few of the old families.

The Waters Family.—About the year 1838 this interesting and unobtrusive family first made their home in Erie. They came from Michigan. The head of the family, Hamilton E. Waters, was a person whose originality, versatility and patient toil in all the avenues of life then open to him, made him a favorite with some of our leading citizens, who soon discovered his competency and perfect reliability. His manners and bearing supported his statement of Southern origin. His wife was from Ithaca, N. Y. She had been in the household of Governor Throop (Governor of New York in 1829-30). Her dialect, conversation and manners revealed the good breeding and polish of the best society, among whom her early life was evidently spent. The business mutations and consequent embarrassment which prevailed so generally in Erie, at the period of their coming and early residence, caused their life to be a struggle through many years, especially in consequence of the uneasiness and commotion prevailing among all of their race in the Western States, after the enactment of the Fugitive Slave Law, which made a change of residence essential for so many. But the war and the Proclamation of Emancipation brought life and hope to many. To none was the new era more welcome than to this family, whose single purpose seemed (aside from their irreproachable daily living), to seek in the education of their daughters that place in life for them which circumstances had before that denied to the parents. For each of their daughters a liberal education was secured. The eldest was married to Henry Burleigh, and after his death to John Elmendorf. Her son, Harry Burleigh, has already attained celebrity as a vocalist, being still under constant tuition, drill and improvement. He gives promise of becoming one of the noted singers of the day. Her daughter, Eva Burleigh, was for two years a teacher in the Normal and Industrial School in Lawrenceville, Va., and is now a teacher in the Erie public schools, while the other children of the family are steadily acquiring those accomplishments, now so happily attainable in Erie's splendid system of graded schools. Miss Louisa Waters, the youngest daughter of Hamilton E. Waters, having filled an important clerkship under the State Government of Louisiana, holds a position as clerk in the insurance agency of Hon. J. F. Downing, where, for fourteen years, she has discharged her duties with ability. The more than half century of residence of this family has demonstrated the power of determined purpose and effort to improve one's condition. It has also shown how every obstacle can be overcome. Though the parents have gone down to honored graves with the respect of their townsmen, their children and grandchildren are now in the enjoyment of that improved condition which their parents so long hoped and struggled to attain. Many will rejoice with them in the arrival and full fruition of that better state of life in which their efforts to rise have so happily culminated.

Jackson Koehler, proprietor of the Eagle Brewery, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, on the 8th day of October, 1851. He is a son of the late Charles and Rosana Koehler, the former a native of Holland, the latter of Germany, and who came to the United States in youth early in the '30s, and located in Erie. Charles Koehler established a brewery on Parade street, removing thence to the corner of Twenty-sixth and Holland streets, and while engaged in business at the latter place died. He was succeeded by his sons, Frederick, Louis and Jackson, who continued in partnership association until the withdrawal of Louis Koehler from the firm, which was thereafter known as F. Koehler & Bros. In 1883, this partnership was dissolved by the withdrawal of Jackson Koehler, who a few months later purchased from J. H. Kalvelage, the Eagle Brewery, which establishment he has ever since owned, and which, under his able management and great ability as a practical brewer, has become the most important industry of its kind in Northwestern Pennsylvania. As illustrative of its growth it is only necessary to quote from the books of the concern, which show that the output of the brewery for the first year of Mr. Koehler's proprietorship was but 6,500 barrels, that each subsequent year revealed a marked increase in the business, the year's output for the last year ending July 1, 1895, aggregating 30,000 barrels. The manufactures of the Eagle Brewery are known as "Special Brew" and "Export" lager beers. The company has agencies at Corry, Kane and St. Mary's, Pa.; Conneaut, O., and Westfield, N. Y. Since his ownership of the Eagle Brewery, Mr. Koehler has expended nearly $200,000, in the addition of new buildings and machinery to the plant. Further particulars concerning the growth of this plant are contained elsewhere in this volume. In addition to this he has invested many thousands of dollars in advancing the manufacturing interests of Erie in other directions, and has advanced large sums, which have been devoted to the erection of many of the most substantial business blocks in Erie. He has also built a number of dwelling houses in Erie, and owns a valuable farm of 112 acres in Summit township.

He was married on the 26th day of October, 1876, to Ida, daughter of Capt. John Dunlap, whose personal history is contained in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Koehler have three children: Florence, Ida and Anna Belle, and reside at 2123 Peach street. The family attend the English Lutheran Church.

Charles M. Conrad, proprietor of the National Brewery, Erie, Pa., was born in the province of Rheinpfalz, Germany, February 26, 1841. His brother, Ludwig, and he, came to the United States with their mother, in 1849, and located in Erie, where her father and brother had resided for two years previous, and where, in 1850, she became the wife of Jacob Fuess. Mr. Fuess established a brewing business in Meadville, Pa., in 1850. In 1852 he returned to Erie, and beginning on a small scale, founded what is now the National Brewery. Mr. Conrad's education was received in the public schools of Erie. He was from an early age employed in and about the brewery, except when, on account of ill health, he was for short intervals engaged in various occupations. Upon the death of Mr. Fuess, in 1863, his mother requested him to take charge of the brewery, which he has since conducted. The plant, located on Sixth street, near Parade, was increased and remodeled until the capacity, in 1890, reached 40,000 barrels a year. In 1895 the entire plant was remodeled, all the frame buildings removed, and substantial stone, brick and iron structures added. The buildings themselves are modern and are equipped with all the latest and most improved machinery. The capacity is now 150,000 barrels a year. This nearly quadrupling of facilities was occasioned by the rapid and constant increase of business under the efficient management of Mr. Conrad. Mr. Conrad was also for a time engaged in manufacturing and wholesaling malt and brewers' supplies. Besides his large interests in Erie, he has a 400-acre dairy and grain farm in LeBeauf township, Erie county. His elegant residence, at the northwest corner of Sixth and Parade streets, was erected in 1876. Mr. Conrad was married, June 26, 1867, to Miss Dorothy Diefenbach, daughter of Mr. Charles Diefenbach, of Erie. This union was blessed with eight children, five of whom survive, viz.: Catherine (Mrs. Frederic Brevelier, of Erie), and Misses Eda, Dora, Flora and Clara Conrad. Mrs. Conrad died January 22, 1882, at the age of 34 years, and Mr. Conrad was married again, March 26, 1886, to Miss Sophia Seigel, daughter of Mr. Cassimer Seigel, one of the early merchants of Erie. Mr. Conrad and family are members of the German St. Paul's Reformed Protestant Church; he is a 32d degree Mason, and is also a member of the I. O. O. F., and of the Liedertafel, Harugari and Turner societies. He is independent in his political views, and was a member of the common council of 1872-4. Mr. Conrad has been an active member of the board of trade since its establishment, and takes a deep interest in the welfare of the city and community.

Fred Koehler, senior member of the firm of Fred Koehler & Co., was born in Mill Creek township, this county, April 11, 1847, and is a son of Charles and Rosanna (Neff) Koehler, natives of Holland. His father came to the United States about 1830, and located in Mill Creek township, where he followed farming until 1858, when he engaged in the brewing business, which he followed until his death, which occurred

August 1, 1869. He began in a small way, at the corner of Seventeenth and Parade streets. In 1865 he removed to the site of the present location, at the corner of Twenty-sixth and Holland streets. Upon the death of Mr. Charles Koehler, in 1869, his sons, Messrs. Fred and Jackson, succeeded to its control, and continued the business under the name of Fred Koehler & Bro. In 1883 Jackson Koehler retired, and Mr. Fred Koehler continued alone until 1887, when Mr. Adolph L. Curtze was admitted to partnership, under the firm name of Fred Koehler & Co. Although only a small affair when established, the industry has grown until the plant now occupies half of a square, bounded by Twenty-sixth, Holland and Twenty-fifth streets. The plant is equipped with the most modern labor-saving machinery, and all of the latest devices known to the trade, which embraces two fine, new, immense ice machines, which cost over $50,000, but which doubled the capacity of the brewery. From thirty to forty skilled hands are constantly employed, and the annual capacity of the brewery is 50,000 barrels. Besides the brewing industry, Fred Koehler & Co. also have modern and finely equipped bottling works, operating in connection with the main plant. They manufacture both stock lager and pale beer, and their wiener pale beer is justly celebrated in every part of the state. Only the purest and best materials are used in the manufacture of the beer. It is strictly pure and healthy, and is entirely free from all injurious ingredients or deleterious substances. The trade now extends throughout Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York. The members of this firm came from the old stock of Erie's best residents, and are among the most influential citizens, their enterprise being ranked among Erie's most staple resources. Mr. Koehler was married, June 7, 1872, to Miss Anna, daughter of Mr. Nicholas Roth, of Erie. They have one child, Rose A., Mrs. A. L. Curtze. Mr. Koehler and family attend the German Lutheran Church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and of the Liedertafel and Harugari societies. He is independent in his political views, but in national politics affiliates with the Democratic party.

Edward Heuer, proprietor of the Eagle Brewery Bottling Works and manager of the Eagle Brewery, Erie, Pa., was born in Brugg, Canton Berne, Switzerland, September 17, 1863. He is a son of the late John and Eliza (Siegenthaler) Heuer, natives of the Canton Berne, Switzerland, where John Heuer was engaged in watchmaking up to within a few years of his death, latterly occupying the office of postmaster at Brugg, and being at the time of his decease (1875) secretary of the municipality where he resided. His widow survives and resides at the homestead place in Brugg. Edward Heuer completed his education in 1880 at the high school of his native city, learned bookkeeping at Biel and was engaged thereat until May, 1885, when he came to the United States, locating in Erie. He was first employed in Erie at the confectionery establishment of J. M. Kalvelage, with whom he remained for eighteen months, then entering the service of the late H. V. Claus and C. B. Wuenschel, grocers and liquor dealers at Fifth and French streets, a branch establishment of the State street business of Mr. Claus. Upon the purchase by Mr. Wuenschel of his partner's interest in the Fifth and French street establishment Mr. Heuer remained in the employ of Mr.

Wuenschel from the spring of 1887 till the fall of 1888, when he accepted the position of bookkeeper for Mr. Jackson Koehler, proprietor of the Eagle Brewery, Erie. Mr. Heuer acted as head bookkeeper of the brewery until the retiring of Paul Mueller from the general management of the concern, when Mr. Heuer assumed the duties of his present position. At the same time he purchased from Mr. Mueller the retiring manager, the bottling works known as the Eagle Brewery Bottling Works, the history of which is contained elsewhere in this volume. Mr. Heuer is the owner of the hotel at Fairview, which bears his name, the Heuer House. He was married September 4, 1888, to Minnie, daughter of Charles T. Coyle, a retired farmer of Miles Grove. Mr. and Mrs. Heuer have one child, Charles Edward, and reside at 1821 Sassafraas street.

Andrew Henry Miller, bottler, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, August 14, 1854. He was a son of the late Charles W. and Katharine (Goetz) Miller, natives of Bavaria, where they were married. They came to the United States and located in Erie in May, 1854, where he was first engaged in business as a lumber dealer, and during the latter years of his life as the keeper of a restaurant. He died July 25, 1874; his wife survives and resides in Erie. Andrew H. Miller received a common school education, and at an early age started to earn his own living. He clerked for a time for a flour and feed store, and then for a short period assisted his father in the restaurant. He learned the trade of carpenter and pursued that calling until 1875, when he went into business with his brother at 826 State street. In 1878 he embarked in the bottling business, selling out two years later to accept a position as fly-finisher at the Burdett Organ Factory, where he remained for five years. He then became a member of the firm of A. B. Knoll & Co., bottlers. In 1889 he established a branch for the bottling of Milwaukee beer at Buffalo, N. Y. The following year he returned to Erie and purchased the pop and mineral-water works of Harman Brothers, subsequently obtaining the exclusive right to bottle the Rochester Brewing Company's beer. He is now bottling the William J. Lemp beer of St. Louis. He was married in April, 1880, to Christiana, daughter of Michael Schwab, an old citizen of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have five children: Lena Florence, Lydia, Lillian, Irene and Carl (deceased), reside at 17 East Eighteenth street and are members of St. John's Lutheran Church, of which he was a trustee for two years. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the K. of P., I. O. O. F. and Fraternal Mystic Circle. Mr. Miller built a residence on Seventeenth street in 1887.

Charles B. Taylor, bottler, Erie, Pa., was born in Dublin, Ireland, in March, 1850. He is a son of the late Henry and Rebecca (Bateman) Taylor, both natives of Ireland. Henry Taylor was quartermaster of the 74th Highlanders, and when, in 1858, his regiment was sent to India Quartermaster Taylor was accompanied thither by his family. His wife died while on board ship en route and was buried at sea. After being stationed for a short time near Bombay the regiment was ordered to Afghanistan, wherethey remained four years. They were then returned to Dublin, and next stationed at Edinboro, Scotland, and then at Mersey, Wales. Quartermaster Taylor died while in quarters at Cork, in 1873. His son, Charles, who had accompanied his father up to the time of his being stationed at Mersey, Wales, came to the United States in 1866 and located in Elmira, N. Y. While there he worked at the trade of shoemaking. From that place he removed to Pittsburg, Pa., where he learned the plasterer's and paperhanger's trades, following one or the other of these occupations until 1874, when he removed to New Castle, Pa., where he engaged in the paperhanging business until 1882. In the latter year he removed to Erie, Pa., where he established his present bottling business. He was married July 5, 1875, to Florence, daughter of the late Victor and Margaret Sullivan, of Jackson county, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have one child, Minnie E., and reside at 1317 French street.

Tobias S. Alberstadt, wholesale liquor dealer, Erie, Pa., was born in Lampertheim, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, December 17, 1847, and is a son of Frederick and Catherine (Hilbert) Alberstadt. His father, who was a locksmith by trade, came to America in 1832 and located in Erie. Soon after his arrival he found employment with Vincent, Himrod & Co., for which concern he worked until shortly previous to his death, which occurred March 3, 1874. His wife died July 27, 1869. The family consisted of six children, five of whom are living, viz.: Philip, street supervisor of Erie; Catherine, Mrs. Frederick Runser; Elizabeth, Mrs. Peter Doerner, of Erie; Frederick M., of London, Canada; Peter M., of Erie, and Tobias S. Mr. Alberstadt was educated in the parochial school of St. Mary's parish, Erie, and at the age of thirteen years engaged with Tibbals & Shirk to learn the moulder's trade. He remained in the employ of this concern nineteen and a half years, except four and a half years (1873-6), when he worked for Johnson & Black (now Black & Germer). He left the Chicago and Erie Stove Works March 17, 1881, and on June 6 of that year became interested in his present business, in company with Mr. M. Liebel. Mr. Alberstadt purchased the building in 1885, and Mr. Liebel's share of the business in 1894. The building is located at the southeast corner of Twenty-sixth and Peach streets, and is 24 x 100 feet and two stories high, the second story being used as a hall. He built his comfortable home at 141 West Twenty-fifth street in 1872. Mr. Alberstadt was married July 14, 1870, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Frank and Catherine (Gensheimer) Metz. They have six children: William, of the city engineer's corps; John T., machinist, in the employ of the Erie Engine Works; Francis K. Katie T., Barbara and Eugene P. Mr. Alberstadt and family are members of the Catholic Church; he was the first member of the C. M. B. A. in Erie, of which he has been Grand President, and has held various other offices in the Superior and Grand Society. He has also been several times president of the St. Alphonsus Society. He is an honorary member of the Iron Moulders' Union, and was an active worker in the interests of that order. In politics Mr. Alberstadt is a staunch Democrat. He was elected assessor in 1873 and held the office for ten consecutive years. In 1887 he was elected a member of the Select Council, filling that office for seven years, and for two terms acting as president of that body.

William Bunker Coleman, proprietor of the Reed House, Erie, Pa., son of George and Eliza (Bunker) Coleman, was born in New York city May 20, 1828. He received his education in the public schools of his native city, and later at the Durham Academy. At the age of 14 he secured a position in a dry goods store in New York city, which he retained for three years. He then went to Troy, N. Y., and was employed by his uncle, Charles S. Coleman, as clerk in the Troy House. Five years later he returned to New York and accepted a similar position in the Astor House, of which another uncle, Robert B. Coleman, and Charles A. Stetson, were proprietors. At this time, 1851, the Astor House was the largest and best known hotel in the country, and among its guests were such men as Daniel Webster, Henry Clay and Rufus Choate, as well as other men prominent in the affairs of the nation. Among Mr. Coleman's pleasantest recollections of this period was his acquaintance with Daniel Webster, and he preserves in his library, as a memento, the works of the great orator and statesman, presented to him by the author a short time before his death. Mr. Coleman's first venture as proprietor of a hotel was in Elmira, N. Y., where he conducted the Brainard (now Rathbun) House. Afterwards, and up to the outbreak of the civil war, Mr. Coleman conducted, and was associated with, hotels in Knoxville and Montvale Spa, Tenn., and in Cincinnati, O. In July, 1861, he was appointed acting paymaster in the United States navy, and served in that capacity until the close of the war. After his discharge from the service Mr. Coleman became associated with Hiram Cranston in the New York Hotel, where he remained for eleven years, during the last seven of which he was the proprietor of the Cooper House, Cooperstown, N. Y. Since that time Mr. Coleman has been manager of the Butterfield House, Utica, N. Y., and of Cranston's Hotel, at West Point. In April, 1885, Mr. Coleman came to Erie, and was for some years associated with D. M. Johnson in the Reed House, becoming sole proprietor in 1891.

Mr. Coleman was married in Hudson, N. Y., on the 5th of June, 1850, to Cornelia Barnard, daughter of William Allen. Mrs. Coleman died in Utica, on the 6th of May, 1882. To the union were born four sons: William B., jr., rector of St. George's Church, Utica, N. Y.; Oliver Allen, manager of the Georgia Loan and Trust Company, and president of the Sumter County Bank and of the board of trade of Americus, Ga.; George Silas, a lawyer in New York city, and for many years assistant to the counsel to the corporation; Charles Silas, formerly in business in New York city, and now associated with his father in the management of the Reed House. All of Mr. Coleman's sons were educated at Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass. The first three were graduated from Wesleyan University, Middleton, Conn., and the last from Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. On the 8th of January, 1896, Mr. Coleman was married by his son, the Rev. William B. Coleman, in Brooklyn, N. Y., to Mrs. Mary M., widow of John S. Christie. This year marks the semi-centennial of Mr. Coleman's connection with the hotel business.

Mr. Coleman is a member of the Kahkwa and Erie Clubs and of the military order, Loyal Legion United States, and is a Sir Knight of the Brotherhood of Free Masons.

George Byron Kimberly, proprietor of the Kimberly House, Erie, Pa., was born in Mayville, Chautauque county, N. Y., January 5, 1835. He is a son of the late Burrill and Phoebe (Zeluff) Kimberly, natives of New York, the former of English and the latter of German descent. Mr. G. B. Kimberly received his education in the public schools and academy of Westfield, N. Y., and, at the age of 16, entered upon his business life as clerk. Arrived at maturity, he formed a partnership with William Baker for the carrying on of a grocery and notion store at Westfield, N. Y. Several years later he embarked in the grocery business alone in the same town, and, in 1867, at the same place, established a dry-goods business with Herman Sixbey, under the firm name of Kimberly & Sixbey. Five years later this partnership was dissolved, Mr. Kimberly purchasing his partner's interest and continuing the business until 1876. For several years thereafter he was engaged in the sale of agricultural implements and grain, and, in 1880, removed to Erie, Pa., where he became the proprietor of the Wilcox House, which he conducted successfully for seven years, when he traded the leasehold and furnishings of that house for those of the Huron House at Buffalo, N. Y. The latter venture was not a success, and he returned to Erie and, in 1891, opened the Kimberly Hotel at Seventh and Peach streets. He was married November 5, 1857, to Martha J., daughter of L. M. Granger, a farmer, of Portland, N. Y. The children born of this marriage are Lewis Burrett, associated with his father in the hotel business; Warren Burke, now of Bendigo, Victoria, Australia; and Bertha, wife of Henry L. Mead, one of the proprietors of the American Manufacturing Company of Erie. The family attend the Central Presbyterian Church.

John H. Wilson, proprietor of the Wilson House, Erie, Pa., born in Erie September 3, 1851, is a son of the late Joseph H. and Sarah (McCann) Wilson, the former a native of Philadelphia and the latter of county Armagh, Ireland, whose parents came to this country and located in Erie in 1846. Joseph H. Wilson served in the Mexican war as seaman on the U. S. S. "Raritan," and immediately thereafter was appointed boatswain's mate on the U. S. S. "Michigan." In 1850 he established a grocery business, in which he successfully engaged for a few years. He died in 1855; his wife in 1892. John H. Wilson received a public school education, learned the trade of carpenter and worked at his trade for fourteen years. In 1883 he opened a hotel at Fourteenth and State streets, which bears his name, and of which he is the proprietor. He was one of the organizers, in 1873, of an independent company, known as the Sheridan Guard, which became Co. G, 17th Reg., N. C. P. At the organization he was elected orderly sergeant, and served in that capacity for four years. When, in 1877, the company was ordered out to assist in quelling the riots of that year, Sergeant Wilson was promoted to its captaincy, and served in that position four years and a half. Upon the reorganization of the National Guard with a decreased number of troops, Captain Wilson's was among the disbanded companies. He was married November 11, 1875, to Mary, daughter of the late John McCloskey, an old resident of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are members of St. Peter's Cathedral.

Charles Huntington Kepner, proprietor of the Union Depot Hotel, Erie, Pa., was born in Hartford, Trumbull county, Ohio, June 19, 1857, and is a son of the late Lorenzo and Mary J. (Van Gorder) Kepner, natives of Ohio, the former of German and the latter of Hollandese extraction. The elder Mr. Kepner was a farmer and died in 1878; his wife survives and resides in Erie, Pa. Charles H. Kepner received his education in the public and high schools of Jefferson county, Ohio, and for one year thereafter acted as clerk in a hotel owned by his mother, the Reed House, Lyonsville, Pa. In 1875 he came to Erie and clerked for one year in the United States Hotel. He then obtained the position of clerk in the Union Depot Hotel, Erie, in which capacity he was employed until 1881, when he became manager under the proprietorship of D. M. Johnson. In 1888 he purchased D. M. Johnson's interest and has since conducted the business. He is a 32d degree Mason and a member of Mt. Olivet Commandery, No. 90. He was married in January, 1890, to Miss Lottie Chapman. She died September 19, 1893.

Henry Neubauer, one of Erie's well-known and highly respected citizens, was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, April 22, 1825. He is a son of the late John and Katherine (Weaver) Neubauer, both natives of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, where the father followed farming till 1852, when they emigrated to America, first locating for a few months in Erie. He then moved to Greene township, bought a farm, and followed farming for five years, when he sold his property and spent the remainder of his life with his children. He departed this life November 11, 1892. His wife died June 17, 1892. To them were born six children: John (deceased), Barbara (deceased), Jacob, retired, lives in Erie; Henry, Frank, a retired real estate dealer in Cleveland, and Catherine, Mrs. Mark Eller, of Erie. Henry Neubauer received a common school education in his native country, and worked on his father's farm till 1850, and also learned the shoemaker's trade. He then came to America with his brother John, and worked at his trade for eleven years in Erie, and later opened a grocery store in the building he had erected for the purpose on French street, near the corner of Sixth, in 1857, and for eighteen years he continued the grocery business. In 1870 he built the Arcade block, and ran a grocery store there for eight years, when he remodeled the building, and, in partnership with Jacob Gieb, opened the Arcade Hotel, which they successfully conducted for five years, when Mr. Gieb retired from the business, and Frank Neubauer, son of Henry, was made a member of the firm, doing business as Neubauer & Son. At the end of six years Mr. Neubauer, sr., retired and Frank Neubauer became sole proprietor of the business. Mr. Neubauer resides at 420 West Eight street, surrounded by all the comforts of material prosperity. He is a well preserved man, genial and full of life, and can glance back with satisfaction over an honorable and prosperous business career. Mr. Neubauer was united in marriage April 22, 1851, to Miss Elizabeth K., daughter of Michael Lederer, of Erie, a native of Germany, and to them were born six children: John, proprietor of a hotel in Bellfonte, Pa.; Henry (deceased), Frank, proprietor of the Arcade; Edward, a brass worker at Jarecki's; Alfred, also in the hotel business in Bellfonte, Pa., and Anna, Mrs. Charles Strick, of Erie. The family are members of St. Paul's German Evangelical Church. He is a member of the I. O. F. and the Harugaris, and in politics is a liberal Republican. He has a large circle of friends, and is one of the prominent Germans of Erie.

Frank Neubauer, owner and proprietor of the well-known and popular Arcade Hotel, 729 State street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, August 26, 1857, a son of Henry Neubauer. He received his education in the Erie public schools, and when 18 years of age began clerking in his father's grocery, where he continued until the store was closed out. He was then employed as clerk in the hotel, opened in the same building by his father and John Geib, and five years later, on the retirement of Mr. Geib, he was made a partner, and so continued for six years, when his father retired and he became sole proprietor of the business, April 1, 1889. Mr. Neubauer was united in marriage June 1, 1889, to Miss Mary, daughter of John Moran, of Erie, a well-known blacksmith. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, is a member of Keystone Lodge No. 455, and in politics is a liberal Republican.

Charles Holcomb, proprietor of the Morton House, Erie, Pa., was born in Westfield, N. Y., December 14, 1839, and is a son of Abel and Amanda (Curtis) Holcomb, natives of New York. Eighth in a family of ten children, he was reared and educated in Westfield, and after leaving school learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed for eleven years. In 1876 he removed to North East, Pa., and took charge of the Haynes House, which he ran until 1885. He then came to Erie, and took charge of the Morton House, which he has conducted very successfully since. He was married May 6, 1862, to Miss Fannie, daughter of Larkin and Abigail (Houghton) Harrington, natives of New York. To this union have been born four children: Henry C., Abbie (now Mrs. Michael McFarland, of Ripley, N. Y.); Martha (now Mrs. S. E. Wilder, of Erie, Pa.); and Mattie. The family are members of the Universalist Church. Mr. Holcomb is a member of the A. O. U. W., of Westfield, and politically is a Republican.

William A. Battershill, proprietor of the Metropolitan Hotel, Erie, Pa., was born in Plymouth, Devon, England, February 5, 1862. He is a son of John Henry Adams and Maria (Parish) Battershill, both natives of England, the former of Pomphlett, near Plymouth, and the latter of London. The father was a railroad carrier by occupation. He was a son of John Henry and Grace (Adams) Battershill, a daughter of John Adams, who was a sledge keeper on the Lord Radford manor. William Battershill's parents both died before he was 16 years old. The father died at Plymouth, January 10, 1878, aged 44 years, and the mother died at the same place in 1877, aged 33 years. They were the parents of five children: William A., John Henry, who resides at Turnchapel, near Plymouth, England; Mary Jane, now Mrs. John Ford, of Turnchapel, England; Amy Maria (deceased), and Richard (deceased). Mr. Battershill was reared and educated in his native town, where he went to work in a hotel, at the age of 16 years. In 1882 he went to London, and was employed in the Euston Hotel two years, when he came to America, and remained in New York city. He was in the employ of the Lamb's Club a short time, when he went to the Oriental Hotel, at Manhattan Beach. From there he went to the Barrett House, New York city, where he clerked until he spring of 1888. He then clerked at the Grand Union Hotel, at Saratoga Springs, and in November, 1888, he came to Erie, and worked in the Reed House nearly five years. In April, 1894, he opened the Metropolitan Hotel, which is an elegant new house, built in 1893, and 1894. It is a strictly modern hotel, and newly furnished throughout. The house is kept open day and night, and is equipped with the neatest and most fashionable bar in the city. The location of the house, on the west side of State, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, makes it very convenient for traveling men, being within two blocks of the Union depot, and but a short distance from the Nickel Plate. Mr. Battershill was married June 24, 1889, to Miss Mary Annetta, daughter of John and Selma (Palmer) Smith, the former a native of Launceston, Cornwall, England. The parents now reside in Bristol, England. She is the eldest in a family of eleven children. Mrs. Battershill is a trained nurse, being a graduate of Guy's Hospital, London. She came to New York in 1887, in her professional capacity, and followed her calling in the Ninety-ninth Street Hospital, in New York, about one year, when she took a professional trip of about ten months through Mexico and the West. She then spent a short time at the Hamot Hospital in Erie. Mrs. Battershill comes from a long-lived family. Both her paternal grandparents are now living at Morchard Bishop, near Exeter, Devon, England, and her great-grandfather, Smith, lived to the age of 104. Mr. Battershill is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

Charles Livingston, of the Livingston House, Erie, Pa., was born in Mercer, Pa., January 5, 1845. His parents, Hugh and Lizzie Livingston, were natives of England. Charles is ninth in a family of eleven children. He was reared and educated in Mercer, and in 1879 engaged in the hotel business in Mercer, where he remained until 1892, when he came to Erie, and opened the Livingston House, where he has since been in business. Mr. Livingston is a well-known hotel man, and is well patronized by the traveling public, who appreciate such a host as he is. He was married May 15, 1867, to Miss Mary S., daughter of A. and Kate (Riblet) Miles, natives of Mercer county, Pa. They have three children: Coe D., Maud and Kittie. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Livingston served in the army during the war, and is a member of the G. A. R., Mercer Post 169. Politically he is a Republican.

Charles F. Mann, proprietor of the European Hotel, Erie, Pa., was born in Lock Haven, Pa., January 27, 1843. His parents, John F. and Nancy (Myers) Mann, were both natives of Pennsylvania. Charles is the third in a family of five children. He was reared in his native town, where he received his early education, and has been nearly all his life in the hotel business, and is consequently thoroughly master of his chosen occupation. He is popular with hotel patrons, and knows just what to do under all circumstances to please the traveling public. He was married December 18, 1868, to Miss Catherine, daughter of James McDermott, of Lock Haven, Pa. They have two children, Nancy A. (now Mrs. H. E. Gable, of Meadville, Pa.), and Josephine. Mr. Mann is among the successful hotel men of Erie. Politically he is a Republican.

Christian Rabe, Erie, Pa., is a native of Germany, and was born in 1830. He is a son of Henry and Marie E. (Smaltz) Rabe, also natives of Germany. Christian Rabe was reared and educated in his native land, and when a young man, learned the cooper's trade, and later served an apprenticeship at brewing. These occupations he followed in Germany until 1857, when he came to America and settled near Waterloo, N. Y., where he worked at his trade for four years, when he went to Crawford county, Pennsylvania, and about a year and a half later settled in Erie, and followed the cooper's trade two years. In 1865 he engaged in the restaurant business, which, at the expiration of five years, was abandoned, and Mr. Rabe engaged in the grocery business, and later added a wholesale liquor department. He continued in this business for eighteen years, when he went to Four-Mile Creek and built a summer resort in company with J. J. Lang. This he conducted three years, and, in 1890, returned to Erie and purchased a restaurant in 1892, selling out in 1895. He was married, June 19, 1858, to Miss E. Mayer, a native of Germany. To this union were born four children, Christian, William, Henry (deceased) and Louis. They also have an adopted daughter, Matilda. Politically Mr. Rabe is a Democrat. He is a member of St. Paul's Church.

James D. Allen, proprietor of the Park View Hotel, Erie, Pa., was born in Toronto, Canada, August 17, 1852, and is a son of Richard and Helena F. (Dalmage) Allen, the former a native of England, but reared in Scotland, and the latter a native of Limerick, Ireland. His father was a contractor and hotelier, which he followed until his death, in 1859, having survived his wife six years. The family consisted of four children, James D., Elizabeth (Mrs. William Hassell, of Wellsville, N. Y.), Margaret (Mrs. P. N. Stahl) and Rebecca (Mrs. Frank Donaldson) (the last two residents of Rochester, N. Y.). Mr. Allen received his education in the public schools of his native town and Rochester, N. Y., and when a young man engaged in the hotel business in the latter place. In 1876 he came to Erie and for four years acted as steward at the Reed House, after which he became proprietor of the Park View House, where he remained six years. When the Liebel House was opened, in 1887, Mr. Allen was a member of the firm of Allen & Morton, who became its proprietors. This partnership lasted two years, when Mr. Allen resumed the proprietorship of the Park View, where he has since continued. He is one of Erie's most popular landlords, and consequently one of the most successful. Mr. Allen was married November 25, 1880, to Miss Mary, daughter of Dennis and Margaret (Leary) Leary, natives of Ireland. This union has been blessed with two children, Mabel and Edna. Mr. Allen and family are members of St. Peter's Cathedral, of which they are generous supporters. He is a member of several prominent societies, chief among them the Elks, and is a Republican in his political views.

Anthony Blenner, proprietor of the Central House, Erie Pa., was born in Erie November 14, 1840, and is a son of Anthony and Barbara Blenner, the former a native of France and the latter of Germany. The parents emigrated to America and settled in Erie about 1835. Anthony is the youngest in a family of nine children. He was reared on a farm in Erie county and educated in the public schools. He followed farming until 1882, when he removed to Erie and engaged in the hotel business. In 1891 he built the Central House, which he conducted up to 1895. He was married March 3, 1864, to Miss Lucy, daughter of Louis Moor, of Michigan. To this union have been born the following children: Horace, Eugene, Nellie (deceased), Edward, Samuel, William (deceased) and Mary. The family are members of the Catholic Church, and Mr. Blenner is a member of the C. M. B. A., and politically is a staunch Democrat.

Arthur O'Donnell, of the firm of O'Donnell & Delaney, proprietors of the Moore House, Erie, Pa., is a native of County Cavan, Ireland, and was born April 31, 1846. He is a son of Arthur and Catherine (Smith) O'Donnell, natives of Ireland. Arthur is the youngest in a family of five children; he was reared and educated in Ireland, and in 1863, came to America and settled in Norwalk, Ohio, where he remained until 1870, when he came to Erie and engaged in the livery business, which he followed eighteen years, when the present partnership was formed, and he became one of the proprietors of the Moore House. He was married January 11, 1869, to Miss Ellen, daughter of Barney and Mary (Lynch) Timmons, of County Cavan, Ireland. They have two children, Mary and Catherine. He is a member of the C. M. B. A. and the Catholic Church. He has served five years in the city council, and politically is a Democrat.

John P. Delaney, of the firm of O'Donnell & Delaney, proprietors of the Moore House, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie March 31, 1862, and is a son of William and Johanna (Casey) Delaney, natives of County Cork, Ireland. In the family there were fifteen children, John being the ninth. He was reared and educated in Erie county and remained at home on the farm until 17 years of age, when he came to Erie. He was in the employ of the city for three years. In 1891 he became a member of the present partnership. He was married May 27, 1890, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Thomas Stephens, of Erie, Pa. They have three children, Orville, Joseph and Earl. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Politically he is a Democrat.

Charles A. Lang, proprietor of the Eagle Hotel, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie January 15, 1849, and is a son of William and Mary (Hoffman) Lang, natives of Saxony, Germany, who were early settlers in Erie county. Charles A. is the youngest in a family of four children. The family came to America in 1846 and settled in Erie, where the father died in 1853 and the mother one year later. Charles was reared and educated in the city of Erie, and when young served an apprenticeship at the moulder's trade at Columbus, Ohio, after which he returned to Erie and engaged as clerk in a grocery store from 1865 to 1870, when he went into the grocery business for himself, which he followed until 1891, and then accepted a position as bookkeeper for Jackson Koehler, which position he filled until September, 1894, when he assumed the management of the Eagle Hotel. This well-known hotel is located at 1331 Holland street, and enjoys an excellent patronage from an appreciative traveling public. Mr. Lang is a popular landlord and has the entire confidence of his many patrons. He was married November 3, 1870, to Miss Louisa A. Schafer, of Buffalo. They have three children, George W., Charles A., Louis C. Mr. Lang is a member of the I. O. O. F., and the D. O. H., and politically is a Republican. The family are members of the St. John's Evangelical Church.

Martin J. Garvey, proprietor of the White Hotel, Erie, Pa., was born at Warren, Pa., October 6, 1865, and is a son of Peter and Mary (Burk) Garvey, natives of Ireland, who came to America in 1865, and settled in St. Catharines, Canada, where they lived about six years, when they came to the States, settling at Warren, Pa. Martin was reared and educated at Warren. After leaving school he went to Eldred, Pa., and worked on a farm for one year, when he went to Cleveland, where he worked about two years in a brickyard and for the Standard Oil Company. He then returned to Warren and engaged as night clerk at the Warren Hotel, where he remained about three years and a half. In 1885 he came to Erie, where he was a bartender at the New Moore House for six years. In 1891 he became proprietor of the White Hotel, where he has since been very successful. He was married September 5, 1891, to Miss Rosa Bauman, daughter of John Bauman, of Lock Haven, Pa. Mr. Garvey is a member of the K. of P. and politically is a Republican.

Joseph Zaepfel, proprietor and owner of the Germania Hotel, 1319 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in Alsace, France, May 10, 1847, and is a son of Joseph and Hannah Marie (Zimmerman) Zaepfel, natives of Alsace. Joseph is the second in a family of six children. He was reared and educated in France. In 1872 emigrated to America and located in Buffalo. Mr. Zaepfel came to Erie in 1876 and worked at the blacksmith's trade until 1881, when he engaged in the hotel business. In 1889 he purchased his present property, where he has since conducted a successful business. He was married September 27, 1881, to Miss Sophia, daughter of Jacob Brenchner, of Erie. They are members of the German Lutheran Church, and politically Mr. Zaepfel is a Republican.

Frank Link, proprietor of the Link House, Erie, is a native of Baden, Germany, and was born September 20, 1839. He is a son of Michael and Agnes (Ludwig) Link, also natives of Germany. The family emigrated to America in 1847 and settled in New York, where they remained two years, when they came to Erie. Frank was reared and educated in Erie county, and when a young man worked on the farm two years. After serving an apprenticeship at harnessmaking he followed the trade until the beginning of the war, when he enlisted in response to President Lincoln's first call for three months' men. At the expiration of his time he was discharged and returned to Erie, where he took up his trade, which he followed until 1865. He then engaged in the hotel business, which he has since followed. In 1888 he purchased his present hotel property, in connection with which he carries on a first-class livery business. He was married September 9, 1862, to Miss Mary, daughter of Sylvester Kinderle, of Erie. They have one child, Clara. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Link is a Democrat.

Jo Kepler

John Hellman, proprietor of the Grand Avenue Hotel, 601 West Eighteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany, August 18, 1855, and is a son of Michael and Frances (Brown) Hellman, natives of Germany. He was educated in the fatherland, where he followed farming until 1880, when he came to America, and settled in Erie, Pa. He worked in a brewery for three years; then learned the carpenter's trade, and engaged in it for three years. In 1886 he entered the restaurant business, continuing it for five years. In 1891 he engaged in the grocery business, which occupied his attention for two years, and in 1893 he was one of the promoters of the Glenwood Paint Company, of which he is still a stockholder. In August, 1894, he took charge of Brown's Avenue Hotel, where he has since carried on a very successful hotel business. Mr. Hellman was married April 27, 1882, to Miss Kate Zefferer, of Erie. They have two children, Joseph and William. He is a prominent Democrat, and a member of the C. M. B. A. The family are members of the Catholic Church.

William F. Weiblen, proprietor of the Martin House, 301 French street, Erie, Pa., is a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, and was born December 15, 1849. He is a son of Gottlieb and Rosanna (Kern) Weiblen, who were also natives of Germany. William is the elder in a family of two children. The family settled on a farm in Erie county in 1852, coming directly from Germany. Here William was reared and received a common school education. He remained on his father's farm until about 20 years of age, when he went to the Pennsylvania oil regions, where he operated about three years. He then returned to Erie and followed engineering until 1876, and then engaged in the meat trade nine years, and later engaged as representative for a wholesale meat company about one year. He next went into the fish business, and, in 1892, engaged in the hotel business, to which he has since devoted his attention. He was married May 1, 1884, to Miss Frances, daughter of John and Frances (Crater) Kinsley, of Erie. They have five children: Lottie E., Florence R., Louisa F., Alma C. and Walter W. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church, and Mr. Weiblen is a member of the I. O. O. F. Politically he is a Republican.

Stephen Grabowsky, proprietor of the Grabowsky House, 1425 Parade street, Erie, Pa., is a native of Germany, born December 23, 1853. He is the elder of two children of George and Pauline Grabowsky, natives of Germany. Stephen was reared and educated in his native land, and at the age of 27 came to America and settled in Erie. He was a puddler by trade, and worked at his trade in various places until September, 1892, when he purchased his present hotel property, where he has since conducted a prosperous business. He was married June 9, 1878, to Miss Francisca Marchwinski, of Germany. They have six children: Leo, Joseph, John, Mary, Annie and Francisca. The family are members of the Polish Catholic Church. Politically Mr. Grabowsky is a Democrat.

John Welsh, proprietor of the Presque Isle Hotel, corner of Third and State streets, Erie, Pa., was born in Ireland forty-seven years ago. He is a son of Richard and Mary (Maher) Welsh, both natives of Ireland. The father died in Erie in 1895, and the mother in 1886. The family emigrated to America and settled in Erie when John was 7 years old. They reared a family of seven children, five boys and two girls, two of whom are now living, John and Richard; both reside in Erie. John was reared and educated in Erie, and when a young man, learned the boilermaker's trade, which he followed for several years. He then was employed in the Anchor Line freight department until 1881, when he engaged in the present business, where he has since carried on a very successful hotel business. He was united in marriage March 30, 1869, to Miss Ellen Brown, a native of Cork, Ireland. She was born February 2, 1850, and came to America when 16 years of age. They were the parents of thirteen children, viz.: Mary, wife of Jacob H. Grove, Erie, Pa.; Nellie (deceased); two died in infancy; Richard, William, Anna, Ida, Clara, Florence, Irene, Isabella and Veronica. Mr. Welsh is a member of the C. M. B. A., Branch No. 9, and politically stands on an independent basis.

John H. Carey, owner and proprietor of the Kiley House, Erie, Pa., was born August 20, 1845, in Kilmrider, county Galway, Ireland. His parents, James and Bridget (Kelly) Carey, were also natives of the Emerald Isle. They emigrated to America in 1849 and settled in Erie. They reared a family of eight children, of whom three were boys and five were girls. After receiving a common school education Mr. Carey went to sea and led the life of a mariner fourteen years, eight years of which were served in the capacity of second mate. The vessels on which he served were engaged in blockade running during the civil war. He was employed in the fitting out of the famous Rebel privateer "Alabama" at Liverpool. During his time at sea he helped to save four crews, three on the Atlantic Ocean and one on the Spanish Main; he made fifty-four trips across the Atlantic, two around Cape Horn and one around Good Hope. In 1866 he came to Erie and engaged in the saloon business, which he has since successfully followed. In 1872 he purchased his present property, where he conducts a first-class restaurant. He was married August 30, 1871, to Miss Mary, daughter of Bartholomew Crowley, of Erie. Politically he is a Democrat, and has served five years in the city council. He is a member of St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

George C. Dunn, proprietor of Dunn's Cafe, 624 State street, Erie, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township, Erie county, Pa., November 11, 1839, and is a son of George and Sarah (Clark) Dunn. The former was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, October 25, 1804; he was educated in the Erie Academy, and worked at brickmaking for some years, when he married and moved to Wesleyville, Erie county, where he followed farming during the remainder of his life. He was the eldest child of Simeon and Martha (Lewis) Dunn, the former born in New Brunswick, N. J., April 24, 1782; he received a good, common school education, and when 15 years of age, came to Crawford county, in 1797, where he married, in 1802, Miss Martha Lewis. He came to Erie in 1807, and engaged in the manufacture of brick for more than twenty years, followed by various other ventures. He was an honest, energetic citizen, and had a host of admiring friends. He was a member of the first military company organized in Erie (1806), and during the war of 1812 was frequently employed by Commodore Perry and General Meade as courier. He was a son of Justus and Experience (Stell) Dunn, the former born February 15, 1741, a son of Justus Dunn, who married a niece of Sir Francis Drake, a daughter of Thomas Drake. George C. Dunn received his education in the public schools of Mill Creek township and the Girard Academy, and worked on the home farm for a few years. Then he and his brother, John, rented a farm, which they operated for two years. Mr. Dunn then came to Erie, and entered the gallery of O. B. Palmer, to learn photography, remaining two years. He then formed a partnership with D. M. Chambers, and they conducted a gallery on North Park for about five years. Mr. Dunn then opened a gallery in the same place he is now doing business, in 1865, and conducted it four years, when he closed out on account of poor health. A few months later he built large barn and engaged in the livery business, on Fifth street, between State and French. After two years he sold this stable and purchased the livery business from his brother John, on French street, between Fourth and Fifth, operating it for two years; he then sold a half interest to John Dunn, the partnership continuing for two years, when he sold to his brother and went to Bradford to engage in the oil business for about three years. He then returned to Erie, and with Perry Chambers, bought out the restaurant business on French street, between Fifth and Sixth, owned by Michael Mehl, which they conducted for two years; at the end of this period, he bought out his partner. Three years later he sold and bought his present business from Philip Mueller, on December 27, 1888, where he has since conducted a cafe profitably and prosperously. Mr. Dunn was married, January 2, 1868, to Miss Laura J., daughter of Stewart Chambers, of Harbor Creek township. Four children were born to this union: Frank C., of Campbell & Dunn, plumbers; Lillian E., Bessie L. and C. Alice. The family attend the M. E. Church. Mr. Dunn is a member of the Royal Arcanum and Elks, and in politics is a Republican. The Dunn Cafe is operated on both the American and European plans, and caters to a large and lucrative trade among the best people of Erie.

Edgar L. Cushman, proprietor of the "Corner" restaurant, 801 State street, Erie, Pa., was born in Eagleville, Ashtabula county, O., March 28, 1852, and is a son of Leander and Mary (Birdsell) Cushman, natives of New York State. Edgar is second in a family of five children, two only of whom are living. He received his early education in Eagleville, and when yet a lad took a position as brakeman on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. When 16 years old he was promoted to the position of conductor, and for the last six years of his service he was extra passenger conductor. After eighteen years of railroad life he resigned and became a professional base ball player, being an expert left-handed pitcher. He pitched for Milwaukee the season of 1884; for the Metropolitans of New York in 1885-6-7; for Des Moines, Ia., in 1888; for Toledo, O., in 1889-90; for Rochester, N. Y., in 1891-92, and with Erie, Pa., in 1893. Mr. Cushman was one of the few pitchers who had absolute control of the ball, coupled with great speed. His left-handed curves were the pride and wonder of his fellow-players, and the worry and downfall of his opponents. In 1894 Mr. Cushman retired from the base ball field and embarked in his present business, where he is day by day adding to the reputation of the always popular "Corner." Mr. Cushman was married November 18, 1885, to Miss Emma, daughter of Christian and Elizabeth Swalley, of Erie, Pa., whose sketch is printed elsewhere in this volume. He is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, the Knights Templar, Knights of Pythias and the Elks, and in politics is a liberal Republican.

Colonel Adam Kurtis, proprietor of the Office restaurant, Erie, Pa., was born in this city October 2, 1840, and is a son of Joseph and Mary (Blenner) Kurtis, natives of Germany. In his father's family there were seven children: Adam, Joseph, of Springfield, O.; Harriett, Mrs. John Englert, of Erie; Mandlena, Mrs. Fred Wagner, of Erie; Christina, Mrs. David Smith, of Erie; John C., who has been train-dispatcher in the P. & E. R. R. office at Erie for many years, and Eva, Mrs. Edward Averil, of Erie. Mr. Adam Kurtis was educated in the public schools of Erie, and at the age of 14 years entered the employ of Vincent, Himrod & Co., to learn the trade of molder, where he remained three years. He then secured a position as clerk in the store of Shannon Bros., where he remained after the business had changed hands, in all about three years. When the war of the Rebellion threatened to destroy the republic Colonel Kurtis was among the first to go to the rescue. He enlisted in 1861 in Co. B, of what was known as Colonel McLane's Erie Regiment, and served the three months' service. He then returned to Erie and was variously employed in clerking and working at his trade. In 1865 he re-enlisted in Co. K, 98th P. V. I., and served until the close of the war. After the close of the war he entered the grocery store of Harvey Thayer, as clerk, and later the store of P. Minig, remaining in each a short time. He then went to Corry, Pa., where he took charge of a large concern, which included a large general store, and restaurant and boarding-house, for Mr. Charles Flick, where he remained two years. He then went to Cambridge, Pa., and established a brick manufactory upon the present site of the Cambridge Springs. He conducted this business for a year, furnishing the brick for the Atlantic depot at Meadville, Pa. He then came to Erie and engaged in the grocery business on Peach street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, where he remained two years, and then removed to the corner of Eleventh and Parade streets. He later built and occupied a store on Parade, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, where he remained until 1874, when he became proprietor of the Keystone restaurant. Six years later he established the Office, which he has made one of Erie's most popular resorts. In 1871 Colonel Kurtis enlisted in Co. B, 17th Reg. of Pennsylvania militia, and from that time on he took a very active part in the upbuilding of the militia of the State. He served nearly two terms as captain of Co. B, and during that time served at the Centennial in 1876 and the Pittsburg riot in 1877. His promotion was rapid until he became colonel in 1879. During his colonelcy his regiment took part in the inauguration of President Garfield in Washington, D. C. While in command of the regiment Colonel Kurtis established the reputation of being one of the best disciplinarians in the State, which was fully exemplified by his regiment, it having been chosen and called out by the governor to give an exhibition drill. When the law reducing the number of regiments of militia in the State from nine to five went into effect in 1890 Colonel Kurtis was mustered out with the rest of his command.

Colonel Kurtis was married in 1864 to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Michal Wiley, of McKean, Pa. This union has been blessed with seven children: George, who is associated with his father in business; Ida, Mrs. Edward Dougherty, of Erie; William, also in business with his father; Henrietta, Mrs. William J. Baker, of Cleveland; Charles, Luella and Fred. The Colonel is a member of the G. A. R., F. & A. M., I. O. O. F., K. of P. and the E.K.s. And in all of these, as in everything else with which he has ever been identified, he is an active worker. Politically, the Colonel is not pledged to any party; he believes that the prosperity of the country should never be sacrificed for the success of any candidate or party.

John F. Elber, restaurant proprietor, Erie, Pa., was born in Newark, N. J., May 9, 1856, and is a son of Frederick and Bertha (Swartz) Elber, natives of Germany. His parents came to America in 1850 and settled in Newark, N. J. They removed to Erie, Pa., in 1858, where the father died in 1874 and the mother in 1885. John was the eldest in a family of six children. He was reared and educated in Erie, and after leaving school learned the printer's trade, which he followed three years. He then learned the machinist's trade and worked at it ten years. In 1884 he purchased the property, 502 East Eleventh street, and conducted a first-class restaurant until April 2, 1895, when he disposed of it and purchased the restaurant at the southwest corner of Ninth and State streets. This he thoroughly remodeled and refitted, and is now conducting. He was married May 15, 1877, to Miss Louisa M., daughter of George and Margaret (Peifer) Kaille, natives of Germany. They have seven children: Elenora L., Henrietta J., Francis E., Frederick M., Angela (deceased), Gertrude B. (deceased) and Othmar F. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Elber is a member of the C. M. B. A., St. Benedict's Society and the Catholic Casino.

James Carney, familiarly known as "Colonel," proprietor of the Alliance Restaurant, Erie, Pa., was born in Dumannay, Cork county, Ireland, May 20, 1844, and is a son of John and Mary (Dullea) Carney. The family consisted of six children: Mary, who came to Boston, Mass., in 1850, where she died in 1872, leaving three sons and one daughter; John, who came to America in 1854, and is now engaged in the grocery business in Erie; James and Ellen, Mrs. Cornelius Casey, of Erie (deceased), who came to Boston in 1856. The parents and James, William and Margaret came to the United States in 1867 and located in Erie. Margaret, who married Thomas Sullivan, died in February, 1892, leaving five children. Mr. James Carney received his education in his native land and in the night school of Prof. Ferrier, of Erie, which he attended two seasons. Soon after coming to Erie he secured a job as foreman of a yard gang in the P. & E. car shop, where he remained seven years, and for seven years longer a helper in the blacksmith's department of the same institution. In 1881 he opened a restaurant at his present location, and after being remodeled several times it is now one of the finest places in the city. Mr. Carney is unmarried and makes his home with his sister's (Mrs. Sullivan's) children, for whom he provides a comfortable home, and all of whom he is giving a first-class education at his own expense. Although Mr. Carney's original capital was obtained by fourteen years of hard manual labor, he is one of Erie's most generous men. He is always one of the first to give support to public, charitable or religious enterprises, and a suppliant, whether for favors or alms, seldom leaves him empty-handed. From 1867 to 1886 he resided at 936 East Tenth street, and since that time at No. 939. He is a director of the Erie Fair Association, organized in 1895. In politics Mr. Carney is a staunch Democrat, and has rendered much valuable service to the party of his choice. In 1885 he was elected a member of the city council, serving four terms in the Common branch and four terms in the Select, and was president of the latter in 1892. During his term of office he assisted in the bringing about of many public improvements which were highly appreciated by his constituents and the city in general. In 1887 he was chosen Chairman of the Democratic County Committee, and faithfully discharged the duties of that position. Mr. Carney is a devoted member of St. Peter's Cathedral, of which he is a generous supporter, and of the C. M. B. A. and Catholic Legion. He is also an honorary member of the East Erie Turners and of the G. H. of W. B. O.

Matthias Detzel, restaurant proprietor, 1306 Parade street, Erie, Pa., was born in Bavaria, Germany, July 25, 1834, and is a son of Adam and Flavies (Dulenhofer) Detzel, natives of Germany. Matthias is the fourth in a family of seven children. He was reared and educated in Germany, and at the age of 22 emigrated to America and located in Erie, where he has since resided. In 1865 he engaged in the grocery business, which he continued until 1882, when he became interested in the restaurant business at 1306 Parade street, where he has since carried on a prosperous business. He was married April 12, 1857, to Apoline, daughter of Matthias Detzel, of Bavaria. To this union were born twelve children: Mary, Frank J., Margaret (deceased), Lizzie (deceased), Eugene (deceased), William, Joseph, John, Carrie, Adam, Ida and Peter. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Detzel is a member of the C. M. B. A. He was chosen supervisor of streets in 1867; served one term as alderman, and was the first street superintendent in the city of Erie. Politically Mr. Detzel is a Democrat.

Jacob Sandusky, proprietor of one of the most popular and well-known restaurants in Erie, located at 1521 Holland street, was born in Erie, Pa., February 11, 1841. He is a son of John Sandusky, a native of Poland, who settled in Erie, in 1838. John Sandusky was compelled to leave his native country to avoid arrest, on account of having taken part in a rebellion against the government. He went to Germany, and served awhile in the German army, and from there emigrated to America. In the family there were four children, of whom Jacob is the second. He was reared in the city of Erie, and educated in the public schools, and in 1851 began life for himself as a hotel clerk. This occupation he followed about six years, then he clerked in a grocery store for several years, and in 1861 entered the employ of Charles Koster, remaining until 1864, when he engaged in the restaur-rant business for himself, but retired at the end of two years to accept an appointment on the police force, where he served for seventeen years. During his period of service, Mr. Sandusky was one of the most fearless and efficient officers in the city. In 1883 he engaged in his present business, and now commands a first-class trade. He was married March 30, 1862, to Miss Sarah, daughter of Philip Dippo, of Erie. They have four children: Louis C. (deceased), John C., William H. and Maggie. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., the A. O. U. W., and the B. P. O. E. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Sandusky is a Republican.

Frank F. Steiner, restaurant proprietor, corner of State and Eighteenth streets, Erie, Pa., is a native of Germany, and was born December 30, 1838. He is a son of Daniel and Margaret (Otto) Steiner, also natives of Germany. Frank is the eldest in a family of four children. He was reared and educated in his native land. In 1861 he came to America, and resided in New York one year, when he came to Erie county, where he has since been engaged in the restaurant business. He was married in 1865 to Miss Georgia, daughter of George and Margaret (Baer) Brown, of Erie. They have five children: Fred, Emil Ernest, Etta, Frank and Minnie. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Steiner is a member of the A. O. U. W., and politically is a staunch Republican.

Anton Lichtinger, restaurant proprietor, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., September 26, 1851. He is a son of the late Alois and Anna (Kerber) Lichtinger, natives of Bavaria, who came to the United States in 1849, taking up their residence in Erie, where the elder Lichtinger engaged in business as a mason. He was one of the contractors on the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. He died in November, 1890; his wife December 31, 1891. Anton Lichtinger was educated in Erie, Pa., and then learned the trade of cooper. He worked alternately at farming and cooage until his 21st year, when he entered the employ of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. In 1877 he went to Foxburg, Clarion county, Pa., where he assisted in building a bridge over the Clarion river. He then went to Oil City, Pa., where he worked for two years at cooage. Following this he was a dealer in sand at Bradford Pa., from thence going to Duke Center, Pa., where he was a dealer in wood. Returning to Erie, he was from 1880 to 1885 again employed by the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. In April, 1885, he leased a restaurant, which he bought in 1888, subsequently purchasing the property, 601 East Twenty-fifth street. Mr. Lichtinger was married December 31, 1884, to Agnes, daughter of the late Charles Garvin, of Reilly's, Erie county, Pa. She died the following year. He married a second time, February 1, 1887, his wife being Mary N., daughter of Lorenz Weschler, an employe of the Colby Piano Company. Mr. and Mrs. Lichtinger are members of St. John's Catholic Church.

Jacob Kaltenbach, restaurant proprietor, 2605 Peach street, Pa., was born in Erie, Pa., March 23, 1849, and is a son of Ignatz and Catherine (Witzen) Kaltenbach, natives of Germany. In the family there were eight children, of whom Barbara and Elizabeth were the eldest. The family emigrated to America in 1844 and settled in Erie, where Jacob was born and educated, and at the age of 14 commenced an apprenticeship at harness-making, which trade he followed about twenty-one years in Erie. In 1881 he engaged in his present business. He was married June 27, 1876, to Miss Barbara, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Gehrlin) Schloss, natives of Germany. They have six children, Rose, Anna, Frank, George, Charles and Edward. Politically Mr. Kaltenbach is a Democrat, and the family are members of the Catholic Church. He was a member of the common council, representing the Second ward two years and the Fifth ward one year, and has now been the representative of the Fifth ward in the select council for seven years.

Peter Waldermarson, restaurant proprietor, 1724 Parade street, Erie, Pa., was born July 25, 1836, in Sweden. He is a son of Waldemar and Betty (Johnson) Waldermarson. Peter is the second in a family of eleven children. Mr. Waldermarson was a book-keeper by occupation, which he followed in his native land for seven years. In August, 1871, he emigrated to America and settled in Chicago. There he was foreman in a tile factory for eight years, when he came to Erie and was interested in the tile business until 1882, when he engaged in the restaurant business at his present place, which property he purchased in 1884. Mr. Waldermarson is an unmarried man, and is a member of the S. & St. J. and M. Politically he is a Republican.

Martin H. Esser, restaurant proprietor, 414 West Eighth street, Erie, Pa., was born August 30, 1861, in Erie. He is a son of Martin H. and Catherine (Nunn) Esser, natives of Koln-on-the-Rhine, Germany. They emigrated to America, and settled in Erie about 1850, and reared a family of six children: Christian, John, Catherine (now Mrs. Louis Foreman, of Erie), Mary (now Mrs. George Gumder, of Erie), Emil and Martin H., who was reared and educated in Erie, and followed clerking in hotels and barkeeping until 1894, when he purchased his present property, where he has since conducted a first-class restaurant. He was married, August 25, 1886, to Miss Ellen, daughter of Daniel and Ruth (McBride) Beatty, of Erie. To this union have been born two children: Harold L. and Naomi Bell. Mr. Esser attends the Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and politically is a Republican.

Charles Spadacene, restaurant proprietor, 1518 Walnut street, Erie, Pa., is a native of Italy, and was born March 24, 1838. He is a son of Blosser and Elizabeth (Angoloti) Spadacene, who were also natives of Italy. Charles is the fourth in a family of twelve children. He was reared and educated in his native land, and at the age of 19 came to America, and after traveling in various parts of this country about two years, settled in Erie, where he followed the occupation of ice vendor for two years. Then he worked at the public dock for three years, and later was employed in a malt house and brewery until 1877, when he engaged in the restaurant business, which he has since successfully followed. He was married, July 15, 1867, to Miss Mary, daughter of Philip and Magdalena (Sonner) Hoffman, of Beachwood, Pa. To this union were born ten children: John, Charles, Lizzie, Fred, Sylvester, Kate, Mary, Paul, Frank and Andrew. Mr.

Spadacene enlisted in the navy on the U. S. man-of-war, "U. S. Grant," in 1861, and participated in the engagements at Decatur, Gainesville and Barge's Bluff, and cruised on the Tennessee, Cumberland and Mississippi rivers, and, while on the Tennessee river, was captured by Mosby's Guerrillas, but made his escape a short time afterward. In the spring of 1865 he was transferred from the "U. S. Grant" to the "Hatchel," and was honorably discharged by general order in June, 1865, at Mound City, Ill.

John Driscoll, restaurant proprietor, 641 East Eighth street, Erie, Pa., was born in county Cork, Ireland, December 25, 1835, and is a son of Dennis and Kate (Connors) Driscoll, who were also natives of Ireland. John is the eldest in a family of seven children. He was reared and educated in his native land in 1872, came to America and located in Erie, where he followed farming and laboring until 1886, when he engaged in his present business. He was married March 20, 1859, to Miss Johanna, daughter of Patrick and Kate (Harrington) Mackin. To this union were born six children: Dennis, Kate (deceased), Michael, Timothy (deceased), Mary (deceased) and Johanna. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Driscoll is a Democrat.

Edward C. Blenner, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie county, February 8, 1869, and is a son of Anthony and Lucinda (Moore) Blenner, the former a native of Erie county, Pennsylvania, and the latter of Ohio. Edward was reared and educated in McKean and Mill Creek townships. In 1892 the family moved to Erie, where Edward was engaged in the hotel business with his father until December, 1894, when he engaged in the restaurant business for himself at 601 Eleventh street. He was married in 1891 to Miss Mary, daughter of John and Mary (Nellis) Steimer, natives of Germany. They have two children, Marguerite and Mabel. Mr. and Mrs. Blenner are members of the Catholic Church, and he is a member of the C. M. B. A. Politically he is a Democrat.

L. C. Koehler, restaurant proprietor, Erie, Pa., is a native of Erie. He was born March 11, 1849, and is a son of Charles and Rosanna (Neff) Koehler, the former a native of Holland and the latter of Germany. Mr. Koehler is the third in a family of six children, was reared and educated in the city of Erie, and as a young man engaged in the brewing business, which he followed fifteen years, when he engaged in the restaurant business, to which he has since devoted his attention. He owns the block which is occupied by his restaurant, having built it in 1893. He was married to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Barnard Durfield and Barbara (Leingang) Barnard, the former a native of Holland and the latter of Germany. They have two children, Rose and Ida. Mr. Koehler is a popular and pleasing host. Politically he is a Republican.

Gottlob Reidel, Erie, Pa., is one of Erie's well-known and most popular restaurant keepers. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, December 26, 1854, and is a son of Gottlob and Caroline (Metzger) Reidel, who were also natives of Germany. In the family there were four children, of whom Gottlob is the third. He was reared and educated in his native land, and, in 1871, emigrated to America and settled in Philadelphia, where he followed butchering until 1885, when he came to Erie and engaged in his present business. He was married April 12, 1885, to Elizabeth Kussmull, of Erie. They have four children: Kate, Louisa, Peter and Carrie. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Reidel is a member of the K. O. T. M. and the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

William Zimmerly, restaurant proprietor, 102 East Twenty-first street, Erie, Pa., was born in Girard, Pa., September 28, 1839. He is a son of Henry and Susan (Moyer) Zimmerly, the former a native of Switzerland, and the latter of Pennsylvania. They reared a family of seven children, of whom William was the fifth. He was reared and educated in Girard, followed farming and brickmaking until 1891, when he came to Erie and engaged in the restaurant business, where he has since been eminently successful. He was married September 25, 1860, to Miss Ernestine, daughter of Peter and Ernestine (Hanth) Seachrist, natives of Baden, Germany. To this union have been ten children: Henry, Samuel (deceased), Mary (married to Louis Beck), William, Lulu (married John C. Flath), Ernie (married August Heckwith), George, Hattie and James. Politically Mr. Zimmerly is a Republican, and he is a member of the A. O. U. W.

John Keller, Erie, Pa., is a native of Germany, and was born in Rheinpfalz, May 2, 1843. He is a son of Heinrich and Elizabeth (Oxenreiden) Keller, also natives of Germany. John is the youngest in a family of six children. He was reared and educated in Germany, and at the age of 25 came to America, and immediately located in Erie, where he engaged in the handling of meats until 1887, when he engaged in the restaurant business at 2514 Peach street, where he has since conducted a very successful business. He was married in 1867 to Miss Maria, daughter of Jacob and Pauline (Hoffman) Horn, natives of Germany. They have five children: August, Julia (now Mrs. Frank Scheppner, of Erie), Helena, Ida and Minnie. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., and the family are members of the Catholic Church. Politically he is a Democrat.

T. Jeff Miller, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, December 12, 1859, and is a son of T. Jeff and Mary (Saulsbury) Miller, who were also natives of Erie. They reared a family of two children: Pauline (deceased), and T. Jeff, who was reared and educated in Erie, and when a young man was appointed on the Erie police force, where he served about eight years. In 1892 he engaged in the restaurant business, which he continued until April, 1895. Mr. Miller was married June 14, 1879, to Miss Lena Gardner, of St. Catharines, Canada. They have two children: Jeff and Blanche. Mr. Miller is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and politically is an enthusiastic Republican.

George Seelinger, Erie, Pa., is a native of Erie, and was born September 10, 1861. He is a son of Joseph and Kate (Loesch) Seelinger, the former a native of Germany, and the latter of New York. Joseph Seelinger was one of Erie's leading contractors and builders for several years. He died in 1885. George is the eldest in a family of eight children. He was reared and educated in Erie, and commenced life as a clerk in a dry goods store, which occupation he followed two years, when he learned the carpenter's trade, which he worked at for ten years, and at the death of his father, engaged in contracting and building until 1889, when he entered the employ of Henry Shenk, where he remained until 1891. He then engaged in the restaurant business at 2228 State street, where he has since enjoyed an extensive patronage. Mr. Seelinger was married, May 5, 1891, to Miss Helen, daughter of Ferdinand Herbert, of Erie. They have one child, Helen Florence. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., and is a Catholic. Politically he is a Democrat, and at present holds the office of assessor of the Fifth ward.

John Fehrenbach, restaurant proprietor, 757 Eighteenth street, Erie, Pa., born in Baden, Germany, June 18, 1829, is a son of John and Cresenta (Schwab) Fehrenbach, natives of Germany. In the family were seven children, of whom John was second. He was reared and educated in his native land; engaged in the brewery business until 1862, when he emigrated to America, locating in Canada, where he remained two years. He then came to Erie and worked in a brewery two years. In 1865 he embarked in the restaurant business, which he has since successfully followed. He was married August 15, 1862, in Ireland, to Miss Mary, daughter of James McCortley, of Enniskillen, County Fermaugh, Ireland. To them were born five children: Leo (deceased), John J., Mary (deceased), Mary T. (deceased), and Edward J. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Politically Mr. Fehrenbach is a Democrat.

Jeremiah McCarthy, restaurant proprietor, corner of Holland and Front streets, Erie, Pa., was born July 15, 1842, in County Cork, Ireland, and is a son of Florence and Mary (Coughlan) McCarthy, natives of Ireland. He is fifth son in a family of seven children, and was reared and educated in Ireland. In 1868 he came to America, and settled in Erie. He engaged in the restaurant business, in 1875, which he has since very successfully carried on. Mr. McCarthy was married January 8, 1876, to Miss Bridget McCarthy, daughter of Michael and Catherine (Sullivan) McCarthy, natives of County Cork, Ireland. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. McCarthy has been assessor. Politically he is a Democrat.

John Strauch, restaurant proprietor, 2202 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany June 7, 1845, and is a son of Joseph and Josephine (Bolleg) Strauch, natives of Germany. John was the eldest in a family of eight children, and when he was 9 years old the family emigrated to America and located in Erie. He was engaged in the manufacture of pumps thirteen years, working for A. B. Gunnison. Next he went into the boot and shoe trade with the Erie Boot and Shoe Company, remaining six years. He then became interested in the milk business, which he followed until 1885, when he purchased his present property and engaged in the restaurant business. He was married in 1865 to Miss Catherine Gamer, of Erie, Pa. They have two children, Anna, wife of George Kinderrecht, and Rose. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Strauch is a Democrat.

Henry Spetz, restaurant proprietor, Erie, Pa., was born in Ontario, Canada, November 28, 1859. He is a son of John and Mary (Kramer) Spetz, the former a native of Canada and the latter of Germany. They reared a family of fifteen children, of whom Henry was the fifth. The family settled in Erie when Henry was a child, and here he was reared and educated. He followed various occupations, such as farming, stone quarrying and tending bar, until April, 1894, when he engaged in the restaurant business, which he has since successfully followed. He was married May 10, 1885, to Miss Amelia, daughter of Emanuel and Laura (Little) Fimal, natives of England. To this union was born six children: Minnie M., Clara A., Agnes L., Louis J., Elmer H. and Anna M. (deceased). The family are members of St. Mary's Church. Mr. Spetz is a member of the C. M. B. A.

Peter Lund, restaurant proprietor, 1132 Chestnut street, Erie, Pa., was born in Denmark January 18, 1850, and is a son of George P. Lund. He is the seventh in a family of eleven children, was reared and educated in his native land, and there he learned the shoemaker's trade. In 1869 he emigrated to America and settled in Jamestown, N. Y., where he learned cabinet-making, which he followed in Jamestown four years. In 1873 he located in Erie and entered the employ of the Burdett Organ Company. Here he remained nine years, when he engaged in his present business, and has since conducted a first-class restaurant. He was united in marriage October 27, 1882, to Miss Kate, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Givins) Sab, of Erie. They have four children, Walter E., James L., Clarence H. and Ralph E. The family attend the Lutheran Church. Mr. Lund is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the K. O. T. M. Politically he is a Republican.

Peter Schumacher, restaurant proprietor, 420 West Twelfth street, Erie, Pa., is a native of Germany. He was born February 6, 1838, and is a son of Peter and Margaret (Klemm) Schumacher, also natives of Germany. The family came to America in 1848 and settled in Buffalo, where the parents both died. They reared a family of six children, of whom Peter is the fourth. He was reared and educated in Buffalo, where he learned the moulder's trade and worked at it in Buffalo until 1886. Then he came to Erie and followed the trade until 1893, when he engaged in his present business. He was married in 1862 to Miss Othillia Theobald, of Buffalo. They have eleven children: Mary, Peter, Othillia, Margaret, George, Victor, Richard, Jacob, Ella, Lulu, Albert and Edward (deceased). The family are members of the Catholic Church. Politically Mr. Schumacher is a Democrat.

Charles Erhart, the popular restaurant proprietor, is engaged in business at 708 West Eighteenth Erie, Pa. He was born in Erie November 9, 1837, and is a son of Wolfgang and Sophia (Shoemaker) Erhart, the former a native of Germany and the latter of France. The parents emigrated to this country in 1830 and settled in Erie, where they reared a family of nine children, of whom Charles is the fourth. He received a common school education, and when a young man learned the harnessmaker's trade. This trade he followed until 1862, when he enlisted in the 122d Ill. Reg., 16th army corps, 1st div., 2d brig., under Captain Bostwick. He served in the army of the Cumberland and participated in the following engagements: Barkies Cross Roads, Nashville, Tenn., the battles of Fort Spanish and Fort Blakely. He served faithfully until the close of the war, and in 1865 was mustered out by general order of the war department and received his honorable discharge at Springfield, Ill. He immediately returned to Erie and went to work in a grocery store with his father, and two years later opened a grocery store and restaurant, where he successfully continued in business until 1873, when he sold out and went to California. After spending about one year on the Pacific coast he returned to Erie and worked in the Philadelphia and Erie shops until 1880, when he engaged in the saloon business, where he has successfully continued up to the present time. In 1882 he built his present place. Mr. Erhart was married January 12, 1867, to Miss Mary Mosemann, of Erie. She departed this life May 10, 1893, leaving seven children: Edward, Anthony, Katie, Joseph, Mary, Tillie and Max. On August 17, 1895, Mr. Erhart was married to Mrs. Caroline Meyer, of Erie. Mr. Erhart is a representative citizen and politically is a Democrat. The family are members of the Catholic Church, and he is a member of the G. A. R., U. V. L. and A. O. U. W.

John P. Thompson, proprietor of the Sailor's Home Hotel, Erie, Pa., was born in the northern part of Sweden, 68 degrees north latitude, on the Bay of Bothnia, May 10, 1835, and is a son of John and Catherine (Jaderstrom) Thompson, natives of Sweden. At 9 he adopted his father's calling, that of a sailor, and after two years came to America, engaging with the American merchant marine. At 19 he was captain of an American mail packet, sailing the Southern waters. Two years later he came North and entered the American merchant marine here, where he remained till the breaking out of the war, when he enlisted as gunner's mate in the United States navy steamer "Penguin," June 19, 1861, and at the end of a year's active service was honorably discharged. He then enlisted as a private and was afterwards promoted to sergeant in Co. E, 155th N. Y. V. L., but in seventeen months was transferred to the United States steamer "Princeton," and soon promoted to the position of master's mate and ordered to the United States steamer "Laburnum," to do service off Charleston, S. C., under Admiral Dahlgren. Here he was appointed ensign and ordered to steamer "Catalpa," doing picket duty. When Charleston was evacuated he secured the original manuscript containing the constitution of the confederacy and delivered it to Captain Noyes, who delivered it to Admiral Dahlgren. Mr. Thompson subsequently did duty on the man-of-war "Calypso," and on Admiral Dahlgren's flag ship "Philadelphia." On September 30, 1865, he went to Washington and there received an honorable discharge as ensign. He then engaged in merchant service on salt water till 1866, when he went on the lakes for several years. He retired from this in 1871, and has since engaged in his present business. He was married April, 1852, in New York to Anna Yetterberg of his native country, who departed this life May 15, 1865, leaving a daughter, Anna, wife of Stephen A. Thompson, of the United States steamer "Richmond." They have a son and daughter, George Peter and Alice Mary. Mr. Thompson was married again February 4, 1866, to Elizabeth Warren, of Derbyshire, England. They have a bright, intelligent family, consisting of three children: John Harvey, Mary Elizabeth (Lillie), George Thomas. The family are members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Thompson belongs to the I. O. O. F. (being a member of the Encampment), A. O. U. W., Select Knights, G. A. R. and of many benevolent associations.

Valentine Knochel (deceased) spent a life of business activity in the city of Erie. He was a native of Germany. Mr. Knochel was born September 10, 1828, and was a son of Michael and Elizabeth (Staudt) Knochel, who were also natives of Germany. They reared a family of five children, of whom Valentine was the second. He was reared and educated in Germany, where he early learned tailoring. When a young man he emigrated to America and settled in Erie, where he engaged in the tailoring business for himself and carried on an extensive trade for several years. In 1869 he engaged in the restaurant business, to which he devoted his attention until the time of his death, which occurred February 11, 1871. Mr. Knochel was married January 16, 1854, to Miss Mary, daughter of Mark Nelis, one of Erie's oldest residents. They have eight children: Lizzie, John, Adam (deceased), Lena, Kate, Wendell and George (deceased). Mrs. Knochel assumed control of the business at the death of her husband, and has shown herself to be a woman of excellent business ability, a statement borne out by the appearance of her handsome and up-to-date restaurant, situated at 1214 Parade street.

Peter C. Grumblatt (deceased), Erie, Pa., was born in Belford, France, April 30, 1829. He was reared and educated in his native land, where he remained until 1854, when he emigrated to America and settled in Erie. In 1863 he opened a restaurant on State, between Eleventh and Twelfth. This place he occupied three years, when he engaged in the saloon business at 158 East Tenth street. Here he continued in business until the time of his death, which occurred April 2, 1889. He was married May 1, 1862, to Miss Caroline, daughter of John and Louisa (Nobloch) Hirsch, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1841 and settled in Erie. In the family there were five children: Edith L., John P., Celestin J., Theobolt J. and Lena J. Mr. Grumblatt was a worthy citizen, and a staunch Democrat. The family are members of the Catholic Church.

Frank Bloeser, proprietor of restaurant, Erie, Pa., was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, April 23, 1831. He is a son of the late John and Mary (Arshof) Bloeser. Mrs. Bloeser died in 1842, and ten years later Mr. Bloeser and his son, Frank, came to the United States, joining an elder son, John Bloeser, jr., who was then engaged in cabinet making in New York city. Frank learned the trade of cabinet making in the old country, and pursued it in New York city until the death of his brother, when he came to Erie, where he engaged in the same business until 1875. Three years subsequent to his removal, his father followed him to Erie, where he died in 1862. In 1875 Frank Bloeser opened a restaurant on West Fourth street, which he removed to Cascade street for a short time, in 1879 opening at his present location at Third and Cascade. He was married January 1, 1854, to Louisa, daughter of Daniel Stevens, a resident of Meadville, Pa. An adopted child, Mary, is the wife of Henry Quigley, of Conneaut, Ohio, and has three children: Frank, Carrie and William. Mr. Bloeser is an Odd Fellow and a Harugari.

Jacob Heimberger, dealer in meat, Erie, Pa., was born in Hersbruck, Bavaria, May 30, 1843. He is a son of the late Andrew and Mary (Neu) Heimberger, natives of Bavaria, where they resided until 1868, when they came to the United States and located in Erie. Andrew Heimberger died in 1894; his wife survives, and resides on Cascade, near Fourth street. His son, Jacob, was educated at the parochial schools of his native village, learned the trade of butcher, and, in 1860, came to the United States, locating in Erie, where he has since been engaged in the butchering business. In 1890 he purchased Henry Herst's restaurant, at Fourth and Cascade streets, adjoining his meat store, and is the present proprietor of both establishments. He has been twice married; in 1865 to Susan, daughter of Peter Schuster, a native of Bavaria. She died in 1867, leaving no children. He was married in 1870 to Mary, daughter of the late Joachim Knobloch, a brewer and old resident of Erie. Two children born of this marriage are Elizabeth (wife of George Wilkins, a molder, of Erie) and Charles Heimberger, who is associated with his father in business. The family reside at Fourth and Cascade streets, and are members of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Heimberger is a member of the Macbebes and Harugaris.

Albert and Bernard Veit, proprietors of the restaurant at 154 East Eighteenth street, are both natives of Erie. Their father, Tobias Veit, was a native of Neupoltz, Bavaria, where he was born December 6, 1828. He worked upon his father's farm until 1851, when he came to the United States, locating in Erie in October of that year. He was employed as a moulder at the several foundries of Erie until 1888, when he purchased Jacob Kallenbach's restaurant, continued to run it until May, 1894, when it was purchased by his sons, Alfred and Bernard. Tobias Veit was married in November, 1851, to Anna Elizabeth, daughter of Adam Hoffman, also of Neupoltz, Bavaria. Five children of this marriage survive: Albert (unmarried), Bernard (who married Olga, daughter of Dr. Achner, and has one child, Marguerite Alma), Maggie (who married Peter Leiss, an employe of the Erie Car Works, and who has two children, Edward and George), Telga (widow of the late Louis Knaf, and who has four children, Lulu, Ella, William, Mary) and Lena, wife of Patrick Foley, a Lake Shore engineer, who has one child, Mabel.

Martin Lambein, proprietor of the Tenth Avenue Restaurant, Erie, Pa., a native of Saxony, Germany, was born June 9, 1847. He is a son of Martin and Magdalene Lambein, who were also natives of Germany. He received his early education in his native land, and in 1866 came to America and settled in Buffalo, N. Y. Here he remained three years, when he went to Corry, Pa., where he resided two years. In 1871 he came to Erie, and ten years later engaged in the saloon business, which he has since successfully followed. He is now proprietor of the Tenth Avenue Restaurant, which is modern in its appointments and he controls a large and appreciative patronage. Mr. Lambein was married in 1879 to Miss Amelia Weddige, a native of Erie, Pa. Mr. Lambein is a member of the I. O. O. F., and politically is a Republican.

James H. Burns, formerly restaurant proprietor, Erie, Pa., is a native of County Limerick, Ireland, and was born September 2, 1845. His parents, Patrick H. and Mary (Sidley) Burns emigrated to America in 1850 and settled at Painesville, O. They had nine children, of whom James H. is the third. He was reared and educated in Painesville. When a young man he entered the employ of the E. & P. R. R. Company in the capacity of fireman, and three years later was promoted to engineer, and served faithfully at his post on the right side of the locomotive cab for twenty-five years, when he engaged in the restaurant business in Erie until 1895, when he disposed of the business. He was married in 1876 to Miss Alice, daughter of M. Donham, of Erie. They have six children, Edward, Frank, Joseph, Jane, Maggie and Mary. They are members of the Catholic Church and politically he is a Democrat.

Bartley Oess, proprietor of the well-known restaurant situated at 2203 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany August 22, 1842, and is a son of Fedal and Susanna Oess. He was reared and educated in his native land and in 1882 emigrated to America and settled in Erie, where he entered the employ of Jackson Koehler and remained with him until 1891, when he engaged in his present business. He was married July 23, 1868, to Miss Judget Steitle, of Baden, Germany. They have four children, namely: Minnie, Katie, August and Albert. Mr. Oess is politically a Democrat and a member of the Catholic Church.

Theodore Ohmer, a well-known restaurant proprietor of Erie, Pa., was born June 22, 1843, at Herxheim, near Landau, Bavaria. He is a son of Frank C. and Francisca (Schultz) Ohmer, also natives of Germany. Mr. Ohmer is the youngest in a family of eight children. He was reared and educated in his native land and at the age of 20 came to America and immediately settled in Erie. He worked at the cooper's trade until 1891, when he purchased his present property, where he has since carried on a successful business. He was married November 18, 1863, to Miss Apollonia, daughter of John A. and Margarita (Finck) Ohmer, of Germany. They have nine children: Louis, Frank, George, Mary, Joseph, John, Caroline, Josephine and Pauline. Politically Mr. Ohmer is a Democrat. The family are members of the Catholic Church and reside at the corner of Twenty-eighth and Parade streets.

George J. Winter, proprietor of the old established restaurant situated at 126 East Eleventh street, Erie, Pa., was born August 16, 1839, and is a son of George and Theresa (Kreuzer) Winter, natives of Germany. They came to America in 1854 and settled in Erie, where the father worked at tanning for a short time, when he engaged in the restaurant business, which he followed until the time of his death. In the family there were seven children, of whom George is the youngest. He was reared and educated in Erie, where he followed the occupation of a brass-worker five years, then at the death of his father, in 1892, he succeeded him in the restaurant business, and has since been very successful. He was married May 16, 1891, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Alexander and Viola (Blake) Moyer, natives of Pennsylvania. To this union were born two children, Bertha and Mabel. Politically he is a Democrat. He is a member of the St. Benedictus Society, the Catholic Knights of America, and the Erie Catholic Casino. The family are members of the Catholic Church.

S. S. Conrad

Anton J. Kerner, restaurant proprietor, 404 West Eighteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born August 14, 1852, at Erie. He is a son of Jacob and Josephine (Peffer) Kerner, natives of Germany, who came to America about 1845, settling in Erie. Anton is the eldest in a family of eight children. He was reared and educated in Erie, began life on the farm, and subsequently worked in his father's brewery until he was 23 years of age. He then worked for Fred Kowhler for eleven years, when he embarked in the restaurant business for himself at his present location, where he has been very successful. He was married November 11, 1879, to Miss Mary, daughter of Jacob and Teresa Goetz, natives of Germany. To this union were born six children: Jacob A., John W., William, Michael, Kate and Peter A. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Kerner is a member of the C. M. B. A., German Friendship and E. E. T. Politically he is a Democrat.

Emil Uhlmann, restaurant proprietor, 664 West Eighteenth street, was born in Germany August 14, 1861, and is a son of August and Emilie (Miller) Uhlmann, natives of Germany. He was reared and educated in Germany, and in 1880 came to America. He settled in Erie and followed his trade, that of tinsmith, until 1891, when he engaged in the restaurant business at his present location, where he enjoys an extensive trade. He was married July 11, 1883, to Miss Mary Findeis, of Germany. To this union have been born six children, Martha, Leopold, Charles, Fred, William and Lilli. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Uhlmann is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, D. O. H., and politically is a Republican.

Patrick Applebee, Erie, Pa., was born in Scotland March 31, 1850. He is a son of Thomas and Alice (McGrevy) Applebee, who are natives of Ireland. Of a family of nine children he is the fourth. He was reared and educated in Ireland, and at the age of 19 came to America, settled in Erie, and entered the employ of the Erie City Iron Works, where he remained one year. He then worked in the Erie blast furnace four years, when he entered the United States navy and served on the steamer "Michigan" five years, and, in 1881, was appointed on the Erie police force, where he served ten years. In 1891 he engaged in business at 332 State street, where he has a very handsome restaurant. He was married May 29, 1869, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Michael Fahney, a native of Ireland. They have five children, Annie, Alice, Maggie, William and John. Mr. Applebee and family are members of the Catholic Church, and he is also a member of the C. M. B. A. Politically he is a Democrat.

C. M. Hughson, Erie, Pa., was born at Sacketts Harbor, N. Y., April 5, 1860, and is a son of Caleb and Lois (Toles) Hughson, the former a native of England and the latter of New York. Mr. Hughson is the fifth in a family of thirteen children. He was reared and educated in Sacketts Harbor. After he left school he ran an express business at Sacketts Harbor, and at the same time engaged in the livery business and was United States mail messenger for five years. He then went to Boston and worked on the Cambridge R. R. about four years, when he came to Erie and was a bartender for six years. In 1894 he went into the restaurant business at No. 102 Sassafras street, which he has since successfully conducted. Mr. Hughson was married July 20, 1894, to Miss Jennie, daughter of Isaac and Lizzie (Wright) Burns, natives of Ireland. They have four children, viz.: Raymond, Norman, Ralph and Caleb (deceased). The family are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Hughson is a member of the I. O. O. F., and politically is a Republican.

William J. Kelley, restaurateur, 517 French street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie November 5, 1868, and is a son of James and Mary (Mahoney) Kelley, the former a native of Ireland, the latter of Erie. They were parents of eleven children, of whom William is the eighth. He was reared and educated in Erie, and after finishing school began teaching for James Burns, where he remained two years. He then took charge of Massassauga Point Hotel bar, and remained two years. In June, 1893, he embarked in his present business, which he has successfully conducted since. Mr. Kelley is married. He is a member of the Catholic Church, the Catholic Legion, and politically is a Democrat.

Valentine Wagner, restaurant proprietor, 327 East Tenth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany, December 31, 1834. He was the son of Henrich and Catherine (Leingang) Wagner, natives of Germany, and was third in a family of nine children. Mr. Wagner was reared and educated in Germany, came to America in 1853, locating in Erie, where he worked in an oilcloth factory until 1856. He then went to California, where he worked twelve years as a gold digger. From California he went to Montana, where for seven months he slept on the ground, covered with three inches of snow, part of the time. He made the trip from California to Montana on horseback, and the trip took 54 days. After three years' experience in the Montana gold diggings he returned to Erie and was engaged in peddling for seven years. In 1879 he became interested in the restaurant business (succeeding his brother, George Wagner, who died), and has since been in that business. In 1883 he built his present place, where he has been very successful. He was married January 30, 1873, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Haberzettel) Peter, natives of Austria. They have three children, Julia, George and Rose. In politics Mr. Wagner is independent. The family are members of the Catholic Church, and he is a member of the C. M. B. A. He is also a member of St. Benedictus Society. In 1892 he made a trip to Germany and Austria to visit relatives, remaining there three months.

Frank Nagosky, restaurant proprietor, 418 East Twelfth street, Erie, Pa., a native of Prussia, was born August 14, 1865, and is a son of Joseph Nagosky, also a native of Prussia. Frank, who was reared and educated in his native land, in 1885 emigrated to America and settled in Erie, where he entered the employ of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company. He remained in the employ of that institution for four years, when he entered the employ of his brother as a wine clerk, where he remained five years. In January, 1893, he engaged in the restaurant business at his present stand, where he has been remarkably successful. He was married May 17, 1892, to Miss Anna Bospinski, of Erie. One child has been born to this union, Dora. Mr. and Mrs. Nagosky are members of the Catholic Church and he is a member of St. Mary's Society and St. Benedictus Society.

John Sandusky, proprietor of the restaurant at 760 East Twelfth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie, March 3, 1843, and is a son of John and Christina (Einstead) Sandusky, natives of Poland and Hanover, Germany, respectively. The family came to America in 1838, and located in Erie, where Mr. Sandusky worked as laborer. His death occurred in 1854, aged 66 years. Mrs. Sandusky departed this life in 1884, aged 83 years. To this couple were born five children: Charles (deceased), Minnie (deceased), wife of Philip Liebel; Jacob, John and William, traveling engineer for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. John Sandusky received his education in the public schools of Erie, and when 11 years of age began the battle of life as a farm hand in Mill Creek township, working on the farm for nine years. He then followed railroading for two years, as brakeman and fireman. After this he followed contracting for two years. He then worked for seven years as cranesman on a dredge, owned and operated by the P. & E. R. R. Company, after which he was appointed a patrolman on the Erie police force, serving for sixteen years, for the last two years as roundsman. In the spring of 1891 he opened his present place of business, and by fair dealing and close attention to business he now enjoys a lucrative patronage. Mr. Sandusky was united in marriage, August 1, 1869, to Miss Mary, daughter of George Crater, of Erie, and to them have been born six children: Sarah, Mrs. Max Schenfeld; Minnie (deceased), Emma, at home; Nora (deceased), Charles and Edward. Mr. Sandusky is one of the popular restaurateurs of Erie, conducting a strictly first-class house. He is a member of the United Workmen, and in politics is a Republican.

Julius Moske, proprietor of the restaurant, 502 East Eleventh street, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany, February 2, 1832, and is a son of Peter and Anna (Garski) Moske, natives of Germany, where the father, a potter by trade, died in 1866, aged 74 years. His wife departed this life the same year, aged 45 years. There were five children born to them: Joseph, a farmer in Germany; John (deceased), Julius, Rosa, wife of Michael Holtz, of Erie, Pa., and August, a shoemaker in Germany. Julius Moske came to America, in 1872, when 30 years of age. He had received a good education in his native country, and locating in Erie, found employment the first summer in a lumber yard. Following this he worked one year as section hand for the P. & E. R. R., and the following spring he hired out as farm hand in Springfield township, working six months. He then entered the employ of C. M. Conrad, working in his brewery over sixteen years, and for the last nine years was foreman of that establishment. In the spring of 1887 he opened a grocery store at the corner of Thirteenth and Wallace streets, which was managed for two years by his wife, he still holding his position in the brewery. In the spring of 1889 he left the employ of Mr. Conrad, and devoted his attention to the grocery business. In the spring of 1895 he sold out and purchased his present restaurant business of John F. Elbers. Mr. Moske was married May 29, 1879, to Miss Salamea Maleske, of Erie, Pa., a native of Poland, and to them have been born ten children: John (deceased), Antonio, a clerk in his father's grocery store; Martin (deceased), Rosa, Anna, Julius (deceased), Charles, Mary, Frank and Joseph. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Moske is a member of the Order of St. Benedictus, the German Friendship Society, and the C. M. B. A. He owns the store property, corner of Thirteenth and Wallace streets, and also three houses, Nos. 455 East Thirteenth street, 724 East Thirteenth, and 534 East Twelfth street, all of them kept for renting. Mr. Moske resides in the building, where he does business, 502 East Eleventh street. His fair dealing and genial ways making him a popular and successful restaurateur.

Michael Keller, proprietor of the restaurant, No. 1515 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany, April 17, 1859, and is a son of Anthony and Elizabeth (Kuhn) Keller, both natives of Germany. The former is a boatman on the River Rhine, the latter died in Germany. To them were born five children: George, a bricklayer in Erie; Mary, Michael, Frances and Conrad. Michael and his brother, George, are the only members of the family who came to America. Michael received a common school education, and learned the mason trade in his native country, and in 1880 came to America, and located in Erie, Pa., where he learned brick-laying, and followed that trade till 1885, when he began contracting brick and stone work, and has done some of the finest work in Erie, among which we mention the handsome and massive stone residence of H. F. Watson, Memmorchor Hall, Pennsylvania Boiler Works, Zuck's Hardware building, Shaw Piano Works, and many other equally large contracts. He bought his present restaurant business from T. M. Alberstadt, the latter part of April, 1895, and, although new to the business, is conducting it in a practical manner that will insure him a prosperous trade in his section. He is a thorough business man, and possesses the energy and push that wins success. Mr. Keller was married to Miss Mary, daughter of Anton Kerner, and to them were born four children: Michael (deceased), Anthony, Louisa and George (deceased). After the death of his first wife, Mr. Keller was united in marriage to Miss Magdalena, daughter of Christopher Mehl, and to this union have been born three children: Margaret, Rose and Kate. The family are members of the German Catholic Church. He is a member of the C. M. B. A., the German Benevolent Society, of which he is president; the South Erie Turners, and the Erie Männerchor. In politics he is independent. Mr. Keller resides at the corner of Twenty-sixth and Cochran streets, where he owns two fine houses.

George W. Heisler, proprietor of the restaurant at 825 East Eighteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Philadelphia, May 18, 1857, and is a son of John and Barbara (Kramer) Heisler, both natives of Germany. John Heisler, a carpenter by trade, came to America about 1850, and located in Philadelphia, where he followed his trade for a long time. Later he moved to Gowanda, N. Y., where he died March 17, 1892, and where his widow still resides. George received his early education in Philadelphia, and went to Gowanda, N. Y., with his parents when 10 years of age; here he attended school for three years and then went to work in a machine shop, and after completing the trade three years later, he went to Buffalo, where he worked three months; then to Springfield, N. Y., for six months, after which he worked in Gowanda for a short time, going from there to Titusville, Pa., where he worked for two years. From here he went to Pittsburgh, and in March, 1879, came to Erie and worked for the Stearnes Manufacturing Company. A few weeks later he went to Cleveland, Ohio; Elkhart, Ind., and Buffalo, N. Y., working a short time in each place, and from Buffalo he came back to Erie to work for the Stearnes Company, remaining five months. He then went to Rochester, N. Y., where he worked three years, and again returned to Erie, re-engaging with the Stearnes Company, where he remained until May, 1895, when he bought his present business from C. Kabe, sr. He was elected to the common council from the Fifth ward in February, 1895. He is a member of the K. of P., and in politics is a Republican. Mr. Heisler was married October 27, 1881, to Miss Sarah, daughter of George Lauer, of Rochester N. Y., and to them have been born four sons: John G., Fred L., Harry W., and Carl. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

Edward T. Runser, proprietor of the Exchange restaurant, 1614 Peach street, Erie, Pa., was born in this city March 18, 1864, a son of Frederick and Katherine (Alberstadt) Runser, the former a native of Erie county, Pennsylvania, and the latter of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. The former is flagman at the crossing at Nineteenth and Plum streets for the N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R. The latter died July 3, 1886, aged 50 years. To this union were born nine children: Frederick (deceased), Charles, a forman for the Ridgeway Manufacturing Company, at Ridgeway, Pa.; Katherine, Mrs. M. Deitch, of East Mill Creek; Barbara, Mrs. Edward Buseck, of Erie; Edward T., Frank X., employed by the Lovell Manufacturing Company; Helena, Mrs. P. Cummin (deceased); Amelia and Julia, both at home with the father, residence Sixteenth and Walnut streets. Edward T. Runser received his education in the parochial school of South Erie, and when 13 years of age began work in the mounting shops for the Chicago and Erie Stove Company, and worked up to foreman of the pattern shops. He resigned his position to become city agent for T. S. Alberstadt, wholesale liquor dealer, a position he held till May, 1895. He purchased his present business from Thomas Rossi, who had conducted it since 1875, the transfer being made June 10, 1895. Mr. Runser was married April 26, 1887, to Miss Mary A., daughter of William Boettger, of Niagara Falls, and to them have been born three children: Elizabeth, born May 20, 1888; Edward J., born August 1, 1890, and Marie, born September 15, 1893. Mr. and Mrs. Runser are members of St. Michael's German Catholic Church. Mr. Runser is a member of St. Joseph's Branch, No. 9, of the C. M. B. A., of which he is past chancellor. He is lieutenant colonel of Battalion No. 1 of northwestern Pennsylvania of the Knights of St. John, financial secretary of Commandery No. 222, K. of St. J., and a member of St. Alphonsus Relief Society, also of the Sixth Ward Sibley Democratic Club, of which he was captain. In politics Mr. Runser is an Independent Democrat.

John Spetz, proprietor of the restaurant at 903 East avenue, Erie, Pa., was born in Waterloo, Canada, June 11, 1832, and is a son of Theobald and Marian (Hahner) Spetz, natives of Germany. John was educated in the common schools of his birthplace, and when 14 years of age went to work as a farm hand, following the same for seven years. He then worked a rented farm for four years, and following this he conducted a hotel for seven years, and in the fall of 1864 he came to the United States and located in Erie. Purchasing teams he followed teaming for some time, and later managed a threshing machine. Becoming interested in a stone quarry he handled it in connection with farming operations. In the spring of 1891 he opened a grocery store at 901 East avenue, and in April, 1895, he was granted a restaurant license at 903 East avenue. Mr. Spetz was married September 26, 1853, to Miss Mary Kramer, of Canada, and to them have been born fifteen children: Magdalena, Mrs. John Kuhn, of Erie; John, jr., proprietor of the grocery, 901 East avenue; Marian, Mrs. John T. Sullivan, of Portland, Ore.; Columbus, proprietor of the meat market, corner of Ninth and East avenue; Henry, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume; Minnie, a Sister of St. Benedict; Katharine, George (deceased), Nicholas (deceased), Margaret, at home; Philip, bartender for his father; Jacob (deceased), Josephine (deceased), Frank (deceased) and August (deceased). The family are members of St. Mary's German Catholic Church. Mr. Spetz is a member of the Order of St. George, and in politics he is independent.

Conrad Darling, proprietor of the restaurant, No. 260 East Eleventh street, Erie, Pa., born in Erie December 21, 1861, is a son of Conrad and Odilia Darling. He received his education in the East Tenth street Catholic school, and when 14 years of age found employment in the brass department of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, where he worked till 1883, when he was engaged by the Buffalo base ball team as catcher, and played with them until hurt, in July of that year. In 1884 he caught for the Franklin Pa., team; in 1885 for Syracuse, N. Y.; in 1886 for Toronto, Canada; in 1887-88-89 for Chicago, and in 1890 for the Chicago Brotherhood team; in 1891 for Minneapolis, and in 1892 for Toledo, which was his last ball playing. This gentleman was one of the most successful catchers of his day. He bought his present restaurant business from W. P. Brown in May, 1895, and having a host of friends and always ready to entertain them with the best the market affords, he has assurance of a lucrative business. Mr. Darling was married January 7, 1892, to Anna Krum, of Erie. They have one son, John Conrad, born February 28, 1894. Mr. and Mrs. Darling are members of St. Mary's German Catholic Church. He is a member of the East Erie Turners, and in politics is independent.

John F. Grant, proprietor of the restaurant 1301 German street, Erie, Pa., born in Erie March 26, 1858, is a son of Edward and Catherine (Neil) Grant, natives of County Wicklow, Ireland. He came to America about 1845 and located in Erie, where he was employed until his death, December 3, 1893, aged 65 years. His wife died in 1885, aged 56 years. To this union were born three children: Mary, James and John F., the latter being the only one living. He received a good education in No. 2 school, Erie, and when 17 years old went to work in the foundry for the Jarecki Company, where he learned the moulding trade, and found occupation for 15 years. He then went successively to Springfield, O., Cleveland, O., Marion, Ind., Decatur, Ala., and to Chattanooga, Tenn. He followed his trade in each of these cities, and in 1891 returned to Erie and found employment again with the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, remaining until February, 1895, when he purchased his present business from Valentine Wagner, May 14, 1895. Mr. Grant was united in marriage December 22, 1894. The family are members of the Roman Catholic and Baptist Churches, respectively. Mr. Grant is a thorough business man and his restaurant is managed on business principles.

John Crotty, proprietor of the restaurant at 332 West Eighteenth street, Erie, Pa., was born in Erie county January 27, 1859, and is a son of Thomas and Kate (Downs) Crotty, natives of Ireland, who came to America in 1845 and settled in Erie county. In 1872 he commenced life, working in the Burdett Organ factory, where he remained nine years. He then worked in the W. L. Scott rolling mills for four years. In 1885 he engaged in the restaurant business, which he has since carried on with considerable success. Mr. Crotty was married July 6, 1893, to Miss Minnie, daughter of George P. and Catherine (Coon) Schwab, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Erie county. To this union were born two children, Lillian and Aurelia M. The family are members of the Catholic Church. He is a member of the Maccabees. In politics he is a Democrat.

John Deitz, proprietor of the Farmer's Home, 826 Parade street, Erie, Pa., is a native of Germany. He was born January 29, 1863, and is a son of John and Julia (Hoerner) Deitz, who were also natives of Germany. In the family there were seven children, five boys and two girls. John was reared and educated in his native land, and in June, 1881, emigrated to America and immediately settled in Erie. He worked about the city for some time, having been in the employ of Jackson Koehler most of the time up to 1891, when he engaged in the saloon business at the corner of Eighth and Ash streets. This he continued one year, and in 1892 opened his present hotel on Parade street. He was married January 26, 1889, to Miss Bertha, daughter of Gustav Hoffman, of Erie. Mr. Deitz is a very popular and enterprising landlord. He is always up to date in business, and the excellence of his house is fully recognized and appreciated by the public. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the Odd Fellow Encampment and politically is a Republican. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

Daniel W. Hatch, farmer, Hatch Hollow, Erie county, Pa., was born in Hatch Hollow on the farm he now owns March 20, 1841, and is the third in a family of twelve children of Jason C. and Elizabeth (King) natives of New York state. Mr. Hatch is a grandson of Roswell Hatch, a soldier in the war of 1812, a prominent citizen and founder of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Hatch Hollow, where he passed his life. Daniel is a son of Jason C. Hatch, who was born in Herkimer county, New York, in 1808 and married Mary A. King. She died in 1838 and he afterwards married her younger sister, Elizabeth, daughter of Levi King, born in Vermont in 1784, who, with his father, Adinijah, born in 1757, settled in Waterford township in 1835. Adinijah, familiarly known as the "Yankee king," died in Waterford. To Jason C. were born fifteen children, ten surviving: Edwin, Daniel W., George, Arvilla, Julia, Scott, Elwin, Wilson, Eugene and Fred. Daniel W. and George and Cyrus served in the late war; the latter was killed in the first battle of Fredericksburg. Jason was extensively engaged in farming, and at the time of his death, in 1865, owned over 600 acres of land. Daniel W. was reared and educated in the public schools of his birthplace and followed farming until September 16, 1861, when he enlisted in Co. K, 83d P. V. I., under command of Capt. Thomas M. Austin, of Erie, Pa. He was sent immediately to the seat of war and participated in the sieges of Yorktown, battles of Hanover Court House, Gaines Mills, Malvern Hill and second Bull Run. At the latter place he was severely wounded by a minie ball, which pierced his head near the right temple, on a line with his right eye, and lodged under his left eye, shattering the cheek bone. The wound came so near being fatal that his reason almost forsook him, yet he knew his great danger, crawled from the battle-field and was picked up by a man who was drawing ammunition from Centerville to the battle-field. When he arrived at Centerville, a small place several miles from the battle-field, Mr. Hatch got out, it being about dusk, and, although very weak from the loss of blood, managed to crawl into an empty house, where he slept, or at least was unconscious until morning; when he awoke he found that while he slept the house had been filled with soldiers, some dead and others severely wounded. After dressing his wound as best he could at a brook near by, and drinking some coffee which was being distributed and a little brandy a kind stranger offered, he started for Washington, a distance of thirty miles, but about four miles out he became unconscious and remained in that condition some hours; when he returned to consciousness an ambulance relief corps was passing, and he was placed in one of the cots made vacant by a soldier who had died from his wounds. After three days tedious march the corps reached Washington, and Mr. Hatch was taken to the Union Hospital at Georgetown, remaining there two months, when he was transferred to the general hospital at Newark, N. J. He was under treatment for about one year, carrying the bullet for eight months before it was removed. On leaving the hospital he was transferred to the Veteran Reserve corps, and did service there until September 24, 1864, when he was mustered out of the service, and thus he closed a highly honorable career as a private of that noble army of citizen soldiers to which we as a nation owe a debt of gratitude that must remain a debt to all posterity, for no material rewards can ever repay courageous self-sacrifice, and even the roll of honor contains but a scant list of those who earned the right to a place there. Mr. Hatch returned to the old homestead immediately after being discharged, and took charge of the farm. His father dying soon after his return home. Mr. Hatch in 1865 bought out the heirs and succeeded to the old homestead, which consists of 200 acres of well-cultivated land, which is used for dairying and stock purposes. Mr. Hatch was united in marriage January 1, 1866, to Miss Chloe A., daughter of N. Versal and Abigail (Parker) Hatch, of Allen county, Indiana. Six children have been born to this union, namely: Theresa M., now wife of Harry G. Lockwood; Arthur C., of Lewiston, Mont.; Samuel B., Jason V., Ruth and Florence M. Mr. Hatch is a staunch Republican and a member of the G. A. R. He is also a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Hatch is one of Erie county's most substantial citizens, and the family, which consists of a household of interesting children and an amiable wife, makes this home one of the pleasantest in the land.

Charles G. Barnes, farmer, Juva, Erie county, Pa., was born September 13, 1822, and is a son of Levi and Susan (Carpon) Barnes, the former a native of Connecticut, and the latter of Vermont. He is the second in a family of nine children, and was reared and educated in Union township. After leaving school, January 20, 1845, he married Laura Ann Moses, by whom he had nine children, six of whom are now living. He worked at farming and carpenter work until 1852, when he went to Connetquot, O., where he remained three years, and in 1855, came back to Union township. In 1859, he went to Titusville, Pa., where he worked at the carpenter's and joiner's trade for fifteen years. November 9, 1878, he was united in marriage to Sarah J., daughter of James and Florette (Pringal) Marcy, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of New York. They have one child, Levi. Mrs. Barnes was first married, September 10, 1855, to Elijah Foster. Two children were born to this union: Emma (deceased) and Ella, now Mrs. Leslie Barnes, of Hutchinson, Kas. Mr. Foster was killed near Erie, in 1865, about the time he returned from the war, having served three years. She was remarried, February 19, 1869, to Charles Capron. To them were born four children: Amy, Mrs. John Brown; Leonard A., Abner P. and Ina A. Mr. Capron died in 1874. Mr. Barnes is a member of the Free Will Baptist Church, is an ardent supporter of the Prohibitionist party, a conscientious citizen, and is upright and honorable in all his dealings.

John C. Ellithrop, postmaster, Arbutckle, Amity township, Erie county, Pa., is a native of Edinburgh, Saratoga county, N. Y., and was born March 18, 1842. He is the only child of Amasa S. and Gertrude (Corl) Ellithrop, also natives of Saratoga county, New York. He was reared and educated in Chautauque county, New York, and after completing his education, taught school two years. In 1870 he came to Erie county, Pennsylvania, and at the age of 29 learned the blacksmith's trade, settling in Amity township, where he lived until he was married, all the time, excepting three years spent in Greene township. He has followed his trade all the time. He was appointed postmaster under Cleveland's first administration. In 1892 he was again appointed postmaster, which commission he now holds. His efficiency and integrity in the discharge of his duties as a public official has been marked by his re-appointment to the same position a second time. He is also engaged in the general mercantile business in Arbutckle as partner. He was united in marriage December 19, 1872, to Clara, daughter of Evan and Mary A. (Faulkner) Roberts, natives of Delaware county, New York. This union has been blessed with three children: Archie Roy (deceased), E. Perry (deceased) and Adrian Drew. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Ellithrop is a member of the Masonic order. He is well known through the county as a strong advocate of the Democratic party.

Charles S. Cox, general merchant and manufacturer, Arbutckle, Pa., was born July 30, 1819, at Grafton, Windham county, Vt., and is the third in a family of fifteen children of Samuel and Laura (Putnam) Cox, the former a native of Londonderry, Windham county, Vt., born March 6, 1792, and the latter a relative of General Putnam, the Revolutionary hero, was born May 7, 1798, in Ashburham, Wooster county, Mass. The Putnam family came from England in 1684, settling in Salem, Mass. Charles was reared and educated at his birthplace in Vermont, and when quite a lad the family came to Oswego county, New York, June 1, 1831, where they lived until September 4, 1846, when he came to Erie county and engaged in chair-making and general cabinet work. In 1848 he returned to McKean township, on Elk creek, and did wagon repairing and chair-making until 1859, when he removed to Venango township, where he did farming until 1863, when he came to Arbutckle, then known as Milltown, Amity township. He purchased the planing and shingle mill owned by W. A. Donaldson, and has operated it successfully since. He has added a cider and feed mill. It was formerly a water power, but the increased business made it necessary for Mr. Cox to put in steam. At this writing these mills are doing an extensive business. Mr. Cox was united in marriage April 30, 1845, to Miss Nancy, daughter of John and Margaret (Bush) Van Buren, the former a relative of Martin Van Buren. Nancy Van Buren was born in Cherry Valley, Ostego county, N. Y., as was her father and mother. Eight children have been born to this union: Margaret A., born March 29, 1846, died August 3, 1847; Edward J., born in McKean, Erie county, Pa., September 1, 1848, died September 24, 1885; Lucy J., born in Venango October 19, 1850; Julia E., born May 19, 1853; Maria E., born July 14, 1856; Eugene S., born January 21, 1859; Marvin J., born July 19, 1861; William Silas, born February 1, 1864, died September 17, 1887. Mr. Cox is an ardent supporter of the Prohibition party. Eugene S. Cox is in business with his father in the mill, and has charge of that part of the work. He was reared and educated in Erie county and has always worked with his father. They employ about five hands. Eugene was married January 18, 1889, to Adalaide, a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Sloe) Madison. They have three children: Edna, Leah and Gerald. Charles Cox has a general store at Arbutckle, which takes his entire time to look after.

Henry Mulvin, farmer and mason, Amity township, postoffice Wattsburg, was born in Amity, June 2, 1846, and is the seventh in a family of twelve children of Robert and Mary (Middleton) Mulvin, natives of Ireland, the father being brought to this country when but 11 years of age. Henry was reared and educated in his birthplace, and, when but a lad of 15, being of a patriotic impulse, he enlisted in Company L, 12th Pa. Vol. Cav., under Capt. O. B. Tourtellott. This boy soldier participated in the following engagements: Bristow Station, August 27, 1862; Manassas, August 28, 1862; South Mountain, September 14, 1862; Antietam, September 17, 1862; Strasburg, April 22-27, 1863; Jane Lien, May 19, 1863; McConnellsburg, Pa., June 28, 1863; Maryland Line, July 5, 1863. At the last named place 648 persons, 550 horses and mules, three brass 12-pounders and 120 wagons were taken by 200 cavalry, without the loss of a man. The other engagements in which Mr. Mulvin participated were fought at Tomahawk, October, 1863; Bolivar, July 4, 1864; Frederick City, July 13-15, 1864; Monocacy Bridge, July 9, 1864; Winchester, July 23-24, 1864; Charlottesville, Va., August 22, 1864. He was captured at Winchester, June 13, 1863, and taken to Libby prison, where he was kept a month, and then taken to Belle Island, where he was kept for four months, when he was exchanged. The above record shows what kind of schooling this young soldier went through, and those who know of the work in those campaigns will recognize that Henry Mulvin was a brave soldier and a courageous lad who saw hard service for one so young. He was made of plucky stuff. To such men we owe the safety of our country. Mr. Mulvin was mustered out of the service in July, 1865. After returning from the war he followed the trade of a mason, building extensively, and at this writing still works at his trade. In 1874 he purchased a farm, in Amity township, of fifty acres. He was married June 2, 1868, to Miss Abigail, daughter of George W. and Luetta (Brooks) Baldwin, natives of New York. To this union were born six children: Eva, now Mrs. Morris Bredt; Edith, who died January 22, 1893, being at that time the wife of La Verne Huntley, of Union City; Mary, Charles, Robert and George. Mr. Mulvin was a non-commissioned officer during the war, holding rank as corporal all through the service. He is a Prohibitionist in politics, and the family are members of the United Brethren Church.

John W. Munsee, farmer, Amity township, post-office Hatch Hollow, was born in Venango township, Erie county, November 19, 1842, and is the eldest in a family of twelve children of Harvey and Almida (Drake) Munsee, the former a native of New York, and the latter of Erie county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Munsee was reared and educated in his birthplace, and in December, 1863, enlisted in Co. K, 83d P. V. I., under Capt. Hechtman. He was in the following engagements: The Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anne, South Anne, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Weldon Road, Hatcher's Run, Pine Forks and Appomattox. While engaged in building fortifications at Petersburg, Mr. Munsee was seriously and almost fatally injured by a large log rolling on him. This was the only injury he received during his service, except a slight scalp wound, but it was of such a serious nature that his health has been impaired ever since. After this distressing accident, Mr. Munsee was taken to the Jersey City Hospital, where he remained until able to get about. He was mustered out of the service July 23, 1865, by general order of the war department. Mr. Munsee was rated as one of the bravest soldiers in the service; he was always found at his post, and ready to undertake any duty imposed on him as a soldier. His grandfather, John Munsee, set him a glorious example of what a soldier should be by his gallant service during the war of 1812, in which he was seriously wounded. The parting words of his grandfather, Munsee, before John left for the war, were: "John, never get shot in the back," and his subsequent record proved that he heeded the advice. Mr. Munsee returned to Venango township after the war, and worked at farming on the old homestead until 1876, when he purchased a farm of 110 acres at Hatch Hollow, Pa., where he now resides. His farm is one of the most productive in the county, and Mr. Munsee is an enterprising and thrifty farmer. He was united in marriage, January 5, 1870, to Miss Kate, daughter of John B. and Mary (Phelps) Chaffee, natives of Pennsylvania. To this union have been born three children, namely: La, now Mrs. Perry Johnson; Ross and Rex. Mr. Munsee is independent in politics, and is a member of the G. A. R.

Clark McAllister, Union City, Pa., a farmer of Amity township, was born in Greenfield township, Erie county, Pa., February 28, 1837, and is a son of David and Susanna (Nason) McAllister, the former a native of Massachusetts, and the latter of Vermont. In the family there were twelve children: David, jr., Caroline, Henry, first (deceased), Henry, second (deceased), Harriet (deceased), Chauncy, Freeman O., Sarah (deceased), Clark, Orrin J. and John (deceased). Clark McAllister was reared and educated in Union township, and in 1855 went West, spending some time in each of the States of Ohio and Minnesota. In 1859 he crossed the plains with an ox-team, going to Washington and California, and engaged in gold mining in Idaho, also visiting Oregon. After the gold excitement had subsided he returned home in Amity township, where he remained on the farm until December 29, 1863, when he enlisted in Co. K, 83d P. V. I., under Capt. John Hechtman. He participated in the following battles: Wilderness, Spottsylvania (wounded there), North Anne, South Anne, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Weldon R. R., Hatcher's Run, Five Forks and Appomattox. He was mustered out by general order of war department, June 28, 1865. Six of these brothers were in the service: Henry, second, was killed at Ft. Ridgely; David, through exposure, lost his health in the service, and never recovered. Few families of the North so thoroughly demonstrated their loyalty to the cause of the Union as did the McAllister family of Erie county. They were born-soldiers, every one, and their loyalty to their country in its hour of peril was only equalled by their bravery on the field. At the close of the great civil struggle Clark returned to the farm, and cared for his parents until their deaths, the father dying September 19, 1871, and the mother, May 17, 1891. He succeeded to the old homestead, which consists of 131 acres of well-improved land, where he carried on an extensive dairying and stock business. He was married October 17, 1867, to Miss Araminta N., daughter of Aaron and Emily (Hare) Ormsby, natives of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the G. A. R., I. O. O. F., and Grange, and politically is a Republican.

Alexander Campbell Cordon, farmer, Elgin, Erie county, Pa., was born at Jefferson, Ohio, July 25, 1831, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Shadrif) Cordon, the former a native of County Down, Ireland, who came to America in 1827, settling at Steubenville, Ohio, and subsequently removing to Flushing, Ohio, where he was engaged in the manufacturing of woolen goods until his death, which occurred in 1873. The mother was born in Maryland, and when but a child the family removed to Ohio, where John met and subsequently married her. They were the parents of twelve children, namely: Alexander C., James, Adam, William, Jesse, Margaret, Sarah, Joseph, Isaac, Benjamin, Mary J. and Albert. Alexander was reared and educated in Belmont county, Ohio, and worked in his father's factory until 22 years of age, when he came to Crawford county, Pennsylvania, and engaged in farming, remaining there two years. In 1859 he bought his present property in Concord township, which consists of 100 acres of fertile land. It is a dairy and stock farm. From 1873 until 1877 Mr. Cordiner was engaged in drilling wells in the oil regions, and from 1878 to 1879 he was prospecting in Kansas and Colorado, and at the present time owns a valuable silver mine in Colorado. Mr. Cordiner was united in marriage April 5, 1859, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Robert and Matilda (Carson) McCray, natives of Erie county. To this union have been born nine children: John A., Theodore, William S. (deceased), Mary (deceased), Georgiana (deceased), Fred (deceased), Lizzie (now Mrs. Kinney, of Ormell, Ohio), S. Elois, wife of John Phelps, proprietor of the Coleman House, Union City; and Archie, at home. Mr. Cordiner has been identified with the Republican party since its organization. The family are members of the Christian Church.

G. W. Heywang, lumberman, Elgin, Concord township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Union City, Erie county, in 1807. He is a son of Jacob and Salome (Califisch) Heywang; the former died in 1872, and the latter is still living in Union City. Jacob Heywang was a native of France, and came to Erie county about 1805. Of Jacob's family there were five children, as follows: M. J., now an attorney in Titusville, Crawford county; Henry, of Union City, Erie county; G. W.; Lydia (deceased); and Ida (deceased). Mr. Heywang was married in 1833 to Grace Dishrow, daughter of W. F. Dishrow, of Erie. They have one daughter, Cora. Mr. Heywang is a member of the firm of Califisch Bros. & Co., lumbermen, at Elgin, and has charge of a large mill at Concord Station since 1892. He is a member of Clement Lodge, No. 220, I. O. O. F., Union City, and the Royal Arcanum, Union City. He is an energetic and progressive citizen.

Ira Crandell, farmer, Corry postoffice, Concord township, was born September 20, 1822, in Cherry Creek, Chautauqua county, New York. He first went to Erie county in 1854, and afterwards removed to Clymer, N. Y., but returned to this county nine years ago and has since resided upon his present farm. He is a son of Gardiner Crandell, a veteran of the war of 1812, who was married in New England to Sally Grenell, of Rhode Island, and came to Cherry Creek, Chautauqua county, N. Y., about eighty years ago. He died in 1875. In 1859 Ira Crandell married Susan Lydia, daughter of Hiram Corey (the city of Corry now bears his name). He originally sold the site from the clay of which the bricks were made with which the first buildings were erected. His life was an active one and for many years he was an extensive cattle dealer. For some years he kept hotel at Westfield, N. Y. Mr. Corey died in Sparta, Crawford county, Pa. His widow, whose maiden name was Adelia Hall, a native of Vermont, now lives in Mayville, N. Y. The children of this union were: Henry (deceased), Adeline, wife of Nelson Crandell; Susan Lydia, wife of Ira Crandell; Eliza wife of Sanders Crivens; Mary, wife of Joel Cornish, and Perry Corey. Mr. and Mrs. Ira Crandell have one daughter, Alice Marion, wife of Leroy Youngs. This family consists of two daughters, Mabel and Violetta.

Wilson C. McCray, retired farmer, Concord township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Concord township, January 26, 1835, and is a son of John and Sarah (Blakeslee) McCray, natives of Pennsylvania. James McCray, grandfather of Wilson, came to America from Scotland about the year of 1788, settling in Erie county when it was a vast wilderness. Wilson McCray, the sixth in a family of sixteen children, was reared and educated in his birthplace, and has until recently been an extensive farmer and land owner. He has, during his farming experience, owned and operated sixteen different farms. He was united in marriage December 2, 1855, to Miss Cynthia, daughter of Abner H. and Lorence (Porter) Lilley, natives of New York State. Nine children have been born to this union: Celia, Phineas, Leon, Grant, Clement, Josephine, John, Ray and Mary. In politics Mr. McCray has always been a staunch Republican. Grant McCray, fourth in order of birth of Wilson's children, was born May 10, 1862, was reared in Concord township and educated in the public schools, and has always followed farming, in 1889, purchasing his present property at Concord Station, which consists of sixty-six acres of first-class farming land. He has since bought twenty acres, making in all eighty-seven acres. Besides this farm Mr. McCray owns a valuable pasture farm of fifty acres. He was married March 29, 1884, to Miss Addie, daughter of Harvey and Sarah (Roberts) Roberts, natives of Wales. This union has been blessed by three children: Lou, Ernest and Dorr. In politics Mr. McCray is a Republican, and at present holds the offices of school director and road commissioner. He is one of Concord's most thriving and energetic citizens.

A. L. Hasbrook, farmer, Corry postoffice, Concord township, was born in Crawford county in 1865. He is a son of William and Martha (Haviland) Hasbrook, and was married April 23, 1890, to Elsie, daughter of John C. Crowell, of Concord township. They have one daughter, Ore. W. W. Hasbrook, father of A. L., resides on the farm, a part of the old homestead, where he was born May 15, 1842. He was married June 20, 1867, to Martha C. Haviland, who died November 10, 1867, leaving but one child, A. L. January 3, 1871, Mr. Hasbrook was married to Sara A., widow of J. R. Russell, and daughter of Allen G. and Rachel (Brink) Heath. She was born October 12, 1850, in West Fairfield, Crawford county, Pa., and died in 1887. Three children blessed this union: Frank A., Ursula B. and Minnie L. A. L. Hasbrook is a grandson of William H., born at Woodstock, Ulster county, N. Y., February 23, 1805, and died in Concord township in January, 1891. He was a son of Daniel and Phebe (Griffen) Hasbrook, early settlers. He was married at Kingston, Ulster county, N. Y., December 9, 1826, Luena, daughter of Charles and Rhoda (Wilbur) Powell.

She was born February 27, 1807, in Dutchess county, New York. Five children were born to this union: Lorenzo (married), Charlotte, wife of Jesse Perkins; Phebe, wife of Darius Walton; W. W. Jane, wife of Henry Valentine. All have families, and there are sixteen grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. He was among the pioneers of the township, and cast his first presidential vote for Andrew Jackson. Mr. A. L. Hasbrook has but recently began on his fifty-acre farm, and during 1894-5 erected new commodious buildings thereon.

William E. Olmstead, farmer, Concord township, Corry postoffice, was born April 10, 1816, in Woodstock, Ulster county, N. Y., son of Elias and Sarah (Hoyt) Olmstead. They came from Connecticut about 1816. Elias, father of William, was soon after drowned in the Ohio river. He was born in Fairfield county, Connecticut, of Scotch-English, German and Polish extraction. His wife was born in Ridgefield, Conn., and was of French and Puritan stock. They had ten children. William E. Olmstead was married in Concord township, October 27, 1842, to Emily Ladu, born in Brown, Shenango county, N. Y., February 14, 1826. Was a daughter of Oliver P. and Hulda (Jacobs) Ladu, parents of seven children. Mr. Ladu died in 1869; his widow in 1881. Mrs. Olmstead died in 1891. Mr. and Mrs. Olmstead had a family of fifteen children, as follows: Caroline, wife of Joseph Pete, of Chautauqua county; Stewart (deceased); Hoyt E., Adaline, Ainsie, wife of M. P. Freleigh; William Arthur, Warwick L., Earnest, Frank, John S., Etta Elmer E., Ida May, wife of William K. Baxter; Charles L. and Fred L. In 1869 Mr. Olmstead settled on 100 acres of land, sections 68 and 86, in Concord township, cleared away the dense forest, and has since made this his home. He has, during these years, traveled extensively through different States of the Union, and to-day is one of the few active pioneers of Concord township. His son, E. E. Olmstead, who lives on the same farm, was married to Mary Sherred, daughter of John Sherred, of this township, a native of Belfast, Ireland. They have one son, Joseph. Mr. Olmstead has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for over fifty years, and for many years a steward. In politics he is a Republican, and cast his first presidential vote in 1836.

Chapman B. McCray, farmer and hay dealer, Elgin, Concord township, Erie county, Pa., was born February 1, 1858, and is a son of Josiah and Salley A. (Hammon) McCray, natives of Concord township. Chapman is the fourth in a family of eight children, was reared and educated in the public schools of his birth place, and after leaving school, went to work by the month, and then engaged in the hay pressing business, but has not followed it extensively. In 1893 he purchased a farm, near Elgin, of 112 acres, and at this writing is building a fine residence on it. He is also one of the firm of Smith & McCray. Mr. McCray is a progressive, public-spirited, prosperous citizen, and is always found at the head of enterprises that will further the interests of the community. He was married, May 26, 1878, to Miss May, daughter of David and Emily (McCray) Crowell, natives of Concord township, Pa. Five children have been born to this union: Percy, Emily, Bert, Roy and Dell. In political matters Mr. McCray is independent, feeling it a duty to always vote for the best man. Willard McCray is the third in this family, and was born February 2, 1856, on the old McCray homestead, on which his grandfather settled many years ago, when the county was new. He was reared at his birth-place, and educated in the public schools of Concord township and the Edinboro State Normal School. He taught school for two years, after finishing his education, and then engaged in farming, and has followed it ever since. He is a man of more than ordinary intelligence and education, and is one of Concord's most enterprising citizens. He was united in marriage, May 12, 1881, to Elva, daughter of Zas Woodin, of Concord township. One child has been born to this union, Thayer. Mr. McCray is a Republican.

John R. Black (deceased) was the first white child born in Waterford. He was born September 28, 1795, in the old block-house, was reared and educated in LeBeuf township, and followed farming until his death, which occurred February 13, 1865. He was united in marriage to Miss Abigail, daughter of John and Mary Willey. Six children were born to this union, namely: Wilson (deceased), James, Matthew, Jane, Charles (deceased) and Mary. Matthew was born in LeBeuf township, was reared in his native place, educated in the public schools and has always followed farming. He was married to Miss Adelia, daughter of Levi and Isabella Waldron, of LeBeuf township. Five children were born to this union: Alice D., wife of Monroe Gray; Forrest; Lee; Vernie A., now wife of D. W. Boyd, of Rockdale, Crawford county, Pa., and John F. The last named was born May 30, 1866, in LeBeuf township, was educated in the public schools of his native place and the Waterford Academy, and, in 1889, entered the Chamberlain Institute at Randolph, N. Y., from which he was graduated with honors in the class of 1891. He then spent one year teaching, and, in 1892, entered the Methodist Episcopal ministry. He was given the Corry and Elgin charge, and has four appointments to fill. Mr. Black is a young man of unusual ability, and already stands high in his chosen calling. He was united in marriage November 24, 1892, to Miss Lulu E., daughter of Born and Mattie (Range) McCray, of LeBeuf township. Mr. Black is a vigorous advocate of temperance and votes the Prohibition ticket; he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

L. O. Lindsey, farmer, Concord township, Corry postoffice, is a native of Stockton, Chautauqua county, N. Y., and was born March 16, 1831. He is a son of Eliakim and Rachel (Schofield) Lindsey. He was educated in the common schools of Stockton and at the age of 22 years settled in Concord township, which was then a dense wilderness in many portions. In 1857 he was married in Union township to Miss Julia A. Triscuit, of Wayne township, who was born in 1832. To this union there have been born five children, as follows: Rachel S., Clarence Orson, Clifton Levi, Lonie May, wife of Ellis Jewell, of Warren county, and Bertie Julian. With the exception of one year, Mr. Lindsey has been a resident of Concord township, Erie county, Pa., since 1857, and now owns 600 acres of land in the southeast part of Concord township, upon which was conducted an extensive lumber and milling business for some ten years. He is one of the substantial citizens of the township, and a member of the church, and in politics is a Democrat.

C. B. Aaron

Henry A. Skinner, retired soldier, was born at Wetherfield, Wyoming county, N. Y., October 27, 1840, and is the fifth in a family of seven children of Abbott and Marilla (Barber) Skinner, natives of Washington county, New York. The family came to Watsburg in 1846, where he followed the painter's trade until his death, which occurred February 22, 1882. Henry A. was reared and educated in Watsburg and followed the painter's trade until 1861, when he enlisted in Co. K, 83d P. V. I., under Captain T. M. Austin. His first experience of war life was at the battle of Hanover Court House, fought May 27, 1862; Gaines Mills, June 27, 1862. At the last named battle, about four o'clock in the afternoon, while the 83d regiment was engaged in the hottest part of the battle field, Mr. Skinner was seriously wounded, having his left arm shot off near the shoulder and receiving a gunshot wound through the left side, which broke and badly shattered four ribs. In this very serious condition he was taken prisoner and cast into Libby prison, where for nineteen days he underwent all the tortures produced by his almost fatal wounds, combined with the horrors of the prison itself, which killed many strong men. On July 25, 1862, he was exchanged and immediately sent to the Sixth and Master Street Hospital, Philadelphia, where he remained until December 15, when he was discharged. He re-enlisted in the 50th Co., Veteran Reserve Corps, July 6, 1863, and served until April 15, 1865, when he was, by his own request, mustered out of the service. Mr. Skinner was a brave soldier and was ever ready for any call to duty. He sacrificed his health and underwent much suffering that his country might endure. He was united in marriage November 19, 1870, to Miss Angeline S., daughter of J. Elliot Rathbun, of Amity, Pa. To this union have been born four children, namely: West B. H., Alford, Elmer E. and Pearl H. In politics Mr. Skinner has always been a Republican, and is a member of the I. O. of O. F. He is also a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

G. O. Akam, farmer, Corry postoffice, Concord township, is a native of Erie county. He is a son of Johnson Akam, a native of England, who came to Erie county at the age of 11 years, and settled on a farm, a part of which is now owned by Mr. Akam, about the year of 1850. He was a prosperous, energetic farmer, and died in August, 1873, at the age of 74 years. His widow, whose name was Melissa Jaskins, died in April, 1888. To this union were born six children: Richard, who died from wounds received in the late war; Mary, wife of M. V. B. Davis; Robert, Annie (deceased), Belinda, and George. Johnson Akam, besides engaging in farming, was interested in other enterprises. For four years he was proprietor of a hotel at Columbus, Warren county, Pa.; for two years ran a steamer on Chautauqua Lake, and afterwards ran a grocery store in the city of Corry. His various undertakings proved successful. Beginning with one dollar in cash, he left to his posterity a comfortable fortune. His father was John Akam, who died in 1775, at the age of 92 years. G. O. Akam was married in 1880, to Emma J. Tanner. Their children are: Richard, Henry J., Jessie May, William P., and Nettie Eunice. Mr. Akam has always been a resident of the township, with the exception of two years spent in the State of Nebraska. He is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry, and is a progressive citizen.

49

O. M. Chase, farmer, Concord township, Corry postoffice, was born October 15, 1839, son of John B. and Orrill (Wheeler) Chase, was born in Amsterdam, Montgomery county, N. Y., December 29, 1801, son of Samuel and Susanna (Chase) Chase, natives of Rhode Island, and early settlers of Amsterdam, going there in 1814. He belonged to a family of eight children, and obtained his education at the common schools, and then learned a trade at which he worked five years. He was married in DeRuyter, Madison county, N. Y., January 18, 1827, to Orrill Wheeler, who was born at Chesterfield county, New Hampshire, March, 1804, daughter of Benjamin (Holmes) Wheeler, natives of the Eastern States, and parents of nine children. Mr. Chase purchased the land, where O. M. Chase now resides, of the Holland Land Company, and was a prominent man of his day and generation, having held several offices of trust and responsibility. He died in 1892. Mr. Chase was the sixth child of a family of seven children, as follows: Eliza, George W., Mary, Ahnira, Ambrosia, O. M. and Francis. He was married in 1863, to Jennette, daughter of Lehman Wellman, of Concord township. Their children are: Omar W., who died in 1885, at the age of 20 years; Jennie May, who died in 1885, at the age of 18 years; Maggie, wife of G. C. McCray and John L. Mr. Chase was born and reared in the township in which he now resides, and is identified among the leading citizens of Concord township. He is a member of the P. of H., and has held the offices of school director and road commissioner several terms.

William Cady, retired farmer, Concord township, postoffice Corry, was born July 23, 1817. He was a son of William and Margaret Cady, natives of Vermont, the former of whom died in 1848, at the age of 62 years, and the latter followed the same year, at the age of 59 years. Their children were Polly (deceased), John (deceased), Joel (deceased), Harriet (deceased), Lina (deceased), Laura (deceased), George (deceased), Mary (deceased), William and Alfred. William Cady, sr., was a veteran of the war of 1812. In 1841, William Cady, jr., was married to Catherine Stultz, who died September 8, 1877. She was a daughter of Jacob Stultz, and was born in Warren county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Mary, wife of David Cook, of Corry, and Elizabeth, wife of George W. Hicks, of Rochester. Mr. Cady now resides with his daughter, Mary, wife of David Cook, who was married in March, 1888, Mr. Cook was born in 1839, and has been a life long resident of Concord.

Alfred Fralick, a native of Montgomery county, New York, born December 24, 1836, is a son of Abraham F. and Elizabeth (Houke) Fralick, natives of Montgomery county, New York; the former was born in 1790 and the latter in 1805. They were married in 1831, and settled in Concord township in 1837. He died October 26, 1877, she surviving him until March 14, 1883. Their children were as follows: John, Francis, Lucinda, wife of Alfred Davis; Nancy, wife of Moses Higgins; Barbara, wife of Hiram Blakeslee; Josiah, Catherine, wife of Nathan Whiting; James, Ephraim, Alfred, Margaret Eliza, wife of James Griffes; Marietta, wife of Alonzo White, and Walter, living on the old homestead. J. H. Moffatt, of Concord, was born in Hampshire county, Massachusetts, September 9, 1815. He is the son of Alfred and Polly (Edson) Moffatt. He lived in Enfield to the age of 22 years, and began work as a joiner at the age of 13 years, which business he has since principally followed. He has built many of the best houses in Concord. He built in 1852 a house for S. Steward, then county commissioner, and now at the age of 80 does not use glasses. At the age of 22 he moved to Chautauqua county, New York. In January, 1850, he came to Concord and bought a farm in the woods. Mr. Moffatt was married November 19, 1842, to Malinda Lindsley, of Augusta, Oneida county, N. Y., who died March 4, 1893, aged 77 years and 15 days, leaving a family of six daughters and two sons. The daughters all married well-to-do farmers. Mr. Moffatt's living descendants number fifty: Eight children, thirty-six grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. The names of the children are: Polly, wife of Alfred Fralick, of Concord; Sarah A., wife of Chauncey Pier, of Concord; Malinda H., wife of Jothan Winer, of Blissfield, Mich.; Emily D., wife of C. L. Hall, of Concord; Harriet E., wife of Ephraim Blakeslee, of Greenfield; Lucy J., wife of W. V. Gates, of Concord; Myron A., lives in Wayne; Willis L., lives on the old homestead in Concord. Three have died: James L., aged 30 years; Electro L., aged 14 years and 6 months; Marion E., aged 5.

John G. Washington, farmer, Corry postoffice, Concord township, was born in Hampshire county, West Virginia, in 1833, and reared near Tidoutte, Warren county, Pa. He is a son of Jesse and Hannah (Fairfax) Washington. The latter died in 1852. John served as a private in Co. E, 8th U. S. colored regiment, under Col. Fribley. After the war he returned to Concord township, where he has lived ever since.

Eugene M. Miller, farmer, postoffice Corry, was born in Concord township in 1865, and is the youngest son of James B. and Lucy (Brown) Miller. Their family is as follows: Alice, wife of James L. West; Minnie, widow of Arthur McCray, and Eugene M. Mr. Miller was married in 1892 to Minnie, daughter of Hoyt Olmstead. They have one child, Ivan. James B. Miller, father of Eugene, was second child of a family of five children, as follows: Nancy, wife of E. Culver; James B., Preston A., Albert C., Sarah, wife of D. W. Akin, and George D. Miller. Mrs. Miller is a daughter of Capt. Josiah Brown. Following are his children: Lorenzo, Lucy, Eugene, Clark, Sylvania (wife of E. M. Kiddle), Harriet (wife of T. H. Willoughby), Josephine (deceased) and Elber J. Brown. Eugene M. Miller is a member of the Maccabees; he is a progressive farmer, and purchased his present farm of fifty-seven acres, near the northeast corner of Concord township, in 1894.

John Wagner, farmer, Corry postoffice, Concord township, is the son of Michael Wagner, a native of Germany, who came to America in 1845. His mother was Catherine (Smoth) Wagner, who died in her native country some forty years ago. John Wagner was married in 1849 to Catherine Auburn, stepdaughter of Captain Austen Auburn. Their children are: Lewis, Joseph, Michael, Stacy, Anna, wife of Martin Cassidy, and Mary. Mr. Wagner started in life upon the farm which he now occupies, some forty years ago, and without a dollar to purchase land. He has gained a comfortable living through life and has gained a competency. He is a member of the German Catholic Church and a valued citizen.

A. L. Wales, farmer, Concord township, postoffice Corry, Pa., was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, in 1854, and is a son of J. C. Wales, of Corry, who came to Erie county from Crawford county in 1878. Mr. Wales is one of a family of five children, as follows: Alma E., twin sister of Mr. Wales, a teacher in the Brooklyn high school; Maria (deceased), wife of David Jones; Lucas, civil engineer, and Minnie L., wife of Arthur B. Speer, paying teller in a bank at Oberlin, Ohio. In 1875 Mr. Wales was married to Adelaide, daughter of Garret Davidson, of Union City, who for some time resided in Meadville, Crawford county, and was afterward wounded and taken prisoner at the battle of the Wilderness and died from the effects August 1, 1864. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Wales are Edna E. and Charles C. Wales. Mr. Wales resides on and manages his farm of 125 acres, in Concord township, superintends his father's creamery in Corry and is a citizen of influence and worth. He is a member of the State Board of Agriculture and a Royal Templar.

Manley Crosby, attorney at law, Corry, Pa., born in Franklinville, N. Y., March 12, 1834, is a son of Alanson and Cornelia (Wright) Crosby, the former a native of New York, the latter of Connecticut, and both of English descent. Alanson Crosby was an architect in early life and later a farmer. Manley obtained his education in the public schools of New York State and the State Normal School at Albany, N. Y., graduating in 1854. He then attended the John W. Fowler law school at Poughkeepsie, graduating in 1858, and after serving a clerkship of one year in the office of Judge David H. Bolles, of Ellicottville, N. Y., he was admitted to the bar at Buffalo, N. Y., May, 1859. He then formed a law partnership with his preceptor, Judge Bolles, of Ellicottville, where he practiced until 1864. In 1865 he came to Corry and acted as attorney for the Oil Creek R. R. for fifteen years, and carried on an extensive law practice. In 1870 Hon. W. W. Brown became his partner, continuing as such for eight years. In 1878 Mr. Brown was elected to Congress from his district, and Mr. Crosby continued the practice alone to the present time. He was married in 1863 to Francis S., youngest daughter of Stanley N. Clarke, of Ellicottville, N. Y., agent for the Holland Land Company, member of Congress from the State of New York in 1840, who died in 1860. To this union have been born: Clark (died in 1876, aged 13 years), Walter Hull, theatrical man and actor; William G., attorney, Erie, Pa., Theodore S. and Alanson, student. Mr. Crosby served two terms as mayor of Corry. In 1892 the National Bank of Corry was organized, and he was elected president. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a past master of Nero Lodge and Clarence Commandery of Corry. Mrs. Manley Crosby died December 15, 1895.

William C. Plumb, editor and publisher of the Daily Flyer and Weekly Herald, Corry, Pa., was born in Bennington, Vt., October 25, 1848, where he served an apprenticeship of three years at the printer's trade. On August 18, 1864, before he was 16 years old, he delivered the oration at the celebration of the battle of Bennington, which attracted considerable attention. He was employed with the Calhoun Printing Company of Hartford, Conn., and with Weed, Parsons & Co. at Albany, N. Y.; was correspondent for the New York Tribune and other papers, visiting all the battlefields and places of interest in the South in 1866-9. Bought an interest in the Watertown (N. Y.) Post in 1870, and continued editor and part owner until 1876. From 1877 to 1879 he was news manager and editor of the Philadelphia North American and editorial writer on the Philadelphia Press. In 1880-3 he was connected with the Pittsburgh Dispatch and the Pittsburgh Commercial-Gazette as news editor and editorial writer. In 1885 he started the Corry Daily Plover, in 1887 bought the Corry Weekly Herald, consolidated the two papers, and has since conducted them. Mr. Plumb belongs to one of the oldest families in America. Very few, if any trace their ancestry as far back. The Plumbs were Normans, and the family record goes back in Normandy to the year 1180 at least, on the great roll, and in England to 1240. The first Plumb in America came from England in 1635 and settled in Wetherfield, Conn. He was a member of the court at Hartford in 1636. Two brothers of the first Plumb followed from Essex county, England. They were mariners and ship owners at New London, Conn. Forty names of descendants of these brothers are upon the muster rolls of Revolutionary soldiers from New England, New York and New Jersey. Mr. Plumb was married in Ellenville, N. Y., in 1880, to Miss Salice Davenport, of Meadville, Pa. She died in 1890, leaving one child, Helen L. Mr. Plumb is an earnest advocate of the right, and is always ready to use his pen in the furtherance of justice to his fellow-men and for the betterment of society. He has a keen sense of the right and is always the friend of the oppressed.

C. L. Covell, attorney at law, Corry, Pa., born in Chautauqua county, New York, May 3, 1849, son of W. W. and Ellen E. (Barber) Covell, both natives of the Empire State. When C. L. was 5 years old his parents moved to Pennsylvania and took up their abode in Concord township, Erie county, about one mile south of Corry. Here they bought a farm, where they still reside. Mr. Covell was reared on the farm, and worked with his father at the carpenter's trade. He received his education in the common schools and Corry high school. As his parents were people of humble means, he was obliged to gain an education chiefly by his own efforts. Early in life he decided to become a lawyer, and to that end he centered all his energies until he succeeded. In 1871 he commenced reading law in the office of Hon. C. O. Bowman, in Corry, and, March 27, 1873, was admitted to the Erie county bar, and, subsequently, to practice in several adjoining counties and in the Supreme Court of the State, also the several Federal courts. Upon his admission to the bar, he immediately engaged in practice in Corry. As a lawyer, he is well known throughout this section as a discreet and judicious adviser, and as an able and fearless advocate. Mr. Covell was married March 19, 1873, to Miss Louise Rathbun, of Eden Center, Erie county, N. Y. To this union have been born two children: Alvah W. and Flora E., both students in the Corry high school. Mr. Covell is a member of the K. of P., and has been a representative to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania seven years; he is also a member of the K. O. T. M., of which he is senior past great commander of the Great Camp of Pennsylvania, and he represented Pennsylvania as Supreme delegate to the Supreme Tent of the World at Port Huron, Mich., in May, 1895; is a member of the Woodmen of the World. He has been a member of the Corry fire department seventeen years, and has been chief engineer one year; has been councilman, and is a member of the school board, and has been city attorney seven years. He is a Democrat.

Dr. Henry Olin Mackres, Corry, Pa., born in Calais, Vt., December 16, 1824, son of Joshua and Esther (Cummings) Mackres, and grandson of Samuel Mackres, one of the party who threw the tea overboard from a vessel in Boston Harbor and afterwards participated in the war of the Revolution. He is of Scotch-Irish descent, his parents being natives of New Hampshire. When he was 3 years old his father removed to Chautauqua county, N. Y., and settled on a piece of wild land, which the boy assisted him to clear and cultivate during the summer months and attended the district schools during the winter; later he attended select school, and, at the age of 18, commenced teaching school to acquire the means to carry him through the study of medicine. In 1844 he began his medical studies with Dr. Waterman Ellsworth, and later continued them with Dr. Isaac Hill, of Randolph, N. Y. His course of study embraced two courses of lectures at Cleveland, Ohio, one at the Eclectic Institute, of Randolph, N. Y.; one at Buffalo, N. Y., and a post-graduate course at Chicago, Ill. He received his degree of M. D. both at the Eclectic Institute and at Buffalo, N. Y. He commenced the practice of medicine at Clymer, N. Y., in 1849, and continued a successful practice until 1867, when he removed to Corry, where he practiced in partnership with the late D. B. E. Phelps for a year and a half. In the spring of 1872 he took as a partner the late Dr. A. S. Bonsteel, and continued the partnership until the spring of 1882—ten years. Wishing to retire from active practice, he formed a partnership with Dr. H. W. Thayer, in 1888, which was continued until April, 1890, since which he has limited his practice mainly to office business, chronic diseases and consultations. He is a member of the Erie County Medical Society, of which he was censor in 1875 and president in 1877. He is also a member of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He is a member of the Masonic order, I. O. O. F. and the A. O. U. W. In politics he is a Democrat, and held the office of postmaster during the administrations of Presidents Pierce and Buchanan, in Clymer, N. Y. Dr. Mackres married in May, 1850, Artemilia, daughter of James Johnson, one of the early settlers of Warren county, Pennsylvania. To this union have been born: Stella A., wife of F. F. Root, a merchant of Kinsman, Ohio; Mary E., wife of W. E. Lewis, a resident of Corry, and James H., a locomotive engineer, in the employ of the W. N. Y. & P. K. R. He has a fine office at No. 61 North Center street; residence, 44 Franklin street. Although the doctor has been afflicted with pulmonary emphysema since early childhood, he has by his own exertions and industry acquired his education, and has been in active practice nearly forty-seven years.

Thomas A. Edwards, Corry, Pa., more familiarly known as "Colonel Edwards," is one of the most enterprising business men of Erie county. He is a native of Ulster county, New York, and was born July 21, 1832. He is a son of William and Catherine Amelia (Lewis) Edwards, both deceased. In the family there were two children, Thomas A. and Alfred, a traveling salesman. Thomas A. was reared on a farm and received his education in the public schools of New York State, and when 17 years of age went to sea, a life more fitting to the adventurous temperament which has more or less marked his life from boyhood to within the last few years. He remained in the employ of the Old Collins Steamship Line about three years, when he decided to give up the life of a mariner. He then went into the show business at New Orleans, La., as business manager for the well-known showmen, Spaulding & Rogers, which position he held until 1857, when he resigned to join the expedition under General Albert Sidney Johnston against the Mormons. He accompanied it across the plains and served as assistant wagon-master. In 1858-9 he was at Pike's Peak during the gold excitement, and later visited various parts of the country. When the great conflict opened between the loyal North and secession, Mr. Edwards was in Memphis, Tenn., in the employ of the Memphis Transportation Company. He was immediately employed in the secret service of the United States. In this capacity he was engaged in the hazardous business of passing the lines of the enemy, locating their position, determining their strength, and returning with reports. While serving at the blockade of Wilmington, N. C., he was captured and imprisoned, but escaped and made his way to the union blockading squadron, where he was once more safe from the hand of hostile vengeance. He was then sent to Washington and remained in the secret service until after the battle of Gettysburg. In the following October, he joined General Fred Steele in Little Rock, Ark., under whom he served as a scout until the close of the war. In 1866 he went to Oregon and entered the United States service under General Crook in the Snake Indian war as secret bearer of dispatches, etc. Here he met Donald McKay, that prince of Indian scouts and fighters. A very warm friendship sprang up between them, which lasted until the death of Donald in the fall of 1894. In 1874 he went to Europe and took with him a band of red men from the Rocky Mountains, who were known as the Warm Spring Indian Scouts, that famous band who, under the command of the bold Donald McKay, defeated the treacherous Molocs, under Captain Jack, and captured the latter. Mr. Edwards returned from Europe in 1876 with his exhibition Indians and had them in Philadelphia during the Centennial in 1876. In the fall of that year he organized the Oregon Indian Medicine Company, and had headquarters in Pittsburg until 1883, when he located in Corry, where he now resides and carries on his extensive medicine works, manufacturing several remedies that are well known throughout the country for their efficacy. He has thirty-seven companies on the road selling and introducing his medicines. The "Colonel" was married in 1870 to Miss Elizabeth Kelly, of Erie, Pa. To them have been born one child, Clarion D. He is a member of the Elks, and is at present a member of the city council. Mr. Edwards is a firm adherent to the principles of free trade.

C. P. Rogers, jr., attorney at law, Corry, Pa., born in Erie, Pa., March 25, 1869, is a son of Col. C. H. and Lillie (Speel) Rogers, the former a native of Erie county, and the latter of Dauphin county, Pennsylvania. When C. P. was about 8 years old his parents removed to Corry, where he has since resided. He was educated in the common schools and Corry high school, where he was graduated in the class of 1884. The following year he entered Lehigh University, where he remained two years, when he commenced reading law in the office of Hon. C. O. Bowman (deceased) of Corry. He was admitted to practice in the several courts of Erie county in September, 1890, to the Supreme court of Pennsylvania in April, 1893, and to the Federal courts in July, 1894. He entered into a partnership in 1890 with Hon. A. F. Bole, and continued with him to the time of Mr. Bole's death, in October, 1891. He then continued the practice alone, and now has his office in the Wright block. Mr. Rogers is a member of the K. of P., F. & A. M., and has been city clerk four terms, is a member of the school board, and is a Republican.

Joseph A. Pain, editor of the Corry Telegraph, Corry, was born in Bristol, England, April 2, 1828. His father was a medical practitioner and educational professor at one time, and in the latter years of his life kept a stationery store and printing office in Dartford, county of Kent, England. Mr. Pain received a first-class education, finishing at Westminster College, being frustrated by his father in his desire to become a sailor. Mr. Pain left home in 1848 and came to Quebec, Canada. After a few months, he went to Erie county, New York, a penniless lad. Desiring to return to England, he started at once for New York, afoot, but at Auburn, N. Y., he found work in the Auburn Daily Advertiser office, where he obtained a thorough knowledge of the practical part of the printer's business. From Auburn, he went to Wolcott, Wayne county, N. Y., and published the Banner. Thence he found his way to Clyde, N. Y., with $305 in his pocket (all his worldly possessions), and took the material of a defunct paper and published a weekly paper, commencing March, 1850. On April 29, that year, Mr. Pain married Emily M. Smith, of Auburn, N. Y., who was a true helpmate to him, sharing his fortunes till May 30, 1883, when she departed this life, leaving behind four children. In 1865, Mr. Pain sold out his establishment in Clyde, and being attracted to the oil regions, bought a half interest in the Corry Telegraph, which had broken down under five different owners, and has continued its publication nineteen successive years. The Corry Telegraph was a daily and weekly sheet when Mr. Pain purchased his interest. After a few months, he bought out his partner, and in 1866 stopped the daily and continued the weekly, until the fall of 1868, when he again started a daily, the Corry Daily Blade, commencing it small, but continuing to enlarge till it became a seven-column four-page paper. In 1872, commercial depression compelled the stoppage of the Daily Blade, and Mr. Pain thereafter has given his entire attention to the Weekly Telegraph and his large job printing establishment. Our subject is now in his 56th year, active and energetic. He was assistant assessor of internal revenue for over a year; was elected a member of the common council of the city of Corry in 1867; school director in 1878, and city clerk for one term. He is an inveterate worker, liberal in his opinions, a forcible writer and a staunch friend. Is P. G. in the I. O. O. F.; P. M. W. in the A. O. U. W.; first P. G. D. of Pennsylvania of the K. of H., and an ex-member of the supreme lodge of the same order; P. H. C. R. of I. O. F.; P. G. P. and member of the committee on secret work of the supreme lodge of the K. and L. of H.; P. S. of I. O. R. M. By many of these Mr. Pain has been presented with badges and regalia of value, among which is a $100 gold medal by the K. of H., commemorating his 50th birthday, and a beautiful gold-headed cane by the grand lodge of Pennsylvania K. of H. In politics, Mr. Pain is a Republican, and has taken a part in all the campaigns. In the Greeley campaign he saved the Corry district to the Republican party.

M. Mandeville, (deceased), Corry, Pa., born in Addison, Steuben county, N. Y., June 2, 1832, was a son of Homer and Abigail (Manley) Mandeville, the former a native of South Hadley, Mass., and the latter of Greene, Shenango county, N. Y., and of New England origin. The former died in 1888, aged 94 years, and the latter in 1891, aged 84. M. Mandeville was reared and educated in Steuben county, New York. When a young man he was engaged at farming and lumbering with his father in the neighborhood of Addison. In 1857 he went to McKean county, Pennsylvania, in the employ of the Tilben Lumber Company, and remained in their employ for five years. In 1862 he came to Corry, and entered the employ of the A. & G. W. R. R. Company, in constructing that road, as carpenter. In July of the same year he resigned, and entered the employ of the Oil Creek R. R., remaining in the employ of that road until the fall of 1864, when he resigned to take charge of the carpenter work for the Oil Creek Petroleum Company. After a year of this service he engaged in contracting for the drilling of oil wells a short time, and then engaged in stock raising and looking after the land of an oil company until 1867, when he went to Pleasantville, Pa., and engaged in the flour and feed business for a year; during the Shamburg oil excitement he went to Miller farm, and was engaged in the same business, together with building supplies, for two and a half years, and went to Foxburg in the same business, and remained there about nine years. He then went to Michigan on account of ill health, and remained about one year, when he returned to Pennsylvania, and was promoter of the Foxburg and Clarion R. R., and later this road was combined with the Emlenton, Shipperville and Clarion R. R., and a charter for a road from Edenburg to Kane was obtained, under the name of the Pittsburg, Bradford and Buffalo R. R., and Mr. Mandeville was made president of it in 1880. He resigned in January, 1882, and with a Mr. Hall purchased a large tract of oil land in Bradford. Later Mr. Mandeville and Mr. Whitney, of Olean, built a hub factory at Marionville, Pa., which they operated in partnership until 1885, when it was destroyed by fire. Since that time he has been interested in the lumber business in Elk county, Pennsylvania, as president and manager of the Cherry Ridge Lumber Company, and has carried on a very extensive and lucrative lumber industry. He was married December 23, 1866, to Olive L., daughter of David Nash, of Concord township, Erie county. To this union were born six children: Bell, James (deceased), Marion, in Lavery; J. Coyle, of Corry; Mattie (deceased), and Mary. He is one of the directors of the Foxburg National Bank, is a member of the Masonic order, and politically is a Republican. Mr. Mandeville was a business man of the highest qualifications, and has an unimpeachable reputation for uprightiness and honesty, and always proved himself to be a cautious and successful financier and manager. He died October 31, 1894.

B. H. Phelps, physician and surgeon, Corry, Pa., born March 16, 1844, in Williamsfield, Ashland county, Ohio, is a son of Truman and Caroline (Gardner) Phelps, the former a native of Connecticut, and the latter of Massachusetts. The family settled in Ohio in 1833 and engaged in farming. There were seven children: Norris T., Kingsville, Ohio; Obad K., Farmington, Ohio; B. H., Charles H., Terre Haute, Ind.; Addison B., Cleveland, Ohio; Lyman C., Andover, Ohio, and Sophia, Mrs. Charles Tuttle, Andover, Ohio. The parents now reside at Andover, the father aged 82 years and the mother 80 years of age. B. H. Phelps' early education was obtained in his native county and subsequently he attended the Grand River Institute, Austintown, Ohio, for about two years. He was graduated from the Kingsville Institute, Ohio, June 14, 1867, and then attended the Cleveland Medical College, where he received the degree M. D. in February, 1871. He was a member of the 29th O. V. I. from the fall of 1861 to the spring of 1863, in the capacity of musician. The doctor was twice married: In 1870, to Philena, daughter of Jacob Greenlee, of Amboy, Ohio. By this union there was one child, T. Otis, jeweler, Corry, Pa. Mrs. Phelps died in 1878, and April 16, 1879, he was united in marriage to Alice C., daughter of Rev. J. H. Dungan, a retired Methodist minister of Orwell, Ohio. They have one child, J. Paul, at home. Dr. Phelps is a member of the Masonic order, and politically is a Republican. He was a member of the board of pension examiners about two years. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a choir leader in that organization in Corry. He has been engaged in general practice. In 1880 he settled in Corry. He has always evinced a talent for music, and is a member of the school board.

J. S. Whiteley, physician and surgeon, Corry, Pa., born in Red House, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., in 1856, is a son of Jonathan and Anna Whiteley. The former was a practicing physician in Oil City, Pa., where he died in 1891, and the latter died in 1877. J. S. Whiteley was graduated from the Cleveland Hospital and Medical College in the class of 1877, and immediately engaged in practice with his father in Oil City, and in 1883 went to Warrensville, Ohio, nine miles from Cleveland, and engaged in the practice of his profession and remained there until 1889, when he returned to Oil City, and after remaining a short time came to Corry, where he has since been engaged in a successful practice. The doctor was married in 1876 to Lillian Gibbs, of Oil City. To them were born five children: Lillie A., Charles B., Frank G., Howard and Allie B. Mrs. Whiteley died in February, 1893, and the doctor afterward married Miss Louise A. Brightman, of Corry. He is a member of the K. of P. and Lodge 3, Royal Templars of Temperance, of which he is medical examiner. He is a Republican.

M. Michels (deceased), clothier and furnisher, Corry, Pa., born February 2, 1841, at Rhine Bella, Germany. He was educated in his native land, and when 12 years of age his parents died. He immediately came to America and settled in New York city, where he remained until 1865 and learned the tailor's trade, and also worked at the clothier's business. In 1865 he came to Corry and engaged in the clothing and gentlemen's furnishing goods business and followed it up to the time of his death, September 22, 1895. Mr. Michels was twice married, first to Miss Seigel, of New York city, by whom he has one child living, Moses, who is engaged in the merchant tailoring business in New York city. Mrs. Michels died in 1872, and ten years later he married Miss Goldsmith, of New York city. To them have been born two children, one of whom is living, Gussie, at home. Mr. Michels was a member of the I. O. O. F., and had passed all the chairs, both in the subordinate lodge and the Encampment. He was a member of five secret organizations. Mr. Michels was an active business man. He and his wife were members of the Temple, No. 76 Fifth avenue, New York.

John D. Murray, of the firm of Murray & Co., wholesale and retail grocers, No. 39 North Center street, Corry, Pa., was born in Petersboro, Ontario, August 24, 1863. He is a son of James and Bridget (Londergan) Murray, natives of Ireland, the former now a resident of Corry, the latter deceased. James Murray came to Corry when John D. was about six months old and has since lived there. John was educated in the parochial schools of Corry, and in 1885 became a member of the firm of Murray & Lynch, grocers, of Corry, Pa. They continued business but a short time when Mr. Murray sold out to his partner and engaged in the same business with T. A. Blair under the firm name of Murray & Blair, which continued to do business for three years when they dissolved partnership and Mr. Murray has since been the senior member of the firm. He was married October 11, 1893, to Miss Mary E. Lyons, of Corry. Mr. Murray has been elected councilman, which office he still holds. Politically he is a Democrat.

S. E. Kincaid, Corry, Pa., was born July 16, 1837, in Wayne township, Erie county, Pa., son of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Kincaid (both deceased), the former from Carlisle, Pa., and the latter a native of Erie county. John Kincaid was born March 25, 1791, and came to Erie county with his parents when 13 years old, the family settling in Wayne township. John's father served in the war of 1812; his mother was a native of Erie county and a daughter of Samuel Smith, a native of Ireland, who was the first settler in Wayne township. She was born March 29, 1799. They both spent their lives in Wayne township, where the father died in February, 1875, and the mother followed in September, 1878. The father was a farmer by occupation and was appointed by the court to lay out roads. Mr. and Mrs. John Kincaid reared a family of six children: Jane M. and Jessie Lyons (both deceased); William, of Wayne township, born in 1821; Margaret, Mrs. Lyman Thomas, of Clymer, N. Y.; John, Nebraska; Samuel E. and Henry (deceased). Samuel E. Kincaid was educated in the public schools and Waterford Academy. He commenced life as a farmer and dairyman, and during the early part of the war acted as enrolling officer. When 21 years old he was elected constable of Wayne township; he served as assessor two terms, school director five terms, justice of the peace two terms. In 1876 he was elected to the Legislature, and re-elected in 1878. During his first term he was secretary of the agricultural committee, and the last term served as chairman, and was the recipient of a gold-headed cane at the hands of his colleagues as a token of their appreciation. Mr. Kincaid was a member of the Corry city council one term, and is now an acting justice of the peace. He is president of the Northwestern Agricultural Society, and was one of the originators of that association. He is also a director and a member of the executive committee of the Harbor Creek Insurance Company; is a director of the National Bñnk of Corry; is salesman for the Wayne Cheese Factory. Mr. Kincaid was united in marriage in 1858 to Miss Escula Ann Yeager, who died shortly after. He married Miss Dora, daughter of Ira Wilkinson, of Amity township, August 17, 1870, and to this union have been born six children: Clara Blanche (died in infancy); Elmer Lincoln, a graduate of the Corry high school, now postal clerk on the W. N. Y. & Pa. R. R.; Gerry Thaddeus, student in Allegheny College; Samuel Blaine, student; Don Wilkinson and John Archibald (deceased). Mr. Kincaid has resided in the city of Corry since 1890, at 133 North Center street, where he has a handsome residence.

Dr. F. A. Beebe, Corry, Pa., was born in Corry July 30, 1854, son of Lewis A. and Elizabeth (McCray) Beebe, was reared in Corry and received his early education there, and took a course of lectures in Clifton Liberal Institute. At the age of 18 he began reading medicine under Dr. C. B. Kibler, of Corry, and afterward attended the University of Wooster, O., taking a course in the medical department, where he was graduated in the class of 1877. He then attended the Western Reserve Medical College at Cleveland in 1881. In 1877 he engaged in practice at Findley's Lake, N. Y., where he remained until 1891, when he came to Corry, where he enjoys an extensive practice. The Doctor was married in 1878 to Anna Peterson, of Erie, Pa. Dr. Beebe was a registered pharmacist of New York and Pennsylvania; he is a member of the Masonic fraternity and the A. O. U. W. Dr. Beebe's father, Lewis, was a son of Buckingham and Lavina (Freeman) Beebe. He was born in Concord township, Erie county, in 1825, and spent the most of his life in Erie county, engaged in farming and cattle dealing and handling real estate. He married Elizabeth McCray, who was also a member of one of the pioneer families of Erie county. To them were born four children: F. A.; Mary E., now the wife of Dr. Stewart, assistant State Microscopist and State Veterinary Surgeon, Kansas City, Mo.; Addie, wife of Frank Crowell, and Stella, wife of Oscar Marsh, superintendent of public schools of Pottawatomie county, Iowa. He died in 1878; his widow survives and resides in Concord township. Buckingham Beebe came to Erie county from Chenango county, New York, in 1820, and was one of the first five settlers of Concord township. He ran a store at Columbus, and was also engaged in the lumber business. He finally went to Huron, O., where he engaged in the hardware trade. He spent the last few years of his life in Chautauque county, New York. He married Lavina Freeman, also a native of New York. To them were born six children: Lewis (deceased); Mary (deceased); John H., New York; Flavilla, wife of Frank Foster, Norwalk, O.; Albert, Chautauqua county, New York.

J. Hanford Duke, manufacturer and bottler of mineral and soda water, Corry, Pa., born December 25, 1868, is a son of Joseph and Emily (Reaser) Duke, both natives of New York (where Hanford was born), and are of English descent. His father died at Wells-ville, N. Y., December 25, 1884, and his mother now resides at Corry. In the family there were two children, J. Hanford and Myron J., who is with his brother in Corry. Mr. Duke was educated at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. In 1890 he came to Corry for the benefit of his health, and shortly after purchased the Corry mineral springs, of which he is now proprietor. In 1892 he commenced the manufacture and bottling of soft drinks, which business he has since continued. He is also interested in the oil business in West Virginia and Ohio. He was married September 3, 1893, to Adelia Dunham, and has one child, Joseph Edward. Although not active in politics, Mr. Duke is a thorough Republican.

Henry W. Thayer, physician and surgeon, Corry, Pa., was born in St. Paul, Minn., May 10, 1859. He is a son of Rev. Charles and Ellen (Southard) Thayer, the former a native of Massachusetts, and the latter of Kentucky. In the family there were three children, the Doctor being the youngest. He was educated in the public schools of Minnesota, attended the State University of Minnesota three years, and the University of Wooster, O., and graduated in the class of 1879. He was principal of the public schools of Canal Dover, O., one year, afterward attending two courses at the Medical College, in Cleveland, O. He then worked in a civil engineering corps in Nebraska, Dakota and Montana, from 1881 to 1884, when he went to the Rush Medical College at Chicago, graduating in the class of 1886. After practicing a year in a hospital in May, 1888, he came to Corry and was associated three years with Dr. Mackree, and in 1890 he began to practice alone, and has since commanded a large and lucrative practice. His skill and ability as a physician has received a ready recognition from the Erie county public. The doctor was married, July 14, 1887, to Miss Elsie D. Stone, of Virginia, and to them have been born three children: C. Harry, Charles Henry and Helen. He is a member of the American Medical Association, State Medical Society, president of the Erie County Medical Society, member of the American Public Health Association, the American Medical Academy and National Association of Railway Surgeons; he is affiliated with the K. of P., the I. O. O. F. and K. O. T. M. Dr. Thayer is the surgeon of the Sixteenth Regiment, N. G. P., with uniform rank of first lieutenant on the colonel's staff. He was health officer three years for the city of Corry, and was without a doubt one of the most efficient health officers Corry ever had. In politics the doctor is a Republican.

W. M. Durham, dealer in drugs, fancy goods and stationery, 63 North Center street, Corry, Pa., is one of the most progressive business men in Corry. He was born at Bath, Steuben county, N. Y., January 7, 1841, and is a son of William S. and Eliza A. Durham, both deceased, natives of New York. Mr. Durham commenced life for himself teaching school in winter and working on his brother's farm in summer, improving his spare time in learning telegraphy. In 1860 he entered the employ of the Erie R. R. Company as telegraph operator and agent, working at various offices along the line. In 1865 he resigned and went to the oil country of Pennsylvania, entering the employ of the Western Union Telegraph Company, opening the office at Pioneer, Pa., in January of that year; ticket agent for the Oil Creek R. R. Company; agent six years for the Union Express Company. He then went to Fagundus, Warren county, Pa., and conducted a general mercantile business (opening the Western Union Telegraph office at the same time) for two years, when his entire stock was destroyed by fire. Going to Grease City, Butler county, Pa., for two years, he opened the Western Union Telegraph office, remaining two years through the oil excitement; he then went to St. Joseph, Butler county, opening the Western Union Telegraph office in a drug store, working at telegraphing and the drug business; was again burned out in 1890, after entering the general mercantile business. Coming to Corry he engaged in his present business. Mr. Durham was married July 4, 1867, to Miss Nellie Olds, of Erie, Pa., and this union has been blessed with three children, William L., bookkeeper in the Climax Manufacturing Company; Minnie and LeGrand M. He is a member of the K. of P., the Methodist Episcopal Church and is a Prohibitionist.

Oliver D. Skinner, grocer, Corry, Pa., was born near the present site of Corry, February 26, 1832. He was educated in the subscription schools of that day and remained on his father's farm until 22 years of age, when he went to California, remaining five years. He returned to Corry, and was engaged in cattle dealing and droving for twenty-five years. He conducted the Oneida Meat Market one year, and in 1890, engaged in the grocery business, which he has since successfully managed at No. 4 East Washington street. Mr. Skinner was married May 19, 1860, to Miss Elizabeth Bemis, of Columbus, Pa., and to them have been born six children: Willis, drug salesman; Alline, at home; Elmer, Oliver, Edwin and Roy, Corry. Joseph Skinner was a native of Rhode Island in 1800, and came to Chenango county, New York, with his parents, where they both died. In 1826 he came to Erie county, and settled on eighty acres of land, part of which lies within the city limits of Corry, where he followed farming and lumbering. He was married to Julia Daborn, also a native of Rhode Island. To them were born eleven children: Charles (deceased), Mary Ann, wife of Philo Stevens, Columbus; Morris, resident of Kansas; Olive D., Juliette, wife of Solon Wilcox; Honor, Mrs. Philo Wright (deceased); Catherine, wife of Newton Wright, Chautauqua county, New York; Alanson (deceased), Alice (deceased), and Marion (deceased). Joseph Skinner died in Corry, in 1849, and his wife in 1880. This gentleman was the first permanent settler in the city of Corry.

C. B. Kibler, M. D., Corry, Pa., was born in Bucyrus, Crawford county, Ohio. He graduated with honors from the medical department of the University of Buffalo, in 1870, and soon afterward located in Corry, where he has built up a very large practice. He has been surgeon of the N. Y., P. & O. R. R. for over twenty years; a member of the board of education for six years, and president of that body for five years; he was sent as a delegate by the American Medical Association to the International Medical Congress in Berlin in 1890, afterwards spending some time in the hospitals of London, Paris, Berlin, Dresden, Munich and Vienna. At present he is president of the Association of Erie Railway Surgeons, and a member of the County, State and American Medical Associations, the New York Medico-Legal Society, the British Medical and the National Associations of Railway Surgeons; treasurer of the American Academy of Railway Surgeons. He is a surgeon of much more than ordinary ability, and of wide reputation. He lives in a beautiful home on the Park. The Doctor was married in 1871, to Miss Kittie L., the accomplished daughter of Dr. J. M. Palmer, his preceptor, of Corry. To them have been born three children: Bertha C., Florence E., and John C.

N. P. Kilburn, jeweler, Corry, Pa., born in St. Lawrence county, New York, October 28, 1828, is a son of John M. and Hannah (Cook) Kilburn (deceased), both natives of New York. When N. P. Kilburn was young his parents moved to Cattaraugus county, New York, where he received his early education. When quite young he became an apprentice to the jeweler's trade in Gowanda, N. Y., and in the fall of 1856 he started in business for himself in Forestville, N. Y., and remained there four years, when he went to Randolph, and in August, 1862, came to Corry and engaged in business, and was the first jeweler in the town. In 1874 he sold his business out and went on the road as a traveling salesman in the sewing machine, needle and oil line six years, during which time he traveled in nearly every State in the Union. Mr. Kilburn has been twice married, first to Miss Rebecca Nichols, of Cattaraugus county, New York. She died in 1862, and he afterwards married Miss Susan Owens, of Corry. To them were born two children, George P., a graduate of Clark's Business College, and Jennie, who married Frank McVaugh, a conductor on the W. N. Y. & P. R. R. Mr. Kilburn is a member of the I. O. O. F. and is a Republican.

C. H. Wetmore, treasurer of the Corry Gas and Water Company Corry, Pa., was born in Warren December 2, 1859, and is a son of Charles and Rosalia (Hall) Wetmore. He was reared in Warren, Pa., and attended the public schools until he was 14 years old, when he attended the Flushing School, Long Island, and later took a course in the Yale law department and graduated in the class of '83. He then came to Corry and was engaged in the Corry Pail Factory until 1886, when he engaged in his present business. He was married in 1884 to Miss L. Belle Squier, of Corry. Mr. Wetmore is a member of the Masonic order and is a Republican.

A. E. Weeks, proprietor of the Corry steam laundry Corry, Pa., is a native of Ohio, and was born February 12, 1861, at Painesville, O. He is a son of Seth and Debra A. (Blydenburg) Weeks, natives of Long Island, now residents of Corry. His father was the founder of the Corry fish hatchery and conducted it many years as a private enterprise, when finally the State purchased it from him, and it has since been operated under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Fish Commission. When A. E. Weeks was but 5 years old his parents moved from their home in Ohio to Corry, where they have since resided. Here he received his education in the common schools, and when a youth assisted his father in the fish hatchery. When about 22 years old he went to Garfield, Warren county, Pa., and engaged in the bakery business, after which he was engaged in the bakery business at Bradford, Pa. He then sold his business and returned to Corry, and was employed in the Caligraph works until they moved from Corry in 1885, when he engaged in the laundry business, which he has since conducted with a marked degree of success. His laundry occupies the basement of Week's Opera House, on the corner of Washington and Park streets. Here he has one of the finest laundries in western Pennsylvania. It is equipped with all the modern machinery for laundry work, and has several local agencies throughout northwestern Pennsylvania and southwestern New York. From the fact that the people of Corry have one of the best and most modern opera houses in the country, they may justly feel a sense of gratitude toward Mr. Weeks, whose name that magnificent temple of amusement bears. It was opened in February, 1892, having been under construction during the preceding year. It is an artistic building, possessing all the unique features of modern opera house architecture. It is built of brick with a frontage of 50 feet by 120 feet deep, and has a seating capacity of nearly 1,000, has the best modern system of ventilation, and is lighted by electricity. The stage equipment would do credit to New York, the scenes being operated on the drop plan, and they are of great variety; the stage dimensions are 42 x 50 feet. Corry is and may well be proud of her opera house. Mr. Weeks managed it the first season and then rented it to Mr. White, who is the present manager. Mr. Weeks was married May 22, 1887, to Miss May, daughter of Oscar Black, a highly-respected citizen of Union City, Pa. They have four children: Nettie, Clyde, Max and George Wilton. Mr. Weeks is a member of the K. of P., and is a Republican. He is one of Corry's most promising young business men.

Fred C. Hoenes, of the firm of Bowie & Hoenes, gentlemen's furnishers and merchant tailors, corner of Mam and Center streets, Corry, Pa., was born in Titusville, Pa., January 13, 1870, and is a son of Jacob and Catherine (Smith) Hoenes, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Erie, Pa. In the family there were three children: Marie, resides in Corry; Theodore and Fred C., also of Corry. Jacob Hoenes came to America when a young man and spent most of his days in Buffalo, N. Y., and Titusville, Pa. He died in Titusville in 1881. Mrs. Hoenes afterwards married and now resides on a farm near Corry. Fred was reared in Titusville, and, until the age of 12, attended school there. He then went to Olean, N. Y., as an apprentice at the butcher's trade with his uncle. Here he remained about two years when he came to Corry and took a course in the Corry Business College, and shortly after accepted a position as janitor of the Corry City National Bank, and was promoted to discount and collection clerk. When the bank failed, in 1892, he engaged in the tobacco and cigar business. He continued in this line about one year, when the present partnership was formed. He was married September 19, 1894, to Miss Jennie, the accomplished daughter of Maxwell Cameron, a prominent citizen of Corry. Mr. Hoenes is a member of the famous Crosby Hose Company, a member of the running team and assistant foreman. He is a Democrat in politics. Although young, Mr. Hoenes has established a business and social reputation in his own city and locality that is highly creditable.

Isaac Wolf

Isaac B. Brown was born in Elk county, February 20, 1848. He entered the Union army as a private soldier, in 1864, at the age of 16 years, and served in the Third division, Ninth corps, Army of the Potomac, until the close of the war, when he devoted one year to study at Smetthport Academy, and three years at Alfred University, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1869. After graduating, he taught school at Ridgeway, Elk county, and subsequently located in Corry, Erie county, where he commenced the study of law, and was admitted to practice in 1877. In 1878 he was nominated for Assembly by the Republicans in the Second district of Erie county, but was defeated by a combination of Democrats and Greenbackers. In 1880 he was nominated and elected. He served six years in the Assembly of Pennsylvania, having been three times, successively, chosen by the Republicans of the district. In 1886 he was a candidate against Hon. C. W. Mackey and Hon. L. F. Watson for the congressional nomination in the district composed of Erie, Venango and Warren counties, but was defeated. In 1887 he was appointed deputy secretary of internal affairs by Hon. Thomas J. Stewart, then secretary of internal affairs, and in 1891 he was reappointed to the same position. In 1894 he was prominently mentioned for the nomination for secretary of internal affairs, but withdrew before the Republican State convention was held. In January, 1896, he was appointed by Governor Hastings to the position of secretary of internal affairs to fill the unexpired term of Thomas J. Stewart, who had resigned to accept the appointment of adjutant general of Pennsylvania. During the session of 1885 he introduced and secured the passage of the bill for the establishment of the Pennsylvania Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Erie, Pa. He has been a prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic since its organization, having served on the staff of the commander-in-chief, and several times has been elected delegate to the National Encampment. He served thirteen years in the National Guard of Pennsylvania as second lieutenant and captain of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth regiments and brigade judge advocate of the staff of Gen. James A. Beaver. He is now president of the Survivors' Association of the Third Division, Ninth Corps, Army of the Potomac. He and his brothers, Hon. J. L. Brown, of Elk county, and Hon. W. W. Brown, of McKean county, were all soldiers in the Union army, and have all been members of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. During the sessions of 1881 and 1883 he and his brother, Hon. J. L. Brown, were colleagues in the Pennsylvania legislature, while their brother, Hon. W. W. Brown, was a member of the National House of Representatives. Mr. Brown is now deputy secretary of internal affairs and superintendent of the bureau of railroads of Pennsylvania.

John Smutz, Corry, Pa., is a native of French Germany, and was born in Alsace April 7, 1838. He received his education in the land of his birth and at the age of 13 came to America with his father, and after remaining in Buffalo a short time came to Warren, Pa., where his father died. John learned the harness-maker's trade at Warren and at the age of 20 engaged in the saddlery business at Ridgeway, Elk county, Pa., and continued until 1866, when he came to Corry and engaged in the same business until 1890, and then turned the business over to his son, Walter, and has since devoted his attention to the lumber business in Warren county, Pennsylvania, and in West Virginia. He has been more or less interested in lumber traffic during the last ten years. He was married December 27, 1859, to Harriet Itel, of Warren, Pa. To this union were born two children: Nettie H., who married A. L. Colegrove, of Corry, and Walter, who is a prosperous harness merchant in Corry. Mrs. Smutz departed this life in March, 1893. Mr. Smutz was at one time elected justice of the peace, but refused to take out his commission. He is a Republican.

Edwin S. Seiter, of the firm of Mead & Seiter, wholesale liquor dealers, Corry, Pa., was born in Cincinnati, O., January 28, 1864. He is a son of Joseph and Margaret (Tilfile) Seiter, both natives of Cincinnati. Mr. Seiter was educated in his native city and commenced life as a bookkeeper in a wholesale liquor store at Findlay, O., where he remained three years, and went to Warren, Pa., as manager for Mr. Mead. In 1887 he came to Corry in the same capacity for three years, and in 1890 the present partnership was formed. Mr. Seiter has the entire management of the Corry business, and Mr. Mead continues his business in Warren. They have four representatives on the road, and their business extends throughout Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York.

Captain John F. Austin, Corry, Pa., of the firm of Austin & Mulkie, of the St. James Hotel, Corry, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., June 29, 1863, and is a son of John and Annie (Sadler) Austin, both natives of London, England. They came to America in 1858. In the family there are six children, John being the third. The family moved to Corry in 1863, where the father followed the trade of painting until his death, October 8, 1872. Mrs. Austin is now a resident of Omaha, Neb. John was educated in the public schools of Corry, and early in life began an apprenticeship at the printer's trade in the office of the Corry Herald, where he was employed nine years, and finally made foreman, which position he resigned, and, in 1886, he entered a partnership with L. F. Trimble, and they published the Corry Herald one year. He then abandoned the business and entered the employ of Clark & Warren, as superintendent of their barreling and shipping department, which position he held three years, when he was appointed assistant postmaster of Corry. He resigned this position June 1, 1893, to enter his present business, and is now traveling representative of the Corry Artesian Mineral Water Company. Mr. Austin was married December 25, 1886, to Miss Henrietta Jenette, daughter of Dr. Reuben Brinker, of Corry. They have one child, Marie Belle. Mr. Austin enlisted in Co. A, 17th Reg., N. G. P., as private, November 2, 1882, and at the reorganization of the National Guard was transferred to the 16th; was promoted to corporal July 16, 1885; second lieutenant June 19, 1887; first lieutenant September 14, 1889, and his commission as captain was issued in 1893. Mr. Austin is foreman of the Crosby Hose Company for the fifth term; was chief engineer of the city fire department one term, and is a member of the K. of P. and the National Union; he is an active Erie county Republican.

Gustavus A. Fox, owner and proprietor of the European Hotel, Corry, Pa., was born in St. Mary's, Elk county, Pa., December 24, 1863, and is a son of George and Genevieve Fox, both natives of Wurtemberg, Germany. They came to America and settled in St. Mary's. In the family there were seven children, of whom Gustavus A. is the youngest. He was educated in the public schools of St. Mary's, and began life as a steward in a hotel, and November 22, 1885, came to Corry and worked in the Phenix Hotel until April, 1893, when he purchased the European Hotel, Nos. 8 and 10 East Main street, which he conducts on both the American and European plan. He was married May 23, 1893, to Annie, daughter of Jacob Simmons, of Warren, Pa. Mr. Fox is a member of the C. B. L., and politically is a Democrat.

Willis M. Weed, of the firm of Weed & Co., dealers in boots and shoes, was born in Havana, N. Y., May 6, 1859, and is a son of Joseph and Mary (Mitchell) Weed. He received his education in the public schools of New York State and the academy in Havana, N. Y. In 1879 he entered the employ of J. Richardson at Elmira, N. Y., as traveling salesman, in the boot and shoe line, and traveled in the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Iowa. In 1886 he abandoned the road and engaged in business with his twin brother, William J., under the firm name of Weed Bros. They continued business until 1889, when the present firm was formed. Mr. Weed was married October 31, 1883, to Miss Eliza Fisher, of Spencer, N. Y. He has been chief of the Corry fire department two years, and is a prominent Republican of Erie county.

Frank Laurie, proprietor of the Union Hotel and restaurant, was born March 12, 1863, in Corry, Pa. He is the son of A. and Elizabeth Laurie. His father died in 1893, and his mother resides in Corry. Educated in the public schools of Corry, he began life in the hotel and restaurant business in Corry in 1886, and in 1890 came to his present place of business. Mr. Laurie was married, in January, 1887, to Miss Mary Workman, of Corry. They have three children: Frank, Annie and Ray. He is a member of the city council, a director in the National Bank, of Corry, and is largely interested in city real estate. He is a member of the K. of P., K. O. T. M., the Elks, and in politics is a Democrat.

E. R. Murray, of the firm of Hall & Murray, dealers in groceries, dry goods, boots and shoes, Corry, Pa., was born in Grand Rapids, Mich., August 27, 1864. He is the son of Ira S. and Emeline L. Murray, the former a native of Rutland, Vt., and the latter of Medina, N. Y. The family came to Corry in 1869, where they now reside. Mr. E. R. Murray was educated in the Corry high school, and in 1883 engaged in his present business. He was married January 7, 1886, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Chauncey Rogers, sr., of Corry. To them have been born two children, Alice and Chauncey. Mr. Murray is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. O. T. M., and he has served five years as a member of Co. A., 16th Regt., N. G. P.

Henry Thurston, manufacturer of cigars and dealer in cigars and tobacco, Corry, Pa., is a representative of one of the oldest families in the United States. The first knowledge we have of the Thurstons on this continent is the record of the arrival of John Thurston, aged 36, and his wife, Margaret, aged 32, who were passengers on the "Mary Ann" from Yarmouth, England, which arrived in Massachusetts May 10, 1637. They brought with them two children, both sons. John Thurston entered the church in Dedham, Mass., January 12, 1643, and became a freeman May 10 of the same year. Henry Thurston is a descendant of the eighth generation from John, through Joseph, Benjamin, John, Israel, David, David to Henry. Branches of this extensive family have settled in various portions of the United States, but principally in the New England States. The name Thurston is said to be derived from the Saxon, Danish and Runic "Thraest," meaning faithful, and is a very old name in England, appearing in a slightly modified form in the Doomsday Book. Henry Thurston is a son of David and Esther (Stanbrook) Thurston, and was born in Black Ash (now Mead township, Crawford county, Pa.), December 23, 1824. His father was also a native of the same place, and followed farming in that locality all his life. His mother was also a native of Pennsylvania, and of Holland descent. She died May 10, 1836, leaving Henry, who was the only child. His father afterward married Abigail Spring, by whom he had six children, all deceased. Henry received his education in the old-style subscription schools that were in vogue in the pioneer days of Crawford county, and remained on his father's farm until 18 years of age, when he served an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, which has been the chief occupation of his life. He resided in the vicinity of Meadville until 1876, when he came to Corry, and has since made that city his home. In 1871 he entered the employ of the Oil Creek R. R. Company as a carpenter, and in 1886 was appointed master carpenter of the carpenter work on the road, which position he held until the spring of 1894, when he resigned and engaged in his present business. Mr. Thurston was first married January 12, 1848, to Angeline Strayer, of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. To this union were born six children: Allen (deceased), Flora (Mrs. Wilson Reynolds, Knoxville, N. Y.), Hattie (Mrs. Emery Moyer, Conshohocken, Pa.), Crawford, butcher, Spartansburg, Pa., and David (deceased). Mrs. Thurston died September 1, 1858. He afterwards married Miss Adelia Dickson, of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. They have six children: Asena (Mrs. Edgar Northrup, of Warren, Pa.), Joseph E. (freight agent for the W. N. Y. & P. R. R. Company, Oil City, Pa.), Waver (Mrs. Mark Heath Corry, Pa.), Mack (deceased), Alena and Harry, at home. Mr. Thurston served one term in the Corry city council, is a member of the Masonic order, and his political leanings are toward the Democratic party.

Charles T. Trimble, editor and proprietor of the Saturday Democrat, Corry, Pa., was born in Westfield, N. Y., July 20, 1865, and is a son of Wellington and Luanna (Frank) Trimble, natives of Ohio, now residents of Pennsylvania. In the family there were three children: L. F., job printer, Corry, Pa.; Adèle and Charles T. The latter was educated in the Corry public school, and became, in 1880, a reporter for the Petroleum World of Titusville, Pa., for Corry. He next learned the printer's trade and followed job printing, in connection with other business, until 1890, when he assumed the management of the Saturday Democrat.

Andrew N. Weber, proprietor of the Hotel St. Nicholas, Corry, Pa., was born in Boston, Erie county, N. Y., and is the son of Frank and Bridget (Shingler) Weber, natives of Baden-Baden, Germany. They came to America at an early date and settled in Buffalo. He followed farming until the time of his death, in 1877. His widow now resides in Buffalo. Andrew was one of a family of eleven children: John B., Buffalo; Elizabeth, wife of J. H. Weber, Buffalo; Frances, wife of F. W. Frew, Springville, N. Y.; Andrew N., Corry, Pa.; Anthony, Buffalo; Benedict, Buffalo; Clemens, Buffalo; Mary, Mrs. Joseph Durfer, Frank, Buffalo; Malinda, wife of John Fisher, Buffalo; Philip D., Boston, N. Y. Andrew N. Weber was reared and educated in Boston, and at the age of 18 began to learn the tinner's trade in Buffalo. In 1868 he came to Corry and followed his trade two years; then he engaged in business for himself until 1873, when he went to Columbus and engaged in the general hardware business until 1882, when he came to Corry and purchased the hotel of which he is now proprietor. He was married, April 10, 1870, to Miss Kate Rieker, of East Buffalo. To them were born eleven children: Albert F., clerk in his father's hotel; Clifton A. (deceased), Herman J., steward in hotel; Josephine (deceased), Clementine (deceased), Gertrude, George, Ida, Lizzie, Lucy and Paul. Mr. Weber has been a life-long Democrat, and is a member of the C. M. B. A.

Thomas F. Oliver, of the firm of Oliver Bros., proprietors of the Phoenix Hotel, Corry, Pa., was born in Dobbs' Ferry, near the city of New York, February 16, 1866. He is a son of Thomas and Ellen (Long) Oliver, who still reside in Dobbs' Ferry, N. Y. There are six children: Lizzie, now Mrs. J. J. Murphy, of Dunkirk, N. Y.; Margaret, resides at home; May, resides at home; Thomas F., William E. and J. J., of Dunkirk, N. Y. Thomas F. was educated in the public schools of New York, and S. S. Packer's Business College, corner Broadway and Eleventh streets, where he was graduated in 1883, when he accepted a position as entry clerk for Robert Carr, of 161 Chambers street. He remained there one year, and went to Dunkirk, N. Y., and accepted a clerkship in the Erie Hotel, and May 1, 1883, he assumed the management of the Fourth Avenue Hotel, in Dunkirk, where he remained one year, when he and his brother, William E., succeeded James Edwards in their present business. Mr. Oliver was married, June 5, 1889, to Miss Ella G. Brown, of Dunkirk, N. Y. To this union were born two children, Harold and William.

William Oliver, of the firm of Oliver Bros., of the Phoenix Hotel, Corry, Pa., was born in Dobbs' Ferry, N. Y., June 30, 1869, and is a brother of Thomas Oliver. William was reared and educated in his native town, and at the age of 16 entered the employ of a grocer in Dobbs' Ferry; at the end of one year he went to Dunkirk, N. Y., and accepted a position as steward in a hotel, where he remained three years. He then entered the employ of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. as car tracer, with headquarters at Buffalo. About a year later he resigned this position and came to Corry, and clerked in the Phoenix Hotel two years. He then went to Lakewood and clerked in the Kent House one season, when he returned to Buffalo, to clerk in the Niagara Hotel for a short time, and then returned to Corry to his old position in the Phoenix Hotel, where he remained until he and his brother Thomas purchased the property. The Phoenix Hotel is the first house in Corry, and one of the foremost hotels in Erie county. It is a well-known and favorite resort for the commercial travelers who frequent Western Pennsylvania. The Oliver Bros. are very popular hotel men, and, having had long experience in the business, are well known to the traveling fraternity as genial hosts, who thoroughly understand the art of making their guests comfortable and giving general satisfaction to all.

Clyde D. Wilcox, of the firm of Smith & Wilcox, wholesale and retail dealers in meats, Corry, Pa., is a native of Warren, Pa., and was born September 8, 1865. He is a son of S. D. and Julietta (Skinner) Wilcox, the former a native of Warren county, Pennsylvania, and the latter of Corry, Pa. They now reside in Columbus, Warren county. The Wilcox family consists of four children: Edith, now Mrs. F. M. Wheelock, Corry, Pa.; W. J., manager of a general store, Lynch, Pa.; Clyde D. and Frank. Mr. Wilcox was educated in the public schools of Warren county, and in 1881 came to Corry and entered the employ of Mr. Livermore as clerk, and remained one year. He then entered the employ of the firm of Bowe & Johnson, and remained there a short time, when he became a partner in the firm of Knowlton & Wilcox in the grocery business. Shortly after, he sold out his interest in this company, when he and his brother purchased the grocery business of O. P. Eaton. This he continued until 1892, when he sold out and entered the employ of Johnson & Hunter, of Union City, where he remained a short time, and again returned to Corry and was employed by Mr. Livermore until 1894. Since then he has been engaged in his present business. He was married, January 4, 1887, to Miss Anna C., daughter of Squire H. D. Franes (deceased), who was one of the early pioneers of Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox have one child, Zoe. Mr. Wilcox is a member of the I. O. O. F. and Royal Arcanum. He is well known throughout Erie county as one of the energetic and successful young business men of that locality.

R. J. Follett, of the firm of Barlow, Brigham & Follett Co. (limited), hardware dealers, Corry, Pa., was born in Warren, Pa., September 17, 1847, and is a son of Philmore G. and Mary P. (Haviland) Follett, the latter a native of near Lake George, N. Y. She spent most of her life in Chautauqua county. The former is a native of Warren, Pa. His mother now resides in Minneapolis, Minn. His father died in 1858. In the family were three children: R. J., William L., foreman in the machine shops, Erie, Pa., and Mary Ellen, who married W. H. Manley, cigar manufacturer, of the firm of Hooker & Manley, Minneapolis, Minn. R. J. Follett was educated in the common schools of Warren, Pa., and served an apprenticeship at the plumber's trade with L. C. Roberts, of Corry. He then entered the employ of C. J. Swift, of Corry, Pa., where he worked as a journeyman plumber for seventeen years, when he entered a partnership with E. L. Brigham in the hardware business, under the firm name of Brigham & Follett. In about nine months

Mr. Barlow was received into the firm, and the present limited partnership was formed. They now carry on one of the most extensive hardware and plumbing establishments in Erie county. Their business block consists of a double-front three-story building, with basement, every floor of which is occupied by them. Few cities of the size of Corry can boast of such a mercantile establishment in any line. Mr. Follett was married January 1, 1872, to Miss Alice E. Fuller, of Spring Creek, Pa. To them have been born two children: Josie, married to Arthur Densmore, of Corry, Pa., and Hattie E. Mr. Follett is a member of the Masonic order and the Woodmen of the World; he has served one term in the city council and is a Republican.

Dr. H. A. Zahn, owner and proprietor of the Corry Electrical Manufacturing Company, Corry, Pa., is among the leaders in the manufacturing industry in Corry. The plant is situated on Eagle street, between Second and Third avenues; the main building is 70 by 40 feet, with an annex of 40 by 40, besides the engine room and an extensive testing room. Here may be seen the operation of all modern machinery for the manufacture of the various apparatus used in the production and harnessing of that mysterious fluid, electricity; here some of the best dynamos and other electrical appliances now in use in the country are manufactured. Dr. Zahn, who is at the head of this concern, is a native of Germany, and was born in Felsheim, near Frankfort-on-the-Main. He received his education in the gymnasium schools of his native land, and at the age of 19 entered the University of Strausberg, where he took the courses in physics, chemistry, higher mathematics and engineering, and was graduated with honors in 1892, with the degree of doctor of philosophy. He then went to Zurich, Switzerland, where he engaged in electrical engineering one year, when he came to America to attend the World's Fair, and in the fall of 1893 came to Corry, where he followed electrical engineering in a professional way until October, 1894, when he engaged in business in his present capacity. Mr. Zahn, although comparatively a young man, is excelled by none in his profession.

J. C. Kepler, of the City Planning Mill, Corry, Pa., was born in Centre county, Pennsylvania, April 28, 1863. He is a son of George M. and Nancy G. (Alexander) Kepler. The former now resides in Corry. The mother died in 1873. The Kepler family genealogy, which has recently been compiled, is very extensive and complete, and by consulting it we find that they are of German origin, and the evidence is satisfactory that the celebrated German astronomer, Kepler, was a member of the family. Nancy G. Alexander was of Scotch descent, and the history of the family is traced to the royal blood of Scotland. In the Kepler family there were two children, Clara C., Mrs. D. S. Wakenight, of Portland, Ind. (deceased) and J. C. Kepler, who was educated in the public schools of his native place, and in Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa. In 1881 he engaged in the lumber business in Forest county, Pennsylvania, where he was engaged with a large lumber company for about two years, and then went to the far West to engage in lumbering in Washington, Oregon and British Columbia. In about two years he returned to the East and accepted a position as traveling representative for the Simonds Manufacturing Company, of Fitchburg, Mass. He represented this company in all the Atlantic States from New York to Florida. In 1894 he came to Corry and engaged in his present business. He is also interested in the Corry Radiator Company and is the owner of a fancy fruit and gardening farm in the city. He was married June 24, 1891, to Miss Lizzie M., daughter of Col. Geo. Gilmore, of Titusville, Pa. They have two children, Georgia Gilmore and Katherine Frances, born to this union. Mr. Kepler is a Knight Templar Mason, a member of the K. of P. and politically is a Democrat. He is one of the directors of the Corry Board of Trade.

James Richards, grocer, corner North Washington and West Wayne streets, Corry, Pa., was born in Sharon, Mercer county, Pa., May 3, 1853, and is a son of Lyman and May (Kitzler) Richards, both natives of Pennsylvania, the former of New England descent, and the latter of German lineage. The father died in 1864, and the mother now resides in Pittsburg. In the family there were five children, and James was the third in the order of birth. When he was five years old his parents moved to Titusville, Pa., where he received his early education in the public schools, and at the age of 13 went to work, running a pump in operating the one oil well at Titusville. He worked in the oil business, and also followed lumbering some in Warren county until 1878, when he came to Erie county, and was engaged in farming until 1889; he then engaged in his present business. Mr. Richards was married August 30, 1874, to Miss Etta, daughter of Ralph and Annie S. (Mead) Perkins, of Warren, Pa. They have three children: Dell, Erie and Hugh. Mr. Richards is a member of the K. O. T. M., E. A. U., and is a Republican. The family are members of the Methodist Church. He is one of the enterprising and progressive business men of Corry, Pa.

Joseph K. Brown, farmer, Clark's Corners, Ash-tabula county, Ohio, was born in New York State, in 1854. He is a son of Solomons G., and Esther (Kings-bury) Brown, natives of New York State. Mrs. Brown was a daughter of James Kingsbury, a native of Connecticut. Mr. Brown's children were as follows: Elizabeth, wife of Winter Smith; Juliette, wife of John Curtis; Hiram, killed in the late war; Eleanor, wife of William Leut; Sarah, wife of William Armstrong; Joseph K., and Herbert Brown. Mr. Brown died in 1890, in Isabella county, Michigan, and Mrs. Brown in 1881, in Conneaut township, Erie county, Pa. Mr. Joseph K. Brown was married in 1886, to Phoebe, daughter of Amos White, an old resident of the township, who died in 1880. The children born to this union are: Amy, wife of William Jordan; N. Richard, of Ashtabula, O., and George F. Brown, of Conneaut township, Erie county. Mr. Brown has been a representative farmer for several years, and is a member of the State police.

James Loomis, farmer, Tracy's, Conneaut township, Erie county, Pa., was born at Kidder's Corners, Erie county, in 1851. He is a son of Albert Loomis, now a resident of Keepville, and an old resident of Conneaut township, having settled in the southwestern part when the locality was a dense forest. The farm upon which Mr. Loomis now resides was made productive years before the adjoining acres were cleared of timber. Albert Loomis married Elizabeth, daughther of Benjamin Carr, who died at Tracy's, in 1880. To this union were born four children as follows: William and George, Keeppville; Wilbert, a resident of Portland, Oregon, and James, who came to the farm he now occupies, first in 1867, at which time his father began its cultivation. With the exception of a few months spent in Minnesota, he has always been a resident of Conneaut township.

L. H. Salisbury, hardware dealer, Albion, Erie county, is a son of Sanford and Sarah (Sawdey) Salisbury, natives of New York. The children of this family are as follows: Henry (deceased), James (deceased), Darius (deceased), Albert, Tracy, Cyrus (deceased) and L. H. Salisbury, who came to Conneaut township about thirty-one years ago. He was born in Girard township in 1841, where he resided until coming to Conneaut township in 1864. L. H. Salisbury was married in 1862, to Miss Adda Morris, daughter of Isaac and Louisa Morris, old residents of Lockport, Erie county, Pa. To this union have been born six children, as follows: Charles G., L. E., Earl W. (deceased), A. J., Ada (wife of Dr. H. C. Sturtevant), Ora and Grace. Mr. Salisbury began the hardware business in Albion in 1870, and since that time it has grown and prospered under careful management. He is to-day recognized as a representative business man, and carries in stock all kinds of tin and hardware, stoves and ranges, and, besides, pays strictest attention to plumbing and jobbing, all work being guaranteed satisfactory. Personally Mr. Salisbury stands deservedly high, while his establishment ranks as a leader. He has taken great interest in the Albion graded schools, and has served as school director twenty years.

C. V. Lick, undertaker and proprietor of the harness emporium, Albion, Erie county, Pa., began business in Albion in 1880. He was born in 1859, and is a son of John L. and Eliza (Goodrich) Lick, and a grandson of Aaron Lick, who came to Erie county about sixty years ago. He was married in June, 1880, to Miss Mary Deitz, daughter of Adam and Amanda Deitz, of Conneaut township. To this union have been born three children: Milo Vernon, Maxwell John and Florence Elizabeth. Besides undertaking, Mr. Lick has a large harness and carriage retail business. In the past few years he has built up a trade in the borough that is not equalled by any other in his line in the locality. He enjoys the esteem and respect of all the community, and all through business, or otherwise, become acquainted with him. Mr. Lick gives his personal attention to the business, and the large trade he has secured is the result of his earnest endeavors to please his patrons. He is an active member of the I. O. O. F., F. & A. M., E. A. U. and the P. H. C.

Seymour M. White, D. D. S., dentist, Albion, Erie county, Pa., was born in Edinboro, Erie county, Pa. He is the second son of Zeno White, a native of Pennsylvania, and a grandson of Benjamin White, a native of New York State, and a descendant of Capt. John White, of the English army. The mother of Seymour was Clarrissa Brown, daughter of Joseph Brown, of Erie county, and a native of New York State. Zeno White died in 1893. Dr. White was married in 1885 to Sarah, daughter of Jeduthan Wells, of Albion, Pa. One child, Lucille, has been born to this union. Dr. White graduated from the Philadelphia Dental College in 1886, and followed his profession in Union City and Erie, locating in Albion in December, 1894, where he has since established a lucrative practice. His dental parlors are complete, with all of the most improved dental appliances that could possibly aid in the successful prosecution of the work. Dentistry in its most advanced stage is given careful and prompt attention in the most reliable manner. The Doctor is a member of F. & A. M. and I. O. O. F.

Dr. H. C. Sturdevant, dentist, Albion, Erie county, Pa., is a native of the township where he now resides. He is the son of Alvah and Matilda (Stuntz) Sturdevant, of Conneaut township, and was born in September, 1868, and was educated at the public schools and at Clark's College, Erie, finally graduating from the Philadelphia Dental College with the class of 1892. He began the practice of dentistry in Albion in the year following. On June 5, 1893, he was married to Miss Ada Salisbury. The Doctor conducts one of the best dental establishments in the country. The rooms are fitted up in exquisite taste throughout, while the dental machinery consists of all the latest improved designs needed in this difficult and exacting profession. This establishment makes a specialty of crown and bridge work, and the excellent reputation in this line of dentistry is a sufficient guarantee of efficiency. No ill-fitting work is ever allowed to leave the rooms. The establishment ranks high, and all work is guaranteed to be satisfactory. Dr. Sturdevant is a member of the Albion Lodge F. & A. M., I. O. O. F. and Royal Arcanum.

Edward Froby, produce dealer, Albion, Erie county, Pa., is a native of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, was born March 10, 1851, in that county. He is a son of Henry Froby, whose ancestors came from Germany. In July, 1873, he was married to Martha J., daughter of Joseph and Mary A. Brett, natives of Cattaraugus county, New York, who was born May 22, 1859. Four children have been born to this union: Lena May, born August 23, 1875; Emma J., born February 14, 1878; Ida A., born October 30, 1879; Edward Lee, born December 17, 1882. Mr. Froby came to Albion in 1869, and learned the blacksmith's trade, and has latterly dealt extensively in produce, carrying on a large shipping business, numbering among his patrons the soundest and most reliable retailers in the country. While possessing facilities and business connections of a strictly first-class character, he is enabled to offer special advantages to his customers. This business has been conducted with every advantage to be desired from a straightforward business policy, and Mr. Froby has enjoyed an eminently successful career since he began business. He is a member of the I. O. O. F.

W. S. Hubbard, physician, Albion, Erie county, Pa., was born in June, 1859, in Cortland, Cortland county, N. Y., and received a liberal education, graduating from the Pulte (homeopathic) Medical College in Cincinnati, O., with the class of 1887. He is the son of James H. and Martha (McGuire) Hubbard, natives of New York State. He was married in June, 1891, to Juna, daughter of George Tanner, of Cortland, Cortland county, N. Y. One daughter, Mary Pearne, has been born to this union. Dr. Hubbard began the practice of medicine in the fall of 1857, and has built up a lucrative practice in his profession. He is a man of genial temperament, fine ability and rare attainments. He is a member of Albion Lodge I. O. O. F., K. of P., E. A. U., P. H. C. and the Grange.

C. R. Forbes, contractor, builder and farmer, Albion, Erie county, Pa., was born in the township where he now resides in 1856. Educated at the public schools, and making the most of the advantages offered, he soon became a successful contractor and builder, which he has followed, in connection with farming, since 1880. He is a son of Albert and Olive (Cornell) Forbes. Mrs. Forbes survives her husband, who departed this life in November, 1873. Mr. C. R. Forbes is a grandson of B. J. and Hannah (Farley) Forbes, who were among the early settlers of Erie county. The former died in 1879 and the latter in 1869, on the homestead farm upon which the grandson now resides. Mr. Forbes was married January 1, 1881, to Miss Ollie, daughter of Rev. W. S. Randall, of Keeppville, Erie county, Pa. The children born to this union are J. K. and Kay W. Mr. Forbes is an enterprising and energetic citizen, and is wide-awake to all enterprises affecting his locality. He is a dealer in the Jackson wagons, buggies, carriages, building brick, Forest county shingles, etc. He is a member of the F. & A. M., K. of P., P. of H. and State Police.

George C. Mills, farmer, Plata, Conneaut township, Erie county, Pa., was born November 25, 1839, in the township where he now resides. He is a son of Jesse and Harriett Mills, natives of Oneida county, New York, who married Harriett Bowman in 1817, came to Erie county about 1830 and settled in Conneaut township. The former died in 1881, at the age of 85 years, the latter in 1892, at the age of 94 years. Nine children were born to this union: Lucretia, Betsey, Girdon, Adelia, Josiah, Delos, Julia, Helen, George and Jane. The daughters are all dead. George enlisted, August 20, 1861, in Co. H, 83d P. V. I., the first regiment to leave Erie county, Pennsylvania. It was connected with the Third Brigade, Fifth Corps, Army of the Potomac. He participated in the siege of Yorktown and the battles of Hanover Court House, Chickahominy, Gaines Mills, Malvern Hill (where he was wounded), Fredricksburg, Rappahannock Station and Miner Run. He also took part in the battle of the Wilderness, Laurel Hill, and in the entire siege of Petersburg; was at the front and on duty, with the exception of six weeks in the hospital, owing to a wound, serving thirty-seven months; he received an honorable discharge September 20, 1864; he returned home and, November 9, 1865, married Miss Nettie M., daughter of A. J. Fullerton, of Crawford county, Pa. This union has been blessed with three children: Arthur D., who married Erdine Barns May 2, 1894; Nora H., married to O. J. Cross, May 21, 1891, and Homer A., all surviving. Mr. Mills is a member of the G. A. K. and A. O. U. W., and has occupied public offices of prominence in both town and county. He was elected and served six years as county commissioner, two full terms following 1888, and has been a life-long Republican and a highly-respected citizen. He is the owner of a first-class stock farm, consisting of 100 acres of good land, with good buildings and well stocked. Mr. and Mrs. Mills are members of the M. E. Church. Mrs. Mills has superintended the Sunday-school for the past two years.

Ernest C. Johnson merchant, Keeppville, Erie county, Pa., was born at Preston, Ind., in 1866. He is a son of Edward J. and Olive (Betts) Johnson, of Pennside, Erie county, and grandson of Sylvester Johnson, one of the early settlers of Crawford county. The family of Edward J. consists of two sons, Ernest C. and Frank E. Johnson, of Keeppville. Ernest C. began in the mercantile business in 1889, and was appointed postmaster the same year. Mr. Johnson is a member of the I. O. O. F. He is a public-spirited citizen and a man of prominence. In 1895 he was married to Miss Clara Keep, daughter of Edward and Ellen Spaulding Keep, of Keeppville. Mrs. Johnson is a great-granddaughter of Marsena Keep, jr., who is mentioned in the following valuable record of the family: "First John Keep, who came to America and was shot by an Indian on his way to church, in 1676; son, Eugene Samuel, born 1675, died 1753; and his son, Matthew, born 1722, died 1758; and his son, Matthew, born 1745, died 1827; his son, Matthew, born 1767, died February 20, 1847. His brother, Sylvanus, born March 29, 1765; also Marsena Keep, born March 25, 1770. He married Mary Randall April 25, 1798; born 1780, and died March 6, 1835. He died October 24, 1851. Heman Keep, born August 22, 1782. Luther Keep, born April 11, 1786. Sisters, Editha, born April 3, 1772, married Walter Jurdick September 29, 1811; Mehitable, born February 18, 1778, married July 2, 1797, to Oliver Dwight; Abigail, born March 5, 1780, married September 3, 1802, to Truman Barnes. Mother of above family was Mehitable Chandler, daughter of Isaac and Abigail Chandler. Matthew, the father, was married again June 9, 1797, to Marion Colton, widow of Captain Ebenezer Colton. He died in 1827. Marsena Keep, jr., family: Polly, born May 3, 1819, died March 18, 1857; Nancy Keep, born December 13, 1809, married Jonas Lewis September 23, 1829. Marsena Keep, jr., born October, 1802, died August 7, 1876; married January 15, 1824, to Polly Hewitt, born March 26, 1803; died December 10, 1875. Mehitable, born March 20, 1805, married Amos King April 8, 1824; she died August 16, 1865; he died May, 1849. Matthew Keep, born February 23, 1807, died January 23, 1891; married Orilla Hewitt February 19, 1829; she was born June 25, 1800, died June 12, 1866. Editha Keep, born April 29, 1809; married Thomas Greenfield January 1, 1833; born March 8, 1810, died 1892. Lavanus Keep, born August 31, 1811, married Alexander Abel January 1, 1838; he died March 27, 1839. Daniel B. Keep, born April 19, 1814 (living), married Sophony Copeland September, 1836; she was born September 4, 1811, died February 10, 1848. William R. Keep, born July 15, 1816, died 1894; married Elizabeth Whitaker January 19, 1843. Ledia Melvina, born December 25, 1818, died March 21, 1835. Lucy Clarissa, born June 3, 1821, died in September, 1822. Children of Marsena and Polly Keep are: Abner N., born October 3, 1824; Oliver Dwight, born September 24, 1826, died May 4, 1837; Prosper M., born April 21, 1829, died March, 1825; Amos, born December 29, 1831; Asa H., born December 26, 1833; Reuben F., born August 16, 1835; Sally, born February 23, 1837; Alsinus, born July 22, 1838, killed September 17, 1862, at the battle of Antietam; John Oliver, born August 9, 1840; Oliver R., born October 31, 1843; Edmund E., born June 9, 1850."

William Sheppa, jr., farmer, Elk Creek township, was born in Saxony, Germany, in 1823, and came to this country in the year 1852, settled soon after in Elk Creek township, where he has become by frugality and industry one of the substantial citizens of the community in which he resides. He joined the 18th Pa. Cav. and served three years, after which he came to Elk Creek and took up 144 acres of land, with the results above stated. Mr. Sheppa landed in America with only 65 cents in silver, with which to begin life in a new country. His father, William Sheppa, sr., remained in the fatherland. In 1848 he was married to Augusta Schettler, and seven children have been born to this union, as follows: Theodore, a resident of Crawford county, Pennsylvania; Paul, of California; Clara C., of Elk Creek township; Lewis, of Crawford county; Oswald, of California; Oscar and Otto, of Elk Creek township. Mr. Sheppa is a member of Wellsburg Post No. 240, G. A. R.

Hial D. Wade, farmer, Elk Creek township, was born in Connecticut September 19, 1820, and is the son of the late Amasa and Abigail (Coe) Wade, the former a native of Connecticut and the latter of Vermont. They came to New York State in 1835, and later to Erie county. Mr. Wade died in Union township in 1865, and Mrs. Wade in 1868. They were the parents of six children, as follows: Homer (deceased), Harmon (deceased), Mary, wife of William Moore, Nebraska; Hiram (deceased), Harris E., now resident of Missouri. Hial D., of Elk Creek, was married to Keturah C., daughter of James Brooks, an early settler of Chautauqua county, New York, in the year 1845. This union was blessed with four children, as follows: Hiram (deceased), Dennis D., Allan (deceased) and Emma (deceased). Mr. Wade was a prominent citizen of LeBeauf township for forty-one years, and after the death of his wife, in 1890, came to reside with his son Dennis, in Elk Creek township. Dennis Wade was born in 1845. He married Miss Phebe J. Nichols. Their children are George, Vernon, Merle, Maud and Glenn.

Amos H. Waite, Elk Creek, Elk Creek township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, the third son of Horace and Mary (Hilburn) Waite, of his native township. Horace Waite came to Crawford county from New York State at an early day, and to Erie county about 1854, settling upon the farm now owned by his son Amos, where he died in 1890. Mrs. Waite died in 1873. Amos H. Waite was married in 1866 to Miss Ruth Rhodes, of Elk Creek township. Three daughters have blessed this union: Myrtle M., Jessie E. (deceased) and Elicia A., who now reside with their parents in Cranesville. Mr. Waite is a brother of the late Robert H. Waite, of Cranesville, whose death occurred March 24, 1895, and of Seneca W., a resident of Springfield, Erie county, Pa.; Lester, of Cranesville, and Mason (deceased). He is prominently identified with the interests of his locality, a member of the K. of P., State Police, and has held several public offices in the township.

David Thrasher (deceased), farmer, Elk Creek, Elk Creek township, Erie county, was born in 1827 in Oswego county, New York, and removed to Erie county with his parents in 1845. He was a son of Stephen Thrasher, a native of Sandy Creek, Oswego county, N. Y. His mother was Miss Mary Smith, of the same locality. The father died January 9, 1859, and the mother died February 8, 1858. Mr. Thrasher was married April 20, 1833, to Adelia Kiddler, and after her death he married on the 25th of February, 1864, Almira, daughter of Jefferson Rhodes, who came to Conneaut township fifty-five years ago from Vermont. Her mother was Miss Mary Ann Crandall. The children of Mr. Thrasher are: Nancy J., wife of J. L. Barnes, of Cranesville; Mary L. (deceased), Mary Adelia, Marcus D. and George Ray Thrasher. Mr. Thrasher was one of the progressive farmers of the township in which he resided and where he spent the greater part of an active life. He was the second child of Stephen and Mary (Smith) Thrasher. Following are the family, Nancy, David, Betsey (deceased) and George W. (deceased). Mr. Thrasher was a school director and a man of prominence. He died July 24, 1895.

James Hubbard, farmer, Lundy's Lane, Elk Creek township, was born in Cortland, Cortland county, N. Y., April 10, 1832, a descendant of sturdy New England ancestry. His parents were Sylvester and Eliza (Patten) Hubbard, also natives of the Empire State, who came to Erie county in 1832. The former died April 22, 1881, and the latter in 1885. Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Hubbard were prominently identified as active members of the M. E. Church and other social interests of the locality. Their family consisted of six children now living: James, Mary, of Elk Creek; Huldah, wife of R. C. Drury, Girard; Edward S., Elk Creek; William Henry, Elk Creek; and Anna, wife of Frank Ruddick, of Kansas. James Hubbard was married in 1855 to Martha H. McGuire, born February 18, 1832, in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, daughter of William McGuire. Seven children were born to this union. One died in infancy. Following is the list: William S., physician, Albion, Erie county; Thomas Ruben, of Idaho; Sarah Eliza, Elk Creek; Mary Elizabeth (deceased), wife of Edward M. Hathaway; Clara Gertrude, Elk Creek; and John J., Elk Creek. Mr. Hubbard is one of the progressive farmers of Elk Creek township, and has been engaged in dairying and latterly in breeding short-horned cattle. He has served as assessor of the township and also held other offices of prominence. He is a member of the P. of H., and is politically a Prohibitionist.

A. F. Dobler, retired brewer and malster, and now a farmer and grain and cattle dealer, Girard and Fairview townships, Erie county, Pa., was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1844. In 1848 he, in company with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Fink, emigrated to Pennsylvania, and on attaining his fifth year went to reside with his uncle, John Dobler, in the city of New York; thence to Nashua, N. H., and, in 1856, removed with his uncle's family to Albany, N. Y. On reaching his majority, in 1865, having previously assumed his uncle's name through legal procedure, Mr. Dobler assumed the management of his uncle's brewery, the yearly capacity and output of which is now over 35,000 barrels, requiring 65,000 bushels of malt. At the death of his uncle, John Dobler, in 1885,

A. F. Dobler purchased the entire brewing properties over which he had so long presided, and since that time has been sole owner and manager. This renowned malster and brewer zealously continued the study of lager beer brewing in all its most intricate and essential details, and became the oldest member of Prof. Schwartz's Scientific Station of Brewing in America, and in later years gave practical instruction to present managers of the largest breweries in this country. Experience having taught the value of securing the finest possible grade of barley, Mr. Dobler determined to extensively engage in growing it on his large farms in Girard and Fairview townships, each of which is located opposite the renowned barley-growing districts of Canada, and are tempered by the same lake winds. The result has been the procuring of the choicest grade of barley from which to brew his renowned lager, which has also proven an incentive for growing barley on United States soil. Upon these farms Mr. Dobler has erected a palatial residence, a large grain storage, immense barns, water works, three natural gas wells and outbuildings, which, in architectural beauty and design, are the peers of any complete set of farm buildings in the State of Pennsylvania. Mr. Dobler is fully awake to his own interests, but not to the point of seeking undue advantages, while in point of executive ability he has few superiors. An earnest and untiring worker, being possessed of a strong physique, his endurance is all but unlimited. Kind at heart and liberal in any worthy cause, though alert and quick to detect any attempted imposition, he has made fast friends among the deserving classes. And though his years of manhood have been given to constant work he has, nevertheless, found time for profitable reading and study, and his mind is well stored with extensive and practical knowledge in various fields. Socially Mr. Dobler is most popular, as he is ever a pleasant and entertaining companion. In business, banking and commercial circles, no man's credit stands higher, and his word is as good a guarantee as is his bond. Many are the occasions on which his advice is earnestly sought, is honestly and freely imparted, and once bestowed it is highly regarded. Through earnest application, industry and unceasing effort, Mr. A. F. Dobler may be justly called a self-made man, and the entire community wherein he has passed the greater portion of his active business life, feel an all but individual pride in his eminent achievements. Mr. Dobler was married in 1870 to Miss Emma B. Mott, of Fairview, Pa. This happy union has been blessed with two children: Emma C., who married Dr. A. F. Baldinger, of 670 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, and John F. Dobler, who is now in school in Cleveland. For the past eight years Mr. Dobler's family has also included his niece, Miss Clara Mott, who was educated in St. Agnes' Female Academy (Episcopal), of Albany. Mrs. Baldinger was also educated in this institution, which is one of the highest grade in America. Mr. Dobler and family worship at the Presbyterian Church, of which they are generous supporters. In politics he is bound by no party ties, but gives his support to those issues which he believes to be for the best interests of the community and the nation.

Frank M. Temple, M. D., Fairview, Erie county, Pa., was born in Crawford county in 1850. He is a son of R. S. B. Temple, for many years a resident of Spring township, Crawford county, Pa., and who died at the age of 72 years in March, 1894. His widow still survives, at the age of 75 years. Her maiden name was Miss Jane Dunham, daughter of Daniel Dunham, of Union City, Erie county, Pa. Frank was a grandson of Robert Temple, who came from Scotland at an early day to Crawford county, where he resided for eighty-nine years. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1890, at the age of 93 years. Frank M. Temple graduated from the medical department of the Western Reserve College, Cleveland, Ohio, in 1880, and the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., in 1884. He began the practice of medicine in Mercer, Pa., in 1880, and later located in Fairview, Pa., and has since established a successful practice. June 6, 1876, he was married to Miss Cynthia Fell Yeager, of Mercer, Pa., whose father is a graduate of the class of 1852, of the University of Pennsylvania. Four children have been born to this union, as follows: Grace, aged 16 years; Herbert, aged 12; George, aged 7, and Frances Marion, aged 16 months, respectively. Dr. Temple is a member of the Erie County Medical Society, A. O. U. W., P. H. C., and K. of P.

George S. Stone, merchant and general dealer, Avonia, Erie county, Pa., was born in Harrisburg, Iowa, February 24, 1849. He is a son of Amos Stone, who was struck and killed at the L. S. & M. S. R. crossing near Fairview Station January 5, 1871. His age was 32 years, and he was a native of Fairview township, although he had resided at different times in Iowa and California. Mr. Stone was married September 27, 1871, to Mary Ann Gallowhur. This union has been blessed with six children, as follows: Mabel G., Arthur L., Fred Carlton, Helen M., Georgie L. and Dorothy R. Mr. Stone began in the mercantile business at his present location in 1868, and together with a large trade, he has been engaged in the commission business to a large extent, shipping grain and produce from points on the E. & P., the P. S. & L. E., and L. S. & M. S. railroads. He also deals largely with the local trade in coal, produce, lime, salt, cement and plaster. Imbued with the spirit of progress, he is engaged in other enterprises, among which is a fishery in Conneaut, Ohio, a ginnet and poundnet fishery plant, from which large shipments are made to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Pittsburg. Mr. Stone was appointed postmaster in 1869, and has since held the office without interruption through the various administrations. As a prominent citizen, and a live, go-ahead business man, he ranks among the first in his township, and has at various times held public offices. He is a member of the F. & A. M., and in politics is a Democrat. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, of which he has been trustee for several years.

William Kernick, jr., miller, Avonia, Erie county, Pa., was born in Cornwall, England, in the year 1848. He emigrated to America in the year 1877, and first located in Edenburg, Clarion county, Pa., and removed to Fairview in 1885, soon after taking charge of the Oriental Mills, which he has since operated successfully. He is a son of William Kernick, who has always resided in England. A brother, E. M. Kernick, preceded William to Erie county in 1869. William Kernick, jr., has operated the Oriental Mills since 1887, and has made many improvements, having changed the machinery from a bulr into a roller mill, making the capacity seventy-five barrels. An engine and boiler has also been added. The Oriental Mills were built in 1869 by Thomas & McCreary, and continue to advance in public favor under the present management. Last November, Mr. Kernick received a severe injury, by being caught in the machinery, which resulted in the loss of two fingers of his right hand. November 17, 1874, he was married to Miss Susie Ferrow, and to this union have been born eight children, as follows: Daniel F. and William Edward, both born in England; Elizabeth, Celia, Albert, Mark Guy Pierce, Robert Edward Stephenson Tindall, and Herbert, all born in Pennsylvania. Mr. Kernick is a prominent citizen of Fairview township. He was appointed justice of the peace in 1892, and is a member of the P. H. C., of Fairview, No. 104.

John Seary

Joseph Bowman, sr., farmer, Swanville, Erie county, Pa., was born in McKean township, and is a son of Martin Bowman, who came to Erie county from Germany seventy years ago, and followed farming. His death occurred in 1854. Joseph Bowman resided in McKean township since his birth until 1892, when he removed to his present farm at Swanville. He was married to Mary, daughter of Lawrence Houck, of his native township. The issue of this union was two children: Joseph, who resides with his father on the farm, and Frankie, wife of John Bendwiter, of Fairview township; Joseph Bowman, jr., was married to Miss Hannah Leoble. They have one son, Frederick. Joseph Bowman is a member of the F. & A. M.

A. Fuessler, merchant and postmaster, Swanville, Erie county, Pa., was born in 1841, at Walnut Creek, near where he now resides. His parents came to Erie county from Baltimore, Md., traveling across mountains and through forests in wagons, locating in the then far West. This was in 1834. Mr. Fuessler is a son of Earnest and Catherine (Gornillo) Fuessler, natives of Germany. The former died in 1879, and the latter in 1851. This family consisted of seven children, as follows: Margaret, Louisa, A. Jane, Lewis (deceased), Lewis and Julius. Mr. Fuessler, in 1864, was married to Miss Mary Doner, of Fairview township. The issue of this union has been as follows: Mary, Hattie, wife of John Smart, of Fairview township; Emma (deceased), Lewis, Cora, wife of Seth Geist, residents of Mill Creek township; Leroy, Augustus (deceased), Lottie, Jessie, Lillie and Scott. Mr. Fuessler is one of the oldest business men and residents of Swanville. He succeeded his father in the mercantile trade in 1880, and was appointed postmaster in 1884, and has since held the office with satisfaction, being an enterprising and influential citizen.

John Sherwin, carpenter, Swanville, Erie county, Pa., is a native of Summit, Erie county, Pa., and of Scotch-Irish descent. His grandfather, James Dunslop, was the first to come to this county, and located on a farm in Summit township. John is a son of Francis Sherwin, who was born in 1819, and died in 1858. He was married in 1842, to Cordelia Sawdy, daughter of Perry Sawdy, of Erie. To this marriage have been born three children, as follows: Lucius L. Sherwin, of Erie; Lorinda, of Michigan, and Lucinda, of Kavenna, Ohio. Mr. Sherwin has been a resident of Swanville and Fairview townships since 1880, and has been actively engaged at his trade, that of carpenter, since 1862, until latterly, when declining health and advancing years have made retirement a necessity. He was in the service of the U. S. navy during 1861-62, located on the Potomac river and Chesapeake bay.

Francis Lander, blacksmith, Swanville, Erie county, Pa., a native of New York city, was born in 1838, and is a son of Lewis and Anna Mary (Schupp) Lander, natives of Germany, who came to this country and first located in New York city. This was in 1837, and in 1840 they removed to Erie county. The former died November 19, 1862, and the latter now resides in Erie. The children of this union are: Francis, John F., who resides in the South; George and Mrs. S. H. Alleman, of Erie. Francis learned his trade, that of blacksmithing, with the firm of Little, Kepler & Co., of Erie, in 1855, and in 1857, with Capt. J. Beckman, in Fairview, went to Erie in 1859, and removed to Swanville in 1861, where he has since resided. He has filled several township offices and has been justice of the peace and a member of the school board. Francis was a member of the 102d P. V. I., and is a member of the G. A. R. In 1860 he was married to Anna Mary Decker, daughter of John Decker, of Erie. Mr. Lander is a man of sterling wealth and influence.

John Loffi, station agent, Swanville, Erie county, Pa., was born in Germany and came to the city of Erie in 1872, and was engaged for some time as section foreman on the N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R. Previous to this he was employed as bookkeeper in a grocery store in Erie, afterwards owning a store himself on Parade street; then removed to Swanville, where he was employed in the Lake Shore R. R. service. In 1875 he accepted the position of agent and telegraph operator of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. station at Swanville, which position he held until his death. John Loffi was a son of John and Margaret (Hauber) Loffi, both deceased, and who never left their native country. In 1891 Mr. Loffi spent the summer in the land of his birth, returning to America in the early autumn of the same year, accompanied by his nephew, Peter Loffi, who has since made Erie county his home. In 1874 Mr. Loffi was married to Miss Mary King, daughter of Michael King, of Fairview township and owned a pleasant home in Swanville. One son, George W., has been born to this union. Mr. Loffi was a reliable and energetic citizen, a member of the A. O. U. W. and L. S. & M. S. Lodge. He met his death at the Swanville Depot, May 27, 1895. While practicing on a bicycle on the platform of the station a fast freight came by, and in turning to avoid it, the wheel became unmanageable, and he was thrown against the train and instantly killed.

C. F. Busch, general blacksmith, manufacturer and dealer in wagons, farm implements, Fairview, Erie county, Pa., was born in Fairview borough in 1864. He is a son of Julius and Elizabeth (Zunstein) Busch. Julius Busch came from Germany in 1850, and first settled in Ohio, and came to Fairview in 1858. He was twice married, first to Elizabeth Zunstein, and to this union were born four children, as follows: Lena, wife of Morgan Anderson, of Fairview; Lizzie, Mary and Charles F. Busch. His second marriage was to Miss Augusta Kotzman, in 1866. The issue of this union was as follows: Julius, Otto, Ida, wife of William Smithly; Monroe, Anna and Carrie Busch, of Fairview. Charles F. Busch was married in 1887 to Miss Mary Kromer, daughter of Philip Kromer, of Fairview. The children of this marriage are Ralph Emerson and Lois Busch. Mr. Busch began the business of carriage-making and blacksmithing with his father in 1884, assumed entire control in 1886, and has since carried on an extensive business in this line, having established a large local trade. The business conducted embraces blacksmithing and ironing of all kinds. As a business man Mr. Busch ranks among the foremost, and as a citizen is highly respected, while his establishment ranks as a leader. He is a member of the P. H. C.

Charles E. Weislogal, farmer, Swanville, Erie county, Pa., was born in the township where he now resides March 15, 1857. He is the eighth child of Jacob W. and Barbara (Austmud) Weislogal, natives of Germany, who came to Erie county in 1854, and settled on a farm now owned by Charles in Fairview township. The former died in 1889 and the latter in 1880. In this family there were nine children, as follows: Jacob, Mitchell, John, Barbara, George, Katherine, Mary, Charles and Elizabeth. Charles was married in 1889 to Miss Carrie Simmons, daughter of Andrew Simmons, of Erie. One son, Leroy Edward, has blessed this union. Mr. Weislogal is the owner of one of the finest farms in Fairview township, located at the mouth of Walnut creek, near where the first settlement was made by Colonel Forster and Mr. Swan, who gave the place the name of Fairview. It was at this place that John M. Kratz started a store in 1802, and a log tavern was kept by Richard Swan, who was followed by James Dunn. This was the commercial center of the township till 1824, containing a tavern, mill, distillery, blacksmith shop, etc. The elections and military trainings were held there, and as long as the stages and travel ran down to the creek it was rather a lively village. The mills fell into the hands of Daniel Lord in 1829, who changed the name of the place to Manchester, and erected a paper mill. It burned while in charge of Messrs. Reed and was never rebuilt. A Presbyterian Church was built at this point in 1810, with Rev. Johnson Eaton as pastor. The place of worship was removed to Swanville in 1832. Mr. Weislogal has been prominently identified with the various interests of Fairview township in many ways, and ranks among the influential citizens. He is a member of the A. O. U. W.

J. F. Stuntz, wagon-maker, bicycle dealer and dealer in farm implements, Fairview, Erie county, Pa., was born in Fairview township, in 1869. He is a son of J. C. and Mary J. (McKee) Stuntz. The former died March 14, 1894, at the age of 56 years, and the latter resides in Fairview borough. Mrs. Stuntz is a daughter of the late Thomas McKee, of Mill Creek township, son of Patrick and Jane (Vance) McKee, the former a native of Ireland and the latter of Mill Creek township. Mr. McKee was married in 1838 to Nancy Kendig, born in 1818, daughter of George and Esther (Spence) Kendig, the former of Cumberland county and the latter of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. By this union were born Mary J., mother of J. F.; Alexander (deceased), Susan, Franklin, Bennett, Etta (deceased) and Thomas. Alexander was in Co. K, 83d P. V. I., and there contracted a disease which terminated in his death. Mr. McKee was a director in the Erie county almshouse for three years. Mr. J. F. Stuntz is a grandson of Stephen Stuntz, a farmer and mechanic, who was one of the early settlers of Fairview. He died in 1888, at the age of 76 years. His children are Ida J., Reid and J. Frank. Mr. Stuntz had one brother, William, who died from injuries received from the kick of a horse, and a sister, Esther Stuntz. He began business in the wagon trade five years ago, and has operated as a leading bicycle dealer since 1885, and is also a dealer in farming implements. In the bicycle trade he represents the Spaulding and the Victor. Mr. Stuntz has also operated a steam thrasher with his father (and for two years alone) since 1888. Blacksmithing and general carriage work also form a large feature of his business. He has won an enviable reputation, and the large trade he has secured is the result of earnest endeavors to do his work in the best style. He is a member of the P. H. C.

William E. Evans (deceased), was born in West Mill Creek, Erie county, Pa., in 1841, and died in Fairview township April 4, 1886. He was a son of James Evans, of Mill Creek township. The family of James Evans, consisted of six sons, as follows: John, George, Conrad, William E., James and Presley. In 1872 he was married to Miss Emma Von Buseck, daughter of Lewis and Caroline (Stohlmann) Von Buseck, natives of Germany, former of whom came to this country with his father and brother in 1832, the remainder of the family following in 1834. They remained in Pittsburg, Pa., for one year, then removing to Erie county, and later purchasing a farm on the Lake road three miles west of Erie city. Mr. Von Buseck proved himself a most successful farmer of the township. He married Caroline Stohlmann, and to this union were born twelve children, nine of whom are now living: Augusta, wife of Joachim Knobloch; Charles, married to Lavina Butt; Amile, married to Mary Fickinger, Emma, wife of William E. Evans; Julius, Lewis, Albert, William and Caroline. William E. Evans spent fifteen years on the farm where his widow now resides, with her children, who are as follows: Caroline U., Clara Stohlmann, Lizzie Lavina, Charles Frederick, Emma Von Buseck and William Lee Evans. Mr. Evans was one of the leading farmers and foremost citizens of the township.

John G. Weiblen, justice of the peace, Fairview, Erie county, Pa., was born in the year 1833, and is a son of Gottlieb and Gottleibian (Meyers) Weiblen, natives of Germany. The former was a weaver by trade, and came to America and Erie county in 1850, and first settled in Erie city. He later came to Fairview borough, and died in 1894. His wife died in Europe in 1855. John G. Weiblen was married in 1859 to Miss Mary Harmon, daughter of Dedrick Harmon, an old resident of Erie county. The issue of this union have been twelve children, as follows: Josephine, Emma, William, Gertrude, Hattie, Nellie, Charles, Frank, Carrie, Winifred, John and Freddie. Mr. Weiblen learned his trade, that of a shoemaker, in 1850, and removed to Fairview borough in 1855, and for forty years has been one of its staunch and reliable citizens, whose council is often sought on matters of importance, where reliable information and advice is desired. He was admitted to the Erie county bar in 1868, and appointed justice of the peace in 1885, which office he now holds.

W. H. Hyke, proprietor of the Heuer House, Fairview, Erie county, Pa., was born in Port Hope, Canada, in 1852, son of Cornelius and Elizabeth (Valier) Hyke, who had the following children: Jerrad N., Charles and W. H. Hyke, who were educated in their native town, from whence his parents moved to Erie in 1865. Cornelius Hyke was born in Schenectady, N. Y., of Holland descent, and was a veteran of the war of 1812. In April, 1879, Mr. W. H. Hyke was united in marriage with Miss Anna, daughter of J. W. and Catherine Koehler. The former was born in Holland in 1814, and came to this country with his parents in 1832, making Erie his home during his active life. He has been engaged in ship building and was also an expert millwright. The children of this union are: John W. Koehler, of Chicago; Mrs. Mary Pope, Erie; Mrs. W. H. Hyke, Fairview, and Mrs. Agnes Gregory, widow of C. C. Gregory, formerly conductor on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. George Kochler, father of J. W. Kochler, was one of the first settlers and had the first greenhouse in Erie county, situated on the Buffalo road, three miles east of Erie. The children of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hyke are: Cora, Mabel, Agnes and Ethel. Mr. Hyke became proprietor of the hotel in Fairview in November, 1894, and has succeeded in establishing a first-class reputation for the hotel, which has been newly equipped, and in every detail is most complete. Mr. Hyke is a first-class landlord and fully understands the needs of the public and conducts a first-class house.

J. V. Warren, retired, Fairview, Erie county, Pa., was born February 14, 1812, in Jefferson county, Ohio, where he spent his early life. Seven years were spent on a farm near Ashtabula, Ohio, and came to Erie in 1872 and began the hotel business in Fairview, which he continued until 1894, when he retired. Mr. Warren is a son of Nathaniel and Lavina (Watries) Warren, the former a native of Rhode Island and the latter of New England. To this union were born eleven children: Sarah, born September 14, 1786; Rhoda, May 11, 1790; Samuel, June 29, 1792; Jane, February 29, 1794; Nathaniel, June 29, 1796; David S., August 26, 1799; Thomas, August 15, 1801; Mary, October 13, 1802; William, October 12, 1806; Hannah, June 5, 1808, and James V., February 14, 1812. In 1835 J. V. Warren married Miss Emeline Allen, daughter of John Allen, a descendant of the renowned Ethan Allan, of Vermont. The children of this union are: Elizabeth, widow of Jerome Van Allan, of Ashtabula, Ohio; Valentine, William H., Seth A., Manford J., Emogene, wife of Amos Weaver; Diadamy, wife of Loyd Harper, all of Ashtabula, Ohio, and Reed Warren, of Fairview borough. J. V. Warren had been engaged in active pursuits until 1894, when declining health, together with advancing years, compelled him to take a less active part in business affairs.

A. J. Nason, merchant, Franklin Corners, Erie county, Pa., was born in Fairview township in 1859, and is a son of B. J. and Harriet (Rice) Nason, residents of Franklin township, and grandson of William Nason, a native of New England, where his life was spent. His family are: William, of Fairview; Sylvester, Benjamin J. (father of A. J. Nason), Webster, Erie, and Mrs. Ann Yeagley (deceased). Mrs. Nason's father was John Rice, a life-long resident of New York State. B. J. Nason came to Franklin township thirty-four years ago, at a time when this particular section and township was new, and for the most part covered with a thick forest. He began business as a merchant at Franklin Corners in 1890, and was appointed postmaster the same year. This postoffice was established about 1855, and is geographically the center of the township, which is laid out the most systematically of any township in Erie county. Mr. Nason is among the most active and progressive citizens of Franklin. He was educated at the Edinboro State Normal School, and for several years prior to taking up the mercantile trade taught in the public schools of that locality. He is a member of the Equitable Aid Union, and has active interest in all that pertains to local affairs.

L. O. Stanbro, blacksmith, Franklin Corners, Erie county, Pa., was born in Concord, Erie county, N. Y., in 1877, and at the age of 14 years removed with his parents to Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Stanbro learned his trade, that of blacksmithing, in Springville, Erie county, N. Y., and soon after came to Erie county, and was for a time employed at Edinboro. In April, 1895, he removed to Franklin Corners, where he established himself in the business of general blacksmithing and wagon repairing and has by continued industry built up a large and profitable trade. Mr. Stanbro is a son of the late Lavant Stanbro, who died in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, in 1890. His mother was Miss Ida Horton, who still survives. Mr. Stanbro was educated in the public schools of Erie city and is a skilled and energetic worker in his chosen trade.

H. C. Howard, farmer, Franklin Corners, Franklin township, Erie county, Pa., was born and reared in the township in which he now resides. The year of his birth was 1837. He is the son of Henry Howard, sr., and grandson of Daniel Howard, who was killed in the war of 1812. Henry Howard first settled in Girard township, and removed with his wife, Sarah Jenness, to Franklin township, in 1832, near where his son Henry now resides. Henry Howard, sr., died in August, 1899, and his wife in December, 1893. Of their family there were two sons, Henry C. and Levi P. Howard, of Amboy, O. The latter also resided for many years in Franklin. Five daughters also blest this union: Sarah, wife of L. C. Allen, Iowa; Phebe, wife of C. Stewart, Tennessee; Clarissa, wife of C. E. Mathewson; Harriet, wife of S. Hamilton, Franklin Corners, and Hannah, wife of F. Mischler, Hannah died in 1883. In 1868 Henry was married to Miss Betsey Watson, daughter of James Watson, of Girard, Erie county, Pa., one of the oldest settlers of that village. This union has been blest with the following children: Elma J., wife of George Jenness; Bertha F., Lou B., S. Grace and Edna E., all residents of Franklin township. Following are the children of James and Mary (Woolsey) Watson: Jane, wife of Samuel Coburn, Erie; Betsey, wife of Henry; Frank, Mary Ann, Erie; George, Washington; Charles, Indiana; James, John, Girard; Jessie, wife of E. A. Sweigart, Erie, and William, Girard. Mr. Howard has resided on his present farm since 1862, and has, during that time, taken part in bringing the land about his residence from a densely wooded and not altogether valuable condition to its present high state of cultivation and productiveness. In 1862, Mr. Howard enlisted in the nine months' service, and received an honorable discharge at the end of that time. He was a member of Co. G, 169th P. V. I. He has been school director, and has always taken an active part and been foremost in matters pertaining to his locality.

Daniel B. Robinson, retired farmer, Ivaria, Franklin township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Otisco township, Onondaga county, New York, July 22, 1823, son of Daniel B. Robinson, born May 26, 1787, who married Elizabeth Benedict, born March 12, 1793, daughter of Johnathon and Huldah (Seely) Benedict, who had six children, of whom James B. died in Nebraska in the year 1891; Daniel B.; John B., also died in Nebraska, and Thomas, surviving. Daniel B., the elder, and his wife, were natives of New York State. He was for many years county surveyor, commissioner of deeds, magistrate and a school teacher. He came to this county in 1844, from Fabius, Onondaga county, N. Y., and settled in Franklin township, where he died April 2, 1882, his widow following him March 11, 1870. He was a son of John and Eunice (Wilcox) Robinson, the former a native of Scotland, and the latter of New York State. Johnathon Benedict, son of Nathaniel Benedict, was a native of England. Daniel B. Robinson was married, October 3, 1849, to Mary Crosby, born in the township of Wales, Erie county, New York, December 17, 1822, daughter of Calvin and Huldah (Connell) Crosby, natives of New York State. By this union there is one son, Marquis D., born October 21, 1851, now an oil operator in Titusville, Pa. He is a member of the National Oil Company. He married Miss Flora McQuarie, a native of Nova Scotia. To this union have been born three children: Mable Marion, Ellsworth D. and Ovid D. Robinson, owing to an accident, at the age of 11 years, Daniel B. Robinson became a cripple for life, and he prepared himself for teaching, which occupation he followed in Elk Creek and Franklin township for twenty years. He bears the distinction of being one of the oldest citizens now living in Franklin township, and has been identified with many local enterprises during his active life. He assisted in establishing the Edinboro State Normal School, the postoffice known as Ivaria, the naming of the Mohawk Mills, and numerous other undertakings. During these years he has filled the offices of school inspector of Franklin township and director of the independent school district, and also clerk, treasurer and collector. He is a member of the First Regular Baptist Church, Elk Creek, and in politics is a Republican. This estimable gentleman, while having lived out the days usually allotted to mankind, still has a retentive memory, and is able to recall many events of his earlier days with unwonted vigor and interest.

Rev. Henry Francis Dietrich, rector of St. Boniface Roman Catholic Church, of Greene township, was born in Erie City May 26, 1872. His father, Henry Dietrich, and mother, formerly Victoria Schmalz, a native of Bavaria, Germany, are both living. Father Dietrich received his early education in the parochial schools of Erie. He then spent nine years at St. Vincent's College in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and one year at St. Bonaventure College, at Allegany, N. Y. Father Dietrich was appointed to his first pastorate, the parish of St. Boniface, on June 26, 1896. The parish was founded in 1857, and has now a membership of about sixty families. The church is situated in the central portion of Greene township, on the Wattsburg road. It has a very fine property surrounding it, which contains about four acres. The pastors of St. Boniface Church from the time it was founded to the present year were as follows: 1857 to 1867, Rev. J. A. Oberhofer; 1867 to 1868, Rev. P. F. Maloney; 1868 to 1870, Rev. J. Vollemeyer; 1870 to 1873, J. A. Oberhofer; 1873 to 1878, Melchior Appel; 1878 to 1890, Edward Hasse; 1890 to 1891, John C. McEntee; 1891 to 1894, Joseph M. Siewlering; 1894 to 1895, Simon Assenmacher; 1895 to date, Rev. Henry F. Dietrich.

John P. Rose, Greene township, was born in this county September 13, 1864. His father, Charles Rose, came to the United States in 1850 and settled in Greene township, Erie county, on a farm of 133 acres, near the Lake Pleasant road. In 1858 he was married to Anna Mary Gosse, a native of Erie county. Ten children were the result of this marriage, of whom John P. was eighth in order of birth. Mr. Rose has continuously lived in Erie county, except for a short period during the war, when he went to Indiana. The children were all born and educated in Erie county. Mr. Rose died in 1874 at the age of 51 years. John Rose followed farming as a business until 21 years of age, when he purchased the saw-mill owned by West Newton, on the Lake Pleasant road, three miles north of the town by the same name. Mr. Rose prospered in this business and in 1885 improved his property by erecting an entire new plant at an expense of $2,500. The new mill includes a shingle mill, grist mill and cider press. He was married September 12, 1893, to Minnie, daughter of James Cartin, of Erie county. They have one child, a daughter, Vernie.

George H. Myers, Greene township, was born near West Greene, Erie county, September 7, 1857. His grandfather, Samuel Myers, was the first of his ancestors to come to Pennsylvania. He was born in Delaware county, New York, and came to Erie county in 1820, settling on a farm of 160 acres in what was then a wilderness in Greene township. Mr. Myers was one of the early settlers, did much toward building up that portion of Erie county. John Myers, father of George H., was born in 1821, and was married to Permilia Brace in this county in 1853. They had six children, of whom George H. was the third. The others are: Deloss H., Mrs. Emma Jackson, now living in Kansas; William T.; Verna, now Mrs. J. Porter Jackson; and Gara Grant, all of whom are living, with one exception, in Erie county. George H. was married to Julia Barry, a daughter of Thomas Barry, of this county, October 20, 1882. Her mother was a daughter of Cyril Drown, of Greene township. Three children have been the result of this marriage, Gertha, G. Barry and Rachel. Mr. Myers is one of the progressive citizens of this locality, has always taken an active part in politics in the county, and, though a Republican, was appointed postmaster of East Greene by President Cleveland in 1888, which office he continues to hold. He also has a general store and successfully cultivates a farm of forty acres.

Peter Kuhl, Greene township, was born in Greene township, October 25, 1845. His father, Peter Kuhl, was born in York county, Pennsylvania, in 1801. John Yost Kuhl, father of Peter, sr., was a native of Germany, and emigrated to this country at the age of 12. He settled in York county, where later he married Elizabeth Orth, of York county. They reared seven children, viz.: Peter, sr., Daniel, Fairview; Susan, who married John Gittings, Harbor Creek; Polly, wife of Fred Ohlweiler, Harbor Creek; Peggy, now Mrs. Daniel Berringer, Fairview; Katherine, who married a Mr. D. Stover, Fairview, and Elizabeth. All these children were born in York county, and are all now deceased. The family moved to Erie county about 1823, coming in wagons, and settled in the vicinity of Kearsarge, in Mill Creek township. Meeting with financial adversity eight years later they sold the property at Kearsarge, and settled on 150 acres in the woods, in Greene township, where a large log cabin was built. There a comfortable income was earned by felling the forests, and hauling the wood to Erie city, and also in tilling the soil about the cabin home. On October 22, 1829, Peter, sr., was married to Susan Fry, daughter of Joseph Fry, formerly of Lancaster county, Pa., and one of the early Pennsylvania Dutch settlers. They reared a family of ten children. Sarah was the first child. She is now Mrs. George Hairsine, and is living in Greene township. Samuel was the second child, and is now living upon a large farm adjoining the old homestead, which was cleared by himself. Barbara, the third child, died in April, 1889; Eliza, is the wife of J. D. Meade, of Harbor Creek township; Adam, Harbor Creek; Mary Ann, now Mrs. David Ripley, is living in Greene township; Fred, is living on a part of the old homestead in Greene township; Peter, jr., our subject; Hiram, living in North East township; and Susan, now the wife of Charles Breckley, of Mill Creek township. Peter, jr., was married June 16, 1863, to Harriett Maria Cook, daughter of Samuel Cook, a native of New York State. He was born in Portland, Chautauque county, and came to Pennsylvania in 1847, and settled in Athens township, Crawford county. Mr. Cook was married before he came to Pennsylvania, to Lydia Stafford Stark, of an old English family, on May 5, 1844. They had five children, three girls and two boys: Lydia Anna, now the wife of Myron Wagner, of Mill Creek township; Frances Marion, living in Greene township; Mary, wife of Swayne Olson, of Erie city; Samuel Frank, living in Greene township, and Harriett Maria, who was the second child. She was born in Crawford county, August 23, 1847, and came with her parents to Erie county in 1854. Samuel Cook, father of Mrs. Peter Kuhl, jr., was educated in the Academy at Fredonia, N. Y. He was a Republican, and took an active interest in the politics of Erie county. The year Horace Greeley was a candidate for president he was a candidate for county commissioner, but by his friendship and campaigning for Mr. Greeley in this county he defeated himself. Mr. Cook's father was a native of Rutland county, Vermont. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kuhl, jr., spent the first eight years of their married life in Harbor Creek township, when they moved to the old Cook homestead in Greene township, where they now reside. Mr. Kuhl, like his antecedents, has always been a farmer, and now has 130 acres, which, through his efforts, have been brought to a fine state of cultivation, while the modern farm buildings rate among the very best in Greene township. Mr. and Mrs. Kuhl are public-spirited, and have been actively identified with the local affairs of their neighborhood. He has served as school director, and secretary of the board during his entire term; is now road commissioner of the township. Until ill health compelled him to resign, Mr. Kuhl served as a director of the Watsburg Agricultural Society. Mrs. Kuhl served as superintendent of the Department of Domestic Arts during the time her husband served as a director, but resigned when he did, feeling that her first duty was at home. She was a school teacher in her girlhood days, and taught in the townships of Venango, Greene, Harbor Creek, and Greenfield, and her earnestness and ambition won the regard of the communities in which she taught in the good old days when "boarding around" was a teacher's lot, to such an extent that she formed many agreeable and lasting friendships. Mrs. Kuhl carried the same earnest, enthusiastic spirit into her domestic duties, and her husband found in her an able co-laborer in bringing his farm to its present high state of development and cultivation. They have one child, a daughter, 14 years old, who is a fine scholar, being the first pupil to graduate from the schools of Greene township since they were graded. In addition to general farming, Mr. Kuhl conducts a fine dairying department, and its products find a ready market among some of the leading families of Erie, who only appreciate the very best. Mr. and Mrs. Kuhl attend the Presbyterian Church.

Anson H. Yaple was born October 2, 1829, in this county. His father, David Yaple, came to Erie county with his brother, William, from Delaware county, New York, which was the first home of the Yaple family in this country, and where a number of the descendants now live. They originally came from Germany, some time before the Revolutionary war, and a number of the family participated in that great struggle for independence. The two brothers, who now have a large and representative posterity in Erie county, settled in the wilderness of Greene township in 1824, the vicinity of which is now known as West Greene. They cleared a large acreage, which of late years compose some of the richest farm lands in the county. The brothers were of a family of twelve children, two of whom are now living and residents of this county: The eldest is Mrs. Eleanor, wife of William B. Weed (deceased), who has reached the ripe age of 97 years, and lives at Weeds Corners in Greene township; Christian Yaple, her brother, is 85 years old, and lives at Waterford. William Yaple went back to Delaware county, New York, about 1827, and was married to a Miss Sallie Hull. They had six children, three of whom are now living; Rebecca Weed, of Erie City; Miles, living in this county, and Giles, now a resident of Norwalk, Ohio. William Yaple died in 1844. David Yaple, the father of Anson H., was married December 26, 1826, to Ruth Fuller, daughter of Timothy Fuller, who at that time was a resident of Venango township, and one of the earlier settlers in Erie county. They had seven children, of whom Anson H. was the second child. The others are: William W., now living near the old homestead; N. Y., L. P. R., D. R., T. J., and Eulalia A., now the widow of Aaron Haskins, and living in Erie. David Yaple died December 24, 1888. His wife died six years before him, November 13, 1882. Anson H. Yaple was married June 10, 1851, to Laura A. Streeter, daughter of Horace Streeter, a native of the Black River country, in New York State. She moved to Erie county at an early age with her mother and uncle, Rodney Cole. In 1856 Mr. Yaple moved to Washburn, Grant county, Wis., where he remained nine years, when his wife died, August 14, 1864. They had six children, all of whom are living: The first is Candace R., wife of George Cutter, of this county; Henry W., living at Harbor Creek station; Edward L. and Clinton F., living in Greene township; Addie E., wife of Oscar Root, now living in Summit township, and Anson J., who has settled on the Barry farm in Greene township. After the death of his wife Mr. Yaple returned to Erie county and purchased the farm upon which he now resides, and September 18, 1866, he married Louise M., daughter of Luther D. Jackson, of Delaware county, New York. They now have four children, the eldest, A. L. Yaple, is living in Greene township; Lulu E., wife of Fred Coover, of Greene township; Kate L., wife of William Allen, and Leah M., living with her mother and father. While in Wisconsin Mr. Yaple served in the army during the late war. He enlisted in Co. E, 90th Reg., Wis. Vol., but never reached the front. He was in the service seven months, when he sprained his ankle, was given his discharge and sent home, crippled for life. Mr. Yaple is a member of Rice Post, G. A. R., at Waterford. Mr. Yaple is one of the self-made men of Erie county. He has always been a farmer, and when quite a young man, left his father's home to make his own way in the world. This he has done, with considerable success, and he now owns 160 acres of fine farm land in Greene township, near West Greene, the greater portion of which is under cultivation. He is a strong Republican and a highly esteemed, genial citizen. His ten estimable children (five boys and five girls) are all residents of this county.

Francis Marian Cook was born in Athens township, Crawford county, March 11, 1849. His father, Samuel Cook, was born in Portland, Chautauqua county, N. Y., and came to Pennsylvania in 1847. He settled in Crawford county and came to Erie county in 1854. Samuel Cook was married May 5, 1844, to Lida Stafford Stark, in Portland, N. Y., of an old English family who were early settlers in the State. His first wife died January 9, 1877, and was married October 13, 1878, to Miss Elizabeth Cook, at Alden, Erie county, N. Y.; she survives her husband, who died August 25, 1895. The first marriage resulted in five children, of whom Francis Marian was the third child. He was married April 13, 1876, to Hattie E. Wagner, daughter of Samuel Wagner, of Mill Creek township, a well-known and an early settler in Erie county. Mrs. Cook is the third child and the only daughter, and comes of a family of early Pennsylvania Dutch settlers. Mr. and Mrs. Cook have nine children, the eldest, Ross E., then Lydia, Anna and Hannah, Elizabeth, two sisters; Joseph E., Roy E., Seth B., Eva, Carrie and Agnes May. Mr. Cook is one of the progressive citizens of Greene township, and now has 380 acres of farm and timber land. He has 125 acres under culivation about his home, in the northwestern section of the township, and the remaining portion of his property is in valuable timber and pasture in the southern part. Mr. Cook was reared in Erie county, and has made his own way in the world. He started when a young boy in Venango county, working in the oil country, but returned to Erie county and worked at farming, saving his earnings, with which he purchased the fine farm lands surrounding his home. He also owns a large sawmill near South Wales, in Greene township. Mr. Cook never took an active part in politics and has declined many township offices tendered him by the Republican party, though he is now a school director and is doing much to improve the district schools, where his children are being educated.

John Wright was born October 2, 1870, in Greene township, Erie county. His father, Samuel Wright, was a native of Denmark. He was born May 3, 1822. He was a sailor by trade and sailed upon the merchant vessels of his native land until 1862, when he came to America. After spending several years upon the Atlantic coast, he came to Erie, making that city his home, and sailing upon the lakes as second mate until about 1872, when he purchased a farm of fifty acres in Greene township at Knowles Corners. This property was then a heavy forest, which was cleared by Mr. Wright himself, and is now rich farming land, and adjoins a farm operated by his brother Charles. Shortly after Mr. Wright came to Erie he was married to Annie Einbour, a native of Germany, who came to this country but a few years previous. They had nine children: Emma, now the wife of Charles Thornton, living in Greene township; Clara, wife of F. S. Cook, of Greene township; Mary, living in Erie; Ella and Addie, at the homestead; three brothers are prosperous farmers in North Dakota, and John is unmarried and is living with his mother and sisters on the old farm. He has added six acres to the property since the death of his father, January 5, 1894. He is a prosperous farmer, has always lived at home, and is adding to the value of the beautiful country about the old home every year.

Charles T. Hall was born in Waterford township, Erie county, Pa., June 26, 1847. His father, Charles T. Hall, sr., was a native of Genesee county, New York, of Scotch descent, and came to Erie county in January, 1847. He was married the year before to Rebecca Hill, daughter of Heman Hill, a native of North Ireland. Mr. Hill accompanied his daughter and her husband to Erie county, and a few days after arriving at Waterford Mr. Hall started to return overland to Buffalo to look after his household goods which failed to arrive in time. This was the last that was ever seen of him. His horse and wagon were found, but it is supposed that he was waylaid by highwaymen and his body disposed of, for he was never seen again. A few months later Mrs. Hall gave birth to a son, Charles T., jr. She and her child lived with her father in Waterford until 1851, when she was married a second time to William Smith, a son of James Smith, of Harbor Creek. He died in March, 1880, leaving his widow and four children, one of whom is living, Monroe Smith, who resides in Harbor Creek township. Mr. Heman Hill, grandfather of Charles T. Hall, died in 1872. Mr. Hall started in the world, when he was 12 years old, to earn his own living. He worked at farming in Erie county until he was 17 years old, when he went to work for an uncle at Akron, N. Y., and learned carpentry. He remained there for five years, and returned to Erie county, where he worked at his trade throughout the country until he was married, September 7, 1871, to Melodia A. Peck, daughter of Z. E. Peck, of Harbor Creek township. Mr. Peck is a native of Connecticut, and came to Erie county in 1835. Mr. and Mrs. Hall have four children: Perry E., Zalmon C., Harry H. and Estella M., all of whom are living. Mr. and Mrs. Hall live on their farm of forty acres, on the northern border of Greene township. Mr. Hall also owns thirty-five acres in Harbor Creek township that is under cultivation. They are members of the Wales Presbyterian Church, of Greene township, and of the Christian Endeavor Society. Mrs. Hall is an active worker in the Ladies' Missionary Society of the church. Mr. Hall continues to ply his trade as a carpenter, and also works his two farms. He is a member of the State police and Farmers' Alliance.

Daniel W. Shuler was born in Charleston, Montgomery county, N. Y., April 5, 1839. His grandfather was a native of Germany, and came to this country shortly after the Revolutionary war, and settled in Montgomery county, where John U. S. Shuler, father of Daniel W. Shuler, was married to Hannah, daughter of John Houghton, of Montgomery county, New York, a family of old New England "Yankees." She was eldest of seven children, four boys and three girls, of whom Daniel W. was the youngest. He worked with his father on the old farm until the age of 26. He was married to Delavia, daughter of Isaac Thompson, a former dry goods merchant of Cortland, N. Y. This marriage occurred February 20, 1866. Mrs. Shuler's early ancestors were natives of Ireland. Mr. Shuler made his home in Cortland county, where he purchased and worked a farm of 120 acres. He remained there until 1876, when he sold his property and moved to Corry, Erie county, Pa. Here Mr. Shuler engaged in the lumber business; part of the time he was in the employ of Harrison Bacon in his lumber mill. He remained in Corry five years, and then moved to Erie city, where he ran a dairy for several years. But this vocation was unsuited to Mr. Shuler, and he sold out and started a grocery at the corner of Seventeenth and French streets, and later he moved his place of business to the corner of Thirteenth and Holland streets, where he remained until November, 1894, when he again sold his business to engage in the same pursuit in the settlement of Boscobel, in the northeast corner of Greene township. On June 2, 1894, Mr. Shuler was appointed postmaster of Boscobel, by President Cleveland, which office he fills, in connection with his general store. Mr. and Mrs. Shuler have two children living, Charles and William. They had four others, but they died at an early age. Mr. Shuler's father died in 1880. The old homestead, in Montgomery county, is now occupied by a grandchild. Mrs. Shuler's father died some two years ago. Mrs. Thompson is still living in Cortland, N. Y. Mr. Shuler is a member of the Order of Woodmen of the World.

Benjamin Allen was born August 20, 1841, in Greene township, Erie county. His father, Henry Allen, a native of Vermont, of good old Yankee ancestry, came to Erie county in 1838 from Ogdensburg,

N. Y., and settled on sixty-eight acres of land on the Harbor Creek and Waterford road, east line of Greene township, which land he cleared of the heavy timber that then covered the greater portion of this county. Soon after making a home for himself Mr. Allen was married to Sallie Barney, then a resident of Plattsburg, N. Y. She was a descendant of an old Yankee family of Irish ancestry, and was a sister to the late Squire John Barney, of Erie county. They had four children, three of whom are now living: Nancy, the eldest, is now the wife of G. C. Barney, of Greene township; Horace B. is living in Minnesota, and Benjamin, the fourth child and the subject of this sketch. Mr. Allen died March 1, 1851, and Mrs. Allen lived with her children on the old homestead until February, 1884, when she expired. Benjamin Allen remained at home, living with his mother and brother, and for three years with his brother-in-law, G. C. Barney, attending the district school in winter until he was 17 years old, when he commenced life for himself. He went to Belle Valley, where he worked for Capt. N. W. Russell on his farm and also attended school there in the winter of 1859-60. In the spring of '61 he started to learn carpentry, but only remained at it a month when the war broke out, and, imbued with a true spirit of patriotism, he entered the army. He enlisted in Co. C of Col. J. W. McLane's Erie Regiment, April 21, 1861, in the three months' service and went with the regiment to Pittsburg, and then to Hilton station, where they remained until their enlistment expired and were returned home. Colonel McLane reorganized his regiment, and on August 29, 1861, Mr. Allen re-enlisted in Co. C and remained with the regiment through the entire service. On September 16th of that year the regiment left Erie for Washington and went into camp on Hall's Hill. The regiment after considerable delay was given its equipment and designated the 83d Pa. Vols. They remained at that place through the winter and then went to Alexandria, Va. In March, 1862, the 83d was transported to Fortress Monroe, and from there commenced what was known as the campaign of the peninsula. The first fight occurred at Hanover Court House, Va., May 27, 1862. After several small brushes with the rebels the regiment engaged in the seven days' battle, commencing June 26 at Mechanicsville and ending at Harrison's Landing. On June 27, the 83d distinguished itself at Gainey's Mills, and there participated in the hottest fight in which it was engaged during its service. It was here that Colonel McLane and Major Lewis Nagle were killed and the ranks of the 83d woefully thinned while repulsing a charge by the Eleventh South Carolina infantry. Mr. Allen here lost the forefinger of his left hand and also received a rebel bullet in the left shoulder, disabling him to such an extent that he was obliged to retire from the field. He was so severely wounded that he was sent to the hospital at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, remaining there the remainder of his service on detached duty. He returned to Erie and reported to the provost marshal in that city on August 29, where he remained until October. He then went to Petroleum Center, Pa., near Oil City, where he engaged in business as a contract driller, in the oil country. In 1878 he moved to Bradford, Pa., and continued business as a contractor and also as drive-pipe pulling and dealer in second hand supplies until 1883, when he sold out to Bovard & Sefang, and a year later returned to his native county. He purchased the Joseph Patterson farm in Greene township, consisting of 100 acres of fine farm land, all of which is now under cultivation. Mr. Allen was married December 24, 1865, to Mary McGinley, daughter of Henry McGinley, formerly of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, at Petroleum Center. She is of a family of Scotch-Irish ancestry. They have seven children, four girls and three boys. The eldest is Lydia, now the wife of John Crane. They are living in Union township, Erie county. Emma, the second child, is the wife of J. W. Preble in Erie city. Alla is the wife of Walter M. Yapple, of Greene township; Ada, Willard Russell, Henry Herbert and Lee are all living at home. Mr. Allen is a justice of the peace in Greene township. He was first elected in 1888, and is now serving his second term in that office. Mr. Allen is not a member of the G. A. R. While living in Petroleum Center and Bradford he retained a membership in the Odd Fellows and the A. O. U. W., but since leaving there he has allowed himself to be dropped from the rolls of these two societies.

Hon. William C. Culbertson, Girard, Pa., one of the foremost citizens of Erie county, was born in Edinboro, Pa., November 27, 1825, and is a son of Andrew Columbus and Margaret (Alexander) Culbertson. The family genealogy has been traced to the year 1400, when they resided near Kelso, Scotland, whence they fled from the persecutions of Charles II.—between 1665 and 1685—to the north of Ireland. In 1712, John, son of William Culbertson, who had participated in the siege of Londonderry, brought his family to Philadelphia. John Culbertson (2d), born in Ireland, and married in Philadelphia, had a son, Andrew, who removed to Williamsport, Pa., in 1775, bringing with him his family, one of whom was William, the grandfather of Mr. William C. Culbertson, and from whom Williamsport derived its name. In 1795 William Culbertson came to Erie county and purchased a large tract of land of the Holland Land Company, in the vicinity of the present site of Edinboro, part of which he afterwards disposed of to his brothers and others. Two years later he brought his family to their new home. Thus it will be seen that the Culbertson family were among the sturdy pioneers who took the initial steps in converting the unbroken wilderness of northwestern Pennsylvania into what is now one of the most beautiful and productive sections in the world. Andrew Columbus Culbertson was born in Williamsport, Pa., June 29, 1795, and hence was but 2 years old when brought to that section of the State. He (William) was one of the most prosperous and progressive citizens of his time, and was largely instrumental in advancing the development of that portion of Erie county in which he had lived. He followed farming and milling, and died in 1843. The family (Andrew's) consisted of eight children: Margaret, widow of the late Rev. Edward C. Rogers, of Edinboro; Mary, wife of Mr. Fred Thompson, of Edinboro; William C., who is the subject of this sketch; James A., manager of Allegheny Springs, Warren county, Pa.; Rebecca, widow of George Wood, of Erie, and now residing in Sheffield, Pa.; John, who was engaged with his brother-in-law, Mr. Wood, in the lumber business in Sheffield, where he died December 2, 1895; Alexander, who resides in California, and Charles W., who is engaged in the lumber business in Augusta, Wis. William C. Culbertson received his education in the public schools of his native town, and completed it by private study and reading. He remained with his father until he was 21 years of age, and then engaged in business for himself. He began lumbering on the Allegheny river in Jefferson county, Pennsylvania, and in Kentucky, his mill and sash, door and blind factory being located in Covington, Ky., where he resided and made his headquarters. This business is still in operation. In 1833 he removed to Girard, Pa., where he has since resided. In 1866 Mr. Culbertson went to Michigan and began the careful selection and purchase of the best tracts of timber, which he continued until he had purchased over 62,000 acres in Michigan and Wisconsin. In the winter of 1870-1 he took up his business headquarters in Menominee, Mich., where he has since been extensively engaged in cutting and manufacturing lumber. The Girard Lumber Company was organized in 1881, with William C. Culbertson, president; John W. Wells, vice president, and James A. Culbertson, secretary and treasurer. Charles B. Culbertson is now also a member of the firm which constituted the company. The headquarters of this company is at Menominee, Mich., where they manufacture chiefly white pine lumber, which is wholesaled along the line of the Great Lakes and adjacent waters. The yards are equipped with railroad tracks and a fine dock for the loading of boats. The business gives employment to about 250 men. Besides his interest in the Girard Lumber Company Mr. Culbertson has a large lumber plant in Murphy, N. C., where he owns a large amount of timber, containing a heavy growth of poplar. He also owns a large tract of timberland in Missouri. Although so extensively engaged in lumbering, Mr. Culbertson has also found time to give his attention to other lines of industry. He owns and operates a farm of nearly 5,000 acres on the Red river in Minnesota, and in partnership with Mr. Charles W. Wheeler, of LeBoeuf township, Erie county, owns another large farm in the same State. He is also extensively engaged in farming in Erie county. He owns the Culbertson homestead at Edinboro, and since 1871 has owned Allegheny Springs, Warren county, Pa. He is also heavily interested in real estate in the city of Erie and in other parts of the county. He is president of the Citizens' National Bank of Corry and the Girard Wrench Company, and is a heavy stockholder and a director of the P. S. & L. E. R. R., accounts of which may be found in this work. Indeed, Mr. Culbertson's interests are so extensive and distributed as to be almost impossible of description or estimation, yet in all these undertakings he has been universally successful. Among the self-made men of northwestern Pennsylvania who have achieved success by their own individual efforts he stands high. In politics Mr. Culbertson has always been a staunch Republican and has rendered much valuable service to the party of his choice. In 1888 he was elected to Congress on the Republican ticket, and served the interests of his district in such a manner as to convince the whole people of the wisdom of their choice, and to win their highest commendation. With the best interests of the country and community always at heart, Mr. Culbertson is ever ready to lend his means and influence to the advancement of all worthy enterprises of a public or charitable nature. Since 1863 he has resided in a beautiful country home on one of his farms, about a mile from Girard, but in 1894 he began the erection of his residence in Girard borough, which is nearing completion as the work goes to press. Mr. Culbertson married Margaret, daughter of the late Dr. James A. Alexander, of Warren county, Pennsylvania. Dr. Alexander owned a large tract of land in the vicinity of and including Allegheny Springs, which passed into the possession of Mr. Culbertson in 1871. To Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson were born eight children: Misses Cordelia A. and Kate E., James A., who married Miss Nora Lloyd, of Covington, Ky., by whom he has one child, Lloyd; Belle, who married Mr. Frank May, private secretary to Mr. Culbertson. They have four children: W. Lloyd, Margaret, Charles and Archibald R.; William M., in the milling business, Girard, married Florence Nece, of Girard; he has five children: Anabel, James, William, Florence and Margaret; Miss Margaret, Charles B., who married Charlotte Hutchinson, of Menominee, Mich.; he has one child, Margaret; and Archibald, who died June 17, 1883, at the age of 17 years, while a student in Franklin College. In Scotland, Ireland and America the Culbertson family have always belonged to the old line of Scotch Presbyterians, and have been active workers and generous supporters of their church.

J. B. Irons U.S.

Alfred Denio, president of the Otsego Fork Mills Company, Girard, Pa., was born in Bennington, Vt., January 17, 1831, and is a son of Elon and Marilla (Fifer) Denio. The family is of French extraction, and dates back into the early history of Vermont. Mr. Elon Denio also was born in Bennington, in 1809. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and after completing his education, served an apprenticeship in the trade of a machinist. Before he reached his majority he had engaged in business for himself in the manufacture of spindles for cotton and woolen mills, which he followed for several years with a marked degree of success. In 1842, soon after he had removed to Fly Creek, Otsego county, N. Y., he conceived the idea of adding forks to his products, and it was that idea, which, nourished and matured, was half a century later to bring fame and fortune to the name of Denio. The manufacture of forks in America had been attempted several times, but in the majority of cases without success. The first forks made by Mr. Denio were forged wholly by hand, but they contained the best material obtainable, and the fact that the work from beginning to finish was done by Mr. Denio was a guarantee of the superiority of the workmanship. These products met with such a ready sale as to encourage increased facilities, and soon the introduction of a trip-hammer. Other improvements in the methods of manufacture soon followed, and greater facilities were added from time to time in order to meet the constantly and rapidly increasing demand for these already famous implements. For the purpose of securing more water power and better shipping facilities, the works were in 1865 removed from Fly Creek to Baldwinville, N. Y., at the same time greatly increasing the capacity. It was here, in 1872, that the well-spent life of Mr. Denio was brought to a close. He had given the best years of his life to the upbuilding of an industry, then very limited in America, and he was successful. Mr. A. Denio received his education in the public schools, and from earliest boyhood was familiar with his father's shop. In maturer years he assisted his father, and being an industrious and dutiful son, contributed his share to the success of the business. Upon the death of his father, being an only son, he succeeded to the proprietorship of the Otsego Fork Mills. Thoroughly conversant with not only the commercial and financial, but also all the mechanical details of the business, the institution has flourished under his management, until now it is one of the most prosperous and thoroughly equipped in America. In 1876 the plant was moved to its present location, where it has been enlarged from time to time, until it now occupies nearly three acres. The buildings are substantial stone, iron and brick structures, and were designed and constructed for their present use. Each distinct department of the work has a shop of its own, but all are conveniently connected. The machinery with which the plant is equipped throughout is of the most modern and improved, and is in itself a wonderful display of mechanical ingenuity. The capacity is now over 150 dozen per day, and about 100 men are employed. The products of the concern include all kinds of agricultural hand implements, and coal, coke and mining forks, in the manufacture of which only the finest steel is used, the handles being of the best quality of second-growth white ash. These products are disposed of to the jobbing trade only. The territory over which this company operates includes the whole civilized world, many thousands of its implements being exported annually to Great Britain, Germany, France, Switzerland, Canada, Mexico and South America. One very unique characteristic running all through the entire life of this institution is the perfect harmony between its management and its labor, skilled and otherwise. Many have been in constant employment twenty-five, and several over thirty years. This has been largely due to the fact that both the late and the present Messrs. Denio were endowed with a superior knowledge of men and an inborn sympathy for the laboring classes. Indeed, this has been one of the chief elements of their success. This company was incorporated January 1, 1882, with a capital stock of $100,000, which will be increased to $150,000 in 1896. The officers of the company are: A. Denio, president, and F. L. Andrews, secretary and treasurer. The stockholders are: A. Denio, F. L. Andrews, H. P. Sullivan, of Erie; J. Robert Hall, P. D. Flowers, of Albion, Pa., H. E. Denio and W. L. Andrews, all of whom are included in the board of managers. Mr. A. Denio was married, in 1860, to Miss Louisa M. Taylor, of Otsego county, New York. To this happy union has been born one son, Horace E., who is a member of the board of managers. Mr. Denio is a Master Mason, and though never an aspirant for public office, he has always been in sympathy with the principles of the Republican party.

J. Robert Hall, Esq., one of the leading citizens of Erie county, was born in that portion of Springfield township which is now known as Girard township, June 13, 1821, and is a son of John and Polly (Kelley) Hall, natives of Mifflin county, Pennsylvania, where his grandfather settled at an early date, soon after coming from Ireland. John Hall came to Erie county about 1808 and located in Springfield township, where he took up a large farm. Some time after Girard township was cut off from Springfield he purchased a farm in what is now Springfield township, where he died in December, 1848, at the age of 64 years. The family consisted of five children: Catherine, who married M. A. Lawrence, of Chicago; J. Robert; Elizabeth, who married F. W. Sawyer, of Evansville, Ind.; George K., who is living in retirement in Miles Grove, and John H., who occupies a farm in Springfield township. J. Robert Hall received his early education in a log school-house, and never pursued a regular course of study farther than such as was afforded by the public schools of his boyhood, his further education being acquired by his private study and reading. When he was 21 years of age he began teaching, which he followed for two and a half years in one school in Girard township. He also taught a four months' term in Springfield township and a six months' term in Port Washington, O. He then took charge of a hotel and livery business in New Philadelphia, O., where he remained a year and a half. Upon the death of his father he returned home, and, purchasing the interests of the other heirs, he operated the homestead farm for seven years, and then sold it to his brother, George K., who still owns it. He then accepted the general superintendency of the farms and other business of the late Judge James Miles, which he continued for over twelve years. In 1858 Mr. Hall purchased of Alfred Kelley, who was then president of what is now the L. S. & M. S. R. R., nine hundred acres of heavily-wooded land, from which he immediately began on an extensive scale to furnish to railroads wood suitable for locomotive fuel, and which he continued until the use of coal for that purpose became general. Knowing that in time coal would displace wood, he sold off large portions of his tract, retaining but one hundred and fifty acres, which he still owns. He discontinued the wood business about 1886. During the war Mr. Hall dealt quite extensively in cattle, which he shipped chiefly to New York. Since 1866 Mr. Hall has given his attention to the management of his several farms, and dealing in cattle and real estate. In 1858 he purchased a lot of seventy-five acres north of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., and west of Lake street, Miles Grove, to which he later added fifteen acres adjoining. Upon portions of this lot have been built the Otsego Fork Mills, the I. O. O. F. Hall, Grace Episcopal Church and several other buildings. Sixty acres of it still belong to Mr. Hall. Besides this he owns a forty-acre lot between Miles Grove and Girard, a farm of 160 acres in Girard and Springfield townships, a half interest in a seventy-acre farm in Springfield township and several houses and lots in Miles Grove. Besides his own extensive dealings in real estate, in which he has been highly successful, Mr. Hall has been the executor in the settlement of many estates, notably those of the late Judge James Miles and H. C. Davis. Mr. Hall is also a stockholder in and a member of the board of directors of the Otsego Fork Mills, which he was instrumental in bringing to its present location; he was also president of the Erie County Agricultural Society for two years—1881-2. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Hall has always taken a leading part in the up-building and development of the beautiful hamlet of Miles Grove, which, with its good shipping facilities and location, will undoubtedly some day become a prosperous city. Mr. Hall is unmarried, and made his home in the family of Judge Miles from 1863 to 1887, since which time he has lived with his brother, George. In politics Mr. Hall was originally a Whig, and is now a Republican. He held various offices in Springfield and Girard townships, ten years justice of the peace in the latter, and has been for many years notary public. He attends the Grace Episcopal Church of Miles Grove, the erection of which he superintended, and of which he is a generous supporter. With the best interests of the county always at heart, he has ever stood ready to aid, by his means and influence, in furthering its prosperity and general welfare. And now in the evening of a well-spent life he is enjoying the fruits of honesty, economy and industry, and commands the respect and esteem of the community in which he has passed his long and useful career.

J. C. Murphy, of the firm of Murphy & Nichols, editors and publishers of the Cosmopolite, Girard, Pa., was born in Miles Grove, Pa., September 1, 1860, and is a son of James and Johanna Murphy. They were natives of County Limerick, Ireland, and in 1847 emigrated to New Jersey, and two years later came to Erie county, Pa., and settled at Miles Grove. In 1874 he removed to Erie city, where he died in 1892, and his wife died the same year. In the family there were nine children, of whom J. C. was the seventh. Mr. Murphy was educated in the public schools of Miles Grove, and at the age of 14 commenced an apprenticeship at the Cosmopolite office in Girard. Here he served the regular time of four years, then went to Ashtabula, Ohio, where he took charge of the job department of the Ashtabula Telegraph. He remained there a year and a half and went to Meadville, Pa., where he accepted a position on the Chaletuqua Magazine, assisting in printing the first issue of that periodical. Mr. Murphy worked in this office one year, then, in company with H. S. Bates, purchased the Meadville Messenger. Later they purchased the Meadville Morning News, which they published in connection with a job and book printing business. Mr. Murphy then bought Mr. Bates' interest in the enterprise, which he owned for six months, when he sold a half interest to J. H. Nichols, of Girard. Shortly after they bought the Crawford Democrat, which was the leading Democratic paper in the county. This consolidation made Messrs. Murphy & Nichols the proprietors of the only Democratic paper in Crawford county. They published it one year, and, in 1886, sold out, when Mr. Murphy went to Bellefonte, Ohio, bought out a job printing office, and published the Evening Excelsior about a year and a half; he sold it and went to Oil City and accepted the management of the job department of the Oil City Derrick. Here he remained a year and a half, when he returned to Meadville and took charge of the mechanical department of the Pennsylvania Farmer, and in December, 1889, he came to Girard, and in partnership with Harry H. Nichols, purchased the Cosmopolite. Mr. Murphy was married in August, 1885, to Miss Jessie Douglass, of Meadville. They have had three children, one of whom is living, James Douglass. Mr. Murphy is well known throughout Western Pennsylvania as a newspaper man. Politically he is a Democrat.

Harry H. Nichols, of the firm of Murphy & Nichols, editors and publishers of the Cosmopolite, Girard, Pa., was born March 31, 1869, in Girard, and is a son of J. H. and Mary (Hay) Nichols, residents of Girard. Mr. Nichols was educated in the Girard high school, and, in 1884, went to Meadville and commenced an apprenticeship in the office of the Meadville Messenger. Later he went to Bradford, Pa., and engaged in the oil business, which he followed a short time, when he again took up printing in the Star office of that city and remained one and a half years. While he was in Bradford he took a course in the Bradford Business College. In 1889 he came to Girard and bought a half interest in his present business. Mr. Nichols was married March 20, 1890, to Miss Jennie C. Ely, of Girard. She died a little over a year after her marriage, leaving one son, Stanner E. Nichols. Mr. Nichols was married again on September 8, 1895, to Miss Lillian A. Whitaker, of Girard.

R. H. Duff, physician and surgeon, Girard, Pa., was born near New Castle, Lawrence county, Pa., August 17, 1856, and is a son of Alexander and Alkey (Fulkerson) Duff, the former a native of Mount Jackson, Lawrence county, Pa., and the latter a native of New Castle, the same county. She was a daughter of Richard Fulkerson, who was a very extensive land owner in that county. Dr. Duff is a descendant of a very old Americanized family, and both his paternal and maternal ancestry are of Scotch-Irish descent. His father now resides in New Brighton, Pa. His mother died in 1890, in Girard, while on a visit at that place. Dr. Duff is the third in a family of nine children. He was educated in the public schools and the State Normal School at Edinboro, Pa., graduating at the latter place in the class of 1891, and the following school year served in the capacity of principal of the West New Castle schools. He then took a course in the Western Reserve Medical College at Cleveland, O., and was graduated in the class of 1884, and immediately began practice in Sharpsville, Mercer county, Pa., and remained there one year, when he removed to Brookfield, O., and practiced four years, and in the spring of 1889 came to Girard, where he built up a large and lucrative practice, and is prominently recognized as one of the leading medical men of Erie county. The Doctor was married September 4, 1894, to Miss Mary Ellen Burnell, of Greenville, Mercer county, Pa. This union has been blessed with two children, Harold Clifford, aged 8, and Gail Burnell, aged 4. He is a member of the Erie County Medical Society and is a Republican. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Girard.

A. R. Smith, physician and surgeon, Girard, Erie county, Pa., was born in Springfield, Erie county, Pa., March 7, 1830. He is a son of Nelson and Sally (Read) Smith, the former born in Ashfield, Conn., and the latter in Ashtabula, O. They came to Erie county in 1817 and settled in Springfield township, where Mr. Smith died in 1884, at the age of 88. His wife died in 1887, aged 76. Dr. Smith was reared and educated in Springfield, and at the age of 16 went to live with Dr. George Ellis, of Springfield, Pa., with whom he read medicine later, and afterwards attended the Eclectic College of Cincinnati, O., where he was graduated in 1853. He then returned to Springfield and practiced in partnership with his former preceptor, Dr. George Ellis, of Springfield, Pa., for one year, when he went to Springboro, Crawford county, Pa., and practiced his profession until 1865, at which time he came to Girard, where he has since been located in the active practice of medicine. Dr. Smith is a man of natural good judgment, a thorough student of medicine, and has had the benefit of more than ordinary amount of medical experience. With these requisites it is unnecessary to state here that he stands in the front rank of the medical profession of Erie county. In 1881 he opened a drug store in Girard, the management of which he does not permit to interfere with his profession. The Doctor was married October 1, 1854, to Miss C. E. DeWolf, of Springfield, Pa. They have six children, four of whom are living, Frank, Northwood, N. D.; Carrie E., married Homer McIntire (deceased); Will C., Girard; and Gertrude, resides at home. He has been Burgess of Girard two terms, has been on the school board, a member of the council, and has been physician for the poor for several years, in which capacity he still serves. He is a member of the Masonic order, having passed thirteen degrees, a member of the I. O. O. F. until the lodge was abandoned at Springboro, is a member of the United Workmen, the N. W. Eclectic Medical Society, the Eclectic Medical Society of Pennsylvania, and is a member of the M. E. Church.

W. M. Culbertson, merchant miller, Girard, Pa., was born November 30, 1860, and is a son of W. C. Culbertson. He was educated in the Girard Academy and Edinboro State Normal School. He then went to Covington, Ky., where he was engaged in the Lumber business four years, when he returned to Girard, and purchased his present flouring mill, where he has since been engaged in business. When Mr. Culbertson purchased the old Girard flouring mill it was of the old-fashioned, stone process style. Since then he has made many improvements, and has spent many thousands of dollars in rebuilding and remodeling the entire structure, to meet the demands of a constantly increasing patronage, as well as to be fully equipped for all competition in the modern production of the finest qualities of flour, as well as all other products of the modern grist-mill. The present capacity of his mill is about one hundred barrels per day. Mr. Culbertson is the manufacturer of the well-known brands of flour: "Culbertson Patent," "Electric Light," and "Royal," besides many other well-known brands to the trade in Western Pennsylvania and Ohio. He was united in marriage August 1, 1891, to Miss Florence Nece, a popular and accomplished young lady of Girard. To this union have been born five children: Annabell, James, William and Florence. Mr. Culbertson is a member of the school board of Girard borough, of which he is president; a member of the Masonic order, and a Republican. He is one of the enterprising young men of Erie county, and is always known to take an active interest in the promotion of every worthy public enterprise, and as a business man is well-known throughout the locality for his honesty and integrity.

E. M. Hatheway, harness dealer, Girard, Pa., is the leading dealer in his line in Girard. He also manufactures all kinds of harness, and carries in stock whips, robes, trunks, valises, etc. He was born at Lansing, Mich., in 1869, and is a son of Edward B. and Lovina (Brown) Hatheway, the former a native of New York, the latter of this county. The father now resides in Erie, where he works at his trade, that of carpenter and builder. When E. M. Hatheway was two years of age his parents moved to Erie, later to Meadville, Pa., moving to the latter place when E. M. was six years old. They remained there four years, and then moved to Albion, and remained there six years. Mr. Hatheway learned the harnessmaker's trade in Girard, Pa., and Erie, and in 1892 commenced business for himself in Girard, which he has since successfully conducted. He was married September 1, 1892, to Miss Jessie E. Bennett. They have two children: Kattie May, and Frank Marzell. He is a member of the Equitable Aid Union, and politically is a staunch Republican.

Theodore J. Ely, manufacturer, Girard, Pa., may justly be called one of the representative business men of Erie county. He is not a native of Pennsylvania, but has spent nearly all his life here. His parents moved to Girard when he was less than 1 year old. He was born in Clarksville, Otsego county, N. Y., March 11, 1857, and is a son of Dr. Benjamin C. and Elizabeth (Cary) Ely, now residents of Girard. Theodore J. was reared and educated in Girard, attending the old Girard Academy, and afterwards took a course of pharmacy, when he immediately engaged in the drug business in Girard, and in 1884 went to Conneautville, Pa., where he remained six years, being the sole owner and proprietor of a drug store there. He then came to Girard and engaged in the manufacturing business, where he was successfully operating a very extensive plant, one much greater than would be expected in a town like Girard, when on July 28, 1894, fate seemed to be against him, and his plant was destroyed by fire. Large orders, which he was unable to fill owing to the destruction of his plant, poured in from all parts of the country, thus placing him in a very difficult position for a manufacturer, who in this age of competition is compelled to supply the wants of his customers. Not at that period having time to rebuild his plant, he located his factory temporarily in the old foundry building at Miles Grove, where he continued his production during the summer, and in the meantime, rebuilt a much more extensive and modern plant on the site of the original one in Girard borough, which was ready for operation before the first of the year of 1895. The products of Mr. Ely's plant are known as hardware specialties, generally consisting of the Dandy saw handles, the Garrison Taylor and Trojan mopstick, Dandy carpet whip and Dandy rat trap, Crick's metallic horse poke, and various other articles in the hardware line. Mr. Ely is an inventor as well as manufacturer of several articles in the hardware line. He now employs from thirty to fifty men. He was married February 13, 1882, to Miss Nettie Willis, of Fairview, Pa. They have four children, Adriel W., Theodore Benjamin, Dwight Caryl and Frederick Willis. Mr. Ely has been a member of the council of Girard, is a member of the I. O. O. F., and is a Republican.

Agrippa D. Martin, Girard, Pa., is a native of Rome, Onondaga county, N. Y., was born January 1, 1810, and is a son of Agrippa and Anna (Jefferson) Martin, the former a native of Hoosac Falls, N. Y., and of Irish descent, and the latter a native of Deerfield, Mass., and of old New England stock. Mr. Martin came to Erie county with his parents in 1818 from New York State. They settled in Girard township, following farming as an occupation, living on the Wallace farm a short time, then next occupied the Reed farm, where the father died in 1828. His wife survived him about twenty-six years. They are both buried in the Girard cemetery. In the family there were eleven children, of whom Agrippa is the fifth, and is the only one now living. He was educated in such schools in Erie county as his pioneer days afforded, which, of course, were very scarce and incomplete, as during the boyhood days of Mr. Martin Erie county was considered the frontier of the great West. He worked on the farm with his father in early life and in 1828, when 18 years of age, commenced driving stage for old Seth Reed from Erie to Conneaut, O. This position he held four years. He then engaged with Raymond, Ogden & Waring's Caravan as horse trainer, and shortly after became their general animal trainer. He was considered in his day one of the most fearless and venturesome of animal trainers. He performed dangerous tricks with lions, tigers, etc., in the cages of these fierce beasts which has not been surpassed if equalled by modern animal trainers. His greatest success in the management of animals was in the schooling of elephants. He introduced the feat of teaching his trained elephants to boost him up on their tusks and catch him as he descended. The elephant Hannibal will long be remembered among showmen as one that developed into so fierce a brute that none but Mr. Martin could manage, but for him the elephant seemed to have an extreme feeling of kindness and was always ready to obey his slightest command. He has had various experiences with animals and has been lacerated at numerous times by his fierce pets when they became enraged. Mr. Martin still bears innumerable scars from hand-to-hand conflicts in the cages of animals, and he relates that many times he has left cages with his boots filled with his own blood. In 1835 he quit the circus business and came to Girard, where he engaged in the hotel business with his brother. He built the house that is now known as the Rhodes House. Besides the hotel he has carried on various enterprises during his stay in Girard. He now lives on his farm of ninety-six acres, mostly within the borough. He was married to Miss Mary C. Gregor. They had seven children: Helen married Dr. James L. Thayer (deceased); Antanet S., now Mrs. C. W. Noyes; George C., farmer, Girard; Adella (deceased); Frank resides at Union City, Mich., and Adrial, farmer, Girard. His first wife died in 1864. He afterwards married Mrs. Eliza C. Webb, of Conneautville, Pa. Mr. Martin has held several local offices and has been a staunch Republican since the organization of the party. Few men have had the experience that he has. He has traveled over twenty-two States by wagon and to-day commands the respect of all who know him.

S. Y. Rossiter, Girard, Pa., is a native of Morristown, Montgomery county, Pa., and was born in 1855. He is a son of Lindley and Margaret (Pennypecker) Rossiter, natives of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Lindley was a tanner and currier, and carried on business for over forty years in Norristown. On his decease S. Y. succeeded to the business. He subsequently moved to St. Mary's, Elk county, where he was in business two years. He came to Girard in 1871, and succeeded to the business of C. I. England. Since his purchase of this tannery he has improved and increased its capacity two-thirds, and conducts a large and successful business. He was united in marriage in 1857 to Mary B. Johnson, a native of Norristown. Eleven children have been born to this union, five surviving: Uriah, Eugene, Elizabeth, Joseph and Margaret A. Mr. Rossiter is the only surviving child of his parents, and is a very well and favorably known citizen and man of business. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the A. O. U. W.

U. P. Rossiter, attorney at law, Erie, Pa., son of S. V. Rossiter, was born October 6, 1862, at Norris-town, Pa. He received his education in the schools of Norris-town, St. Mary's and Girard (where his parents resided) and at Swarthmore College. He then learned the tanner's trade. He began the study of law with J. Ross Thompson, and was admitted to the bar in June, 1887; practiced in Girard until he was elected District Attorney of Erie county, in 1893, since which time he has made his home in Erie. He formed a law partnership association September 1, 1895, with L. E. Torry, under the firm name of Rossiter & Torry, with office at 702 State street.

W. J. Monfort, grocer, Girard, Pa., was born in New York city, February 18, 1858, and is a son of W. H. and G. (Asher) Monfort, both natives of New York. His father died in 1874, and his mother now resides in New York. In the family were five children, two of whom are living: Ella, married to Dr. F. A. Balcom, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and W. J., who was educated in the city of New York. At the age of 18 he went to work at the machinist's trade in Rhinebeck, N. Y. Here he served his apprenticeship and also worked as journeyman for several years, when he went to Meadville, Pa., and entered the employ of the Phoenix Iron Works. He resigned his position there in 1891, came to Girard and engaged in the grocery business. Although Mr. Monfort has not been in business very long in Girard, he has won the confidence of the public for fair dealing. His extensive patronage is the best evidence of this fact. He was married October 2, 1889, to Miss Minnie C. Kessell, of Girard, Pa. They have one child, William H. Mr. Monfort is a member of the Mystic Circle, and politically he is a staunch Democrat.

Ralph W. McDonald, D. D. S., Girard, Pa., was born October 8, 1869, at Conneautville, Pa., son of George B. and Kisiab (Stevens) McDonald. George B. McDonald, who was a native of Bennington, Vt., was born February 23, 1830, son of George and Mary McDonald, who were of Scotch descent, and early settlers in New England. He received his early education in the common schools of Vermont, and when about 20 years of age came to Erie county, settling in West Girard, where he resided but a short time, when he took up the study of dentistry, and after completing the regular course, followed that profession with remarkable success up to the time of his death, October 8, 1883. He was married to Miss Kisiab Stevens, of Summer Hill township, Crawford county, Pa., who died in 1895. To them were born five children, namely: Flavia, Mrs. L. A. Rossiter; George F. (deceased); Kit C. (deceased), A. Linn (deceased), and Ralph W., who was educated in the public schools of Conneautville and Girard, and then took a course in the Philadelphia Dental College. When not in school Mr. McDonald spent his entire time assisting his father at dentistry. Brought up from childhood in his profession, it gave him superior advantages, which he did not neglect, to become proficient in the art of dentistry, in which he has an excellent practice, and is achieving an enviable reputation. He was married June 6, 1894, to Miss Ida H., daughter of Charles M. Briggs, of Erie. Politically Mr. McDonald is a Republican.

Peter H. Nellis, proprietor of the Avenue House, Girard, Pa., was born in Alsace, Germany. His father, Mathias, emigrated to America in 1848, locating in Erie city, where he yet resides. Peter began life a poor boy, first gardening. He came to Girard in 1861, and learned shoemaking, at which trade he worked several years. In 1864 he entered as landsman, in the navy, was assigned to the steamer "Gen. Thomas" (then at Bridgeport, Ala.), participating in Hood's engagement, and in several skirmishes, serving until the close of the war. On his return he went to the oil country, came back to Girard, and located in an old building on the canal, called Sawdust Hall, then in operation, where he worked at his trade, sold merchandise, accommodated travelers, and kept a stable. In 1876 he bought and repaired the old Guard House, which burned in 1879, and on which was but a small insurance. He immediately began erecting the Avenue House, opening it in the following June. It is a modern brick structure, cost about $9,000, and has accommodations for a large number of guests. He was married in Girard in 1868, to Miss Kate Croft, a native of Canada. They have two children: Daniel, a civil engineer, and Kitty, married to Dr. Rogers, a dentist, at Conneaut, Pa. Mr. Nellis is a popular landlord, and keeps a first-class, reliable house, which commands the trade of the traveling public.

C. G. Daggett, fire insurance agent, Girard, Pa., was born July 7, 1848. He is a son of Hiram and Patience (Gilsob) Daggett, the former a native of Greenfield township, Erie county, and the latter of Clymer, N. Y. Hiram was born in 1816, and died in 1889. His wife died in 1885. He settled in Girard township at the age of 20, and followed farming until about 1870, when he engaged in fire and life insurance, also carrying on farming in connection with it. In the family there were four children: C. W., Girard; Byron H., Buffalo; Fenton (deceased), and Clayton G., who now resides on the old homestead, about two miles east of Girard borough, on the Ridge road. He succeeded his father in the insurance business, and devotes his attention exclusively to fire insurance. He represents several of the best companies, and is the only fire insurance agent in the vicinity of Girard. He was married February 16, 1871, to Miss Ida, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Hart) Drury, of Girard. They have two children: Oliver and Frank G. Mr. Daggett politically is a Democrat.

W. E. Abbey, grocer and coal dealer, Miles Grove, Pa., was born in Girard, April 12, 1851, and is a son of Elijah J. and Samantha M. (Abbey) Abbey, natives of Erie county. The father died in 1881 in Springfield township, and the mother now resides in Miles Grove. In the family there were five children, namely: Franklin H., Saginaw, Mich.; A. L., Erie, Pa.; W. E., Lizzie A., married Homer E. Hidliker, Miles Grove, Pa., and C. E. Abbey, youngest son, resides in Miles Grove. Mr. Abbey was educated in the public schools and spent his early life on the farm, and, in 1881, engaged in the mercantile business for about one and a half years, then sold out and engaged in the novelty manufacturing business, which he followed one year, when he engaged as superintendent for the Keystone Roller Curtain Works. This position he filled for several years, when he purchased his present business, which he had formerly owned. He was married September 21, 1871, to Hattie E. Buck, of Girard, Pa. Mr. Abbey is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Protected Home Circle and State Police. Politically he is a staunch Republican.

George W. Evans, sheriff of Erie county, Erie, Pa., was born in Summit township February 25, 1849, and is a son of Joshua and Mary (Brubaker) Evans, both natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Joshua Evans settled in Erie in 1834. He was engaged in the construction of the steamship "Madison," on which he afterward fired three years, and then settled in Fairview township, and, in 1840, moved to Summit township, where he resided until 1857, when he moved to Girard, lived there until 1877, and removed to Benton Harbor, Mich., where he died in 1892. His wife died in 1890. In the family there were twelve children, of whom George W. is the fifth. He was educated in the public schools and Girard Academy, and in 1870 engaged in the livery business in Girard, which he followed until he was elected sheriff of Erie county in 1894, when he removed to Erie. Mr. Evans was married December 28, 1891, to Mrs. Jennie Pettibone, of Ashtabula, Ohio. He served as constable of Girard eight years, was in the borough council six years and was burgess two years. Politically he is a Republican, and is a member of the Masonic order and the Elks.

J. E. Kreider, dealer in meats, Miles Grove, Pa., was born November 20, 1860, and is a son of Levi H. and Serna (Weidler) Kreider, natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. The latter died in 1891, and the father now resides in Strerretania, Pa. Mr. Kreider is the elder in a family of eight children. He was reared in the town of his birth, where he remained on the farm with his father until 21 years of age. On June 6, 1882, he was married to Miss Marcella J., daughter of Louis and Angelica (Bodine) Bodine, of Toledo, Ohio, who now reside in Middletown, Ark. Mr. Kreider then went to Fairview and followed farming on his own account until 1890. He then purchased his present business at Miles Grove from Albert Lafflin. Mr. Kreider has no competitor in his line in the enterprising town of Miles Grove, which affords a very extensive business. Mr. and Mrs. Kreider are the parents of five children: Ellsworth Levi, born January 25, 1883; Perry Reid, born September 26, 1884, deceased July 27, 1899; Samuel Lewis, born February 8, 1886; Edna Eva, born November 1, 1887; Floyd Bodine, born September 9, 1889, deceased August 1, 1890. Mr. Kreider is a member of the I. O. O. F. and one of Erie county's progressive business men.

Leslie M. Anderson, farmer, Girard, Pa., was born in Girard township, in July, 1851, and is a son of Alban and Adaline (Drury) Anderson, the former a native of New York State, the latter of Girard, Pa. In the family were two children, Carlton (deceased) and Leslie M. Mr. Anderson was educated in the district school and attended the Institute of Austintown for awhile. He commenced in the mercantile business in company with J. C. Loyd, in Turkey City, Clarion county, Pa., where he remained one year. He then returned to Girard and settled on his father's farm, where he remained from 1874 to 1881, when he bought his present farm of 103 acres. He was married January 5, 1876, to Miss Ida Bunnell, daughter of Alonzo and Rosanna Warner, of Lockport, Pa. Her mother is dead, and her father now resides in Denver, Colo. Mr. Anderson is road commissioner, a member of the Good Templars and the State police. Politically he is a Republican.

L. Hopkins, manufacturer, Miles Grove, Pa. Among the thriving factories of Erie county may be found that of Mr. Hopkins, in Girard township, near Miles Grove. He is engaged in the manufacture of the Perfection clothes drier, besides several other articles in the specialty line. He is the inventor of all the products of his factory. Mr. Hopkins is a son of Francis and Lucy Ann (Robertson) Hopkins, residents of Girard township. Francis Hopkins settled in Erie county in 1848, coming from New York State. In the family there were five children, of whom Leslie was the youngest. He was reared on the farm on the Lake road, educated in the common schools of his township, and followed farming until 1887, when he engaged in his present business. Mr. Hopkins was married to Miss Lucy A. Stearns of Girard. To them have been born three children, namely: Jessie B., Hiram F. and Harrison. He is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, the State police, and politically is a Republican.

A. H. Nason, manufacturer of and dealer in flour, feed and grain, Miles Grove, Pa., was born in Ripley, Chautauq county, N. Y., May 15, 1842, and is a son of Northrup and Esther (Rouse) Nason, natives of Otsego county, New York, and of New England origin. When a young man, Northrup Nason learned the shoemaker's trade, later studied law and was admitted to the bar in New York State. In 1836 he came to Erie county and resided in Girard about five years, when he returned to Ripley, N. Y., where he died in 1864, aged 56. His wife died in 1850. In the family there were eight children, namely: Henrietta, married William H. Root, of Ashtabula; Lydia J., married E. F. Hessler; her husband is dead, and she now resides in Buffalo, N. Y.; E. K., Erie, Pa.; D. O. (deceased), Sarah, wife of the late J. F. Strickland, who died in July, 1892, and was a former partner of Mr. Nason's; S. B. (deceased), Hattie E., Mrs. W. A. Ritter, and A. H. Nason, who was educated in the common schools of New York State, and when a youth served an apprenticeship at blacksmithing, working one year in Ripley and the remainder of his term in Girard. In 1879 he engaged in his present business, in partnership with Mr. Strickland, which partnership continued until the death of Mr. Strickland. Mr. Nason was married, September 27, 1865, to Miss Louisa E., daughter of DeLos Brown, of North East. They have one child, Roy B., aged 13. Mr. Nason is one of the progressive business men of Erie county. In politics he is a Republican, and has been road commissioner of Girard township for six years. Was pastor and folder in the Legislature during the year of 1891. He is a member of the K. O. F. M., and has been a member of the Masonic order since 1873.

Harry Batchelor, farmer, Girard, Erie county, Pa., was born in Sheffield, Ashtabula county, O., January 14, 1861, and is a son of Ward C. and Anne E. (Kinser) Batchelor. When Harry was 1 year old, his parents moved to Erie county, where they have since followed farming. Ward C. Batchelor was born in Kingsville, O., April 2, 1834. He is a son of James and Elizabeth (Taft) Batchelor, the former a native of Vermont, who settled in Ohio in 1811, where he reared a family of eleven children. Ward Batchelor was married, April 27, 1859, to Miss Anne E. Skinner, of Conneaut township, Erie county. About three years later he settled in Girard township. In the family there were three children; Harry, Mary (clerk in Erie), and Nellie (deceased). Mr. Batchelor practiced medicine, prior to the Rebellion, in Sheffield, O., having studied with Dr. Flower, of Albion, Pa. In 1861 he went out with the 169th Reg. of P. V. I. as surgeon. At the close of the war he returned to Girard township, where he has since resided on a farm. Mr. Batchelor has held several local offices, and is one of the prominent Republicans of Erie county. In 1892 he was a candidate on that ticket for county commissioner.

David P. Blair, Girard, Erie county, Pa., is one of the most enterprising and extensive farmers in Erie county. He is a son of James and Mary (Wallace) Blair, who were among the first pioneers of Erie county. James Blair was born in the eastern part of Pennsylvania about the year 1777. His parents were both natives of Pennsylvania; his father died when he was a child. James came to Erie county in 1803, and was engaged on the preliminary survey of the county. About two years later he settled permanently about one mile west of where David P. now resides, on Elk creek, in Girard township. He took up 400 acres of land, but owing to some deficiency in his title, later he had to repurchase it. He followed pioneer farming, devoting much time to clearing his land of the timber, and taught school some. He married Miss Mary Wallace, and to them have been born eight children: William (deceased), John (deceased), Robert (deceased), Jane (deceased), James (deceased), Joseph (deceased), David P., and Samuel, who resides in Fairview. James Blair (father of David) died in 1855. During his life he held several local offices, and in all things he was one of the hardy and enterprising pioneers who took the initiative steps in making Erie county what it is. David P. Blair was born on his present place May 11, 1818, and here he has since followed farming and lumbering up to the present time, and is yet one of the most active business men in the community. He has traveled a great deal at times, having been West as far as the Pacific coast, and traveled extensively throughout the South and East. He was married to Miss Caroline Wallace, of Washington county, Pennsylvania. They have one child, Robert W., student. Mrs. Blair died in 1890. Mr. Blair has been assessor of Girard township, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Politically he is a Republican.

Godfrey Schultz, farmer, Miles Grove, Erie county, Pa., was born May 8, 1824, and is a son of Henry and Christiana (Myers) Schultz, both natives of Germany. Godfrey was five years of age when his parents emigrated from Lancaster county to Erie county.

They first resided in Erie city for about two years, when they removed to the eastern portion of Girard township, where they settled on a farm and lived until 1853, when they sold out to the Lake Shore R. R. Company during the course of its construction. The father then purchased the farm where Godfrey now resides. Henry Schultz was a miller by occupation in the old country, and when he came to America he secured a patent right on a plow, which he manufactured very extensively in Lancaster county up to the time of his death, in 1856. In the family there were four children, of whom Godfrey was the second. He was reared on a farm, and is what might be called a self-educated man. During his life he attended school very little, yet he speaks and writes in both the German and English language far above the average, and is in fact a natural mathematician. He is a constant reader and is thoroughly posted on all the current topics of the day. He has always followed farming, and now has a very fine farm of over 230 acres. He was married in 1853 to Miss Harriet Beck, of Clarion, Pa. They had three children, Regna, Martha Jane and Esther Ellen. Mrs. Schultz died in 1872, and he afterward married Miss Mary Beck, of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, a cousin of his former wife. To them were born three children, Rosabel, Anna May and Sarah Elizabeth. Mr. Schultz was a Whig until the origin of the Republican party, and he has since been a Republican. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

William S. Kelley, farmer, Miles Grove, Erie county, Pa., is a son of John and Margaret (Steeley) Kelley, natives of Mifflin, Pa. John Kelley (the father of William) was born in Mifflin, Pa., April 26, 1798. When he was six years of age his parents came to Erie county and settled on the Lake road in Girard township, near where William Kelley now resides. John Kelley was a son of George Kelley, who was one of the early pioneers of Erie county. He bought 200 acres of land and followed farming and lumbering. It is said that he and his wife came from Mifflin, Pa., on horseback, and besides carrying a small amount of baggage, etc., they had two children, carrying one on each saddle. One of the children was John (the father of William) and the other was Betsey, who afterwards married Robert Porter. A third child, Polly, was born to them after they settled in Girard township. She married John Hall. None of them are now living. John Kelley married Margaret Steeley, who was also a native of Mifflin. They had eleven children: Carter, married George Webb (deceased); George (deceased); Alvin (deceased); Susannah, married C. Hicks (deceased), she lives in Illinois; Harriet (deceased); John, Quincy, Ill.; William S., Girard; James D., Girard; Margaret (deceased); L. S., Girard; Mary, Mrs. Clark Barlow, Girard. William S. was educated in the public schools of Girard township, and has always been engaged in farming, and is one of the successful and enterprising farmers of Erie county. He was married October 4, 1860, to Miss Jane Murray. They have two children, Addie and Belle. Mr. Kelley has been school director three terms, road commissioner two terms, and his political views are decidedly Republican.

Rial B. Wright was born February 19, 1865, in North East township, son of Sherman and Eunice Tousey Wright, both yet living on the old homestead in North East township. They came to Erie county from New York State in 1855. Mr. Wright was married March 18, 1886, to Emma A., daughter of James and Adeline Crispin, of East Bradford. They have two children, Edna M. and Lola P. Mr. and Mrs. Wright attend the Baptist Church. He is a Republican and held the office of school director in the township. He began business for himself when 18 years old, running a threshing machine for eleven years. Mr. Wright now has a thirty-acre farm in fine condition, on which he has just completed over $1,200 worth of new buildings. He is also proprietor of the most complete portable saw-mill in the township, with a capacity of 10,000 feet a day. He has 168 acres of excellent timber land, containing all kinds of rough timber, and has built a track from the mill to the woods, and has an engine and truck, by which he hauls the timber to the mill, which is finely equipped with the best machinery attainable. He personally superintends all the work, and the engine he uses bears evidence of his mechanical ingenuity, having built from a stationary engine and boiler a practical seven-horse-power locomotive, at a cost of less than $250. He has a trade for all the lumber he can produce, has always kept out of any combination to raise prices, and at one time had about the only mill not bought up by the larger dealers. Mr. Wright is surely what the world would call a self-made man, having earned every dollar he possesses and is in a prosperous condition. He gives steady employment to five men and occasionally employs as many more, and is one of the leading figures of Greenfield township, although a young man.

Jacob G. Story was born July 11, 1815, in Jefferson county, New York, a son of Asa and Catherine Story, of New York State. He is of Irish-German nationality, and came to Erie county in 1869, where he has since been a prominent figure in the affairs of the county. November 24, 1835, he married Polly Ann, daughter of Billings Decker, of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania. Seven children were the result of this union: William H. Story, who died in 1893, was a member of the 8th N. Y. Cav. during the Civil war; Seymour is married and living in Nebraska, was a member of Battery B, 4th U. S. Art., and was engaged in, during his service, numerous battles; Rachel, wife of L. B. Clark, now living in Silver Creek, N. Y.; Martha, deceased; Lewis M., when last heard of was in the Soldiers' Home at St. Paul, Minn.; he enlisted at Jamestown, N. Y., and fought in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, and Petersburg, where he was taken sick and removed to the New York Hospital, and later transferred to Buffalo; Andrew E. was killed by lightning in Nebraska, in 1893; Amos, killed by the explosion of a boiler at Custer City, Pa., October 14, 1880. Jacob G. Story is a Methodist, but attends no particular church. He is independent in politics, but helped organize the Republican party in Erie county, New York, with A. M. Clapp and E. G. Spaulding. Mrs. Story died October 25, 1867. Mr. Story was married December 1, 1867, to Lucy Ann Pike, but was divorced from her June 19, 1871. He was married again to Philinda, daughter of Zebria and Almira (Friedle) Wright, of Erie county, July 10, 1871, by Elder Chauncey Burch. She still lives, as do also two children by a former marriage, Mrs. J. M. Pierce, of Greenfield, and Sarah Meranda Crab, of Harbor Creek. Mr. Story's father fought in the war of 1812, and his father's father fought in the Revolutionary war, thus strongly identifying the family name with American history. Mr. Story is quite a writer, and his contributions to the Erie Herald, Gazette and Dispatch and to the Chautauqua Farmer have been read with interest by many thousands.

Lucy M. Lyons was born October 15, 1830, in Sheldon, Chautauqua county, N. Y., daughter of Henry and Minerva Hollister, who came to Erie county in 1835 from New York State, and was married October 27, 1849, to Elwood Lyons (born January 31, 1827), son of Ira and Hersey Lyons, of Sheldon, N. Y., a carpenter by trade. His death occurred June 8, 1889, at the age of 61. Ten children resulted from this union, as follows: Edward E. Lyons, born June 13, 1850, who married Miss Kate Smith and lives in Greenfield township with six children, Emma, Andrew, George, Clarence and Bart, one child, Etta, having died; P. M. Lyons, born September 18, 1852, in Venango township; Carl, George and Roy; Eldin J., born August 1, 1854, died October 24, 1870; Eugene, born April 8, 1856, who married Mary Hageman, living in Erie with three living children, Harry, Frederick and Jessie, and Frank (deceased); Asha D., born February 6, 1858, a carpenter, single, and living at home; Adda E., a twin sister of Asha, is the wife of Melvin Loomis, a clergyman, living in Chautauqua county, N. Y., with eight children, Eugene, Lawrence, Katie, Floyd, Wren, Clayton, Joy and Ray; Ralph H., born October 26, 1861, died March 27, 1862; Dora, born April 15, 1863, and died January 7, 1864; Frank B., born October 29, 1864, single, and living in Washington, W. Va.; William R., born December 6, 1866, single, and living at home. The boys, like their father, are all carpenters as well as farmers, attend the Methodist Church, and are Republicans in politics. William is an Odd Fellow, having held the office of assistant secretary and inside guardian in that order. Frank is a member of the J. O. U. A. M. Eugene is a past master workman in the A. O. U. W., while Edward is a member of the Protected Home Circle. The boys prefer carpenter work to farming, hence they only own eight acres, which they farm in their leisure moments.

Stephen Thayer was born June 11, 1819, in Niagara county, New York, was a son of Anna Thayer, who came to Niagara county from Vermont, but who were originally all of English parentage. He came to Erie county in 1853 and settled in Harbor Creek. Mr. Thayer was married March 26, 1841, in Wyoming county, New York, to a daughter of Ira and Hersey (Dunlap) Lyons. They have had four children, of whom George Arthur alone survives. He married Anna Clark, of Genesee county, of Irish parentage, and is now living in Cincinnati, O., where he is engaged in the carpet department of the immense stores of John Schillito & Co., with whom he has been employed for twenty years. Mr. Thayer was a rover and lived in many places during his life, having owned several farms at different times in Erie county. He practiced medicine for awhile, but returned to his old love, farming, and now owns a farm of fifty acres in Greenfield township. Although Mr. Thayer has a leaning toward the Methodists, he attends various churches, and has always been an ardent Prohibitionist.

Edward Hoffman

Christian Engle, born October 27, 1827, in Prussia, was the third child of Frederick and Mary Engle, who came to the United States in 1864 and settled in New York State in April, 1866, came to Erie county, Pennsylvania, and settled on the farm on which he now resides. He married in August, 1856, Mary, daughter of John Ahrens, a native of Prussia. They have five children: Lena, wife of Henry Neiger, residing in Ridgeway, Pa., with five children; John, who married Lena Saulkeld; Lotta, wife of Paul Horning, residing in Clarendon, Pa., with four children; Frank, who married Hannah Newhouse, and resides in North East, with four children; Minnie, wife of Paul Team, residing at Donation Hill, Erie county, with six children. Christian Engle is a Lutheran, as is all his family. He is a Republican in politics, and has a fine farm in prosperous condition. Mr. Engle was a member of the 2d Reg. in Prussia, and served first three years, and re-enlisting, served until the age limit. He participated in the battle of Holstein, one of the great battles of history, and is one of the prominent figures of Greenfield township. He has run a dairy in connection with his farm, and at present has ten cows. The product of his dairy is sold mostly in Erie county.

Isiah Dougan, was born November 19, 1838, in Ohio, son of Charles E. and Rachel (Davis) Dougan, who came from Genesee county, New York, to Erie county, Pennsylvania, in 1850. He was second in a family of fourteen children; was married March 14, 1861, to Emma, daughter of Barney and Amy (Southwell) Robinson, who removed first from New York State to Michigan and then settled in Erie county in 1855. They have five children: Calvin, who married Mary Fuller. She died in the spring of 1895, leaving him with four children: Dora, Lottie, Nettie and Morris, all living at the homestead. Sarah, wife of Frank Coburn, living in Greenfield township, with three children, John, Lavern and Benjamin; Perry was married December 10, 1892, to Mary Burch, who was born in Michigan March 25, 1872; she is a daughter of Jonathan and Helen P. (Coulton) Burch, who reside in Crawford county. Two children are the result of this union, Helen and Angie; they are living in Greenfield township on a farm of twenty-five acres, near his father's farm. Angie, wife of Charles Rice, residing in North East, with two children, Florence and Floyd. They are Free Will Baptists, and all Republicans. They have a farm of fifty acres in prosperous condition. Mr. Isiah Dougan participated in the Civil war, being a member of Co. E, 102d P. V. I., Captain Duvall. He is a member of the G. A. R.; has held the office of school director and is one of the successful and prosperous farmers of Greenfield township.

Jacob N. Switzer, Findley's Lake (N. Y.) post-office, was born October 7, 1832, in Bradford, Steuben county, N. Y., son of William Y. and Dencey (Beeman) Switzer. His father was born near Bradford, son of Henry Switzer, a native of Switzerland. His mother was the daughter of Alfred Beeman, of Connecticut. He came to this country October 8, 1853, and August 9, 1854, married Mary Jane, daughter of Henry and Polly Raymond, of Erie county. Two children blessed this union: Raymond, who married Mary Greenman and resides at Knapp's Creek, Cattaraugus county, N. Y.; Laney, who is the wife of James McIntosh, of Findley's Lake, N. Y. Mr.

Jacob N. Switzer married again March 28, 1878, to Hannah, daughter of Andrew and Mary E. Haskin, of Mina, Chautauqua county, N. Y.; she was the widow of Riley Dorman, to whom she bore one son, Newton A. Dorman, who lives with them and assists on the farm. His grandfather, Deering Dorman, was one of the earliest settlers of Chautauqua county, New York. Another member of the family is Jessie E. Williams, a sister's child, who has lived with them for eight years. Mr. Switzer's family have an interesting war record. His grandfather was a captain during the war of 1812; three of his brothers also being engaged in that memorable war. In the Civil war Mr. Switzer was a member of Co. E, 102d P. V. I., Capt. S. M. Duvall, of the 6th army corps, 3d div., Army of Potomac; he is a member of the G. A. R., since the organization of Union Post 407, Findley's Lake. He has been senior vice and junior vice and chaplain. Mr. Switzer is a Democrat and is liberal on religious questions. He has a farm of seventy acres, all used for farming and in an excellent state of cultivation. He has acquired all he has by his unaided efforts, and is a successful and self-made man.

David Benjamin Adams was born two miles from Batavia, N. Y., in January, 1833, the son of John and Roxanna (Wheaton) Adams. His father was a distant relation of John Quincy Adams, one of the early Presidents. Mr. D. B. Adams came to Erie county with his parents in 1835. He was married January 18, 1855, to Margaret Williams, of North East, daughter of John and Mary (Venrick) Williams. Seven children were the result of this union: James Andrew; Eva May, wife of William Place, Erie; Rosa Bell, wife of John Pierce, Erie; E. la, wife of Clarence Shaduck, Erie; George W.; Lester and Sarah (deceased). Mr. Adam's wife died February 2, 1877. He was married again to Catherine, daughter of John and Elizabeth Lavis, of Devonshire, England, where she was born. She was the widow of P. Farley, who died from the effect of wounds received in the Black Hills while serving under General Custer, a poisoned arrow having struck him in a skirmish with the Indians. She has six children living by a former marriage with B. F. Milford, of Devonshire, England, who was killed in the battle of the Wilderness in the Civil war. Three of the children are married: Robert T. Milford, Altoona, Pa.; Bessie D. Ballard, Erie; Anna E. Holmes, Chicago. Mr. D. B. Adams was a member of Co. F, 11th Regt., P. V. I., under Captain Braden, which was a part of the Army of the Potomac. He took part in the battles of Gettysburg and Antietam, where he was wounded, the effects of which he carries to-day. He is a member of the G. A. R. at Westleyville. He has always voted the Republican ticket. Mr. Adams has never used tobacco or liquor in his life. He is building himself a home in North East, where he expects to live at ease the balance of his life. His family have proved patriotic members of the Republic in its time of need.

Abel Wilkinson (deceased) was born February 28, 1824, in Greenfield township, son of Alanson and Anna Wilkinson, who came to Erie county about 1800, from Cayuga county, New York. Alanson was born in Connecticut in 1780 of English parentage, and participated in the war of 1812. Abel Wilkinson was married in 1844 to Thankful Sprague, daughter of Abner Sprague, of Ripley, N. Y. Six children were the result of this union: Barton A., born November 4, 1845, in Greenfield township, served in the navy on the steamer "General Thomas" during the late Civil war; he married, in 1868, Annarilla Carahan, who died in January, 1882, leaving two children, Frederick Eugene and Dora. He married, November 15, 1883, Eleanor Reynolds, of Findley's Lake, N. Y., where they now reside with four children of this union: Agnes May, Grant Zebulum, Fern and Nora Eleanor. Charles H. was born January 1, 1846, and married Ellen Atkins in December, 1870, by whom he had two children, Arthur Leslie and Blanch. He was married again October 8, 1883, to Carrie Davis, of Greenfield, where they now reside. George Sprague was born May 8, 1858, and married October 2, 1873, to Ruby Jane Walling, daughter of Thomas and Laura A. Walling, pioneers of Erie county. Three children live to bless this union: Jessie, who married C. A. Brandeau, of North East township; Myrtle May, who married Harry Kress, of Greenfield township, who are living on the Walling homestead; and George Henry. George Sprague Wilkinson is an ardent Prohibitionist and member of the United Brethren Church. Thomas Orlando was born November 17, 1850, and married, October 4, 1877, to Asenath E. Walling, another daughter of Thomas and Laura Walling. Four children bless this union: Genevieve R., born July 16, 1878; Frank E., March 27, 1881; Grace Mabel, April 8, 1884; Ethel Beatrice, October 2, 1890. They are United Brethren, and Mr. Wilkinson is a Republican in politics. He held the office of town clerk three years, taught school five terms, attended the Lake Shore Seminary three years, has a fine farm of 106 acres, which he earned himself and which is in prosperous condition. Alice M. (deceased) and William H., of Oregon. Mrs. Abel Wilkinson died of heart failure March 20, 1860, and is buried in the Grahamville burying grounds. Abel Wilkinson was again married April 21, 1860, to Phoebe L. Bemiss, daughter of Thomas B. and Salinda Bemiss, of English parentage. Four children were the result of this union: Sarah M. was born September 9, 1861, and married November 15, 1883, to James Devine, son of Bernard and Lucy M. Devine, of North East, of Irish and English parentage; they have two children, William James and George Edward; they are United Brethren in religion, Republicans in politics, and live on an adjoining farm, which they have earned themselves. Phoebe L. was born February 21, 1862, and married Joseph Dobson April 3, 1880, and have one child, Cora E. Eva May was born May 12, 1872, and married February 21, 1891, to Edward J. Smith; they have one child, Ralph E. The last son, John J., is married and living on the homestead. Mr. Abel Wilkinson was one of the pioneers of Erie county, is a Republican to the backbone, and was of the first to enlist in the army during the late war; participated in the battles of Bull Run, Antietam and Gettysburg, and was wounded in the neck by the enemy's bullets in the Wilderness fight. He belonged to Co. C, 140th Reg., P. V. I., 2d Div. of the army of the Potomac. He died leaving a life history worthy of a place in the annals of the nation, and particularly the history of Erie county.

Henry E. Magvon was born January 25, 1851, in the State of New York, the third child of E. and Eliza (Pardue) Magvon. His father was the eldest of four children of W. and Eliza Magvon, who came to Greenfield township in 1860. He married in 1842 Eliza Pardue, and the result of that union is three living children: Elvira Ashton, now living in Greenfield township; Silvesta, living with her father, and Henry E., who was married in March, 1877, to Lucy, daughter of John and Dora Wales, of Enterprise, Warren county. They have four children: Berney, Fannie, Isabel and Mary. The family are liberal in their religious views, with a leaning towards the Methodist Church; are Republicans in politics, and have earned the farm they live upon themselves. Mr. Magvon is an enterprising, industrious farmer, also a contractor and builder in both stone masonry and carpentry work. He was engaged in 1895 in building a bridge for the township. He was a member of the State militia for five years, and took part in that memorable Homestead farm trouble during the Carnegie strike.

Thomas A. Elliott, agent of the N. Y. C. & St. L. R. R., Harbor Creek, Pa., was born at Harbor Creek November 24, 1858, and is a son of Thomas and Maria (Torry) Elliott. His father, Thomas Elliott (deceased), was born September 24, 1817, in Harbor Creek township, Erie county, Pa., and was a son of Andrew and Elizabeth (Taylor) Elliott, natives of Ireland, who came to this country in 1797 and settled in Harbor Creek township. They were the parents of nine children, viz.: Polly (deceased), married Mr. Hampson; Margaret (deceased), married Augustus Shaw; Eleanor (deceased), married Calvin Lest; Dorcas (deceased), married William Camp; Rachael (deceased), Mrs. George Mills; Clarissa, married Frank Stillman, and now resides at Rosendale, Wis.; Gilbert (deceased); Plara (deceased), and Thomas (deceased). Thomas Elliott, sr., was united in marriage in 1843 with Maria C., a daughter of Ira and Grace (Douglas) Torry. Eleven children blessed this union: Jennette, born August 17, 1844, wife of William R. Gray, resides in Boston; Andrew N., born February 4, 1846, married Abbie D. Cleveland; Mary M., born March 11, 1848, resides at home; Charles M., born March 11, 1848, died March 7, 1850; Henry H., born October 19, 1851, married Sina Bristol, resides at Wilkesburg, Pa.; Harriet A., born February 27, 1850, died March 7, 1850; Hettie, born February 24, 1855, died February 10, 1856; Joseph, born December 10, 1857, died December 27, 1857; Thomas A., George M., born October 4, 1861, resides in Erie, and Grant, born February 2, 1864, died January 28, 1870. Thomas Elliott, sr., was a prosperous farmer and a good citizen; he departed this life November 9, 1864. His widow, a kind mother, still resides on the old homestead farm, which comprises 175 acres of ground, pleasantly located on the Lake Shore and Nickle Plate railroads. Thomas A. Elliott was educated in the Erie Academy and high school. He learned telegraphy in the office of the L. S. & M. S. at Harbor Creek, where he worked three years. When the Nickle Plate R. R. was completed, he entered the employ of that company as agent, which position he still holds. Mr. Elliott was married December 22, 1886, to Miss Jennie, daughter of B. B. and Isador (Burton) Whitley. They have one child, Whitley. Mr. Elliott has served as town clerk for five years, is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen; Masonic order, Knight Templar, and politically is a Republican.

C. M. Wood, Harbor Creek, Pa., traveling representative of the Westinghouse Company, of Schenectady, N. Y., was born in Harbor Creek January 26, 1844, and is a son of Albert and Mary (Allen) Wood. Albert Wood was a native of Webster, Monroe county, N. Y., and was born in 1809. He came to Erie county about 1830 and settled in Harbor Creek, on a farm about three miles south of Harbor Creek P. O. C. M. was the youngest in a family of seven children, viz.: Charles (deceased), late of Michigan; Lorenzo, residing in Kalamazoo, Mich.; Lydia and Mary, residing in Harbor Creek; Harriet, Mrs. J. E. Terry, Corry, Pa.; Franklin, died in the army at Falmouth, near Fredericksburg, Va., and C. M., whose mother died when he was six years old, when the father was re-married to Mrs. Thomas (nee Mozley). They had three children, viz., George, Melvin and Alfred, all prosperous farmers of Harbor Creek. The father died in 1883. Mr. C. M. Wood was reared and educated in Harbor Creek, and when a young man served three years in the Indian service, in civil capacity, in the Northwest. He then entered the employ of the Westinghouse Company, of Schenectady, N. Y., as foreman of the engine department, and three years later, owing to ill-health, became their traveling representative, in which capacity he is still connected with that company. He represents the company generally throughout the country. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Commercial Travelers Association of America and the A. O. U. W., and has always been an active Republican.

J. W. Throop, Harbor Creek, is one of the enterprising young men of Erie county. He was born September 13, 1859, in Harbor Creek. He is a son of Johnathan and Sarah E. (Greenwood) Throop, the former a native of St. Clearfield, N. Y., and the latter of Pennsylvania. Johnathan Throop first came to Erie county in 1840, as a millwright, and after working a few years, returned to New York State, but a year or two later came back to Erie county. He was married in November, 1850, to Miss Sarah Ellen Greenwood, daughter of Walter and Rachael (Lyon) Greenwood, who were old and respected citizens of Harbor Creek township, and are now dead. J. W. Throop had one brother, Clarence A., who died November 6, 1888, aged 37. He was an enterprising young business man of Harbor Creek, and his demise was greatly regretted by the entire community. Johnathan Throop died June 30, 1882. During his life he followed his occupation in various places throughout the country. The family lived in Kentucky about five years, where they were at the time of the war. They also resided a few years in Illinois and Minnesota. He was foreman for a time in the Erie Barrel Factory, and later went to Oil City in the employ of the same company. J. W., when about 22 years of age, learned telegraphy, and was employed on the Lake Shore R. R., on the Erie and Buffalo division. He was in the employ of that company about eleven years. At the same time he was a silent partner of his brother, Clarence, who was operating a cider and feed mill at Harbor Creek. Shortly after the death of his brother, he resigned his position on the railroad, and assumed the personal management of the cider and feed mill at Harbor Creek, and to which he has since devoted his attention. It is the only industry of the kind within a radius of seven miles, and he has an extensive patronage, and does a good business. His cider press is one of the latest four-screw steam-power presses, which is capable of squeezing out 100 barrels of delicious beverage daily. Mr. Throop also carries on a retail coal business. He was married September 25, 1890, to Miss Minnie E., daughter of Washington Bunnell, of Harbor Creek township. They are the parents of two children, viz.: Gerald W. and Isabella Sarah. Mr. Throop is a member of the E. A. U., and served two terms as its president. He is also a member of the A. O. U. W., of which he is master workman. He has served two terms as town clerk, and in politics is independent.

Dr. Mark Milton Moore, the eldest of ten children, nine sons, and one daughter, was born in Mantua, Portage county, Ohio, September 29, 1818. On the father's side he is of Scottish descent, his paternal ancestor being one of three brothers who came to America at an early period of its colonial history, for mining purposes, and settled in Connecticut. The mining business was unsuccessful, and the brothers separated, one remaining in Connecticut, one going to New Hampshire, and the other to Pennsylvania. His great-grandfather, Joseph Moore, was a Revolutionary soldier, and as a prisoner of war died before the struggle closed, on board of a British prison-ship in New York harbor. Among the ancient family names are Joseph, Eli, Roger, Dwight, Benjamin, John and Samuel. His maternal grandmother, on the father's side, was also of Scottish descent, and her name was Gillet. On his mother's side, his great-grandfather, Keyes, was born in Plymouth, Mass.; his grandfather, Amaziah, in Boston, and his mother, Betsy, in Ontario county, New York. His grandmother's name was Crafts. His grandfather, Samuel, came to Mantua, Portage county, Ohio, in 1806; his father, Samuel, jr., being at the time 13 years of age. Northern Ohio was then an almost unbroken forest, filled with savage beasts and still more savage men. At the age of 14 Samuel, jr., became an expert at hunting deer and wild turkeys, and often his mother's larder was well supplied by his skill, from the forest, which otherwise would be empty and the family have gone hungry to bed. Schools were unknown, and yet he managed to obtain the rudiments of a good education, and by the use of a good circulating library became an ardent reader of history. In the war of 1812 he entered the army and served till peace was declared, spending most of the time in the Maumee country and in the vicinity of Cleveland. In 1816 he first met at a neighbor's, Miss Betsey Keyes, who, as a matter of neighborly kindness, had come from Auburn to care for the sick, and early in 1817 they were married. Of the ten children born to them, all grew up to years of maturity, and seven of the number yet live. Homer H., the second in the order of their birth, after completing an academic course of study and teaching in a Kentucky high school for two years, was received into the Erie conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1846; was transferred to Kansas in 1857, in the midst of the border war, that he might aid in securing that territory to freedom, and in 1859 entered the army as chaplain of the Third Kansas Regiment; as war correspondent of the New York Tribune, Philadelphia Press and other papers; as superintendent of education for Florida; and as editor of the Jacksonville Herald. During the period of reconstruction he was in the midst of some thrilling scenes. At his own request he was discharged from the service in 1855, and entered the ministry in the Erie conference. He was the first to move in the matter of securing a site on Chautauqua Lake for camp meeting purposes, and the place selected has become of world-wide fame as the Assembly Grounds. As a trustee, lecturer, pastor, and editor for ten years on the Herald staff, and reporter, he has ever been closely identified with all its interests. Dr. Amaziah, after finishing an academic course of study, entered the office of Dr. Trask, of Hiram, Ohio, as a student of medicine; graduated from the Cleveland Medical College, and engaged in the successful practice of medicine. In 1862 he entered the army as captain, and with broken health as the result of exposure and hard service, was mustered out with honor in 1864. The daughter, Elizabeth, is the wife of Rev. George Fairbanks, the successful pastor of the Congregational Church at Parkman, Ohio. Samuel died at the age of 22, but he lived long enough to give evidence that he possessed elocutionary powers of a high order. Probably no other member of the family equaled him in mental ability, and he was the very soul of purity, truth and honor. Halsey Gillett, whose bent of mind was farming, died of a liver difficulty when a little past 21. Oliver Francis, at the age of 24, died of typhoid fever in Kansas. Dr. Mortimer G., besides being a thoroughly well-read and skillful physician, possesses a platform powers as an orator. On the temperance platform he has proved himself to be a ready and eloquent advocate. His reading and scholarship have taken a wide range, and speculative philosophy is a favorite study. He commenced the successful practice of medicine in Trumbull county, Ohio, but for some years past has had his office in Cleveland. Horace L., after some years of study in the Hiram College, under President Garfield, went to Kansas and commenced, in 1860, the study of law in the office of Gen. J. H. Lane; in 1861, he joined the Kansas Second Regiment and went to the front. He was in the bloody battle of Wilson Creek, but escaped unhurt. Promoted to a coloncy for gallant conduct, he was mustered out of the service in 1865. He has since commanded a regiment of Kansas troops under Gen. Sheridan, in Indian warfare. In business matters since the war he has been very successful; has dabbled some in politics, as a matter of recreation, and as a stump speaker is very effective, his addresses being characterized by the fullness of the information they give. Walter W. occupies the old homestead and observes the steady, sober ways of a farmer, much respected for his integrity and honor. We now return to Mark Milton Moore, the subject of this sketch. He enjoyed but limited educational advantages, except such as the poor common school of those early times afforded. Clearing heavily timbered land, cultivating the stumpy soil and gathering the harvests was the business of those days for boys, and especially so for the eldest of a group of ten. At school exhibitions, as an easy and graceful declaimer he had no equal, but there was no one present that could see in him the elements of the natural orator he is. Among the poor farmers, with large families, the great question was bread for the children, and not the graces of an education. It is not likely that the thought entered that neighborhood for at least a quarter of a century, that stalwart boys were made for any purpose except to handle the ax, the spade and the scythe. But he was often at his uncle's (Dr. Jason Moore), and from his conversation he early imbibed a taste for the study of medicine. Also, when 18, he became a pronounced Christian, and his gifts and zeal brought him prominently before the public, and everyone said he was destined for the pulpit. But he finished learning his trade, married Mary, daughter of Simcon Sheldon, whose wife, the daughter of Judge Elias Harmon, was the first white child born in Mantua, Portage county. This wife died August 10, 1847, leaving a son—Sheldon M. At the early age of 16 he entered the army, in 1861, as a private in the 11th P. V. I., and after seeing much service under McClellan, in Virginia; in Tennessee, under Hooker, and marching to the sea under Sherman, he was put into the veteran corps and mustered out of service late in 1865. For the past fifteen years he has been engineer of the P. & E. R. R., and is regarded as one of the boldest and most careful engineers on the road. (See sketch). It was soon after the death of his first wife that Dr. M. M. Moore returned to his first love, the study of medicine, and married Miss Mary, daughter of Wait Bassett, of Connecticut. Mary, wife of John Chambers (deceased), of Bradford; Lucretia (deceased), and Emery, a train dispatcher on the N. & E. R. R., were the issue of this marriage. The second Mrs. Moore died May 26, 1864, and he was subsequently married to Julia A., the daughter of Chauncey Wood, a native of Vermont, and for many years a resident of Garrettsville, Ohio, where he died in 1865. She died suddenly November 19, 1883, and M. M. was left alone and in sorrow, with not much of life remaining but his wonted courage and fortitude. Dr. Moore is richly endowed with all the elements that qualify a man for public life; no where more than in the sick room is he at home; there his presence, his words of good cheer, his sympathetic bearing, inspire confidence and hope. Between himself and the families he visits, there generally exists the ties of the strongest friendship. As a practitioner he has been very successful. His library of medical works, pamphlets and periodicals, is large and richly furnished. As much as ever in life he continues a hard and unremitting study, and whatever he learns from reading or from his practice, his strong memory retains. Some thirty-five years ago he became a resident of Wesleyville, and has ever taken a lively interest in all that would promote its welfare. He acted for many years as postmaster (his daughter, Mary, doing the business) and school director, and in no capacity has he failed in the discharge of duty. He has never had a law suit, and, as a physician, has never failed in his attentions to the poor and friendless. Though thrice married, he was either skillful in his selection of a wife, or fortunate, for all were excellent women. Dr. M. M. Moore married Mrs. L. A. Burnham (nee Rathburn) of Erie, September 17, 1890. His brother, Hiram, who resides in Kansas, is a member of Congress, and was elected in 1894.

N. A. Farnsworth, of the firm of Chaffee & Farnsworth, grocers, Wesleyville, Pa., was born in State Line, Pa., May 24, 1867, and is a son of Orin O. and Sarah (Ackles) Farnsworth. They now reside on a farm in Northville, North East township. The former was born in 1815, in the village of Greenfield, and is a son of John and Sarah (Whitney) Farnsworth, natives of New York, and who came to Erie county in 1814, settling in Greenfield township, where they died in 1834 and 1838 respectively. Orin C. was married in 1846 to Sarah, daughter of William and Mary P. (Brown) Ackles, natives of the North of Ireland. To this union were born: Mary, wife of George Taylor; Sarah A., wife of Eugene Dudley; Emma, at home; Carrie, N. A. and George. Mr. N. A. Farnsworth was reared in North East township, and educated in the public schools and at Clark's Business College, in Erie, Pa. January 1, 1891, he and Mr. Palmer bought Mr. Chaffee out at State Line, and commenced business under the firm name of H. W. Palmer & Co. At the end of three years he sold his interest there and entered the present partnership. Mr. Farnsworth was married April 4, 1894, to Miss Etta Ackles, of Ripley, N. Y.

W. E. Chaffee, of the firm of Chaffee & Farnsworth, grocers and dealers in farming implements, buggies, etc., Wesleyville, Pa., was born in Tionesta, Forest county, Pa., November 7, 1859, and is a son of H. C. and Catherine (Jameson) Chaffee, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of Scotland. The father was a member of the 2d Reg., 2d Heavy Artillery of Pennsylvania, and was killed in the service, his wife having died previously. W. E. was the only child. When 5 years old he came to State Line, Pa., and spent his early days in North East township, except three years he spent in Titusville, Pa., at the Soldiers' Orphan School. He then worked at farming a short time. He clerked at State Line one year and a half, when he purchased a general store, which he ran eight years. In March, 1892, he came to Wesleyville and bought the store of W. H. Kelley, and entered the present partnership one year later. He received the appointment as postmaster August 21, 1893. Mr. Chaffee is a member of the E. A. U. and the Improved Order of Red Men.

James Chambers, retired farmer and justice of the peace, Wesleyville, Harbor Creek township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township, March 10, 1806, son of Ezekiel and Rebecca (Stewart) Chambers. They were natives of Chambersburg, Franklin county, Pa., which was named after an ancestor. They had twelve children, three living, viz.: Lydia R., wife of J. Backus; Maria J., wife of Mr. Walker, of Erie, and James. Mr. and Mrs. Chambers came to Erie county in the fall of 1804, and were among its earliest settlers. They lived in Mill Creek township until arrangements were completed for moving to the farm now occupied by James. Ezekiel Chambers and a brother obtained 400 acres from the Population Company. James Chambers was reared in Erie county and educated in the county schools and Erie Academy, and when about 19 years of age, commenced teaching school, and taught about twelve terms in Harbor Creek and Mill Creek townships, teaching winters and working summers. His salary ranged from $10 to $17 per month, and he boarded around. At his father's death the farm was divided equally among the heirs, and James bought the shares of two of his sisters, which, added to his own, made a very handsome place, where he still resides. March 19, 1828, he married Adelia, daughter of Thomas George, of Troy, N. Y. Five children blessed this union, three living: James H., a merchant of Wesleyville, married Miss Brawley; R. O., on the old homestead; he married Miss Clara M. Funson, of Syracuse, N. Y.; they have two children, Warren H. and Adelia G.; and Mrs. James C. Russell, a widow, resides at Belle Valley. Mrs. James Chambers died in 1881. Mr. Chambers is a well-to-do citizen, living on the old homestead, near Wesleyville. He has been one of the county's leading citizens, and has filled nearly every office in Erie county and Harbor Creek township. He is now justice of the peace, which position he has occupied for fifty years, and is the oldest justice in the county, obtaining his commission from Gov. Ritner, under the old court.

Frank H. Ore, agent on the N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R., at Mooreheads, Harbor Creek postoffice, Pa., was born in Edinboro, December 13, 1864, and is a son of William and Nancy Jane (Stancliff) Ore, now residents of Erie. The father was born at Bodman, near London, England, and is a son of Benjamin and Anne Ore, who emigrated to America with their children, and settled in Waterford, Pa. Of their family four children are living, viz.: Joseph, North East; Hannah, Mrs. H. H. Ferguson, Pittsburg; Rebecca, Mrs. Charles Comer, Erie, and Benjamin, J., of Erie. William Ore followed farming in Washington township until 1884, when he went to Conneaut, Ohio, and was in the restaurant business eighteen months, when he came to Erie, where he has since resided, and is at present engaged in collecting. During the war he served in the 18th Pa. Cav. William and Nancy Jane (Stancliff) Ore, are the parents of three children, viz.: Emma, married J. J. Flury, Erie; Fred R., mail carrier, Erie, and Frank H. Frank H. was educated in the North East High School, and graduated in the class of 1882. He then entered the Nickel Plate telegraph office, at Harbor Creek, and learned telegraphy, under the instruction of T. A. Elliott. Since then he has been employed in various offices on that road, between Cleveland and Buffalo, and in February, 1890, was promoted to the agency at Mooreheads. He was married January 5, 1885, to Miss Georgiana, daughter of C. C. Hyke, of Harbor Creek. They have three children, viz.: Leigh Emerson, Hattie Jane and Helen Elizabeth. Mr. Ore is a member of the A. O. U. W., Knights of St. John, Jr. O. U. A. M., O. R. T., State Police, and is a Republican.

J. P. Gifford, farmer, Harbor Creek, Pa., was born in North East township, June 10, 1845. He is a son of E. F. and Betsey (Loveless) Gifford. The former was born in Vermont, March 4, 1797, and was a son of Gifford, who served eight years in the Revolutionary war; the latter was a native of New York State, and was born September 6, 1800. In the family were eleven children, viz.: William Henry (deceased), born November 5, 1821; Sarah J. (deceased), born January 11, 1823; George W., born December 10, 1825, resides in Cass county, Missouri; E. Smith, born February 22, 1828, died in November, 1866, in Oregon. He lost his health while working on the railroad across the Isthmus of Panama; Elmira B., born March 22, 1830, died April 3, 1832; Daniel F., born June 28, 1832, resides in Florida; Andrew, born February 10, 1835, died April 8, 1836; Betsey A., born May 22, 1837, died in Missouri, April 8, 1870; she married R. B. Chambers; A. J., born May 13, 1840, resides at Miller, Hand county, South Dakota, and J. P. E. F. Gifford, the father of J. P., came to Erie county about 1830, and settled on a farm about a mile north of the Union school house, North East township. He was a blacksmith when a young man, and later followed farming and carpentering. He died January 8, 1867, and his wife died June 27, 1861. J. P. was reared in North East township, and educated in the public schools. He always followed farming, and engaged in farming for himself in North East. In 1879 he came to Harbor Creek, and settled on his present place. He has seventy-six acres of land, twelve acres of which is a fine vineyard. He was married January 10, 1871, to Miss Ellen L., daughter of Philo and Betsey Green, early settlers in Erie county. To this union were born six children, viz.: E. P., born December 15, 1873; Charles A., born November 22, 1874; J. R., born March 14, 1878; George H., born August 7, 1880; Arthur W., born April 22, 1885, and Albert, born December 27, 1886. Mr. Gifford is a member of the A. O. U. W., E. A. U., Jr. O. U. A. M., the Grange, and politically is a Democrat.

Carl H. Walbridge, owner and proprietor of the Jersey Meadow Stock Farm, Harbor Creek township, postoffice address 9 West Eighth street, Erie, Pa. The Walbridge family, of whom Carl H. Walbridge is a descendant, is one of the oldest families in the United States. The town records of Preston, Conn., show that Henry Walbridge was married December 25, 1688, to Anna Ames, of that place. Tradition says that Henry was a seventh son, that he and his brother, William, were from Devonshire, England, that in 1685 they took part in the Monmouth rebellion against King James II, and on its failure, fled to this country. The above-named Henry is the ancestor of Carl H. Walbridge, and of the several members of this numerous family, now scattered throughout every State in the Union. Mr. W. G. Walbridge, of Litchfield, Conn., who has been engaged in compiling a genealogy of the Walbridge family since 1883, has ascertained the records of thirty-three Walbridges, who fought for Uncle Sam in the Rebellion, and of twenty-five more who were in the Revolution and war of 1812. Col. Ebenezer Walbridge, the great-grandfather of Carl, was an active participant in the dawn of the Revolution, at Lexington. He married Elizabeth Stebbins in 1760. They were the parents of Selia W., who married Betsey Preston. He was born March 8, 1760, and died April 7, 1859. They were both natives of Sharon, Vt., where they reared a family of six children, viz.: Henry, born June 20, 1813, died May 3, 1887; John S., born September 24, 1815, died May 8, 1859; Marcia, born October 18, 1818, now the widow of Perry Devore, late of Springfield, Erie county, Pa.; Lucia, born February 10, 1821, married Lorenzo Harvey, died July 22, 1892; Amelia, born January 15, 1828, now Mrs. Asa Devore, of Michigan; Janet, born April 25, 1825, married Perry M. Brimble, of Springfield, Pa., died May 11, 1887; John S. Walbridge, the father of C. H., came to Erie county in 1829, and settled on a farm in Springfield township, where he resided until the time of his death, as stated above. He married Jane C. Mallory, who was a native of Argyle, N. Y., and was born August 15, 1818. She died January 22, 1872. They were the parents of eight children, viz.: Emma J., born November 30, 1840, married Jacob W. Moore, of Pawnee City, Neb., December 26, 1864; Charles P., born August 25, 1842, was married December 17, 1866, to Mary Anne Paterson, of Beattie, Kan.; Florence H., born May 12, 1844, was married February 25, 1869, to Lemuel D. Jordan. They now reside at Pawnee City, Neb.; Carl H., born May 1, 1846 (who afterward changed his name from Henry C. to Carl H., not so much from choice as to avoid confusion, there being over forty Henry Walbridges, whose names appear in the Walbridge family genealogy); Andrew M., born March 29, 1848, was married November 30, 1871, to Miss Kate O. Strickland, of Springfield, Pa., where he now resides; Ann Eliza, born September 3, 1850, was married November 16, 1871, to Delos Morgan, of Beattie, Kan., she died April 2, 1895; Frank D., born June 11, 1854, locomotive engineer, Erie, Pa.; Ida Marcia, born August 25, 1858, was married July 18, 1878, to C. F. Church, of Erie, Pa. Carl H. Walbridge was reared in Springfield, Pa., the town of his birth, and educated in the public schools and the State Normal school, of Edinboro, Pa. When 10 years of age he left home and went to live with his uncle, Perry Devore, of Springfield, where he remained until he was about 15 years of age. He then enlisted in the United States navy, on board the U. S. S. "Michigan," at Erie, Pa., and shortly after was sent to Cairo, Ill., and subsequently served aboard the Government ships "Clara," "Dolsen," "Memoria," "Brilliant," "St. Clair" and "Cincinnati." He served in the capacity of a doctor's steward, and the doctor under whom he served, resigned on account of ill health, and our sailor boy's resignation followed shortly thereafter. He returned to Springfield and lived with Judge William Cross one winter, attending school at the Springfield Academy. He then went to the oil regions, locating in Titusville, Pa., where he remained a short time. He enlisted March 31, 1864, in Co. E, 145th P. V. I., was transferred to Co. F, 53d P. V. I. (date unknown) (Bates' History of P. V. I., Vol. 4, page 537). He participated in the Wilderness campaign, was at Cold Harbor, James River, and the assault on Petersburg, Va. It was at this last mentioned place that the brilliant military record which he was making for himself came to such a sudden and honorable halt. On June 16, 1864, in a charge on the "enemies' works, a death-dealing messenger, in the form of a shell from a Confederate gun, exploded in the Union ranks, resulting in the death of three of his comrades, and he lay upon the field with his left leg so badly mangled that amputation necessarily followed. After the surgical operation was performed he was taken to Army Square Hospital, Washington, D. C., where he was one year, lacking eight days, in recovering. He received his discharge June 8, 1865, and returned to Springfield, where he remained a short time, and then he went to Edinboro and attended the State Normal school for two years. He then served as private secretary for Hon. M. B. Lowry, State Senator, for about six months, when he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania R. R. Company, at Erie, as superintendent's clerk and assistant paymaster. In 1875, after being in the employ of the Pennsylvania R. R. Company about eight years, he engaged in the lumber business for himself in Erie, and operated an extensive lumber yard and planing-mill at 820 State street until 1884. He then went to Cape Charles, Va., to take charge of the extensive estate and truck farm of the late Hon. W. L. Scott. Mr. Walbridge here founded the town of Cape Charles, Va., and was its first mayor. The farm which Mr. Walbridge conducted was the largest truck farm in the United States at the time. It was composed of five plantations, containing 2,800 acres, and known as the "Hollywood Place." The best idea of the business interests which Mr. Walbridge managed can be obtained from the statement of shipments, which shows that in 1888 he shipped 63,485 barrels of produce, amounting to $81,236.40, gross. The largest number of hands employed any one day was 543. He also had charge of large oyster beds, shipping about 100,000 bushels of oysters per season. He also, at the same time, conducted an extensive ice business. In October, 1888, he resigned and returned to Erie county, and the following spring took up his residence on his farm in Harbor Creek township, which is known as the Jersey Meadow Stock Farm. It is situated in a very desirable locality, on the L. S. & M. S. and N. Y., C. & St. L. R. R. lines, about four miles east of Erie. The farm contains about 125 acres. Mr. Walbridge makes a specialty of raising registered Jersey cattle. He was united in marriage May 28, 1885, at Wilmington, Del., to Miss Nettie Dedrick, a native of Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Walbridge is a member of the Knights of Honor, the Royal Arcanum, the A. O. U. W., and politically is a Democrat. He is one of the most progressive citizens of Erie county, and his record, both civil and military, is one which is rarely excelled.

A. B. Hume, farmer, Wesleyville, Pa., was born in Woodcock, Crawford county, Pa., August 1, 1821, and is a son of James and Elizabeth (McCamet) Hume, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of the North of Ireland. James Hume served in the war of 1812. He was a miller and farmer, and spent most of his life in Crawford county. He died in 1852 and his wife died about twenty years later. They reared a family of nine children, viz.: Mary (deceased), Margaret (deceased), Robert (deceased), Sarah (deceased), Fanny, married to Robert Tate (deceased), John, (deceased), Eliza, Mrs. Sterrett, resides in Venango, Crawford county, Pa.; James (deceased), William (deceased), A. B. and George W. resided at Woodcock, Crawford county, Pa. A. B. Hume was reared and educated in Crawford county. In March, 1855, he went west and remained one year. Upon his return from the west he settled in Greene township, Erie county, Pa., where he remained for nine years. In 1865 he bought his present farm of fifty acres. Mr. Hume was married May 23, 1844, to Miss Jena, daughter of Charles and Sarah Anne (Seeley) Loop, of Perrington, Genesee county, N. Y. Mrs. Hume's parents moved to Crawford county in 1828, when she was 2 years old. Her father was a native of Delaware county, New York, and her mother of Stratford, Conn. The former died in 1843 and the latter in 1847. Mr. and Mrs. Hume are the parents of six children, viz.: Oliver, conductor on railroad, resides in Fargo, N. D.; Agnes, married N. H. Hart, Terre Haute, Ind.; Sophia, married O. C. Porter, Maringo, Ill.; James, Hinkley, Minn.; Andrew, Chicago; and Peter, Erie, Pa. Mr. Hume is one of the most respected citizens of Erie county, and politically every member of the family is a thorough Democrat.

P. B. Raeder, farmer, Harbor Creek township, postoffice Wesleyville, Pa., one of the foremost and enterprising farmers of Erie county, is a German by birth and was born in Bavaria, October 26, 1840. His parents were Jacob and Charlotte (Bolantler) Raeder.

They reared a family of six children, viz.: John, resides in Holland; Margaret, Erie, Pa.; Lena, Mrs. George Carrell; Jacob, died in Bowling Green, Ky., a soldier in the Federal army; P. B., Philomena, Mrs. Henry Shade, Erie, Pa. The mother died when P. B. was about 3 years old, and in 1852 the father emigrated to America with the family and settled in Erie. He was a farmer by occupation and died in 1889, to Miss Christian Schwingel, at that time a resident of Erie, but a native of Buffalo, N. Y. They have four children, viz.: Louisa, Mrs. William A. Frazer, Harbor Creek; Carl, George and William, all with their father on the farm.

D. W. Sewell, farmer, postoffice Wesleyville, Pa., was born in Harbor Creek township, within two miles of his present home, on November 25, 1841. He is a son of Norton and Mary Ann (Hinton) Sewell. Norton Sewell was a son of Ebenzer Sewell, who came from Williamstown, N. Y., in 1816, and settled in Harbor Creek township on a farm now owned by William Cooper. He afterward moved, and settled one mile west of there, on the place now occupied by Albert Sewell. He was a native of Vermont and of English and Irish descent. He served in the war of 1812. He was a cooper by trade, also worked at shoemaking and taught school. Was married to Louanna Orton, a native of New England. They reared a family of seven children, viz.: Betsey, married Francis Plum, of Williamstown, N. Y.; Norton (our subject's father); Phila, married Benjamin Chambers, Harbor Creek; Sidney, Harbor Creek; Miranda, married Samuel Baker, of Cleveland, O.; Malvira, married David Riblet, Harbor Creek; and Robert, who lived where Albert Sewell now resides; all deceased. The father died in 1869, at the age of 90, his wife dying several years previous to his death. Norton Sewell was born in 1810, in Williamstown, N. Y., and came to Harbor Creek with his parents when 6 years of age. He followed farming, also worked on the harbor in Erie. He married Mary Ann Hinton, a native of Greene township, and of Welsh descent. They reared a family of seven children: Harrison (deceased), lived in Erie; D. W., Ellen (deceased), Melvira (deceased), and George, resides in Greene township. The father died November 11, 1864, and the mother now resides in Harbor Creek. D. W. Sewell was reared and educated in Harbor Creek township, and worked on his father's farm until August, 1861, when he enlisted in Co. M, 1st N. Y. Lt. Art., and served under Gen. Sherman. He participated in the following engagements: Murphresboro, Stone River, Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Dallas, Ringold, Peach Tree Creek, Allantonia, Robertsville, Bentonville, Black River, and others. Was disabled by being thrown from a horse by the explosion of a caisson. He was discharged at Rochester, N. Y., in 1865, and at the close of the war learned the machinist's trade, which he followed for a time, and worked in New York city, Jersey City and Titusville, Pa., although he has always continued to claim Harbor Creek as his home, and has spent most of his time there. He bought his present place in 1889. Mr. Sewell was married, June 2, 1868, to Miss Maggie, daughter of Claudius Dumars, of Harbor Creek, who owned the place for several years where Mr. Sewell now resides. They have one child, George, who lives at home. Mr. Sewell has been a member of several social and secret societies, but at present is not associated with any. He is one of the progressive citizens of Erie county, and is a gentleman who is worthy of many friends.

J. J. Gitting, farmer, postoffice Wesleyville, was born August 18, 1837. He is a son of John and Susannah (Kuhl) Gitting. John Gitting (father of our subject) was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, in 1810, and was a son of John and Elizabeth (Myers) Gitting, who reared a family of twelve children: Catherine, married A. Wenn, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania; Henry (deceased); Mary, married J. Andrews, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania; Elizabeth (deceased), married Mr. Boland; Henry; Anna, wife of G. Avery, residing at Waterford, Pa.; Polly, Mrs. D. Kuhl, Fairview township, this county; Peggy, Hillsdale, Mich.; Powell, married Polly, daughter of Thomas Miller, Mill Creek, Erie county, Pa.; Timothy, who was living in Michigan at the breaking out of the war, enlisted and died in the army; Sarah, married H. Mooney, Girard, Pa., and John (father of our subject), who was married in 1833 to Susanna, daughter of Yost and Elizabeth (Orth) Kuhl. J. J. is the youngest in a family of three children: Caroline, married J. Neff, and resides in Harbor Creek township; Emeline, now Mrs. A. Clark, and John, jr., also lives in Harbor Creek township. The father died May 21, 1895, and the mother died April 21, 1879. J. J. Gitting was married in 1867 to Miss Jennie Roland. They have no children. Mr. Gitting lives on the old homestead, which is three and a half miles from Harbor Creek.

Edward Schultz, farmer, Harbor Creek township, postoffice Boscobel, was born in Erie November 29, 1846. He is a son of Christian and Sophia (Jacobach) Schultz, both natives of Germany, where they were married. In 1846 they emigrated to America and settled in Erie county. After residing in Erie about six months they moved to Harbor Creek township, where the father worked in Cass's woolen factory, he being a cloth-maker by trade. In 1849 he bought his present farm. His wife died July 20, 1881. They were the parents of six children: Edward; Lewis (deceased); Henrietta (deceased); Charles (deceased); Mary (deceased), and Ella, married Leander Bartlett. During the war Christian Schultz served in the 168th P. V. I. Davidson, of Plumb township, Venango county. They have one child, Mary. Mr. Schultz is a member of the State Police and Farmers' Alliance. He was a Republican until the organization of the People's party, and since then has been an enthusiastic member of that party.

G. E. Peck, farmer, postoffice Boscobel, Harbor Creek township, Pa., was born November 22, 1847, on the farm where he now resides. He is a son of Zalmion E. and Mary (Bellows) Peck, the former a native of Connecticut and of old New England stock; the latter was also a native of Connecticut and a descendant of Revolutionary stock. Her grandfather served as an officer in that war. Z. E. Peck was a son of Edmund and Adria (Whitlock) Peck, natives of Connecticut. The family came to Erie county in 1832. They reared a family of five children, viz.: Orrin (deceased) resided at Deep River, Lake county, Ind., where he died in 1887; Z. E., father of G. E.; Charles S., Burbank, Los Angeles county, Cal.; A. T. (deceased), resided in California; Eliza and Louisa (twins). Eliza married Joseph Peck (deceased) and resided in Burbank, Cal. Louisa married Ezra Throop, Union City. Edmund Peck settled on sixty acres of land, a part of our subject's farm. He was a farmer, also worked at shoe-making. He died while on a visit in Indiana, and his wife died in Harbor Creek township. His son, Zolomon E., lived on the same place and also followed farming. He was an old-time schoolmaster and taught over forty terms. In the spring of 1861 he responded to President Lincoln's call for troops and enlisted in the three months' service. He went out with Col. McLane's regiment. After the expiration of his service in that regiment he re-enlisted for three years in Co. A, 111th P. V. I. In that company he acted a long time in the capacity of commissary sergeant. At the end of about two years he was discharged on account of ill-health. After remaining at home about one year his health became much improved and he enlisted in Co. I, 7th U. S. I., to serve five years, which term was afterward shortened by an act of Congress to three. Few soldiers had a better war record than Z. E. Peck. He was at the battles of Antietam, South Mountain, Second Bull Run, Cedar Mountain and Harper's Ferry, and numerous other engagements. At Antietam he was taken prisoner, but was soon after released. He was 56 years of age when he first enlisted, an age at which few men enter service as privates. It is related that when the sergeant asked Mr. Peck his age his reply was, "My fighting age is 45." Zolomon E. and Mary (Bellows) Peck reared a family of six children: Zolomon (deceased); Melodea (deceased); Mary (deceased); Emeline (deceased); G. E., and Melodia A., now Mrs. C. T. Hall, of Greene township. G. E. was reared and educated in Harbor Creek township and has made farming his chief occupation, although he spent a few years in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. He has an excellent farm of about 150 acres. Mr. Peck was married February 6, 1872, to Miss S. A., daughter of George and Amanda (Bellows) Shattuck, of Venango township. Mr. and Mrs. Peck are the parents of four children: Zallie (deceased); Leslie G., graduate of the Edinboro State Normal School, class of 1895; Luella and Elmina. Mr. Peck has served as school director three terms and is a strong adherent to and a logical advocate of the principles of the People's party. Mr. Peck and his three children are excellent musicians. The youngest, a girl of thirteen, is a violinist of remarkable skill.

Charles Monroe Wheeler, agriculturist of LeBocouf township, Erie county, was born in New Ipswich, N. H., January 29, 1826. He is a son of the late Stephen and Hannah (Stratton) Wheeler, both of whom were natives of New Hampshire and of Scotch descent. Stephen Wheeler was a man of influence in his community, sought frequently for official preferment, serving as selectman, delegate to the Constitutional convention and a member for a number of terms of the Legislature of New Hampshire. He died in 1860; his wife survived him about ten years. Charles M. Wheeler was educated in the public schools and academy of his native town, continued to reside in New Ipswich, and was engaged in farming until 1852, when he removed to LeBeauf township, Erie county, Pa., where he has ever since resided. In addition to his farming interests in this county, Mr. Wheeler is the proprietor of a sawmill and cheese factory, has large lumber interests in Forest county, Pennsylvania, and very extensive farming interests in Minnesota. Mr. Wheeler has held several township offices and was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1891 and 1893. He was married December 6, 1854, to Sarah J., daughter of the late Eben Clark, of West Townsend, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler have five surviving children, Edward E., Walter S., Orton H., Fred C. and Dr. Arthur C. Wheeler. Edward E. Wheeler resides in LeBeauf, and is the manager and a member of the Baker-Wheeler Company, lumber manufacturers and dealers of Forest county. He married Imogene, daughter of T. S. Davis, of LeBeauf, and has four children, Grace, Mabel, Margaretta and Edward Everett. Orton H. Wheeler resides in Pueblo, Colo., where he is engaged in the shoe business, and is a member of the board of aldermen. Fred C. Wheeler is connected with his father in the Minnesota farming lands, married Mrs. Fanny Forrester, of Waterford, Erie county, and has one child, Mary. Dr. Arthur C. Wheeler is practicing medicine in Erie.

Edward Mehl.

William K. Andrews, M. D., was born in Adamsville, Crawford county, Pa., in 1867. He is a son of H. B. and Mary (McMichael) Andrews, both natives of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. William was educated at Alleghany College and the University of New York, graduating from the medical department of the latter institution in 1889. He began the practice of medicine in Jamestown, Pa., the same year, removing to Mill Village in 1891, where, in connection with his practice he has conducted a drug store. April 1, 1892, he purchased the Mill Village Herold of J. S. Ross, becoming its sole proprietor. The doctor is a member of the United States pension board, Corry, Pa. He is also interested in the LeBeauf roller mills, of Mill Village, Pa.

G. W. Sturgis, merchant, was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, January 22, 1860. He was the son of Horace and Mary Elizabeth (Gray) Sturgis, life-long residents of Crawford county. Mr. Sturgis sold his mercantile business in 1894, and engaged in the cutter and harness trade. In 1892 he was married to Della M. Reynolds, daughter of F. W. and Betsey Ann (Farker) Reynolds, of Mill Village. They have one child, Francis. Mr. Sturgis is a member of the I. O. O. F. He served one term as Burgess of Mill Village, and has been school director one term.

H. W. Pollock, general hardware merchant, Mill Village, Pa., was born in LeBeauf township in 1870, and is the son of J. S. and Mary (Hamilton) Pollock. The latter is a daughter of Hugh Hamilton, of Waterford. Mr. Pollock began in the hardware business in the spring of 1892, and became the sole owner of the business now managed by him in the spring of 1893. In 1892 he was married to Minnie McClellan, of McClellan Corners, Washington township.

Frank A. Porter, railroad agent, Mill Village, Pa., was born in LeBeauf township, and at the age of 15 years went to the Pennsylvania oil fields, where he became interested in oil drilling until 1880, when his left leg was injured in the Bradford fields, and amputation became necessary. In 1886 he began as an operator at the Mill Village railroad station, and, in 1890, was promoted to railroad agent for the New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R. Mr. Porter is the son of Lucius and Mariam (Clark) Porter, of LeBeauf township. Lucius Porter, an old resident of that locality, died in 1892. Frank A. Porter was married in 1887 to Lillis, daughter of J. L. Waterhouse, of Mill Village. Their children are two sons, Harry and Wellington. Mr. Porter is prominently identified with the I. O. O. F., being an active member.

W. J. Gourley, dealer in meats, and proprietor of meat market, Mill Village, Pa., was born in LeBeauf township, in 1852, and is the son of Samuel and Sarah (Patten) Gourley. At the age of 22 years he entered the employ of the New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R., as brakeman, and was soon after promoted to conductor, in which position he continued until 1894, when he engaged in the meat business as above stated. In 1874 he married Emma J. Wilson, daughter of Dr. George Wilson, of Mill Village, Pa. The following children have been born to them: William Arthur, Gertrude and Kittie. Mr. Gourley is a member of the O. R. C.

Frank L. Ferguson, farmer, Mill Village, Pa., was born in 1859, in Crawford county, and is a son of John W. and Louise (May) Ferguson, natives of Pennsylvania. Frank was educated in the public schools, and with the exception of ten years spent in the Bradford oil fields, he has followed the occupation of farming. He purchased the farm now occupied by him in 1887. In 1886 he married Miss Elsie Gregory, daughter of Richard Gregory, a resident of Erie county. Mr. Ferguson has held several township offices. He is a member of the I. O. O. F.

George P. Draper, farmer, LeBeauf, was born in LeBeauf township, Erie county, Pa., in 1863. He is a son of Albert J. Draper, a resident of the same township, and who was born in New York State in 1838, and came to Erie county when quite young, purchasing a farm at a place, known as Wheeler Town. In 1875 he purchased and moved onto the farm, where he now resides. Besides George, his children are: Sarah J., wife of Lewis Carroll; Laura Frances, wife of L. J. Middleton. George was married in 1883, to Nellie, daughter of Truman Merrill, of LeBeauf township; one child, Laura May, was born to them in 1892. Mr. Draper has resided on his present farm since 1882.

W. R. McCoy, farmer, LeBeauf, LeBeauf township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, in 1855, where he spent his boyhood days. He is a son of J. B. McCoy, a native of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Mr. McCoy has, since 1876, been a resident of Erie county, and for the past few years manager of the large farm he now occupies. In 1883 he was married to Estella, daughter of George Cooper, of Fairview, Erie county, Pa. Mr. McCoy is a member of the following organizations: I. O. O. F., P. H. C., and U. S. Insurance Company.

Jacob Weis was one of the many kindred lineage who came from Lancaster county to the wilderness, which the purchase of the Triangle by Pennsylvania had opened for settlement to her enterprising citizens. Jacob Weis came in 1796 or 1797 and settled west of Erie, where he spent his life, and where his son John died. Jacob Weis and his wife, Elizabeth (Ebersole) Weis, had a family of five children: Mrs. John Hershey, Mrs. Jacob Waidley, Mrs. Amos Hinkle, John and Jacob. All of them settled in Erie county. Mrs. Hershey alone survives. Of these, John Weis was born January 7, 1819. After reaching manhood his thrift, energy and industry soon increased his slender patrimony to such an extent that he desired a larger field. He purchased the Moses Barnet farm, which had been located and occupied by his grandfather, Jacob Ebersole, in Fairview township. It was a beautiful location in that unrivalled valley, which had long been in possession of the Barnet family. There, about thirty-five years ago, he made his home. His management was so judicious, his thrift so uninterrupted and his investments so fortunate, that he became one of the wealthy men of Erie county. Aside from his good farming, he took delight in owning and fattening fine cattle. To this he adhered for years. His conspicuous presence at county fairs is well remembered, where his exhibits were in keeping with this special feature of his farming. He secured a large property in Erie city and county. His was a life of honest industry. In appearance, habits and business, Mr. Weis was a type of the "Pennsylvania German," to which race our commonwealth is so largely indebted for its prosperity. Punctuality in every engagement, honorable dealings with all, and a regard for the feelings of others, made his name a synonym for reliability. His cordial manner and imposing appearance were in keeping with his personal characteristics and comfortable surroundings. His love of flowers and their utilization and cultivation in beautifying his home merit emphasis. He was a devoted son and kind brother. Mr. Weis was never married. Like others of his generation who had felt the absence of early advantages, he sought to give to those who should come after him the advantages never enjoyed by himself. In keeping with his advanced views and in harmony with his Heaven-inspired wish that his large possessions might to this end be made available, he designed and perfected a scheme of benevolence, which will give to his name a princely celebrity in the annals of Erie county, and cause his memory to be long and tenderly cherished, in providing for a magnificent free public library. It should do more, in setting an example of noble charity and judicious giving, to be followed, long after the hand that gave it shall have crumbled into dust. The amount thus bequeathed is estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000. During almost a century of existence as a county, no Erie citizen has made a similar bequest. In this respect it stands alone. The provisions of this grand and thoughtful device can be found minutely set forth in the chapter relating to Mill Creek township. The same attention to details, so characteristic of Mr. Weis through life, are found in this document, so planned as to insure that the institution may live through all time. Its location is already most happily settled. The location is in West Mill Creek on the south-west corner of the Thomas and Valley roads, directly opposite school No. 9, on land donated by Mr. Amos Hinkle, a brother-in-law of Mr. Weis, being a part of the old Weis homestead, and within a stone's throw of John Weis' birthplace. The building was completed early in 1896. About two years before his death, Mr. Weis returned to West Mill Creek, to the old home, where the evening of his life was spent. Up to the last decade his health had been good. Then he became subject to rheumatism, the intensity of which increased with his years. For several years his visits to Erie had been less frequent. After a confinement at home for several months, he died on the old place, where about ninety-eight years since his father settled. There he closed his long, unblemished and respected life.

Richard H. Arbuckle, farmer, postoffice Erie, was born in Erie city October 14, 1835, and is a son of William G. and Catherine (Bowers) Arbuckle, both still living. The family consisted of six children, viz.: Richard H., George W., Mary, wife of J. W. Humphrey, of Jamestown, N. Y.; Louisa C., wife of John K. Hallock; Frank Pierce, receiver for the general land office, Denver, Colo., and John Arbuckle (deceased). In 1859 Mr. Arbuckle married Miss J. Antonette, daughter of John and Charlotte E. (Barnes) Burton. The former died in 1886, and the latter in 1870. Their children were: J. Antonette, Mrs. R. H. Arbuckle; Phoebe J., wife of Jacob Warfel; Lydia N., wife of H. C. Sprague, of Toledo, O., and Laura, who died in 1853. Children of Richard Arbuckle: HulDAH Jeanette, wife of John C. Wolf; John Burton, Kate Eliza, who died in 1868 at the age of 2 years; Miss Charlotte Barnes, William Irwin and Richard C. Arbuckle. John B. Arbuckle married Lillian Kelsey. Two children have been born to this union, viz.: Phoebe Antonette, born September 11, 1890, and Donald Cecil, born December 7, 1893. William Irwin married Lenora Clemens. They had one child, Clemens Irwin, who died at the age of 7 months. Mr. and Mrs. John C. Wolf have one child, Richard Burton, born October 11, 1890. Richard Arbuckle and his descendants represent an important branch of the Arbuckle family. He was educated in the public schools and Erie Academy, and soon after learned the printer's trade. He was an apprentice on the Erie Observer for four years, and was afterwards and for several years clerk in the Erie postoffice. He served as county commissioner, under the first minority representation act, for three years, 1875-8, and was collector of customs at the port of Erie for four years, from 1885-9. In the fulfillment of the duties of each office of trust, Mr. Arbuckle showed great ability and gave entire satisfaction to the public. Latterly he has devoted his attention to farming pursuits in East Mill Creek, and his superior judgment and keen foresight is demonstrated in the cultivation of his farm, its fine buildings and modern methods pursued. He is energetic, public-spirited, and always takes a decided position on all affairs of public interest. Without solicitation on his part, Mr. Arbuckle was appointed collector of customs and disbursing agent in Erie, in December, 1885, and was commissioned, January 29, 1886. Being the only officer in Erie under the jurisdiction of the United States Treasury Department, he was required to give heavy bonds, and was custodian of all the public property belonging to the Treasury Department.

Tobias Fickinger, farmer, West Mill Creek township, postoffice Erie, was born June 14, 1811, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, son of Frederick, a miller by trade, and Elizabeth (Long) Fickinger, natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. They came to this country in 1831, settling in McKean township and remained there until 1844, when they moved to Ashtabula county, Ohio, and there ended their days. They were parents of eight children: Samuel, in Erie county; Jacob, in Ohio; William; Maria, wife of J. L. Skinner, of Illinois; Letitia, wife of George Stinehiser, in Indiana, and Tobias, who was twice married, on the first occasion to Sarah, daughter of John and Susan Butt, of Mill Creek township; by this union were born four children: Sarah A., wife of J. T. Brown; J. B., who was a member of the 15th P. V. I. during the late war and died at Harper's Ferry, Va.; Sophia (deceased), and Rev. Charles F., married to Marilla, daughter of J. Evans; they have two children, Frank and Grace. On the death of his wife Mr. Fickinger married, October 3, 1872, Mrs. Catherine (Butt) Farver, who was born March 15, 1813, and married John Farver in 1837. By this union were born five children, viz.: Daniel, in California; John, in Mill Creek township, married to Lydia Busick, had five children; Henry, Kate (deceased), Oney, John, Stella; Susan F., now Mrs. G. Stone, have six children; Sarah, wife of C. Ott, have two children; Mary, wife of T. McKee, have one child; Edward, who has been road commissioner and school director for many years. He and his family are members of the Lutheran Church.

M. H. Silverthorn, superintendent Erie County Almshouse, was born and reared in Fairview township, June 19, 1827, and is of Scotch-Welsh descent. Four brothers first came to Erie county at an early day: Abraham, Isaac, Thomas and James. Abraham soon after removed to Conneaut, Ohio; Isaac died at Girard; Thomas went West, and James removed to Canada. The latter was grandfather of Mr. M. H. Silverthorn, who is the son of John and Caroline (Davis) Silverthorn. The former died in 1855, at the age of 55 years. Mr. H. is the second in a family of eight children: Esther Ann, M. H., Harriett, Elvira, Norton J., Emiline, Levi and Cynthia. Mr. M. H. Silverthorn in 1850 was married to Mary Ann, daughter of David Russell, a prominent citizen of Fairview. Of their issue are five children, as follows: Russell (deceased), John, Florence, wife of W. C. Luther; James, now married to Miss Bertha, daughter of R. B. Brooks (they have one child, Russell); Frank M., lithographer in Erie, and Carl, a teacher. Mr. Silverthorn has long been a prominent farmer in Fairview township and a citizen of worth and value. In 1867 he was elected justice of the peace and served as county commissioner two terms, from 1869 to 1875, being the first commissioner who succeeded himself in Erie county. In this he figured conspicuously, in that he began a prosecution against the officials of the county, which resulted in better methods. On account of his action during his first term he was the choice of both parties at his second election. This estimable gentleman was twice elected to the Legislature by a large Republican majority, first in 1880 and again in 1882. It was during his first term that his name was immortalized as the great political reformer of Erie county. The stupendous Pittsburg riot bill was being agitated and lobbyists were pulling wires, and if successful it meant the payment of several millions of dollars by the State. The member from Erie was the chief factor in its defeat, which made this vast saving to the taxpayers. He was returned to the Legislature the next term with an overwhelming majority. And thus has his public life been characterized as a grand success. In 1891 he was appointed superintendent of the Erie County Almshouse, which position he now holds.

John V. Mangold, proprietor of the Mangold House, West Mill Creek, postoffice Erie, son of Frank and Margaret (Rupp) Mangold, Erie, Pa., is the third child of a family of eight children, as follows: Thomas, Frank, Joseph, John V., Mary, wife of Dennis Hawley; Lena, wife of Amand Lochner; Teresa, wife of Joseph Arndt, and Melen Mangold. John V. Mangold was married May 9, 1886, to Miss Ida Oberkirk, daughter of Michael and Anna Oberkirk, formerly of Weigeltown, Erie county. Mr. Oberkirk formerly kept the hotel now conducted by Mr. Mangold, the same having been run and managed by him since 1891. He is an energetic man and anticipates fully the demands of a patronizing public in the outfit of his hotel, which is known as the Mangold House, in honor of the present proprietor.

Donald Clark, blacksmith, Mill Creek township, postoffice Erie, is a native of Scotland and was born in 1862, where he learned his trade. He came to New York in January, 1880, began business for himself in 1883, and by fragality and persistent industry has become well established. Mr. Clark is the son of Neil and Jane (Brodie) Clark, life-long residents of Scotland. The latter died in 1880.

Emil V. Buseck, farmer, West Mill Creek township, was born in Mill Creek township in 1846, son of Lewis Buseck, who came to Erie county from Germany at the age of 28 years. He first came to Pittsburg and soon after to Mill Creek township. He married Miss Caroline Stohlman, a native of Germany, and they fought the battle of life successfully. He died in August, 1893, and his widow still survives at the age of 74 years. Their issue was as follows: Augusta, wife of John Knobloch; Charles; Emma, widow of W. E. Evans, of Fairview; Julius, of Erie; Lewis, Albert, William and Carrie V. Buseck. February 21, 1884, Emil V. Buseck was married to Mary, daughter of Samuel Fickinger, of Mill Creek township. Their children are: Frank, Fred and Elsie. Samuel Fickinger came to Erie county when a boy, and was a successful farmer and substantial citizen. He died in 1887, aged 71 years. His wife, Mary (Stough) Fickinger, was a native of Mill Creek township, and died in 1880, at the age of 61 years. Mr. Fickinger was superintendent of the Erie County Almshouse from 1848 until 1854.

R. W. Battles, M. D., West Mill Creek postoffice, was born in Girard township in 1856, where he was reared. In 1878 he graduated from the University of Michigan, and in 1880 from the Rush Medical College, and soon after began the practice of medicine at Crossingville, Crawford county, Pa., and continued his practice at Ripley, N. Y., and Fairview, locating in West Mill Creek in 1895. Besides devoting close attention to an increasing practice, Dr. Battles has found time to contribute to journalism, his writing appearing in the Chicago Inter-Ocean, New York World and the American Agriculturist. On November 10, 1880, Dr. Battles was married to Teresa, daughter of Hon. L. W. Thickston, ex-editor of the Meadville Republican, and former owner of the Crawford Tribune and Journal. The issue of this union has been three children, namely: Donald Raymond, Ralph Asa and Ford Lewis. Dr. Battles is a member of the A. O. U. W., E. A. U., and examiner for the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company. He was born in Girard township in 1827, and was a son of the late Asa and Elizabeth Battles, natives of Vermont. Asa Battles, of Girard, was a fruit culturist, who for several years conducted one of the finest and most extensive fruit plantations in the State of Pennsylvania. The first record of this name in America is found in Savage's Genealogical Dictionary. Thomas Battles, a Puritan emigrant, settled at Dedham, Mass., in 1642, married Mary Fisher, and raised a family of children, dying in 1706. It is said one of his sons settled in Bridgewater, Mass., from whom descended John Battles, the great-grandfather of Dr. Battles, who married a Miss Curtis November 16, 1749, and had several children, the eldest named John (the great-grandfather of the Doctor), who married Lydia Spear, his first wife, and had five children, the fifth being Asa, sr. (grandfather of Dr. R. W. Battles); also by his second wife, five children. Asa Battles, sr., was born in 1786 and married Elizabeth Brown November 22, 1814, the daughter of Abraham Brown, the well-known writer of sacred poetry; many of the hymns are retained in the popular collections of the day. They had the following children, all living: Rosana, born June 27, 1815, married L. J. Baldwin; George W., born June 15, 1816, married a Miss Bartlett; Alsva, born July 22, 1820; Lucinda, born January 16, 1824; Asa, born September 21, 1827, married a Miss Webster. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. In 1814 he settled in Western New York, but in 1825 he removed to Girard, Pa., where he resided until his death, May 10, 1848, aged 62 years. His widow survived until October 10, 1868, aged 81 years. Asa Battles, at the early age of 20 years, engaged in mercantile business, conducting one of the largest stores in Girard. At 21 he was appointed postmaster, holding the office four years, when he engaged in mail contracting on quite a large scale with the postoffice department, having at the commencement of the war of the rebellion contracts in all the middle and western and several of the southern States. Owing to the unsettling of values, the war about destroyed this business. He then returned his attention to the mercantile trade, opening a wholesale store in Milwaukee, Wis., and soon after another in Chicago; was also proprietor of a large hotel in Chicago prior to the great fire, after which he had one in St. Louis for a few years. Although exempt from military duty, he hired a substitute and kept him in the service during the war. When Pennsylvania was unable to fill her quota in the army without resorting to a draft, he accepted a commission from the Governor to proceed to the Gulf States and obtain colored recruits, in which he was quite successful. He was also largely engaged in the oil business, owning many producing wells, and a large refinery on Oil Creek. He was married December 27, 1849, to Sarah M., daughter of Perley Hinds, one of the early pioneers of the county. Six children have been born to them, five of whom are now living: Clarence Perley, born October 16, 1853, graduate of Rush Medical College, Chicago, now practicing medicine in Hot Springs, Ark.; Raymond Willis; Milton Lamak, born September 21, 1860, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, practicing dental surgery at Hot Springs; Leland Asa, born June 8, 1876, druggist at Hot Springs, and Cora Gertrude, born January 18, 1871. Mrs. Battles, mother of Dr. Battles, is still living at Pleasant View farm, Girard.

George Buchan Booth, L.L. D., pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, West Mill Creek postoffice, was born in 1850, and is a native of Scotland, son of William and Beatrice (Buchan) Booth. George Booth received his early training and education in his native country, and afterward came to America, and located in Indianapolis, Ind., and accepted a call from the Westminster Church in 1887. He was educated in the Glasgow University and Free Church Divinity College, and took a post-graduate course at Wooster (Ohio) University. His first pastorate was in the Hamilton Presbytery, Scotland. Rev. Mr. Booth was married in 1889, to Frances Ada, daughter of James Brown, of Hamilton, Ont. They have four children: Anna Beatrice, George Cameron, Isabella Home and Laura Paul. Since accepting his present pastorate the church building has been replaced with a handsome brick structure, at a cost of $10,000, and the spiritual work greatly revived and quickened.

Charles P. Benson, farmer, Mill Creek postoffice, Erie, was born in Sweden, in 1868, and came to Erie county from his native land in 1890. He is a son of Bengt and Petronalla Johnson. The former died March 10, 1892, and the latter, May 17, 1875. Charles received instructions at the Erie Business University, and began the dairy and milk retailing business from the Warfel farm, Mill Creek township, with his partner, Andrew Carlson, in 1894, which is being conducted successfully. His partner, Mr. Carlson, born in Sweden, February 4, 1866, and came to this country in 1888, is a son of Johnson and Annetta Carlson. The former died in 1891. Andrew is a member of the North Star Council, National Union, Erie.

Samuel Hoover, retired farmer, of Mill Creek township, Erie postoffice, was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1831. He is a son of George Hoover, who began and carried on a large distillery in York county, Pennsylvania. He later removed to Lancaster county, where he died at the age of 84 years. His widow, whose maiden name was Mary Eaton, daughter of Abraham Eaton, died three years later, at the age of 76 years. Their children were George, Mary and Samuel, who for several years carried on farming. He served in the late war, and belonged to Co. A, 110th Reg., P. V. I., and now receives a pension. He was married in 1864 to Mary Zimmerman, who died in 1891. Two children were born to this union; Lizzie, wife of George Stultzman, and Mary, wife of John Stultzman. Mr. Hoover relates many incidents of his early life with interest and vigor which is surprising.

J. C. Munn, farmer, West Mill Creek, postoffice Erie, was born in Erie March 8, 1830, son of Chandler N. and Margaret (Lowry) Munn, well-known residents of this locality. Chandler N. Munn died June 5, 1832, at the age of 30 years, and his widow died April 30, 1870, aged 70 years. Their marriage occurred August 25, 1825. Mr. J. C. Munn married Margaret Stanfield, May 10, 1854. Her death occurred June 2, 1870. The issue of this marriage was nine children: Reid C., born February 24, 1856; died June 26, 1886; Field N., born May 3, 1856; died December 23, 1894; John K., born May 29, 1858; James, born December 18, 1859; Mary Lydia, born November 14, 1861; infant, born November 18, died December 10, 1863; seventh child, born October 4, 1864, died in infancy; William B., born November 29, 1865; Samuel S., born October 18, 1868; died February 13, 1870; Mary L. is wife of W. I. Reed, of Miles Grove; William B. married Miss Ida Warner; James married Miss Louisa Fails, of Miles Grove. J. C. Munn's first wife died June 2, 1870, and October 12, 1871, he was united in marriage to Martha K., daughter of James and Polly (Kelley) Barr, prominent residents of Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Barr were married in 1812, and located on the Barr farm in Harbor Creek. Mr. Barr was a captain of militia, and when the war of 1812 was declared, he and his company volunteered to go West and join Gen. Harrison's command, which they did, and were in the service a long time. After his return, he and his company were in the service in Erie until the close of the war. The Barr family resided in Harbor Creek until 1830, and removed to Mill Creek, and the last fifty years of Mrs. Barr's life were spent on that farm. Mr. Barr died in 1855, leaving a widow and nine children in straightened circumstances. Each member of the family made the most of life's opportunities and have been successful. Mrs. Barr was one of the original members that formed the first church in Erie, organized and established by Rev. Robert Reid, pastor of the First Associated Reformed (now United Presbyterian) Church, of Erie, in 1811. Mrs. Barr was the only survivor of that little band for many years. John Kelley, grandfather of Mrs. Munn, was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and moved to this county soon after 1800, locating on the bank of Lake Erie, a short distance east of the wild lands at the mouth of Elk creek. In 1802 he purchased from the State reserve tract No. 27, known for three-quarters of a century as the Barr farm. Here he died, and was buried on the banks of the lake. His wife died at the house of her daughter, Mrs. Barr, in 1858. James Barr and Polly Kelley were married, April 14, 1812; Matthew R. Barr married Laura Wright, March 31, 1842; Frederick N.; Bond and Mary K. Barr were married, May 16, 1852; Luther Wright married Harriet M. Barr, April 8, 1858; George W. Barr married Julia A. Wilder, January 6, 1890. The first of the Barr family came to America in 1739, from the north of Ireland, in the person of James Barr, grandfather of Mrs. Munn. He married Elizabeth Kirk, in 1750, and died in Harbor Creek in 1823. Of this family there were two sons and eight daughters. The children of James Barr are: John K., born September 13, 1813; Elizabeth Ann, born August 7, 1815; Matthew R., born December 25, 1817; Louisa Aurelia, born December 7, 1819; George W., born July 4, 1822; Harriet Margaret, born November 13, 1824; Mary Kelley, born April 25, 1827; Martha Rebecca, born December 20, 1829; Ellen Cordelia, born March 4, 1833; James Moses, born September 27, 1835. Mary Barr, grandmother of J. C. Munn, was born May 24, 1770. Mr. J. C. Munn is a grandson of Andrew Lowry, one of ten brothers who came from Ireland in 1765. His children were: Eliza, married to George Gallohour, July 8, 1819; Margaret, married to C. N. Munn, August 25, 1825; Maria, married to Robert Caldwell, February 1, 1821; Katy Ann, born February 2, 1804, married to James Alexander, October 21, 1823; Sarah, born March 5, 1806; died July 15, 1869; Dr. Samuel S., born June 27, 1808; died September 11, 1838. Mr. Munn is an energetic and progressive citizen in the community, ever alive to the interests of his surroundings. Mr. and Mrs. Munn are members of the United Presbyterian Church.

F. J. Brown, farmer, Mill Creek township, postoffice Erie, was born June 11, 1861, of German ancestry, and is a son of Joseph and Lena (Oberhart) Brown, of McKean township. The former is living with her son, F. J., on the farm, near the city of Erie, at the age of 70 years. The latter died in 1891, at the age of 59 years. Their children are: Frances (deceased), wife of Michael Ritter; Jacob, Henry, Michael, a resident of Oregon; F. J. and Lena, of Erie. F. J. Brown was married in February, 1884, to Frances, daughter of Nicholas and Maggie (Weingart) Whitman. To them have been born two children: Maggie, born in 1887, and Lizzie, born in 1890. Mr. Brown began to farm five years ago; prior to that time he was in the meat business in McKean township. Joseph Brown came first to Erie in 1852. He is a son of Conrad Brown who resided in Germany during his lifetime. Mr. Brown attended the public schools, and is a careful farmer and respected citizen.

Adam Hellmann, farmer, Mill Creek township, postoffice Kearsarge, native of Erie county, of German ancestry, was born July 10, 1871. He is a son of Frank and Maggie (Kearn) Hellmann, who came to Erie county in 1866, from Germany. John Kearn, grandfather of Adam, died in Germany in 1885. His widow was Teressa Kearn, who still survives. Their children were: Helen, Balzor and Van Treaser. Adam is the third child in a family of four children, as follows: Helen, Adam, Peter and Frank, jr. In 1893 Mr. Hellmann was married to Mary, daughter of Martin Gossman. They have one child, Leo. Frank Hellmann, father of Adam, is a member of the A. O. U. W., and with his son manages a large farm near the city of Erie.

William A. Haggmann, dairyman, a native of Erie county, New York, was born August 26, 1870. He is a son of Gotlieb and Warbery (Nichter) Haggmann, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1858, first locating in New York State, and later in the city of Erie. Their children are: Joseph (whose sketch appears in this work), Charles, Levi, Mary, wife of Eugene Lyons, of Erie; Matilda, wife of W. C. Allen, of Erie; Amelia, wife of Frank Sloucm, of Erie; Louisa, William and Anna, wife of Charles Parker, of Erie. William came to Erie city ten years ago, began business as a dairyman five years ago; and by upright dealing has a most liberal patronage. March 10, 1872, he was married to Bertha E., daughter of David Wolf, of Lancaster, Pa. Her mother's maiden name was Susanna Baechner; she still survives her husband, who died in 1893, at the age of 75 years. The children of Mr. and Mrs. William Haggmann are: Mabel Leola, Harry and William Haggmann. Mr. Haggmann now owns a modern home near the outskirts of the city of Erie, and by his generous, straightforward dealing is fast gaining a competency. He was brought up as a Methodist. In politics he is a Republican.

S. B. P. Zuck, farmer, Mill Creek township, postoffice Erie, son of John J. and Sallie (Ebersoll) Zuck, who settled early in Mill Creek, on what is known as the Buffalo road. John Zuck, grandfather of S. B. P., came early from Germany, and settled in Erie county, near Erie city, when this section was a dense wilderness. This early pioneer was among the very first to settle in Erie county, locating on what is known as "the flats." He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Riblet, who was also identified with the early history of the county. John Zuck, father of S. B. P., died in his 83d year. In 1838 S. B. P. Zuck married Mary Ann, daughter of John McLaughlin, a prominent resident of Erie county. Their children are: George, Mary and John J., a resident of New Jersey. Mr. Zuck was born near where he now resides in 1815, and has lived to see various improvements of the locality carried out, and was instrumental in carrying out many plans for the advancement of his township in the way of roads. Mr. Zuck owns one of the finest farms of the township, which from an eminence overlooks Lake Erie. He has lived to reap the fruit of his labor, and has been a useful and honored citizen in the community. His father, John Zuck, was a veteran of the war of 1812.

M. G. Pollock, farmer, Mill Creek township, postoffice Erie, was born in Erie county in 1831, son of Matthew and Hannah (McClure) Pollock, natives of Ireland, who came to America and settled in Erie county in 1820. Matthew Pollock was an early settler of the county, and bought the farm where M. G. Pollock now resides, known as Academy land, and reared a family of ten children, of which M. G. was the seventh. Their issue was as follows: Margaret (deceased), Hannah (deceased), David (deceased), John (deceased), S. T., Alexander (deceased), M. G., Rebecca (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased) and Mary C. (deceased). Matthew Pollock died at the age of 72 years, and his widow at the age of 71 years. Mr. M. G. Pollock was married in 1850 to Margaret, daughter of Oliver Dunn, of McKean township, an old resident. He died in 1877, at the age of 72 years. His widow, Elizabeth Dumars Dunn, is still living in Erie, at the age of 94 years. Their issue was thirteen children, of whom are living: Mary, of Arkansas; Margaretta, wife of M. G. Pollock; Matilda J. Dunn, with her mother in Erie; Allen, Frank and Findley, all of whom participated in the late war. The children of M. G. Pollock are: Ninette, wife of R. W. Wright, West Greene; Alice H., wife of Simon I. Hamot, Summit township; Maggie L., wife of Albert Weidler, Erie; Mary E., wife of Charles W. Nick, druggist, Erie; John, deceased; James Oliver, deceased; Frank S., Erie;

Charles G., New Britain, Conn., and Harry W. Pollock, Erie. Mr. Pollock for twenty years was a resident of Summit township, where he was assessor in 1877, and a prominent and influential citizen in the community. He is a member of the United Presbyterian Church.

George Biebel, merchant, Kearsarge postoffice, Mill Creek township, was born and reared in Mill Creek township. He was born January 1, 1846, son of Daniel and Charlotte (Gintz) Biebel, natives of Germany. Daniel Biebel was born in the year 1817, and now resides in Kearsarge, and is hale and hearty. He began in this country first in the employ of Hurkins & Co., bricklayers, Erie; this was in August, 1836. Mrs. Biebel, mother of George, is a sister of the late Capt. Gintz. Mr. Biebel married, in 1869, Miss Mary Schuwerk, daughter of Joseph Schuwerk, of McKean. The following children have been born to this union: August J., Edward D., William J. and Amelia K. Mr. Biebel began the mercantile business in his present location in 1872, where he has enjoyed the liberal patronage which he seeks to deserve by carrying all the merchandise embraced in a general store; groceries, provisions, flour, feed; fertilizers, boots and shoes, glassware, farming tools, hats, caps and notions; also mowers and binders, manufactured by the Johnson Harvesting Company, of Batavia, N. Y. Mr. Biebel has enjoyed that degree of prosperity that follows persistent industry and satisfactory dealing. He was appointed postmaster under President Grant's administration, December 21, 1873, and still holds the office, bearing the distinction of holding a postoffice appointment the longest of any postmaster in Erie county. Mr. Biebel and family are members of the Catholic Church. He is a Democrat in party affiliations.

Joseph Seelinger, dairyman, Kearsarge postoffice, Mill Creek township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Erie county, November 4, 1853. He is a son of Jacob and Kate (Wagner) Seelinger. The former died in Texas, in the year of 1871, at the age of 45 years. He was a brother-in-law of Capt. Frank Wagner, a survivor of the late war. Joseph was reared in Erie county, and at an early age went to New Jersey, remaining a few years, and later, after a four years' residence in Texas, he returned to Erie county, where he has since resided. Following are the children of Jacob and Kate Seelinger: Joseph, Eveline, Kate, wife of Edward Barron, of McKean; Frank, of Erie; Anna, wife of William Zimmerman, of Erie; F. D. and John, of Erie. Joseph Seelinger was married May 3, 1882, to Philinena, daughter of Peter Kutz, of Mill Creek township. Mrs. Louisa (Meyer) Kutz, mother of Mrs. Seelinger, was a native of Germany. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Seelinger are: William, Joseph and George. Mr. Seelinger manages a milk route in the city of Erie, is a member of the C. M. B. A., and of St. Joseph's Church. He is a Democrat in politics, and a highly esteemed citizen.

Henry Sherner, farmer, Mill Creek township, postoffice Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., came to this county and settled in West Mill Creek township in 1848, and is a son of William Sherner, a native of Germany, who lived and died in his native county. Henry is the eldest of a family of eight children, as follows: Veight (deceased), Frederika (deceased), William, resident of Ohio; Lewis, living in Illinois; Lena (deceased), Conrad, Henry and Lottie, living in McKean township. Mr. Sherner's children are: Henry, Matilda, wife of George Stell; William, living in West Mill Creek; and Charles Sherner, Mr. Sherner has struggled successfully with life's battles, and gained a competency. He is a member of the German Lutheran Church, Erie. Mr. Sherner participated in the German war in 1847.

Ira Hamilton, farmer, Mill Creek township, post-office Kearsarge, was born in 1860, in LeBeauf township, where he spent his early days. He is a son of John and Lorinda (Pooley) Hamilton, natives of Pennsylvania. They reared a family of six children: Samuel, LeRoy, William, Albert, Ira and Charles L. Ira married Amy Augusta, daughter of Chauncey J. Moore, of Elk county, Pennsylvania, in 1881, and to this union have been born four children: Pearl, Jeanette, Helena and Hazel. Ira E. Hamilton started in life in LeBeauf township, where he lived for eight years, removed to Waterford township in 1883, and to Sterrett farm in Mill Creek township in 1894. John Hamilton, father of Ira, enlisted in the late war where he died. Mr. Hamilton has been an energetic and progressive pioneer.

Andrew Bruder, farmer, Mill Creek township, postoffice Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born in the city of Erie, in 1853, son of Andrew Bruder, who settled in Mill Creek township in 1839. He was a native of Rensselaer county, New York. Andrew is the second in a family of six children, as follows: L. L., Andrew, Joseph, Frank, My (deceased), Anna (deceased). Andrew Bruder married his first wife Katie, daughter of Anthony McGuire, a native of Erie, who died in 1894. In 1895 he married Jennie, daughter of John Sedelmeyer, of Erie. Mr. Bruder, for eight years prior to 1894, carried on an extensive dairy business in the city of Erie. He is now located on a fine farm of fifty acres, near the southern border of West Mill Creek township, and is a most genial and energetic citizen. He is a member of St. Mary's Church, Erie.

Jacob Kocher, sr., farmer, Mill Creek township, is a native of Germany, and was born in 1838, son of Benedict and Anna (Murry) Kocher, who spent their lives in Germany. The former died at the age of 79 years and the latter at 83. Nine children were born to this union, as follows: Benedict, who died in Germany; Anna (deceased), wife of Rudolph Bithermund; Magdalena (deceased), wife of Abraham Bithermund; Nicholas; John, a resident of Pittsburg, Pa.; Mary, Jacob and Rosanna, wife of Fred Southley. Jacob Kocher was married September 27, 1864, to Caroline, daughter of John Bothner, a native of Germany. She died August 7, 1890, at the age of 56 years. They had eight children: Adolph, Anna, now the wife of William Fagan; Fred, Jacob, Margaret, now the wife of Fred Fagan; Emma, Edith and Charles. Mr. Kocher owned a grist mill near where he now resides and had full charge of the same for twenty-six years. This he sold to Wesley Newton in 1892 and has since devoted his interests to farming. He has a model farm of fifty acres, which he has had the satisfaction of developing from its primitive condition to its present state of cultivation. Mr. Kocher has had a successful career financially since his first undertaking in this country, which dates September 20, 1864, when he entered the employ of Thomas Love, near where he now resides.

William Bolkey, miller, West Mill Creek, Erie county, Pa., was born March 12, 1839, son of Henry and Hannah (Mining) Bolkey (deceased), natives of Germany, who came to America and settled in Erie county, near West Mill Creek, in 1840. William Bolkey is the eldest of a family of four children: William, John, Henry (deceased), Sears (deceased). December 11, 1861, Mr. Bolkey was married to Mrs. Mary Zimmer, widow of Jacob Zimmer, and daughter of Phillip Royer, of Mill Creek township. Her mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Cede. Twenty-one years of their life was spent in LeBeauf township and their last days in Mill Creek township. The children of William Bolkey are: Lydia, the wife of Grant Thompson, Mill Creek; J. D., of Mill Creek; Leonard, Erie, and L. H., at home. Mr. Bolkey has been in the milling business since 1870 and in his present location since 1875, where he operates a lumber, shingle, feed and jelly mill. He has established himself in the confidence of a generous public. Mr. Bolkey is a member of the Knights of Honor, A. O. U. W., E. A. U. and the State Police.

W. S. Corbett, general merchant, Erie, Pa., is a native of Canada. He is a son of John and Margaret (Ball) Corbett, and was born in Kingston, Ontario. They resided in Frontanac county, Ontario, for many years, and reared a family of four children, as follows: W. S., William, Mrs. J. C. Hardy, Emma and John, residents of Ontario. In June, 1890, Mr. W. S. Corbett married Miss Louis, daughter of Eustice (deceased) and Caroline Diety, of Erie. Two children have been born to this union: Caroline, Louise and William Joseph. Mrs. Diety survives and resides in the city of Erie. They had a family of three children: Louise, wife of W. S. Corbett; Joseph L. and Philip W. Diety, of Erie. Mr. Corbett went to Rochester, N. Y., at the age of 16 years; soon after he was employed as clerk for Sibley, Lindsley & Carr, dry goods merchants in Seneca Falls, N. Y. He came to Erie and opened the Boston Store of Mack & Spittle, and later accepted a position as floor-walker and next as general manager for Trask, Prescott & Richardson, Erie. This was in 1889. He returned to Ontario that year and took charge of his brother's business until the spring of 1891, when he again came to Erie and bought the property he now occupies and engaged in the mercantile trade, which he has since carried on successfully, enjoying the confidence of the public. Mr. Corbett is a man of fidelity and enterprise.

Henry Heidecker, farmer, Erie, Pa., was born in Belle Valley, Erie county, January 16, 1861, son of Jacob and Barbara (Streit) Heidecker, for many years a resident of Erie county. Jacob Heidecker died September 23, 1891, at the age of 65 years. He served as a soldier in the German army. His widow still survives and resides in Greene township. The former was born in Germany in 1825, and coming to Erie county lived for many years in Greene township. They reared a family of five children, as follows: Elizabeth, wife of Conrad Sommers, Erie; Jacob E., resident of Greene township; William H., Greene township, and Barbara Heidecker, Erie. In 1883 Henry married Mary Ann, daughter of Nicholas Deitsch, of Mill Creek. To this union have been born three children, as follows: Mary A., William H., and Henry L. Heidecker. Mr. Heidecker from 1884 to 1894 was in the employ of D. D. Tracy on his farm on the Lake road, and has been manager of the farm now occupied by him and owned by J. C. Zuck since 1894. Mr. Heidecker is a man of integrity and an energetic and progressive farmer.

George Stough, of West Mill Creek, one of Erie county's oldest and most prominent farmers, was born in Erie county, on the farm which he now owns, July 31, 1814. He is a son of John and Polly (Eagley) Stough. The former was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, came to Erie county in 1805, and settled in Mill Creek township, locating upon the present farm, which he owned and occupied, and in a log cabin he reared a large family. Mrs. Stough was a descendant of the well-known Eagley family, whose history is so interwoven with the growth and development of Erie county. John Stough departed this life March 14, 1888, surviving his wife, who died April 10, 1853. She was a sister of Daniel Eagley, the last survivor now living in Springfield township of this noted family. The children of Mr. John Stough were as follows: George, Barbara, widow of John Wolf; Peter, of McKean township; Mary, deceased wife of Samuel Flickinger; Susan, deceased wife of John W. Rubner; John and Katherine (twins), both deceased, the latter at the age of 22 years, and a resident of Mill Creek township; Rebecca (died in infancy); William, a resident of Girard; Margaret, deceased wife of John Minning; Sophia (deceased in her 16th year), Lydia, now living on the homestead farm, where she was housekeeper for her father until his death; Nancy (deceased). John Stough, when he first came to Erie county, was accompanied by his father, Nicholas Stough, and they jointly built the log house, which was occupied for nearly three generations, when it gave way to a modern structure. John Stough's brother, George, was a veteran of the war of 1812. George Stough, jr., was reared amid primitive surroundings, and as a pioneer has seen Mill Creek emerge from a dense forest into one of the garden spots of the county, aiding to hew the timber of the wooded section, and bring the locality into its present state of cultivation and prosperity. Mr. Stough received his education in the public schools of the township, and has always resided where he is now enjoying the evening of a well-spent life, a citizen, honored, respected and beloved by all with whom he has associated. He is one of the few older residents now remaining in his native township, and relates with accuracy events of the early days. He was never married, and remained under the parental roof until the death of his father, when he came in possession of the homestead, and by diligence and enterprise is now the possessor of a fine farm with desirable modern surroundings. He built a comfortable home in 1877. In politics Mr. Stough was a Whig, and later a Republican. It is the good fortune of but few men to live to so ripe an age; fewer still in the vicissitudes of life are able to hold throughout a long life the old homestead with its endearing memories, and spend the closing years of a well-spent life amid their childhood scenes and surroundings.

Albert F. Harding, one of the young and progressive farmers of Mill Creek township, Erie county, Pa., son of George Frederick and Anna M. (Young) Harding, the former a native of Germany, was born March 19, 1860. George F. Harding, father of Albert, came to Erie county forty years ago, and followed his vocation, that of blacksmithing and farming. He died April 17, 1875, at the age of 51 years. His widow still survives, and is living in McKean township. She is a native of Northampton county, Pennsylvania, and for several years resided in Crawford county. The children of this union are: Gertrude, wife of William Hemme, of Erie county, Pennsylvania; Albert F., George P., of Erie; John, Elizabeth, wife of Harry Flaugh; Anna, wife of William Nye, McKean township, and Ida Harding, of McKean. Albert F. was married to Miss Maggie Pearson, who died in 1890. In 1892 he was married to Minnie Depka, who came from Germany in 1891. Two children have been born to this union: Anna Mabel and George Frederick. Mr. Harding spent his life in Erie county, where he was reared and educated in the common schools, and at present resides in Mill Creek township. In politics he is a Republican. Mr. and Mrs. Harding are members of the Lutheran Church.

August Henry Schaper, contractor and builder, Erie, Pa., was born in Hanover, Germany, December 1, 1849. It was during this year that his father, George Schaper, died, and soon after his mother emigrated to America, bringing two sons, A. H. and Ferdinand, of Ontario. Her maiden name was Caroline Schaper, and she now resides in West Mill Creek township. February 28, 1870, Mr. Schaper was married to Mary, daughter of George and Susana (Barton) Schneider. Mr. and Mrs. Schneider both died in Mill Creek township. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Schaper are: Charles H., Susana, who died at the age of 21 years; George Frederick, Christian Edward, Anna M., Ida, Emma, Thomas H., Bertha, Mary, Gustave P., Loretta, who died January 20, 1885, at the age of 3 years and 10 months, and Alveretta. Mr. Schaper enlisted in the United States navy in May, 1864, and served until the close of the Rebellion. He was with the U. S. S. "General Thomas," upper Tennessee fleet, which was composed of four boats: "The Grant," "Sherman," "Thomas" and "Burnside," the last being the flagship. The principal action in which Mr. Schaper took part was Hood's defeat, while there were other notable skirmishes; one in which fifteen shells were fired through the box at Decatur, Ala., October 26-29, 1864. Mr. Schaper began his present trade in 1871, and soon after formed a partnership with George Buhl in the milling business, and, in 1881, erected Schaper's Mills. This firm existed until 1892, when Mr. Buhl's interest was purchased by Mr. Schaper, who is an extensive contractor and builder of churches, houses, barns, bridges, etc., including the large addition to St. John's German Evangelical Lutheran and Reformed Church in 1895-6, and is the possessor of a fine property, including 100 acres of choice land, upon which are thirty acres of vineyard. Mr. A. H. Schaper is truly a self-made man; beginning without a dollar he has made his way in the world. He is an enterprising and respected citizen. In politics he is a Republican.

George Buhl, planing-mills, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., son of Godfred and Rachael (Fainer) Buhl, natives of Germany, was born in Summit township, Erie county, March 12, 1844. Godfred Buhl came to Erie county in the spring of 1842, and lived upon a farm in Summit township, where he spent the latter years of an active life, and died in August, 1857, at the age of 55 years. George Buhl was the fifth of a family of seven children, as follows: Barbara, wife of Philip Honecker; Mary, wife of Michael Laver; Elizabeth, wife of Anthony Serr (deceased); George, Christian, and Polly (deceased), formerly the wife of Frank Brown. George was married in 1873 to Miss Caroline Breckle. Two children have been born to this union: Edward, who died in infancy, and George Buhl. Mr. Buhl began to learn his trade in 1866, and in the year 1874 formed a co-partnership with A. H. Schaper, contractor and builder, and conducted a large and successful milling business. In 1881 this firm built the saw and planing-mill in the south central part of West Mill Creek township, which has since been operated, mostly under the personal supervision of Mr. Buhl, whose superior workmanship has given the best of satisfaction to a large patronage. Since 1893 Mr. Schaper has had full control of the mill, he having purchased Mr. Buhl's interest, but at the same time appreciating his work by retaining his services as foreman. He is a highly respected and an influential citizen in the neighborhood in which he resides.

Henry Neubauer

Levi P. Waidley, miller, Erie, Pa., was born in West Mill Creek township, September 13, 1859. He is a descendant of one of the oldest families of his native township, son of Pressly W. and Margaret (Doll) Waidley, the latter a native of Germany, and the former born in Erie county. They reside in Mill Creek township; the latter came to Erie county at the age of 3 years, accompanied by her parents, where she has since resided. They reared a family of eight children, as follows: Martha, of McKean township; Barbara, at home; Levi P., George, of Erie; Margaret, of Charleston, W. Va.; John, of Erie; William and Harvey, at home. Levi P. Waidley was married August 17, 1885, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of John Metzler, of Mill Creek township. This union has been blessed with two bright children, Clyde and Earl. Mr. Waidley first operated a 100-acre farm, and then he began the milling business, erected a mill in the southwest corner of West Mill Creek township in 1893, and has successfully operated the same, carrying on a thriving business. He is also the possessor of a fine timber tract of forty-six acres, which he has conducted for four years. In 1895 Mr. Waidley, with commendable enterprise, erected a handsome residence near his mill, and has removed the dense timber surrounding it, reminding one of similar work done by our forefathers. Mr. Waidley is one of the energetic, progressive citizens of his township, who demonstrates that he has a keen interest in his surroundings.

Lewis W. Olds, of the Olds Pump Company, Erie, was born in East Mill Creek, Erie county, Pa., July 21, 1822, son of Asa Gilbert Olds, a native of Alstead, N. H., born November 15, 1793, and who when a child was taken to Williamstown, Vt., where he resided until the spring of 1816, when he came to East Mill Creek, Erie county, Pa. Here he died December 8, 1871. He married April 17, 1821, Lucy Church, a native of Winchester, Conn., who bore him five children, viz.: Lewis W., Nelson, Erskine, Clarissa E.

and Emily J. John Church, father of Lucy (Church) Olds, enlisted when eighteen years of age in the Patriot army at Saybrook, Conn., and went with Arnold to the siege of Quebec in 1776. He was present at the battle of Saratoga, and assisted Arnold off his horse when there wounded. Lewis W. Olds received a part of his early education in a small log school-house in the country with a slab bench for a seat. He finished his academic course at the Erie Academy, and was married in Erie May 9, 1848, to Louisa E. Ackerly, born in Middletown, N. Y., March 11, 1826. To this union was born Inez L. Clark (whose personal history is contained in this volume), Nettie, Phila, William C., Florence and Charlotte Marion. Mr. Olds commenced the manufacture of pumps in East Mill Creek in 1844, and moved his pump works to Erie in 1853, and was the first man in the United States, and probably in the world, to reduce the old log pump to an article of commerce, and he stood in the front ranks of manufacturers ever since. Mr. Olds has contributed in a material way to the substantial growth of Erie by the erection of a number of handsome dwelling-houses and several large business and manufacturing blocks. He has held the offices of poor director and assessor, the duties of which he discharged with marked ability.

John Avery Tracy was born April 7, 1829, at Mt. Morris, N. Y. His father was Jedediah Tracy, who came from Norwich, Conn.; his grandfather was John Avery Tracy, and his great-grandfather (John Avery) came from England. Jedediah Tracy was married to Dorcas Cothrell at Victor, N. Y., in 1809. Fourteen children were born to them, but only seven lived to maturity; of these John Avery was the fifth child and eldest son. He came to Pennsylvania with his father's family in 1833, locating at Erie, Pa. As the family was large and means quite limited, John Avery early learned to depend upon his own efforts for support, and while this developed independence of character and self-reliance, it deprived him of education so much needed. At the early age of 14 he not only supported himself, but contributed to the support of the family as well, and this he continued to do throughout his entire life. While quite a young man he learned the carpenter's trade, working during his apprenticeship on a number of buildings in Erie, one of which is the house on West Sixth street so long occupied by Capt. Douglass Ottinger, and later by George Selden, and now, after having been quite transformed, by George D. Selden. Mr. Tracy did not continue in the carpenter business, but found the knowledge he had acquired useful to him through all his life. His first real business venture was in the paper mill at Manchester, near Erie. After quite a successful experience there he embarked in the mercantile business at Fairview, Pa., about 1845. January 5, 1847, he married Marie E. Ensign, of Kelloggsville, Ashtabula county, O., whose father, William Ensign, and mother, Sarah (Pierce) Ensign, came to Ohio in 1816 from Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and whose ancestors were also English. About 1850 Mr. Tracy sold his business in Fairview and went into the lumber and sawmill business on the Lake road, at what is known as Fairplain. About 1854, having been quite successful in his business ventures, he decided to remove to Cleveland and take up banking and commission business; in this he was quite successful for several years, but met with some heavy losses which finally compelled him to abandon this business in 1860. He then removed with his family, consisting of his wife and two daughters, Kate and Carrie, to Clinton, Pa., as manager of the coal business of John Hearn & Co., of Erie. In 1863 Mr. Tracy left Clinton, as his home there was broken up by the death of two children, Kate, aged 12, and Tillie, aged five months, and his wife. He accepted the position of purchasing agent for the Erie and Pittsburg R. R., with office at Erie. In 1870 the Canada Southern R. R. was projected, and Mr. Tracy was chosen to buy the right-of-way for this road, a task he was peculiarly fitted for. Meantime Mr. Tracy and William L. Scott had purchased a tract of 2,800 acres of timber land in Erie and Crawford counties, intending to erect a charcoal furnace, but owing to changed conditions of business this furnace was not built, and later most of the land was sold. Mr. Tracy retained about 400 acres of this timber land, added 700 acres of good farm land to it and established a stock farm. He succeeded in getting a station, postoffice and sawmill at his farm, and named the place Penseide. After finishing his work with the Canada Southern, he had general supervision of the building of the Scott Block in Erie, and purchased the right-of-way for the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk R. R. Mr. Tracy now made his home with his daughter, Carrie, who married Mr. H. F. Watson in 1877, but spent a large portion of his time at his farm at Penseide, finding much pleasure in raising fine horses and aiding in the growth of the place. Here he died on June 4, 1893. His remains were conveyed to his Erie home and from there they were transferred to a place beside his wife in the Erie cemetery. Mr. Tracy's second daughter, Hattie, died in 1853; the third daughter, Carrie, still survives. John Avery Tracy was a man of much strength of character. While he held decided views upon the important questions of the day, he did not force his views upon others. In politics he was always a staunch Republican. His honor and integrity were unquestioned. His kind, warm heart and genial disposition gained him the title of "Uncle John" wherever he was known. To children especially he was a devoted friend, and no one, young or old, ever sought his aid in vain if they were deserving. His life throughout was useful, earnest, upright, simple and unpretentious.

Moses Koch (deceased). Among the prominent business men of Erie who early took an active part in the development of the city was the late Moses Koch. He was born in Bierstadt, in the beautiful Rhine country (Rhein Pfalz), December 26, 1811, and was one of four brothers. His father, David Koch, served with distinction in the wars against Napoleon in 1814, and was promoted to the rank of lieutenant for his gallantry at the battle of Leipzig. He was also the owner of large soap works, and our subject spent the last year of his life in Germany in his father's factory. At the age of twenty he determined to seek his fortunes in the new world. On his arrival in this country he settled in Pine Grove, Schuylkill county, and engaged in mercantile pursuits. He finally came to Erie in the early forties and opened a dry goods store in what was then called the Hughes' block, corner of Seventh and State streets. Later he purchased the property on the southeast corner of Fifth and French streets, erecting thereon a large and substantial brick block, in which he carried on an extensive business for many years, one store being devoted to dry goods—in fact was the largest dry goods store in Erie—and the other store was for men's clothing and furnishing goods. Mr. Koch remained in business there until about 1854 when he sold the building and stocks of goods to the Hon. M. B. Lowry. That corner was the scene of considerable hospitality, during, and prior, to the war of 1812. Colonel Forster, a prominent citizen of that day, residing there with his family. In tearing down the old structure—a large log house—preparatory to building many were the relics found there, such as China, packages of old letters, etc., some being walled in the fireplaces. Mr. Koch also erected several other large and expensive buildings and in many other ways contributed to the improvement and advancement of the city, subscribing liberally whenever called upon. He remained in active business, changing his location several times, until 1878, when failing health obliged him to retire, and he spent the remainder of his life in promoting the pleasure of his family. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and served several consecutive terms in the City Councils. He was a Democrat and, though not a politician, was always extremely loyal to the party, voting the "straight ticket" to the day of his death. He died September 2, 1881, leaving many monuments to testify to his usefulness and worth. Possessed of a vigorous constitution and an active mind and body. Mr. Koch wore himself out in his many business undertakings. He was conspicuous for his enterprise, perseverance, and excellent judgment. Shortly before coming to Erie he was married to Miss Matilda Marshall Ulanin, who is of English descent through her mother and comes of exceedingly good stock. Her grandmother was the beautiful and witty Miss Isabelle Marshall who came to this country many years ago with her father's family, married here and died at an advanced age leaving numerous descendants. To Mr. and Mrs. Koch were born seven children, one of whom died in infancy. The eldest son, Simon C., now resides in London, England, but spends the greater part of his time on the Continent. He was formerly in business in Calcutta, where he amassed his great wealth, and he was there noted for his great generosity in public and private charity, many an impecunious Englishman being indebted to his kindness for his return to his native country. In private life he is exceedingly unpretentious. Marcus, the youngest son, is still in business in his adopted country, Calcutta. October 25, 1892, he married Miss Phoebe Lane, niece of Mr. J. H. Addison, of Saxlingham Hall, Norfolk, England, and they have as issue one son, Marcus Addison, born October 6, 1893.

Thomas L. Wilkins, keeper of the Presque Isle lighthouse, Erie, Pa., is a native of Erie county, and was born March 7, 1862. He is a son of John and Eveline (Keller) Wilkins. The former was born in the city of Erie in 1810, and died February 25, 1870. The latter was born in Rochester, N. Y., and now resides at the Presque Isle lighthouse with her son. T. L. Wilkins is the youngest of a family of six children, as follows: Melvina, who died April 23, 1870; Louise, of Chicago; Laura, of Chicago; George, of Erie; Charles, of Columbus, Ohio, and Thomas. Thomas Wilkins, grandfather of T. L. Wilkins, was a native of Shippensburg, Pa. He was at one time clerk for county commissioners. Mrs. Wilkins, the mother, is a daughter of Thomas Keller, a native of Virginia. She was married to Mr. Wilkins in 1846, and lived in Erie and vicinity until the death of her husband. T. L. Wilkins entered the employ of the government June 3, 1889, as assistant keeper to Capt. Robert Hunter, of the Pier Head lighthouse. October 6, 1892, he was promoted to the position of keeper of the Presque Isle light, which position he has since held, discharging his duties with the utmost care and satisfaction. Many improvements about the grounds indicate that a wise choice was made in the selection of Mr. Wilkins for this responsible charge.

Captain Robert Hunter, lighthouse keeper, Presque Isle Pier Head Light Station, Erie, was born in Scotland. He was married to Miss Margaret McCarty, a native of Ireland, December 15, 1859. He enlisted in the United States navy in 1860, and served during the late rebellion, receiving his discharge in 1866. From this date until 1874 he sailed vessels in the merchant service on the northern lakes. He was appointed keeper of the Presque Isle Pier Head Light in 1886, since which time he has been the instigator of numerous improvements about the station. This is an important point for the passage of boats to and from the Erie Harbor, and many changes have been made since he assumed charge. The lights have been arranged at various points three times, and the pier extended 900 feet. The assistant is John W. Reddy, who was appointed in 1894. Captain Hunter is one of the most courteous and obliging of the government's employes, and is a man thoroughly versed in matters pertaining to the marine service.

W. H. Shue, farmer, West Mill Creek postoffice, was born in McKean township April 10, 1844, son of Jacob and Anna (Rhodes) Shue. The former was born December 25, 1812, in York county, Pennsylvania, and came to Erie county with an uncle, Mr. Hinkle, in 1828. He died July 14, 1877. The latter was a daughter of Jacob Rhodes, and died October 23, 1883, at the age of 73. At the time of her death she possessed a German Bible over 100 years old, the property at one time of her great-grandfather. Mr. Shue is the second son of a family of four children, viz.: John, married to Margaret Waidley; William H., Jacob C. (deceased) and Tillie (deceased), November 21, 1889. W. H. Shue married Caroline, daughter of Joel and Rosanna Weigle, of Mill Creek township. To this union has been born a daughter, Rosanna. Mr. Shue is a thorough farmer, a respected citizen, and resides on a farm of 136 acres, one of the best in Mill Creek township. He is a school director and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Jacob Geist, farmer, Erie, Pa., came to Erie county with his father in 1835, and settled in Mill Creek township, a greater part of which was then in an early stage of cultivation. He was born November 30, 1817, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and is a son of Andrew and Nancy (Becker) Geist, who, during the greater part of their lives, lived on a farm on the Ridge road. Jacob is the eldest of a family as follows: Jacob, Betsey (deceased), wife of Jacob Butt; Daniel, Andrew (deceased), Isaac (deceased), Nancy (deceased), wife of Jacob Butt; Samuel, and Mary, wife of Jacob Birst. Mr. Geist was married in February, 1846, to Mary, daughter of Joseph Evans (deceased), and to this union were born twelve children, viz.: Mary A., wife of Jacob Zahn, have four children (George W., Kate M., Luell, Cora V.); Thomas (deceased), Daniel (deceased), Levi (deceased), Matilda, Frank, John, Lomisa (deceased), Clara E., Alvin, married to Florence B. Nason; and Edward. Mr. Geist died August 5, 1879, at the age of 64 years. Mr. Geist, although having passed the active duties of farm life, is as vigorous as the average man who began later in the century. He is located upon a large farm in the south central part of Mill Creek township.

John A. Hinkle, farmer, Erie, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township, in which he now resides, in 1886. He is a son of Amos and Elizabeth (Weiss) Hinkle; the former a native of York county, Pennsylvania, and the latter of Mill Creek township. Amos Hinkle was born July 28, 1822, son of Andrew and Catherine (Shue) Hinkle, who came from York county, Pennsylvania to this county in 1816, where they resided many years. They were parents of nine children: William, Amos, Catherine, John (deceased), Agulla and Priscilla, twins, Elizabeth, Jacob and Henry. Amos, father of John, was married May 7, 1846, to Elizabeth, daughter of Jacob Weiss, the first miller in Erie county, and who came here in 1801, settling on the homestead farm, which joins the one now owned and occupied by Mr. John Hinkle. He was the parent of three sons and two daughters, of whom Elizabeth, mother of Mr. John Hinkle, was the fourth. John Hinkle is the youngest of a family of three children, viz.: Amanda (deceased), wife of L. Mong, had five children: Jacob, married, have three children; and John A. Hinkle September 13, 1887. Mr. John Hinkle was married to Ella N., daughter of John and Margaret (Long) Shue. To this union has been born three children: Endre, Leroy, Howard, John and Merle Hinkle. Mr. Hinkle began farming in 1887, and owns a valuable farm of eighty-two acres, near the southwest corner of Mill Creek township.

John R. Shue, farmer, Erie, Pa., was born October 30, 1842, in Mill Creek township, son of Jacob and Anna (Rhodes) Shue. The former was a native of York county, Pennsylvania, where he was born December 25, 1812, and died in 1877. The latter was born in Lancaster county, and died October 21, 1893, aged 72 years. They were the parents of four children, viz.: John K., William H., Jacob C. (deceased), and Tillie L. (deceased). August 23, 1866, Mr. John R. Shue married Miss Margaret E. Waidley, of the well-known Waidley family, of whom further mention is made in this sketch. Children of this union are: W. Wallace and Edith B., wife of John Steva, of Erie. Mr. Shue was in the United States navy during 1864-5. He has been on a farm, located in the southwest corner of Mill Creek township, since 1884; has served as school director, and is an influential and active citizen. The name of the first known ancestor of the Waidley family, of which Mrs. Shue is one of the descendants, was Christian, an artist, who did service in the Revolutionary war. His family consisted of John, George, Christian, William, Henry, Polly, who became Mrs. Thomas Willis, and Betsey, who became Mrs. J. Diefenbaugh. Christian died in Lancaster county in 1810. In 1823 his sons, Christian, George and Mr.

Willis, with their families, together with a family named Brecht, came to Waterford to settle on a government claim; but upon reaching there found it had been settled twenty-one years. George then came to Fairview township and worked in the Manchester Mills, receiving $5 per month. Next he worked in the Walnut Creek Mills, and afterwards in Bear's Mill. In 1820 he purchased a farm now owned by Mr. Love, and in 1822 became owner of a farm in McKean township, now owned by John Weible, at a consideration of $150, where he lived until his death, at the age of 73 years. His widow, Fanny (Fralich) Waidley, died two years later. Their family consisted of Jacob, Henry, Adam, Israel, Rachael, Rosanna, George, Mary, Fanny and Franklin, who died in childhood. Christian, a joiner, came to South Erie, and for three months lived in a dry goods box. He afterwards settled on the farm where he died. His children were: Daniel, Samuel, Benjamin, Christian, Mary Ann, Haggerty, Eliza, Platz, Matilda Galutia, and Lucy Feidler. Another brother, John, came two years later, and settled on a farm in McKean township, now owned by his son, William Waidley, where his death occurred many years later. His children were: William, Solomon, Maria, Nelson and Mary Focht. Solomon died in childhood. William, another brother, remained in Lancaster. Henry also remained there. His children were: Levi, Henry, Norman, George, Susan, William, Sally and Emma. Polly Waidley, a sister, who accompanied George and Christian to Erie county, settled on the Ridge road. She married Thomas Willis. Their children were: Edward, Frank, Matilda, Grant and Martha McCreary. Mrs. Willis died in 1840. Jacob, the eldest of George's family, was born in 1815. In 1856 he married Martha Wise. Their children were: Presley, Caroline, who died in girlhood; Eliza, who died early; Noah, Elame, Isaiah, Susan, Jacob and Joseph. Henry, next oldest of George's family, was born in 1817. He died in 1874, and his wife in 1880. Their children were: Elias and William, who resides in Michigan. Adam was born in 1818; married Betsey Minning. He died in 1876; his wife in 1884. Their children were: Martha (deceased), Leah, Fanny, Susan and Nancy. Israel, born in 1821, married Christina Rubner in 1845. He died in 1871. Their family were: James (deceased), Margaret, Edward (deceased), and Albert (deceased). Rosanna, born 1842, married Uras Schluraff. She died in 1878; he died in 1885. Their children were: Levi, Jennie, Delphana (deceased), George and Frank. Rachael, born in 1826, married in 1852 to Jacob Metzler. Their issue, one child, Martha, is now Mrs. George Raw. George, born in 1830, married Harriet Russell in 1854. Their children were: Thomas, Mary E., Martha, Isaac, Charles, Robert and Frank. Mary, born in 1838, married Mr. Frank Weibler. Their children were: Ella, Clara, Rose (deceased), Charles, Florence, Frank, Minnie, Tessie and Roy. Fanny, born in 1856, married Levi Bear in 1864. Their children are: Jessie, Lester (deceased), George, Clinton, May, Roy and Norman. Daniel, the eldest of Christian's family, married Betsey Long (both deceased). Their children were: Aaron and Anna. Anna married Isaac Kaufman the issue, one child, Aaron, married Ida Daugherty; they have four children; Aaron married Rebecca Miller (their children were: Minnie, now the wife of Mr. Aller; children: Sarah, George, Clyde, Charles and Ida); Mary Ann, another of Christian's family, married Hugh Haggerty; Matilda, married Mr. Galutia; she died in 1887; children: Theodore, married a daughter of Joseph Mathews; children: Minnie, Edith, Evalena and Herbert.

John Frederick Spahr, farmer, Erie, Pa., was born in Germany in 1848, came to America when a mere lad and later to Erie county and located in Greene township. He is a son of John and Eva Magdelena (Wolf) Spahr. They both died in Germany, the former in 1861, at the age of 73 years, and the latter in 1880, at the age of 64 years. John Frederick is the youngest of a family of five children, viz.: John, Charles, Wilhelmina, Louise, wife of Christian Kraft, and John Frederick. All are residents of Germany except the last named. October 22, 1867, Mr. Spahr was married to Mary (Gotleiban) Miller, a native of Germany. This union has been blessed with five children, as follows: Charles Frederick, carpenter, Mill Creek; Mary Louise; Bertha M., wife of Delroy Hutchinson, one child, Frederick Allan; Katherine Caroline and Rose Martha Spahr. Mr. Spahr by thrift, energy and close attention to farming pursuits has within the few years since locating in Erie county gained a competency. He has superintended his present farm since 1890. He owns fifty acres of choice land in Greene township.

William H. Stratton, farmer, Erie, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township September 22, 1850, son of Joseph and Mary (Schuel) Stratton. They were natives of England, and the former died in 1892, aged 77 years, the latter March 1, 1886. Mr. Stratton was the fourth of a family of five children, viz.: Elizabeth, wife of Henry Grass; Ellen, wife of John Fink; Irene, wife of Charles Caldwell, of Washington; William H., and Joseph (deceased). February 4, 1873, Mr. William H. Stratton was married to Emma, daughter of Andrew and Martha Scibert Geist (the former deceased). The Geist family came from Lancaster, Pa., at quite an early day and settled on the Ridge road, near where the county alms house now stands. This was about 1832-5. The first family came with a four-horse team and a one-horse carriage. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Stratton are: Charles, Lizzie, Harry L., Arthur, Anna, Viola, Alice, Luella and Maud May. Joseph E. Stratton, brother of William H., was in the late war. He was a member of Co. K, 145th Regt., P. V. I. He was taken prisoner at Andersonville, and died in 1866. Mr. Stratton owns a choice farm of 120 acres, situated on an elevated spot two and one-half miles from the city of Erie, and is one of the most thorough farmers of the township. Mr. and Mrs. Stratton are members of the English Lutheran Church.

George F. Spath, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born October 10, 1863, in the city of Erie. He is a son of Frank X. and Catherine (Peiffer) Spath, natives of Germany. Frank A. Spath came to America with his parents at the age of 4 years. He first resided in Greene township; from thence he went to Summit, thence to Mill Creek, and for the past few years has resided in the city of Erie. He is the sixth of a family of nine children, as follows: Charles, Teresa, Katherine, wife of Simon Leisch; Helen, wife of William Kent; Mary, wife of Fred Wild; George F.; Rosa, wife of John Bergie; Sophia, wife of Michael Notch, and Phena (deceased), wife of John Pietz. May 8, 1889,

Mr. Spath married Elizabeth, daughter of Conrad Hoffman, of Mill Creek township. To this union has been born one child, Martha. Mr. Spath is the second of a family of eight children, viz.: Celia, Elizabeth (wife of Mr. Spath), Margaret, Martha, Kate, Minnie, Josie and Edith. Mr. Spath has but recently begun on a fine farm of 100 acres, situated near Walnut Creek, and has by persistent industry brought the same to a fine state of cultivation. He is a practical and progressive farmer and a citizen of integrity and worth.

Herbert Tong, florist, Massassauga Garden, Mill Creek township, postoffice Erie, was born in Kent, England, January 15, 1850, and was the first of the Tong family to come to Erie county. He is a son of William and Mary (Smith) Tong; the former died in England, when Herbert was but an infant, and the latter is now living in the city of Erie, at the age of 73 years. They had three sons, viz.: William, now resident of Kent, England; James, of Westfield, Chautauqua county, N. Y., and Herbert, who was married in England, January 2, 1880, to Mary Jane Harris, a native of England. She is a daughter of James and Elizabeth Harris, for many years residents of Ripley, Chautauqua county, N. Y. The former died in 1880, at the age of 70 years. Six children have been born to this union, only two of whom are living: Elizabeth and Mary Ann. The deceased children are: William, Thomas, Herbert Charles and Nellie Alma. Mr. Tong began as superintendent and manager of W. L. Scott's Massassauga Garden in 1883, which position he still holds. During his management numerous improvements and tropical methods for raising European grapes the year round have been adopted, and successfully carried out. No better and more modern vinery can be found in this part of the United States. As a florist Mr. Tong has achieved success out of the ordinary line, and has carried to perfection many original plans and ideas. His greatest success has been in the raising of new varieties of chrysanthemum. Many of the best varieties now in commerce were raised at Massassauga Garden by Mr. Tong.

Joseph Haas, jr., superintendent of Trinity Cemetery, postoffice Erie, was born in Erie county, February 28, 1856. Mr. Haas is a son of Joseph Haas, sr., who was born in Roth, Merkenheim, Wertenberg, who came to Erie county from Germany about 1850, and who had charge of Trinity Cemetery from 1879-87, when he retired, and his son, Joseph, took charge. He died December 23, 1894, at the age of 74. His widow, Elizabeth (Durner) Haas, born in Weilheim, by Kercheim on the Deck, Wirthenberg, is still living at the age of 63. Joseph is the second son of a family of five children, viz.: John, a resident of Colorado; Frank and William M. are residents of Cleveland, Ohio, and Anthony, of Erie. Mr. Joseph Haas was first married to Tressa, daughter of Peter Lavery, of Harbor Creek. By this marriage there were three children: Peter, Mary and Tressa. She died in 1885, and he was afterward married to Lizzie, daughter of Phillip Weschler, of Erie. They have one child, Edith. Since Mr. Haas took charge of the cemetery, in 1886, nine acres additional have been added, opened and improved, under his personal supervision. Trinity Cemetery was first laid out in 1869, and at no time has it undergone greater or more marked improvements than during the past nine years. Mr. Haas is a member of Branch 15, C. M. B. A.

Christian Beckman, grocer, Erie, Pa., was born March 24, 1854, in the city of Erie, son of Henry and Minnie (Kahlen) Beckman, natives of Germany, who first came to America, and located in Erie about the year 1847, where they remained permanently. The former was born October 19, 1817, and is still living in the city of his choice. The latter died March 17, 1872. Christian is the fourth of a family of eight children: Minnie, wife of W. C. Shots, of Erie; Henry (deceased), William, Christian, Fred (deceased), Mary (deceased), Charles (deceased), and Edward, born March 18, 1869. Christian Beckman married Louisa B., daughter of John B. and Mary Ann (Clemmons) Thomas, of Toronto, Ontario. To this union have been born five children: Cecelia Louisa, born January 20, 1881; Edward William, born January 1, 1883; Mabel Minnie, born December 23, 1886; Viola Edna, born February 14, 1889, deceased March 10, 1890, and Christian Max, born April 27, 1891, deceased December 27, 1892. John Belbin Thomas, father of Mrs. Beckman, was born August 20, 1820, in London, England. Mr. Beckman began business, and established the West End grocery in 1885, and by integrity and square dealing built up a prosperous business. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and West Erie Beneficial Association.

W. K. Moorhead, farmer, West Mill Creek, postoffice Erie, was born in Moorheadville, Harbor Creek township, Erie county, son of William and Fanny (Kendrick) Moorhead, the former a native of Erie county, and the latter a native of England, and sister of Thomas Kendrick, a distinguished resident of Moorheadville. James M. Moorhead, grandfather of W. K., came to Erie county in his boyhood days, and with his brothers, located in Harbor Creek township, and became one of the leading citizens. The village of Moorheadville was named in honor of him. He died in 1842, at the age of 82 years. William Moorhead, father of W. K., was born in 1824, and still resides in his native place. Mr. W. K. Moorhead is the eldest child of a family of four children, viz.: William K., Edith, wife of C. E. Leete; Ralph and James Moorhead, all residents of Erie county. September 9, 1886, Mr. Moorhead was married to Ella L., daughter of John and Jane (Campbell) Keeler, of Edinboro, Erie county. He began in the employ of the W. L. Scott estate in 1884, and has been general superintendent of the Frontier Farm since June 9, 1889. He is also superintendent of the several farms belonging to the Scott estate, covering 1,600 acres. Mr. Moorhead is a thorough business man, and most affable in all his dealings. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum.

Joseph Haibach, manager of the Cold Spring Ice Company, Erie, Pa., was born April 14, 1862, in Erie, son of John H. and Maggie (Knauch) Haibach, natives of Germany. The former died in 1881, at the age of 66 years. He came to Erie about 1850, and was for some years extensively engaged in the meat business at No. 922 Parade street. The latter died in 1895, at the age of 76 years. They were the parents of seven children, viz.: Benjamin, Lawrence, Cooney (deceased), George (deceased), Margaret, wife of James Fitzgerald; Joseph and John Haibach. June 27, 1883, Mr. Joseph Haibach married Miss Margaret Cotz, daughter of Mr. Cotz, who died in 1893. His widow, Supena (Hoffman) Cotz, survives, and resides in Erie. Mrs. Haibach, wife of Joseph Haibach, was the eldest of a family of four children: Maggie Katherine, wife of Henry Y. Smith; Amelia, wife of John Boltz; Lizzie, wife of Jacob Wincheimer; Lena, wife of Ferdinand Fetzing, of Cato, Mich. Mr. and Mrs. Haibach have three children, as follows: Joseph (deceased), Helen (deceased) and George Haibach. In 1877 Joseph associated himself in the meat trade with his two brothers, and learned the business. In 1886 he became a partner in the firm of Rindernecht Bros., and continued in the meat business until 1892. The firm was extensively engaged in shipping stock to Eastern markets. In the spring of 1892 Mr. Haibach purchased the plant of the Cold Spring Ice Company, and under his management the business has doubled. Only spring water ice is furnished, which lasts one-half longer than lake ice. Mr. Haibach is a member of the C. M. B. A.

Amos R. Deighton (deceased), born April 15, 1834, died April 15, 1890, son of George and Jane (Mason) Deighton, natives of England, who came to Mill Creek at an early day, and were among the foremost citizens of the locality. September 8, 1864, Mr. Amos Deighton married Franke C., daughter of Sidney and Nancy (Riblet) Sewell, of Harbor Creek. The former was born in 1812 and died January 17, 1891, and the latter survives at the age of 77 years. To them were born seven children: Franke C., Josephine, Eliza J., Sarah A., John R., and Alfred E. Sewell. Mrs. Nancy (Riblet) Sewell was the fifth in a family of six children: Jacob, Eliza, John, David (all deceased); Christian and Nancy (Riblet) Sewell still survive. To George and Jane Deighton were born seven children, as follows: Harriett Jane (deceased), wife of C. W. Nichols; Ruth, unmarried; Lucia (deceased), Jabez (deceased), Amos R. (deceased), Lucindia E., unmarried; Franke C. and Seth Deighton, who was a member of Co. D, 145th Reg., P. V. I., and fell at the battle of Deep Bottom. Mr. Deighton was a man of integrity and principle, a kind neighbor and among the first citizens of the community.

Fred Sopp, farmer, West Mill Creek township, postoffice Erie, was born December 6, 1850, son of Phillip and Mary Sopp, who came from Germany and settled in the city of Erie about 1855. Fred is the eldest of a family of seven children: Fred, Mary, wife of David Ridet, John, Hettie, wife of Joseph Bletz, Eric; William, Phillip and Emery Sopp, died in 1882. In February, 1878, Fred Sopp, then 18 years of age, married Mary, daughter of Nicholas and Anna Hetterline. The former was killed in a fall from a load of wheat in the summer of 1892. His age was 65 years. The latter survives and resides in Harbor Creek township. Their children were: Joseph, Mary, wife of Fred Sopp; Baptist, John Adam, Nick, a resident of Syracuse, N. Y., and Edith Hetterline. Phillip Sopp was a soldier in the German army. Fred Sopp is the superintendent of the farm known as the Miss McCole farm, and has been engaged in a similar occupation since 1880. From 1874 to 1878 Mr. Sopp worked for the Pacific Bridge Company, and for two and a half years was foreman, building wooden and iron bridges. While thus engaged he fell sixty-eight feet from a bridge, which caused him to give up that occupation.

Peter Hermann, farmer, Mill Creek township, postoffice Erie, was born in Germany, December 31, 1842, son of Christian and Agnes (Dick) Hermann. The former came to Erie county from Germany in 1847, and by frugality and hard work gained a competency. Christian Hermann died in 1867, aged 47 years, and Mrs. Hermann July 10, 1894, aged 76 years. Peter Hermann is the oldest of a family of eight children, viz.: Peter, Charles, Christian, Eva (deceased) George, Carrie, wife of Charles A. Flatt; Adam and Cresie, wife of Frank Schultz. In 1867 Peter Hermann married Josephine Johann. They have eight children now living, viz.: Charles, Richard, Frank W., Carrie, Alice, Lizzie, Jane and Cooney. Mr. Hermann fought bravely for the welfare of his country in the late rebellion, took part in thirty-four engagements, and was only incapacitated for duty a short time in the Frederick city hospital. He first enlisted December 10, 1861, as a private with Capt. John P. Schlaudecker, Co. H, 111th Reg., P. V. I. He was discharged from the service December 24, 1863, at Wahatchie, Tenn., by reason of re-enlistment as a veteran volunteer. He was wounded at Resaca, Ga., May 15, 1864. His second discharge is dated July 27, 1865, at Washington, D. C. The effective force July 1, 1863, of his regiment, before entering the battle of Gettysburg, was: Officers, 20; men, 239; the loss was officers, 1; men, 17. The 111th Pa. Vet. Vol. recruited in Erie, was mustered in October 17, 1861; re-enlisted December 28, 1863; mustered out July 19, 1865. Engaged in thirty-five battles; losses, 651. Mr. Hermann purchased his present farm in 1882, and has since made many improvements, and brought the land to a high state of cultivation.

John W. Hess, farmer, postoffice Erie, Mill Creek township, son of Jacob and Mary (Krideridge) Hess. The former came to Erie at the age of 10 years, and followed the occupation of farming. He died in 1889, at the age of 60 years. His widow still survives. They reared a family of six children, viz.: John W., Mary, wife of John Rosenthal, Erie; John Joseph, Annie, wife of William Kiddle; Terena, wife of Theodore Ralph; and Jacob Hess, of Erie. November 29, 1885, Mr. Hess was married to Mary, daughter of Jacob Staller, of Mill Creek township. To this union have been born four children, as follows: Amelia, William, Nora and Isabella. Mr. Hess has followed farming since early boyhood, and is a most energetic and thorough-going farmer. He has occupied his present farm since 1884, and under his management the land has reached a high state of cultivation. He is a native of Mill Creek township.

Christian Ripley, merchant, postoffice Belle Valley, was born August 19, 1842, and removed with his parents to Erie county when a mere lad. He is a son of David and Anna Frye Ripley, natives of Lancaster, Pa. The former died August 22, 1888, at the age of 77 years, and the latter died November 26, 1890, at the age of 79 years. David Ripley, grandfather of Christian, came from Lancaster county and settled in Summit township in 1832, where he died in 1842. The family consisted of twelve children, viz.: Christian, David, Jacob, Sarah, wife of William Urch; Isaac, Mary, wife of Samuel Kuhl; Elizabeth, Jacob, Shields, Abraham, John and Anna, wife of Charles Graham, all living. August 29, 1867, Christian married Elizabeth, daughter of William and Jane (Kennedy) Whiteford, of Greene township. The former died February 16, 1874, at the age of 76 years, and the latter July 10, 1868, at the age of 61 years. Mr. Ripley is the fourth child of a family of five children: Margaret, wife of William Agnew; Sarah, wife of George Mulern; Elizabeth, wife of Christian Ripley; and James Whiteford. Children of Christian Ripley are: Burdella Jane, wife of Willard W. Russell; William D., Edward C., Hattie E. and Blanche. From 1866 to 1887 Christian Ripley was engaged in farming in Greene township. In the spring of 1887 he removed to Belle Valley and opened a general store, which is still conducted by him. It was the same year that he was appointed postmaster, and has since held the office without interruption. He has held various offices in the township, and is a leading citizen of Mill Creek township. Mr. Ripley served in the late war, and was in seventeen engagements, among which were the battles of Cedar Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Fairfax C. H., Gettysburg, Antietam, Lookout Mountain and Peach Tree Run. He was the victim of sunstroke from which he has never fully recovered. He was enlisted in the 111th Reg., Co. A, P. V. I.

Peter E. Norcross, farmer, postoffice Belle Valley, Erie county, was born in Mill Creek township May 25, 1821, son of Andrew and Sarah (Irwin) Norcross, natives of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania. They came and settled on the homestead farm, now owned by P. E., in the year 1802. A log cabin was built in a dense thicket situated near where the present house stands, and from this rugged beginning has developed, through careful management, industry and frugality, one of the best cultivated and most desirable farms in Mill Creek township. P. E. Norcross is the eighth child of a family of ten children, viz.: William (deceased); Hannah, wife of Edmund Curtis; Nancy, wife of Eleazar A. Bennett, of Erie; John (deceased); Eliza (deceased); Jane (deceased) wife of William Wyatt; Elsie (deceased); Peter Irwin, Andrew Fleming and Addie (deceased). January 1, 1866, P. E. married Mary, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Tapley) Parry, of Camden, Oneida county, N. Y. The former was born in 1807, and died in 1882, aged 75 years. The latter still survives at the age of 94 years. Their children are: John (deceased), William, of Cameron, Mo.; Emma, wife of Joseph Young, of Camden, Oneida county, N. Y.; Charles, of Camden, N. Y.; Harriet, wife of Thomas Smith; Mary, wife of P. E. Norcross; Elizabeth, wife of Lewis Dawley, of Greene township; Jane (deceased), formerly the wife of John Grant, of Cameron, Mo.; Sarah (deceased), formerly the wife of Nelson Linebeck. The children of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Norcross are: Miss Addie and Parry Erwin. Mr. Norcross has spent the greatest part of his life upon the farm where he now resides, and has lived to see that portion of Erie county develop into the garden spot of the locality, and by persistent energy and careful forethought has gained a competency. Mr. Norcross is an unassuming and reliable and thorough-going citizen.

William M. Hewitt, farmer, LeBeauf township, and since the spring of 1891 manager of the Erie county farm, is a son of Henry and Adeline (Robbins) Hewitt, natives of New England. The former died in 1853, at the age of 44 years, and the latter some time after removed to Crawford county, where she spent her last days. She died in 1876 at the age of 70 years. They were the parents of five children: George W., William M., Henry J., of LeBeauf township; Adeline J., wife of A. J. Burton, of Union township, and Rose, wife of G. W. Dawler, of LeBeauf township. Mrs. Hewitt was twice married, the second time to Hiram Drake, a prominent citizen of Genesee county, New York. To this union was born one son, W. W. Drake, of Erie. Henry and Lyman Hewitt, uncles of William M., were the first of the family to come to Pennsylvania from New England. Lansing, another brother, came later. January 1, 1867, William M. married Anna L., daughter of Moses S. and Loolia Anna (Lewis) Edmunds. The former died in March, 1895, at the age of 74 years; the latter still survives. The children of William M. Hewitt are: Byron J., of Ransomville, Niagara county, N. Y.; Nellie May, wife of G. S. Welker, Mill Village; Morris E., drug clerk, Mill Village. Bryon Hewitt married Miss Dottie Blackmer, of Waterford. William M. Hewitt has been a resident of Mill Village, Erie county, since 1876, and has been prominently identified with all the local and municipal affairs of the borough, having held its various offices. Mr. Hewitt actively participated in the late war as member of Co. D, 184th Reg., N. Y. V. I., and was severely wounded in the face and neck, a part of the right jaw-bone being severed. Mr. Hewitt is a member of Post 67, G. A. R., Erie, Pa., the K. of S. F. J., Knights of Honor, and the Lincoln Club. He is an affable gentleman and a practical farmer, and the county farm, under his management, has been well supervised, and the interests of the tax-payers well cared for.

J. Reinhold Rinderle, farmer, postoffice Erie, was born in Erie January 13, 1843. He is a son of Sebastian R., and Theresa (Kreidler) Rinderle, who came to Erie county from Germany in 1833 and settled on an adjoining farm to the one where J. R. Rinderle now resides. The former resides with his son and is vigorous and engaged in active pursuits at the age of 82 years. Mrs. Rinderle died in 1852 at the age of 45 years. Mr. Rinderle married for his second wife, Caroline Schneider, who died without issue. J. R. Rinderle is the third child of a family of seven children, viz.: John, Erie, Pa.; Joseph, Kearsarge, Pa.; J. R., Katherine (deceased), Daniel (deceased), Barney (deceased), and Frances (deceased). September 25, 1866, Mr. J. R. Rinderle married Miss Mary, daughter of John Rupp, of Marvintown, Erie county, who died in 1870. To this union have been born ten children, viz.: Theresa, John S., Joseph S., Frank, Charles, Lena, Annie, William (deceased), Eugene (deceased), and Barney. John S. Rinderle married Miss Katherine daughter of Peter Baker, of Mill Creek township. Sebastian Rinderle was a soldier in the German war. Mrs. J. R. Rinderle is the youngest of a family of five children, viz.: Margaret, wife of Frank Mangold, Erie; Andrew; Lena, wife of Ambrose Wagner; Joseph and Mary. John Rupp died in 1875 at the age of 75 years. Mr. Rinderle is a thorough farmer and has the best cultivated farm and comfortable home-like surroundings of any in his immediate locality. In this he takes an especial pride as the result of well-earned prosperity.

He is an estimable citizen, a member of the C. M. B. A. and St. Benedict's Society. Mr. and Mrs. Rinderle and family are members of St. John's Church, Erie. In politics Mr. Rinderle is a Democrat and has been a member of the school board of Mill Creek township for seven years.

John Bernritter, contractor and builder, West Mill Creek, son of John and Wallburga (Buhl) Bernritter, who were natives of Germany. They came to Erie in 1847, and who spent the greater portion of their lives in Mill Creek township. The former died in 1880 at the age of 78 years, and the latter died at the age of 85 years. They reared a family of five children, viz.: Barbara, wife of Jacob Richard, of McKean township; John, Godfred; Elizabeth, wife of John Moore, and Fred. John Bernritter was married in 1855 to Christina Kunstanter, a native of Germany, who died August 24, 1870. To this union were born seven children, viz.: Robert, John, Henry, William, Frank, Elizabeth, and Louise. Elizabeth married Frank L. Bowman, of Fairview township in 1889 and they now reside in West Mill Creek. He is engaged in the milk business. They have two children, Ruby and Herald. Louise married Harmon Reichard, of McKean township in 1884. John Bernritter learned the carpenter's trade, and at the age of 21 years entered the employ of John Probale of Fairview. He has during the greater part of his life been an extensive contractor and builder through his township and in the city of Erie. All five of his sons learned the carpenter's trade and are now in business in Chicago and were employed on the World's Fair buildings and also built several of the stations on the Northwestern R. R. Mr. Bernritter is living a retired life. Henry was married to Mary Nichols, of Indiana, in 1889; Robert was married to Mae Hale, of Chicago, in 1894, and Frank was married to Helen Shipley, of Oregon, in 1894.

R. G. Young, farmer, postoffice Erie, was born on the farm where he now resides, December 15, 1868. He is a son of James and Phoebe (Middleton) Young. The former died in 1879, at the age of 49 years. He was a native of County Down, Ireland, and came to Erie county in early life, locating on the farm now occupied by R. G. He was closely identified with the municipal affairs of his township, and filled several offices of trust and responsibility, and was a man of integrity and worth. The latter survives and resides at the homestead. The living children are: W. J., a resident of Erie; E. J., of Little Washington, Pa.; S. M., of Erie, and R. G., Della, now Mrs. C. B. Hall; Minnie, Leatie and Nettie. Mrs. Young, mother of R. G., is a daughter of John Middleton, a graduate of Oberlin College, and who was for many years a prominent citizen of Waterford township. He died in 1870 at the age of 64 years. His widow was Phoebe Middleton. Their children were: Phoebe, mother of R. G.; Emily (deceased), David S., of Waterford. R. G. Young is among the progressive young farmers of Mill Creek, and has had charge of the homestead farm since 1888.

A. J. Anderson, farmer, postoffice Erie, was born in McKean county, Pennsylvania, July 26, 1856, son of Isaac and Cynthia A. (Northrup) Anderson. The former is now living in the city of Erie, at the age of 85 years, and the latter died in 1860. A. J. is the youngest of a family of six children, viz.: Henry J., Theresa M., Isaac C., William B., Charles J. and A. J. In August, 1882, A. J. was married to Miss Belle Davis, a daughter of Malachi Davis, a veteran in the late war, and a member of the 11th Reg., P. V. I. His wife was Hannah Coburn, a native of Erie county, New York. Mrs. Anderson was the sixth child of a family of seven children, viz.: Edwin, a resident of Franklin county, Pennsylvania; George, Cynthia, wife of Charles Anderson; Melvina, Henry, Belle, wife of A. J., and Eveline. A. J. Anderson has since early life been engaged in farming pursuits, and for several years resided in Summit township. Mr. Anderson is a believer in improvements, and a good citizen.

Mathias Hartleb, farmer, Mill Creek township, is a son of John and Margaret (Beck) Hartleb, natives of Germany. He was born in the city of Erie November 8, 1860. John Hartleb came from Germany in the year 1853, and located in Erie. For twelve years he lived on a farm now occupied by Mathias, and known as the Zimmerman farm, in East Mill Creek, and in 1887 again removed to Erie, where he died July 18, 1894, at the age of 76 years. Mrs. Hartleb, mother of Mathias, died February 24, 1892, at the age of 72 years. Mathias Hartleb is the youngest of a family of nine children, viz.: Peter, Michael (deceased), Catherine, wife of George Vollmer; Anthony, Helen, Margaret, wife of Henry Bauschard; Emma, wife of Jacob Moneyer; Elizabeth and Mathias. He was married, April 12, 1887, to Miss Maggie, daughter of Nicholas Detish, of Mill Creek township. Three children have been born to this union, viz.: Daniel Henry (deceased), Karl John and Florence Margaret. He has followed the occupation of farming since early youth, and is an energetic and progressive citizen. He has resided on his present farm since 1887.

Jacob S. Conrad, one of the most prosperous and progressive farmers of Mill Creek township, was born on the farm which he now occupies, August 1, 1817, and is a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (McCoy) Conrad, natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. His grandfather, Capt. John McCoy, for seven years underwent the severe hardships and trials incident to a soldier's life in the Revolutionary war. In 1801 Joseph Conrad removed from Maryland to Erie county and settled upon the land now owned by his son, which was then a dense wilderness, but is now one of the finest and best cultivated farms in Northwestern Pennsylvania. He built a log house, in which all of his children were born, and contended with the many inconveniences and vicissitudes of pioneer life. Though not a regularly enlisted soldier during the war of 1812, residing so near the seat of conflict, he rendered much valuable service as a member of the militia, and frequently participated in border warfare, which is always more harassing than regular military service. Such is the honorable record of Mr. Conrad's ancestors in the two great wars which established and maintained the independence of the United States. For several years previous to his death, Joseph Conrad's feeble health, together with the sustenance of a large family, greatly impeded his progress, so that at the time of his death the farm was encumbered by debt, even beyond its value. He died in October, 1836, at the age of 66 years. His widow, who was born in 1790, survived him until February 16, 1872.

A. V. Claus

The family consisted of nine children: Margaret (deceased), formerly the wife of Amos Keeler, and later of George L. Wood; Elizabeth, widow of Ariel Judd; Sarah Ann, widow of Solomon Wood; John M., resides with Jacob S., who is his immediate junior; Maria (deceased); Joseph (deceased), and Martha and Mary (twins, both deceased). Mary was formerly the wife of Wilson Adams (deceased). After his father's death, Jacob S. was chosen by his mother to assume the management of the farm and the responsibility of freeing it from debt, thus providing a home for her and the younger children. He accordingly purchased the homestead in his own name, going in debt for the entire amount, as well as for a team and farming implements. In a few years he had paid the debt, made many improvements upon the farm, and brought it to a higher state of cultivation. In 1855-6 he built a substantial brick house, which, after forty years, is still a handsome and modern home. Mr. Conrad cut the trees with his own ax from which nearly all the hard wood lumber for its construction was obtained, and supervised personally every detail of its construction. Other buildings have been added to accommodate the needs of a well-regulated farm. Nearly all the products which can be advantageously grown in Erie county are raised in large quantities, excepting barley, which Mr. Conrad refuses, from conscientious scruples, to grow. For many years he dealt extensively in cattle and horses, in which he was highly successful. One of the chief factors of Mr. Conrad's success has been the cheerful and valuable assistance which he always receives from his mother, sister and wife. Temperance, frugality and industry, coupled with honest hearts and willing hands, have placed Mr. Conrad in possession of a fine, well-tilled farm, with improvements, in which he can justly take pride. Best of all, Mr. Conrad enjoys throughout an extensive acquaintance in Erie county, the enviable reputation of being an honest, fair-minded man, true to his own convictions, while recognizing the rights of others to be governed by the dictates of their own consciences, maintaining, however, a well-defined aversion for hypocrisy, which sacrifices everything to greed of gain and worldly aggrandizement. Mr. Conrad was married January 14, 1864, to Miss Sarah J., daughter of Freeman and Eidula (Root) Patterson, of East Springfield, Erie county. Mr. Patterson was born in Arlington, Vt., June 29, 1800, and died in 1885. He was one of Erie county's best citizens, and was the first superintendent of the County Alms-house. Mrs. Patterson was born in Cayuga county, New York, June 23, 1806, and died February 26, 1887. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Patterson were: James F., born December 1, 1825, died in 1843; Delia, widow of Henry Teller, born November 14, 1827, in Aurora, N. Y., resident of Girard, Pa.; Louisa, born in North East township, February 23, 1830, and died July 7, 1844; Emily, wife of J. S. Conrad, born in North East township, January 24, 1833; Mary Princess, born in 1836, widow of John Coppersmith, of Erie, who died from the effects of rebel imprisonment, and later widow of John Faulkner; Sarah J., born in Mill Creek township, November 11, 1841, first wife of Mr. Conrad; Harriet, born in Mill Creek, March 18, 1839; Maria Margaret, born in Mill Creek, November 26, 1844; William E., born in Mill Creek, May 16, 1847, now of Springfield township, a soldier in the late war; Jeannette Elizabeth, born in Girard township, March 8, 1850, and Rev.

Frank Leslie Patterson, D. D., a Baptist clergyman, born May 10, 1852, died in 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Conrad had born unto them six children, viz: William W., born November 10, 1854, married Miss Clara, daughter of Mandeville Wager, of Belle Valley; George Walker, born April 25, 1867 (deceased); James McCoy, born February 3, 1869, married Miss Grace Meyers, of Erie, by whom he has one child, Harrison Jacob, and occupies the Wood farm in Mill Creek township; Jacob Lester, born March 30, 1870, married Jennie Maynard, of Springfield, who died April 15, 1895, leaving one child, Florence Jennie; Elizabeth Maria (deceased). Mrs. Conrad died April 6, 1874, at the age of 32 years. Mr. Conrad was married a second time, November 4, 1875, to Miss Emily Patterson, a sister of his first wife. Mr. and Mrs. Conrad are members, respectively, of the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches, and are earnest workers in the cause of temperance, having reputations which extend beyond the State in which they live. Still vigorous and active, their good work and example will always give them an honored name in the community. In politics Mr. Conrad was originally a Whig, but when the Republican party was organized he became identified with it; and now, when the Prohibition party is striving to break the shackles which bind men to a slavery more terrible than that which the Republican party destroyed, the work finds in Mr. Conrad a vigorous supporter. Mr. Conrad had charge of the Erie county jail from 1837 to 1840, during which time the first and only execution in the county took place. It was in 1838, when Francisco was executed for killing his wife. The executioner was Andrew Scott, father of Mayor Walter Scott.

Alfred P. Lang, proprietor, summer resort, Grove House Park, Erie, son of Jacob and Mary (Weible) Lang natives of Garmany. He was born in Girard, Pa., September 20, 1868, and was for some years engaged with his father in the meat business. He died in October, 1890, at the age of 48 years. Mrs. Lang, mother of Alfred, was a daughter of Gotlieb Weible. She died April 14, 1890, at the age of 44 years. Alfred P. is the eldest of a family of four children, viz: Alfred P., Olive, wife of E. Smith, Erie; Oscar and Fredericka, wife of W. W. Johnson, Buffalo, N. Y. He was married June 26, 1890, to Miss Addie, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Landon) Little, of Mill Creek. To this union have been born three children, viz.: Mary E., Alfred M. and Ethel. In 1887, Jacob Lang and C. Rabe purchased of the Crowley estate twelve acres of land, which includes the Grove Park at Four-Mile Creek, and immediately began to build up a charming summer resort. Mr. Lang erected the numerous first-class buildings about the resort, which includes a large hotel, dancing pavilion, stable, bowling alley, a 200-foot dock, besides modern improvements in the line of water works, gas wells, etc. After the death of Mr. Lang, Alfred P. came in possession of the resort, and has built up a large trade. This summer resort is not only patronized by the city people, but many from a distance, including Pittsburg and other points. This point is superior to any in the way of picturesque views and cool invigorating atmosphere from Lake Erie, and is destined at a not far distant day to become a more desirable resort. Mr. Lang is a prominent member of several societies, among which are the K. O. T. M., Knights of the Golden Eagle, Erie Castle

No. 411, Erie Turners, Bavarian Society and G. H. Q. of W. B. O. Mr. and Mrs. Lang are members of St. Paul's German Lutheran Church.

A. B. Bladen, farmer, Mill Creek township, was born and reared and has spent his life on the farm which he now owns. He is a son of William and Malinda (Parker) Bladen. The former died in 1888, at the age of 88 years, and the latter is still living at the homestead with her son at the age of 83 years. She has a retentive memory, and vividly recalls incidents of her early days with accuracy. She has in her possession the original deed of the farm on which she has made her home since marriage, which was originally 400 acres, and came in possession of her father-in-law, Boo, who came to the lake country with three surveyors from Philadelphia. The land was purchased at $1.25 per acre, June 1, 1796, according to the deed, written on deer skin parchment. Boo cleared many acres of this land, built a log cabin and lived to be over 100 years of age. William Bladen next came in possession of the main portion of the farm and cleared still more of the wooded section, and afterward built the log home in which our subject now resides. Edward Bladen, grandfather of A. B., moved his family and effects in a wagon from Orange, Md. This is said to be the only farm in Erie county which has, up to 1895, remained continuously in possession of colored owners. Edward Parker, grandfather of A. B. Bladen, lived for many years at Meadville, Crawford county, Pa., where he died at the age of 96 years. His widow, Anna Freeglas, died at the age of 71 years. A. B. Bladen first married Alfredie Hollis, who died at the age of 28 years. She had one child, Ellen Ethel. Mr. Bladen again married. His second wife was Julia A. Clifford. One child, John Dicher, of Chicago, has been born to this union. Mr. Bladen is the youngest of a family of three children, and the only one surviving. He is an energetic, industrious farmer and a good citizen; they are members of the First Baptist Church; he served as town clerk in 1893-4, is a Master Mason and Knight Templar.

Capt. G. W. Miller, keeper Erie land lighthouse, was born in Johnstown, Montgomery county, N. Y., March 12, 1830. He is a son of Phillip and Betsy Arkenburg Miller, natives of Montgomery county, New York, and who resided first in Springfield township, and afterward in Aurora, Ill., where the former died at the age of 76 years, and the latter in 1869, at the age of 75 years. Captain Miller is the fourth child of a family of ten children, viz.: Jacob, of Conneaut, Ohio, a soldier; Catherine, deceased wife of F. J. Randall; Harriet, deceased wife of John Prentice; Almira, wife of George Wildrick; Elizabeth, widow of James Webb; Melinda, wife of Lud Wildrick; Minerva, wife of George Orms; Lorenzo (deceased), and John, a resident of California. Captain Miller was married February 3, 1852, to Cynthia L., daughter of Jacob and Catherine (McCarthy) Eighthy, natives of New York State, residents of Conneaut, Ohio. The former died in 1875, at the age of 75 years; the latter in 1885, at the age of 82 years. Mrs. Miller is the third child in a family of six children, viz.: Rachael, wife of Jacob A. Miller; Nicholas, Cynthia, Jacob, Charles and Porter; all four boys were soldiers in the late war. The latter was killed by an accident at Murphysboro, Va., in 1863. Mr. and Mrs. Miller's children are: Ella M. (deceased), formerly the wife of Harrison Bailey; Catherine, wife of C. C. Payne, and Minnie B., wife of John Ruhl of Erie, Pa. Captain Miller entered the employ of the U. S. Government, in 1868, in the position of Light House keeper at Conneaut, O., where he remained until July 1, 1885, when he was transferred to the Erie Land Light, which position he now holds to the satisfaction of all sailors who enter the Erie port. Captain Miller is among the trustworthy and responsible employes of the Government, and a man who has a keen appreciation of marine duties.

Capt. Jacob Ziegler was born at Frankenthal, Baden, February 15, 1839. At the age of 14 years he came to America and enlisted, May 1, 1861, in Erie, Pa., as orderly sergeant in Company 1, McLane's Erie Regiment. After serving three months he was discharged at Pittsburg, to re-enlist August 8, 1861, in Erie, in Battery B, Independent Pennsylvania Light Artillery, equipped by Hon. W. L. Scott, in which he was commissioned second lieutenant, later first lieutenant and subsequently captain. With his command he participated in the engagements at Stone River, Chattanooga, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, Rocky Face Ridge, Tunnel Hill, Buzzards' Roost, Resaca, Dallas, Kennesaw Mountain, Chattahoochee river, Peach Tree creek, Siege of Atlanta, Spring Hill, Nashville and Texas campaign. April 12, 1862, he was treated in field hospital in Shiloh four weeks for a disease brought on by exposure, was furloughed in Chattanooga for thirty days, in which place, in 1864, he re-enlisted in the same command as a veteran, re-joining his company in March, 1864, in Chattanooga, Tenn. At the close of the war he was honorably discharged October 12, 1865, in Victoria, Tex. Captain Ziegler was married May 14, 1867, in Erie, to Miss Louise Curtze, second oldest daughter of Frederick Curtze, Esq., deceased. He served in the Erie post-office for twenty years and died April 14, 1895. His wife and one brother, Charles Ziegler, of Indianapolis, Ind., survive him. He was a member of Tyran Lodge No. 382, F. and A. M., Mozart Lodge No. 139, D. O. H., Post 67, G. A. R., and was also a member of the Erie Liedertafel.

Peter Seib, postoffice Erie, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Bolles) Seib. The former has for many years been a resident of Erie and Mill Creek township, and now resides on the Buffalo road. The latter died in 1885, at the age of 67 years. To these parents were born the following children: Jacob, now a resident of Mill Creek township; Elizabeth, Bard, Erie; and Kate. Peter Seib was married June 23, 1873, to Elizabeth, daughter of John Durland (deceased). Her mother's maiden name was Anna Marie Driesaquer. She died in 1870. Mr. and Mrs. Seib are the parents of eight children, viz.: Elizabeth, Helena, Charles, August, Peter, John (deceased), Rosa and Arthur. Peter Seib has resided in Erie and vicinity since his birth, and latterly has been successfully engaged in farming, and since 1887 has had charge of the Koehler farm in East Mill Creek. This farm contains 310 acres, and is one of the best and most thoroughly improved farms in Northwestern Pennsylvania. Modern buildings and the latest improved facilities for carrying on the same are the only means considered to bring about the results desired in first-class farming in the nineteenth century, and all these are provided on this farm. Mr. Seib is a thorough farmer and keeps fully abreast of the times. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. and a genial citizen.

John E. Lapsley, farmer, postoffice Belle Valley, was born March 3, 1849, in the city of Erie, where his parents resided for many years. He is of Scotch-Irish descent, and is a son of John E. and Catherine (Jackson) Lapsley, who came and settled in Erie county early in the century. The mother of John Lapsley was the widow of Thomas Jackson. She died in 1857. He was married March 28, 1882, to Martha B., daughter of John and Nancy (Kennedy) Blackwood, who settled early in East Mill Creek. The former died September 12, 1888, at the age of 81 years. The latter still survives and retains her faculties, and looks after the household duties at the Blackwood homestead with a surprising alacrity. She was born in Ireland March 10, 1810, and has resided in her present home for fifty years. Mr. Blackwood had two brothers, Robert and James; the former has been for many years a resident of Wesleyville, Erie county, and the latter died in Mill Creek township in 1875. Mrs. Blackwood lives with her son, James T., who was born December 10, 1852. She is the second child of a family of eleven children, viz.: Mary, Nancy, David, John, George, William, Jane, Johnson, James, Margaret and Nixon. Mr. and Mrs. Lapsley are the parents of two children, Kennedy Blackwood and Mary Jeanette Lapsley. John E. Lapsley owns a farm of forty acres near the conjunction of Mill Creek, Greene and Harbor Creek townships, located in the southeast corner of Mill Creek. He is a member of the U. P. Church and is a man of integrity and a good citizen.

John V. Arthur, farmer, postoffice Belle Valley, was born in Litchfield township, Oneida county, N. Y., January 16, 1837. The following fall he, with his parents, J. V. L. and Eliza B. (Harvey) Arthur, came to Erie via the Erie canal and Lake Erie from Utica, N. Y., landing at Erie on October 6. They settled in McKean township, from whence they moved to Mill Creek township in 1845, where they spent the remainder of their lives. The mother died April 6, 1871, at the age of 60 years. She was a native of Connecticut. Mr. J. V. L. Arthur was born in Peru, Clinton county, N. Y., March 27, 1797, and died at the home of his son October 12, 1888. John V. Arthur was married January 23, 1868, to Elizabeth Almira, daughter of Patrick and Elizabeth Clark. Mrs. Arthur was born on the farm where she now resides, November 20, 1840. She has one brother, Nelson Clark, of the "Anchor Line," Erie. Her father died March 2, 1865, in his 69th year, and her mother March 17, 1886, at the ripe age of 90 years. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur have one son, Urie Nelson, a graduate of the Edinboro State Normal School, '91, and of Allegheny College, 1894. Since their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Arthur have resided in Mill Creek township and are highly respected citizens of the community. Mr. Arthur is a progressive farmer, and has held several municipal offices. He is a member of the South Erie Lodge, No. 62, E. A. U.

Joseph Klick, farmer, postoffice Belle Valley, was born in Greene township, Erie county, in 1853, son of John and Barbara (Fleete) Klick. The former is living in Greene township and the latter died in 1858 at the age of 23 years. Phillip Klick, grandfather of Joseph, came from Germany and settled in Erie county in 1832. Joseph Klick was married November 15, 1891, to Miss Lena, daughter of George and Grace (Reichard) Smith, of Erie. Mrs. Klick is the eldest of a family of nine children, as follows: Lena; Maggie, wife of Louis Slate; Sophia, Clara, Frank, Simon, George, William and Jackson. Joseph Klick is the eldest of a family of six children, viz.: Joseph, Albert, Phillip, John, Leonard and Sarah, wife of John Sizer. The children of Joseph Klick are: Maggie, Anna, Grace, Clara, Ida, Frances, Celia, Joseph, and Herbert, who died August 6, 1895. Mr. Klick began farming in Greene township and in 1884 located on his present farm of sixty-four acres in the southeastern part of Mill Creek township. He has served as road commissioner and is a worthy citizen and a good farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Klick are members of St. Mary's Church of Erie.

Simon Schmitt, dairyman, postoffice Belle Valley, was born August 8, 1867, son of George and Grace Reihart Schmitt. The former died August 29, 1893, aged 63 years. Simon Schmitt is the second son of a family of five children, viz.: Frank, of Erie; Simon, George, of Erie; William, of Mill Creek, and Jacob, of Erie. Simon Schmitt was married, October 17, 1889, to Miss Ida, daughter of Phillip and Mary (Wicks) Sutter. The former died November 17, 1889, aged 65 years. Mrs. Schmitt is the sixth child of a family of eleven children, as follows: Rachael, wife of John Baher (deceased), George (deceased), Veronica, wife of Jacob Baker; Ida, Theodore, George, Emma (deceased), Clara, Phillip, Catherine and Henrietta. The children of Simon Schmitt are Loretta (deceased), Raymond, Joseph and Marie Catherine. Simon Schmitt has resided on his present farm, known as the Jacob Sutter farm, since 1874, and has been a thorough, reliable farmer and citizen. Latterly he has been successfully engaged in the milk business. His grandfather, George Sutter, cleared away the forest which at an early day surrounded his home where Simon now resides.

J. A. Brindle, farmer, Mill Creek township, son of Samuel H. and Mary (Ebersole) Brindle; the former born in 1807; the latter daughter of Joseph Ebersole, who died in 1881, at the age of 91 years. Samuel Ebersole settled early in East Mill Creek, and was the son of Christian Ebersole. Mrs. Brindle is fourth of a family of five children, viz.: Jesse (deceased), Joseph (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased), Mary and Katherine. J. A. Brindle is the youngest of a family of three children, as follows: Samuel E.; Adella B., wife of Dr. A. A. Woods, Erie, and J. A. Samuel E. formerly lived in Girard, where he died. His widow, Emma (Anderson) Brindle, resides in Erie. Their children are: Katie May, Jessie, Rachel and Clarence. The children of Dr. and Mrs. Woods are: Bertha and Ethel. J. A. Brindle was born January 21, 1863. He was married August 23, 1888, to Kittie, daughter of Joseph and Lucinda (Sillsby) Lanfair, of Girard. Their children are: Gertrude; Fred Landfeair, of Bay City, Mich., and Kittie. The children of J. A. Brindle are: Florence, Hazel, Alice Mary, Mabel and Marguerite (deceased). Samuel Brindle, father of J. A., lived for twenty years on the homestead at North Springfield, and came to East Mill Creek in 1866. He was a son of Mathias and Elizabeth Brindle, natives of Cumberland and York counties, respectively. Joseph Brindle was born March 3, 1802, in Springfield township, Erie county, Pa., son of Mathias and Elizabeth Brindle, natives of Cumberland and York counties, respectively. Mathias, in 1800, took up 400 acres of land on the banks of Lake Erie. In the fall of 1800 he went to Franklin county and married Elizabeth Hossler, returning with his bride in the spring of 1801. They settled on the farm and reared eleven children. He filled some of the township offices, was a prominent farmer, and, with the help of his boys, finally cleared all his land. He was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and one of the incorporators of the beautiful cemetery of East Springfield. He served in the war of 1812. His wife departed this life in 1840, and he in 1845. Joseph Brindle, the second child of this pioneer family, was the first white boy born in Springfield township. He married October 5, 1826, Lodosska Putney, a native of Canada, daughter of Jewett Putney. This union has been blessed with seven children, viz.: Sarah E., wife of Adolphus Maxina; Franklin M. (deceased); Charlotte M. (deceased); Louisa H. (deceased); Martha (now living), and Willie J. (deceased). Mrs. Brindle departed this life in October, 1880. P. M. Brindle was born November 19, 1820, in Springfield township, twelfth child of Mathias and Elizabeth Brindle. Mr. and Mrs. Brindle were the parents of thirteen children, eleven living to be men and women. P. M. Brindle was united in marriage in 1846 with Janet, daughter of Sela and Elizabeth Walbridge, who came to this county from Vermont in 1828; she is a native of Vermont. Three children were born to this union, two surviving: Adelbert H., and Charlotte E., wife of A. E. Walker.

E. A. Woodbury, gardener, postoffice Wesleyville, was born in Boston, Erie county, N. Y., April 24, 1843, son of W. M. and Lucy Woodbury, natives of New York State. The former was born in Boston Centre, Erie county, N. Y., July 29, 1819, and died August 28, 1892, and the latter was born in Hamburg, Erie county, N. Y., October 15, 1822, and died May 10, 1859. Mr. E. A. Woodbury is the sole survivor. He was married January 1, 1870, to Sarah A., daughter of William and Keziah (Taylor) Sell, natives of London, England. The former died in Erie in 1889, and the latter died in 1888, aged 55 years. Mrs. Woodbury was born in Rahway, N. J., June 4, 1838. She is the third child of a family of five children, viz.: Capt. John W. Sell, Susan T., Sarah A., Charles Sell, a resident of New Jersey, and William J. E. A. Woodbury was educated at Waterford Academy, and for fifteen years was a valued bookkeeper in the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. freight office. Latterly, aside from other duties, he has been a correspondent and representative of the Erie Dispatch. In the reportorial field his writings have wielded a large influence. At the age of 19 years, E. A. Woodbury enlisted, August 9, 1862, as a private with Capt. Charles M. Lynch, Co. D, 145th Reg., P. V. I.; was discharged on the 9th day of February, 1863, in Washington, D. C., by reason of surgeon's certificate of disability. He was in several important engagements.

J. W. Tait, general blacksmith, Erie, native of England, was born October 3, 1860, son of Adam and Elizabeth (Catherl) Tait. The former is still living in England, and the latter died in 1862. J. W. Tait is the youngest of a family of five children, viz.: Robert, Edward, James, Adam and J. W. Adam Tait, father of J. W., married for his second wife Miss Sarah Harrison, and to this union were born six children, as follows: Stephen, Andrew, George, Elizabeth, Sarah Ann and Isabella. April 25, 1889, J. W., married May E., daughter of Charles and Agnes Rose, of West Greene township. This union has been blessed with three children, as follows: Anna Isabella, Carrie Elizabeth and Charles Robert. J. W. Tait first began the business of blacksmithing in West Greene, Erie county, and soon afterward removed to Sheffield, Pa., and came to Erie in 1891, and bought his present property, where he has erected a fine residence and a first-class shop, and built up a good trade. Superior workmanship and close attention to business has won for him the best trade, and the respect of the business community.

Benjamin Hershey, Mill Creek township, post-office Erie, born June 15, 1827, son of John and Soloma (Greybell) Hershey. The former departed this life in 1840, at the age of 49 years. The latter, who came from Canada to Erie county in 1827, survived her husband until 1871, dying at the age of 76 years. Benjamin is the youngest of a family of four children, as follows: Samuel, who died in 1885; John, who died in 1880; Solome, wife of Rev. A. Neibel; she died in 1870. Benjamin Hershey was married May 10, 1851, to Miss Mary Jane Miller, of Mill Creek. Five children have been born to this union, as follows: Emma, who died in 1858, at the age of 5 years; Celesta J., teacher in the public schools; Susan Ida, wife of C. C. Wright, and Mary Agnes, teacher in the public schools. Benjamin graduated from the Cincinnati Medical College in 1850, and came to Erie in 1857, where he has since resided. The same year he purchased an interest in the Erie City Iron Works, with Walter Liddell and John Fairbairn. He is the inventor of the Torsion spring, and has perfected a successful invention for cutting and welding links. Mr. Hershey has made three trips to the Pacific coast, and has under contemplation a process for saving fine gold from gravel and black sand. Mr. Hershey's ancestors came from Switzerland, landing in America in 1701. They left their native land because of serious local religious differences. Mr. Hershey remembers his father's narration of ancestral life on the Alpine mountains, where the family lived at such an elevation that but one thunder storm visited them in six years, the rest all passing below. In pursuit of the chamois the hunters would often scarify the soles of their feet so that the clotted blood would form a paste to give them a better foothold as they leaped from ledge to ledge in pursuit of game. One of Mr. Hershey's grandparents died at the age of 68 years; another at the age of 99 years; another at the age of 100, and the fourth at the age of 101 years.

Crosby Family.—The first of this well-known family to come to Erie county were Patrick and James Crosby, and two uncles, Peter and James, who came about the same time. This was about 1835. Patrick came originally from Ireland to Canada and by boat across Lake Erie and located in the then dense wilderness, now the northwest corner of Harbor Creek, where a log hut was built and primitive life begun. He was a carpenter by trade, and the timber surrounding the home of his adoption furnished ample material for building. In his desire to found permanent homes for the coming generation many buildings of the locality for years gave evidence of his superior skill and workmanship. Not content with his immediate surroundings, he sought work in the then small village of Erie, and among his important contracts he assisted in building the first jail, and erected the scaffold upon which the first and only execution ever took place in Erie county. Later he engaged in the milling business in Erie. He married Catherine Fitzsimmons, a native of Ireland, who was truly a helpmate in his successful struggle to gain a competency. This union was blessed with seven children, as follows: William, a resident of Iowa; Rose, Margaret, Jane, James (deceased), Catherine (deceased) and Patrick. Two of the family, Rose and Margaret (unmarried) own and occupy the homestead farm, where many an encounter with the wild beasts of the forests were during the early period an unwelcome pastime. Michael Crosby, still a resident of the locality, was the first to settle in this neighborhood.

Charles L. Marks, liveryman, Erie, was born September 16, 1872, in the city where he now resides. He is a son of Charles and Anna (Shultz) Marks, and is the fourth child of a family of seven children, viz.: John, Charles L., Frank, Cora, wife of Charles W. Batfurst, of Huntington, Pa.), Kate, Anna and Margaret. Charles L. Marks was educated in the public schools of Erie. At the age of 19 years he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed until June, 1894. January 1, 1895, he purchased Joslin's livery and feed stables, located on Ninth, between State and Peach streets. July 1, 1895, he associated with him V. McCurry, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. By the addition of a first-class hack and other modern vehicles this enterprising firm are able to meet the demands of the public.

V. McCurry, liveryman, rear Ninth Avenue House, Erie, was born August 16, 1859, in Edinboro, Erie county, son of James M. and Eliza Jane (Phelps) McCurry, now living in Washington township. They lived for some time in Waterford township and afterward removed to the farm, where they now reside. Mrs. McCurry is the sixth of a family of eight children, viz: Lucinda, resident of Conneaut Lake, Crawford county; Cena, wife of Ohil Cook (deceased), Spartansburg; Charlotte, wife of Truman Mallory, of Corry; Wesley, who was killed in the late Rebellion; William Phelps, of Waterford township; Eliza Phelps, mother of Mr. McCurry; Polly, formerly wife of Mr. Hilliard, and Philena. V. McCurry for several years has been a resident of Wellsburg, Erie county, where he has been engaged in farming. He was educated at the Edinboro school. July 1, 1895, he became associated in the livery business with Charles L. Marks in conducting the large livery and feed stables successfully and enjoy a prosperous and increasing patronage. He was married July 4, 1892, to Miss Flora Hartshorn, of Wellsburg, Erie county. Three children were born of this union: Harriett Sophia, William Reiley and Lydia Electa. Cora Belle and Flora Philora are children by his second wife.

Fred A. White, groceryman, 410 East Sixth street, Erie, Pa., was born in 1866 in Warren county, Pennsylvania, son of T. P. and Abbie A. (Fuller) White, natives of Genesee county, New York. The former died in Erie September 10, 1893, at the age of 52 years, and the latter April 13, 1892, at the age of 47 years. Fred A. White is the eldest of a family of four children, viz.: Fred A., Frank, a twin brother; Wave, wife of E. E. Stebbins, of Michigan, and Claude D. White of Chicago, Ill. Fred A. White removed from Corry in March, 1893, where he was engaged as contractor and carpenter until the spring of 1895, when he began the grocery business on East Sixth street, where he has since enjoyed a large trade. August 9, 1892, he was married to Katie A., daughter of Peter Lisen, a prominent resident of Meadville, Pa. Mrs. White is the youngest of a family of three children, viz.: Jacob, Marguerite, wife of Beecher Graham, of Erie, and Katie A., wife of Fred A. White. Mr. and Mrs. White have one child, Hazel, born October 19, 1893. Mr. White is a member of the P. H. C. Thomas P. White, father of Fred White was a veteran of the late Rebellion, member of Co. A, 100th N. Y. Regt.

Thomas J. Paradine, brick manufacturer, Erie, was born in Limerick, Ireland, April 15, 1845, son of John Paradine, who died in Pittsburg, Pa., in 1890, at the age of 55 years. He is the eldest of a family of four children, viz.: Thomas J., William, of Erie; Joanna, wife of John Moran, and Mary, wife of Patrick O'Connor, of Pittsburg, Pa. He was married December 28, 1869, to Miss Mary McCarty. The former died in 1868, and the latter in 1889. This union has been blessed with two children, viz.: Thomas, who died at the age of 3 years, and James Paradine, born December 24, 1874. Thomas Paradine came from Ireland to America in 1852, and first settled in Pittsburg in November of that year. For a time he was apprenticed to learn the machinist's trade, at which he was employed for two years. At the close of this period he went to Decatur, Ill., where he was successfully engaged in the foundry business. In 1868 he came to Erie and engaged in the coal trade, in which business he continued until 1892, when he sold to James and Dennis McCarty. The same year he purchased sixteen acres of shale in Mill Creek township, which has an average depth of sixty feet, adjoining Glenwood Park. In 1868 William Paradine began the first successful manufacture of beautiful dry-pressed brick from shale in the United States, which for durability and superior quality are unsurpassed. He was instrumental in having the U. S. brick press, one of which is operated at his plant, manufactured in Erie. His plant has an output of 20,000 brick daily. With two down draft kilns, each with a capacity of 150,000, the demand is far greater than the supply. The plant is valued at $25,000.

N. M. Morton, foreman and superintendent of J. F. Downing's farm, East Mill Creek, a native of New England, of sturdy ancestry, came to Erie county from Shutesburg, Mass. A few years prior to this a brother, O. D. Morton, came from Massachusetts and located in McKean township, Erie county. N. M. Morton has since locating in Erie county, made scientific farming his special study, and since 1889 has been in charge of the Downing farm, which has eighty acres of the township's choicest land, and which has shown under the superior management a high state of productiveness and fertility. New, modern and commodious buildings have also been erected and many decided improvements made. Mr. Morton was born in 1852, son of Rufus Enos and Electa (Elmori) Morton. The former died in February, 1889, at the age of 82 years. He was a man of prominence in his native town, and politically exerted a wide influence as one whose opinions were estimated as standard. The latter is a native of Vermont, and still survives at the age of 70 years. They reared a family of nine children, all of whom are living, viz.: Chester E., maker of gold pens; N. M., Nellie, O. D., Rufus E., Hattie C., Sylvia, Cornelia and Lydia. September 23, 1889, N. M. Morton was married to Miss Elizabeth Smith, of Summit township. This union has been blessed with two children, Maude C. and Florence Edith.

Andrew Nicholson (deceased), was born May 13, 1812, in Erie county, and died February 18, 1879. His father, John Nicholson, was born in County Donegal, Ireland; came to America in 1783, and located in Erie county in 1796. Thus, it will be seen, the Nicholson family were among the very earliest of the sturdy pioneers who undertook the arduous and dangerous task of converting the dense, unbroken wilderness on the southern shore of Lake Erie into what is to-day one of the most beautiful and productive sections in the world. John Nicholson blazed a path along the ridge from the farm upon which he located, in West Mill Creek, to Erie. This was for a greater part of the way made the line of what is now the Ridge road. John Nicholson married Isabel Nicholson, a distant relative, by which union were born eight children, viz.: John E., Jane, Isabel, Matilda, Rebecca, Andrew, Eliza and George. The father died September 18, 1828, and Isabel, his widow, died December 25, 1866, at the advanced age of 93 years. She maintained her mental faculties till within a few days of her demise. Andrew Nicholson attended the district schools and worked on his father's farm. He was married, February 11, 1846, to Eliza Brindle (who died August 24, 1872), daughter of Matthias and Elizabeth Brindle, natives of Franklin county, Pennsylvania, who came to Erie county in 1803, settling in Springfield township. To this union were born four children: John E., Perry M., in the employ of the Lovell Manufacturing Company, Erie; Della I. (married to S. H. Willis), and George W., who died December 28, 1888. Andrew Nicholson's parents were members of the Presbyterian Church; he attended the Methodist denomination. He died and was buried on the farm on which he was born. He was a staunch Republican, and took an active part in the public affairs of the town in which he passed his long and useful life.

Eliza Nicholson, familiarly known as "Aunt Eliza," sister of Andrew Nicholson, was born April 15, 1815, on the old homestead where she has since made her home, first with her parents, then her brother Andrew, and since his death with her nephew, John E. She is a lady of rare intelligence, and now, at the advanced age of 80 years, is in a remarkable state of preservation, has full use of all her mental faculties, and commands the love and respect of all who know her. She has been for sixty-three years a member of the Methodist Church, and it is hoped that she may long be spared to the community in which her Christian spirit has so long been productive of much good.

John E. Nicholson, one of the most prosperous and progressive farmers of West Mill Creek, was born on the farm which he now occupies, December 1, 1846, and is a son of Andrew and Eliza (Brindle) Nicholson, mention of whom is elsewhere made. Mr. Nicholson was in the United States gunboat service for one year on Silver Lake, and since 1865 has devoted his energies to farming, in which he has been highly successful. He was married, December 9, 1874, to Miss Maria Hadley, daughter of Mr. Stephen Hadley, of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. This union has been blessed with three children: Nellie E., John E. and George W. Mr. Nicholson and family worship at the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a member of the G. A. R. and the A. O. U. W. In politics he has always been an active supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and has rendered much valuable aid to the party of his choice. He has held many of the offices of his township.

George W. Nicholson (deceased) was born on the Nicholson homestead in West Mill Creek township, January 2, 1853, and was a son of Andrew Nicholson (whose sketch appears in this work). The farm was bequeathed to his brother, John E., and himself, and until the time of his death they continued to do a prosperous business, under the firm name of Nicholson Bros. Mr. Nicholson's education was above the average farmer's son of that day. He was a great reader and a close observer of current events, of which he made extended notes. In his death the community sustained the loss of one of its best citizens. Mr. Nicholson was married, February 18, 1885, to Miss Lorena Garloch, of Mill Creek, by whom he had one child, Perry M. Mr. Nicholson was a member of Asbury Chapel and the A. O. U. W., and was a Republican in his political views.

Nicholas Whiteman, stone mason and farmer, postoffice McKean, was born in Bavaria, Germany, July 13, 1820, and is a son of Casper and Catherine (Mata) Whiteman, natives of Germany, the former born in 1778, in Germany. They were the parents of eight children, viz.: Marquette (deceased), Michael (deceased), who was a resident of Mitchell county, Iowa, at the time of his death; Anna (deceased), George (deceased), Barbara (deceased), Nicholas, Adam (deceased), John (deceased), he was also a resident of Mitchell county, Iowa, at the time of his death. Nicholas Whiteman came to America in 1848, settled in Franklin township, bought a farm of fifty acres, and was engaged in farming and as a stone mason for twenty-two years. He then moved to Middleboro, Erie county, Pa., and bought a farm of ninety-six acres, where he now lives, and is in a prosperous condition. His farm is located just out of the town of Middleboro, and is in an excellent state of cultivation, with good farm buildings. Mr. Whiteman was united in marriage, May 1, 1848, to Margaret, daughter of John Winegar, the fourth of a family of five children. This union has been blessed with eight children: Lewis, born February 20, 1855, resident of McKean; William, born March 13, 1857, living in McKean; Joseph, born November 25, 1859, living in McKean; Daniel, born January 9, 1862; Frances, November 15, 1864, wife of Fred Brown, of Mill Creek township; Fidelia, born March 2, 1867, wife of Edward Schuark, of Middleboro;

Edward, born May 3, 1870, living on the old homestead, and Clara, born August 19, 1874. Nicholas Whiteman served in the late war in Co. K, 98th P. V. I., and was honorably discharged June 27, 1865. He has held the offices of council twelve years, and school director twelve years. The family are members of the Catholic Church of Middleboro, and in politics he is a Democrat.

Peter E. Stough, farmer, postoffice Middleboro, Erie county, was born in Mill Creek township, Erie county, Pa., March 21, 1818, and is a son of John and Mary (Eagley) Stough. The first of the Stough family to come to America was Nicholas, who came from Germany and settled in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1803. John Stough, father of Peter E., was one of the first settlers of Mill Creek township. He came from Lancaster, Pa., and was married in 1813 to Mary Eagley, daughter of Abraham Eagley. There were eleven children in this family, five of whom are living: Peter, George, William, Barbara and Liddy. Peter E. Stough was one of the pioneer settlers of McKean township; he located where he now resides in 1851, when the township was all a wilderness, and now owns a farm of 100 acres, seventy-five of which are under a high state of cultivation. Mr. Stough was married June 5, 1851, to Cordelia, daughter of Levia Jewell (deceased), formerly of McKean, who was also one of the early settlers of McKean township. This union was blessed with nine children, three of whom are living, viz.: Laura, Sidney, of McKean, who was married December 25, 1888, to Mary Lillie, daughter of Chester Lillie, of Conneaut, O.; by this union were born three children, viz.: George, Florence (deceased) and Arthur, living in McKean township. Mr. Stough is a man of sterling honesty and uprightness, admired and respected by all his neighbors. He never held any offices, and in politics is a Republican.

Henry Smith, farmer, postoffice Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born in McKean township, September 27, 1846, and is a son of Conrad and Christina (Knodle) Smith. Conrad Smith came to America from Germany in 1832, and settled in Princeton, N. J., and lived there ten years. He then went back to Germany to live, but after staying there three months he came back to America and located in McKean township, where Henry now resides, and lived there until his death, February 26, 1879, aged 73. He was married in 1842, to Christina, daughter of George Knodle, formerly of McKean township. There were six children in the Knodle family, and they are all living at the time of this writing. This union was blessed with three children: Elizabeth, wife of John H. Blount, of McKean; Henry and Reinhardt (deceased). Henry Smith started in life in 1870, where he now resides, on a farm of 100 acres, in an excellent state of cultivation, with good buildings, and he is in a prosperous condition, located thirteen miles from Erie. He was united in marriage with Anna Garland December 27, 1870. This union is blessed with four children: Della, wife of James Quigley, of Pittsburg; Clara, Ida and Henry. Mr. Smith received a common school education. He never held any offices, and is a highly respected citizen of McKean township. The family are members of the M. E. Church. Politically he is a Republican.

W. W. Hershey, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born in Lancaster county January 28, 1854, son of Abraham and Fannie (Tomes) Hershey, of Summit township. The father of Mr. Hershey came to this county from Lancaster county in the year 1835, and settled in Summit township. They are the parents of three children: W. W., H. B. and Samuel A. W. W. Hershey married Catherine, daughter of Daniel Biebel, of Kearsarge, who was one of the early settlers of East Mill Creek township. Daniel Biebel reared a large family of children, viz.: Louisa, wife of August Cline, of Erie; Barbara, wife of Henry Hein, of Erie; George, Lizzie, wife of William Sechrist; John, Charlotte, wife of Anthony Metz, of Erie; Nick, Mary, wife of George Wingerter, of Erie; Catherine, wife of W. W. Hershey; and Daniel. Mr. Hershey is the father of the following children: Matilda, Katie, Amelia, Edward (deceased). He started in life in McKean township, where he now resides on a fine farm of fifty acres. Mr. Hershey is a member of St. Francis Church of McKean.

Henry J. Smith, farmer, postoffice Sterrettania, was born in Germany July 6, 1830, and is a son of Andrew and Eliza (Langood) Smith, natives of Germany, the former by occupation a prominent farmer of that country, who died at the age of 55 years. To this union were born a family of four children, as follows: Henry J.; Lawrence, of Germany; Julius, living in Germany, and Emil, of Germany. Henry J. Smith emigrated to America in 1851, located in McKean township, and went to work by the day. He then learned the trade of wagon-making, and followed that business for ten years in Sterrettania. He then moved back to the McGlothen farm and lived there three years. Then he bought a farm of fifty-seven acres, where he now lives. He also owns a farm of ninety-five acres, where his son now lives, with good buildings and in a high state of cultivation, located on the Town Line road, nine miles from Erie. He has always been a hard-working man and is highly respected by all his neighbors. Mr. Smith was united in marriage October 14, 1855, to Mary, daughter of Christian Veith (deceased), formerly of Fairview township, who by occupation was a prominent farmer of that township. There were seven children in the Veith family, six of whom are still living, viz.: Jacob, Christian, Caroline, Gottlieb, William and Louisa. To Mr. Smith and wife were born seven children: Louisa Emma, wife of Lewis Rusterholtz, of McKean township; Jerome, who was married November 17, 1885, to Lena Land (they were blessed with two children, Viola and Lena. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., of Erie, and is serving the office of school director at the present time); William, living in McKean township; Bertha, wife of George M. Steva, of Kearsarge; John (deceased) and Hattie (deceased). Mr. Smith never held any office. The family are members of the Lutheran Church.

E. E. Rose, postoffice Sterrettania, was born in McKean township, March 1, 1866, and is a son of J. C. and Lena (Dohl) Rose. The first of the Rose family to come to America was Jacob F. Rose, in 1842; he settled in Summit township, and lived there until death. Jacob F. Rose married Christina Famer. To this union were born six children, four of whom are now living, viz.: Fred, of Erie; J. C., living in Fairview; John, of Summit, and George, of Erie. J. C. Rose, father of E. E., was born in Germany, December 9, 1831. At the age of 22 years he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for eight years. He then bought a farm of sixty acres in McKean township, where his son now resides, and lived there until 1891, when he moved to Fairview, and engaged at carpentering. He was united in marriage January 1, 1890, to Lena, daughter of John Dohl, one of the old settlers of McKean township. This union was blessed with five children: Levi, Mary, Elem, Perry and Clary. Levi, born January 19, 1861, in Erie, is now living in McKean township, where he works a fine farm of 126 acres of land, in a good state of cultivation. He was married September 25, 1883, to Rettia Rappold. They are the parents of five children, viz: Harvey, William, Lester, Arthur and Erwin. J. C. Rose held the office of school director for a number of years. He is also a member of the A. O. U. W. of Fairview, and a member of the Evangelical Church. Politically he is a Republican.

J. L. Schwartz, farmer, postoffice Sterrettania, Erie county, Pa., was born in Mill Creek township, June 27, 1809, and is a son of Leo and Rose (Grandler) Schwartz, natives of Germany. The first of the Schwartz family to come to America was Leo, in 1807, locating on Long Island, New York. He only lived there fourteen months, and, in 1803, moved to where J. L. now resides. He was married in 1857 to Rosa Grandler, daughter of Joseph Grandler, formerly of Germany. There were ten children in the Grandler family, and the wife of Leo Schwartz was the youngest child. To this union was born one child, J. L., who started in business for himself in 1855, farming in McKean township, where he is now located on a farm of thirty acres, with the best of buildings and in good cultivation. The farm is on the Town Line road, nine miles from Erie, and is in a prosperous condition. Mr. Schwartz never held office. He is a highly respected citizen of McKean township, and was united in marriage February 3, 1885, to Lizzie, daughter of Lawrence Armbruster, a retired farmer. She was the youngest of five children: Charles U., Rosa C. and Leo L. are the children of this union. The family are members of the Catholic Church, of McKean. He is also a member of the Farmers' Alliance of McKean township, and is a member of the People's party. Leo Schwartz, father of J. L., died November 17, 1886, at the age of 59. His widow still survives him, and is living with her son, J. L.

Thomas Barron, farmer, postoffice McKean, Erie county, Pa., was born in McKean township, October 16, 1847, son of Valentine and Marguerite (Heppburn) Barron. Mr. Valentine Barron was born May 7, 1821, in Baden, Germany. October 1, 1835, he started for America, and was thirty-five days on the ocean. Shortly afterwards he went in the employ of Gen. Charles M. Reed, and remained there for a number of years. He then married Marguerite Heppburn, a native of Scotland. He then went farming on the Long place, a little west of Erie, and remained there three years. He next purchased a farm of P. S. Hamont, in Fairview township, and settled on it, living there for six years, cultivating it with good success. Then he purchased the Schluuff farm in McKean, living there ten years. In the meantime, seven children were born to this union, viz: Jane, wife of William Pfeffer, of McKean; Anthony, Peter J., Thomas, Thessa, wife of Jacob Franz, of Corry, Pa.;

Marguerite, wife of Edward McLaughlin, of McKean, and William. His wife died August 10, 1881, at the age of 70 years, and, in 1855, he married Mrs. Openkinch, then a resident of West Mill Creek township. He finally moved to Erie, and is living a retired life. Mr. Barron was noted for his punctuality, and worthily earned the respect of his neighbors. Thomas Barron started in life in 1880 at farming on the old homestead, having some money to start with; he now owns a fine farm of 115 acres, under a high state of cultivation. He was married February 10, 1880, to Elizabeth, daughter of Fred Yealey, formerly of Erie, Pa., and was the youngest of a family of four children, three of whom are now living: Ella S., Robert V., John F., and Florence A. Mr. Barron served as a school director for three years, and is a member of the Farmers' Alliance and the I. O. O. F. The family are members of the Catholic Church of McKean. Politically he is a Republican.

Adolph Rohl, wagonmaker, postoffice Sterrettania, Pa., was born in Germany January 22, 1835, and is a son of Carlton and Mary (Walcire) Rohl, natives of Germany; the former by occupation a prominent farmer. He was married to Mary Walcire. To this union were born five children: Augusta, born in 1829, and is living in Clarence, N. Y.; Fred, born in 1829, living in Marilla, N. Y.; William, born in 1835, living in Marilla, N. Y.; Adolph and Frederick, born in 1840, living in Elmer, N. Y. Adolph Rohl came to America from Germany November 14, 1858, located in Erie county, New York, and was engaged in the wagonmaking business in Marilla, N. Y., seven years, and in 1865 he moved to Erie county, Pennsylvania, and engaged in the wagonmaking business in Sterrettania, Pa., where he now owns a nice place and is doing a good business. He was united in marriage December 14, 1861, to Lucinda, daughter of Philip Cook, of Lancaster, N. Y. To this union were born a large family of children, as follows: William, born July 19, 1862, living at Clarence, N. Y.; Frederick, born August 25, 1863, died April 14, 1863; Carlton, born December 19, 1864, and died January 12, 1866; Lawrence, born May 27, 1866, living at Sterrettania; Adolph, jr., born June 22, 1868, living at Ashtabula, Ohio; Lizzie, born December 2, 1872, of Erie; Rettie, born August 8, 1879, living in Sterrettania. Mr. Rohl is a member of the Lutheran Church.

Henry Brown, farmer, postoffice McKean, Erie county, Pa., was born in McKean township, January 3, 1856, and is a son of Joseph and Lena (Bernhart) Brown, natives of Germany. Joseph Brown came to America from Germany, in 1850, and settled in McKean township, Erie county, living there for a short time. He then moved to Franklin township, and was engaged in farming for seven years, after which he came back to McKean township, and now is living a retired life. He was married in Erie, Pa., to Lena Bernhart. To this union were born a family of six children: Jacob, of Mill Creek; Francis (deceased), Henry, Michael, living in Oregon; J. T., Fred, of Mill Creek township, and Joseph (deceased). Henry Brown started farming in 1878, and in 1887 moved to the place where he now lives, on his father's farm of seventy-five acres of land. Mr. Brown was united in marriage, June 24, 1877, to Katie, daughter of Patrick about Nagosky

Delanty, formerly of New Castle, Pa. There are three children in the Delanty family: Katie, Maggie and Anna. This family has been blessed with five children: Joseph, Charles (deceased), John, Lucy and Frank. The family are members of the Catholic Church of McKean. Mr. Brown never held any offices. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., of Erie. Politically he is a Democrat.

H. I. Kreder, postoffice Sterrettania, was born in McKean township, where he now resides, December 6, 1829, and is a son of John and Susan (Hidlier) Kreder. The first of the Kreder family to settle in Erie county was Jacob, who came from Lancaster county and took a tract of land containing about 300 acres. When the county was first settled John Kreder was one of the pioneers of McKean township. He settled on land when the country was all a wilderness, and lived there sixty years. He was married December 25, 1838, to Susan, daughter of Curtis Hidlier (deceased), formerly of Fairview township. She was the eldest child in a family of ten children, eight of whom are living. To this union was born one child, L. H. Kreder. He started in life in 1860, farming on the old homestead, which contains 104 acres of land with good buildings, and is in a good state of cultivation. He was married October 30, 1866, to Susan, daughter of Manuel Weidel (deceased), formerly of Lancaster county, the eldest of a family of eight children. She died January 17, 1891, aged 47. This union was blessed with eight children: John, living in Willisgrove, Pa.; Charles, living at home; Minnie, wife of C. F. Pfeffer, of Fairview; Jennie, wife of John Luby, of McKean township; Sarah May, Frederick, Marcus and Anne. Mr. Kreder has held all the offices in the township, and is a highly respected citizen of the township. Politically he is a Republican.

J. J. Baron, retired farmer, postoffice McKean, was born in Germany August 15, 1823, and is a son of Peter and Julia (Stritzinger) Baron. Peter Baron came to America in 1833 and settled in McKean township when it was all a wilderness. He bought forty acres of land and cleared it; afterwards he purchased eighty-five acres. He was married to Julia Stritzinger. To this union were born seven children, viz.: Valentine; Elizabeth, wife of Peter Kellar; Frank; Anthony, J. J.; Frances, wife of Hiram Buman, and Mary, wife of Jacob Sanner. J. J. Baron started in life at the age of 22 at farming on the old homestead, working the place on shares four years. He then bought a farm of forty-seven acres, and, in 1861, bought the old Hauck place of 190 acres. Mr. Baron made his way in the world, having no money to start with, and now owns 150 acres of land in McKean township, with the best of buildings. He was united in marriage April 22, 1852, to Justine, daughter of Anthony Kellar, who was one of the early settlers of Greene township. Mr. Kellar also served in the Napoleon war. To this union were born eight children, viz.: Kate, born September 11, 1854, wife of Sebastian Gossman, postmaster of McKean township; Anthony M., born May 10, 1857, living in McKean township; Edward, born May 9, 1861, living on the old homestead; Jennie, born September 23, 1863, wife of James Chisholm, of Erie; Valentine, born November 22, 1866, living in Nebraska; Jerome, born July 31, 1868, of McKean; Nellie, born October 31, 1871, and Anna, born June 12, 1873, and died March 19, 1887. Mr. Baron is a member of the Roman Catholic Church of Middleboro. His wife died November 11, 1889, aged 59 years.

Frederick Leube, farmer, postoffice McKean, Erie county, Pa., was born in Prussia, Germany, November 6, 1825, and is a son of Henry and Mary (Neighouse), Leube, natives of Germany. The former was by occupation a farmer in Germany. He was married to Mary Neighouse. They were the parents of seven children, viz.: Philip (deceased), Hammet (deceased), Christina (deceased), William, living in Germany, and Elizabeth, wife of P. Woodman. Frederick Leube came to America October 3, 1857, and settled in Franklin township, Erie county, Pa., where he remained for two years, and in 1860 removed to McKean township and bought a farm of fifty acres, which he cleared and now has under a high state of cultivation, with good buildings. He was united in marriage May 23, 1851, to Lottie, daughter of Hammet Bax (deceased), formerly of McKean township. This union has been blessed with twelve children, viz.: William F., born in Prussia, Germany, June 18, 1852, and was united in marriage, September 10, 1875, to Julia Weremely; reside in Fairview township; Lena E., born in Prussia, Germany, November 7, 1854, is the wife of Hiram Dewault, of McKean. Hammet, born in Germany January 7, 1857, united in marriage February 7, 1881, to Lizzie Serr; reside in Vernon, Mich. Fred J., born in Franklin township December 1, 1858, was united in marriage March 3, 1881, to Helen Pratt; reside in McKean township. Henry, born in McKean November 30, 1860, and was united in marriage February 20, 1890, to Ella M. Hershey; reside in Summit township. Hannah, born in McKean, December 11, 1862; wife of Joseph Bowman, of Swanville, Erie county, Pa. Frank A., born in McKean December 12, 1864; resides in McKean. Emma, born in McKean December 26, 1866, wife of William Schurmer, of Mill Creek township. John H., born in McKean February 26, 1869; was united in marriage February 15, 1893, to Jennie Kreider; reside in McKean. Augusta, born in McKean July 16, 1872. Nettie L., born in McKean January 31, 1874, and Josie, born in McKean, August 27, 1875. Mr. Frederick Leube held the office of road commissioner six years. The family are members of the Lutheran Church of McKean township. Politically he is a Republican.

Leverette Cushman, farmer, postoffice Sterrettania, was born February 14, 1817, at Stafford Springs, Conn., and is a son of Luck and Hannah (Rocky) Cushman, natives of Connecticut. By occupation he was a carpenter. They were the parents of eight children, two of whom are now living, viz.: Murdock, of Plymouth, N. Y., and Leverette. The latter came to Erie county from Sherman, N. Y., in 1855, and settled in North East, where he lived until 1860, when he bought a farm of 163 acres in McKean near Sterrettania, where he now resides, with good buildings, and in an excellent state of cultivation. He was united in marriage to Anna Wilson. To this union have been born six children: Eliza (deceased), Emma, wife of Fred Brockway, of Ripley, N. Y.; Georgie, wife of Harry Gardner; Bertha, wife of Dr. M. Sadlier, of Ohio; D. R., attorney at law of North East; L. B., editor of the North East Sun; Carlton, of Washington, and Herbert of Ripley, N. Y. He never held any office, is a highly respected citizen of McKean township, and politically is a Republican.

Rev. Father F. P. Aaron, postoffice McKean, Erie county, Pa., was born in Clarion county, Pennsylvania, February 5, 1870, and is a son of Frank and Margaret (Cyphert) Aaron, the former born December 11, 1840, in Clarion county, Pennsylvania, where he was engaged in farming until his 28th year. He then went to Manhattan, Ill., and engaged in farming until his death, October 7, 1869. He was united in marriage, November 10, 1863, to Margaret, daughter of Henry Cypert, who was the fourth of a family of eleven children, seven of whom are living, viz.: Margaret, Thomas, of Corsica, Clarion county, Pa.; Gregory, of Crates, Clarion county, Pa.; James, M. D.; Rosa, wife of F. X. Markley; and Arthur, of Virginia. By this marriage were born three children, viz.: Harry C., of Kingsville, Pa.; Charles J., and Rev. F. P. Aaron, who received his education at St. Bonaventure's College, Allegany, N. Y., and February 24, 1893, he started to preach the gospel in Punxsutawney, Pa., and was there for about five months. He was then transferred to Middleboro, Erie county, Pa. George Aaron, grandfather of Rev. F. P. Aaron, was of one of the earliest families of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, where he was born and reared. He was married to Margaret Ruffner, a native of Westmoreland. To this union were born twelve children, seven of whom are now living: James, of Kansas; Thomas, of Chattsworth, Ill.; John, of Leavenworth, Kan.; Margaret, the wife of James Crow; Sylvester, of Crates; Joseph, of Butler county, Pennsylvania; and Sabylla, wife of Dr. J. A. Burgoyne, of Pittsburg.

Benjamin Rohrer, retired farmer, McKean, McKean township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, December 6, 1820, and is a son of David and Barbara (Kauffman) Rohrer, natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. They were the parents of eight children, three of whom are married: Fanny, wife of Frederick Schute; Eliza, wife of Frederick Metzger; Simon, united in marriage to Fanny Ruhl (born in 1816), of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Simon was born in 1809 in Lancaster county, and later became a resident of McKean township, Erie county, Pa., where he was engaged in the tannery business for a good many years. Michael, born January, 1810, in Lancaster county, is a resident of McKean, and was a farmer. David, born July 4, 1811, was a native of Lancaster, Pa., and was engaged in buying and selling cattle. Nancy (deceased), Abraham (deceased). Benjamin Rohrer came to Erie from Lancaster county in 1860, settling in McKean township, where he engaged with his brother in the tannery business until 1862; he then bought a farm of fifty acres in McKean township that he still owns. In 1891 he moved to Middleboro, and is living a retired life. He is a highly respected citizen, and politically he is a Republican.

George Schuetz, blacksmith, postoffice McKean, Erie county, Pa., was born in Baden, Germany, March 1, 1838, and is a son of Fred and Salmay (Lehnhart) Schuetz, natives of Germany. Mr. Schuetz was by occupation a blacksmith in Germany. He married for his first wife Salmay Lehnhart, in 1826. Their children are as follows: Salmay, who came to America in 1844; Frederick, of Baden, Germany, and George. He married for his second wife Mary Hetz. To this union were born three children, one of whom is living: Mary, wife of Jacob Muell, of Erie. George Schuetz came to America in 1865, settled in Fairview and engaged in blacksmithing for about one year, when he went to Franklin Center and was there one year. He then went to Branchville, Pa., and had a shop there for two years. In 1870 he moved to Middleboro and engaged in blacksmithing. Mr. Schuetz was united in marriage, January 1, 1866, to Barbara Gerber, daughter of John Gerber (deceased), a native of Baden, Germany. The Gerber family consisted of five children, three of whom are living, viz.: Mary, Jacob and Barbara. Their union has been blessed with two children, viz.: Emma, born October, 1866, and died August, 1888; and Albert, born January, 1871. He was married to Fannie Tome, a resident of Erie; they have one child. Mr. Schuetz has served in the offices of the Middleboro council three years, and town treasurer three years, and school director three years. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W., and P. H. C. of McKean. The family are members of the Swedenborg Church, of Erie. Politically he is a Democrat.

S. J. Gossman, postmaster and carriage manufacturer, Middleboro, Erie county, Pa., was born in Bavaria, Germany, February 11, 1853, and is a son of Michael and Anna (Wiendorf) Gossman (deceased); he was by occupation a farmer and blacksmith of Bavaria, Germany. He was married to Anna, daughter of Nicholas Weingard, natives of Germany. To this union were born seven children, viz.: Barbara, wife of Michael Ludwick, a blacksmith of Bavaria, Germany, and Killian, a farmer of Germany; Anna, wife of Nicholas Grenel, of Germany; Anthony, a farmer and blacksmith, of Germany; J. S. and John, of Germany. S. J. came to America in 1873, and located in New York city, and was engaged in the carpenter and shoe trade for two years. He was also in Philadelphia one year, and Pittsburg one year. In 1877 he came to Middleboro, and went to work in the Mankel Carriage Factory, and worked there twelve years. He then bought a half interest, and is now engaged in the manufacture of carriages and wagons. He was united in marriage in September, 1879, to Katie, daughter of J. J. Barron, one of the early settlers of McKean township. This union has been blessed with six children, viz.: Edward, born March 15, 1889; Victor, born May 1, 1891; Rachania, born October 15, 1893, and George Chester, Margaret and John (deceased). Mr. Gossman was appointed postmaster, June 1, 1895, and he also carries a complete stock of tobacco and cigars. He held the office of council of Middleboro three years. The family are members of the Catholic Church of Middleboro. Politically he is a Democrat.

Samson Short, manufacturer and capitalist, North East, Pa., was born in Chatham township, Tioga county, Pa., March 24, 1823, and is a son of John and Sally (Ferguson) Short. John Short, his father, was born in Connecticut in 1783. He came to Pennsylvania in 1815, and settled first on the Cowneska river, in Tioga county, living there but a short time. Then he moved to Chatham township, which was a wilderness, ten miles being the nearest point where a neighbor lived, and began to clear up a farm upon which he lived the balance of his days, departing this life at the age of 98 years. The other children of John Short (the three eldest being John, David and Lovell) all lived to a good old age. Of the children living, a daughter is the wife of Philip Close, now living in Chatham at the age of 80 years, and the two remaining sons, Samson and Benona, are still living, the former being 73 and the latter 71 years of age. At the age of 16 Samson Short left home and went to the lumber woods of Potter county, working eight years for the man who first employed him before he started in business for himself. He then built a large saw-mill in Potter county, where he continued in the lumbering business successfully until 1857, when, lumber having become scarce in that section, he went to Elk county and resumed his lumbering operations, manufacturing on an average five million feet of pine lumber per year, which was run by way of the Clarion, the Allegheny and the Ohio rivers to be marketed in Pittsburg, Cincinnati and Louisville. In 1867 he sold this lumbering property to his son, Alfred Short, and C. A. Wilcox, and moved to North East, expecting to retire from active business. He has, however, instead of this engaged with an active spirit in nearly every enterprise or industry that has contributed to the growth or progress of North East borough and township, besides being largely interested in Michigan and Missouri pine lands. He owns, at this writing, over 30,000 acres of timber lands in the State of Missouri. He is a stockholder in the Eureka Tempered Copper Company, the Short Manufacturing Company, the Columbian Novelty Company, and owns nearly all the stock of the Samson Fertilizer and Chemical Company; is the owner of the principal hotel in North East, the opera house and a large proportion of the business blocks, is proprietor of the Short Banking Company, and has been or is identified with a great majority of the larger business transactions of that section of Erie county. He was married in 1846 to Olive, daughter of George W. Sherman, of Sharon township, Potter county, Pa. The children of this union were Frank (deceased) and Alfred, now living in North East. His first wife having died, he was married again, in 1851, to Lucinda Wilcox, of Wells-ville, N. Y., and the result of this union was Frank J., who died at an early age. His second wife died in North East in 1869, and he was married the third time, in 1873, to Kate Nissel, of St. Mary's, Pa. The result of this union was three children, Anna and George, both deceased, and Mary, aged 11, now living. In politics he has been a staunch Democrat during his whole lifetime. He is enjoying good health, attending to his business every day, and does not appear to realize that he is getting old. It is the lot of but few men to become so largely and conspicuously identified with the progress, enterprise and industry of the locality in which they may make their homes through a long series of years, and from one end of the county to the other Samson Short's name is associated with public-spirited and progressive citizenship.

Alfred Short was born in Potter county, Pennsylvania, January 1, 1847. He is the son of Samson Short, whose personal memoirs are contained in this volume. Alfred Short took one year's course in academics at the Richburg Academy, Allegheny county,

New York, followed this by a three years' course at Friendship Academy, and completed his education in 1865 at Alfred University, Prof. W. C. Kenyon, principal. Mr. Short was first engaged in business at Brockport, Elk county, Pa., with C. A. Wilcox, with whom he was associated in lumbering and merchandising under the firm name of Short & Wilcox. In 1870 Mr. Short let his contract to his partner and came to North East, where he embarked in the dry-goods business with E. K. Nason, with whom he was associated, under the firm name of Nason & Short, until September, 1871, when he became the cashier of the banking firm of Blaine, Gould & Short, in which capacity he was engaged until 1878. He has had an active identification with all of the leading manufacturing interests of North East, namely: Short Manufacturing Company, the North East Canning Company, The New Era Organ Company, the Alfred Short Company (now Columbian Novelty Company) and the Eureka Tempered Copper Company, of which latter company he is the president and general manager. He is president of the North East Heat and Light Company. From 1884 to 1893 he was president of the People's Savings Bank, and at the time of its discontinuance, January, 1895, was treasurer of that institution. He has been for a number of years a member of the board of managers of the North East Cemetery, and was presiding officer of that body in 1894. Mr. Short is a Democrat, has been actively identified with his party's work, and has held numerous official trusts. He was a member of the Assembly in 1878, candidate for Congress in 1880, Burgess of North East in 1884-5-6, and president of the North East school board in 1892-3. Was a delegate to the Democratic national conventions of 1884 and 1892. He is a 32d degree Mason, a member of the blue lodge of North East, Temple Chapter of Erie, Mt. Olivet Commandery, Erie, and the Caldwell Consistory, of Bloomsburg, Pa.; he is also a member of the B. P. O. E., I. O. O. F., and other secret orders. Mr. Short was married January 1, 1872, to Helen A., daughter of the late Isaac Horton, formerly a prominent citizen of North East. Mr. and Mrs. Short have four children; Ida O., a graduate of La Salle Seminary; Alfred Lee, a student of Ann Arbor; Alice L. and Gladys E. Short. The family reside on South Lake street and attend the Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Short is a vestryman.

Ezra Scouller, president of the Scouller Milling Company, was born in North East township, Erie county, Pa., July 7, 1839. He is a son of the late John and Sarah Ann (Andrews) Scouller, the former a native of Scotland, and the latter of New York. John Scouller was born in Killbride, Lanark county, Scotland, October 15, 1804, and came to the United States in the early 30's, locating at Moorheadville, Erie county, Pa., where he for some years managed a flouring mill and distillery for the late Joseph Neely, subsequently renting the property and conducting both industries on his own account until 1839, when he removed to a farm which he had purchased in North East township. A year later he became associated with the late Chauncey Eastman in the rebuilding of the Franklin paper mill (destroyed by fire in 1838), which they operated in partnership for one year, when Mr. Eastman's interests were purchased by Mr. Scouller, who continued to conduct it until 1849, when he leased that property to Messrs. Blaine & De Long. In 1844 Mr. Scouller had built the flouring mill known as the Franklin Hollow Mill, and upon his removal to North East, his business was confined exclusively to the management of this mill until 1861, when he was succeeded therein by his son, Ezra. Mr. Scouller was a valued and respected citizen, and was often sought as a candidate for political preferences, honors which he declined to receive, with the exception of serving the borough of North East as Burgess for one term. He was one of the early directors of the Erie and North East R. R. He died June 3, 1867, surviving his wife fifteen years. Ezra Scouller was educated in the public schools of North East. His first business connection was as a member of the firm of Jones & Scouller, grocers, North East. This firm was succeeded by that of Scouller & Spier, of which Mr. Scouller was the senior member. In 1861 he succeeded his father as proprietor of the Franklin Flouring Mill, and is now president of the Scouller Milling Company, which, in addition to the flouring mill business, now handles lime, cement and building materials generally. Mr. Scouller was married April 25, 1861, to Joanna E., daughter of the late John Webb, an old resident of North East. Mr. and Mrs. Scouller have four children: John W., secretary, and William, treasurer, of the Scouller Milling Company; Anna B., wife of J. S. Corry, of New York, agent of the York Board and Card Company, of York, Pa., and a resident of Forest Hill, N. J., and Esther A. John W. Scouller married Miss Elizabeth Belknap, of North East. William Scouller married Miss Bessie Pratt, of New York city. Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Scouller and family reside at the corner of Gibson and North Lake streets, and attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Ezra Scouller is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

James Harrison Phillips was born in North East township, Erie county, Pa., November 11, 1837. He is a son of the late Anaziah and Sarah (Duncan) Phillips, the latter a native of North East, whose father came to the United States from Ireland and located at North East. James H. Phillips lost both parents during his early childhood. He was reared by an uncle, Archibald Duncan, a farmer of North East township. He completed his education at Poland Seminary, Mahoning county, Ohio, in 1857, and thereafter engaged in farming with his uncle, whose heir he became. He has since added materially to the acreage inherited, and is now one of the leading horticulturists of the township. In conjunction with farming he was engaged, from 1868 to 1870, in the manufacture of wagon and carriage spokes; and, from 1857 to 1880, engaged in the sale of all kinds of agricultural implements. He was one of the early stockholders of the People's Savings Institution, and afterward a member of its board of directors. He was a member for a number of years of the Erie County Agricultural Society, of which he was president for two years; was a member of the board of school directors for the township three years. He was married January 7, 1869, to Louisa, daughter of the late Ira Loomis, a farmer of Ripley township, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips have three children: Archie Duncan Phillips, horticulturist; Edward L. Phillips, a student at Grove City College, and Harold Dean Phillips, a student at North East. The family reside at the corner of Gibson and Pearl streets, and are members of the Presbyterian Church, the board of trustees of which Mr. Phillips has been a member for some years.

Dr. Amos Buffon Heard was born in Cussewago, Crawford county, Pa., September 10, 1837. He is a son of the late James and Orpha M. (Button) Heard. James Heard was a native of Crawford county and of Welsh descent. He engaged in farming for many years in his native county, and spent the latter years of his life in Genesee county, Michigan, where he died March 20, 1895. He was twice married, his first wife, Orpha M. Button, being a descendant of early Puritan settlers of New England. She died in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, in 1841. Amos Button Heard received his initial schooling in the public schools of his native township, attended the State Normal school in Edinboro two terms, and completed his general education at the Kingsville (Ohio) Academy. He had just entered upon the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. William Gamble, of Mosier-town, Pa., when the war broke out, and he enlisted in Col. McLean's regiment, subsequently becoming master of transportation in the quartermaster's department, under Major Phelps, and continued in that service until the close of the war. He then resumed the study of medicine with Dr. William Bullock, of Flint, Mich., and in 1867 entered the medical department of Michigan University, Ann Arbor. After two terms spent in this institution he entered the Detroit Medical College, and graduated therefrom in 1872. He then entered upon the practice of his profession in Flushing, Mich., where he remained for four years, thence removing to Ripley, N. Y., where he spent the following seven years. In 1880 he located in North East, Pa., where he has ever since resided and is still engaged in the practice of his profession. Dr. Heard's public service at North East has been chiefly devoted to its educational interests, and he has served twelve years as a member of the school board of that borough. He was married September 15, 1867, to Amanda J., daughter of the late Edward Stuntz, a native of Erie county. Edward Stuntz was a prominent and public spirited citizen and held numerous offices of trust, among them those of county surveyor and sheriff. His father, George Stuntz, a native of Leipzig, Saxony, came to Pennsylvania early in the century, and was a pioneer Methodist preacher, with a circuit that extended from Northwestern Pennsylvania through Eastern Ohio to Northern Kentucky. Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Heard have five children: Mary K. Heard, a graduate of the pharmaceutical department of the Michigan University; Ralph E. Heard, a graduate of the law department of the Michigan University, and now practicing law in Buffalo, N. Y.; James Lewis Heard, a graduate of the medical department of the Michigan University, for one year assistant to Charles Neureed, professor of surgery of that institution, and now associated with his father in medical practice in North East; Corydon F. Heard, a student in the medical department of Michigan University; and Fausta Heard, a student at the North East high school. The family reside at 47 North Main street, and are members of the Methodist Church.

Robert Joseph Moorhead was born at Moorheadville, Harbor Creek township, Erie county, Pa., April 2, 1852. He is a son of the late Joseph Byers and Eliza (Hampson) Moorhead, both of whom were natives of Erie county. Joseph Byers Moorhead was a son of John Moorhead, who with his brothers, Robert and George Moorhead, located early in the century in Harbor Creek township, at the place that afterward took its name from the family, and is still known as Moorheadville, located four miles west of North East, the Moorhead farms being the eastern boundary of Harbor Creek township. Joseph Byers Moorhead removed to North East with his family in 1865, and carried on a forwarding commission business until 1873, when he located at Cadiz, Ohio, and was there in the employ of the American Express Company, up to the time of his decease, March 10, 1880. His widow returned to North East, where she continued to reside until her death, September 6, 1891. Robert J. Moorhead completed his education at the North East Academy, in 1869. For one year thereafter he was bookkeeper for Ezra Scouller's milling business, and next year was bookkeeper for the First National Bank at North East. In April, 1871, he took charge of the books of the Second National Bank of Erie, in which capacity he was employed until October, 1872, when he was put in charge of the Savings Bank, Foxburg, Clarion county, Pa., the controlling interests of which institution were owned by John W. Hammond, Judge Selden Marvin, Joseph I. Town and Hon. Orange Noble, of Erie. In 1874, Mr. Moorhead embarked in the oil brokerage business at Parker's Landing, Armstrong county, and continued in that business at Oil City and Pittsburg, until his retirement in 1885, having for the last two years of that period a partnership interest at Pittsburg with S. S. Pinkerton, under the firm name of Pinkerton & Moorhead. Since his retirement from the oil business Mr. Moorhead has resided at North East, and is now president of the Short Manufacturing Company, having purchased a controlling interest therein in 1888. Aside from this and an extensive vineyard interest, he has no other business connection. He was unmarried, resides at the corner of Main and Pearl streets with his sister, Miss May Moorhead, the site of their place of residence being historic in the annals of the Presbyterian Church as the spot where in 1801, the first communion of that church was served in the county. Mr. and Miss Moorhead are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Dennis Denman Loop, M. D., was born at Mina (now Sherman), Chautauqua county, N. Y., June 19, 1827. He is son of the late Peter and Sena (Spencer) Loop, natives of New York, who in December, 1830, located in North East township, where they resided upon a farm until the death of the former in 1854, when his widow removed to the borough of North East, where she died August 5, 1880. Dennis D. Loop received a public school education and then began the study of medicine, under the preceptorship of the late Dr. James L. Hall, with whom he was subsequently engaged in the practice until 1853, thereafter engaging in practice alone. He entered the medical department of the University of Buffalo, from which institution he was graduated in 1864. Immediately following his graduation he was elected a member of the board of curators of his alma mater and is still a member of that board. Returning to North East, he resumed the practice of his profession, in which he has ever since been engaged, making a speciality of surgery and treatment of lung diseases. He has been the surgeon at North East for the Lake Shore and Michigan

Southern R. R. for more than twenty-five years. He has been president of the Erie County Medical Society, president of the Medical Society of Southwestern New York and a member of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and of the National Medical Association. Dr. Loop has given largely of his time in the interests of good local government, holding the office of Burgess for several terms, serving as school director for two terms and as a member of the council for ten or twelve years. Dr. Loop was thrice noble grand of the I. O. O. F., and has held all the lodge offices of that order except that of guard. He is a member of Mystic Lodge, of Erie, Knights of Honor, and in Masonry is a member of Chapter, Council and Knight Templar. He was married January 10, 1850, to Rebecca, daughter of the late Cyrus and Delilah Dolph, of Grahamville, Erie county, Pa. Mr. Dolph died in 1854, his wife in 1852. Mrs. Dr. Loop died March 14, 1894. She had two children, Alice Amelia and Carrie A. Alice A. Loop married Allen D. Husted, of the insurance firm of C. B. Armstrong & Co., of Buffalo, N. Y. Mrs. Husted died March 1, 1890, leaving one child, Dennis W. Husted, a student. Miss Carrie A. Loop resides with her father at 27 East Main street, North East. Dr. Loop has been a member of the Methodist Church of North East for more than forty years, for thirty-five years of that period having official connection with it.

Clark D. Jameson, North East, Pa., was born at Hamburg, Erie county, N. Y., April 5, 1823. His parents were Hugh and Susannah (Moore) Jameson, natives of New England, the former of Scotch-Irish descent. Clark D. Jameson received but little schooling, beginning when 12 years of age to assist in clearing up his father's farm in Brant and continuing to work on that farm until 18 years of age, when he came to North East and engaged with the firm of Chapel & Perkstaff in learning cabinetmaking. In 1850 he embarked for himself as a manufacturer of furniture and coffins, establishing in connection therewith an undertaking business, which he has ever since conducted, and in which he is now exclusively engaged, having in 1888 sold out the furniture manufacturing branch. He is associated in business with his stepson, James B. Stull. Mr. Jameson was married September 7, 1848, to Eliza, daughter of Manuel Henshaw, of Erie county, New York. Mrs. Jameson died October 17, 1858, leaving two children, Grace A., now wife of James P. Goodrich, formerly a photographer of North East, and Lillie Adelia, now wife of Byron Munson, who is engaged in the baking business at Pasadena, Cal. Mr. Jameson married December 11, 1862, Lorency S. (Beebe) Stull, whose only son, James B., is mentioned above as the business associate of Mr. Jameson. Mrs. Lorency Jameson died February 12, 1889. Since Mr. Jameson's embarkation in business as funeral director ten different firms and individuals have attempted to compete with him, but this firm is the only one engaged in the undertaking business at the present time. He resides at the corner of Lake and Clay streets and is a member of the Methodist Church.

William Frankland Allison, proprietor of the Brawley House, and the oldest living man native of North East, was born July 25, 1829. He is a son of the late David and Elizabeth (Mills) Allison, the former a native of North East township and of Scotch descent and the latter a native of Hamilton, Ontario, and of English descent. David Allison's business throughout life was that of hotel keeping. He was for many years proprietor of the Central House and later of the North East (now Brawley) House. He was a man of considerable local importance, holding numerous offices and serving a number of years as colonel in the State militia. He died in 1852, surviving his wife several years. William F. Allison had a common school education, was associated with his father in the hotel business at an early age and has been continuously engaged in that line nearly sixty years. He was married in 1860 to Antoniette, daughter of the late Richard Brawley, former proprietor of the Brawley House. Mrs. Allison died in 1874, leaving one child, Lizzie wife of Frederick J. Carpenter, of the firm of Bingham & Carpenter, hardware merchants of North East.

George Henry Fernald was born in Monroe township, Ashtabula county, July 8, 1864. He is the son of the late Moses and Ellen E. (Hooker) Fernald, the former a native of Ohio, and of American descent; the latter a native of New York and of American descent. Moses Fernald died in 1894; his widow resides in Chautauqua county, New York. George H. Fernald was educated in the public schools of Findley's Lake, and then took a commercial course at Clark's Business College, Titusville, Pa. He learned the tinner's trade, after which he embarked in the insurance business in Findley's Lake, and in conjunction therewith conducted a hardware business for three years. He sold out his interests in Findley's Lake, and April 1, 1891, removed to North East, where he became associated as traveling salesman with the Scudder Milling Company. A year later he purchased George Hampson's and R. C. Spooner's fire insurance business, and conducted that until July, 1893, when he became secretary and treasurer of The Alfred Short Company. Upon the organization, November 20, 1893, of the Columbian Novelty Company, incorporated, Mr. Fernald became its president and general manager. He was married May 9, 1887, to Belle, daughter of the late Robert Skellie, of Findley's Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Fernald have one child, Russell G., reside on South Lake street, and attend the Methodist Church. Mr. Fernald is a member of the Mason's order, I. O. O. F. and the Royal Arcanum.

Rev. Farrell Briody was born near Kilnaleck, County Cavan, Ireland. He was educated in the public schools of his native county, and then took a four years' classical course at Ballynacree, under a private tutor. In 1866 he came to the United States and entered St. Bonaventure's College, Allegany, N. Y., and, upon the completion of his theological studies, was, in 1873, ordained priest for the diocese of Erie, for which he had been adopted two years previous by the Rt. Rev. Tobias Mullen. He was appointed to the charge of St. Gregory's, North East, and St. John's, Girard, and, with headquarters at Erie, attended these congregations upon alternate weeks for four years. In 1877 he located at North East, where he had in the meantime succeeded in adding materially to the congregation, enlarged and remodelled the church edifice, purchased property adjoining the church, improved that property, and bought property and established the Catholic cemetery, three miles west of North East. Father Briody's present charge includes North East, Moorheadville, Harbor Creek, Swanville, Fairview, Girard and Springfield, numbering in all about 120 families.

Michael Edward Clune, proprietor of the Palace Hotel, North East, Pa., was born in County Clare, Ireland, August 7, 1863. He is a son of the late Patrick and Hannah (Cullen) Clune, natives of County Clare, who came to the United States early in 1864, and located in Boston, Mass. Mr. Clune immediately enlisted in a Massachusetts regiment, in which he served until the close of the war. In 1866 he removed his family to Oil City, Pa., where he was engaged in the cooper's business until 1868, removing thence to Tionesta, Pa., where he was engaged in the same business until 1874. The following year he spent in Europe. He then re-located at Oil City, Pa., where he died in 1885. His wife died in 1869. Michael E. Clune completed his education at St. John's College, Buffalo; was first engaged in the hotel business as clerk at the Petroleum House, Oil City; was for ten years thereafter connected with the United States Hotel at Franklin, Pa., and for the following four years at the Wilson House, Erie, Pa., and in October, 1893, came to North East to assume the proprietorship of Short's Palace Hotel. He was married July 20, 1891, to Miss Anna McMinnamon, of Franklin, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Clune are communicants of St. Gregory's. Mr. Clune is a member of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association.

Samuel Smith Hammond was born at Canandaigua, N. Y., August 31, 1817. He is a son of the late David and Deborah (Jones) Hammond, the former a native of New Haven, Conn., and the latter of Canandaigua, N. Y. David Hammond was a farmer, who came with his family to Erie county, Pennsylvania, late in the winter of 1821, traversing the ice of Lake Erie by ox-team sledge from Buffalo to Barcelona, and from the latter place through the woods to Harbor Creek township, where he purchased a farm and continued to reside until his death, in 1825. His widow married Robert Hampson about 1827, and removed immediately thereafter to North East township, where she died in 1890. After his mother's second marriage, Samuel S. Hammond had his home until his 15th year with John McCord, a farmer of North East township. He then learned the trade of carpenter and joiner at Gibsonville (now North East), with the late Benjamin R. Tuttle, with whom he remained until he attained his majority. He then entered into the carpentry business for himself, and continued to be so engaged until 1856, building the majority of the dwelling houses erected at North East during that period. From 1856 to 1860 he was postmaster at North East, running a general store in connection therewith. In 1860 he spent a season in the gold regions of Colorado; returning thence, he was made station agent at North East, and was employed in that capacity for five years. In 1865 he was elected to the office of justice of the peace for the borough of North East, a position to which he was re-elected at intervals, and is now the incumbent in the twentieth year of his service. He has also served the borough as a member of its council and school board for several terms each, and as its Burgess for one term. He was married in March, 1839, to Sena, daughter of the late John Dunton, then of Fredonia, N. Y., later of North East township, where he died. Mrs. Hammond died in 1884, leaving three children; John whose personal history is contained in this volume, William and Cynthia A. One child, Rush, died when 17 years of age. William Hammond resides in North East. Cynthia A. Hammond married John S. Paden, of North East. Mr. and Mrs. Paden have two children, John and Frederick, the former in the dry goods business in New York city, the latter a telegraph operator in Connecticut. Mr. S. S. Hammond resides with his children, Mr. and Mrs. Paden, 36 South Lake street.

Rev. Benjamin Eugene Hillman was born in Sandusky, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., June 19, 1848. He is a son of the late Benjamin and Lucy A. (Markham) Hillman, both natives of New York. The Hillman family is descended from one of the earliest settlers of Martha's Vineyard. The late Benjamin Hillman was one of the prominent merchants of Sandusky, N. Y., where he held numerous positions of public trust, among them, and for a period of thirty-six years, that of town clerk. He died in Sandusky in October, 1873. His widow is now a resident of Independence, Mo. Benjamin E. Hillman received his initial schooling in Sandusky, and then took a course in academics at Ten Broeck Free Academy, Franklinville, N. Y. Determining upon the ministry as his profession, he entered Rochester Theological Seminary, where he had spent but one year, when failing health and the decease of his father led to his temporarily abandoning his seminary course. In 1873 he was ordained to the Baptist ministry while pastor at Belfast, Allegany county, N. Y., and remained with his charge until 1876. He was next pastor of the Church at Springville, Erie county, N. Y., where he remained for three years, and for one year following this, filled the pulpit at East Aurora. In 1879 he resumed his course at Rochester Theological Seminary and was graduated from that institution with the class of '82. Prior to his graduation he had accepted a call to the Franklinville Baptist Church, with which charge he remained until the spring of 1887, when he resigned to accept a call to the pastorate of the Baptist Church of North East, Pa. He resigned this charge October 1, 1894, and retired from the pastorate, and has since devoted his attention to grape culture and other farming and business interests. He was one of the founders and is manager of the Acme Electric Light and Power Company of North East. He was for four years a member of the school board, serving one year as presiding officer and three years as secretary of that body. He was married to Belle, daughter of the late William Thurber, of Olean, N. Y. Rev. and Mrs. Hillman reside at the corner of South Lake and Eagle streets. Dr. Hillman is a member of the Masonic order, and of the A. O. U. W.

Rev. Theodore Charles Beach was born in Bristol, Conn., February 21, 1841. He is a son of the late Charles and Mary (Granniss) Beach, natives of Connecticut, the former of Scotch, the latter of English descent. Charles Beach was a manufacturer, and was for many years engaged in business in Bristol, where he died in 1894. Theodore C. Beach completed his education at the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1865. The same year he joined the New York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was connected therewith for the succeeding twenty-five years, during that period holding successively the pastorates of the Methodist Churches at Unionville, Conn., Roslyn, N. Y., Northport, N. Y., Southold, N. Y., Great Neck, N. Y., and Reading, Ridgefield, Winstead, and Plainville, Conn. In the fall of 1889 Dr. Beach was transferred to the Erie Conference and stationed at Meadville, Crawford county, Pa., in charge of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of that place, where he remained for three years. He was then called to the Methodist Episcopal Church of North East, Pa. He was married September 5, 1865, to Luanna F., daughter of the late Charles Merritt, a farmer of Williamsburg. Dr. and Mrs. Beach have four children: Bertha Louise, Grace Lillian, Lulu Frances and Theodore Merritt Beach. The family reside at 21 Park street. Dr. Beach is a member of the Masonic order, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and the Junior Order of the United American Mechanics.

Lee Granger was born in Portland, Chautauqua county, N. Y., March 18, 1845. He is a son of the late David and Juline Webster Granger, natives of New York. He received his education in the public schools of his native county and then went to the oil country, where he was employed in drilling until 1871, when he located in North East, Erie county, Pa., where he has since resided. He was for one year proprietor of a bakery and later conducted a meat market in North East, and for one year was engaged in the same business at 1213 State street, Erie. He is superintendent of the Heat and Light Company, North East. Mr. Granger was married November 6, 1872, to Sabina E., daughter of the late George W. and Elizabeth (Cochran) Law. George W. Law, who died in 1853, was a native of North East township. His father, Joseph Law, located in Erie county early in the century and died in 1851, aged 81 years. Elizabeth (Cochran) Law was born in North East township in 1825, where she resided throughout her life and up to her decease, November 5, 1895. She was a daughter of the late Richard Cochran, who came from Ireland and was one of the early settlers of Erie county. Mr. and Mrs. Lee Granger reside at 46 South Lake street and are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Granger is a member of the Masonic order.

Dyer Loomis was born in North East township October 1, 1810. He is a son of the late Dyer and Nancy (Wood) Loomis, the former a native of Connecticut, the latter of Rhode Island. Dyer Loomis, sr., went to Erie county in 1796 to join his brother Henry, who had located there the previous year. They took up a tract of land (tract 154) from the Population Company of 400 acres, in what is now North East township, adjoining the present borough of North East on the east. It was upon a portion of this tract that Dyer Loomis, jr., was born, still resides, and in whom title vests as heir of the original purchaser. Dyer Loomis, sr., was an esteemed and honored citizen, and held numerous offices in the early history of the township; was its first constable and the first deputy sheriff of the county. He died in 1842, surviving his wife four years. His son, Dyer, was reared on the farm, receiving such education as the early schools afforded, and becoming a teacher at the age of 18, taught four years during the winter season in the township schools, and for one summer in the borough. He then completed his own education, taking a term each at the Worthington and Milan (O.) academies. Returning to North East and finding his father in feeble health, he assumed the cares of the farm, which he subsequently inherited. He was married in May, 1839, to Eliza M., daughter of the late Thomas Robinson, one of the pioneer settlers and the first justice of the peace of North East township. She died in November, 1867, and Joseph W. Loomis, ex-prothonotary of Erie county, died in January, 1896. Other deceased children, Lamartine L. and Mary E., both died in the winter of 1862, the former of typhoid fever, contracted through exposure while serving as a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, and the latter from the same disease, contracted while nursing her brother. Joseph W. Loomis was also a soldier in the late war, and it was because of letters written by him from the front, predicting a long continued struggle, asserting that many thousands of additional troops would be required, and asking what North East would do in the extremity, that led his father, then (1862) 52 years of age, to assist in raising a company, efforts to accomplish which had been unsuccessfully made by several patriotic citizens. Through his personal popularity and the confidence which he enjoyed in the community, Dyer Loomis succeeded in two weeks in enlisting a full company and twenty additional men, and as his captain was sent to the front with the 145th P. V. L. He was made prisoner at Chancellorsville and taken to Libby Prison, from which he was paroled in bad health, which led to his discharge and return home a little more than a year after his enlistment. In addition to his farming interests, Mr. Loomis has had identification with both the mercantile and manufacturing interests of North East. For several years before the war and thereafter to 1878, he was engaged in the manufacture of brick, and during this period built the great majority of the brick dwellings and other brick structures in the borough and township of North East. He established a harness manufactory, which he conducted for nine years, and was, from 1870 to 1886, proprietor of a shoe store in North East. He was for thirty-five years a justice of the peace for Erie county at North East, seven consecutive terms, from 1845 to 1880, and was then appointed notary public, holding that office for three terms, up to 1891. Mr. Loomis has been a member of the Presbyterian Church since December, 1831, has been a member of the board of trustees of that church for many years, and one of the elders since November, 1894. He is permanent clerk of the congregation and clerk of the session, and was for more than twenty years superintendent of the Sunday school. He was a member of the first temperance society formed in North East, known as the North East Temperance Society, an organization that was founded in 1830, by Dyer Loomis, sr., and six associates. Dyer Loomis, jr., has throughout his life devoted himself steadfastly to the best interests of the community, lending always especially active service to the cause of temperance. In addition to looking after his own business interests throughout an unusually long and active life, his service as administrator of estates and executor of wills, have, because of his recognized ability and uncompromising integrity, been very frequently called into requisition, he having acceptably managed about thirty estates.

Orville Roland Gillette and Captain James Wheeler, of the Park Drug Store, North East, Pa., are half brothers, whose mother was first married to Orville Gillette, a native of New York, and of French descent, and who was engaged in business as a farmer and millwright at LeBeauf, Erie county, Pa., where he died in 1866. His widow married James Theodore Wheeler, a lumberman of Corry, Pa., who subsequently engaged in business in Cleveland, Ohio, returning thence, in 1892, to LeBeauf, where he died. His wife met with an accident by which she lost her life in 1875. Orville R. Gillette was born at LeBeauf, February 3, 1863, completed his education at Waterford Academy in 1884, and then entered the employ of Ross & Wilson, druggists of North East. A year later he purchased Dr. M. A. Wilson's interest in the drug business, the firm thereafter being known as E. E. Ross & Co. In 1889 Mr. Gillette went to Patterson, N. J., where he was engaged in the drug business until 1892, when he returned to North East, and has since been associated with the Park Drug Store. He was married April 17, 1888, to Winifred Frances, daughter of Moses B. Parsons, of Liongion, Pa. Mr. Gillette holds diplomas from the State Boards of Pharmacy of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, is a member of the Masonic fraternity, a member of the I. O. O. F., R. A., J. O. U. A. M., and Knights of St. John and Malta. Captain James Wheeler was born in August, 1872, graduated from the Waterford Academy in 1892, and from the Erie Business College in 1893, since which time he has been associated with the Park Drug Store, North East. Mr. Wheeler is a member of the J. O. U. A. M.

William Theodore Kopcke was born in the province of Pommern, Prussia, January 13, 1863. He is a son of Henry and Minnie (Luke) Kopcke, who came to the United States with their children in 1869, and located in North East, Pa., where they still reside. William T. Kopcke was educated in the German Lutheran and public schools of North East, and at the age of 15 entered the clothing store of James S. Haynes, with whom he remained until the death of the latter in 1885. He then, in conjunction with his half brother, Helmut F. Smith, purchased the clothing stock and business from the estate of his late employer, and the partnership thus formed conducted the business under the firm name of Smith & Kopcke, until 1887, when Mr. Kopcke purchased his partner's interest. The demands of a rapidly increasing business necessitated the erection in 1890 of the handsome edifice now occupied by Mr. Kopcke, at 11, 13 and 15 West Main street. Mr. Kopcke has served three years as a member of the North East council. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, of the Royal Arcanum and of the Knights of St. John and Malta. Mr. Kopcke was married September 25, 1884 to Ella, daughter of Michael Conners, of North East, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Kopcke have two children, Harry and Rudolph, and reside at 48 West Main street, in a beautiful home built by Mr. Kopcke in 1893.

John Friedrich Oldach was born in the Province of Pommern, Prussia, January 24, 1857. He is a son of the late John and Sophia (Heiden) Oldach, who came to the United States in May, 1804, and located in North East township, where the elder Oldach engaged in farming, until his decease, May 29, 1875. His widow survives, and resides in the borough of North East. John F. Oldach completed his education at the German parochial school in North East, and then entered the employ of A. F. Jones & Co., dry goods merchants of North East, being associated with that firm from March 2, 1872, to October, 1879, when he was made a partner in the business, the firm being known as Jones & Oldach, until February, 1890, when Mr. Oldach purchased his partner's interest and has since conducted the business alone. In 1894 Mr. Oldach built the extensive block which he now occupies as 9 and 11 South Lake street. In addition to his dry goods business, Mr. Oldach has vineyard interests in the township. He was for some years a member of the North East board of health. He was married September 2, 1880, to Johanna, daughter of the late Rev. E. Leenhuis, for fourteen years pastor of the German Evangelical Lutheran Church at North East, and who died in 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Oldach have five children, Gertrude, Herman, John, Hilda and Margurita, reside at 18 Division street, and are members of the German Evangelical Lutheran Church.

James Henry.

Nicholas T. Bogenschutz, furniture dealer, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., June 6, 1862. He is a son of John and Sophia (Strack) Bogenschutz, natives of Germany. Miss Sophia Strack came to this country with her parents, who located at Buffalo, where she married John Bogenschutz, then a shoemaker of that place. He was a soldier in the late war, serving in a regiment of the N. Y. V. L., and now lives at the Soldiers Home at Bath, N. Y. His wife died in 1876. Nicholas T. Bogenschutz completed his schooling at the normal school, Fredonia, N. Y. He learned furniture finishing with G. W. Blood, of Fredonia, and, in 1878, went to North East, where he learned cabinet making with John S. Paden and others. In August, 1883, he established a furniture repair shop at North East, and from that very modest beginning added gradually to his business until, in 1893, he was able to erect the commodious structure now occupied by him as furniture dealer and manufacturer, at 13 and 15 South Lake street, the only establishment of its kind at North East. He was married April 11, 1883, to Clara, daughter of John Ehmk, of North East. Mr. and Mrs. Bogenschutz have three children, Ruth, Pearl and Rilla, reside on South Pearl street, and attend the Methodist Church. Mr. Bogenschutz is a member of the Royal Arcanum.

Charles Frederick Wilks was born in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Prussia, October 19, 1852. His parents, Charles and Sophia (Schultz) Wilks, came to the United States in 1855, taking up their residence at Silver Creek, Chautauqua county, N. Y., thence removing a year later to North East, Pa. Mr. Charles Wilks is a farmer. His wife died in June, 1892. Charles F. Wilks was educated in the public and parochial schools of North East; learned the trade of carpenter, and, immediately thereafter, in 1886, established a shoe store in the Duncan Block, removing thence to his present location, 9 West Main street, in December, 1890. He was married October 20, 1875, to Elizabeth J., daughter of the late Helmut Smith, a native of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, where he died, and whose widow remarried Henry Kopcke, who removed with his family to the United States in 1869, and located in North East. Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Wilks have one child, Karl William, reside at the corner of Vine and Poplar streets, and attend the Methodist Church. Mr. Wilks is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and the Knights of St. John and Malta.

Frederick James Smedley was born in North East October 5, 1856. He is a son of the late Frederick B. and Susan (Marsh) Smedley, natives of Litchfield county, Connecticut, where they were married, and whence they went to North East, Pa., in 1853. Frederick B. Smedley was a farmer and continued to reside in North East township throughout his life, living latterly in the borough. He died in January, 1892. Frederick J. Smedley completed his education at the Lake Shore Seminary, North East, from which institution he was graduated in June, 1877. He was for five years an employe of the late M. L. Selkregg, grocer at North East, and was thereafter, and up to 1893, engaged in the same business at the same place, having for a short time, at the beginning of his business career, a partnership association with James A. McDonald. He was appointed to his present position of postmaster at North East by President Cleveland in 1895. He resides at 28 East Main street with his sister, Miss Emma Smedley. Another sister, Kate, is the wife of S. P. Whitehill, a farmer of North East township.

Fred Oscar Davis was born in North East, October 13, 1868. He is a son of O. W. and Carrie A. (Hopkins) Davis, the former a native of North East, Pa., and the latter a native of New York State. Fred O. Davis was educated in the public schools of North East, and was first employed under his father, then postmaster at North East. In 1883 he entered the employ of the People's Savings Institution, North East, as messenger, and was successively promoted in that bank, becoming its cashier in 1892, a position which he held until the suspension of that institution January 23, 1895, and of which he is now assignee. He is engaged in the livery business at North East, and has also vineyard interests in North East township. He was married November 7, 1891, to Miss Nellie L., daughter of G. W. Butt, a farmer of North East township. Mr. and Mrs. Davis have one child, Marie, reside on West Main street, and attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Davis is a member of the Masonic order and of the Royal Arcanum.

Charles Henry Durham was born in Harmony, Chautauqua county, N. Y., November 23, 1843. He is a son of the late Daniel A. and Fidelia (Truesdell) Durham, also natives of Harmony, and of Scotch-English descent. Daniel A. Durham engaged throughout his life in farming, and died December 7, 1893; his wife, June 12, 1877. Charles H. Durham was educated in the public schools of his native town. In August, 1863, he enlisted in Co. D, 12th N. Y. V. L., was mustered in September 12th following, and served throughout the war, receiving his discharge July 3, 1865. The 12th was with the 18th army corps, of which it was a part; also participated in the engagements at Cold Harbor, Chapin's Farm and other battles. From 1865 to 1875 Mr. Durham was engaged in farming in Chautauqua county. The latter year he purchased a drug store and grocery at Ashville, N. Y. Two years later he sold out his store, and was thereafter engaged in handling butter and cheese until 1889, when he established a general store in Findley's Lake, where he remained until his removal to North East in 1893. He is at present engaged in the fire and life insurance business, having the agency for the following companies: Liverpool, London and Globe; Hartford, of Hartford, Conn.; Phoenix, of Brooklyn; Home, of New York; Sun Insurance Office, Springfield; American Central, Glen's Falls; Manchester, of Manchester, and Lancashire, of Lancashire, England. He was married April 19, 1866, to Miss Eleanor A., daughter of the late Daniel King, a farmer of Chautauqua county, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Durham reside at 36 South Lake street. Mr. Durham is a member of the Masonic order, the I. O. O. F., G. A. R., and A. O. U. W.

Ferdinand Reibs was born in Demein, province of Pomeran, Prussia, March 5, 1850. He is a son of Henry and Sophia (Gorndt) Reibs. His father was a cooper in the fatherland, where he died in 1862. His widow married Charles Hillman, and now resides in Fremont, Neb. Ferdinand Reibs, after receiving a public school education and spending three years in learning the grocery business in Germany, came to the United States in 1867. He spent three years in Nebraska, and, in the spring of 1871, located at North East, where he was variously engaged until 1878, when he entered the employ of J. E. Kendig, grocer, with whom he remained a year and a half, then assuming charge of a branch store established by Mr. Kendig at No. 5 Wall street, North East. This business Mr. Reibs purchased in 1882 and continues to conduct it at the location named, in conjunction with a hardware and stove department established in 1892 in the adjoining building, No. 7 Wall street. Mr. Reibs has served six years as a member of council, North East, Pa. He was married April 10, 1874, to Frederika, daughter of John Wagner, farmer, of North East township, Mr. and Mrs. Reibs have four children, Louisa, John F., Henry and Carl, reside at 42 Clinton avenue, and attend the German Lutheran St. Paul's Church, of whose board of trustees Mr. Reibs has been a member for fifteen years.

William Delaney Wells was born in Greenfield township, Erie county, Pa., April 27, 1858. He is a son of the late Daniel J. and Marilla (Whitney) Wells, natives of Erie county, New York, the former of Welsh and the latter of English descent. Daniel J. Wells removed with his family in 1852 to Greenfield township, where he engaged in the business of wagon-making until 1854, going thence to Wesleyville, where he remained until 1863, when he removed to North East township, to engage, during the latter years of his life, in farming. He died May 6, 1888, having survived his wife sixteen years. William D. Wells received his education in the public schools of Erie county, learned wagon-making and blacksmithing of his father, in which business he afterwards engaged at North East with his brother, Riley D. Wells, from 1873 to 1876, and with his second brother, Francis E. Wells, from 1876 to 1893. In the latter year he formed his present partnership association with Fred O. Davis, which, under the firm name of Wells & Davis, is engaged in the livery, wagon-making and general blacksmithing business. The firm also has farming and lumber interests, and Mr. Wells has vineyard interests of his own. He has served the borough as a member of the council for three years. He was married June 17, 1874, to Nellie A., daughter of the late John Miller, farmer, of Chautauqua county, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Wells have three children: John D., a student at Buffalo University; Helen M. and Benjamin H., students at the North East high school. The family reside at 34 Poplar street, and attend the Methodist Church. Mr. Wells is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

James L. Green was born in Brockport, Monroe county, N. Y., September 13, 1836. He is a son of the late Lewis and Mary (Tew) Green, the former a native of Oneida county, New York, and the latter of New London county, Connecticut. Lewis Green brought his family, in 1846, to North East, Pa., where he followed the business of harness-making until his death, November 14, 1857. His wife survived until 1870. James L. Green attended the North East Academy, took a commercial course at Bryant & Stratton's Mercantile College at Buffalo, and thereafter for several years was employed as clerk in various mercantile establishments in North East. In 1861 he was elected constable, which office he held conjointly with the positions of assessor and tax collector for a number of years. From 1876 to 1895 he was township clerk, and during that period was for fifteen years, ending with 1885, a justice of the peace for North East township. His business is now that of a notary and conveyancer. Mr. Green served as a member of the North East council in 1862-3-4. He was one of the original stockholders, and, for a number of years, a member of the People's Savings Institution of Erie county at North East. He was married April 17, 1861, to Mary M., daughter of the late Seneca Downer, a prominent farmer and pioneer resident of North East township. Mr. and Mrs. Green's only surviving child is George A. Green, bookkeeper of the Wilcox Tanning and Lumber Company, of Wilcox, Elk county, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Green reside on Grahamville street, and attend the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Green is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

John Jay Loomis was born in North East, Erie county, Pa., June 13, 1809. He is a son of the late Rufus S. and Sarah (Tuttle) Loomis, natives of Pennsylvania, and of English descent. Rufus S. Loomis was a carpenter in the borough of North East until 1863, when he purchased a farm adjoining the west line of the borough and there resided until his decease, in 1873. His widow is the oldest living native of the borough of North East. She was born April 28, 1812. Her parents, Amos and Sally Tuttle, emigrated overland from Connecticut in 1785 and located at North East. At the time of her birth Mrs. Loomis' grandfather was a colonel in the war of 1812. John J. Loomis was educated in the public schools of North East, learned the carpenter's trade, and, at the breaking out of the war, enlisted in the 83d P. V. 1. He was for eleven months at the front, serving through the Peninsula campaign, and in August, 1862, was returned to North East, where he was engaged until the close of the war in filling out quotas. After the war he was for a time engaged in brick manufacturing at Erie, Pa., and since then has been in the roofing business, following that occupation for two years each at Chicago and Toledo, and at other points, with headquarters at North East. He is unmarried, and resides with his mother and sister, Miss Ella M. Loomis, on West Main street. A brother, Amos T. Loomis, is a builder at Erie, Pa. John Jay Loomis is a member of the Royal Arcanum.

Daniel R. Taylor (deceased), late of North East, Pa., was born March 27, 1812, in Greenfield township, Erie county, Pa., and died at North East on the 1st day of December, 1885. He was a son of James and Anna (Reed) Taylor, natives of Virginia, who came to Erie county, settling in Greenfield township, in 1803. In 1812 they removed to Chautauqua county, New York, near the Pennsylvania line, where they died, the former December 14, 1840, the latter March 27, 1836. Daniel R. Taylor received a common school education, and from early youth until his arrival at maturity assisted his father in farming. On March 13, 1834, he married Phebe, daughter of John T. and Lucinda (Otis) Meyers, natives of New York, who died respectively January 22, 1829, and April 10, 1867. Shortly after his marriage Daniel R. Taylor purchased a farm in North East township, Pennsylvania, where he continued to reside until his father's death, when he purchased the interests of the remaining heirs in the homestead farm, where he lived until his removal to North East, Pa., in 1875. In his early life in North East township Mr. Taylor filled a number of positions of trust, the duties of all of which he fulfilled with ability and fidelity; but in his later years of residence in North East his failing health prevented his devoting himself to the public service. He was a Christian gentleman and, from 1839 a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, contributing liberally to several churches with which he was identified. His widow, and two sons, William P. and Clarence D. Taylor, survive, the former residing at the corner of Clinton avenue and Robinson streets, and the two latter at Buffalo, N. Y. William P. Taylor was for a number of years an employe of the Lake Shore R. R., acting successively in the capacities of station agent and telegraph operator, train dispatcher and superintendent of the Buffalo division. Succeeding the latter position he was for a number of years general manager of the Canada Southern R. R. Prior to his severance with the latter road, Mr. Taylor established the Buffalo Storage and Carting Company, to the interests of which he devoted his time exclusively from 1883 to 1889. Since which latter date his time has been given to the Clinton Iron Works, of Buffalo, a partnership interest in which he purchased at that time. He is still the proprietor of the Buffalo Storage and Carting Company. He married Augusta, daughter of the late Alexander Davidson, of North East. Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Taylor have one child, Alice M., wife of Henry Chase, an attorney at law of Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Chase have one child, Stanley. Clarence D. Taylor was for a number of years in the employ of the West Shore R. R., and is now manager of the Buffalo Storage and Carting Company. He married Irene, daughter of Henry Ellenwood, a farmer of Clyde, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence D. Taylor have one child, Daniel R. Taylor.

Charles Loop was born in North East township, Erie county, Pa., June 12, 1833. His genealogy is contained in the memoirs of his elder brother, Dr. D. D. Loop, in this volume. Charles Loop received a common-school education, worked upon his father's farm until 20 years of age, and engaged in farming thereafter on his own account for fifteen years. He learned the trades of painting, paper-hanging and carpentry, and has been employed at one or the other of these trades at intervals in North East ever since. He was a member of the North East council for three years, and during that period was largely instrumental in forwarding the establishment of the water works. He has been a member of the Baptist Church of North East from early manhood; assisted largely in the building of the edifice in which that congregation worships, and was for a number of years a member of its board of trustees. He was married in April, 1851, to Hannah, daughter of the late Cyrus Dolph, an old resident of North East, a native of New York, and of German descent. One son, born to this marriage, Admah Irwin Loop, is the proprietor of a saw-mill at North East. He married Emeline, daughter of J. L. Phancoo, of North East. They have one son, Howard Scott Loop. A. I. Loop has served as a member of North East council, and is a member of the board of school directors. Mr. and Mrs. Charles and A. I. Loop reside at the corner of Washington and East streets, North East.

Francis Kidder Lyon was born at Stockton, Chautauqua county, N. Y., July 27, 1841. He is a son of Aaron E. and Mary Ann (Kidder) Lyon, both natives of Massachusetts, the former lineally descended on the maternal side from John Alden, that historic pilgrim father who was the first to touch foot on Plymouth Rock from the "Mayflower." Aaron E. Lyon was a carpenter by trade, but has long since retired from business, and now resides with his wife at Sherman, Chautauqua county, N. Y., the former 81 and the latter 82 years of age. Aaron E. Lyon, sr., father of Aaron E. Lyon, above mentioned, was born July 1, 1789, made three trips afoot, in his early manhood, to Western New York, the then far West, finally, in 1819, locating in Chautauqua county. He was a valuable citizen, and filled with honor numerous offices of trust. He died June 20, 1870. His sister, Mary Lyon, was the founder of Holyoke Seminary. Five of his daughters married Baptist ministers, two of whom went as missionaries to China, and the sixth daughter married a Methodist minister. Francis K. Lyon was educated in the public schools of his native town, and, at the age of 14, took charge of his father's farm. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted for three months' service, contrary to the wishes of his parents, who, as their son was not of age, succeeded in bringing about his discharge. Upon attaining his majority he re-enlisted in Co. E, 112th N. Y. V. I., serving until the close of the war, his regiment being a part, successively, of the 18th, 24th and 10th army corps. After the war he operated a saw-mill in Sherman for four years, then he purchased a farm in Chautauqua county, which he cultivated for two years. In 1872 Mr. Lyon removed to North East, where he worked at the carpenter's trade for one year. Returning to Chautauqua county, he was engaged in farming until 1885. Since the latter date he has resided at North East; was for six years in the drug business, two years in the clothing business, and has since engaged in business as a contractor. He served as township school director for several years, and is a member of the present board for the borough of North East. He was married December 26, 1866, to Anna

M., daughter of the late Stephen Heath, a farmer of Sherman, and one of the pioneer settlers of Chautauqua county, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Lyon have three children: Jennie M., wife of Virgil I. Cook, a farmer of Dutchess county, New York (who have one child, Willard Lyon Cook); Jenny A., and Lucy J. Lyon, milliners at North East. The family reside at the corner of Clay and Smedley streets and are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Lyon is a member of the Masonic order of the I. O. O. F., G. A. R. and Protected Home Circle.

Earl M. Ketcham, manager of the Earl Hotel, North East, Pa., was born at Mina, Chautauqua county, N. Y., October 4, 1854. He is a son of Charles S. and Martha (Beeman) Ketcham, natives of New York, the former of Scotch descent. Charles S. Ketcham was born October 26, 1810, was for many years a farmer and for some years a hotel keeper in Chautauqua county, New York, is now retired from business and resides at Findley's Lake, Chautauqua county. His wife, who also survives, was born June 2, 1827. Earl M. Ketcham was educated at Mina, was for twenty years engaged in the oil business, and in May, 1892, went to North East, Pa., to assume management of the Opera House Restaurant, a business which was owned by Messrs. Frank McLaughlin and Isaac Ackerman, who carried on business in the block at the southwest corner of Clinton avenue and South Lake streets, which was in 1894 remodeled and fitted for hotel purposes by Mr. Isaac Ackerman, and opened as a hotel, which takes its name, "The Earl," after Mr. Earl Ketcham, its present manager. Mr. Ketcham was married in 1879 to Harriet A., daughter of the late Charles Horton, an old resident and merchant of North East. Mr. and Mrs. Ketcham have two children, Lorena Elvira and Stewart Charles, reside at 52 South Lake street and attend the Presbyterian Church.

George W. Cole was born in North East township, Erie county, Pa., October 27, 1863. He is a son of James M. and Alice Helen (Edly) Cole, the former also a native of North East township and the latter of Silver Creek, Chautauqua county, N. Y. James M. Cole is a son of the late Darius S. Cole, whose father, James Cole, settled in North East township early in the century. James M. Cole has retired from active business and resides on his farm near North East. George W. Cole was educated in the public schools of North East, and in his youth entered the employ of the banking firm of Short, Blaine & Co., continuing with that firm and its successor, the People's Savings Institution, until 1896, when he was made private secretary of Messrs. Samson and Alfred Short. In 1891 he was one of the incorporators of the Samson Fertilizing & Chemical Company, the general management of which subsequently devolved upon him, and of which he is also treasurer and general manager. He was married June 10, 1886, to Anna, daughter of the late John McNeill, of North East township. Mr. and Mrs. Cole have one child, Charles Dana, reside on West Main street, and attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Cole is a member of the Masonic Lodge and of the Royal Arcanum.

Roice S. Pierce was born in North East township, Erie county, Pa., May 2, 1846. He is a son of Earl Pierce, whose personal history is contained in this volume. R. S. Pierce completed his education at the North East Academy in 1864, and for fourteen years thereafter was engaged in mercantile pursuits at North East, during that period carrying on a grocery and hardware establishment, and being identified with the New Era Organ Company, as secretary. In 1878 he removed to the oil country, and was for four years engaged in mercantile pursuits in Bradford. Relocating in North East, he was, from 1883 to 1891, acting in the interests of certain lumber companies. During this period, also (in 1887) he formed a partnership with his brother, George E. Pierce, for the culture of the grape, in which business they have ever since been engaged, with constantly increasing acreage, and are now (1895) the most extensive cultivators in Erie county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Pierce has served successively in the offices of assessor, mercantile appraiser, and member of the North East council, resigning the latter office during his third term to accept the postmastership of North East by appointment of President Harrison. In the spring of 1895 he was elected to his present office, justice of the peace for Erie county at North East. He was married November 17, 1869, to Josephine A., daughter of the late S. D. Brown, a manufacturer of Girard, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce have two children, Bertrand R. Pierce, engaged in grape culture with his father, under the firm name of R. S. Pierce & Son, and Julia L. Pierce, a graduate of the North East high school. The family reside at No. 40 Vine street and attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Pierce is past master of Lodge 399, North East F. & A. M.

Earl Pierce was born December 19, 1820, in North East township, Erie county, Pa. His parents were Palmer and Anna (Brewster) Pierce, the former a native of New York and both of English descent, the Pierces being lineally descended from one of the pilgrim fathers. Palmer Pierce purchased a farm in North East township in 1819, and the following year located upon it with his family, and there continued to reside, with the exception of a year or two spent in Chautauqua county, New York, throughout his life. He died in 1859, his wife in 1868. Earl Pierce was educated in the public schools of his native township, learned the carpenter's trade and followed that business for twenty-four years at North East, Pa., building a large number of the residences erected in that borough during that period. He purchased a farm in the township, where he resided for twelve years, during which period he was a dealer in agricultural implements. In 1876 he returned to the borough of North East, where he has ever since resided in retirement from business. He was married May 15, 1844, to Louisa L., daughter of the late Stephen Histed, a pioneer settler of North East township. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce have two children, Roice S. and George E. Pierce, who reside on West Gibson street, and are members of the Methodist Church, with which they have been identified for more than fifty years.

William H. Sandborn, editor and proprietor of the North East Breeze, was born at Angelica, Allegany county, New York, March 10, 1854. He is a son of Squire and Eliza (Woods) Sandborn, also natives of Allegany county, N. Y., the former of Scotch, and the latter of Scotch-German descent, and who now reside at North East, Pa. William H. Sandborn completed his education at Pleasantville (Pa.) Academy, and then entered upon the study of pharmacy. He was engaged in the drug business for some years, purchasing the Park Drug Store at North East in 1888, and conducting that establishment until 1893, when he founded the weekly newspaper, The Breeze, of which he is editor, publisher and proprietor. He was married July 3, 1872, to Mary E., daughter of James Kingsley, of Venango county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Sandborn have one child, Perry Alvoird Sandborn, associated with his father in business, reside on West Main street and attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. William H. Sandborn is a member of the B. P. O. E.

John S. Hammond, late general freight agent of the New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R., was born in North East, Erie county, Pa., February 22, 1840. He is the eldest child of Samuel Smith Hammond, of North East, whose personal history is contained in this volume. John S. Hammond was educated in the public and high schools of North East. When 15 years old he was called to the superintendent's office, Buffalo and Erie R. R., at Buffalo, to learn telegraphy. After six months practice he had acquired sufficient expertness to be given charge of the telegraph office of the B. & E. R. R. at North East, where he remained until the winter of 1856-7, during the latter period filling the position at Buffalo of operator in the general freight office of the Buffalo and Erie R. R. April 1, 1857, he assumed the duties of operator in the freight office at Dunkirk, N. Y., of the New York and Erie R. R. Company, in which capacity he was engaged until October, 1861, when he went to Washington, where he entered the service of the United States government as telegraph operator at General McClellan's headquarters, serving conjointly at the war department until February, 1862, when ill-health compelled his resignation from the service. Prior to this he had been proffered an increased official position in the railroad service at Dunkirk, and this position he subsequently accepted, remaining at Dunkirk until 1868. The latter year he was made chief clerk and cashier of the freight department, at Buffalo, of the New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R. Four years later he was appointed agent of the same road at the same city, occupying that position until 1885, when he was made general freight agent of the same road, with headquarters at New York. This position he was compelled to resign on account of ill-health, in 1889, since which time he has resided in the vicinity of North East, where he has extensive farming interests.

Andrew Boyer, farmer, was born June 16, 1834, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, son of Samuel and Margaret (Supplee) Boyer, natives of Chester county, Pennsylvania, where the Boyers settled in 1801. They were the parents of ten children, viz.: Harriet married Michael Graham, and resides at Chester, Pa.; Lewis (deceased), Sabina married Richard Platt, both deceased; Levi (deceased), Rachael (deceased), married Mr. Dunlap; Elizabeth (deceased), Andrew, Mary, married Benjamin Grube. Peter resides in Berks county, and Margaret Anne, who married Alexander Story. The mother died in 1866, and the father two years later. Andrew Boyer was reared and educated in Chester county and commenced life farming in that county. In 1862 he came to Erie county and engaged in farming at Harbor Creek, where he remained until 1871, when he came to North East township, where he now resides. Mr. Boyer was married November 6, 1854, to Louisa, daughter of Jacob Grube, a native of Lancaster county. To this union were born ten children, viz.: Elmer E. (deceased), Samuel J., farmer, North East township; Annie, married John Seveley and resides in North East township; Louisa (at home); John, Harbor Creek; Emma (at home); Maggie and Clara (at home), and Edward (deceased). Mr. Boyer politically is a Democrat and the family are members of the M. E. Church.

John Kane, manufacturer of brick and tile, North East, Pennsylvania, one of the leaders in his chosen industry, is a native of County Clare, Ireland, and was born in 1854. He was one of a family of ten children, four of whom lived to maturity. The father died when John was twelve years old. He came to America and settled near Toronto, Canada, where, when a boy, he worked at brickmaking; he remained there until 1865, when he came to Erie and engaged in making brick. He made the first stock brick that was manufactured in Erie, and continued brick making in the vicinity of Erie until 1877, when he bought a farm of about seventy-five acres in the western part of North East township, on the Buffalo road. Here he engaged in farming and the manufacture of brick and tile. He also has another farm of seventy years in the township. Mr. Kane was married May 1, 1859, to Miss Margaret Rannels, of Canada. They were the parents of ten children, three of whom are living, viz.: Mary M., married Michael McMahon, Moorheadville, Pa.; John, at home; and Thomas, Bradford, Pa. Mr. Kane is a very progressive citizen and a staunch Democrat.

Thomas Pettit, North East, Pa., is one of the progressive citizens of Erie county, now resides on the farm in North East township which was settled by his father, Seth Pettit, in 1831, when it was a heavy forest, and the only way that he could see out, was to look up. He took his axe and went to work in the manner of a true pioneer. He converted 110 acres of wilderness into fair fields which now constitute one of the productive farms of the garden township of Erie county. Seth Pettit was born in Galway, N. Y., June 22, 1806, and was a son of Elisha and Hannah (Rowe) Pettit. The former was a native of France and the latter of New York State. They reared a family of fourteen children. The father and mother died at Galway, N. Y. Seth Pettit was married September 19, 1833, to Miss Nancy M. Mellon, of North East. To this union were born eleven children, viz.: Charles E., born July 7, 1834, resides at Calispell, Montana; Sally A., born February 12, 1836, died June 2, 1836; S. Al-sina, born July 20, 1837, married Capt. C. H. Culver, of St. Paul, Minn.; Henry R., born May 5, 1839, died in Memphis, Tenn., October 7, 1867; Marvin D., born January 18, 1841, was killed at the battle of Wauhatchie, Tenn., was a member of Company F, 11th P. V. 1.; Dewitt Clinton, born January 11, 1842; Seward, Neb.; Dudley M., born July 2, 1845, died July 6, 1871; Thomas, born January 21, 1847; Lillie, born November 27, 1848, resides at North East; Martin, born March 5, 1850, Erie, Pa., and Cassius M., born September 14, 1853, and died November 20, 1881. The four elder brothers all served their country during the late Rebellion.

Seth Pettit died at his home in North East, June 13, 1880, at the age of 80 years lacking seven days, and his wife died March 15, 1894. She was born June 2, 1812. Thomas Pettit was reared on the place where he now resides and educated in the public schools, and has made farming the chief occupation of his life. He was married December 29, 1879, to Miss Kathryn, daughter of Clark and Angelina (Custard) Bliss, the former a native of Genesee, N. Y., and the latter of Erie county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Pettit is the only living member of this family of four children. Mr. and Mrs. Pettit have one child, Jessie A.

R. W. Marshall, farmer, post-office North East, was born in North East township, April 28, 1838, and is a son of Robert and Martha (Johnston) Marshall, natives of County Tyrone, Ireland. They were married in Ireland and came to America in 1829 and located at Solon, Ohio, where they lived until 1836. They then decided to return to Ireland and had reached Buffalo, N. Y., when the mother was taken ill with cholera. At Buffalo they met a friend, Ed Graham, who told them of the good qualities of Erie county, Pennsylvania, and induced them to return to Erie county, which they did when the mother recovered her health. They settled in North East township, buying fifty acres of land, and then followed farming until the death of Robert Marshall, which occurred December 25, 1875, his widow surviving until November 9, 1894. They were the parents of seven children, viz.: James C., was born in Ireland and was eighteen months old when his parents emigrated to America. He now resides on the old homestead in North East township; Maria J., married Silas H. Merrill and lives at Dayton, Cattaraugus county, N. Y.; Elizabeth (deceased), Margaret married Edward Merrill (both deceased); Robert W., George N., resides at North East; T. O., North East, editor of North East Advertiser; Robert W. Marshall was reared and educated in North East township and has always followed farming. He was married August 19, 1858, to Laura C., daughter of Hiram Edgerton, of Dayton, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are the parents of four children, viz.: Grace R., married E. A. Walling, of Erie; William E., at home; Cora E., married Wm. J. Greenman, Cleveland, O.; and Mariette, clerk in the recorder's office at Erie. Mr. Marshall has always been a staunch Democrat.

John Kidder, North East, Pa., was born at Wendell, Mass., February 20, 1814. He is a son of Johnathan and Patience (Potter) Kidder. Johnathan was a son of David Kidder, who was one of two brothers, David and Jesse, who came to this country from England prior to the Revolutionary war. David settled in Massachusetts and his brother in Vermont. David was a sailor by occupation, and was employed on the coastwise service between Boston and Maine. He died at about the age of 30, leaving three sons, viz.: David, who settled in Vermont; Johnathan, who remained in Massachusetts and afterwards came West, and Jesse, who settled in Maine. Johnathan was born at Dudley, Mass., March 10, 1770; was twice married, second time to Patience Potter, and afterwards lived in Roxbury and Wendell, and, in 1844, moved to Sherman, Chautauqua county, N. Y., where he died May 18, 1863, aged 93. He made farming the chief occupation of his life. He held many local offices; was a man of considerable force and energy, and was well educated, considering his early advantages. His wife, born June 28, 1778, died February 8, 1872, at Sherman. They were parents of six children, viz.: Mary Ann, Mrs. A. E. Lyon, of Sherman, N. Y.; John, Jesse, Sherman, N. Y.; Samuel K., Sherman, N. Y.; Jane P. (deceased), and Luther B. (deceased). John Kidder was educated in Massachusetts, and when a young man learned the carpenter's and joiner's trade, which he followed in his native State, until 1851, when he followed farming until 1875, when he moved to North East township and purchased a farm, about a mile and a half south-west of the borough. This is one of the oldest farms in the township, having been under cultivation over eighty years. He was united in marriage to Maria E. Gates, April 5, 1842, at Wendell, Mass. They had two children, Harriett Jane (deceased), and Ann Isabel, born September 30, 1844, wife of Benjamin H. Ross, North East, Pa. Maria E. died September 24, 1856. John Kidder was again married March 28, 1853, to Mrs. Almira (Ross) Barley. They have one son, O. S. Kidder, who was born June 6, 1861. Mrs. Almira Barley had one daughter, Martha Jane Barley (deceased). He is now engaged in farming and fruit raising in North East township with his father. They together, have about 100 acres of land, forty acres of which is devoted to grape growing. The son, O. S. Kidder, has made farming and fruit growing the chief occupation of his life. He was married June 6, 1890, to Miss Henrietta, daughter of Henry Fuller, of North East. They have three children: Ruth May, John Henry and Maurice Scott. He and his father are staunch Republicans, and are among the enterprising farmers of Erie county.

Frank A. Gough, dentist, North East, Pa., was born in North East June 28, 1872, and is a son of Robert Gough. Frank was educated in North East High School, and graduated in the class of 1891. He then attended the Philadelphia Dental College, the Buffalo Dental College, and the New York Dental College, graduating in the last-named institution in 1894, when he immediately began the practice of his profession in North East, where he has been exceptionally successful. He is a thorough student, and has a particular liking for the study of dentistry and medicine, and a remarkable adaptability for its practice. He was married March 29, 1894, to Miss Allie B., daughter of Orin Ellsworth, of Brant, N. Y. The father, a widower, now resides in North East.

Robert Gough, North East, Pa., was born in Wilshire, England, December 29, 1840, and is a son of Richard and Anne (Handy) Gough, the former a native of Wilshire, and the latter of Berkshire, England. Richard was a son of Robert, who spent his life in Wilshire, England, whose grandfather came to Wilshire a stranger. This is the first paternal ancestor of Robert Gough of which we have any record, and of the first authentic records we have of him is the court records of Wilshire, where he appeared as an important witness in a murder case. Richard came to America in 1844 with his family, which consisted of a wife and three children, of whom Robert A. was the eldest. They were the parents of ten children in all, viz.: Robert; Mary, married Richard Handy, Long Prairie, Todd county, Minn.; Paul H., Watsonville, Cal.; Richard, Manistec, Mich.; William (deceased); Charles H., Cedar Rapids, Mich.; Sarah, married Charles Elliot (deceased), of Harbor Creek; she remarried Rubin Jasper, of Long Pine, Minn.; Ellen E., married Thomas Battson, Greenidge, Manitoba, British America; John F., Hartford, Minn.; and Emma E., who died in Manitoba in 1894. When the family came to this country they settled on fifteen acres of land in Erie, about where the Simpson M. E. Church now stands. They remained there about a year, moved to North East and bought a farm, which is now owned by Wm. Kendall, where the father followed farming until 1881, when he went to live with his son and daughter at Long Prairie, Minn., and died November 15, 1882. His wife died December 18, 1865. Robert Gough was educated in the public schools, North East Academy and the Erie Academy, and when the war broke out, in answer to President Lincoln's first call, he went out with Colonel McLane's three-months' men, and October 22, 1861, he re-enlisted in Co. F, 11th Reg. P. V. I., and served until the close of the war. He participated in the battles of Winchester, Cedar Mountain, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. His regiment was then transferred to the Army of the West, under General Hooker, and he participated in the battles of Wauhatche, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge and Ringgold; and the following spring, at the reorganization of the army, was transferred from the 12th to the 20th corps, under General Sherman, and participated in Sherman's campaign in the march to the sea, being at the front in the battles of Rocky Ridge, Dallas, Resaca, Dalton, Marietta, Kenshaw Mountain, Chattahoochee, Peach Tree Creek and Atlanta. He was wounded at the battle of Cedar Mountain by a musket ball in the hip. He then came North to Washington with Sherman's army, where he did guard duty until July 19, 1865, when he was discharged as sergeant. During the last two years of his service he was commissary of his company. He was with his regiment throughout the war, except three months which he spent in Wolf, St. Alexander and Little York Hospitals, recovering from his wounds. At the close of the war he returned to North East; and, the following year, went to Michigan and worked at the carpenter trade, having served an apprenticeship prior to the war. He also taught school before entering the service. He remained in Grand Rapids, Mich., until 1871, when he returned to North East and engaged in farming on his present place, where he has since resided. Mr. Gough was married June 12, 1867, to Miss Alina C., daughter of Luke Southwick, a pioneer of Erie county. They have three children: Luke L., at home; Frank and Bertha, at home. Mr. Gough is a member of the G. A. R. and A. O. U. W. Politically he is a Republican, and has served as assessor three terms. At present he is town clerk, and serving his second term as justice of the peace.

Frederick Clark, farmer, North East, was born on his present place July 22, 1839. He is a son of Timothy and Calista F. (Adkins) Clark, the former a native of Massachusetts and the latter of New York. The father settled in Erie county in 1800. He always followed farming. He bought 100 acres of land in North East township, which is now owned by Frederick. He died July 2, 1865, and the mother died February 29, 1880. They were the parents of seven children, viz.: Timothy (deceased), Mary F., Mrs. Geo. W.

Griffin (deceased), of North East; Elizabeth L. resides on the old homestead with Frederick; Levi, died in 1890; Benjamin died in 1879; and Johnathan R. died in 1883. Frederick Clark was reared in North East township, and educated in the public schools. He remained with his father on the farm until September, 1860. In answer to his country's call, he enlisted in Co. F, 11th P. V. I. He participated at the battle of Bull Run and several skirmishes, until the battle of Antietam where his military record came to a close. On the morning of that battle Private Clark remembers of firing one shot and commencing to re-load his musket, this is the last that he remembers for several days. When the wounded were picked up he was left on the field for dead, drenched in a pool of blood and blind in both eyes, a musket ball having passed through the bridge of his nose, his right eye and tearing away a portion of his cheek bone. He remained on the field until his comrades came to bury the dead, when they found signs of life in him. He remained in the field hospital about three months when he received his discharge for causes which we need not state here — for the scar which he carries (the loss of an eye) gives modesty a tongue. He returned home and has since devoted his entire attention to farming and succeeded to the old homestead, which was cleared and settled by his pioneer father. He is a member of the G. A. R. and is a Republican.

Richard B. Reid, North East, Pa., owner and proprietor of Reid's furniture factory and planing mill, was born near Belfast, County Antrim, Ireland, March 10, 1843. He is a son of James and Margaret (Bell) Reid. They were both natives of Ireland, and the father now resides on his old homestead in that country. The mother died March 10, 1890. They reared a family of five children, viz.: James and Joseph, twins; the former now resides with his father and the latter at Grace Hill, about a mile from the old homestead; Hugh resides at Cherokee, Kan., and Margaret Ann, at home, in Ireland. Richard B. was reared and educated in his native land and in 1863 came to America. He landed in New York and went to Cannonsville, a small town near that city, where he remained about six months, when he went to Washington county, New York. In the spring of 1865 he came to North East. About 1865 he engaged in the furniture and cabinet manufacturing business, which he has since followed. He built his present factory, which is situated on the south side of the town, in 1867. He carries on an extensive and successful business, making a specialty of order work. He was married to Miss Sophronie Huntley, of North East, a native of Watsburg, Pa. They have five children, viz.: James, Flo, Edward, Fred and Max. Mr. Reid is one of the progressive business men of the town of North East, and politically is a Republican.

E. D. Pratt, North East, Pa., was born at Humphrey, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., August 26, 1838. He is a son of Erastus B. and Eunice M. (Pierce) Pratt. The father was born at Pompey, Onondaga county, N. Y., May 10, 1810. The Pratts are an old New England family and E. D.'s grandfather Pratt, served in the war of 1812. Erastus Pratt removed from Pompey, the place of his birth, to Humphrey, N. Y., and in 1849 moved to Bradford, Pa., with his family. He was a cloth dresser by trade and later in life engaged in farming. He died on his farm near Bradford, Pennsylvania, January 10, 1871, and his wife died July 30, 1874. They were the parents of six children, viz.: Evelene R., Mrs. John Travis, Salamanca, N. Y.; E. D., Ann, Mrs. Wm. Fox, Bradford, Pa.; Caleb Ashley, died at Sherman, N. Y., April 15, 1894; Mary A., Mrs. Austin Shaw, Sherman, N. Y.; and Caroline T., Mrs. Conrad Guthrig, of Humphrey, N. Y. E. D. Pratt was about nine years of age when the family moved to Bradford, where he was reared and educated and devoted his time chiefly to farming, until the fall of 1879, when he removed to North East and purchased a farm adjoining the borough on the south. During the war he enlisted in Co. H, 199th P. V. I. He participated in the Siege of Richmond, and was in the line of battle at the scene of Lee's surrender at Appomattox, and thus saw the great chieftain of the Confederacy lay down the guiding sword of the Rebellion. Private E. D. Pratt was discharged at Richmond, Va., June 28, 1865, and again returned to the quiet scenes of civil life. He was married August 14, 1870, to Miss Rowena, daughter of Barnabas and Mary Ann (Colgrove) Pike, of Bradford, Pa.; the former a native of Massachusetts and of English descent, and the latter of Pennsylvania. She is one of a family of nine children, viz.: Sarah, Mrs. Samuel Gray, Bradford, Pa., Oliver, Bradford; Clarissa, Mrs. Helen Ogden, Redhouse, N. Y., Amelia, Mrs. Allen Tibbets, Bradford; George, Bradford; Harlow, Bradford; Alfonso, died in Virginia, April 15, 1865, while in the service of his country; Rowena, Mrs. Pratt, and Orlando, Bradford. Two of the brothers, Harlow and Alfonso, served in the war of the Rebellion, and the father was a soldier in the war of 1812, for which he drew a pension, and his father, Barnabas Pike was a Revolutionary soldier. Barnabas Pike, Mrs. Pratt's father, was born June 30, 1795. He followed lumbering and farming in the vicinity of Bradford all his life, and he died October 15, 1881; his wife died December 4, 1865. The members of the family, except Mrs. Pratt, all reside in Bradford, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Pratt have one child, Loretta, who resides at home. The family are members of the Christian Brethren Church and he is a staunch Prohibitionist.

J. F. Peters, North East, Pa., was born May 3, 1861, and is a son of John and Hester (Lewis) Peters. John Peters was a sailor by occupation and a native of Sweden. He navigated the principal waters of the globe and had the reputation of being a daring youth from his childhood. He ran away from home and went to sea when yet a mere boy. He was sailing on the lakes when fate directed his footsteps to North East township, where he married Miss Hester Lewis, a native of that place. Mr. Peters settled in North East township in 1882 and made farming his occupation. Later in life he retired and removed to the borough, where he spent the evening of his life. He departed this life November 2, 1894. His wife died May 8, 1882. They were the parents of twelve children, viz.: Martha M., now Mrs. George Smith; Emma, married Clarence Page, North East; Myra C., John L., Harbor Creek; Jesse F., J. E., North East; E. J., Little Rock, Ark.; Alma, North East; Jennie, Mrs. E. A. Orton, North East, and Millie, Mrs. C. W. Orton, North East. J. F. Peters was reared in North East and educated in the public schools. He has made farming his chief occupation. He purchased his present farm of 110 acres of land in 1884, where he carries on an extensive dairy business and runs a milk wagon to North East. His farm is situated two miles south of the borough. He was married February 26, 1884, to Miss Jennie, daughter of M. C. Putnam, of North East township. They have one child, Aura May. Mr. Peters is one of the foremost young farmers of his township.

Joseph Riewald, farmer and fruit grower, North East, Pa., was born March 24, 1840, in the province of Pommern, Prussia, Germany. His father's name is also Joseph, and he now resides in his native land, at the age of 88 years. Mr. Riewald was reared and educated in the land of his birth. He received an education superior to most men in his circumstances, and since his boyhood days he has been a constant reader. He came to America in 1869, landing in New York May 1. He followed laboring. In his native land he had learned the weaver's trade, but never engaged in it in this country. He bought his present place in April, 1886. It is a typical fruit farm, located on the side hill road, about two miles south of the borough of North East. Mr. Riewald was united in marriage to Miss Ernestine Sponholtz, of North East. They have no children. This gentleman is one of the industrious and upright citizens of North East township. He was a member of Co. I, 15th Reg., N. Y. V., and was after five years service discharged as a corporal.

Alonzo W. Butt, North East, Pa., one of the most prosperous and progressive citizens of the community, was born on the place where he now resides August 11, 1827. He is a son of Wendell and Christina (Shank) Butt. The former was a native of Virginia and the latter of Pennsylvania, both of German descent. The Butt family was among the earliest to settle Virginia. Wendell Butt settled in Erie county with his family in 1817 and took 300 acres of land from the Holland Land Company, where Alonzo now resides. He was a farmer by occupation, as was his father before him. Wendell and Christina (Shank) Butt were the parents of twelve children, viz.: John, born October 23, 1803; Jacob, born May 1, 1806; William, born June 11, 1808; George, born August 27, 1809; Mary, born April 13, 1811, married Harry Ross; she died April 24, 1830; Sally, born August 27, 1812, and died February 8, 1831; Elizabeth, born June 27, 1814, married William Durand, of Fond du Lac, Wis.; Kate, born December 5, 1817, died at the age of six weeks; James, born May 15, 1819, died three months later; Rosanna, born August 10, 1820, now Mrs. Louis Baldwin, of Racine, Wis.; she is a widow; Jane, born June 11, 1825, married William Ostrander; she died March 12, 1879, and Alonzo W., who is the only son living. Wendell Butt was born March 7, 1785, and died October 10, 1849, on the place where Alonzo now resides, and his wife died March 2, 1843; she was born December 25, 1785. Alonzo Butt has spent all his life in North East township and received his education in its early schools. He has followed farming all his life and now resides in a handsome residence on his farm of over 160 acres, which is second to none in the county, located about a mile and a half northeast of the borough. He carries on a general farming, besides being extensively engaged in fruit growing. Mr. Butt was united in marriage November 4, 1846, to Miss Laura J., daughter of Stephen and Mary (Gay) Peabody, a native of New Lebanon,

John P. Thompson

N. Y. They have seven children, viz.: Melissa, born August 11, 1847, now Mrs. Henry M. Burdick, of Huntington, W. Va.; Alonzo W., Jr., born October 23, 1848, died ten months later; William, born November 26, 1850, resides in North East (see sketch); Ella M., born April 10, 1850, resides at home; Leroy, born June 1, 1864, resides in North East; Charles A., born August 28, 1856, resides in North East, and Jennie H., born November 4, 1860, now Mrs. James D. Clark, of Bluffton, Ind. The family attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Butt has always been a member of the M. E. Church.

Benjamin H. Ross, farmer and lumberman, North East, Pa., was born at Sherman, N. Y., June 3, 1836, son of Benjamin and Samantha (Heath) Ross, who were among the earliest settlers of southwestern Chautauqua, having moved there March 26, 1825. Their nearest neighbors, except a brother of Mr. Ross, were five miles off. They were the parents of five children: Almira, wife of John Kidder, born March 27, 1842, North East; George, born August 24, 1830, died January 12, 1835; Adeline, born July 15, 1833, died, January 17, 1834; Benjamin H.; and Loren P., born January 29, 1843, resides at Ripley, N. Y. Benjamin Ross, sr., was a son of Charles and Amy (Woodburn) Ross, of Chenango county, New York. They were the parents of twelve children: Joseph, Charles, Benjamin, Polly (Smith), Abigail (Freeman), Amy (Aquino), Samuel, George, William, Artemus and Schuyler. Mr. Ross has made farming and lumbering his chief occupation. In 1874 he moved to North East and bought his present place. He also owns a farm in New York State. He was married December 25, 1858, to Anna Eliza Kidder. They have three children: George Elmer, born July 23, 1861, and died November 3, 1882, the same year he graduated from Oberlin College; Washington Bird, born June 3, 1865, resides at Ripley, N. Y.; and Benjamin T., born October 27, 1870. Mr. Ross has been assessor of North East township and is a Republican in politics.

E. E. Maitland, M. D., Harbor Creek, Pa., has not been an Erie county practitioner very long, but he is rapidly extending his practice, and the people of the vicinity of Harbor Creek congratulate themselves upon the fact that they have in their midst a man to attend to their bodily infirmities, a modern physician and surgeon, a man who is up to date in the marvelous science of medicine and surgery in its unceasing onward march. Personally, Dr. Maitland is a modest and unassuming man, is a close student of the science of medicine, and capable of making a thorough diagnosis of a case. He was born in Rockland township, Venango county, Pa., June 20, 1861. His parents, Alexander and Betsey (Forker) Maitland, were both natives of Pennsylvania. The father died July 29, 1895, and the mother in 1883. Dr. Maitland received his medical education in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of Baltimore, Md., and the Academy of Medicine of Louisville, Ky., graduating at the latter place in the spring of 1892, his diploma being endorsed by the Pittsburg Medical College. He engaged in practice in Little Coolie, Crawford county, Pa., and later at Cambridge, Pa. In the spring of 1895 he came to Erie county and located at Harbor Creek, where he is the only physician in the midst of a thickly settled surrounding country. He was married February 14, 1894, to Miss Allie Drake, of Little Coolie, Pa. Dr. Maitland was employed for some time in the North Warren Hospital for the Insane, and has considerable experience in the treatment of mental diseases.

N. C. Remington, North East, Pa., is entitled to no small portion of the credit of making his township the "garden" of the county. He was born in Pierpont, Ashtabula county, Ohio, September 8, 1814. He is a son of Seth and Aseneth (Dishee) Remington, who were both natives of New England. They were among the pioneers of Ohio, which was then a portion of the great West. His father was a carpenter and joiner, while he resided in his New England home, but his later pioneer life was devoted chiefly to farming. In Ohio he took up 900 acres of land, which he disposed of in 1822 and came to Springfield, Erie county, and made Pennsylvania his home after that. In 1830 the family removed to North East township and settled on the place which is now occupied by Mr. Remington. It consists of 100 acres of that fertile and fruit productive land which characterizes North East township. It is situated on the Buffalo road about two miles east of the borough. Here Seth Remington spent the remainder of his days and died July 16, 1848, aged 60 years, and his wife departed this life January 23, 1826, aged 46 years. N. C. Remington has always followed the occupation of farming. He was one of a family of four children, viz.: Amos, lives in Iowa; Lucy (deceased), N. C., and Jonathan died in Illinois. Mr. Remington was married December 21, 1836, to Miss Mary Munger, of North East. She died in 1877. They were the parents of six children, viz.: Aseneth, Mrs. Charles Barter, Brockton, N. Y.; Mariette, Mrs. Blanchard Campbell, Philadelphia, Pa.; Seth R., resides in California; Luzerne, resides in North East; Melissa, at home, and Amos C., at home. Mr. Remington has always been a staunch Democrat, and although he has passed four score years, is a man of remarkable mental and physical health for his age.

L. D. Bort (deceased), at the time of his death was one of the highly respected members of the community of North East. He was a native of New York State and born in Chautauqua county, March 17, 1825. He was a son of Christian and Lorana Bort, the former a native of the Mohawk Valley, N. Y., and the latter of Massachusetts. Christian Bort came to Erie county in 1824 and located and bought the place now owned by Washington Bonnell in Harbor Creek township, and the following year moved his family there, where he remained until his death in 1853. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. His wife died in 1881. They were the parents of eight children, viz.: Polly B., married Ephraim Burdick, Madison, O.; S. B. Bort, Iowa; Malinda (deceased); L. D.; (two children died in infancy) William; Barney; and Mary Jane, Mrs. Marshall Bunnell. L. D. Bort came to North East township in 1856 and followed farming in that township until the time of his death, except two years that he lived in the village. In 1869 he purchased a farm about two and one-half miles east of North East, on the Buffalo road, where his widow now resides with one son and a daughter. Mr. Bort was married October 14, 1850, to Lucinda, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Shaw) Metzker, of Tompkins county, New York, near Ithaca. The Metzker family moved to Erie county in 1833 and settled in Fairview township, near Walnut Creek. The father was a tailor, which occupation he followed all his life. He died in 1854, aged 74, and his wife in 1868, aged 82. Mrs. Bort is the only one of the family of nine children, now living, except a brother in Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Bort were the parents of six children, viz.: Annabel, Mrs. Henry Silliman; Frank, resides in Toledo, O.; Charles C. (deceased); Ida M., at home; Carrie L., now Mrs. Hoffman; and Andrew G., who resides at home and has the management of the farm of L. D. Bort. Mr. L. D. Bort was one of the upright men of the community, and during his life held several local offices of importance. He died October 13, 1893.

DeWitt Clinton Bostwick, North East township, postoffice Northville, Pa., was born in Vernon, Oneida county, N. Y., December 25, 1847. He is a son of John and Harriet (Butler) Bostwick, both natives of Utica, N. Y. The father was a cabinet-maker by trade, and, in 1867, moved to State Line, where he engaged in the mercantile business, which he followed until within four years of his death, which occurred February 21, 1880. He was born July 20, 1807. His wife died September 14, 1893. They were the parents of four children, viz.: Rachael, born January 1, 1845, now Mrs. Dr. Strong, Westfield, N. Y.; D. C., Marcia, born July 26, 1851, married Levi Miller, of Canton, O., and Carrie, born March 29, 1860, married George Bartoo, of St. Angars, Ia. D. C. Bostwick is of the seventh generation from John Bostwick, who came from England with his three brothers, Robert, Ebenezer and Joseph, about 1688, and moved to Stratford, Conn., in the year 1707, and was the second person settling in that town. He was of Scotch extraction. D. C. Bostwick was educated in a private school and in Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College, graduating in 1866. He then came to State Line and engaged in business with his father until 1871, under the firm name of Bostwick & Son. In 1872 he went to Ohio and was engaged on the construction of the Painesville and Youngstown R. R., in the capacity of superintendent of construction. Mr. Bostwick is a practical stone and brickmason, which trade he thoroughly learned when a young man. He then went to Cleveland and engaged in the construction of various railroads in that locality about two and one-half years. He has followed railroad contracting a great deal, and did considerable of the work of grading on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. He was superintendent of excavations for foundations of masonry on the Nickle Plate R. R. about a year and a half, and in 1876 he moved on his farm in Summit township, where he resided about four years, until his father-in-law's death, when he moved on his present place, in the eastern part of North East township. Mr. Bostwick was married September 4, 1872, to Miss Othellia A., daughter of George Hall. (See sketch of George Hall.) They have one child, George H., born December 18, 1873, at home. Mr. Bostwick has held several local offices. Is a member of the Masonic order and the A. O. U. W.

Edgar Mason, Northville, Pa., was born in Ripley, N. Y., July 26, 1844. He is one of the seven children of Hezekiah and Rosanna (Rich) Mason. They were of old New England stock and both natives of New York State, very close to the Vermont line. They came to the Western part of New York in 1825 shortly after being married. They drove the entire distance with an ox team and much of the distance their only traveled road was blazed trees. Hezekiah Mason was a cloth finisher and weaver by trade and in the vicinity of Northville built a woolen mill, the first in that section, which he operated for many years. He died in 1848, and his wife in 1884. E. Mason was reared and educated in Ripley and when a young man, engaged in the mercantile business which he followed five years and in 1873 he purchased the grist mill which is located on the Twenty-Mile Creek and Buffalo road, about half a mile west of the State line. This is the oldest grist mill in this section of the country. It is said to be over 90 years old. Mr. Mason keeps it in full running order and has made many improvements in keeping pace with the times in advance milling. He makes a specialty of custom grinding and in the manufacture of buck-wheat flour in season. Mr. Mason also has a sawmill in connection with the grist mill, but the greatest industry which now occupies his attention is his grape basket factory, which is situated in close proximity to his other mills. This marvelous institution is the product of Mr. Mason's genius and enterprise. He saw the necessity of such a factory in the heart of the grape growing country which has so rapidly developed in this section within the last decade. He commenced this business during the season of 1890, and since that time has manufactured a countless number of grape baskets. He supplies the North East grape growers association and the entire grape growers within a radius of several miles. When his basket factory is running to its full capacity he employs between 35 and 40 hands, and manufactures about one million baskets per annum. Mr. Mason was married October 31, 1867, to Miss Ellen Beatty of North East. They have six children, viz.: Jennie, Mrs. James Tripp, Ripley, N. Y.; Hugh, John, Ellen, Annie and Ralph. Mr. Mason is a member of the Masonic Order, blue lodge; A. O. U. W. and Royal Arcanum. He is also engaged in fruit growing, and has a farm of 25 acres devoted to vineyards.

Isaac Wolf, postoffice Northville, railroad station State Line, was born in Lancaster county, April 11, 1827. When he was six years of age he left the scenes of his early childhood, coming with his parents, Cyrus and Mary (Platt) Wolf, to Erie county, Pennsylvania. The family settled in Mill Creek township, about one-half a mile east of the Walnut creek bridge, on the old turnpike. The father was a farmer, which occupation he followed in Mill Creek township during the latter years of his life. He died in 1892 and his wife in 1875. They were the parents of seven children, viz.: Henry (deceased), Isaac, Margaret, Mrs. Henry Gingrich, Erie, Pa.; Maria, Mrs. Edward Sherman, Erie; Cyrus (deceased). He spent his life on the old homestead, in Fairview township, and Catherine, Mrs. Joseph Henderson, Erie. Isaac remained with his father until he was about 25 years of age, when he engaged in farming for himself, in Mill Creek township. In 1890 he removed to State Line and engaged in farming. He bought a farm of 43 acres at first, and continued to annex to it until he and his sons now own about 390 acres. It is without exception one of the finest farms in the county. It is situated in the midst of the grape belt, and there is scarcely a rod of waste land on the entire farm. Besides farming Mr. Wolf was also engaged in the general mercantile business which he conducted from March 1, 1869, to September 4, 1895, when he sold the business to his son, B. L., who now is devoting his entire attention to it. He is also postmaster of Northville, Pa. It is the only store at the State line and here he carries a line of goods as extensive as found in any country store. The Northville postoffice is located in his store. Mr. Wolf was married October 4, 1853, to Miss Eliza, daughter of Samuel and Mary A. (Heiss) Myers, early settlers of Fairview township, locating there about 1839, where the former died in 1877 and the latter in 1891. They were both natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Wolf are the parents of nine children, viz.: Clara, Mrs. J. F. Moore, Forsyth, N. Y.; Perry, married Flora Phear, of Ripley, N. Y.; William F., married Elsie Woolsey, of Girard, Pa.; Edward (deceased), Frank (deceased), Nelson, Mary, Mrs. John Beatty, Northville, Pa.; Charles, married Frances Benson, of Ripley, N. Y., and B. L., married Jessie F. Luce, of Northville, Pa. The sons all reside in the vicinity of State Line. Isaac Wolf acted as postmaster at Northville from 1884 to 1886, and in 1893 B. L., the present incumbent, received his commission as postmaster.

H. L. Silliman is one of the progressive farmers of North East township. He now resides in the house where he was born July 10, 1849. He is a son of Thomas and Jane (Schultz) Silliman. The former was a native of Lancaster county and the latter of Erie. Thomas Silliman was born April 24, 1802, and died July 9, 1890. His widow now resides in the borough. They were the parents of three children: H. L.; Frank, farmer, North East; and Fred (deceased). Thomas was a son of James and Jane Hunter Silliman, who moved from Northumberland to Erie county in 1802, when Thomas was 2 months old. James Silliman was a native of Ireland, and his wife was a Pennsylvanian. He bought a large tract of land in North East township, and built a rude log house thereon, near where now stands the historic old brick house, which was built in 1818, about a mile east of the borough. James and Jane Silliman were parents of seven children, viz.: Nancy, married Richard Cochran; Alexander, Polly, Asa and William, all of whom are now dead. Thomas, father of H. L., spent his life on the place where his father settled, and where H. L. now resides. He was well known throughout the county, and his long life was one of honesty and industry. He was prominent in local politics, and was a life-long Democrat. H. L. Silliman was reared on the place where he now resides, and educated in the public schools. He has made farming his chief occupation, and cultivates about 100 acres of excellent land. He is also engaged in fruit raising, and has a handsome ten-acre vineyard. He was married January 23, 1878, to Miss Belle Fox, of North East. They have three children, viz.: Thomas, Lorenzo and George.

A. K. Wing, farmer, North East, Pa., born March 29, 1822, in Chenango county, New York, is a son of William and Mariam (Moseley) Wing, both natives of Hoosic, N. Y. William Wing came to Erie county with his family in 1835, and lived for a time in Washington and Girard townships, following farming. He finally returned to New York State and settled in Hinsdale, Cattaraugus county, where he spent the remainder of his life. William and Mariam (Moseley) Wing were the parents of seven children, viz.: Edith, born March 19, 1815, married Nelson Chapin, who was killed at Fort Plymouth, N. C.; he was promoted to colonel, but was killed before he received his commission; his wife died January 4, 1890. William H., born October 4, 1818, spent his life in Ohio, and died September 12, 1891; A. K.; Sarah, born June 27, 1824, now Mrs. Colby Chamberlain, Olean, N. Y.; David, born March 31, 1827, died at Hinsdale, N. Y., March 29, 1869; Smith, born September 12, 1830, removed to Indiana and died at Ft. Wayne April 29, 1875; and Mary, born November 8, 1832, now Mrs. Seth Warren, of Olean, N. Y. A. K., when a young man, learned the tailor's trade at Hinsdale, N. Y. About 1844 he engaged in the clothing business at Castile, N. Y., where he remained about eight years. He then came to North East and farmed a few years, when he engaged in the mercantile business at State Line. In March, 1867, he purchased a part of his present place, which has since been his home. He has spent a great deal of time in the Pennsylvania oil fields, and was engaged in the oil business in several of the important oil centers within the last thirty years, spending about fifteen years in that section. Mr. Wing was married October 5, 1845, to Miss Richamer Sherman, a native of Rhode Island. They have one child, W. O., who resides in North East borough. He was born at Castile, N. Y. He was educated at the Ripley High School and at Bryant & Stratton's business college, Buffalo, and, when a young man, learned telegraphy, which he followed for a short time on the Lake Shore R. R. In 1860 he engaged in the oil business with his father, and for eight years was a member of the Bradford Oil Exchange. In 1882 he moved to North East, since which time he has devoted his attention to farming and fruit raising, in partnership with his father. Their farm is located about one mile east of the borough, and contains 100 acres, forty-five of which are devoted to grape growing. He was married May 28, 1873, to Miss Harriet M., daughter of James Crawford, of North East. They have four children, viz.: Arthur, George S., Mabel and Harry C. He is a member of the Masonic order, the Royal Arcanum, and a councilman in the North East borough, and he and his father are staunch Republicans.

Anthony Specht, North East, Pa., owner of one of the finest farm locations along the shore of Lake Erie, was born in Williamsville, Erie county, N. Y., December 22, 1839. He is a son of Lawrence and Mary Ann (Gass) Specht, both natives of Germany. They emigrated to America in 1829 and settled in western New York, where the father followed his trade, which was that of a stone mason, until 1852, when they came to Erie county, Pennsylvania, and bought a farm in West Greene, and followed farming until 1865. They next moved to North East, where the father died May 13, 1867, and the mother July 19, 1881. They reared a family of nine children, viz.: Mary, Mrs. Henry Heimly (deceased); Gertrude, Mrs. Andrew Bilba, Erie, Pa.; Catherine, Mrs. Benjamin Alger, West Greene; Eva, Mrs. Peter Rectenwald; Eric; Rose, North East; Lena, Mrs. Jacob Held (deceased); Lawrence (deceased), Anthony and Joseph, North East. Anthony Specht was educated in the public schools, and has made farming his leading occupation. March 16, 1865, he purchased forty-four acres of land on the shore of the lake north of North East, where he now owns over 153 acres, which fronts on the lake for about 235 rods. He carries on general farming and fruit raising, having over fourteen acres of grapes. He was married October 4, 1870, to Miss Josephine, daughter of John and Magdalene (Schwendinger) Gschoesser, of Mill Creek township. The father died in Chicago, March 17, 1872, and the mother now resides with Anthony Specht. Mr. and Mrs. Specht have a family of eight children, viz.: Albert, Helen, Rosaline, Josephine, Frank, Leo, John and Winnifred, all of whom reside at home.

John Beatty, North East township, postoffice Northville, Pa., was born in North East township, September 5, 1848, and is a son of Hugh and Maria Tallman Beatty (both deceased). Hugh Beatty was a native of Union county, Pennsylvania, and was born in 1814, and was a son of John and Catherine (Sox) Beatty, the former of Irish and the latter of German descent. When 6 years of age he came to Erie county with his father, who was then a widower. John Beatty was three times married, and his children were: Mrs. Eleanor Ross, a widow, North East; Hugh, Jacob (deceased), William (deceased), veteran of the late war, who spent his life in Ohio; Jacob, 2d (deceased), Jane, Mrs. P. D. Ross, State Line; John (deceased), Timothy N. (deceased), John M., resides in California; Ann Eliza, Mrs. William Lammis, Hudson, Mich.; Elizabeth, wife of O. W. Wheeler, Minneapolis, Minn.; Thomas S., California; Melvina (deceased), Eveline, Mrs. W. L. Shortman, Ripley, N. Y., and George O. U., Chicago, Ill.; he was also a soldier in the Rebellion. John Beatty died December 16, 1868. He was a farmer by occupation, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. Hugh Beatty, his son, also followed farming nearly all his life in North East township. In the fall of 1852 he went to California, where he followed gold mining three years, when he engaged in fruit raising and gardening, which he followed until 1857, then returning to North East, where he spent the remainder of his days on the place now occupied by John. He died November 27, 1856. He was married four times: First, to a Miss Childs, who died within one year; his second wife was Mrs. Shortman, who died, leaving one child, Ella, now Mrs. E. Mason, State Line (see sketch); he then married Maria Tallman. Three children were born to this union: Isaac (deceased); John and Eldridge, residing in North East township. The mother died June 22, 1855, and Mr. Beatty afterward married Mrs. Margaret Delong (now deceased). They had no children. Hugh Beatty was prominent in local politics, and held several township offices. He was an active member of the M. E. Church and acted as steward a long time.

A. L. Stetson is an extensive farmer of North East township, and his postoffice address is Northville, Pa. Mr. Stetson was born January 11, 1834, in the township where he now resides. He is a son of Sanders and Eliza (Lott) Stetson, the former a native of Rhode Island and the latter of Trumansberg, Seneca county, N. Y. The father was a farmer, and came to Erie county in 1834, settling near Sulphur Springs, in North East township. In 1856 he removed to a place near Jones' Mill, where he resided until his death, which occurred March 25, 1891, on the fourth day of his 86th year. The mother now resides with her son,

A. L., and is 84 years old. They were the parents of five children: Eliza (deceased), A. L., George W., North East; Henry (deceased) and Zephaniah (deceased). A. L. Stetson was reared and educated in North East township, where he remained until he was 19 years of age (1853). Like many others about that time he was attracted by the new gold mines of California, which acted upon him as a huge magnet and drew him toward the Golden Gate. He reached St. Joseph, Mo., by rail and river transportation, and from there drove across the plains and over the mountains with one of the many emigrant trains that were crossing in those days. He reached the Sacramento river October 7, 1853, twenty-six miles from Shasta. While in California he was engaged in mining and farming, and was also an extensive contractor in building reservoirs. October 23, 1863, he bought the place where he now resides of F. B. Smedley. It contains 175 acres, located on the lake and Twenty-Mile creek. Mr. Stetson returned to California after he purchased his place, and remained about three years. Since 1866 he has resided in North East township. He is engaged in general farming and grape raising, having a vineyard of about ten acres. He has dealt a great deal in fine horses. He was married February 28, 1868, to Miss Annette, daughter of Alexander Eddy, of Cambridge, N. Y. To this union were born four children, viz.: Alice E., Henry T., Leon G. and Grace.

J. A. Blauvelt, North East, Pa., is one of the progressive fruit growers of North East township, and was born in Clark, Rockland county, N. Y., February 28, 1823. He is a descendant of the Holland Dutch, who were among the early settlers of New York City and vicinity. Cornelius Blauvelt, our subject's grandfather, was a Revolutionary soldier, and was taken prisoner by the British, to England. He was seized when the British captured New York, and was not released until after the surrender of Cornwallis. J. A. is a son of Abraham and Anna (Van Orden) Blauvelt, who spent their lives in Rockland county, New York. The mother died in 1879 and the father in 1880. They were the parents of two children, Cornelius (deceased), who lived in Rockland county all his life except a few years which he spent in New York City, and J. A. Blauvelt, reared and educated in his native town, and when a young man learned the mason's trade, which he followed about ten years. He has been engaged in farming the rest of the time. In 1870 he moved to Jamestown, N. Y., and seven years later came to North East township and bought his present place, where he has since been engaged in fruit raising and gardening. Mr. Blauvelt was married in 1851 to Miss Elizabeth McAccllin. Two children were born to this union: Annette, married James Rappale, of Jamestown, N. Y., and Jessie, at home. After Mrs. Blauvelt's death Mr. Blauvelt married Elizabeth Hunt. They have one child, Jennie, now Mrs. Frank Weaver, of North East. Mr. Blauvelt is a staunch supporter of the principles set forth by the People's party.

C. Grimshaw, North East, Pa., one of the progressive citizens of Erie county, is extensively engaged in fruit culture in North East township. He was born May 18, 1853, in Calverley, Yorkshire, England, and is a son of Job and Mary Ann (Craven) Grimshaw, both natives of England. They reared a family of three children: Henry, professor of music, Liverpool, England; Albert, bookkeeper, New Brighton, Pa.; he is also a musician; and C. The father now resides in retirement on the old homestead in England, and the mother died in 1856. C. Grimshaw was reared and educated in his native land and learned the spinner's trade. When 20 years of age he came to America and settled in North East. He obtained employment at his trade in the old woolen mill which was then operated by W. A. Grimshaw & Co., where he remained until 1884, when he purchased his present place, which is situated just south of Orchard Beach, which was at one time a part of Mr. Grimshaw's farm. Mr. Grimshaw has one of the finest producing vineyards in the county. He was married July 1, 1875, to Miss Sarah, daughter of D. J. Wells, of North East. They have two children, Alice G. and Harry. Politically Mr. Grimshaw is a Republican.

A. E. Martin, North East, Pa. It is natural for each member of the human family to cherish in his bosom a veneration for that portion of terra firma where he first saw the light of day, and regardless of the stage of life at which we leave our birthplace we expect at some distant day to again visit our old home and the scenes of our childhood; but such cannot be the case with Mr. Martin, for the land of his birth is now occupied by the waters of Lake Erie—the site of his early home, on the shore of the lake in Harbor Creek township, has gradually slipped into the lake and disappeared. He was born February 13, 1833, and is a son of James and Lavisa (Garham) Martin (both deceased), the former a native of County Tyrone, Ireland, and the latter of Rutland county, Vermont. The father when 18 years of age came to America and lived in Vermont a short time, when he settled in Harbor Creek, this county. He was a carpenter by trade and also followed farming. James Martin was one of a family of six children, viz.: John (deceased), resided in Harbor Creek; Alexander (deceased), resided in Harbor Creek; Thomas (deceased), lived in the West; James (deceased); Margaret, Mrs. John Lindsay, Vermont (deceased), and Jane, Mrs. John Gray, Harbor Creek. James and Lavisa (Garham) Martin were the parents of seven children, viz.: Rachael, Mrs. J. Curtis, Chautauqua, N. Y.; A. E.; Robert, Whitewater, Wis.; John (deceased); William (deceased); Roland, Buffalo, N. Y.; Sanderman, Buffalo, N. Y.; and Lavisa, Mrs. Chas. Howard, Corry, Erie county, Pa. A. E. Martin spent his early days in Harbor Creek township and received a public school education, and when a youth learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed about twelve years later; he was engaged in carriagemaking ten years and operated a cider mill five years. He engaged in farming in North East township in 1873, and is one of the successful farmers of the locality. He was married October 3, 1860, to Miss Mary, daughter of Andrew Malick, of North East township. She was born June 8, 1841, and died November 19, 1870, leaving three children, Egbert and Albert, twins, born August 22, 1861, the former now residing in North East township, the latter is deceased, and Edith, born July 18, 1867, Mrs. James Howard, of Harbor Creek.

G. J. Felton, farmer, postoffice Ripley, N. Y., resides in the extreme northeast corner of Erie county, on the shore of the lake and not twenty rods from the New York State line. He is a Hollander by birth and was born February 25, 1845. He is a son of Benodus and Amelia (Lictus) Felton, both also natives of Holland. The family emigrated to America when G. J. was about 3 years old and settled on the Mohawk, near Schoenectady, N. Y., where they remained for ten years. They then went to Clymer, Chautauqua county, N. Y. There were four children in the family, viz.: G. J., John, who resides on the old homestead at Clymer; William, Westfield, N. Y., and Mary, Mrs. William Luktus, Clymer. The father was a farmer by occupation all his life. He died in April, 1891, and the mother died in 1883. G. J. Felton and his father both served in the army during the Rebellion. The father enlisted in Co. E., 154th N. Y. V. I. He was taken prisoner at Antietam and confined in Libby a short time and shortly after discharged from the service on account of physical disability. He served two years. G. J. Felton remained with his father on the farm until the war broke out, when he enlisted in Co. E., 112th N. Y. V. I. He participated in the engagements at Cold Harbor, Black Water, served on the blockades at Charleston and along the Florida coast and participated in the action in front of Petersburg, where on July 30, 1864, he received a gunshot wound. He was taken to Staten Island Hospital and recovered in time to be at the battle of Fort Fisher, and when Lee surrendered he was detailed to hospital duty at Providence, and on July 30, 1865, was discharged and returned to Clymer, where he followed farming until 1875, when he bought his present place of 100 acres. Besides carrying on an extensive general farming he has a vineyard of twenty-five acres. Mr. Felton was married April 7, 1865, to Miss Sarah Galloway, of Ripley, N. Y. They have eight children, viz.: Mary, Frank, George, Nellie, Herbert, Robert, Edith and Florence. He is a member of the G. A. R., K. O. T. M. and is a Republican.

B. F. Crawford, North East, Pa., is a descendant of one of the pioneer families of Erie county. His grandfather, Thomas Crawford, was born in Harrisburg, March 27, 1769. His father was an officer in Washington's army. Thomas Crawford married Polly Custard, also a native of Harrisburg. They were the parents of twelve children, viz.: Hugh, born December 3, 1791, died in infancy; Jane, born April 5, 1793, married a Mr. Childs, of North East, Pa., both dead; James, born November 17, 1794; William, born December 24, 1796; Polly, born March 18, 1801, married Harry Rogers, lived in Mill Creek township, both dead; Thomas, born June 13, 1803, Rose Ann, born June 20, 1805 (deceased); Susan E., born May 10, 1807, (deceased); Nancy B., born July 19, 1810, married Miles Caughey, lived in Fairview, and died in 1895; Sally, born August 10, 1812, married Wm. Graham, of North East, died August, 1895, and Robert, born May 6, 1817. Thomas Crawford settled in North East township with his family about the year 1786 on the Lake road, near where Mr. Carr now lives. The Carr place was a part of the land. He bought about 240 acres in that vicinity. He devoted his entire life to farming and although not prominent in politics, he always voted the Whig ticket. He died in 1857. William Crawford, father of B. F. Crawford, was born at North East, Pa., and was their youngest child when the family came to Erie county. He spent his entire life in North East township and followed farming. He was at one time interested in a pail factory at Freeport and also ran a sawmill there. He lived near the mouth of Sixteen-mile creek, which is now known as Orchard Beach, the home of James. He married Nancy, daughter of Alex. T. and Rosanna (McCord) Blaine, June 20, 1820. She was born June 21, 1800. They reared a family of eleven children, viz.: Alexander B., born September 24, 1821, died July 7, 1858; Thomas, born November 7, 1822, North East; Rosanna M., born April 20, 1825, died August 1, 1846; William A., born August 17, 1827, Erie, Pa.; Harriet, born September 16, 1829, died May 29, 1850; James M., born December 25, 1831, died June 20, 1857; Ephriam Wm., born October 23, 1833, Warren, Pa.; Benjamin F., born May 25, 1836; Joseph T., born March 30, 1839; and Josephine, twins; Joseph died October 13, 1840, and Josephine lives in North East; Edwin J., born May 18, 1842, died March 18, 1859. The father died August 19, 1850, on the Judd farm; and the mother died May 21, 1877. B. F. Crawford spent his early days in North East at the place of his birth, and when about eighteen years of age, went to Sandusky, O., where he served an apprenticeship at the machinist's trade, and afterwards went to Kansas and in 1858 returned to Warren, O., where he was working at his trade when the war broke out. He enlisted September 6, 1862, in Co. C, 16th Pa. Cav. and served until the close of the war. During the last year of his service he was ordnance sergeant of the 2nd Cavalry Div. In 1867 Mr. Crawford went to Nebraska, and worked for the Union Pacific R. R., until the Golden Spike was driven and the road opened to the coast. In 1870, he went to Minnesota and worked on the "Soo" R. R. as passenger conductor until 1875, when he returned to the Union Pacific, in the same capacity, until 1882. He then went to Pennsylvania to settle down, but shortly after went to Winnipeg on the Canadian Pacific as conductor, and afterward entered the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. in the same capacity, where he remained until 1892, when he came to North East, and has since been engaged in farming. Mr. Crawford was married December 27, 1863, to Miss Emma Jaehing, of Duluth, Minn. She died December 9, 1874, leaving one child, Emma J. He is a member of the O. R. C., and, although not a member of the G. A. R., usually attends the encampments, parades, etc., accompanied by his old comrade, "Old Ned," who has a national reputation, and as far as known is the only surviving four-legged veteran of the late war. The horse is now about 40 years of age. "Ned" was captured from Gen. Jubal Early's corps near Washington, by a Union scouting party, thirty-two years ago, and was given to his present owner to replace an animal he looted and which had been shot in a skirmish. At the close of the war Mr. Crawford rode Ned from Washington to North East, and he has since been in his possession.

G. Will Butt, North East, Pa., is a son of A. W. Butt, and was born November 26, 1850, on the place where his father now resides; he was educated in the common schools and the North East and Ripley high schools. At 18 he left home and engaged in clerking in North East, where he remained a little over a year. He then went to Cory in the same capacity, remaining about nine months. He then followed lumbering a short time and went to Rouseville, Venango county, and engaged in the furniture business, running a branch store in Petersburg and one in Edenburg. In 1875 he engaged in the oil business, which he followed until 1880. In that year he went to Bradford and engaged in the manufacture of nitro-glycerine, manufacturing about 1,600 pounds daily. He followed this for four years, when he returned to the oil business, with headquarters in Warren, Pa. In 1892 he returned to North East and engaged in farming, which now occupies his attention. He has a fine farm, well adapted to fruit and grape growing, situated about a mile from the borough. Mr. Butt was married February 18, 1874, to Miss Lily, daughter of H. R. Fullerton, of Parker's Landing, Armstrong county, Pa. They have three children, viz.: Rose Harriet, George Alonzo and Blanche Lillian. He is a member of the Masonic order (Blue Lodge). He has held several local offices at the different places where he resided, and was at one time Burgess of Petersburg. Politically he has always been a Republican.

C. B. Farr, farmer and fruit raiser, North East, Pa., was born in Bradford, Pa., October 27, 1861, and is a son of Levi C. and Catherine (Mattison) Farr, both natives of Bradford, Pa. They were parents of five children, viz.: C. B.; Milton, resides in West Virginia; Anna (deceased); George (deceased) and Isaac (deceased). The mother died May 10, 1873. The father followed the occupation of lumbering in his earlier days, and during the oil excitement of Pennsylvania was in the oil business. In 1878 he came to North East, and eight years later went to Florida, and is now owner and proprietor of an orange grove in Hwassee, Orange county, Fla. Levi C. Farr is a son of George Farr, who was born in Vermont in 1806, and went to what is now Bradford with his father in the year 1826. There was not a white settler in the town or in Luna Valley at that time. Levi was the second white male child born in that valley. Isaac Farr, the pioneer of that section, was born in Vermont in 1775; his parents were natives of England. C. B. Farr had his early experience among the oil derricks of McKean county, and came to Erie county at the age of 17. He purchased his present place in 1888 from his father. He is engaged in fruit raising and gardening, and his place is located about three miles northeast of the "grape city." Mr. Farr was married September 22, 1885, to Miss Nettie, daughter of L. P. and Louisa (Vermilyae) Merihew, of North East township. They have one child, Noel Clifton. Mr. Farr is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M.

Joseph Rhodes, postoffice, Northville, Pa., railroad station State Line, N. Y. Mr. Rhodes is a native of New Jersey, and was born November 1, 1828. He is a son of George and Annie (Vanderhoff) Rhodes. The father was born September 13, 1797, in New Jersey, and the mother July 11, 1798. The father was a blacksmith and wagonmaker by trade, and came to Genoa, Cayuga county, N. Y., at an early date. He was an excellent workman, and noted throughout central New York State for the perfection of his forged fish-hooks. He followed his trade at Genoa, N. Y., and several years at Rhodesport, and was next engaged in boating and boat building for several years. About 1842 the family removed to Corning, N. Y., and about the time they moved he caught a severe cold through exposure on Lake Seneca, and went to Corning, where he died June 24, 1842. His wife died February 10, 1831. They reared a family of seven children: Lucetta, born September 1, 1818, and died March 20, 1840; Hattie Caroline, born November 12, 1824, now Mrs. Robert Clark, Corning, N. Y.; Catherine Maria, born November 30, 1828, married Alonzo Backley, and resides in the West; Hosea, born April 28, 1831, Olean, N. Y.; John, born August 3, 1833, lives in Chicago; Lydia Samantha, born September 13, 1837, died September 7, 1847; and Rachael Ann, born November 23, 1839, died October 23, 1840. Joseph Rhodes came to New York State with his parents when he was 1 year old. He showed a talent for mechanical work ever since he was a child, and when a youth naturally and easily learned the carpenter's trade, and followed this occupation as a railroad carpenter for several years, with his home at Corning. In 1875 he bought one-half interest in the cider and vinegar factory which he now owns. It is situated on the Buffalo road, near State Line. In 1877 he bought the entire concern, and since then has been engaged in the manufacture of cider, vinegar and unfermented grape cider. He manufactures about 80,000 gallons of vinegar per year. Mr. Rhodes was married first at Akron, O., March 21, 1853, to Miss Sarah Townsend, of Akron, O. She died January 16, 1889, leaving one child, Marcus, who now resides at Dayton, N. Y. Mr. Rhodes was again married July 23, 1890, to Miss Harriet Baker. Mr. Rhodes is a member of the State Police, and politically is a Republican. Mr. Rhodes' great-grandfather, Joseph Rhodes, lived and died in Horton, Yorkshire, England. His son, Charles Rhodes, when a lad of 17 years, was seized by a press gang, while attending school in a seaport town, with his school books in his hand, put on board a man-of-war, and it was three years before he finally escaped, while the vessel was at anchor in New York harbor. He found a position as a school teacher in Freehold, N. J., where he was married on the 6th of August, 1750, to Alice Van Kirk. He was a farmer during the Revolution, and the British took possession of his farm. Later he conducted a hotel, built a gristmill, sawmill and distillery. He was for a long time county clerk of Sussex county, holding the office at the time of his death. He made a trip to England to secure property left him by his father. George Rhodes, the father of our subject, was the third child of Joseph Rhodes, above mentioned, by his second wife, Catherine Wintermate.

Jacob Chefferte, fruit grower, North East, Pa., was a veteran in the late war, is a native of Switzerland, and was born March 16, 1831. He was reared and educated in his native land, and when 21 years of age came to America, settling in Boston, Erie county, N. Y., where he remained until the breaking out of the rebellion, when he enlisted in Co. F, 116th N. Y. V. I. At Plain Stone, near Ft. Hudson, May 21, 1863, which was the first engagement in which he participated, he received wounds which disabled him from further military service. He lost the four fingers of his left hand and at the same time was pierced through the right wrist by a musket ball. After recovering sufficiently to leave the hospital he returned to his former home in New York State. Shortly afterwards he came to North East and engaged in farming between Freeport and North East, where he has since resided. He is chiefly engaged in fruit raising. He was married in 1856 to Miss Kate Meehl, of New York State. They have nine children, viz.: Lizzie, John, Hattie, Henry, Frank, Julius, Charles, Emma and Lewis. He is a member of the G. A. R., and politically is a Republican.

E. A. Hart, North East, Pa., was born August 27, 1837, in North East township. He is a son of Edmund and Mahala (Jones) Hart; the former was a native of Erie county, Pennsylvania, and a descendant of one of the early pioneer families. Edmund Hart settled in North East township about 1835, and bought some sixty-three acres about a mile and a half southeast of the borough. He cleared this land, and followed farming there during the remainder of his life. This is where E. A. was born, and where he now resides, although his present farm contains nearly twice as much land as was originally purchased by his father. Edmund and Mahala (Jones) Hart were the parents of six children, viz.: E. A., L. C., North East; John H., Central City, Neb.; Dora M., Mrs. Robert Thayer, North East, widow; Emma T., Mrs. Charles Rothers, Pasadena, Cal., and Ida V., Mrs. James Loucks, Pasadena, Cal. The father died in 1893, aged 82 years, and the mother now resides in North East borough. E. A. Hart has always been engaged in farming in North East township, except one year he spent in the oil country. He was united in marriage June 10, 1862, to Miss Lydia Fairchild, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. They have three children, viz.: Eva, Mrs. George Youngs, North East township; W. S. and Charles A. Mr. Hart is the present constable of North East township, and has held several local offices, having been school director nine years. Politically he is a Republican.

Charles Wilks, farmer, North East, Pa., resides about three miles southeast of the borough, is a native of Mechenberg, Germany, and was born August 17, 1820. His parents were John and Mary (Holnagel) Wilks, both of whom spent their lives in Germany. Charles Wilks was reared and educated in his native land, where he followed farming until he was 36 years old, when he emigrated to America, locating for a short time in Silver Creek, N. Y. In 1857 he settled in North East township, and two or three years later purchased his present place. He was married in 1844 to Miss Sophia, daughter of Christopher Shultz, a native of Germany. They reared a family of five children, viz.: E. C., North East; Mary, Mrs. Homer Atkins, North East; Charles F., North East; Minnie, Mrs. Frank Luth, Painesville, O., and Albert F., who resides with his father, and has an adjoining farm, working in partnership. He was born January 26, 1863, and has always devoted his attention to farming. He was married March 26, 1885, to Miss Mary, daughter of Charles Gruel, of North East township. They have three children, viz.: Walter W., Frank C. and Bart H.

Benson Bingham, North East, Pa., is one of Erie county's representative farmers. He was born August 3, 1830, at Barton, Steuben county, N. Y., and is a son of Johnathan and Mary (Benson) Bingham, both natives of Steuben county, New York. The Bingham family are among the pioneers of this county. The city of Binghamton, N. Y., received its name from this family, of whom there are a great many representatives in New York State. Johnathan Bingham was born in 1796, and followed farming in the State of New York until 1848, when he settled in North East township, near the North East cemetery. In 1857 he sold out to his sons, went to Fairfax, Va., and bought an extensive plantation where he was engaged in farming at the breaking out of the war. As he was a loyal Northerner his plantation was devastated by the Rebel army. They burned his fences and buildings and destroyed and confiscated his stock and produce. Although a man of nearly 70 years, he was taken to Libby prison by the Confederates, but was shortly after released. He then came to Erie county and resided in Corry a short time, when he went to live in Washington, D. C., where he spent nearly the remainder of his life. He died in Philadelphia. His wife died in 1870. They were the parents of seven children, viz.: Maria, Mrs. Hampton Phillips, Chautauqua county, New York; Benson and Wesley, North East; Franklin, Vineland, N. J., and Mariette, Mrs. V. H. Bennett, Wattsburg, Pa. Mr. Benson Bingham was educated in the public schools of North East township, and has always made farming his occupation. He purchased his present farm of 85 acres in 1872. It is located about two and one-half miles southeast of the borough. He is engaged in general farming and fruit raising, having a vineyard of over 12 acres. Mr. Bingham has been twice married, first March 6, 1860 to Miss Emma Poole, of North East. She died in 1879, leaving four children, viz.: Harriet, Mrs. John Bagley, North East; Franklin, traveling salesman, North East; Frederick, at home, and John P., clerk, Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Bingham was married on the second occasion to Miss Emma Stetson, of North East. He served two terms as commissioner of North East township, and politically is a Democrat.

C. B. Archer, North East, Pa., is not only one of the extensive fruit producers of North East township, but is a very extensive dealer. He has a large fruit farm located about three miles east of the borough, where he cultivates one of the finest vineyards in Erie county. Mr. Archer was born at Ripley, N. Y., July 24, 1843. His parents are John G. and Aurilla (Imman) Archer, the former a native of Washington county, New York, and the latter a native of Pennsylvania. They were the parents of seven children, four of whom are living: Caroline, married Frank Ludlow, of Ripley, N. Y.; Fred B., North East, Pa.; C. B., Henry, Ripley, N. Y. John G. Archer, father of C. B., was a soldier in the war of the late rebellion. He served in Co. E, 12th N. Y. V. I., and was over fifty years of age when he entered the service. He died July 5, 1879. His wife now resides at Ripley, N. Y. C. B. Archer was educated in the common schools of New York, and in 1870 came to Erie county and bought a farm in Greenfield township and in 1873 bought his present place in North East. Mr. Archer was married March 31, 1869, to Miss Henrietta Baird, a descendant of one of the pioneer families of North East township. They have three children: Frank, Eric and Bart.

L. G. Youngs, nurseryman, North East township, Pennsylvania, born in the township where he now resides December 13, 1853, is a son of Sears and Jane (Harper) Youngs. He was reared in North East township and educated in the public schools, the Lake Shore Seminary, North East, and the Elyria Academy, Elyria, O. He taught school several years, mostly in the State of Ohio. He at one time was the principal of the Grafton Academy, Grafton, Ohio. In 1888 he was appointed postal clerk and worked on the Chicago, New York R. P. O. Div. of the railway mail service until 1890. He then resigned his position in the mail service and has since devoted his attention to his present place, which he had previously purchased. He is very extensively engaged in fruit raising, besides having one of the finest nurseries along the Lake Shore. His place is located about three miles from the borough of North East and one-half mile south of the Nickel Plate station, State Line. Mr. Youngs was married in 1874 to Miss Mary L. Covey, of North East. To this union were born four children: Arthur F., Leonard N., Alfred J., and Anna M. Mrs. Youngs departed this life January 26, 1892, and he was again married July 4, 1894, to Miss Celia Dowman of Girard. Mr. Youngs is a member of the A. O. U. W., the I. O. O. F. and is a prominent Erie county Democrat.

M. D. Newton, North East, was born on the place where he now resides, January 18, 1861, and is a son of John L. and Harriett (Welch) Newton, pioneers of Erie county. The mother now resides in North East borough, and the father died October 18, 1892. J. L. Newton (deceased) was born in 1830 in Oswego, N. Y., son of Elias and Laura Ann (Gay) Newton, both natives of New York. They moved to North East when J. L. was 6 years old. Their children were: Warren, Julia, William, Eveline (all deceased) and J. L. A sister and two brothers died young. J. L. was the last survivor of the children, having spent his life in the township and followed farming. He was married April 19, 1855, to Miss Harriet Welch, of Onondaga county, New York; they had three children: Loray E. (deceased), Munroe D. and U. G. Mr. J. L. Newton held several political offices, was road commissioner, school director and assessor. He was a staunch Republican. M. D. Newton was reared and educated in North East township, and has always made farming his chief occupation. He now resides on the old homestead, which contains eighty-seven acres. He owns another farm of seventy-seven acres in the township. Mr. Newton is very extensively engaged in fruit raising and has a large and productive vineyard. He was united in marriage March 25, 1885, to Miss Sophia Senger, of North East. They have four children: William John, Bertha M., Orpha Deloss and George Harrison. Mr. Newton is one of the school directors of North East township and is a Republican.

G. L. Youngs, farmer and fruit grower, North East, Pa., is a son of Sears L. Youngs, one of the pioneers of this section, and was born July 19, 1841, in North East township, where he has since resided. He spent his life on his father's farm, and in 1875 purchased his present place, where he has since been engaged in farming, but during the last few years he has devoted his attention to fruit growing. He raises all kinds of fruit and has a fine vineyard of ten acres. Mr. Youngs was married April 8, 1881, to Miss Violetta Amanda Thompson, of Tidioute, Warren county. They have two children, George and Leroy, both residing in North East township. Mr. Youngs is one of the successful farmers of Erie county and has many friends in the community.

F. B. Archer, North East township, postoffice Ripley, N. Y., was born in Ripley, N. Y., May 7, 1838, and is a son of John G. and Aurilla (Yuman) Archer, the former a native of Whitehall, N. Y. (deceased), and the latter of Ripley, N. Y. The mother now resides at Ripley, N. Y. John G. Archer was a son of Valentine Archer, whose father was a native of Nova Scotia, and a pioneer of western New York. F. B. Archer is one of a family of four children: Caroline, Mrs. Frank Luellow, of Ripley; F. B., Charles, of North East, and Henry, Ripley, N. Y. Mr. Archer spent his boyhood days in Ripley Hill, and received a common school education. He has always followed farming, except when a soldier. In September, 1862, he enlisted in company E, 154th N. Y. V. I. He served in the battles of Frederickburg and Chancellorsville and several minor engagements. At Chancellorsville he was wounded: a minié ball passed through his right breast and his right arm and shoulder. After spending about six months in the Grace Church Hospital at Alexandria, Va., he served in the invalid's corps a short time, when he was discharged and returned to the quiet of the farm. In 1886 he came to North East township and bought his present place, where he is chiefly engaged in fruit raising. Mr. Archer has been twice married. On the first occasion April 6, 1858, to Sarah Brownell, by whom he had five children: Emma, Mrs. Will Luke, Cory, Pa.; Frances, Mrs. Truman Witherell, Gowanda, N. Y.; Ermine, Mrs. George Getzmer, Gowanda, N. Y.; Grant, Buffalo, N. Y., and Leon, at home. He was married on the second occasion to Fannie Hutchins, of Westfield, N. Y. Politically Mr. Archer is a staunch Republican.

Ch. Kochler

E. S. Orton, North East, an extensive fruit grower of the garden township of Erie county, was born September 29, 1831, in the township where he now resides, a short distance south of State Line Station of the Nickel Plate R. R. He is a son of Edmund and Amanda (Camp) Orton. Edmund Orton was a native of Litchfield, Conn., and came as far west as North East on foot, May 8, 1815; the next fall he returned on foot to Durham, Conn. The same winter he returned to North East with an ox team, and in the fall of 1818 returned to Connecticut, where he was married to Amanda Camp, came back to North East the latter part of the winter and bought a place, of which they now own a portion. The father made farming his chief occupation, and died June 20, 1870, aged 84 years. His wife died August 14, 1839. They were the parents of six children: Maria A. married Lewis Colton, who died in 1804, at Elk Grove, Cal.; Sarah, Mrs. G. M. Belknap (deceased), North East; Elvira (deceased); E. S., Mary, Mrs. L. G. Baldwin (deceased), of West Granville, Mass., and L. M., North East. E. S. Orton is a descendant of the seventh generation of Thomas Orton, who was born in England in 1613, and emigrated to America about 1640, settling in Windsor, Conn., in 1641, and soon after removed to Farmington, Conn. The line of descent is Thomas (1613), John (1647), Samuel (1694), Samuel (1724), Samuel (1759) to Edmund, the father of E. S. E. S. Orton was reared and educated in North East township, and has made farming his main occupation, and within the last few years has been devoting his attention to fruit raising, and now his farm of over ninety acres is all devoted to producing various kinds of fruit. Mr. Orton was married March 22, 1862, to Miss Mary E. Bell, of Sherman, N. Y. They have three children: Carrie, Mrs. Jasper Peters, North East;

E. A., married Miss Jennie Peters, of North East, March 1, 1893. They have three children: Carrie B., Edward A. and Joseph W.

John G. Rose, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born June 29, 1836, son of Jacob and Christina (Fater) Rose. Jacob Rose came to America from Germany in the year 1842, bringing John with him, and settled in Summit township. He married Christina, daughter of Mr. Fater, and reared a family of six children, as follows: Christina, Jacob (deceased), Fred, Christ, George and John G., who married Sarah, daughter of John Hammer, of McKean township. This union has been blessed with six children, as follows: Charley, Kosanna, wife of Henry Hosback, McKean township; John, David, Etta and Sarah. Mrs. Rose died May 24, 1894, aged 51 years. John G. Rose settled on the farm where he now resides. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and is also a member of the Evangelical Church. Mr. Rose started in life a poor man, and now owns a farm of seventy-five acres, where he resides.

Joseph Runser, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born September 6, 1824, in Hessingen, Germany, son of C. E. Runser, of Hessingen, Germany. He died on the ocean. G. E. Runser married Rosanna Frey in Germany, and the union has been blessed with a large family of children, as follows: Katie (deceased), Cecilia, wife of F. Duttlinger (deceased); Marguret (deceased); Peter (deceased); Joseph, living in Summit township. Joseph Runser was married to Elizabeth, daughter of Frank Spade, of Greene township, August 9, 1847. To this union was born a family of eight children: F. Joseph (deceased); George C., living in Erie; Peter, living in Meadville, Pa.; Mary E., wife of Valentine Baker, of Summit township; Josephine (deceased); Crescentia wife of Conrad Wigand, of Erie; Scholasta, wife of I. Flickinger, of Jamestown, N. Y.; and Helen (deceased). Mrs. Runser died at the age of 53. In 1872 Mr. Runser married, for his second wife, Carry, daughter of J. J. Sens, of Germany. Joseph Runser, who came here from Germany in 1822, settled in Summit township on the farm where he now resides. He started in life without assistance and by his industry and thrift has acquired a farm of sixty acres, well adapted for farming. He is a member of the St. Joseph Church, of Erie.

Henry Eggers, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born in Hanover, Germany, December 2, 1847, and is of German ancestry. He emigrated to America September 16, 1871, and settled in Erie county, where he married Mary, daughter of Joseph Runser, of Summit township, in 1877. Four children have been born to them: Albert (deceased), Carrie, Lena and Clara. Henry Eggers has two brothers and a sister, Augusta, living on a farm in Summit township, and a brother and sister (Louisa) deceased. He attends St. Francis' Church, of McKean, and is one of the active and practical farmers of his neighborhood.

Frederick Moore, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., born December 31, 1837, is a son of George Moore, who came from Prussia and settled in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, in 1840. Later, in 1861, he moved into Beaver county, where he died November 13, 1881, at the advanced age of 72. George Moore was the father of seven children: Frederick, living in Summit township; Mary, wife of John Chisler, of Allegheny, Pa., living in Pittsburg; Katie, wife of Michael McGuire, of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, and George (deceased). Frederick Moore married Elizabeth, daughter of Michael Minick, September 22, 1862, at Allegheny, Pa. Mrs. Minick was formerly Catherine Spencer, of Butler county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Moore are the parents of eleven children: Joseph, living in Pittsburg; Anna, Maggie, Charley, George, John, Edward, Andrew, Aloyses, Minnie and Paul. Mr. Frederick Moore is the owner of two large farms, one situated in Beaver county, Pennsylvania, and the other in Summit township, Erie county, Pa. He started in life, in 1862, in Beaver county, where he resided until 1894, when he moved to Summit township, where he has since made his home. He and his family are members of the Roman Catholic Church, and in politics he has always been a Democrat.

Ernest Nick, of Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., one of Summit township's enterprising and prosperous farmers, was born April 16, 1838, in the city of Esslingen, Wurtemberg, Germany, son of C. W. Nick, a German military officer, who married Sophia Stadmund in 1818. They reared a family of six children, as follows: William, of Erie; Frederick (deceased) was mayor of the city of Esslingen, Germany, for twenty years; Sophie, wife of J. J. Schmittlen, of Sabulla, Ia.; Ernest, Caroline, wife of Charles Fuchs, of Erie, and Charles (deceased). Ernest Nick married Mary, daughter of John M. Veit, of Summit township, September 22, 1859, who married Margareta Knodle, of the town of Horrpeim, Wurtemberg, Germany, the latter living to the advanced age of 88. Mr. and Mrs. Nick reared a large family of children: Charles W., of Erie; John H., of Summit township; Clara, Emma, wife of Samuel Beckman, of Erie; Ernest Gustave, of Erie; Minnie and Bertha. Ernest Nick, located in the city of Erie in 1852, making his home there for thirty years, and moving to Summit township in 1886, where he has since resided on a farm of seventy acres. Mr. Nick has been very successful, in a business way, and has been tax collector of Summit township for two years.

Fernando Waldinger, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., born November 20, 1841, in Rheinbaern, Germany, son of Joseph Waldinger (deceased), of Germany, who married Margaretha, daughter of John A. Ziehl, of Germany. To this union were born five children, as follows: Frank, living in Erie; August 1st (deceased), Anton, living in Summit township; Fernando, and August 2d (deceased). Fernando Waldinger married Sybilla, daughter of John J. and Barbara Wolf, of Erie (both deceased), October 27, 1868. This union has been blessed with eleven children, as follows: Mary E., born August 16, 1869, married Christian Dahlkemper of Summit township, April 21, 1891; Joseph, living at home, born August 6, 1871; Edward J., born August 23, 1873; Bertha, born June 20, 1875; Frank H., born May 14, 1877; Emma M., born May 14, 1879; Ida F., born March 26, 1881; John, born January 27, 1883; Fernando, jr., born April 20, 1885; Clara A., born August 4, 1887; and Louisa M., born July 21, 1889. Fernando Waldinger came to America from Germany in the year 1866, and settled in Erie county.

By his individual effort alone he has since become the possessor of a farm of 112 acres in Summit township, where he resides, six miles from Erie, and also owns 25 acres in Mill Creek township. In politics Mr. Waldinger is a Democrat. The family are members of St. Joseph's Church of Erie.

C. E. Dahlkemper, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., born in Westphalia, Germany, December 22, 1860, son of Staffen Dahlkemper, of Germany, who was united in marriage in 1853 with Miss Katie Buckle, daughter of Frederick Buckle, of Westphalia, Germany, a highly respected citizen in his native town. This union has been blessed by a large family of children: Barnett (deceased), Anna, wife of Henry Bicker, of Germany; Kate (deceased), Gerold, living in Germany; C. E., Mary (deceased), Teresa, Lizzie, William, living in Summit township; Joseph, living in Germany; Henry, living in Germany. C. E. Dahlkemper was united in marriage April 21, 1891, to Mary, daughter of Ferdinand Waldinger, of Summit township, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. To this union have been born two children, Bertha and William. The family are all members of St. Joseph's Church of Erie. Mr. Dahlkemper is a member of the A. O. U. W., of Erie, where he first lived after coming from Germany in 1882. Four years later he moved to Summit township, where he has since resided, and where he owns a farm of sixty acres, situated on the Waterford and Erie road, six miles from the latter city.

William Dahlkemper, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born in Westphalia, Germany, December 24, 1864, son of Staffen and Kate (Buckle) Dahlkemper, of Germany, where Mr. Dahlkemper still resides, a respected citizen of Westphalia. Mr. Dahlkemper was a carpenter and contractor and was still living (in 1895) at the age of 76. He was the father of a large family of children (see brother's sketch). William Dahlkemper was united in marriage April 18, 1885, to Anna, daughter of John A. Toller, of Erie, and is the second of a family of ten children, as follows: Kate, Anna, Emma, Mary, Francis, Josephine, Teresa, Rosa, Polly and Anthony. William Dahlkemper came to America from Germany in 1884, and by strict attention to business now owns a fine farm of ninety acres with good buildings, five and one-half miles from Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Dahlkemper are members of St. John's Church of Erie.

Patrick Lynch, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., born in Ohio, April 7, 1840, son of James and Mary (Boham) Lynch. James Lynch was born in Ireland, came to America in 1836 and settled in Summit township, where Patrick now resides. He was the father of eight children: James, living in New York city; Patrick, Michael (deceased), John (deceased), Archibald, living near Pittsburg; Martin (deceased); Mary, wife of George Herman, of Summit township, and Bridget. Patrick Lynch was married in July, 1864, to Mary, daughter of Frank Ward, of Erie. This union has been blessed with a large family of children, as follows: James, of Harbor Creek township; Julia A., wife of Simon Gilbert, of Croton, N. Y.; Frank, living in Croton, N. Y.; Mary, wife of Charles Kent, of Greene township; Archibald L., living in Erie; John, living at home; Nellie, Patrick, jr., Patrick (deceased), Michael, jr., Michael, sr., and Gertrude. Patrick Lynch started in life in Venango county, Pennsylvania, in 1864, and lived there one year; he then moved to Erie county, where he now resides on a farm of fifty acres, eight miles from Erie. Mr. Lynch has served as school director six years and constable two years. He served in the United States navy for one year and was honorably discharged in November, 1863. Mr. Lynch and family are members of the Roman Catholic Church of Summit township and in politics he is a Democrat.

Richard Dolan, farmer, Erie, Pa., was born in Ireland, June 29, 1830, son of Richard and Mary (McQuade) Dolan. The former died in 1845 and the latter in 1880. Richard Dolan was married to Mary, daughter of Byran McQuade (deceased) in Ireland, and they were the parents of two children, William, resident of Ireland, and Richard, jr., who came to America from Ireland in 1852 and settled in Syracuse, N. Y., where he lived six years; he then removed to Erie county, Pennsylvania. He was married November 16, 1852, to Mary, daughter of James Barns, of Ireland, the eldest of a family of three children, as follows: Thomas, Catherine and Mary. To this union were born eight children: William (deceased), Hannah, James, living in Warren, Ohio; Kate, wife of Albert Miller, of New Castle, Pa.; Joseph, Edward, John, living in Chicago, Ill., and Thomas. Mrs. Richard Dolan, died June 4, 1893, at the age of 60 years. Mr. Dolan, who has been very successful in business, started in life very poorly provided with this world's goods. He now owns a farm of forty acres, finely cultivated, with good farm buildings, seven miles from Erie. He is a member of the Roman Catholic Church of Summit township, and has served as town treasurer and judge of elections; in politics he is a Democrat.

Philip Ackerman, farmer, of Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born in Germany December 7, 1831, son of Porter and Anna (Baltz) Ackerman, both deceased, the latter in 1840 and the former in 1850. Their children were, A. (deceased), Martha (deceased) and Philip. Mr. Ackerman served in the German army seven years, participating in the war of that period. He came to this country from Germany in 1853, settled in Union Hill, N. J., and lived there two years, when he moved to Mill Creek township, where he lived some four years; he later moved to Summit township, where he now resides on a fine forty-acre tract of land. He was married August 19, 1854, to Anna, daughter of Martin Palle (deceased). To this union were born five children, as follows: Anna, wife of Joseph King, of Erie; Frances, wife of Philip Snyder, of Erie; Philip, jr., of Erie; John (deceased) and Margaret (deceased). Mrs. Ackerman was the eldest of a family of five children, as follows: Anna, Catherine, Eva, wife of Anthony Frederick, of Germany, and George, of Charles City, Ia. Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman and family are members of St. Joseph's Church, of Erie. Politically Mr. Ackerman is a Democrat.

John Baker, farmer, Erie, Pa., was born June 10, 1836, in Germany and is a son of Jacob and Eva (Baltze) Baker who came to America from Germany in 1852; first settled in Erie and shortly after moved to Wisconsin, where he lived two and one-half years. He then returned to Erie county and lived in McKean township four years and Greene township eleven years.

Jacob Baker married Eva, daughter of Felhein Baltze, of Germany, a worthy citizen of the Fatherland. Their children were: Philip, living in Erie; John, Felhein (deceased), who was drowned in the Erie bay in 1871, and Barbara, wife of S. Haft, of Erie. John Baker was married October 25, 1865, to Susan, daughter of Michael Swap (deceased), and is the youngest of a family of three children, as follows: Jacob, George and Susan. Mr. Baker started in life in Erie in the coal business and after following that business for a number of years he moved to Summit township, where he now resides on a farm of fifty-six acres, well equipped and the land is in a good state of cultivation. The farm is located five miles from Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Baker have the following family: Katie, Ida, Carrie, John, Rosa, Frank and Anna. The family are members of the St. Joseph's Church, of Erie.

John Stubbe, farmer, Kearsarge, Erie county, Pa., was born in Germany November 27, 1845, is a son of Fritz and Mary (Rhod) Stubbe, who were the parents of three children: John, Lizzie, wife of Christian Schultze, of Germany, and Fritz, of Erie. John came to America from Germany in 1872 and settled in New York city, and one year later removed to Erie, where he lived about two years and then located in Summit township, where he now resides. April 14, 1872, he married Sophie, daughter of Frederick Topp, of Germany. Seven children have blessed this union: John, Fritz, William, Charles, Albert, Sophia and Otto. Mrs. Stubbe died December 25, 1888. Mr. Stubbe took for his second wife Emma, daughter of Regina Matthia, of Erie, September 21, 1889. Two children have been born to them: Archibald and Emma. The family are members of the Lutheran Church and attend services in Erie. Mr. Stubbe is a member of the K. O. T. M. of Erie and politically is a Democrat.

B. F. Briggs, stock breeder, Godard, Erie county, Pa., was born December 20, 1829, in Washington township, son of John and Sophia (Fairbanks) Briggs. The Briggs family were among the early settlers of Washington township, who came from the State of New York in the year 1836 or 1837. After twenty years' residence in Washington township they located in Waterford township, where Mr. B. F. Briggs' father died in 1884. John Briggs married Sophia, daughter of Perley Fairbanks, of Vermont. They reared a large family of children, as follows: Marinda (deceased); B. F.; Lorenzo (deceased); George W., living in Cedar Falls, Ia.; Perley F., living in Jamestown, N. Y.; Jane, wife of John Glatwin, of Brighton, Mich.; Phoebe, wife of G. W. Richards, of Titusville, Pa.; and Walter J., living in Titusville. Mr. B. F. Briggs enlisted in 1861 in Co. G, 83d Reg. P. V., under Captain Knox. He participated in the battle of Hanover Court House, Fredericksburg, siege of Yorktown and several other engagements, and was wounded May 27, 1862, at the battle of Hanover Court House, and again at the battle of Fredericksburg in December, 1862, and was honorably discharged in March, 1863. He then came to Pennsylvania, and was engaged in the oil business in the oil fields for five years; he then came to Waterford township, where he resided about seven years, and, in 1877, moved to Summit township, where he now resides. G. W. Briggs, brother of B. F., enlisted, on the breaking out of the war, in Co. B, 145th P. V., and participated in all the engagements of that regiment until the close of the war. Mr. B. F. Briggs has always been a staunch Republican.

D. E. Nash, merchant, Godard, Erie county, Pa., born September 8, 1838, in Richville, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., is a son of Orlando M. and Susan (Gleason) Nash. Orlando M. Nash was born December 23, 1812, in Williamstown, Berkshire county, Mass., and March 15, 1854, he married Susan, daughter of Aaron Gleason, of Cold Rain, Mass. Mr. Nash first started life in Massachusetts, and lived there for a number of years, when he moved to St. Lawrence county, New York, and after twenty-five years' residence he moved to Erie county, in 1871, settled in West Greene, and was a resident of that township three years. He moved to Godard in 1875, and to Lowville in 1876, where he died in 1881. Mr. D. E. Nash is third in a family of eight children: John L., living in Richville, N. Y.; Sylvester (deceased in 1836); D. E.; Susan (deceased June 9, 1864); Orlando M. (deceased in 1891); Sidney, living in Gouverneur, N. Y.; Anna E., wife of Ralph Buckley, of Scotland, Conn.; and William H. (deceased July 26, 1867). Mr. D. E. Nash was married September 30, 1862, to Lucretia H., daughter of Henry Harkins, of Gouverneur, N. Y. Mrs. Nash died December 27, 1894. Mr. and Mrs. Nash were the parents of two children: Edna, wife of C. Maloney (deceased December 25, 1884); and Mary Adell, wife of E. W. Gardner, of Summit township. Mr. Nash came to Erie county in 1839, and lived in West Greene four years; he then moved to Godard, and was engaged in blacksmithing until 1887, when he started in the grocery business. He was postmaster eight years at Godard, served in the offices of town treasurer, collector and school director. Mr. Nash is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and politically is a Republican.

Frank Dudenhofer, farmer, Godard, Erie county, Pa., was born in Germany, September 23, 1852, and is a son of Peter D. and Rosa (Sellinger) Dudenhofer. Peter Dudenhofer was born in Germany in 1809, and removed to America in 1853, settling in West Mill Creek township, where he lived about a year, when he moved to Greene township, which is now his home. He was married in 1839 to Rosa, daughter of William Sellinger (deceased). To this union were born four children, as follows: Balsey, living in Greene township; Frank, George, living in Meadville, Pa.; and Anthony, who lived in Greene township in 1874, on the old Northrup place, then moved to Mill Creek township, a number of years later returned to Summit, and in 1894 to the place where he now resides, on a farm of eighty-two acres, well equipped with buildings, and in a good state of cultivation, eight miles from Erie, near Godard. Mr. Dudenhofer was united in marriage to Alice Irene, daughter of George Reynolds (deceased), November 14, 1877, and is the sixth of a large family of children, viz.: Deane, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Molain, of Ladora, Ia.; Nancy, wife of E. Powell, of McKean township; Barr, of Summit township; George, of Findlay, O.; Clay, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Elmer (deceased), and nine half-brothers and sisters: William Reynolds, of Iowa; Maria Skelton, of Crawford county; Clinton Reynolds, of Iowa; Benj. B. Reynolds, of Cambridge, Pa.; Mina Blystone, of Crawford county; Mary Skelton, of California; Helen Tittle, of Crawford county; Clark (deceased), killed in battle of Gettysburg; Estella, of Waterford, Pa. Mrs. Reynolds' maiden name was Amanda Wobley. Her first husband, John Lawson, died in 1848, leaving two sons: Clinton (deceased in 1861); and Charles, of Hastings, Neb. In 1850 she was united in marriage to George Reynolds, whom she survives, he having departed this life in 1883. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dudenhofer are the parents of five children: Ella Grace Hetrick, of Greene township; A. K. (deceased); Bessie Irene, Balsey F. (deceased) and Mable J. (deceased), all three dying within a week from diphtheria.

James Porter Jackson, farmer, Godard, Erie county, Pa., born in Summit township September 14, 1841, is a son of James and Mary E. (Davison) Jackson, both deceased, the former in 1875. James Jackson, jr., father of James Porter Jackson, was born in one of the Eastern States, came to Erie county, and located in Summit township, formerly Greene township, and was one of its first settlers. He bought 100 acres of land from one of the land companies when he first settled, and later added seventy-five acres, and then fifty acres, near where Mr. Jackson now resides, James Jackson, jr., married Mary E., daughter of James Davison (deceased), by occupation a ship carpenter, who helped to build Perry's fleet, and also served in the Revolutionary war, and who was the father of eight children. To this union were born a large family of children, as follows: Mary Elizabeth (deceased); William A., living in Verdon, Ill., engaged in the grocery business; Smith L., of Girard township; Ira V. (deceased), who enlisted in Co. B, 145th P. V., under command of Col. Brown, and participated in the battle of Gettysburg; Sarah Ann, wife of Samuel Rice, of Union City; James P., Florence (deceased) and John D., of Kansas. Mr. James Porter Jackson started farming for himself when he was 21 years of age, and lived in various places in Erie county. He located on the farm where he now resides in 1855, and has become the owner of a fine tract of fifty acres, in a good state of cultivation, located at Jackson's Station, on the P. & E. R. R. He is also engaged in the fertilizing trade and is agent for a number of different fertilizers. Mr. Jackson was united in marriage February 7, 1884, to Vernie, daughter of John Myers (deceased), who was a prominent citizen of Greene township. There were six children in the Myers family, of whom Vernie was the fifth. The others are: Deloss, Emma, George, Yully and Gara. Mr. Jackson and wife are the parents of three children: Ira D., Haddie J. and Emma. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Summit and he is connected with the P. H. C.; politically he is a Democrat.

Frank Eller, farmer, Godard, Erie county, Pa., was born in Erie county January 11, 1865, and is a son of Michael and Kate (Neubauer) Eller, who reside in Erie. Michael Eller emigrated to America in 1850, settled in Venango township, lived there about seven years, and moved to Harbor Creek township, where he lived for three years, when he moved to the place where Frank now resides, on a fine farm of 100 acres, on the old plank road, six miles from Erie. Mr. Eller was married to Kate, daughter of John Neubauer. To this union were born a large family of children: Phil (deceased), Michael, Frank, George, living in Erie; Martin, living in Mansfield, Ohio;

Peter, of Summit township, and Christian, living in Erie. Frank made his start in life in Summit township, where he now resides, and has always had to work his own way in life. By his thrift and industry he has placed himself in a prosperous condition. Mr. Eller was united in marriage to Manmie S., daughter of Simon Snider (deceased). To this union were born five children, as follows: Lena, Philip, Elizabeth, Michael and Frank. The family are all members of the Lutheran Church of Erie. Mr. Eller received a common school education in Summit township. In politics he is a Democrat.

P. A. Root. Clipper, Erie county, Pa., was born where he now resides May 17, 1849, and is a son of H. O. and Eliza (Foot) Root. Mr. H. O. Root was one of the early settlers of Summit township and moved from Hartford, Conn., in 1810, settling in Summit township, near Langdon Station, on the P. & E. road. He was married to Eliza, daughter of Warren Foot (deceased), and is the father of six children: Eliza, Sarah, Sophia, George, Warren and Perry. The children of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Root are: Warren, living in Greene township; P. A., Flora, wife of C. P. Haskins of Erie. Mr. Root started for himself in 1876, farming in Summit township, which he followed for two years; he then moved to Erie and was engaged in the milk business, which he followed for five years; then he removed to Summit township and engaged in farming, on the place where he now resides, a fine farm of eighty acres in a high state of cultivation, with good buildings. Mr. Root was united in marriage with Ida M., daughter of S. Webster (deceased), March 16, 1876. One child has been born to this union, Clarence Allen. Mr. Root and family are members of the Universalist Church of Erie; he is also a member of the A. O. U. W., of Erie, and has passed the chairs of that order; is also a member of the Grange of Summit, and is master of that order. He has served as school director and road commissioner. In politics he is a Populist.

H. O. Root, farmer, Clipper, Erie county, Pa., was born in Summit township, where he now resides, April 3, 1847, and is a son of Lucius and Margaret (Mulkins) Root. Mr. Lucius Root was one of the pioneer settlers of Summit township, and came with his brother, H. O. Root, jr., from Hartford, Conn., when the township of Summit was all a wilderness, and located where his son now resides. He was married to Margaret Mulkins, the youngest of a family of three children. Mr. and Mrs. Root are both deceased, the former in June, 1843, and the latter in 1865. Their children were: Lucius M., H. O., H. C. living in Summit township, and Tryphena, wife of John Hull, of Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. H. O. Root, on the death of his father, when but 15 years old, took charge of the farm. He has always had to work hard, and is now the owner of a farm of fifty acres, which is in a prosperous condition. He was united in marriage December 24, 1875, to Addie, daughter of Anson Yapple, of West Greene township, who is a prominent farmer of that township, and the father of ten children. Mr. Root and wife are the parents of three children: Inez B., Carl C., and Irwin L. Mr. Root is a leading citizen and has served as school director five years, and politically he is a Republican.

Sidney A. Root, farmer, Clipper, Erie county, Pa., was born in Summit township, October 14, 1820, and is a son of Roger and Lorinda (Miner) Root. They were one of the pioneer families to settle in Summit township. Mr. Roger Root, his wife and four children came from Hartford, Conn., in 1810, and settled in what was then Beaverdam, but is now Summit township. They came the entire distance in a wagon with a yoke of oxen and the only path was a blazed way through the trackless forest. Sidney started in life for himself when 23 years old, going to work by the month for some eight years. About 1845 he located on a farm of fifty acres in Summit township, near Langdon station, where he now resides. He is a fearless climber, and is at home in high places, such as high trees in the woods. He was married February 5, 1852, to Rebecca, daughter of Jephtha Eckert and Catherine (Arkenburg) Eckert. There are three children in the Eckert family: Mary Jane, Anna Elizabeth, and Rebecca A. Mr. Root and wife are the parents of nine children: Merritt L., living in Erie; Estella (deceased); Frank V., of Greene township; Charles A., living in Erie; Lucius (deceased); Edward was killed by the cars on the P. E. road, near Garland station; Mary L., wife of Eugene A. Kaveney, of Greene township; A. M., of Greene township; and Katie, wife of Daniel McDannell, of Summit township. Mr. Sidney A. Root is a member of the Farmers' Alliance of Summit township, served as a school director nine years, and has filled several other offices in the township. In politics he is a Republican.

Z. Worswick, farmer, Sibleyville, Erie county, Pa., was born February 16, 1823, in Chorley, Lancashire, England, and is a son of James and Mary (Edwards) Worswick; the former was by occupation a block printer in Lancashire, and was considered one of the best in England. He married Mary Edwards, of Wales. He died in 1887 in Lancashire. They were the parents of a large family of children: William (deceased), Margaret (deceased), John (deceased) Leland, Charley, living in Lancashire, England; Eliza (deceased), Sarah Ann (deceased), and Thomas, living with Mr. Z. Worswick, who came to America from England in 1871 and located in the State of Nebraska, living there only a short time, when he removed to Erie county, locating in Summit township, where he now resides on a farm of fifty acres, with good buildings, and in a high state of cultivation, located eight miles from Erie on the old Turnpike road. Previous to his coming to America he was engaged in the block printing business in Lancashire, England. Mr. Worswick was twice married, first to Margaret, daughter of Moses Booth, of Chorley, Lancashire, England, March 25, 1846. To them were born four children: Eliza A., wife of William Mullinaux, of Preston, England; Thomas (deceased); Ellen, wife of Joseph Sweatman, of Summit township, and John (deceased). After the death of Mrs. Worswick, Mr. Worswick married for his second wife, June 25, 1873, Ann Sweatman. Mr. Worswick has held several township offices, and is a prominent and respected citizen. Politically he is a Republican.

Michael C. Eller, retired farmer, formerly of Summit township, and now of Erie, Pa., was born in Germany, September 14, 1825, and is a son of Jacob and Julia (Backer) Eller (deceased). Mr. Jacob Eller came to America from Germany in 1852, and settled in Venango township, Erie county, in what is known as the Smith neighborhood, and lived there ten years, where he died in June, 1885, at the age of 78 years. He was married to Julia, daughter of Nicholas Backer, of Germany, who was a prominent farmer in his native country. They were the parents of six children: Philip, living in Erie; Michael, Margaret, wife of George Ludwick (deceased), now living in Minnesota; Catherine, Julia, wife of Philip Backer (deceased), and Nicholas, living in Erie. Mr. Michael C. Eller emigrated to America in 1850, and located in Venango township, living in that township seven years. He then moved to Harbor Creek township, and from there to Summit township, where his son now resides on a farm of 160 acres of land in a good state of cultivation, with good buildings, located seven miles from Erie, on the old plank road. In 1891 he moved to Erie and is living a retired life. Mr. Eller made his own way in the world, and is now the owner of the above farm, and also three houses and lots at Twenty-eighth and Myrtle streets, Erie, Pa. Mr. Eller was united in marriage to Caroline, daughter of John Neubauer, February 29, 1855. The issue of this marriage was eleven children: Philip (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased), John (deceased), Michael, living in Summit township; Harvey (deceased), Frank, living in Summit township; George, of Erie; Martin, living in Memphis, Tenn.; Porter, of Summit township; Christian, of Erie, and Catherine (deceased). Mr. Michael Eller and family are members of the Lutheran Church of Erie. He served as school director for three years, and road commissioner three years.

William Henderson, farmer, post-office Godard, was born in Cleveland, O., October 26, 1828, is a son of Joseph and Jane (Sweeney) Henderson, the former a native of Allegheny county, and the latter of Erie county, Pennsylvania. Joseph Henderson was born June 6, 1798, in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, and came to Erie county in 1810 and located in Erie, Pa. He was a carpenter by occupation. He was employed on most of the original buildings of prominence in Erie City. He had the contract for the carpenter work of the old court house, and was the superintendent. He was at one time engaged on the public works of Cleveland, O. He was also engaged in farming in Mill Creek township, where he was living at the time of his death. He was married March 29, 1821, to Jane Sweeney. To this union were born ten children, viz.: Nancy, wife of E. Goodrich, of Erie, Pa.; Trowers (deceased); Ann, wife of Henry Dunn, of Erie; Joseph, of Erie; Jane (deceased); and James. Joseph Henderson was elected county commissioner in 1840 and served three years, and was re-elected in 1839 and served until 1862. He died March 28, 1883, at the advanced age of 83. William Henderson first started in life in Erie, at the carpenter business until the age of 26, when he went to Dellia, Ia., on the McCaia river, where he had charge of a large saw mill for Judge Benson, for three years. He was also engaged in the milling business in Nebraska for about one year. He then went in the employ of the United States government surveyors and was engaged in surveying western land two years. He was also prospecting for gold in Colorado for about one year. He then came to Armstrong county, Pennsylvania. He was married August 20, 1860, to Martha, daughter of Joseph Lowry, of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, who for thirty years was justice of the peace. William Henderson moved to the place where he now resides about seven years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson were the parents of three children, viz.: Elmer, living in Warren, Pa.; Alfred, of Erie; and Thomas, of Erie. Mr. Henderson and wife are members of the U. P. Church. Politically he is a Republican.

John Guckes, farmer, postoffice Kearsarge, was born in Always, Germany, September 26, 1844, and is a son of Jacob and Marguerite (Bread) Guckes, of Erie. Jacob Guckes came to America from Germany in 1851, settled in Greene township, and was engaged in farming and the sawmill business for about a year. He then moved to the Miner farm, in Summit township, living there for a short time, then moving to one of Capt. N. W. Russell's farms, in Mill Creek township, and living there five years. He then moved to Five Points, Summit township, and bought a farm of 100 acres. Mr. Guckes was married in October, 1859, in Germany, to Marguerite Bread. To this union were born ten children, viz.: Katie, wife of Joseph Herman, of McKean township; Mary, wife of Frederick Borishard, of Erie; John; Jacob, of Summit township; Marguerite (deceased); Christian, of McKean township; Pheba; William, of Hardin county, Ohio; Peter, of McKean township; and Barbara (deceased). John Guckes, at the age of 21, started in life as a farmer, and was engaged in that business until 1864, when he engaged in railroading, and followed that business for seven years. He then bought a farm of ninety-seven acres in Summit township, where he now resides. Mr. Guckes was united in marriage March 21, 1871, to Elizabeth, daughter of N. Petre, of Germany, who was a farmer by occupation in that country. Mr. Guckes and wife are members of the Lutheran Church of Erie. Politically he is a Republican. Andrew Keller, a son of Michael Keller of Germany, is living with John Guckes.

E. H. Randall, station agent, Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in 1852 in Ashtabula county, Ohio. He is a son of Henry Randall, now living in Austinburg, O. Mr. Randall has held the position of station agent in Springfield since the opening of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis R. R. In 1876 he married Nancy Woodruff, of Eagleville, Austinburg township, O., and to this union have been born three children: Earl, Edna and Rada. Mr. Randall is now Burgess of Springfield borough, secretary of school board, and takes a deep interest in township affairs.

Frank E. Baldwin, farmer, Springfield township, Erie county, Pa., son of Clark H. Baldwin (deceased), who was born in Vermont in 1809, and emigrated from there in 1833 and settled on the farm on which his son Frank now resides. His mother, whose maiden name was Belinda Hart, was also born in Vermont in 1813. They were both of English descent. To this union were born eight children, five of whom are living. Frank, the seventh, was born on the farm he now occupies on the Ridge road. In 1875 he was married to Miss Lillian Laughery. To this union have been born three children: Erma, Ralph E. and Lora L. Mr. Baldwin is assessor, and a member of the I. O. O. F. and P. H. C.

J. Newton Miller, farmer, East Springfield, was born April 13, 1820, on the farm on which he now resides, which was settled by his parents, Thomas R. and Margaret Miller, of Franklin county, Pennsylvania, who came to Erie county in 1802, and reared a family of seven children. Thomas R. Miller was a soldier in the war of 1812, and a prominent citizen of the township. He was director of the poor, county commissioner, and served from Erie county in the House of Representatives. His wife departed this life in 1835. He survived until 1896. J. Newton Miller married Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac Silverthorn, an early settler of Erie county. Their only child, Florence D., died in 1872. Mr. Miller was a member of the State Legislature in 1870, and has been justice of the peace for twelve years. He has taken great interest in local affairs, among which was the laying out of the East Springfield cemetery.

C. E. Eldridge, farmer, East Springfield township, Erie county, Pa., was born in 1850, in Girard township, Erie county, Pa. His parents were Chester and Mary (Welch) Eldridge, the father a native of Vermont and the mother a native of Springfield township. Mrs. Eldridge died in 1894, and Mr. Eldridge's death preceded it some years. C. E. Eldridge was married in 1871 to Miss Albina Benedict, of Springfield township. Six children have been born to them, as follows: Chester, Bertha, Orville, Edith, Halbert and Harley. Chester and Bertha graduated from the Edinboro State Normal School in 1894. Mr. Eldridge has been assessor of the township for three years, and is a member of I. O. O. F., Jr. O. U. A. M. and State Police.

George Nash (deceased) was born in 1826 and died in 1884. He was the son of Alpheus and Sylvina Nash, the former a native of New York State, who for many years resided on his farm, three miles south of the Ridge road. In 1875 he was married to Ann E., daughter of John and Catherine (Dorn) Barhite, of Springfield township. Mrs. Nash still survives and manages her well cultivated farm. She has one daughter, Miss Mabel C. Nash, of musical talent.

J. W. Richens, farmer, was born in 1855 in Conneaut township, Erie county, Pa. He is a son of William and Mary (Handy) Richens, natives of England, who came to this country in 1835, and first located in Conneaut township, Pennsylvania. J. W. Richens located on his present farm in 1894, which he has continued to improve, and in 1894 erected a modern barn. In 1872 he was married to Ida, daughter of John Jones, of Girard. To this union have been born two children, Glenn and Frank. Mr. Richens has been road commissioner, and is a member of the Protected Home Circle.

C. D. Eldridge, teacher, was born in Springfield township in 1872, and is the eldest son of C. E. Eldridge. He graduated from the East Springfield high school in 1890, and from the State Normal School in Edinboro, Pa., with the class of 1894. He has had four years' experience in teaching, two of which have been spent at North Springfield Academy. In 1896 he was married to M. Naomi Daub, of North Springfield. He is a member of the I. O. O. F.

E. W. Brewer, painter and farmer, was born in Springfield township in 1849. He is a son of John and Sallie (Lyons) Brewer, of Springfield township. Mr. Brewer resided for ten years in Girard township and for two years at Niagara Falls, where he learned the painter's trade. In 1881 he married Miss Lois Waldo. To this union have been born three children, as follows: Gertrude, Raymond (deceased) and Donald. Mr. Brewer is a member of the State Police.

F. M. Nye, teacher, was born in Springfield township in 1874 and is a son of A. R. and Addie (Calander) Nye. His preparatory education has been obtained at the West Springfield Academy, and he has taught two terms in District No. 9, Springfield township. Mr. Nye is a member of the I. O. G. T. and Jr. O. U. A. M.

G. J. Glezen, station agent, Crayton's, West Springfield, Pa., was born in Conneautville, Crawford county, in the year 1867. He is the son of John Augustus and Mary (Van Volkenburg) Glezen, natives of Pennsylvania and New York State, respectively. Mr. Glezen began active business life near the place of his birth, and for some time was engaged in the milling business in New York State, and entered the employ of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis R. R. Company in 1890. Mr. Glezen is a member of the K. O. T. M.

Marcus L. Morrell, farmer, East Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in 1856 in Springfield township, Erie county, Pa. He is a son of Jonathan and Mary (Ellis) Morrell, a life-long resident of the locality, whose ancestors are identified with many pioneer incidents of a century and a quarter ago of this locality. In December, 1880, Marcus was married to Miss Emma Davison of Springfield township, Erie county. She was a daughter of Robert and Caroline (Arbuckle) Davison. To this union have been born three children: Cora, Carl and Bernice. Mr. Morrell has taken an active part in local public affairs, having been councilman, collector and school director; he is a member of the State Police and Protected Home Circle.

John H. Hall, farmer, North Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in 1835 in the township where he has since resided. He is a son of John and Polly (Kelly) Hall, both natives of Mifflin county, Pennsylvania, and who came to Erie county in 1804. The former died in 1848 and the latter in 1843. John Hall, sr., was a prominent farmer, a soldier in the war of 1812 and a member of the Presbyterian Church. John H. Hall was married in 1860 to Julia, daughter of James Miles, of Girard, Erie county, Pa. This union has been blessed with two children, James M. and Eliza B. Hall. Mr. Hall is a progressive and influential citizen and the owner of one of the finest farms in Springfield township. During the past few years he has cleared and put under fine state of cultivation over 100 acres of land.

Henry Daub, farmer, North Springfield, Erie county, Pa., is a native of Germany, and was born in 1843. He is a son of George Daub, who died in 1846. Henry came to America with his mother, two brothers and a sister in the year 1848. The family came directly to Erie and took up their residence five miles west of the city. In 1864 Helen was married to Ellen D., daughter of James Randall (deceased), who resided in Harbor Creek, Erie county. This union has been blessed with six children, of whom only two are living, namely: Charles H. and M. Naomi. Mr. Daub came to Springfield, Erie county, Pa., in 1878, where he has since resided. He is a man who is identified with the interests and progress of his township, especially in school matters, having served two terms as director and been an important factor in the erection of a new school house in his district in 1894. The structure takes the place of one burned the same year, and is a model in design and completeness. Mr. Daub is a member of the I. O. O. F. Charles H. was married in 1895 and resides near Eagle's Grove. M. Naomi was married a few months later. She has begun her life work as a teacher and has received her education thus far in the common schools of her township.

Frank L. Sherman. West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in the township where he now resides, in the year 1872. He was educated at the public schools of Springfield, and, September 10, 1894, associated himself with Mr. Fred Gee in the milling business, and since that time several large tracts of timber have been converted into lumber. Mr. Sherman is a son of Elihu Sherman, born in 1827, in Vermont. He came to Girard about 1845, and lived in what is known as the old Scott tavern, on the Ridge road. In 1850 he married Miss Lydia Ball, of Girard. She died in 1862 leaving one child, Dora, wife of Willson Ball of Girard. In 1864 he married Elizabeth Baldwin, of Conneaut, O. She died in 1867. In 1868 he married Mrs. Mary G. Cutler (Baldwin), the mother of Frank L. Sherman. He moved to Springfield in the year of 1869, where he died suddenly from a stroke of paralysis on December 21, 1894. His funeral took place on Sunday following, with interment in East Springfield cemetery. He was born in the year 1827, in Girard township, where he resided until 1886, when he came to Springfield. The same year he was married to Miss Mary Baldwin, daughter of an early settler of Springfield township. To this union was born one son, Frank L. Sherman, subject of sketch.

Charles C. Strong. East Springfield, Erie county, Pa., of the firm of J. M. Strong & Son, millers and dealers in lumber, was born in Springfield township, October 13, 1869. He was educated at Oberlin College, and began business with his father in 1891, and they together have since operated the Springfield Mills, which were built in 1842. The mills have recently been overhauled and all modern improvements added. An extensive business is carried on, and shipments are made to different points both east and west. A recent acquisition is the opening of a feed depot at Forestville, N. Y., and one at Erie, Pa. The Springfield Mills are superior to any in the locality, with excellent water power, aided by steam. J. M. Strong, miller, dealer in lumber, and farmer, East Springfield, is a native of Southampton, Mass., and was born April 3, 1854. He is a son of Job D. and Betsey H. Strong, also natives of Massachusetts, who came to this county in 1838, and reared two children, J. M. only surviving. Mr. Strong died in 1859, his widow in 1873. Mr. Strong was married in 1859 to Miss Louise M. Webster, a native of Springfield township, and an early settler of the county. Of the children born to this union, Charles C. survives. Mr. Strong has been operating the Springfield Mills since 1861, which were built by his father-in-law nineteen years earlier. Since 1891 he has associated with him in business his son. Farming has also occupied his attention for several years, and he has during his time transacted the largest business of any man in the township. He is a man possessed of sterling qualities and energy, always first in any new and beneficial enterprise. Mr. Strong was the first Burgess of Springfield borough, and has been school director for several years. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, a charter member of Springfield Lodge I. O. O. F., a member of the F. & A. M., K. T., and E. A. U., and politically is a Republican.

William Lee Lord, retired, North Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born September 7, 1831, in Brownsville, Jefferson county, N. Y. He is the son of Col. Lee Lord, a native of Woodstock, Vt., who was born in 1794, and died in 1857. Colonel Lord, during his early life, resided in Jefferson county, New York, and for many years was postmaster in La Fargeville, in that State. In 1835 he removed to Cleveland, Ohio, and engaged in the milling business to a considerable extent, and was later recorder for Cuyahoga county. He married Elzada Parkinson, who died in December, 1893, at the age of 81 years. To this union were born four children: William Lee, Hiram (deceased), Marvin L., of New York City, and Eliza A. (deceased). William Lee was married in March, 1858, to Miss Ada L., daughter of the late Samuel Holliday, of Springfield township. She died June 28, 1892. Mr. Lord spent the earlier days of his business career in Wall street, and then engaged in business with the firm of Robinson & Oviatt, packers, in Cleveland, Ohio, and was later associated with J. H. Wade, capitalist. Declining health made a change necessary, and in 1894 he came to the Holliday homestead to reside. He is a Knight Templar, a member of Al Koran Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. of Cleveland, Ohio. Samuel Holliday (deceased) was born September 27, 1805, in Springfield township, Erie county, Pa., on the farm, where a lifetime was spent. He was the fourth child of Samuel Holliday, sr., who was the first white settler in the township, and a native of Franklin county. He came to this county in 1796 and purchased 700 acres on the borders of the lake. He returned to his native county in the fall of 1796 and married Jennette Campbell. Returning to Springfield in 1797, he settled on a tract of land in the then densely wooded section of the township, and erected the first cabin in that locality. A tree now marks the spot, near the present Holliday homestead. They reared a family of six children. In the primary enterprises of the township he figured conspicuously as having been one of the founders of the Presbyterian church at East Springfield; erected the first grist and sawmill (1803-4) and helped to establish the first cemetery. He died in 1841 and his widow in 1851. Samuel Holliday, jr., in 1840 married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Porter, residents of Girard township, who were among its first settlers. Following are the children of the family: Robert P., civil engineer, Girard; Lieut. Charles C. (deceased); Dr. Benjamin W., Cleveland, Ohio; Dr. W. Wallace, Cleveland, Ohio; Susie M. and Frances J., residents of the homestead, and Ada (deceased) wife of William Lee Lord. Mrs. Holliday died in 1890 and Mr. Holliday in 1891.

Alexander Spear, merchant and proprietor of the West Springfield hotel, West Springfield, Erie county Pa., is a native of Philadelphia, Pa. He is a son of Alexander and Mary Spear, now residents of the Quaker City. Alexander began in the mercantile business in West Springfield in 1836. In 1839 his store was consumed by fire, and a new building was soon after erected and the business continued. December 1, 1894, he sold the entire business to the firm of Patten & Welsh. Mr. Spear has taken an interest in township affairs to some extent, and has served as township treasurer.

Cyrenus Lindsley, retired, West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in the town of Nelson, Madison county, N. Y., August 15, 1820. He is the son of Judah and Sarah (Smith) Lindsley, who came from New York to Springfield township in 1840, and to whom were born the following children: Samantha, wife of Samuel Rea, of Erie, Pa.; Almira (deceased); and B. Franklin Lindsley, of Springfield township. Judah Lindsley died in 1857, and his widow in 1870. Cyrenus, in the year 1839, having been wearied with working the unproductive soil about his native heath, pushed out into the then far west, and selected and purchased a farm near the present village of West Springfield, which was, in those days, in the center of a dense wilderness. He then returned to his home in New York, and the next year, accompanied by his parents, came and took possession of his newly purchased farm. In 1848 he was married to Miss Belva A., daughter of Thomas and Clarissa (Darke) Ivory, one of the original settlers of the township. Of the Ivory family there were also the following children: Cynthia, wife of Cephas Marsh, Conneaut township; Addison A., who died in California in 1892; John, of Washington county, Idaho; Mark B., of California; and Edgar D., of California. Thomas Ivory was born in Salem, Mass., and was the son of John Ivory, a native of Holland. Cyrenus Lindsley was elected justice of the peace in 1891, and served in that capacity for several years, and has always been identified with the thrift, progress and general growth of the township.

Elias Randall, West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in Conneaut township, July 6, 1823. He is a son of Maxon and Hannah (Pomeroy) Randall, life long residents of Girard. His grandfather was John Randall, who first became a resident of Erie county about 1795, coming here from New York State, bringing his son Maxon, who was then only 3 years old. His mother was Miss Hannah, daughter of Medad Pomeroy, for many years a resident of Albion, Erie county. He served in the Revolutionary war, and was a prominent citizen of his day and generation. Elias Randall was first married in 1847 to Miss Hannah Miller, of Springfield township. She died in 1852. Later he was married to Caroline Ferguson, daughter of Hance Ferguson. The children are: Edwin, of Springfield township; and Isadore, children by the first marriage; Emma J., wife of C. F. Eaton, of Monroe township, Ashtabula county, Ohio; Ella L., wife of J. W. Willey, West Springfield; Alvira, wife of A. H. Dean; and Alta, wife of Hance Hardy, of Monroe township, Ashtabula county, Ohio, by the second marriage. Mr. Randall has been a prominent citizen of the community in which he resides for forty-five years, having occupied his present place during this time. With him resides his son-in-law, J.

W. Willey, who was born in 1842. He is a son of John H. and Elizabeth (Ward) Willey, natives of Summit township, Erie county, and prominently identified with the earlier settlements of the county through their ancestors. Mr. Willey was married in 1876, and has one son, Malcom.

P. O. Richards, mechanic, West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in the year 1835, in Evansburg, Crawford county, Pa. He is a son of Daniel K. Richards, of near Shaftsbury, Vt., who was born in 1804, and accidentally killed while drawing corn stalks, in the month of October, 1854, in one of his fields on the west side of George Ufford's farm in Ashtabula county, Ohio, of which land he was owner at the time of the accident. He fell upon a tump of a pitchfork, inflicting a wound, from which he died in a short time. Mr. P. O. Richards' mother was Marie, daughter of Ezra Olin, a native of Vermont. She died in the year 1877. Mr. Richards was the second son of a family of nine children, two sons and seven daughters, all living. He came from Kingsville, Ashtabula county, O., in 1860, and learned the carpenter's trade, which vocation he has since followed in his present location in West Springfield. In 1859 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Abel Lockwood, an old and prominent resident of Conneaut, O. This union has been blessed with the following children: Ida (deceased), Arthur, Lottie, Harriet, Charles and Mary.

Charles H. Whiton, farmer, West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in the township in which he now resides in the year 1862. He is a son of Rev. Edward and Theresa (Dewey) Whiton, life-long residents of Springfield township, and natives of New England. Edward Whiton was for years a local preacher, regularly ordained by the authorities of the M. E. Church. His death took place April 19, 1890. His widow survives, and resides with her son, Charles, on the homestead farm. She is a daughter of the late J. D. Dewey, a native of Vermont, who took an active part in the late Rebellion, and for seven years was a resident of Springfield township. Abijah Whiton, grandfather of Charles, was the first of this family to settle in Erie county. He, with his wife, Rachael Remington, came from the east and settled on the Ridge road about 1820. They first settled in Pierpont, Ashtabula county, O., and later located on a 160-acre farm on what is known as the Ridge road in Springfield township. He came to the locality early in 1807 from Massachusetts with his household effects drawn by an ox-team, and loaded on a cart. This denizen of the forest for many years hauled wood to Conneaut Harbor, and was thus able to gain a livelihood for himself and family, and lay by in store a comfortable nest-egg for his posterity. In those days he was compelled to take grain forty miles, the nearest milling point. Charles H. Whiton, is the youngest of a family of five children, as follows: Ellen, wife of Calvin Johnson, Springfield township; William, West Springfield; Marietta, wife of Joseph Johnson, Conneaut, O.; Belle, wife of Horace G. Thayer, West Springfield, and Charles H., who, November 12, 1887, was married to Miss May, eldest daughter of Cyrenus and Mary Thompson, of Conneaut, O. To this union has been two children. Charles H. Whiton, began life as an active farmer in 1882, and purchased in co-partnership with his brother, William, the Caughey farm, and after six years of successful farming disposed of the same and located on his present farm. In township affairs he has been an important factor, and is at present tax-collector.

George C. Gates, notary public, West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in 1833, in Harbor Creek, Erie county, Pa., where he resided until 1867, when he moved to West Springfield, where he has since resided. He is a son of Alonzo and Emily Gates, natives of New York State. The former died in the year 1832, and the latter in 1873. October 3, 1855, Mr. Gates married Julia G., daughter of Ralph and Lucy (Barnes) Bostwick, natives of Plymouth, Conn. The former came to Springfield in 1853, and died in 1872. His wife died in 1853. Mr. Gates learned the trade of carriage-making, which he successfully followed for many years, until other and more important duties, together with impaired health, compelled an abandonment of this vocation. Many of the additions and devices, the work of his own hands, adorn and ornament his home. Being a man of determination and untiring energy, he has been foremost in public enterprises, and a prominent citizen. He was appointed notary public, and also has an insurance agency for the locality. In June, 1892, after having served seven years as secretary, he was elected Grand Captain of the Grand Camp of State Police and Home Guards of Pennsylvania and Ohio, which office he held until June, 1895.

Orange S. Huntley, farmer, West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., is a native of Pierpont, Ashtabula county, O., and was born May 20, 1822. He is a son of Orrin and Charity Huntley, natives of Massachusetts and Connecticut respectively, who came West about 1826 and settled in Erie county. Orange is the second child of a family of six children. Orrin Huntley was a prominent farmer and citizen, and a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He died April 15, 1865, aged 69 years, and his widow died March 29, 1890, aged 91 years. In 1845 Orange S. Huntley was married to Clarissa R. Carter, a daughter of Franklin H. and Clarissa Carter, late residents of Conneaut, Ohio. The former was a citizen of prominence and a native of New Hampshire; he died in 1864; the latter a native of Vermont, who died in 1841. This union has been blessed with six children, as follows: Ellen M., wife of Albert W. Wass, Marshalltown, Iowa; Franklin C., Nebraska; Myron H., Cherry Hill; Clara Louise, wife of W. Jay Sherman, West Springfield; Emma R., wife of Hiram Armstrong, living in DeWitt, Neb.; and Lizzie C., wife of Perry Jerrils, West Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Huntley are prominent members of the M. E. Church at West Springfield. They have lived a life of usefulness, which is characterized by many worthy deeds and thoughtfulness for others. Mr. Huntley has been a life-long Republican. The following family history of the Huntleys, written by Mrs. D. W. Brown, of Cherry Hill, this county, will prove interesting in this connection: "Our great-grandfather came from Wales, with two sons, Amos and Daniel Huntley, and died on ship board, leaving the two boys to propagate their name across the sea. Nothing is known of Daniel. Amos lived in Massachusetts, where he landed as a bound boy until he reached his majority, after which he married a maiden named Cook. Fourteen children were born to this union. He settled in Pierpont, when there were only four families in the town. He served in the Revolutionary war, and was paid off in Continental money, which at that time had no value, so he raked over the coals and burned over $300 of it. That kind of money was afterward redeemed. The children were Amos, William, Elisha, Ezekiel, James, Orrin and Hiram. The girls were Lydia, Sylvia, Sybil, Lois, Lucy and Nancy. Grandfather lived to be 83 years old. Amos, the namesake of his grandfather, was given his time at the age of 20 years. He went on foot to New York State, and hired out for one year at $10 per month. He afterward married the sister of his employer. When Elisha became of age he went and joined the elder brother, and they together bought 100 acres of land. Afterward William came, and Lydia, their oldest sister, kept house for them. William and Lydia died of typhoid fever. Amos married Adah Pardee in 1805. Grandfather claimed one-half the property, and being dissatisfied, he sold out and came to the Holland Purchase, where he improved a large farm, built and run a sawmill and distillery, owned and ran a canal boat, and had many men in his employ. He died in 1829. Seven children were born to this son, two of whom are living. James married Lydia Hart and lived on the old homestead. He raised five children, all of whom settled near him, except William, who went some years ago to California. Ezekiel bought a farm in Monroe; he married Minerva Brooks and raised a family of eight children. Orrin was married in 1818 to Charity Blakesley. He first settled in Pierpont, but sold his place in 1842, and moved to Conneaut, Pa., where he passed the remainder of his life, and died at the age of 69 years. The family consisted of six children. Orange, his twin brother, died when comparatively a young man, leaving a wife and one child. Hiram also died quite young, leaving two daughters. Of the girls one married Simon Forbes, one a Mr. Campbell; Nancy married Elisha Knapp. Of the descendants of these several families there are now represented Amos, Ezekiel, James, Orrin and Hiram; of the girls, Lucy and Nancy."

Harlow D. Norton (deceased) was born in Monroe, Ashtabula county, O., and was a son of Albert A. Norton, a prominent citizen of Pierpont, Ashtabula county, O., who died in August, 1885. Harlow was married in 1862 to Sarah C., daughter of Isaac Aldrich, of Pierpont, Ashtabula county, O. Their children are: Olive, wife of M. E. Carbury, of Conneaut, O.; Leroy H. Norton, West Springfield, and A. A. Norton, West Springfield. Mr. Norton died March 11, 1892. His widow survives, and, together with her sons, occupy and run the farm upon which they have resided for several years. Mr. Norton served several terms as constable, and was prominent in township affairs.

George T. Steenberg, proprietor of the planing-mill, West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., is a native of Syracuse, Onondaga county, N. Y., and was born in 1847. He is a son of I. F. Steenberg, also a native of the Empire State. George came to Springfield in 1863, and began in the milling business in 1871 in Conneaut, Ashtabula county, O. In 1875 he came to East Springfield, where he conducted a similar business until 1882, when he purchased his present site, and erected the steam mill, located on what is known as Eagley road, and which he has since conducted. It embraces a planing-mill and feed-mill, and he does a general milling business, which has been carried on successfully. This enterprising gentleman has not only been foremost in this undertaking but in several measures of local importance. In 1868 he married Miss Rose A., daughter of John D. Gerrerd, a native of Vermont, who died in 1873. Two children have been born to them: Glenna A. and James G. Steenberg. George T. Steenberg is a member of Evergreen (Conneaut) Lodge, No. 222, F. & A. M., Jr. O. U. M. W. and State Police.

G. J. Sherman, teacher, West Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born June 3, 1876. He is a son of W. Jay Sherman, who resides at what is known as the Centre. This gentleman is a son of Anson B. Sherman, who was born in 1806, and with his parents came to West Springfield township, and engaged in the mercantile business in what was called, in honor of the family, Sherman Corners. He ran a general store for some thirty years. He died September 6, 1888, having been a resident of Springfield for sixty-two years. His father, Ware J. Sherman, was the first of the family to come to the township. Anson was married in 1835 at Attica, N. Y., to Miss Angelina Gray, with whom he lived fifty-three years. To them were born three children: Charles, a resident of Kansas City, Mo.; Dr. J. A., of Cherokee, Ia., and William Jay, father of G. J. Sherman. W. J. Sherman was married June 17, 1875, to C. Louise Huntley, daughter of O. S. Huntley. Two children have blessed this union: G. J. and Lena L. G. J. began teaching in 1893, in Springfield township, and was educated at West Springfield Academy and the Edinboro State Normal School.

George R. Moore, deputy supreme president of the Equitable Aid Union, East Springfield, Erie county, Pa., was born in Otsego county, New York, December 15, 1828, where a portion of his early life was spent. Later, for a few years, he resided in Waterville, Oneida county, N. Y. George is a son of Henry L. and Emeline (Sanders) Moore, natives of New York State. The former died in 1881 and the latter in 1884, in East Springfield. George R. Moore is the eldest of a family of eight children, as follows: Sarah, wife of N. A. Angell, Geneva, O.; Dr. C. N. Moore (deceased), Emily, wife of Fayette Holmes, Iowa; Chester C., Clinton, Oneida county, N. Y.; Joseph S. (deceased), H. Eugene, Waterville, Oneida county, N. Y., and Mary E. (deceased), wife of H. D. Sanders, East Springfield. The first of this family to come to Erie county was Dr. C. N. Moore, who came to Springfield about 1870, and had an extensive practice for several years. His death occurred July 8, 1887. George R. Moore was married in April, 1861, to Hattie, daughter of Daniel H. and Betsy M. (Burdick) Burgess, natives, and now residents of New York State. To this union have been born two children, Alice May (deceased) and Currie A. Moore, now postmistress at East Springfield. Mr. Moore began early in life in the milling business in Otsego county, New York, which he followed successfully for thirty years. In 1890 he represented Merrill & Lamb, of Chicago, as traveling salesman, continuing in their employ until 1892, when he was appointed deputy supreme president of the E. A. U., and has become a most energetic, faithful and successful worker for the order in establishing numerous unions in the county and elsewhere.

The first two years after his appointment was spent in Kansas in effectual work for the order. Mr. Moore came to Springfield in 1881, and with the exception of two years, has ever since been a resident of the borough. He is a member of Western Star Lodge, No. 15, F. & A. M., at Bridgewater, N. Y. Mr. Moore is the inventor and patentee of a valuable and important device for catching and delivering mail in transit. Experts who have examined it say it is far ahead of anything ever devised for catching and delivering mail in transit.

The Rev. Jeremiah Cooper, rector of St. Matthew's Church (Episcopal), Union City, Pa., was born in St. Louis, Mo., December 29, 1844. He is the son of Jeremiah (deceased) and Catherine (Ierman) Cooper, of Waynesboro, Franklin county, Pa. Mr. Cooper entered the Union army in his 15th year, and served till the close of the war. Immediately he entered the academy at Mercersburg, Pa., prosecuted collegiate studies, and in 1874 graduated from the Delaney Divinity Seminary in Geneva, N. Y. Having served burg and Renovo, Pa., and other places, he took churches at Bradford, Pa., Buffalo, N. Y., Harrisburg, and St. Matthew's, Union City, in 1889, where he still resides. Mr. Cooper enlisted in 1861, in Co. A, 77th P. V. I., Capt. J. E. Walker; he was in the battles of Shiloh, Stone River, a number of skirmishes, and at Chickamanga, where he was wounded and made a prisoner of war, being exchanged ten months afterward. He returned to his regiment and took part in some of the campaigns against Atlanta, and afterwards at Atlanta and Nashville, Tenn. Next his regiment was sent to Texas, where, four months later, he, with the regiment, was mustered out. Such is the worthy war record of a gallant private, who underwent all phases of hardship in war, especially the unspeakable, awful horror of those hells named Libby and Andersonville. To these men, who faithfully performed the real duty of the soldier, suffered and endured all things, and won victories, we owe more than can ever be paid, for they saved the Union. Mr. Cooper was married to Miss Rebecca Laughery, of Carlisle, Pa., and five children were born to them: Howard (deceased), Walter and Ada (deceased), Florence Viola and Bertha Naomi. Miss Florence was married to Mr. William D. Ackley, of Warren, O., on September 25, 1895.

Rev. M. D. M. Altice, presiding elder of the United Brethren in Christ, for the Meadville district, was born in Franklin county, Virginia, a son of William H. and Catharine H. (Johnson) Altice, natives of Virginia. Mr. Altice was reared and educated in West Virginia, where his parents moved soon after his birth. After a course in the public schools, he entered the West Virginia Seminary, where he attained a high mark for scholastic ability. After a couple of years at this institution Mr. Altice began teaching, and continued to follow that profession until 31 years of age. As a teacher Mr. Altice was earnest and conscientious, and his duties led him to more fully realize the graver responsibilities of life, and after much careful thought he entered the ministry, joined the Parkersburg conference, and was sent to Ripley, Jackson county, W. Va., where he remained two years. He then served at Lubeck, Little's Mills, Glenville and West Milford. Later he took a transfer from Parkersburg, joined the Erie conference, and has served at the following places: Wethersfield Springs, Williston, Sardinia, N. Y., Keating, Summit, Pa., and at the latter place he built a church without having a member; in other words, he built a church and became personally responsible. He afterward went to Farmer's Valley and Homer, Pa. In November, 1888, Bishop N. Castle, D. D., appointed him presiding elder of the Buffalo district, where he served one year; next he served for two years in the same capacity on the Meadville district, then going to Sugar Grove district for one year. His health failing, he was made pastor of the Union City church; but his illness became so serious that he went to the Fox Sanitarium in Cleveland, O., for treatment. Later returning to his home he was again elected presiding elder and appointed to the Meadville district, and has since served in that capacity. Mr. Alice has been twice married: first to Annie L. Boyce, of West Columbia, W. V., June 12, 1864; his wife only lived seven weeks. Mr. Alice was married a second time, September 3, 1882, to Miss Alice E. Perkins, of Warsaw, N. Y. They have one daughter, Jessie Gertrude, whom they adopted while an infant. The life of Mr. Alice has been characterized by unswerving integrity and calm perseverance; his intercourse by a warm geniality which wins respect from those with whom he comes in contact.

H. L. Stem, M. D. Union City, Pa., was born in Waterford, Pa., October 5, 1869, and is a son of Louis T. and Elizabeth Stem. His mother died when he was but a few days old, and he was reared by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rice; was educated in Waterford Academy, Waterford, Pa., graduating in 1888, and in the fall of 1889 began the study of medicine in the Homeopathic Medical College of Cleveland, Ohio. In the fall and winter of 1890-91 he attended the Hahneman Medical College, Chicago, returning to Cleveland Medical College in the fall of 1891; he graduated from that institution with honors in the spring of 1892. In April of the same year he located at Union City, Pa., where by his superior abilities and excellent judgment he has built up a substantial and lucrative practice. He is a deep thinker, a conscientious student, and by his good qualities has established himself in the respect and confidence of the community.

James A. Hodgins, dentist, Union City, Pa., was born in Shawville, Pontiac county, Quebec, and is the fifth in a family of seven children, three sons and four daughters. Mr. Hodgins was reared and educated in Shawville. After completing a thorough course of training in the public schools, he concluded to gratify a long-cherished ambition to become proficient in dentistry; and, with this in view, he began, in 1883, the study of dentistry with one of the leading dentists in Brockville, Ont., William Brace. He continued with Dr. Brace until 1885; then, entering the Philadelphia Dental College, he was graduated from that institution in 1887, and immediately located at Waterford, where he practiced until 1890, when he removed to Union City, and has established a practice that only a man of ability and skill could command. Mr. Hodgins was united in marriage June 4, 1890, to Miss Jennie, daughter of T. M. Judson, a resident of Waterford. Two children have been born to this union, Lawrence J. and May. Mr. Hodgins is a member of the Masonic order, the I. O. O. F., K. of P., and an attendant of the Episcopal Church.

Frank E. McLean, editor of the Union City Times, Union City, Pa., is the eldest son of Lewis H. and Mary E. (Lamphier) McLean. He was born in LeBeauf township June 4, 1850. He had the advantage only of a common-school education. In 1867 he entered the printing office owned by H. G. Pratt, from which the Union Mills Star was published, and learned the trade. After working at the business for several years he, in 1878, purchased the Union City Times. After conducting the paper for two years he associated with him his brother, J. C. McLean, and under the firm name of McLean Bros. The Times has since been published. In 1871 he was the nominee of the Democratic party in Erie county for the Assembly, but with the large Republican majority in the county against him he was defeated, although he ran several hundred votes ahead of his ticket. He was for three terms chairman of the Erie County Democratic committee, and was also a member of the State executive committee. In August, 1887, he was one of the delegates from Pennsylvania to the National Editorial Association which met in Detroit, Mich. On January 30, 1872, he was united in marriage to Miss Lucinda Cottrell, of Waterford township. They were the parents of three children: Jessie N. (who died when 4 years old); Frank L. (who died when 11 months old), and their surviving daughter, Bessie Wave. Mr. McLean is a member of Clement Lodge, No. 220, I. O. O. F., Sylvan Lodge, Knights of Pythias, Ninevah Encampment, I. O. O. F., Israel Lodge, Knights of Honor, Vera Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, and Star Council, Royal Templars of Temperance. Mr. and Mrs. McLean and daughter are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Richard Titus, of the firm of Thompson & Titus, coal dealers, Union City, Pa., was born in Venango township, Erie county, Pa., April 21, 1859, and is the fourth in a family of six children. The Titus family belong to the oldest inhabitants of Erie county. Jesse Titus, the grandfather of Richard, came from Massachusetts and settled in Venango township when it was a vast wilderness. Richard Titus was reared and educated in his birthplace, and worked on his father's farm until 1888, when he came to Union City and worked for W. H. Harrison, a shipper, for two years. He then worked in the freight department of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. for two years, and went on the road firing, but at the end of a year returned to the freight office, where he continued until he bought a half interest, with W. H. Thompson, in the coal business. Both members of the firm are energetic and industrious business men, and are doing a large business in their line. Mr. Titus was married September 21, 1892, to Miss Mary, daughter of M. H. Haynes, of Waterford township. Three children were born to this union: Rosa, Ora and Ollie. Mr. Titus is a Republican in politics, and a member of the I. O. O. F.

John P. Sinnacher, tanner and currier, Union City, Pa., was born in Pontiac, Erie county, N. Y., June 6, 1865, and is a son of John and Magdaline (Lible) Sinnacher, natives of Bavaria, Germany, who came to the United States in 1864, settling in the State of New York, where Mr. Sinnacher operated a tannery. John was reared and educated in Pontiac, N. Y., and at an early age learned the tanner's and currier's trade, and has followed it ever since. In 1884 the family came to Union City and bought the tannery formerly owned by A. J. Terril. It was operated by Sinnacher & Son until August 12, 1891, when the father died. John ran it one year after his father's death, and, in 1892, formed a partnership with Barnhart May, a brother-in-law, and they have since successfully carried on the business. Mr. Sinnacher was united in marriage January 28, 1857, to Miss Euphémie T. Walker of Union City. One son has blessed this union, John, jr. Mr. Sinnacher has always been identified with the Democratic party, and is a member of the Fidelity, Sobriety and Integrity Society of Union City. The family attend the Presbyterian Church. Barnhart May, the other member of this firm, was born December 28, 1852, in Strasburg, Germany. His family came to this country and settled in Alden, N. Y. Mr. May was educated in Alden, N. Y., and learned the tanner's trade when quite young. He worked at different places at his trade until 1892, when he came to Union City, and formed the partnership noted above. Mr. May was married July 4, 1877, to Miss Josephine Sinnacher. Three children have been born to this union, Albert, Lily (deceased) and Nina. Mr. May is a Democrat, and is a member of the Catholic Church. The reputation of this tannery is high wherever its products are known, and great pains are taken to maintain a high standard of quality.

Louis S. Clark, of the firm of Fessler & Clark, proprietors of the Union City meat market, Union City, Pa., was born in Union township, Erie county, Pa., October 6, 1855. He is second in a family of three children of Jerry and Sophia (Lewis) Clark, natives of the State of New York. Louis was reared and educated at his birthplace, and after leaving school worked in a meat market for five years. In 1882 he came to Union City and worked for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company, in the capacity of clerk and baggageman, where he remained for twelve years. In May, 1884, he bought a half interest in the Union City meat market, where he and his partner have succeeded in building up a large trade. The greatest care is observed by this house in selecting their meats, and in their preparation and handling, and it enjoys an enviable reputation. Mr. Clark was united in marriage March 31, 1879, to Miss May, daughter of Newton Hembough, of Erie county. Five children have been born of this union, Mabel, Lena, Harold, Bessie and Myrtle. Mr. Clark was president of the Union City Hose Company in 1886, vice-president of the Protected Home Circle, and its secretary and treasurer in 1890-1. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and is identified with the Republican party.

Charles A. Law, merchant tailor, Union City, Pa., was born in Greenville, Pa., September 4, 1857, and is the second of three children of James and Elizabeth (Rice) Law, natives of Pennsylvania. James Law was a carriage manufacturer, was born in 1824 and died September 27, 1889. The three children of this family were: Mary Teresa (now widow of H. B. Lay, late of Greenville, Pa.), Charles A. and Alban H., of Cincinnati, a traveling salesman for the International Shirt and Collar Company, of Chicago. Charles A. Law was educated in Greenville, Pa., and after his school days went to Mercer, Pa., where he learned the tailor's trade, working at it there about three years, and then going to Meadville, where he was employed as a clerk for six years. In 1880 he went to Chicago and clerked for four years. He then returned to Greenville, where he remained one year. In 1885 he came to Union City and was employed by L. J. Treat three years and by Carroll & Van Dusen about two years. Mr. Law opened a tailoring establishment of his own in 1891, and has since conducted it with marked success. The artistic taste and knowledge of style best adapted to each subject, so necessary in the successful tailor, are happily combined in Mr. Law, whose long and varied experience has well qualified him for his business. He was married April 16, 1888, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Benjamin Avery, of Waterford, Pa. Mr. Law is a Republican, a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Masonic order and I. O. O. F.

William H. Thompson, freight agent for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company, Empire Line and Adams Express, at Union City, Pa., was born in Union City February 3, 1858, and is the second of seven children of Charles C. and Amanda S. (Burroughs) Thompson. The pioneer representative of this branch of the family was Abel Thompson, who came to Erie county in 1802, to what is now known as Union City. It was at that time a dense forest. Caleb Thompson, his son, and grandfather of William H., helped to clear the lands where the thriving town of Union City now stands. Charles C. Thompson, the next in order of descent, was born in Union City December 14, 1833, was educated in the common schools, learned the carpenter's trade, and has followed contracting and building for many years. Mr. W. H. Thompson was reared and educated in Union City, and after his leaving school clerked in a grocery for four years. He then became deputy postmaster under his father, during Grant's second administration, discharging the duties of his position faithfully for three years. In April, 1878, he accepted a position with the P. & E. division of the Pennsylvania R. R. His industry and ability won him promotion, and now he occupies the responsible position of freight agent. Mr. Thompson has also been interested, since 1883, in the sale of coal, building material, fire clay products, stoneware and dairy salt. His first partner in the business was C. C. Thomas, who continued with him and looked after the office and its business until his death, in 1889. The business was conducted under the firm name until 1893, when Richard Titus was taken in as a partner. The business, an extensive one, is at present conducted under the firm name of Thompson & Titus, Mr. Titus giving his entire time to it. Mr. Thompson was married August 7, 1889, to Miss Alma T., daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Lawrence) Watson, residents of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania. A daughter has blessed this union, Marie E. Mr. Thompson is identified with the Republican party, and is at present a member of the school board of Union City. He is also a member of the Masonic order and the Knights of Pythias. The family are members of the Methodist Church. Charles Alanson Thompson, second son of Charles C. and Amanda (Burroughs) Thompson, was born in Union City June 24, 1869, and was reared and educated for the most part by his uncle, William Putnam. At an early age he became driver for the American Express Company, and by perseverance and business ability he rapidly made his way to the front, and at the present time is chief clerk under his brother, W. H. Thompson. Charles A. was united in marriage October 12, 1892, to Miss Minnie A., daughter of Francis and Jemima (Buell) Millet, the former born in Allen, Allegheny county, N. Y., and the latter in Riceville, Crawford county, Pa., October 29, 1852. One daughter has blessed this union, Helen Cardine, born September 19, 1893. Mr. C. A. Thompson is an ardent Republican and an enthusiastic worker in the party ranks.

William Putnam, ticket agent for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R., Union City, Pa., was born in Bethel, Vt., May 13, 1822, and is a son of William W. Putnam, a native of Vermont, who was born August 6, 1796, and died in 1848, and Philana (Buck) Putnam, a native of New Hampshire, born in 1799, and died in 1888. William Putnam is a direct descendant of John Putnam, the original head of the family in this country. He was born in Buckingham, England, in 1582, settled in Salem, Mass., in 1634, and died in Buckingham, England, in 1662. William Putnam, jr., was 12 years of age when his father left Vermont and settled in Erie county, New York, where he resided for five years, coming from there to Union township, Erie county, Pa., in 1839. In 1844 he moved to the borough, and his house is on the same spot that he built upon in 1846. At an early age he learned the carpenter's trade, and followed contracting and building until 1857. In 1859 he began work for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. Company in the capacity of freight, express and ticket agent, but at the present time has relinquished all the duties but that of ticket agent. He has dealt quite extensively in real estate. In 1855 he established and operated a coal office, opposite the P. & E. depot, which he continued until 1888, when he sold out to W. H. Thompson. In politics he was a Whig until 1856, when he united with the Republicans, and in 1857 was elected county commissioner. Mr. Putnam was united in marriage in November, 1845, to Miss Nancy C., daughter of Dr. Alanson Burrows, of Union City. Dr. Burrows was born in Alstead, N. H., February 14, 1800, was reared and educated in his native State, and October 20, 1843, moved to Erie county and settled in Beaverdam, where he practiced his profession until February 13, 1849, when he came to Union City, where he was the leading physician at that time in this part of the county. He was married to Miss Nancy McCormick, a native of Windham, Vt., who was born October 20, 1800. There were two children born of this marriage. The Doctor died in 1856, his wife in 1853.

Richard R. Lewis, merchant tailor and clothier, of the firm of Lewis & Carroll, was born in Dollgelley, the county seat of Merionethshire, North Wales, April 13, 1846, and is a son of Robert and Ann (Jones) Lewis, natives of Wales. He is the third in a family of four children, was reared and educated in his birthplace, and, at the early age of 11, began to serve an apprenticeship with his father, who had been a merchant tailor throughout his business life. Richard was compelled, as all apprentices are who learn trades in England or Wales, to master it thoroughly before being allowed to engage in it as a journeyman. He worked in different places in Wales as a journeyman until 1868, when he came to America and located in Utica, N. Y., where he worked a short time and then traveled westward to California, from thence to Mexico and Central America, and returned by vessel to Utica, where he worked as a tailor until September, 1873, when he came to Union City, Pa., and was employed by L. J. Treat until 1879. In that year he was engaged by C. W. Dabney, for whom he worked ten years. In 1890 he became a partner in a merchant tailoring and clothing establishment with O. W. Carroll. The business has been successfully conducted by these gentlemen since, and is one of the leading houses in Union City. Mr. Lewis is a complete master of his trade, is a first-class cutter. Personally he is a gentleman well regarded in the community where he has resided. He is a frequent contributor to The American Tailor, a leading trade magazine published in New York city. His contributions are usually on the art of cutting. In 1892 he secured letters patent from the United States, Canada and Great Britain for an improved measuring tailoring square, which is extensively used. Mr. Lewis was united in marriage May 1, 1871, to Miss Narcissa, daughter of P. W. Moody, of Union City. Seven children have been born to this union: Robert, Richard, Ellen, Ruth, Grace, Margaret and Russell. Mr. Lewis is a member of the Masonic order, the Knights of Honor, and the family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Alfred C. Sherwood, M. D., who has been a practicing physician of Union City for twenty-one years, and has come to be recognized as one of the best surgeons in Western Pennsylvania, is the eldest son of F. W. M. and Evaline (Trow) Sherwood, his father being a native of Erie county, Pennsylvania, and the mother of Chautauqua county, New York. He received a common school education, and afterwards attended the State Normal School at Edinboro. He read medicine with Dr. H. R. Terry, then located in Union City, for four years, after which he entered the University of Pennsylvania medical department, from which institution he graduated with honors March 13, 1873. He immediately entered upon the duties of his chosen profession. On January 20, 1876, he was united in marriage to Miss Emma V. Jackson, daughter of Andrew Jackson, of Medinaville. Seven children born to this union were: Miss Daisy M., Andrew J., Belle E., Rose V., Frederick L., Beatrice M. and Alton C. Frederick L. died at the age of 7 years and Alton C. at the age of 3 months. Before he had graduated from the University of Pennsylvania he was appointed physician for the county and has continuously held the position since. He was also appointed surgeon for the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. about the same time and still retains the place. He has been elected to the school board several terms, and in this position gave much time and attention to the building up of the city schools. In 1891 he was elected elder in the Presbyterian Church of Union City, of which he and his family were members. Politically he is a Republican. He is an honored member of Eureka Lodge, F. & A. M., of Union City; Temple Chapter, No. 215, of Erie; Jerusalem Council, No. 33, Erie; Presque Isle Lodge of Perfection, A. A. S. R., Erie; Consistory, S. P. R. S., 32d degree, Pittsburg; Zern Zern Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Erie, Pa.; Clement Lodge, No. 220, I. O. O. F.; Nineveh Encampment, I. O. O. F.; Israel Lodge, Knights of Honor and the Royal Arcanum. He is a ready public speaker, active in all public affairs, liberal spirited and charitable in all his dealings.

Wilson Moore (deceased), of Waterford township, was born February 22, 1852, in Waterford township, and was a son of James and Elizabeth (Canning) Moore, natives of County Derry, Ireland, who came to America in 1818 with a family of nine children (three more being born to them in America), and locating near Pittsburg, where the family remained for about two years, when they came to Waterford, where James purchased a farm on what is known as the Waterford and Union road. It was there that Wilson was reared, his education being obtained in the public schools of the township. After his school days were over he devoted his time to farming, lumbering and dealing in stock, the last twenty-five years of his life being devoted almost exclusively to that of an extensive stock business. Mr. Moore was a very popular Democrat, and in 1873 was a candidate for sheriff being beaten by only three votes in a strongly Republican county. He was one of the leading men of Erie county and did much for the welfare and development of the western part of the State. He was public-spirited, kind-hearted and always willing to lend a helping hand to those who were in need of a friend. He was united in marriage December 18, 1851, to Miss Nancy, daughter of James and Sarah (Lytle) Campbell, natives of Pennsylvania. Five children were born of this union: Francis J., George S. (deceased), Marshall, Elizabeth (deceased) and Harry L. Mr. Moore died April 29, 1876, after a painful and protracted illness. By his death Erie county lost one of her most loyal sons and public-spirited citizens. Francis J. Moore, the eldest son, was born June 18, 1853, was reared in his birthplace and educated in the public schools and the Waterford Academy. He did business for his father until the latter's death, continuing the lumber business until 1887, when he embarked in the hotel business, which he has since followed, having been proprietor of the Park Hotel, Waterford, St. Charles, Union City, and is now conducting the Eagle House at Waterford, Pa. In 1882-5 he was a candidate for sheriff on the Democratic ticket, the first time being defeated by about 162 votes and the last time by 1,200. The county at that time was about 3,000 Republican, and Mr. Moore's close run speaks well for his popularity. Marshall Moore (deceased), the next son in order of birth, was born August 26, 1857, was educated in the public schools and reared on the old homestead settled by his grandfather years before. After his school days were passed he purchased a farm and for four years followed farming. In 1881 he came to Union City and was employed as a bookkeeper by the Union City Chair Company, which position he filled until 1884, when he purchased a half interest in the business, H. C. Cheney being the senior member of the firm. The production of chairs at this factory is large, and their trade extends over a wide section of country. They give employment to about 100 men and have six salesmen on the road. Mr. Moore also made several trips during the year, besides attending to the office business. Mr. Moore was a man possessed of extensive business abilities and was a gentleman prominently identified with the substantial interests of the city. He was united in marriage December 30, 1879, to Miss Ida B., daughter of George and Julia (Kinaman) Hipple, of Waterford, Pa., both now living. Two children were born to this union, Fred W. and Julia Marie. Mr. Moore was a staunch Democrat, a member of the I. O. O. F. and the K. of P. The family are members of the Episcopal Church. Harry L., the youngest of this family, was born March 15, 1866, and was educated at the Waterford Academy and LaFayette College, graduating in the class of '88. After leaving college he went to Erie and studied law with F. F. Marshall, being admitted to the bar in December, 1891. Upon admission to the bar he became associated with Hon. John C. Brady, a leading lawyer of Erie, and the firm is one of the leading ones of that city. He is a prominent Democrat and in the fall of 1894 was chairman of the Democratic city committee. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Moore was united in marriage May 16, 1888, to Miss Madaline, daughter of John and Leah (Titus) Gleuber, of Easton, Pa.

John McIntyre, senior member of the Union City Steam Granite Company, was born in Clarenceville, Canada, June 6, 1836, and is a son of John and Mary (Doman) McIntyre, natives of Glasgow, Scotland, who came to America in 1853, and settled in Canada. John, jr., is the youngest in a family of four children, two boys and two girls; was reared and educated in Canada, and followed farming and buying hay for about fifteen years. He then came to Union City, and by energy and industry established a marble and granite business, which he conducted until 1894, when he sold a half interest to Frank Woodcock. The firm makes a specialty of fine cemetery work, and has turned out some of the most beautiful and artistic designs. They are large importers of Scotch granite, and handle Italian and American marble, having always on hand a large assortment. Mr. McIntyre was united in marriage December 28, 1867, to Miss Dollie, daughter of Charles and Mary (Klemmerer) Middleton, of Erie. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. McIntyre is a Democrat.

Benjamin F. Camp, merchant miller, of the Camp Milling Company, Union City, Pa., was born in Southington, Trumbull county, O., and is the sixth of a family of nine children of Lambert and Sophia (Wanamaker) Camp, natives of Lehigh county, Pennsylvania. He was reared and educated in his birthplace, learned the miller's trade, and worked at it in Ohio for four years. In 1878 he came to Union City and established the Camp Milling Company, which was operated for three years under the firm name of Camp, Geiger & Beebe, and at the end of that period Mr. Beebe retired from the firm, which was then run under the firm name of Camp, Geiger & Co., until August, 1891, when Geiger's interest was purchased by Frank Silliman. The company was incorporated in 1891, and has been doing an extensive milling business. Mr. Camp continued an active member of the company until 1895, when he sold out his interest. Daniel W. Camp, a brother of Benjamin, who was largely instrumental in the organization of this company, and is an expert miller, worked in the mill during its early development. The plant furnishes work for about fourteen men. Benjamin F. Camp was united in marriage February 28, 1872, to Miss Cestlia, daughter of William Laird, a resident of Mercer county, Pennsylvania. Three children have been born of this union: Fred L., Charles R. (deceased) and Della Irene. Mr. Camp is identified with the Republican party, and is a member of the Knights of Honor and Knights of Pythias.

William F. Blanchard, pension attorney, Union City, Pa., was born in Erie county, New York, May 2, 1847, and is the second in a family of three children of Francis Read and Sopronia (Brown) Blanchard, the former a native of New Hampshire and the latter of Connecticut. William F. was reared in Crawford county, and when only sixteen years of age enlisted in Company B, 11th P. V. I., February 10, 1864, under Capt. Wallace B. Warner. He was transported to Bridgeport, Ala., and joined the regiment there. He participated in the following battles: Resaca, Ga., May 15, 1864, and Dallas, Ga., May 25, 1864, where he received a gunshot wound in the foot and was taken to the hospital at Nashville, Tenn., where he remained until the latter part of December, when he was transferred to Company I, 6th Reg., V. R. C., and was assigned to duty at Johnson's Island, O., where he was mustered out of service August 5, 1865. Returning to his home in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, he followed the vocation of a carpenter and farmer until September 10, 1889, when he came to Union City, and has followed the profession of a pension attorney ever since. He is very successful in securing pensions for his clients, and is well versed in the law relating to them. Mr. Blanchard was married September 26, 1878, to Miss Rosa A., daughter of Ezra and Maria (Sturgis) Clark, natives of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Two children were born of this union, Dawn Waive, born June 14, 1880 (deceased September 6, 1894), and Rosa Ferne, born July 12, 1885. Mrs. Rosa Blanchard died February 20, 1887, and December 26, 1890. Mr. Blanchard was again married, and has one son by this union, Clyde Humphrey, born October 5, 1891. Mr. Blanchard is a member of the G. A. R., and is identified with the Republican party.

Marshall W. Lyon, blacksmith, Union City, Pa., was born November 26, 1825, in Ashfield, Franklin county, Mass. He is the oldest son in a family of twelve children, of Marshall and Chloe (Sherman) Lyon, natives of Massachusetts. Two brothers, David, of Girard, and Josiah, of Butler, Pa., are veterans of the late war. In the fall of 1836 the family came to Erie county, Pennsylvania, and settled in Girard, purchasing a farm, where Marshall worked until he was 18 years old, when he engaged as blacksmith's apprentice to Jacob Van Loon, of Girard. After completing his trade he went to Cleveland, O., with the intention of settling there and working at his trade, but in December, 1846, he enlisted as a soldier in Company C, Regular Infantry, to serve in the Mexican war, under Captain W. Scott Ketcham. He was sent from Cleveland to Cincinnati by stage, thence down the Mississippi to New Orleans, where they took a vessel for the seat of war. He was a faithful soldier, served his country well, and saw all the vicissitudes of army life, being in the principal battles, and was with Scott when he marched his victorious army into the City of Mexico. His regiment was under the immediate command of Zachary Taylor. He was mustered out in June, 1848. Fewer and fewer become the Mexican war veterans, and soon the last one will be mustered out, when

"Strange hands their knell will ring;
Forns unscen their dirge will sing."

After the war was over Mr. Lyon returned to Girard, Pa., and worked at his trade in that place until 1850, when he went to Spartansburg, Crawford county, Pa., and conducted a shop for twenty-one years. In 1872 he came to Union City and built a shop, which he is now operating. He is a veteran blacksmith as well as soldier, and is well and favorably known throughout Erie and Crawford counties. Mr. Lyon was married August 27, 1854, to Miss Cynthia C., daughter of Oliver Allen. Four children have been born: Sophia E., now widow of Clarence Daemer; Clarence A., electrician, New York city; George (deceased); and Marshall A., painter, decorator and paper hanger. Mr. Lyon is identified with the Democratic party, and is a member of the I. O. O. F.

William Dunmeyer, proprietor of the Industrial Iron Works, Union City, Pa., was born in Philadelphia, Pa., October 30, 1840, the eldest in the family of six children, of Jacob and Catherine (Breyer) Dunmeyer, natives of Baden, Germany, who came to America in 1837, settling in the city of Philadelphia, where Jacob, the father, worked in the Baldwin Locomotive Works, as a machinist, for four years, then going to Virginia, where he lived for three years, moving from there to Pittsburg, Pa., residing there until his death, September, 1890. William received his education in Pittsburg, and at an early age learned the blacksmith's and machinist's trade which he worked at in Pittsburg and Philadelphia until 1864, when he enlisted in the United States navy and served on the monitor "Sangamon" until the close of the war. In 1865 Mr. Dunmeyer returned to Pittsburg and worked as a journeyman until 1872, when he came to Union City and, in 1873, established the Industrial Iron Works. Later he took Mr. Allen B. Seymour, as a partner, into the concern. At these works engines of a high grade are constructed. Mr. Dunmeyer is a workman of superior abilities, and this fact, taken in connection with the particularly advantageous location of the plant in a center of manufacturing that creates a large local trade which the works can readily supply, gives a volume of business requiring almost constant running. Mr. Dunmeyer was married November 1, 1883, to Miss Laurie E., daughter of Gerrett G. Davison, of Blooming Valley, Pa. Mrs. Dunmeyer died October 14, 1894. Mr. Dunmeyer is a member of I. O. O. F. and Knights of Pythias. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Jacob F. Kamerer, manufacturer, Union City, Pa., was born in Wurttemberg, Germany, April 4, 1839, and is a son of John J. and Dorothy (Breakley) Kamerer, natives of Germany. In 1847 the family came to America and settled in McKean township, Erie county, Pa., where Jacob received such education as the public schools at that time afforded. He followed farming until 1861, when the oil business drew him to upper Canada, where he operated wells until 1862, then he returned to the States, took up arms in defense of his country, enlisting in Company

F, 169th Pennsylvania regiment. After the term of his enlistment expired he returned and again speculated in oil on Oil Creek, and in the spring of 1864 went to Fayette county, Pennsylvania, and was engaged there until 1865 drilling test wells. In 1865 he came to Union City and did contracting and building until 1872, when he began the manufacturing of lumber, shingles and broom-handles, which he is operating extensively. About twelve men are employed at his factories. Mr. Kamerer has had a wide experience in business, and that he is a prompt, reliable, energetic man is fully attested by the manner in which his present enterprise is conducted. He has been twice married: first to Eliza M. Johnson, August 4, 1864; she died in the spring of 1874, leaving two children, Fred J., and Addie. Mr. Kamerer was again married December 28, 1874, to Miss Margaret H. McIntyre, and one son, Edward S. has been born of this union. Fred J. and Edward S. are both engaged largely with their father in manufacturing. Mr. Jacob Kamerer is a member of the G. A. R., I. O. O. F., and Encampment, and is a district deputy of the I. O. O. F. this year. In politics he is a Democrat; has been a member of the town council and school board serving two terms in each; he was also Burgess of Union City two terms, from 1885 until 1887. Mr. Kamerer is a public spirited citizen and has done much to promote the welfare of Union City.

Haniel Clark, manufacturer and merchant miller, Union City, Pa., born in Penobscot county, Maine, August 24, 1824, is a son of John B. and Mary (Towle) Clark, natives of New Hampshire. The family consisted of seven boys and four girls, Haniel being the third child. He was reared in Penobscot, and received such education as was afforded in the country schools at that time. When quite young he began life for himself, working for a boat-oar manufacturer for eleven years. Later he purchased a farm in Girard township, Erie county, Pa., and followed farming until 1861, when he sold out to engage in manufacturing at Pageville, continuing there until 1865, when he came to Union City and established his present business, which at first was on a small scale, but which, through Mr. Clark's practical knowledge of everything appertaining to his business, together with his untiring energy and upright dealings with men, has established a number of thriving industries in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. He owns and operates a large flouring mill, a sawmill and a "D" shovel-handle factory in Union City. He has been interested in shovel-handle factories at Watt's Flats, N. Y., and in Pennsylvania at Mosier-ton, Conneautville and Grand Valley; in Ohio, at Sidney, Bradford, Versailles, Cold Water, Botkins, New Bremen and Fort Recovery, still having an interest in the last two. He is also interested in a stove factory at Hagerman, Ohio. The different works he is interested in employ about sixty men. Mr. Clark is a self-made man, having had no assistance to start life's battle but willing hands and a courageous heart. He possesses a genial and kindly disposition, and is recognized as a substantial, upright, industrious and worthy citizen. Mr. Clark was united in marriage August 5, 1852, to Miss Harriet R., daughter of Richard and Anna (Linnel) Partridge, of North East, Pa. Four children were born of this union: Edwin P., Virginia E. (now Mrs. Henry Neal), Sarah May (who married Samuel Long, a minister of Pittsburg, Pa.), and Helen. Mrs. Clark died April 5, 1891. She was a faithful wife, a loving mother, devoted friend and a kind neighbor.

John Cafisch, retired, Union City, Pa., born at Barr, Alsace, France, January, 28, 1828, is a son of Christian and Saloma (Bartholme) Cafisch, the former a native of Switzerland and the latter of Barr, France. John, the elder in a family of two children, was reared and educated in Alsace, and at an early age learned the tanner's trade, working at it from the age of 14 until 26 in his native country. In 1854 he came to America and settled in Chautauque county, New York, where he followed his trade for a couple of years, when he purchased a farm which he tilled for seven years. In 1864 he came to Union City purchasing a farm near town, occupying it until 1885, when, after a visit to his native land, he returned and purchased his present home in Union City, where he has lived in retirement ever since. Mr. Cafisch was married in Barr, Alsace, France, in 1850, to Miss Madeline, daughter of Jacob and Madeline (Momell) Heywang, natives of France. Eleven children have been born to this union: Madeline, (now Mrs. Thomas Wilson of Union City), John A., Saloma (now Mrs. Wallace Johnson, of Mystic, Pa.), William, (deceased), Henry, Jacob, Fred, Albert, Ernest, Edward, and Frank (deceased). Jacob Cafisch, who has extensive lumber mills in this and adjoining counties, was born November 13, 1861, was reared and educated in Union City and township. After his school days were over he was employed by W. D. Brunstetter in a saw mill for a year, when he bought a fourth interest in the business and in 1881 purchased enough to make a third, and in 1885 the remaining interests were bought up by the Cafisch Brothers, who succeeded to the entire business, and have successfully conducted it since. Besides this mill at Union City with a capacity of 20,000 feet per day, they operate mills at Antes Fort, Lycoming county, with an average run of 15,000 feet per day, besides the manufacturing of staves, shingles, heading and cloth board. They also operate a mill at Elgin, Erie county, Pa., where the daily output at full time is probably 20,000 feet. They have recently constructed a general planing mill in connection with the saw mill at Union City. Jacob Cafisch was united in marriage November 6, 1884, to Miss Margaret, daughter of W. B. Goodrich, of Union township. They are rearing two children, Willie and Clara Goodrich, nephew and niece of the deceased brother of Mrs. Cafisch. Albert Cafisch, the junior member of this firm, was born November 14, 1862, in Union City, Pa., was reared and educated in Union township, and, after leaving school, was employed by Brunstetter & Co. for two years, when he bought an interest in the business, which he has assisted in conducting since. He was married March 17, 1885, to Miss Matilda, daughter of John C. and Margaretta (Hassler) Maurer, residents of Union City. Five children have been born to this union: Margaret, Alfred, John, Gertrude and Gladys L. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church. Frederick Cafisch, manufacturer, is the seventh in order of birth in this family, and was born December 25, 1860, was reared and educated in Union City and township and at the College of Commerce in Philadelphia. After leaving school Mr. Cafisch engaged in the lumber business extensively as a contractor and dealer, which he has followed during the greater part of his life. In 1898 he built his present establishment, which consists of a handle and general wood-turning factory. He married November 26, 1888, Miss Nettie L., daughter of M. C. Coburn, of Hatch Hollow. This union has been blessed with three children: Mabel, Adelle (deceased), Clarence M. and Allie Bell. In politics Mr. Cafisch is allied to no party, but votes as his judgment dictates.

Jonas Humphrey, M. D. (deceased), was, during his life, one of the leading and most successful physicians in Erie county. He was born March 25, 1820, in Vermont, where he was reared and educated. In 1842 he entered the Castleton Medical College, of Vermont, and was graduated from that institution in 1844, when he came to Crawford county, Pennsylvania, and located in Centerville, where he practiced one year and then removed to Union City, where he commanded a large practice until his death, which occurred July 30, 1867. Dr. Humphrey, as a physician, stood at the head of the profession; as a man he was courteous and kind to all, and his death, in the prime of mature manhood, was greatly lamented. He was a charter member of the Erie County Medical Society, and a member of the Masonic order. Dr. Humphrey was married February 14, 1856, to Miss Jane A., daughter of Herman Abbey, of Wayne township, Erie county. To this union five children were born: Allie J., wife of C. B. Greer, jeweler, Union City, Pa.; Mabel C., now Mrs. W. P. Meehan; William J., Herman A. (deceased) and Glennis. William J. was born in Union City, December 31, 1860, was reared and educated in the public schools of the city, and, in 1886, entered the Buffalo Medical College, graduating from that institution in 1890. He then began the practice of his chosen profession in Union City, where he succeeded his brother, Glennis. William J. is a young man of marked ability, and will doubtless win a worthy reputation in the profession, which his distinguished father so much honored. Glennis, the younger son, was educated in Union City, and took a three years' course at the University of Pennsylvania, and afterwards spent a year at hospital work. He is now located at Hazleton, Pa.

Dallas G. Smiley, merchant, Union City, Pa., born in Union township, April 19, 1846, is the third in a family of seven children of Moses and Margaret (Marshall) Smiley. James Smiley, grandfather of Dallas, was a soldier in the war of 1812, serving under General Harrison. He came to Union City and operated the first grist-mill in the town. Moses Smiley was born in Meadville, Pa., and followed farming for a number of years; he was also justice of the peace for many terms; subsequently he removed to Union City and spent his latter days. Dallas G. was reared and educated in Union City, and after quitting school clerked in a store for several years. In 1869 he engaged in the mercantile business with G. W. Johnson and J. V. A. Smiley, a brother. They did business under the firm name of Johnson & Smiley Bros. for five years, when the firm dissolved, and Smiley Bros. have been engaged in conducting a general store since. Mr. D. G. Smiley was elected to the office of justice of the peace in 1889, on the Democratic ticket, and was re-elected in 1893. During the year 1883 he served as Burgess of the city. He was united in marriage in January, 1876, to Miss Ella J., daughter of J.

J. Zin, of Union City. This union has been blessed with four children: Frank D., Clyde Z., Ward M. and Robert Clifford.

William M. Toy, proprietor of meat market, Union City, Pa., born January 1, 1867, in Union City, is the eldest in a family of four children, one son and four daughters, of Benjamin and Julia (Tourtelotte) Toy, the former a native of Philadelphia and the latter of Union City. Benjamin Toy was reared and educated in Philadelphia, and at an early age learned the trade of butcher and has since followed it. In 1882 he came to Union City from Gilmore, Pa., and bought out the establishment conducted by Wilkins & Gale, one of the most important of the kind in Union City. The market is central, and every facility is afforded for the prompt and systematic transaction of business. Mr. Toy was educated in Gilmore, McKean county, Pa., and since he was old enough, has worked with his father in a market. He was united in marriage April 16, 1892, to Miss Eva A., daughter of John E. and Josephine White, natives of Massachusetts. Mr. Toy is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the Knights of Pythias. The family attend the Presbyterian Church.

Charles Jarecki, president and general manager of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company, Erie, Pa., was born in Posen, Germany, August 28, 1857, and is a son of Charles W. Jarecki, who is mentioned elsewhere in this work. He was educated in his native country, and came to the United States in the fall of 1852. He located in Erie, where he engaged to learn the machinist trade with Vincent, Himrod & Co., with whom he remained two years. He then entered the employ of his brother, Henry, with whom he entered partnership in 1862, under the firm name of Henry Jarecki & Co. In 1872 the Jarecki Manufacturing Company was incorporated, with Mr. Henry Jarecki president, and Mr. Charles Jarecki secretary and treasurer. In 1879 the incorporation was dissolved and the company has since done business under the limited laws of the State. The officers of the new organization were Charles Jarecki, president; Albert H. Jarecki, secretary, and Oscar H., treasurer. Mr. Fred C. Jarecki has since been made assistant secretary. The officers of the company, together with Mr. Alexander Jarecki, who is superintendent of the iron foundry department, constitute the board of managers. Two-thirds of the stock of this concern is owned by Messrs. Henry and Charles Jarecki, while the remaining third is distributed among several others. The portion of the plant which is located on East Ninth street, and includes the general offices, occupies over half a square, while the iron foundry department, on West Twelfth street, covers three and three-fourths acres. The buildings are all substantial stone, brick and iron structures, and range from one to three stories in height. The machinery with which the plant is equipped throughout is of the very latest and most improved, and would make in itself a wonderful display of mechanical ingenuity. Many of these machines have been invented by the Messrs. Jarecki, or by the able mechanics who have charge of the various departments. Branches have been established in all principal oil towns in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Indiana, for the sale of oil well supplies, with headquarters for these branches at Pittsburg. The products of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company include all kinds of cast and malleable iron, gas, steam and water fittings, brass and iron valves and cocks, steam and hot air radiators, pipe and threading tools, and oil, artesian and natural gas supplies. The brass department is undoubtedly the largest brass works in the world. As is detailed in another part of this work, the Jarecki Manufacturing Company had its beginning in the little brass shop of Mr. Henry Jarecki, and it was he who for several years was chiefly responsible for its life and growth, but when the condition of the manufacturing interest of the world became such as to require greater resources and capabilities in order to compete successfully with other institutions of its kind, it was Mr. Charles Jarecki who planned and executed the great movements which placed it in the front rank of the industries of the country. In management and equipment the Jarecki Manufacturing Company has few equals and certainly no superiors. This is largely due to the fact that the gentleman who is at its head is thoroughly acquainted with every detail of the business, not only financially and commercially, but mechanically. A very unique feature of this great institution is the sympathy which the managers have always shown the laboring classes, which the latter fully appreciate, so that when business is slack on account of panics or other causes, and short time and other concessions are required of the employes, they readily acquiesce, knowing that they are being fairly dealt with and receiving all that is right and just at the hands of their employers, in whom they have come to have the most implicit confidence. In 1894 Messrs. Charles and Albert H. Jarecki displayed their characteristic enterprise by purchasing and enlarging and thoroughly remodeling and refitting the Penn block, which now is a modern building in every sense of the word, and has already demonstrated that the undertaking will be a success. Mr. Charles Jarecki was married in 1862 to Miss Louise, sister of ex-Mayor Philip A. Becker, of Erie. This happy union has been blessed with three children: Alexander, superintendent of the iron foundry department and a member of the board of managers of the company; Fred C., assistant secretary, and Robert, of the Erie high school. Mr. Jarecki is a Knight Templar Mason, a member of the Liedertafel Society, and of the Erie Club, and is a member of the board of managers of the Hamot Hospital. In politics Mr. Jarecki is a Republican, but the multitudinous cares of his active business life, together with a distaste for political notoriety, have prevented him from seeking or accepting any of the honors which his party would gladly confer upon him. He always has the best interests of the community at heart, and is ever ready to encourage and support worthy enterprises of a public or a charitable nature.

Harrison C. Cheney, manufacturer, Union City, Pa., is among the leading manufacturers of the Middle States, and none are more widely or prominently known. He was born October 4, 1840, at Chesterfield, Cheshire county, N. H., and he is the second in a family of seven children of Col. Clark and Adeline (Crosby) Cheney, natives of New Hampshire. Colonel Cheney was a farmer, and when Harrison C. was only a boy of 15 the father died, leaving the family to be cared for by this sturdy New England lad, who did not shrink from the duties placed upon his youthful shoulders. He went to Swanzy, N. H., where he found employment in one of the numerous factories that go to make up the average

New England town, and for four years he worked faithfully, sharing his meager earnings with the family of younger children. In 1859 he went to Wisconsin, where he was employed in a pail factory for about one year, and then returned East and found employment in a chair factory at Ashburnham, Mass., where he remained until the beginning of the war. He had been for some time a member of the Massachusetts militia, and after the president's first call for volunteers he enlisted as a private in July, 1861, in the 21st Reg., M. V. I., and was mustered in for three years. The country's peril aroused his most patriotic impulses, and he enlisted, as thousands of young men did, reckoning not the lost time and opportunities of civic life. Immediately after the battle of Roanoke Island he was promoted to a corporal, then sergeant, sergeant-major, and finally lieutenant, which position he held until the close of the war. After this battle the regiment was sent to Camden, N. C., to destroy the locks and canals near the Dismal Swamp, and at the battle of Camden, April 19, 1862, he was severely wounded in the arm, near the shoulder. He was placed in the Newbern hospital, where he remained until his wounds were sufficiently healed, when he went home on a furlough, remaining until he was able to join his regiment in Newport News, Va., where the corps were under marching orders to join Pope in Virginia. They fell in with that army at Calpepper, on a rapid march toward the Potomac, to intercept Lee, who was making that an objective point. After the memorable battle of Fredericksburg, the corps was sent West and joined Burnside, to be distributed through the State of Kentucky as a patrol to protect loyal citizens from the marauding guerrilla bands. They were soon sent to assist Grant at Vicksburg, and after that siege were again sent to Kentucky. The disastrous campaign there resulted in a loss of nearly one-third of the corps. They were next sent to Fort Nelson, near Lexington, to recuperate and to be put into fighting condition. After a short rest they were sent over the Cumberland Mountains to East Tennessee to destroy detached portions of the rebel army, and after a successful campaign were marched back over the same route to Kentucky. In 1864 the corps was transferred to the army of the Potomac, and followed the fortunes and disasters of that army until the close of the war. Mr. Cheney participated in the following battles: Roanoke Island, N. C., Newbern, N. C., February 1, 2 and 3, 1862; Camden, N. C., second Bull Run, Va., August 30, 1862; Chantilly, Va., September 1, 1862; South Mountain, Md., September 14, 1862; Antietam, Md., September 15, 16 and 17, 1862; Fredericksburg, Va., December 13, 1862; Blue Springs, Tenn., October 10, 1863; Cambell's Station, Tenn., November 16, 1863; siege of Knoxville, Tenn.; Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864; Spotsylvania, Va., May 9, 1864; North Ann, Va., Cold Harbor, Va., June 3, 1864; Petersburg, Va., July, 1864, where Mr. Cheney was wounded a second time in a mine explosion. The record above needs no comment to those versed in the history of the Rebellion. After his arduous and patriotic service to his country he was mustered out in the spring of 1865, and returned to Ashburnham, Mass., where he was commissioned a major of the State militia in Worcester county, which position he held until he left the State. After returning from the war he again entered the chair factory in Ashburnham, and held a responsible position until 1870, when he went to Jamestown, N. Y., and organized the Cane Seat Chair Company, and was retained by the company in the capacity of an expert to instruct men in the construction of such chairs. He was identified with this company for three years, and in the fall of 1873 he, in company with Mr. Whitney and other parties, established what was known as the Jamestown Wooden Seat Chair Company, but after two years Mr. Cheney sold out his interest and went to Canisteo, N. Y., where he was employed as superintendent of the chair works operated by Taylor Bros., remaining with them two years. He then made an innovation in his old line of business, and became proprietor of the Canisteo House, which he successfully conducted for four years. It was necessary to enlarge the house twice during his stay. Socially the major is a genial companion, a quality useful in the conduct of a hotel. In the spring of 1881 Mr. Cheney, in connection with a Mr. Hineman, bought out the Charles Wheeler Chair Works of Union City, which at that time was a small concern. After taking possession they made needed improvements, and were just getting into working condition when the entire plant was burned to the ground. In the following fall it was rebuilt by Messrs. Cheney, Hineman & Lowry, who erected a much larger building than the former one, but this was reduced to ashes in January, 1888, after being operated seven years. In 1888 the present plant was built by Mr. Cheney and the late Mr. Marshall Moore. The factory is conveniently located near the P. & E. R. R. depot, and has excellent facilities, not only for shipping out their manufactured goods, which consists of a full variety of chairs of the latest patterns, but also for bringing in the raw material. These works employ about 100 hands, and are of great value to Union City, as the amount of wages distributed facilitates trade and keeps business thriving. It is creditable to this concern that during all the recent hard times they have run full time and have been constantly busy filling orders. Mr. Cheney was married in February, 1862, to Miss Ellen P., daughter of Ives Burgess, of Ashburnham, Mass. Two children have been born to this union, Harry C. and Louis I. In politics Mr. Cheney has always been a staunch Democrat. He is a member of the G. A. R., I. O. O. F., Knights of Pythias and E. C. M. P. The family attend the Episcopal Church.

Henry Fassler, jr., proprietor of meat market, Union City, Pa., born March 16, 1835, in Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, is the sixth in the family of ten children of Henry and Margaret (Weaver) Fassler, natives of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Fassler was reared and educated in Williamsport, and followed farming until August 25, 1862, when he enlisted in Co. F, 2nd Wis. I., under Capt. A. J. Sheck. He was in the following engagements: Arkansas Post, Jackson, Miss.; Vicksburg, Buzzard and Prairie, La. He was also in the Red River expedition, and was at the battles of Sabine Cross Roads, Mobile, Ala., and many minor actions. Mr. Fassler was in some hard-fought battles, but passed through all without being wounded. He was mastered out of the service August 22, 1865. He returned to Williamsport and engaged in the business of handling meat, remaining there until 1878, when he removed to Duke Center, McKean county, Pa., where he ran a market for five years, afterward going to Clarendon, Pa., where he did business for four years. In 1887 he came to Union township and purchased a farm of sixty acres located near the P. & E. R. R., a few miles east of Union City, which he conducted until the spring of 1893, when he rented the farm and again engaged in the meat business, entering into partnership with L. S. Clark. This market is one of the best conducted concerns in Erie county, and caters to the best trade in the city. Mr. Fassler has been twice married; first to Sadie, daughter of Samuel Casner, of Lycoming county, March 28, 1870; four children were born to this union, Samuel L., William (deceased), Margaret E. and Annie (deceased). Mrs. Fassler died in November, 1882, and Mr. Fassler was remarried December 24, 1884, to Elizabeth A., daughter of James Welsh, of Allegheny county, New York. Mr. Fassler is identified with the Republican party.

Fred Bartholme, cigar dealer and manufacturer, Union City, Pa., was born in Barr, Alsace, which was then under French rule. He was born November 3, 1859, and is a son of John and Frederica (Heywang) Bartholme, natives of Alsace. Fred was reared and educated in his birthplace, and in 1872 the family, which then consisted of seven children (six boys and one girl) removed to America, settling in Union City, where the father followed the trade of tanner and currier, later purchasing a farm, which he oversees. One daughter was born since coming to this country. Fred attended school at Union City for a short time after the arrival of the family, and then learned the cigar-maker's trade, working at it as a journeyman until August, 1881, when he established his present business. Mr. Bartholme is well located and possesses all the facilities for making the factory a very successful one. He is manufacturing domestic cigars of different brands, which are sold extensively to the local trade, and also to large dealers in Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York. He is a thorough workman, and with the assistance of his two brothers, Jacob and Adolph, skillful cigarmakers, he is able to turn out a large quantity of goods yearly to his patrons. He is a musician as well as cigarmaker, having, with a brother, organized Coleman's famous band in 1882, and now plays in the Bartholme orchestra, of which his brother Charles is leader, and which is represented by the following members of this family: Fred, Adolph, Charles, Jacob and Edward. Mr. Bartholme was united in marriage January 28, 1883, to Miss Rosina, daughter of Rudolph Smith, a native of Switzerland. This union has been blessed with six children: Carrie, Nellie, Alice, Maud, Sophia and Marguerite. Mr. Bartholme is a Democrat, is a member of the I. O. O. F., and the family attend the Presbyterian Church.

Henry J. Humes, confectioner, Union City, Pa., born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, the eldest in a family of three children of Joseph and Nancy (Henry) Humes, natives of Pennsylvania. Henry was reared and educated in his birthplace, and after leaving school engaged in the lumber business in different parts of the State for several years. He then went to Ulysses, Neb., where he was employed in a creamery during the summer months and a grain elevator in the winter. In the fall of 1890 he came East and located in Union City, where he followed the lumber business two years. In 1892 he went to Cambridge, Crawford county, Pa., and engaged in the confectionery business and continued there until the spring of 1894, when he came to Union City and established his present business. Mr. Hume pays strict attention to business, is straightforward in all his dealings and displays enterprise which cannot fail to make success in the business world. In connection with the confectionery business he keeps a full supply of tobacco and cigars of all kinds. He is a man of integrity and enterprise and is looked upon as an estimable citizen. He was married March 1, 1888, to Miss Laura B., daughter of Wesley and Elizabeth (Morris) Allen, natives of Ohio. Two children have been born to this union, Earl J. and Lloyd H. Mr. Humes is identified with the Republican party and is a member of the I. O. O. F. The family attend the Presbyterian Church.

C. A. Barr, proprietor of the St. Charles Hotel, Union City, Pa., born at Blooming Valley, Crawford county, Pa., is a son of John H. and Jane (Floyd) Barr, both natives of the State of Pennsylvania. Mr. Barr is the only son in a family of four children, was reared and educated in Crawford county, and after leaving school became clerk at the Barr House, Meadville, Pa., which was kept by John H. Barr, his father. He remained there about five years, when he went to the Colt House, remaining there one year. In 1882 he came to Union City and clerked in the Cooper House for a short time and then was employed by G. B. Johnson, who at that time was conducting the Johnson House. He remained with Mr. Johnson about six years. In 1884, in partnership with Fred E. Warner, he took the St. Charles Hotel, which they conducted for two years, when Mr. Barr went out and took charge of the Keystone Billiard Parlors, which he managed until 1890, when he again went into the St. Charles, this time with John Phelps. They conducted it about seven months together, when Mr. Barr went to Erie and clerked in the Reed House for three years, and in April, 1894, he returned to Union City and purchased the St. Charles Hotel and fixtures, which he is now conducting. Mr. Barr's lifelong experience in the hotel business, combined with his natural qualifications, makes his hotel one of the best in Erie county. He spares no pains to make his guests comfortable, and his tables are supplied with a tempting variety of wholesome food. This hotel is headquarters for theatrical troupes and traveling men. Mr. Barr possesses a genial disposition and is always ready to minister to the wants of his many guests. He was united in marriage December 15, 1890, to Miss Hannah, daughter of Edward and Ellen (Toner) Malley, natives of Ireland, who came to America in 1862, settling in Worcester, Mass., and a year later moving to Union City. This union has been blessed with one child, Gertrude A. Mr. Barr is and always has been identified with the Republican party.

Ray P. Tipton, manufacturer of the Keystone Chair Works, Union City, Pa., born February 26, 1859, in Chapinville, Pa., is the only child of Thomas J. and Amelia (Pierce) Tipton, the former born at Hickory, Pa., and the latter at Cooperstown, N. Y. The family lived in Chapinville until 1870, when they removed to Buffalo, N. Y., where Thomas J. worked for the World's Dispensary Medical Association, in the chemical department. Ray was reared and educated in Buffalo, N. Y., and after completing his education he was employed by Dr. Pierce as bookkeeper until 1889, when he came to Union City and became interested in the Keystone Chair Works, taking a half interest in the concern, the other half being owned by W. J. Sloan. This factory employs about 90 men and can turn out about 1,400 chairs of the cheap grade daily and about 300 of the higher grade. They make a specialty of the high grade chair, cane, leather and wood seats. They have twelve commissioned salesmen on the road and two salaried men. Their goods are distributed throughout the United States and Canada. The premises occupy one of the most convenient locations in the city, where every facility is enjoyed for the production of their goods. The gentlemen at the head of this extensive plant, although comparatively young, have secured a prominent position in the manufacturing world. They are pleasant to meet and are always considerate towards those who call on them in a business or social way. Mr. Tipton was united in marriage November 18, 1893, to Miss Kate, daughter of Adam S. Schnedwind, of Buffalo, N. Y. Prior to her marriage with Mr. Tipton this lady was the business manager of the Ladies' Home Journal, Philadelphia, Pa., one of the leading journals of its kind in America. Mrs. Tipton possesses more than ordinary executive ability, and her marriage with Mr. Tipton has given Union City a lady of distinction. Mr. Tipton is a member of the Masonic order, Chapter and Commandery. He is a staunch and active Republican.

Harry H. Strycker, manufacturer of and dealer in cigars and tobacco, Union City, Pa., born in Philadelphia, Pa., July 27, 1864, is a son of Henry H. and Mary (Sassaman) Strycker, natives of Pennsylvania. In the family there were four children: Mary Alice, now Mrs. A. J. Nourse; Harry H., Margaret Ann, and William S. The father has always been a cigar manufacturer, and in 1873 came to Union City, where he followed the same business very extensively until 1880. He then went to the oil regions, where he followed railroad contracting for six years. In 1887 he resumed his former occupation and has followed it at Punxsutawney, Pa., ever since, where he is extensively engaged in the manufacture of cigars. William is now engaged in the cigar business at Meadville, Pa. Harry was reared and educated in Union City, learned the cigar maker's trade with his father, and remained with him until 1890, when he established his present business. The product of his factory is well and favorably known throughout Western Pennsylvania and New York. For quality and excellence they are recognized as standard goods in the cigar market. Although a young man, Mr. Strycker has established an enviable business reputation, and by his integrity and fairness in dealing, he not only has many patrons, but has the confidence of a host of friends. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Jr. O. U. A. M., and several other organizations, and politically he is a Republican. On June 12, 1895, he was married to Miss Susie A., the youngest daughter of Mr. Joshua Bailey, a prosperous and highly respected farmer of LeBoeuf township.

Gus Underholt, blacksmith, Union City, Pa., born in Frenchville, Clearfield county, Pa., is the son of Francis and Eleanor (Pease) Underholt, the former a native of Alsace, France, and the latter of Switzerland. Mr. Underholt was reared and educated in Meadville, Pa., and, after leaving school, learned the carriage-painting trade, working at it seven years. In 1879 he began the blacksmith's trade, working a year in Meadville and then removing to Miller's Corners, where he spent another year, when he came to Corry, remained until 1883, then located in Union City, where he has succeeded in building up an extensive trade. He is a first-class workman in every particular, and his genial manner has won him hosts of friends. He is an ardent poultry fancier, and he possesses some of the finest birds in the State. Mr. Underholt was united in marriage July 4, 1879, to Blanche, daughter of George N. and Mary J. (Bean) Waid, natives of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Two children have been born to this union: Evaline and Frederick. Mr. Underholt is allied to no political party.

Lucius Markham, United Brethren minister, Union City, Pa., was born in Columbus, Warren county, Pa., March 6, 1843, and is a son of George W. and Laura A. (Raymond) Markham, both natives of New York. The father was a carpenter and joiner, and followed his trade to the time of his death, in 1890. Lucius is the only child. He was reared and educated in the public schools of Clymer, N. Y. After leaving school, while yet a lad, he enlisted August 7, 1862, in Co. D, 112th N. Y. V. I., under Captain Curtis, and was sent directly to Suffolk, Va., and November 18, 1862, was under fire at the battle of Ludlow and Lawrence Plantation, on the Blackwater; December 12, Joiner's Ford, Virginia; January 30, 1863, Deserted House; April 11, 1863, siege of Suffolk; June 1, 1864, Cold Harbor, where he was taken prisoner, and transferred to Libby prison. Ten days later he was taken to Andersonville, where he was kept five months; then he was taken to Millen, Ga., from there to Savannah, Ga., and from there to Florence, N. C., where he was confined two weeks, and December 13, 1864, was paroled, and later exchanged and transferred to the Navy School Hospital, Maryland, where he remained until the close of the war. He was mustered out in 1865, and returned to his home in Clymer, N. Y., a broken-down veteran, and only 23 years old. The hardship and exposure of a soldier's life on the field he could have endured as well as did any of his older and age-hardened comrades, but the reason of his prematurely-wrecked constitution is told in the terrible records of Libby and Andersonville and other Confederate prisons, with their fearful tales of hardship and suffering. His lot was not unlike that of many thousands of other brave hearts, and the marvel is that any of them survived their terrible experiences. After his return to Clymer, N. Y., Mr. Markham lived on a farm until 1882, when he began preaching at Ashford, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., two years, and has served churches at Bear Lake, Warren county, Pa., two years; Wayne Valley, Pa., seven years, and in 1894 he came to Union City. He was married November 12, 1865, to Mary E., daughter of Stephen B. and Martha C. (Lopez) Wright, of Freehold, Pa. To them have been born five children: Ira L., Julia A. (Mrs. Lynn C. Holdridge, of Chautauqua, N. Y.), Letta M. (deceased), Stephen R., Ethel M. Mr. Markham is a member of the G. A. R., I. O. O. F., the P. O. S. of A., and is a Prohibitionist.

John Landsrath (deceased) was born in Wiesbaden, Germany, December 8, 1822, and was a son of Anton and Eliza Landsrath, the former a German soldier who fought at the battle of Waterloo, and afterwards was given a position as revenue officer for bravery as a soldier. John Landsrath was second in a family of five children, was reared and educated in Germany, and engaged in the mercantile business there until 1847, when, in company with his brother, he emigrated to America, settling in Hartford, Conn., where he studied the English language for about a year, and in the latter part of 1847 went to Philadelphia and enlisted in Co. H, 2d Dragoons, and served in the Mexican war about a year under Captain Hunter, seeing active service under General Taylor. He was discharged at Jefferson barracks, near St. Louis, in 1848. Returning in 1848, he worked as a tinner in Buffalo and Dunkirk, N. Y.; he then went to Jamestown, and was in the hardware business there two years, and in 1853 came to Union City and engaged in the hardware trade, opening the first store of the kind in the town in 1853. Mr. Landsrath, by his skill as a workman and tact as a business man, built up an extensive trade in Union City. In 1868 he erected a large store, where he, with his son, John A., as a partner (until he died, in 1880, and then with E. B.) carried on a paying business until 1888, when they sold out. Mr. Landsrath, in addition to his hardware business, had a variety of interests, being partner in a barrel factory for a number of years, and also an extensive oil operator, buying and selling in large lots. He was one of Union City's most enterprising and foremost citizens and did much for the development of the town. Of strong character and sterling qualities, he was a man universally respected. As a loyal citizen, his patriotism was manifested in a substantial way by his service in the Mexican war. In 1861 he aided in recruiting and was made a captain in McLane's regiment of volunteer infantry, which went to Pittsburg and remained inactive until the expiration of its time. Mr. Landsrath was twice married: First in Germany, his wife dying about a year after marriage. He was married a second time May 8, 1851, to Miss Lydia H., daughter of Eliphalet and Belle (Carter) Burnham, natives of Hartford, Conn., who came to Chautauqua county, New York, in the pioneer days. Four children were born of this union: John Anton (deceased), Grace E. (deceased), Clement L. (deceased) and Eliphalet B., who was born, reared and educated in Union City, and was in business with his father, being a partner from 1885 until 1888, when they disposed of the business, E. B. becoming proprietor of the Sunnyside Stock Farm, where he handles thoroughbred Percherons, imported from France. He owns five very valuable stallions. His farm is located a short distance from Union City, and consists of about 200 acres of first-class land. He was united in marriage October 20, 1885, to Anna G., daughter of Lyman B. and Martha (Johnson) Hill, of Union City. This union has been blessed by the birth of three children: John A., Mary H. and Mildred G. John Landsrath died February 15, 1890, after an illness of two weeks. By his death Union City lost one of its most valued citizens. He was an honored member of the Presbyterian congregation, rendering valuable assistance during the building of that edifice. He was also a member of the Masonic order.

Henry R. Briggs, agent, Union City, Pa., was born in Union City July 15, 1864, and is the eldest of four children of William and Clara (Sturdevant) Briggs, natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. Briggs was reared and educated in Union City, and after his school days he was employed in a meat market, which business he followed for seven years. He then found employment in Cathfish Bros' mills for five years, and later worked for Haniel Clark about four years. In 1893 he engaged in the insurance business, representing some of the old line companies. At the present time he is city police officer, and has proven himself to be efficient and energetic. Mr. Briggs was united in marriage May 5, 1892, to Miss Maggie T., daughter of Patrick and Helen Faloon, natives of Ireland. Mrs. Briggs died July 21, 1894. On August 28, 1895, Mr. Briggs was married to Miss J. Freda West, of Erie, Pa., at Cutting, N. Y. Mr. Briggs is a staunch Republican and an active politician.

Delos A. Wright, general produce dealer, Union City, Pa., born in Busti, Chautauqua county, N. Y., May 13, 1840, is a son of William and Elizabeth (Kelso) Wright, natives of Otsego county, New York. William came to Chautauqua county, New York and followed farming for a number of years, then came to Crawford county, where he remained until his death. The family consisted of nine children: George W.; Sarah E. (deceased), wife of Levi Pierce, of Garland, Pa.; Mary A., widow of Joseph Barlow, Richmond township, Crawford county, Pa.; John W., a soldier of the late war, who was numbered among the missing; Delos A., Horace K., Watsburg, Pa.; Doctor W., Townville, Pa.; Anna E., now Mrs. Bri Hill, of Richmond township, Crawford county, Pa.; and Henry H. Delos A. was reared and educated in Crawford county, and followed farming until 1873, when he began the manufacture of butter and cheese, operating three factories located at Centerville, Glenville Station and Little Cooley. He sold out these interests in 1876, went to Saegertown, Pa., where he manufactured and dealt in butter and cheese. In 1882 he came to Union City and established a general produce store, which is one of the most extensive and prosperous in this part of the State. Mr. Wright has as his assistant his son, Robert L., a young man of extensive business experience. Their strict and honorable business relations with the public has established them in the esteem of the community. Besides the general store at Union City, Mr. Wright has large lumber interests at Parrish, Forest county, Pa., where he operates a plant that will manufacture 30,000 feet of lumber daily. He employs about fifty men at this place, and also has a general store at Parrish. Mr. Wright is one of the enterprising, substantial business men of Erie county, and his large business interests have given him a wide acquaintance throughout the western part of the State. He is pleasant to meet, whether in a business or social way. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church at Union City, belongs to the Masonic order, the I. O. O. F. and the Grange. Mr. Wright has been married three times: the first time in April, 1865, to Miss Virginia, daughter of David and Polly (Lyon) White, natives of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Two children were born of this marriage: John W., born September 24, 1868, educated in the Crawford county and Union City schools, and in 1886 he entered the Jefferson Medical College, graduating in the class of '89. In 1890 he took a course at the lying-in hospital, and in 1891 located at Watsburg, where he has built up an extensive practice. Robert L. was born November 27, 1869, and was reared by his uncle, Levi Pierce, at Garland, Pa., where he attended the public schools, and later attended school in Philadelphia. Mrs. Virginia Wright died November 11, 1871, of consumption. Mr. Wright was again married in 1873 to Mary, daughter of George and Sarah (McCullough) Charnier, natives of England. One child was born of this union, Fred D. Mrs. Mary Wright died in April, 1874. Mr. Wright married the third time, in 1879, to Miss Edna J., daughter of James D. and Luduskie (Drake) Minniss. James D. Minniss was born in Meadville, Pa., in 1826, a son of John and Sarah A. (Scowden) Minniss, natives of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, who were early settlers of Crawford county. His father died in 1828, and his mother subsequently married Dr. Silas Taylor, of Athens township, where James was reared and educated. He read law with Hon. A. B. Richmond, and was admitted to the bar in Meadville February 17, 1859. He was very much attached to his profession, and was a careful, prudent, intelligent counsellor and practitioner. His death occurred October 30, 1888, after an lingering illness. Mr. and Mrs. Wright have three children: Hortense E., William and Gertrude.

Michael J. Tansey, of the firm of Tansey & Warner, proprietors of the Johnson House, Union City, Pa., born in Belleville, Upper Canada, May 17, 1851, is a son of Michael and Ellen (Murphy) Tansey, natives of County Sligo, Ireland, who came to America in April, 1848, settling in Belleville, Canada, and remaining there until 1865; then they came to Union City, where the former died December 25, 1872, and the latter, January 10, 1892. They were the parents of seven children, four boys and three girls, only two of whom are living, Michael, and Ellen, now Mrs. John Skivington. Mr. Tansey was reared and educated in Belleville, Canada, and Union City. After leaving school he entered the employ of Woods & Johnson, barrel manufacturers, and worked for them twelve years. He was then employed by J. D. Wescott, broom-handle manufacturer, and eighteen months later engaged in the bottling business, operating the Union City Bottling Works from 1883 to 1887. At the latter date he, in partnership with Mr. Warner, became the proprietor of the St. Charles Hotel, and conducted it satisfactorily to the public and successfully for all concerned until 1890, when they took charge of the Johnson House, and are doing a thriving business. Mr. Tansey was united in marriage October 15, 1884, to Miss Caroline, daughter of Frederick and Fredricka M. (Lembeck) Warner, natives of Wurtemberg, Germany, who came to America in 1850, settling in Clyde, N. Y., where the father followed his trade as a baker until 1861, when the family came to Union City, the father working at coopering until July 20, 1894. They were the parents of six children: Caroline, Fred E., Charles A., Frank E., Minnie, and Kittie (deceased). To Mr. and Mrs. Tansey have been born three children: Kittie, Fred and John. Mr. Tansey is identified with the Democratic party and is a member of the Catholic Church. Fred E. Warner, junior member of this firm, was born November 11, 1859, in Clyde, N. Y., was reared and educated in Union City, and after leaving school he entered the employ of Nelson Waters, who was at that time a hotel proprietor, and worked for him two years, going from there to the Johnson House with Mr. Hallenbeck for two years. In 1884, in partnership with Chris. Barr, he conducted the St. Charles Hotel until 1886, when this partnership was dissolved and the present partnership with Mr. Tansey, formed. Mr. Warner's experience in the hotel business, together with his genial disposition, makes him popular with all who meet him, whether in a business or a social way. He is ever ready to contribute to the comfort of the guests and patrons of the house. In politics he is a staunch Democrat.

James Parsons, retired, is the head of his branch of the Parsons family in America. He was born September 11, 1811, in County Hereford, England, and is the second in a family of nine children of James and Elizabeth (Davis) Parsons, natives of England, and of Saxon descent. James was reared and educated in England and followed farming until 1844, when he came to America, settling in Michigan, where he lived twelve years. In the early days of the California gold excitement he started for the gold fields by the overland route and remained there two years, when he returned to Michigan and moved the family to Erie county, Pennsylvania, settling in Concord township, where he operated his large farm until 1884, when he retired and went to live with his son John. Although 85 years old, he is hale and hearty and reads easily without glasses. He was married in England to Miss Ann, daughter of Thomas Roberts. She died July 25, 1879, at the age of 63 years. Eight children were born to this union: James, Robert and John, born in England; Henry, born on the ocean; Selina H., Emily A., Myra and Charles, born in America. John was born in Monmouthshire, England, March 15, 1841, was reared and educated in Michigan and Pennsylvania, and after leaving school he worked in the oil regions for four years. He then returned to Erie county and has followed farming and the mason's trade since. In 1868 he purchased his present property, which consists of a farm of fifty-five acres, which he uses for dairy purposes. He was united in marriage September 15, 1861, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Dr. John and Sophia (McDougal) Lilley, natives of New York. To this union have been born five children: Clarence Arthur, Lilly May, now wife of Fred Wade of Union City; Frederick E., Will F. and Marie A. Will F. graduated from Luce's Business College June 2, 1891, and has been employed since in the capacity of clerk in the Union City post-office until October, 1894, when he was appointed deputy postmaster under John C. McLean. Will F. and Marie A. are both talented singers and are residents of Union City. The family are members of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Mr. Parsons is a staunch Republican.

G. Watson Johnson, merchant, Union City, Pa., born in Prospect, Oneida county, N. Y., June 16, 1850, is a son of Garrett B. and Charlotte E. (Hopkins) Johnson, natives of Madison county, New York. Garrett B. Johnson was born December 24, 1822. His father, a native of Holland, entered the navy as a cabin boy when 15 years old, rose to the rank of captain, and fought in the war of 1812. Garrett B. was postmaster twelve years, and was in the mercantile business nine years at Prospect, N. Y. He came to Union City in 1863 and engaged in the mercantile business, which he followed for a few years. In 1870 he erected the Keystone Block, part being fitted for a hotel, which he conducted successfully for a number of years. He was married, in 1847, to Charlotte E., daughter of Orange Hopkins. Their surviving children are: Garrett W. and C. Edith (now Mrs. Charles E. B. Hunter). Garrett W. received his early training at his birthplace. At the age of 13 his parents came to Union City, and he completed his education in the public schools of the latter place and in Whitestown Seminary, Whites-town, N. Y. In April, 1871, he associated himself with Smiley Bros. in a general store at Union City and a branch store at Lowville, Pa. This partnership was dissolved, and he opened a store in the Keystone Block and conducted it successfully alone. Later, his father, G. B. Johnson, became a partner. This partnership lasted until 1883, when G. B. Johnson was succeeded by Mr. Hunter, at present a member of the firm. Both gentlemen are thorough business men, and the house, which employs ten efficient clerks, is one of the leading concerns of its kind in the State. Mr. Johnson was united in marriage, September 1, 1880, to Miss Georgia B., daughter of Frank and Harriet (McKinney) Kinnear, natives of Warren county, Pennsylvania. Three children were born of this union: Paul B., Lillian C. and Karl W. His wife died August 3, 1893, after a protracted illness. Mr. Johnson is a member of the I. O. O. F., Knights of Pythias and Royal Arcanum. He is also a member of the Episcopal Church. In politics Mr. Johnson has always been identified with the Democratic party.

Charles E. B. Hunter, merchant, Union City, Pa., born August 19, 1857, is a son of William and Jane (Arters) Hunter, natives of Pennsylvania, who were the parents of nine children: Thomas A., Jared W., William M., Mary A., Elizabeth M. (deceased), Jane E. (deceased), Ellen K., Charles E. B. and Sarah Alice M. Charles was reared and educated in Emlenton, Pa., and Baker University, Baldwin, Kan., whither the family removed when he was 13 years old. After his school days he engaged in farming and stock raising successfully until 1881, when he became interested in the mercantile business in Baldwin, Kan. In 1883 he came to Union City, Pa., and became a partner with G. W. Johnson in a large dry goods store. The store is centrally located in the Keystone Block, and is one of the most extensive concerns in Erie county, carrying, in addition to dry goods, a complete line of boots and shoes. Mr. Hunter is a thoroughly practical business man, and any enterprise he undertakes turns out a success. He is one of Erie county's most progressive business men, and is always interested in the welfare of Union City, where he is generally and favorably known. He was united in marriage, November 30, 1881, to Charlotte Edith, daughter of Garrett B. and Charlotte (Hopkins) Johnson, natives of New York. Two children have been born to this union: Edith Ethel and Charles Kenneth J. Mr. Hunter is identified with the Republican party; he is a member of Eureka Lodge, F. & A. M., of Union City; Temple Chapter, No. 215, of Erie; Jerusalem Council, No. 33, Mt. Olivet Commandery, No. 30, K. T., Erie; Pennsylvania Consistory, S. P. R. S., 32d degree, Pittsburg, Pa.; Zern Zemp Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Erie; Clement Lodge, No. 220, I. O. O. F.; Ninewall Encampment, I. O. O. F., and Royal Arcanum. Jared W. Hunter, brother of Charles, and a resident of Union City, was born in Venango county March 10, 1838, was educated at his birthplace and Allegheny College. After completing his education, he followed teaching several years, and in 1861 engaged in the lumber business in Warren county, following it until 1864, when he engaged in the oil business in Tidioute for one year, and then went into the mercantile business there; and in 1869 he came to Union City and became interested in the manufacture of pumps, and later added a planing mill. He operated these industries until 1886. Mr. Hunter is a member of the I. O. O. F. and belongs to the Masonic order.

Richard Shreve was a son of Colonel William Shreve, of Bordentown, N. J., who served seven years under Washington. Richard, sr., was born September 22, 1760, and his wife, Margaret, daughter of Thomas and Ann Neulobe, was born May 26, 1760. They were the parents of thirteen children, namely: William, Bairilla, Thomas, Ann, Israel, Charlotte, Richard, jr., Caleb, Benjamin, Charles, Isaac, Sarah and Margaret. Richard and his wife moved from Fayette county, Pennsylvania, in 1798, and settled in Bloomfield township, Crawford county, then a vast wilderness. It was here that this sturdy pioneer raised his family and cleared a farm. He died September 12, 1822. Richard Shreve was a miller by trade, and was at one time in the employ of George Washington, operating a mill for him. Richard Shreve, jr., fifth son of Richard Shreve, purchased land in Union township, Erie county, Pa., and until his death, February 10, 1872, followed farming. He held many offices of trust during his life in Union township. The children of Richard and Margaret (Kepler) Shreve were as follows: Lucinda (deceased), Josiah, Eliza (deceased), James, John K. (deceased), Solomon, Emily (deceased), Amos (deceased), Matilda, Milton (deceased), Rufus (deceased), Mary J. and Melissa. Josiah Shreve, the eldest son in this family, was born December 22, 1822, in Union, Erie county, Pa., where he was reared and educated. At the age of 21 years he went to Warren county, Pennsylvania, and engaged in lumbering for one year, and going from there to Centerville, he operated a saw-mill for two years. He also lumbered about a year at Riceville, and ran the river to Pittsburg. At the age of 24 years he purchased a tract of timber land in Union township, consisting of 100 acres, and by hard work and perseverance has cleared it all and made it one of the best farms in the county. Mr. Shreve has held many township offices, and has always been known to discharge his duty faithfully. He is a man of sound judgment, and a self-respecting gentleman, whether following the plow or in whatever position he is placed. He is a leading Granger in the State, and has done much to promote the interests of the farmer, always being on the alert to do them a good turn. He is an honored member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was a steward for twenty-five years, and in political matters is independent. He was married January 6, 1847, to Miss Belle, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Mulvin) Carroll, natives of Erie county. Three children have been born to this union, namely: Sidney A., now wife of J. P. Wilkins; George R. (deceased), and Almeda E., now wife of O. B. Sherwood. The next son in the family is James Shreve, who was born September 18, 1825, was reared and educated in Union township, and has followed farming the greater part of his life. When a young man he purchased a fine tract of land of 100 acres, and by perseverance and courage has cleared and improved it until it is a very valuable property. He was married December 25, 1849, to Miss Hannah A., daughter of David Sturgis, of Cattaraugus county, New York. Nine children were born to this union: Clinton J. (deceased), Mary B., Arthur M., Maggie E., Hattie F., Richard (deceased), Fred J., John P. and Kittie. Mr. Shreve is a Prohibitionist, and, in 1894, was elected justice of the peace for Union township. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and has been elder for twenty-five years. John K., the next in order of birth, was born February 10, 1827, and was reared in Union township, attended the public schools. He has followed farming the greater part of his life, although, when young, he did considerable lumbering. His present farm, which consists of ninety acres, was cleared and improved by himself. He was married January 8, 1859, to Miss Ellen L., daughter of Peter and Mary A. (Gates) Bellinger, natives of Ononda, N. Y. Six children have been born to this union: Clemont M., Carry A., Emma, Clarence, Gertrude and Clifton. Mr. Shreve is at this writing serving as school director, and is a Prohibitionist. Solomon was married to Mary Sturgis, daughter of David Sturgis, of Cattaraugus county, New York. Four children were the result of this union: Frank, Jennie L., George and Minnie. Milton married Christine, daughter of Rev. Mr. Cross, of Panama, N. Y. They are the parents of three children: Florence, Ralph and Clyde. Rufus was married to Adeline Odell, of Erie county. They have three children: Elbert, William and Bertha.

George Byron Kelley, teacher, Union township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Stark county, Ohio, in 1869, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Soule) Kelley. The father was a native of Cattaraugus county, New York, and the mother of Otsego county. John Kelley was a carpenter and builder, and soon after his marriage removed to Stark county, Ohio, where he worked at his trade and farming until his death, which occurred October 21, 1870. After the death of Mr. Kelley the family came to Erie county, Pennsylvania, and settled in Concord township, where they lived five years and then went to Ashtabula county, Ohio, where G. Byron was reared and educated. In the fall of 1884 the family returned to Erie county and purchased their present property, which consists of seventy-five acres of improved land. It is a first-class dairy and stock farm. G. Byron Kelly has followed teaching in the public schools and is also a skillful musician, making a specialty of the piano. He has a large class of piano pupils. In the spring of 1890 he went to Buffalo, N. Y., and clerked in a shoe store for two years, but owing to ill-health he was compelled to give it up. He, therefore, began teaching, first in the public schools of Buffalo and later in Union township. As a teacher he meets with the highest success, instilling that confidence in the pupils that always stimulates and encourages them to earnest study. Mr. Kelley is a Republican and attends the Presbyterian Church. Curtin Kelley was born in Grand Valley, Pa., May 10, 1864, and is the sixth in a family of seven children. He was reared and educated in Ashtabula county, Ohio, and has always followed farming, and in 1887 came to Union township and, with G. Byron, purchased their present property. Curtin was married November 5, 1884, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Frank Kineer, of Ashtabula county, Ohio. One daughter has been born to this union, Ethel G. Mr. Kelley attends the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a staunch Republican.

Rev. Kelsey T. Jaquay, minister, Ferdinand, Pa., was born September 21, 1856, at Sugar Grove, Warren county, Pa., and is the fourth in a family of five children of Theodore P. and Ursula (Alvoid) Jaquay. He was reared and educated at his birthplace and began life as a lumberman, working at it from youth up to 1884. He then went into the mercantile business keeping a general store at Corydon, Pa., for about six years. In September, 1891, he came to Ferdinand, Pa., as supply pastor, and in 1892 entered the Erie annual conference and was appointed as minister to fill the present charge for 1893-4. Mr. Jaquay is a pleasant and affable gentleman, and is devoted to his high calling. He was united in marriage October 10, 1872, to Miss Alice, daughter of William H. and Maryetta (Meriahen) Black, natives of Corydon, Pa. They have three living children: Frank, Jennie and Paul. Mr. Jaquay is a strong advocate in the cause of temperance and votes the Prohibition ticket.

John Cox (deceased) was born in County Dublin, Ireland, June 3, 1834, and was the second in a family of five children of John and Catherine (Archibald) Cox, natives of Ireland. John was reared and educated in his native place, and in 1854 embarked for America, where he landed safely and settled in Warren county, Pennsylvania, where he followed farming for six years. In 1858 he came to Union City, where he lived two years and then purchased the farm about four miles from the city, where the family now reside. The farm consists of 106 acres of fertile and well-tilled land. It is used principally for dairy purposes. Mr. Cox was married August 19, 1858, to Miss Mary, daughter of John and Nancy (Pohcn) McKendren, natives of the County Mayo, Ireland, who came to America in 1841, settling in Union township, among the early settlers of the county. To this union were born eight children, namely: John and Thomas (twins), Mary, now Mrs. Daniel Miller, of Titusville, Pa.; James, who resides at home; Anna, now Mrs. John McConlogue, of Center Point, W. Va.; Nellie, Kate and Margaret (deceased). Mr. Cox died January 8, 1892, after a short and severe illness of two weeks. He was stricken with pneumonia. He was a man of good principles and a good neighbor, a kind father and faithful husband. His sudden death was universally regretted. In religious matters Mr. Cox was a Catholic. Politically he was a Democrat.

Charles H. Bush, farmer and lumberman, Union City, Pa., was born December 14, 1840, at Jamestown, N. Y., and is the elder in a family of two children of Luther and Maria (Thomas) Bush, natives of New York. Charles H. was reared and educated in New York and when 14 years of age came to Union township, where the father worked as a millwright, carpenter and cabinetmaker. Charles remained with his father until 22 years of age, when he went West, visiting most of the States and Territories, and roughing it for four years. In 1870 he returned to Union township and engaged in the farming and lumbering business, which he has since followed. In 1870 he purchased fifty acres of his present farm and in 1872 bought enough more to make it 117 acres. He has a fine dairy and stock farm and has been an extensive cattle dealer. His farm is finely situated and has substantial buildings on it. Mr. Bush was united in marriage March 11, 1872, to Miss Mary A., daughter of Samuel Lilley, of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Bush is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is a staunch Republican.

Merrick B. Chamberlin, farmer, Union City, Pa., was born in Chautauqua county, New York, August 8, 1830, and is the third in a family of five children of Eli and Caroline (Barnes) Chamberlin, natives of New York State. When only a lad of 7 years his parents died and left him on his own resources. He drifted around, working summers and attending school winters, until he soon had enough means to take a course in the Jamestown Academy. After leaving school he came to Union City and engaged in the cabinet-making trade, which he had learned when quite young, and followed it until about 1863, when he went to Louisville, Ky., and took a course at the Louisville Business College. After graduating there he taught bookkeeping in that city until 1866, when he returned to Union City and started the first cabinet shop in the town. He followed that business twelve years, during which time he served as justice of the peace. In 1873 he was elected a director of the poor of Erie county, and served three years. In the faithful discharge of his duties of this office he gained the confidence of the tax-paying public, as well as the gratitude of the many unfortunate dependents of his county. In 1879 he went to the oil country and engaged in the milk business, and remained there three years. In 1881 he came to Union county and settled on the old Smiley homestead, where he has since resided. He was married September 7, 1858, to Jane E., daughter of Moses and Jane (Thompson) Smiley, one of the oldest and most respected families in Erie county. Three children were born to this union: Emma, now Mrs. Dr. Smith, Paducah, Ky.; Elmer (deceased) and Blanch, Mrs. Peter Edwards. Mrs. Chamberlin departed this life December 1, 1890. Her husband was very much devoted to her, and her death, although not unexpected, was no less a terrible blow to him. Mr. Chamberlin has always been a Republican, and during Lincoln's administration was appointed postmaster of Union City, and held said office until Johnson's administration. He has, during recent years, been identified with the Prohibition party.

Anthony M. Holden, farmer, Union City, Pa., was born in Rockdale township, Crawford county, Pa., July 14, 1843, and is the eldest in a family of three children of Stephen and Sarah (Boyd) Holden, natives of Pennsylvania. They were the parents of three children: Anthony, Adalaide B. (deceased) and Liddie J. Anthony M. was reared and educated in the public schools of his birthplace, and was also tutored by his father, who was a man of education. After his school days he worked on his father's farm until the war broke out, when he enlisted September 6, 1864, in Co. B, 211th P. V. I., under Captain McLane. On September 16th he reached the seat of war, and participated in the battles of Bermuda Hundred, Hatches' Run, Port Steadman, Weldon Railroad and Petersburg. Mr. Holden was a brave soldier, and although he sustained no wounds, his health was so seriously impaired that he cannot do much manual labor. He was mustered out of the service June 9, 1865, at the close of the war. He returned to Crawford county and lived there until 1868, when he came to Erie county, living in Union City and other places in the county until the spring of 1894, when he purchased his present farm of seventy-five acres, which is located on the Wattsburg road. His farm is in excellent condition, and he uses it chiefly for dairying purposes. Mr. Holden has been twice married. He was first united in marriage to Miss Esther, daughter of John and Martha (Kelley) Jarvis, natives of Crawford county. Two children were born to this union, Bert and Beryl, the latter being the wife of George Fullerton. Mrs. Holden died January 16, 1875, and her death was a sad bereavement to those who were fortunate enough to be on terms of intimacy with her. Mr. Holden was again married August 24, 1890, to Ellen M., daughter of Jonathan and Julia (Rockwood) Parker, natives of New York. Mr. Holden is a member of the P. O. S. of A. and the Grand Army of the Republic. In politics he is a staunch Republican.

John Cupples, farmer, Union City, Pa., born in County Down, Ireland, October 31, 1830, is a son of Andrew and Mary (Hare) Cupples, natives of Ireland. The father died in Ireland, and the mother, with her family, which consisted of four children—Alexander (since deceased), John, Mary J. and Sarah Ann (since deceased)—came to America in 1847 and settled in Waterford township. John remained on the farm until the death of his mother in 1856, when he sold out and purchased his present farm in Union township. When he settled on his present place it was a dense wilderness, which, under the patient application of his pioneer ax, has been converted into fertile fields of unexcelled productiveness. The life of this gentleman bears testimony, in language not to be misunderstood, to what is possible for men with willing hearts and hands to accomplish. He was married April 10, 1860, to Miss Susan, daughter of William and Sarah Middleton, natives of Ireland; the former was born February 11, 1809, in Ireland, and came to America in 1827, settling on French creek, in Waterford township, where he reared a large family, and was well known as one of the leading citizens of the township during his life. He died October 29, 1855. Mrs. Middleton was born April 10, 1819, and came to America with her parents when 11 years of age. She settled in Waterford township. After a life of usefulness she died September 27, 1864. Mr. and Mrs. Cupples have six children: Verma, Mrs. Lou Hatch, of Union City; Genevieve, Duluth; Minnie, Iris V., Mrs. Clark Rice; Curtis, Bertha, Mrs. Sheridan Hamilton, of North East. Mr. Cupples is a member of the M. E. Church, and a Prohibitionist. He has been school director for several terms.

William B. Kimball, farmer, Union City, Pa., was born in Cananadaga, Ontario county, N. Y., December 29, 1822, and is a son of Ira and Eliza (Wilds) Kimball, the former a native of Vermont, and the latter of Massachusetts. William was the only son in a family of five children. When he was 15 years of age the family removed to Cananadaga county, New York, where they remained until 1847, when they removed to Union township and settled on tract No. 135, which was still a wilderness, where the screech of the wild turkey and the howling of the wolves were not unfamiliar sounds to this hardy pioneer. His heaven of happiness was to wander through the limitless forest with his trusty rifle as his companion, and he seldom returned without a good supply of game. He has cleared a farm of 110 acres, where he now resides. His father served in the war of 1812 as a drummer boy, being but 18 years of age at the close of the war. Mr. Kimball was married December 13, 1848, to Miss Salina, daughter of Charles and Aleinda (Fletcher) Chandler, natives of Connecticut. Salina was the youngest in a family of seven children: Philetus (deceased), Louisa, Eunice (deceased), George (deceased), Simon and Elvira (deceased). To Mr. and Mrs. Kimball have been born five children: Eugene, Ella, Mrs. Henry Avery, Waterford; May, Mrs. Elenezer Mackey, of Union City; William I., and W. Scott. In politics Mr. Kimball has always been a staunch Republican, and has held the offices of assistant assessor, school director fifteen years, road commissioner three terms, constable and tax collector. He is one of the substantial and enterprising citizens of Erie county.

Henry Dick, farmer, Union City, was born in LeBeauf township, Erie county, September 9, 1836, and is a son of James M. and Maria (Golden) Dick, natives of Madison county, New York. James M., with his family, came to Pennsylvania in 1831 and settled in Waterford, and later removed to LeBeauf. In 1855 they removed to Union township, where the father followed farming until his death, October 31, 1859. His wife survives him, and at this writing is 89 years of age, being remarkably active for a woman of her age, and in appearance is not over 60. This family consisted of ten children: David (deceased), Levi, Henry, Mary A. (deceased), Lorenzo, Ira, Caroline (deceased), Robert (deceased), Eunice (deceased) and Sarah J. Henry was reared and educated in Waterford township, and, after leaving school, remained at home until 21 years of age, when he moved to Union township and purchased a farm. In 1862 he secured the old Kimball homestead, where he still resides. He was married March 2, 1862, to Miss Marietta, daughter of Ira and Eliza Wilds Kimball, of Union township. Two children have been born to this marriage: Jennie R., Mrs. M. W. Fairchild, of Union township; and Harry T. In May, 1861, Mr. Dick enlisted in Co. H, 83d P. V. I., under command of Colonel McLean, of Erie, and was in the service three months. He is a member of the G. A. R., and a strong advocate of the principles of Prohibition.

Henry S. Roberts (deceased), was born in Cheung, N. Y., June 27, 1841, and was a son of Nothern and Eliza (Hoxie) Roberts, natives of New York. He was reared and educated at the place of his birth, and when he was a young man the family moved to Rochester, N. Y., where he was, in company with his father, in the lumber business. In 1861 he enlisted in Co. B, 107th P. V. I., and served through the war with the same regiment, the brilliant record of which is too well known to every student of our national history to be repeated here. Mr. Roberts was with his regiment in every engagement, and was always found at the front where the fight was the hottest, and yet, like many other favored heroes of that great civil conflict, escaped unscathed, but it was not because he courted safety or flinched from his duty, even in the darkest hour of peril. Let it be said of him that "He was a soldier every inch." He was mustered out of service in July, 1865, by general order of the war department, and returned to Rochester, where he resumed his former business, that of a lumber dealer, which he followed until 1873. During the Indian troubles in the West, about this time, he enlisted in the United States regular army, and went to the Black Hills, where he participated in many engagements with the Indians until the hostilities of the red man ceased for the time being. In 1873 he started to come home, but circumstances indicate that he must have died while on the way to Minnesota. He was married April 16, 1864 to Miss Frances P., daughter of Greenleaf C. and Fanny (Dennison) George, the former a native of New Hampshire, and the latter of New York. Three children have been born to this union: Emma L., now wife of Samuel Passmore, real estate agent, Olean, N. Y.; Etta M., now Mrs. William Russell, an extensive manufacturer of New York city; and J. Charles, of Elgin, Pa. Mrs. Roberts was re-married September 7, 1883, to Alonzo White, one of the pioneers, who died January 20, 1891. He was a life-long member of the M. E. Church, and a prominent Republican.

Carroll Family.—Among the pioneers of Erie county, no family is more prominent or more respected than the Carroll family. Ferdinand Carroll, the first representative of this family, was born in 1751, in the northern part of Ireland, and was the youngest of a large family of children. In his boyhood he was sent to reside with a wealthy uncle in London, but a fellow traveler stole his valise, which contained all his clothes except those he was wearing, and having too much pride to face his uncle in such a condition, he apprenticed himself to a weaver and served seven years at his trade. At the age of 24 years he was married to Isabella Johnstone, and they were the parents of twelve children, six sons and six daughters, one son and two daughters dying young. The two eldest sons, upon attaining their majority, determined to seek their fortunes in America, but Ferdinand, unwilling to part with his children, decided to emigrate with the family to the new world. He accordingly sold his life lease in the land he held for enough to bear his expenses on the journey, and the whole family, in the spring of 1801, embarked on Dublin to New York in an old war vessel. The family then consisted of the husband, wife, and ten living children, the eldest, Samuel, being 25 years of age, and Isabella, the youngest, being but 2 years old. The latter died of the measles during the voyage and was buried at sea. The voyage was a slow and tedious one, and after eight weary weeks the passengers were landed at New Castle, Del., instead of New York. The monotony of the journey was relieved by music rendered by Ferdinand, who was an excellent player on the violin. The passengers were delighted when land was sighted, and they were glad to get away from the captain, who was an arrogant tyrant and was arrested on the arrival of the vessel in America. Soon after arriving, Ferdinand set out with his family for Chillicothe, O., and came as far as Pittsburg, when, hearing of fever and ague at his intended destination, he gave up the idea of going there. The inducements held out by the Holland Land Company, which was to give 100 acres free for making a settlement and staying five years on a 400-acre tract, next took his attention, and hearing of such land situated on the head waters of French creek, a tributary of the Allegheny, Ferdinand and his two eldest sons, Samuel and George, started up the river to Franklin, and finding it hard to decide what part of the country to settle in, Ferdinand decided to settle it by chance. He therefore placed a stick on end, as near perpendicular as possible, and said he would go whichever way it fell, which was towards Meadville, for which place he immediately set out. After arriving at that town he was directed on to Union, where he came, and purchased from Andrew Halsey the right of settlement and improvements on tract 159, in the southwest of Union township. The consideration was $30 in gold. Ferdinand then returned to Pittsburg for his family and household goods. The family, with their earthly possessions, were brought from Pittsburg on horseback, and in due time were installed in their one-story shanty, built of poles, which was called by Ferdinand and his family "Castle Halsey." It was now the fall of 1801, and Ferdinand completed the settlement of tract 159, and secured a clear deed to 100 acres, which was left to his youngest son, William, who willed it to his fourth son, George W., who at this writing owns it. Ferdinand was 50 years of age on arriving at "Castle Halsey," and his family consisted of his wife and nine living children, namely: Samuel, George, Phoebe, Jane, Betsey, Mary, James, Thomas and William. In 1809 he left his farm and moved to the Moravian grant, near what is now known as LeBeauf Station, where he rented a place for a term of years, but it not proving profitable, he returned to his own farm, which in the meantime had grown up with a heavy second growth of timber. In early times the small timber was cut away and the large timber girdled and left standing, and when Ferdinand returned he found the large dead trees had blown down among the young timber, consequently it was harder to clear than formerly. But he was courageous and was not easily daunted. He therefore set to work with a will, and the primeval forest gave way under his steady strokes to the cleared meadow land. He died February 1, 1831, at the advanced age of 80 years. His death was caused by a cancer on the lip. His wife died in September, 1830, at the age of 70 years. Samuel settled on French creek, in the Middleton settlement. He died January 28, 1836, at the age of 60, leaving no issue. George commenced a settlement on tract 147, but his family were not contented to live in the woods, and he purchased a farm about two and one-half miles below Union City, on the creek. He was the father of seven children: John, James, Mary, Isabella, Margaret and Hannah. John, who lived near the old homestead, was the father of eight children: Frank, Sophia, John, Charles, Maria, Albert and Alfred (twins), and Emma. James, the second in this branch of the family, moved to Iowa. James, son of Ferdinand, settled near the west line of Union township, where he died at the age of 84 years. He was the father of fifteen children. Thomas, the next son of Ferdinand in order of birth, settled near the west line of Union township, and was the father of nine children. He died at the age of 64 years. Wesley, the eldest son of Thomas, settled on a farm his father gave him, and was the father of seven children, three dying in childhood. Wesley's death occurred in 1879, at the age of 84 years. Jonathan M. Carroll was born at the old homestead October 2, 1855, and is the fourth in a family of seven children of Wesley and Phoebe (Organ) Carroll, the latter being a native of New York. Jonathan was reared and educated at his birthplace, and remained at home until 24 years of age. In 1888 he took possession of his present property, consisting of a farm containing sixty acres, which was willed to him by his father. He was united in marriage November 15, 1880, to Miss Olive, daughter of Levi and Mary (Shelmandine) Barnes, the former a native of New York and the latter of Philadelphia. Two children have been born to this union, Clarence E. and Winifred. Mr. Carroll is a Republican, and has served his township in the capacity of road commissioner and school director. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Fletcher S. Carroll, the next in order of birth in this family, was born at the homestead, where he now resides, November 27, 1858. He was reared in LeBeuf township and educated in the public schools of his birthplace and the Waterford Academy. After completing his education he returned to his home, where he has since followed farming, falling heir to the old homestead at his father's death, which consists of 100 acres of well cultivated land, twenty-five acres being a part of his grandfather's (Thomas Carroll) estate. In 1884 he began selling milk in Union City, and rapidly built up a substantial trade, which he supplies with a first-class article. Mr. Carroll was married December 23, 1879, to Miss Alice, daughter of Levi C. and Mary (Shelmandine) Barnes, of Union township. Three children have been born to this union, Wayne, Alta May and Mabel. Mr. Carroll is a staunch Republican, and a member of the Independent Order of Old Fellows. O. W. Carroll, tailor and clothier, Union City, Pa., is the next son in order of birth of Wesley and Phebe (Organ) Carroll. He was born July 6, 1860, was reared at his birthplace and educated in the public schools of his native place and the Waterford Academy. After completing his education he taught school for two years, and then came to Union City and purchased the furniture business of A. O. Gillett, which he conducted for two years, selling out at the end of that period, and the eighteen following months he devoted to trade throughout the Western States and Mexico. In 1883 he returned to Union City and engaged in the clothing business with Van Dusen, the firm continuing until 1890, when Mr. Carroll sold out and went into partnership with R. K. Lewis under the firm name of Lewis & Carroll, and at this writing are conducting a first-class merchant tailoring establishment. Mr. Carroll was married September 15, 1886, to Miss Jennie, daughter of David Carroll, of Cleveland, Ohio. Four children have been born to this union: Elsie, Rees, Clifford and Clifton (twins). Mr. Carroll is identified with the Republican party, and is a member of the Masonic order and the I. O. O. F. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Samuel J. Carroll, son of Thomas, lives in Bloomfield, Crawford county, Pa. Jonathan G., the next younger son of Thomas, lives on a part of the old homestead, and has two children, Solomon and Rose. The daughters of this family were Jane, Isabella, now wife of Josiah Shreve, and Margaret. William, youngest son of Ferdinand Carroll, was given the old homestead on tract 159, and was married to Hannah Slouson in 1820. Ten children were born to this union: James (deceased), Lucy (deceased), Mary A. (deceased), Lucilla (deceased), Esther (deceased), Charles S., fatally wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862, and died three days later. He was second lieutenant of the 145th Regt. P. V. I. David Carroll (deceased), son of William, who owned part of the old original tract, No. 159, was married in 1854 to Miss E. Coventry, who came from England when a child. They were the parents of seven children, namely: Ella, Jennie, Rosa, Etta, Fred, Hannah and George. George W., son of William, is now in possession of the greater part of the old homestead obtained from the Holland Land Company for settlement of tract 159. In 1871 George W. started a cheese factory, which has been running satisfactorily ever since, and in 1890 a postoffice was established, and the name of Ferdinand was chosen, in honor of the pioneer who made the first settlement on the tract. George W. was united in marriage in 1863 to Miss Susan A., daughter of Levi Barnes (one of the pioneers, who came from the east in 1820 and settled south of tract 159, where he died at 82 years of age). She is a woman of rare energy and business ability. Jonathan H., second son of William, lives on part of the homestead. He married Antoinette Myers in 1851; had three sons and one daughter: J. Burr, C. Eddie, Lotta (deceased) and Levidia. Esther, youngest child of William, wife of G. W. Brooks, had two sons, Glenn (deceased at 12), and George Clifton (deceased at 16). Eliza Jane, daughter of William, wife of S. B. Brooks, had seven sons and two daughters: Ashley J., Cassius, Charles S., Archibald, Elverdo C., William, George G., Phebe and Ruth. Mary, daughter of Ferdinand, never married. Jane married Jonathan Carroll, of Mercer county, Pennsylvania; Phebe married David Middleton, of Waterford township, Pennsylvania, and Betsey married John Richards of Brady's Bend, Pennsylvania.

George W. Brooks, farmer, Union City, Pa., was born in Harmon, Chautauqua county, N. Y., January 2, 1839, and is a son of James and Rhoda (Williams) Brooks, the former a native of Massachusetts, and the latter of Rhode Island. The family is of Scotch and German extraction, and were very early settlers in New England, coming many years before the Revolutionary war. Mr. Brooks is a great grandson of Colonel Collar, who was a distinguished officer in the Continental army during the Revolution. Those who are familiar with some of the minor historic adventures of the Revolutionary heroes will perhaps recall the incident of Col. Collar's narrow escape from being captured by the British at the time when American officers were at a premium in the English courts. He had left his quarters for a walk one morning and in the adventurous manner, which characterized his military career he strolled into an old house by the wayside, when he suddenly found himself surrounded by red coats, who outnumbered him by at least a half dozen. They demanded his surrender, but he did not understand the meaning of the word "Surrender," and immediately seized a large broken bottle which chanced to be at hand, and being a very tall and muscular man struck right and left with telling effect on the heads of his would-be captors. Thus he made his escape and also won a single-handed victory unarmed, save with the old bottle. James Brooks, sr., great-grandfather of George W. Brooks, also served throughout the Revolutionary war as a private, and James Brooks, jr., his grandfather, was a soldier all through the war of 1812. George W. Brooks is the youngest in a family of twelve children. He was reared in Chautauqua county, N. Y., where he received his early education, and when 16 years of age the family removed to LeBeuf township, and George completed his education in the Waterford academy. He then taught school four winters in LeBeauf and Union townships. In April, 1861, he enlisted in Company H, McLean's Regiment (afterward called the 83rd Reg.) for three months' service. After serving his time he was mustered out. August 15, 1862, he re-enlisted in Co. C, 16th Pa. Cavalry, under Major Swan. His first engagement was at Hartford Church, where they surrounded the Confederate pickets, capturing a large number of them. The next engagement was at Kelley's Ford, where General Avies took the 2d brigade and 2d division of the cavalry across the Rappahannock and attacked Stewart at Culpeper. This was the first cavalry engagement on the continent. The next engagement was at Chancellorsville. Then Stony Creek Station, Bull Run (second), Gettysburg, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Five Forks, Kelley's Ford, Cedar Mountain (cavalry engagement), Aldie (cavalry engagement), Middleburgh, Sulphur Springs, Shepardstown, Mine Run, Ecam's Station, Stony Creek Station, White Oak Swamp and Malvern Hill; besides numerous minor skirmishes. Near Saylor's Creek, Mr. Brooks was knocked from his horse and a squadron of rebel cavalry passed over him, their horses trampling him severely, injuring his head and spine, and at Saylor's Creek a bullet grazed his chin, cutting away a part of his beard. Here he was taken prisoner and was in the hands of the Confederates at the time of Lee's surrender. At Middleburgh a bullet perforated his cap cutting away a portion of his hair, and on two occasions his horse was shot dead under him. August 17, 1864, he was appointed by Andrew Curtin, second lieutenant Co. C, 16th Reg. P. V. Cav., and he held that commission until February, 1865, when he was detailed captain of Co. E, 16th P. V. Cav., and served in that capacity until he was mustered out by general order of the war department. The military record of Captain George W. Brooks speaks for itself, and he may truly be called a soldier of unmistakable loyalty and bravery, and however people may differ as to the truth of the hereditary doctrine, it cannot be denied that history, in this case, proved that military valor seems to be an inherent quality of Captain Brooks, as his illustrious ancestors furnish an almost unparalleled military record, which he has perpetuated. Captain Brooks has been twice married: August 20, 1865, to Miss Esther, daughter of William and Hannah (Slawson) Carroll, natives of Erie county. To this union were born two children: Glenn and Clifton, both deceased. His wife died September 11, 1880. He was again married March 16, 1882, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of Samuel J. and Caroline (Shreve) Carroll, of Erie county. Captain Brooks is a member of the G. A. R., and I. O. O. F., and a prominent Republican. In 1877 he purchased his present home, which consists of 160 acres of land.

Stephen B. Brooks, farmer, Ferdinand, Pa., was born at Harmony, Chautauqua county, N. Y., August 26, 1833, and is a son of James and Rhoda (Williams) Brooks (see sketch of George W. Brooks, a brother). He was reared and educated in New York State, and in 1856 the family removed to Pennsylvania and settled on the farm which is now owned by Stephen in Union township. His father was one of the early pioneers of the township, and, with the assistance of his sons, he cleared up a large portion of the homestead. He died April 8, 1887, at the advanced age of 91 years. The mother died January 29, 1874. Mr. Brooks not only oversees his farm of 134 acres, but is also traveling salesman for the E. Frank Cole Fertilizing Company, of New York city. He was united in marriage March 1, 1859, to Miss Eliza J., daughter of William and Hannah (Slawson) Carroll, natives of Erie county. To them have been born nine children: Ashley J., Cassius M., Phoebe A., now Mrs. Stanley Racey; Archie D., Elverdo C., William W., George G., and Ruth. Mr. Brooks is a Republican, member of the Baptist Church, Grange, and I. O. O. F. He is one of the representative men of Erie county.

Hubbard Taylor, farmer, Union City, Pa., was born in Bangor, Franklin county, N. Y., February 16, 1827, and is the second in a family of three children of Calvin and Polly (Osgood) Taylor, natives of Vermont. Mr. Taylor was reared and educated in his birthplace, and at an early age began railroading, being employed as foreman on the Ogdensburg R. R. for a number of years, also by the Allegheny Valley between Oil City and Pittsburg. When the A. & G. W. (now N. Y., P. & O. R. R.) was built he was employed as foreman for that company until 1874, when he came to Union township and purchased a farm of sixty-five acres, where he has since resided. He was married March 2, 1851, to Miss Almira C., daughter of Eli and Harriet (Butterfield) Gale, natives of New York State. One child, Adelbert F., was born to this union, August 2, 1856. Adelbert F. was reared and educated at Oil City, Pa., and has followed farming the greater part of his life. He was married December 10, 1879, to Miss Rose, daughter of Samuel and Laura (Wellman) Hood, natives of Pennsylvania. Five children have been born to this union: Bertha R. (deceased), Lester A., Mima E., Dwight O., and Herald. Adelbert is a Prohibitionist, while the father is identified with the Republican party. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Jefferson Triscuit, farmer, Union City, Pa., was born March 28, 1835, in Wayne township, Erie county, Pa., and is a son of Jesse and Sophia (Miles) Triscuit, the former a native of Massachusetts and the latter of Pennsylvania. Jesse came to Erie county early in life and settled in Wayne township, where he followed farming until his death. Nine children were born to Jesse and Sophia, namely: George (deceased), Julia, Jefferson, Marietta, Maria, Anson (deceased), Sophia, Jennie, and Lora (deceased). Jefferson was reared and educated at his birthplace, and when the war broke out he responded to the first call for volunteers in April, 1861, and enlisted in the old Erie regiment, and after the expiration of his term of enlistment he re-enlisted September 2, 1861, in Co. A, 11th P. V. I. He was in the engagements at Harper's Ferry, Little Washington, and Cedar Mountain, at the latter place being severely wounded, a minie-ball striking him in the breast, passing through his body and coming out below the right arm. He was taken to Culpeper Court House and placed on the floor of the Masonic Hall, where he lay for four days, when he was removed to Armory Square Hospital, Washington, where he stayed about a month, when he was sent to Camden Street Hospital, Baltimore, two months, and later to Convalescent Hospital, Concord street, remaining at the latter place until he was mustered out February 16, 1865, by reason of his inability to serve longer, owing to his serious wound. Mr. Triscuit was a loyal, brave-hearted soldier, and was always found where duty called him, and had he been able to remain in the service a captain's commission was awaiting him. He was orderly sergeant at the time he was wounded. After returning home he purchased his present property in Union township, which is pleasantly located on the Union City and Concord road. The farm consists of 110 acres of well-cultivated land. He also owns a large farm of 140 acres in Wayne township. Mr. Triscuit is a staunch Republican, and has held many offices of trust in the township and county. He has been auditor, assessor, constable and collector two terms, school director and director for the poor for Erie county two terms. As an officer he has always proven himself trustworthy and efficient. He is one of Erie county's most substantial and enterprising citizens. He was united in marriage September 10, 1863, to Miss Amy D., daughter of Ansel and Phebe (Morin) Estee, the former a native of Buffalo and the latter of Rochester, N. Y. There the family consisted of six children, namely: Morris M., a prominent candidate for governor of California in the fall of 1894; Louisa (deceased), Morin (deceased), Lyman (deceased), Phebe, and Florence (deceased). To Mr. and Mrs. Triscuit have been born four children: Grace M., now wife of Fred F. Ford, Hydetown, Pa., Nellie M., now Mrs. J. P. Hall of New York; Jay Guy, and Miss Jennie H. Mr. Triscuit is a member of the G. A. R., and the family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church.

John A. Bond, farmer, Union township, Union City, Pa., was born at East Ashford, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., and is the second in a family of eight children of Solomon and Maria (Coffon) Bond, natives of Vermont, who came to Cattaraugus county, New York, in 1830, and purchased a farm. John was reared and educated in his birthplace, and after leaving school went to Minnesota and engaged in farming, remaining there until August 14, 1862, when he enlisted in Co. A, 7th Minn. V. I., under Captain Cutler. The company was sent that summer to the Black Hills, to keep the Indians under subjection. They had an encounter with the redskins at Birch Cooley and Wood Lake, Minn., and at both places won victories over their enemies. They then marched eastward and captured straggling bands of Indians along the route until they reached Mankato, Minn., where the campaign ended. The company was stationed at Fairmount during the winter of 1862-3, and in the spring were sent to the Missouri river, and, all along the route, had encounters with their dusky foes, and after arriving at the Missouri a bloody battle was fought at a point where Apple creek flows into the Missouri. The redskins were nearly all killed or captured, only a few being able to make their escape. The company then returned to Fort Snelling, and after a month's delay moved down the river to St. Louis, was stationed there during the winter of 1863-4, and was then sent to Kentucky, and from thence to Memphis, Tenn., joining the 16th corps at the latter place. After a severe raid the company returned to Memphis and were sent to Little Rock to head off Rice, and Mr. Bond, being taken sick, was left at the latter place. He was at Little Rock three weeks, and then returned to his company in time to participate in the battle of Nashville. After this battle Mr. Bond was delegated to do duty at corps headquarters, and served in that capacity at Mobile, New Orleans, Fort Blakesley and Montgomery, until the close of the war. Mr. Bond was mustered out by general order of the war department August 16, 1865. Mr. Bond, while he did not participate in many bloody battles, saw hard service, and was coping with an enemy that was hard to meet in open battle. The marches were long and tedious, and at night, when they camped, they knew not what minute they would be surprised and scalped by the bloodthirsty red men. Soon after the war closed Mr. Bond came to Erie county, purchasing a farm in Franklin township, where he remained about four years. He then came to Union township, living on the farm of Jonathan Parks until 1880, when he purchased his present property of fifty-five acres, nicely located near Union City. He was married November 11, 1865, to Miss Melissa, daughter of Jonathan and Julia (Rockwood) Parks, natives of New York State. They have one child (adopted), Joseph D. Mr. Bond is a member of the G. A. R., I. O. O. F. and the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is identified with the Republican party, and has been township auditor for three terms.

O. D. LeBaron, farmer and mason, Union City, Union township, Pa., was born in Chautauqua county, New York, June 22, 1852, and is a son of Orlando A. and Susan (Clark) LeBaron, the former a native of New York State and the latter of Pennsylvania. O. D. was the only child, and obtained his education in his birthplace. After his school days were over he learned the mason's trade, and in 1873 came to Union township, where he has since resided, working at his trade and farming. In 1885 he purchased his present farm of forty-eight acres, and erected a fine brick house thereon, besides making many other substantial improvements which tend to make the home one of the pleasantest in the county. As a workman Mr. LeBaron is second to none, and has done some of the finest work in this section of the State. He is a gentleman of pleasing manners, and stands well in the community where he resides. He was married May 1, 1873, to Miss Clara, daughter of George and Charlotte (Johnson) Myers, natives of Chautauqua county, New York. Five children have been born to this union, namely: George, born June 13, 1876; Willie, born January 6, 1878; Carrie, born April 10, 1884; Lynn, born December 6, 1887, and Blaine, born January 24, 1893. Mr. LeBaron has always been identified with the Republican party.

Samuel P. Lord, farmer, Union township, Erie county, Pa., was born April 26, 1847, in Richmond township, Crawford county, and is a son of Zalmon and Maria (Mansfield) Lord, the former a native of Reading, Fairfield county, Conn., who was born in 1792, and in 1814 came to Pennsylvania, settling in Richmond township, Crawford county, where he followed farming until his death, which occurred March 10, 1872. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and his father, Gould Lord (grandfather of Samuel) served in the Revolutionary war. Samuel was reared and educated in his birthplace, and when but 16 years of age ran away from home and enlisted in the army, March 31, 1864, serving in Co. B, 12th Reg. Pa. Cav., under command of Capt. Daniel B. Lewis. His first initiation in the methods of warfare was at Strasburg, W.

Va., then at Lynchburg, Va., and Charlestown, Va. At the last-named battle his horse was shot, falling across his body and rupturing him, besides other severe injuries. He was taken prisoner at this place by Mosby's men and sent to Lynchburg (Va.) prison; here he was kept for three weeks, and then transferred to Libby, and July 27, 1864, sent to Andersonville, where he was kept until October, when he was transferred to Savannah, Ga., and from thence to Millen, Ga., where he remained until December 20th, when he escaped. The sick were to be paroled on a certain date, and a comrade of Mr. Lord's was among the list, but he died during the night, and Mr. Lord assumed his name and place, and succeeded in making good his escape. He went to Savannah, where he was put aboard the United States Hospital boat "Atlantic," for he was more dead than alive by exposure and torture at Andersonville, and taken to Annapolis, Md., to the Naval School Hospital, where he was under treatment three weeks. He then came home on a furlough, and remained sixty days, joining his regiment February 23, 1865. He participated in the battles of Port Royal and Hamilton, and was mustered out June 28, 1865, by general order of war department. Mr. Lord is a descendant of a patriotic family of soldiers, and has done credit to his country, his ancestors and himself. After the war closed he returned to his home in Crawford county, and remained there until 1876, when he came to Union township. In 1881 he purchased his present property, which consists of fifty acres of well-cultivated land near the P. & E. R. R., between Union City and Elgin. Mr. Lord was married April 2, 1866, to Miss Fannie E., daughter of Harvey and Caroline (Boyce) Knickerbocker, natives of Erie county. To this union have been born sixteen children, namely: William H., Emma, now wife of Hazen Allen, Union City, Pa.; Clara L., now wife of Levi Peterson; Calvin E., Harvey S., Charles L. (deceased), Benjamin G., Flora E., Dexter A., Kittie B., Frederick J., Paul M., Carl M. (deceased), Caroline M., Samuel P. and Joseph H. Mr. Lord is identified with the Republican party, and is a member of the P. O. S. of A.

Daniel J. Brown, farmer, Union township, Union City, was born June 7, 1842, and is the seventh in a family of twelve children of Samuel and Charity (Staley) Brown, natives of New York. Daniel J. was reared in Amity township, where the family located when he was a year old. He attended the public schools, and in 1864 enlisted in Co. L, 4th Pa. Cav., and later transferred to Co. I, Pa. Cav. His first experience was at the battle of the Wilderness, where his horse was shot, falling on him and breaking his breast-bone and nose, and also rupturing him seriously. He was taken to the hospitals at Fredericksburg, Washington, Pittsburg and Philadelphia, and was mustered out of the service by general order of war department in July, 1865. Although Mr. Brown's experience was short in the service, yet he went through with more than many whose time there was longer. He was always found at his post, never shirking duty. After returning home Mr. Brown engaged in farming, which he has followed since. He has been twice married: first in 1865, to Louisa, daughter of Lawson and Roxy (Perry) Butler, of Lake Pleasant, Pa. Three children were born to this union, namely: Samuel (deceased), Lilly (deceased), and Henry (deceased). His wife died in 1876, and he was remarried in 1877 to Caroline, daughter of Rufus and Mary (Martin) Benson, natives of New York. Five children were born to this marriage: Nellie, Louis, Bertie, Ella J., and Harriet. Mr. Brown is a staunch Republican. He attends the Baptist Church.

Thomas Jefferson Shepard, farmer, Union City, Pa., was born in Union township, November 7, 1844, and is the eldest in a family of nine children of Alexander and Clarissa (Harris) Shepard, natives of Pennsylvania. Thomas was reared and educated at his birthplace, and after leaving school enlisted in Co. L, 12th Pa. Cav., in March, 1864, and was immediately sent to the seat of war. He participated in the battles of Harper's Ferry, Winchester and several union engagements. Mr. Shepard saw hard service, and was mustered out July 24, 1865, by general order of war department. He returned to Union township and engaged in lumbering until 1871, when he removed to Warren county, Pennsylvania, following the same business there until 1892, when he returned to Union township and purchased his present property, which consists of 105 acres of well-cultivated land, situated on the Union and Beaver Dam road, two miles from the former place. Mr. Shepard was united in marriage December 22, 1868, to Miss Rhoda A., daughter of Charles and Permelia (Price) Wade, natives of Union township. To this union have been born eight children, namely: Clarissa, Permelia, Lenora, Jennie, Charles (deceased November 26, 1887), Cleveland, Oscar and Ora Alexander. The two eldest are teachers in the public schools of Union township. Mr. Shepard is a member of the G. A. R., and in politics is a Democrat. He has held several township offices, such as commissioner, school director and judge of elections. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Day Linn Triscuit, farmer, Union City, Union township, Pa., was born August 28, 1854, and is a son of George and Mary J. (Heath) Triscuit, natives of Pennsylvania. Jesse Triscuit, grandfather of Day, was brought from Massachusetts when quite young, the family settling in Wayne township, Erie county, when it was a dense wilderness. Jesse and Sophia (Miles) Triscuit were the parents of nine children, namely: George (deceased), Jefferson, Marietta, Maria, Anson (deceased), Sophia, Jennie, Lora (deceased), George, father of Day, was born in Wayne township, reared and educated in his birth place, and followed farming until his death, which occurred February 17, 1871. George and Mary J. (Heath) Triscuit were the parents of five children. Day L., Elmer J., Belle (deceased), Carrie and George. Day Linn Triscuit was reared and educated in the public schools of Union township, and has followed farming the greater part of his life. In 1882 he purchased his present property of seventy-six acres, which is mostly improved, and used for dairying and stock purposes. Mr. Triscuit was united in marriage August 28, 1879, to Miss Sophonia, daughter of Jesse and Jane (Kincade) Lyons, natives of Pennsylvania, who were the parents of eleven children, namely: Andrew, Joshua (deceased), William (deceased), Rebecca (deceased), Julia, Amanda, Jesse (deceased), Augustus, Etta (deceased), Celia and Sophronia. The Lyons family came from Colerain, Massachusetts; Daniel and his family locating in Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania. Daniel and Rebecca (Banks) Lyons were the parents of ten children. Jesse Lyons came to Beaver Dam when 21 years of age, and resided there all his life. He was one of the pioneers of Erie county. To Mr. and Mrs. Triscuit have been born two children, Lula B. and Edith. In politics Mr. Triscuit is a Republican, and the family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Triscuit is one of Erie county's substantial and highly respected citizens.

Cyrus H. King, farmer, Union City, Union township, Erie county, Pa., was born at Stockton, Chautauqua county, N. Y., May 20, 1837, and is a son of Jasper and Betsey (Pickett) King, natives of Vermont. Cyrus is a grandson of Gen. E. Pickett, of Revolutionary fame, and his grandfather on his father's side, Thomas King, served through the war of 1812. Ten children were born to Jasper and Betsey King, namely: Cyrus H., Ellen, widow of N. M. Waters, late of Union City; Nancy, wife of Corry Goodrich, of New York City; Lanston, Sherod, William, Lucius, James, Fred and Charles. Cyrus was reared and educated in his birthplace, and, in 1851, his parents came to Pennsylvania, settling in Crawford county, where they remained three years, when they came to Union township, where Jasper died April 12, 1875. When Cyrus was 21 years of age he enlisted, September 16, 1862, in Co. C, 169th Reg., P. V. I., under Captain Adam Davis. He was sent directly to the seat of war, and his first experience was at Yorktown, Va., under McClellan, then at Gettysburg July 1, 2, and 3, 1863, being wounded at the last-named battle, a bullet striking him in the breast near the heart. His life was doubtless saved on this occasion by the fact that his breast pocket contained a euchre deck, book of poems, some letters and a picture, which were perforated by and stopped the force of the bullet, which would have otherwise passed through his body. His next battle was at Southside Railroad where he was wounded in the hip by a minie-ball. Although seriously wounded here, he would not go to a hospital, preferring the camp and battle field to hospital life. He next participated in the battle of Petersburg, coming out of that bloody fight unscathed. His term of enlistment being expired, he was then discharged and came home, but after twenty days, the desire to again take up arms impelled him to enlist September 5, 1864, in Co. B, 98th P. V. I. He was made sergeant of his company, and participated in many skirmishes during his term of enlistment, and was at Richmond when Lee surrendered. On one occasion, after giving orders to ten posts which were under him, he was returning leisurely to his tent when, passing a moment midway between the posts, a shot was fired by a rebel guerrilla, the ball striking the front piece of Sergeant King's cap and ploughing a furrow across the top of his head inflicting a scalp wound. Sergeant King's record shows for itself what he has done in behalf of the country he loves so well. His patriotism and bravery were born in him, coming as he did from a family of soldiers. He was mustered out of the service June 23, 1865, by general order of the war department. After the war closed he returned home and engaged in farming, which he has since followed. He was united in marriage September 29, 1864, to Miss Harriet, daughter of Marcus and Mary (Hamilton) Cowden, natives of New York. Four children have been born to this union namely: Edward, Ella, Perry and Elmer. Mr. King is an honored member of the G. A. R., and has always been identified with the Republican party.

Barker A. Skinner, Wattsburg, Pa., physician and surgeon, born August 25, 1833, in Mina, Chautauqua county, N. Y., is a son of Abbott and Marilla (Barber) Skinner. The former, who was a painter, died in 1883. The children are Henry A., residing in Elgin, Erie county, Pa., member of the 83d Reg., Co. K, P. V. I. He lost an arm at the battle of Gaines Mills, in 1862, and has been unable to do any work since then. Dr. Skinner was educated in the public schools of Wattsburg and the medical department of the University of Wooster, at Cleveland, O., from where he graduated February 28, 1878. He began the practice of medicine in Elgin, Erie county, Pa., where he remained for six years; from Elgin he removed to Wattsburg, where he has since resided. He was a painter previous to reading medicine. Dr. Skinner was drafted three times; twice he was not accepted, owing to disability, but was held to service on the third draft. He joined the 102d P. V. I., served four months, and was honorably discharged at the close of the war. He was married January 1, 1856, to Isora J., daughter of William Rackliffe, of Starke, Somerset county, Me. Mrs. Skinner died January 13, 1864. No children were born of this marriage. He was united in marriage to Jane J. Dalrymple, of Wattsburg, July 11, 1864, daughter of Jeremiah E. and Sabra Peck Dalrymple. One son and three daughters are the issue of this marriage: Myra M., Jessie L., Zora J. and Harry B. Skinner, the only son, who is an artist, residing in Warren, O. Jessie L. was married to Henry A. Rouse, son of Albert P. Rouse, of Wattsburg. Henry A. Rouse died in April, 1891, leaving one son and one daughter. Jessie L. was married a second time to Fred A. Taylor, son of A. C. Taylor, of Wattsburg, Pa. Dr. Skinner is worshipful master in Wattsburg Lodge, No. 533, F. & A. M., past grand and representative to the Grand Lodge from Wattsburg Lodge, No. 118, I. O. O. F. He is medical examiner and past president in Wattsburg Union, No. 672, E. A. U.; is county physician and agent for the director of the poor, Erie county. He has resided in Wattsburg since 1854. Dr. Skinner is a member of the M. E. Church. Jeremiah E. Dalrymple, father of Mrs. Dr. Skinner, was a member of 14th P. V. I., enlisting from Wattsburg. He served two years and was one of the unfortunates who were starved to death in Andersonville prison.

George H. Duncombe, manufacturer, Wattsburg, Pa., born in Venango township, Erie county, Pa., in 1858, is the son of Charles H. and Eunice (Wood) Duncombe. The great-grandfather of George H. settled in Venango township in 1828, moving from Delaware county, New York, and with the assistance of his son, Francis Burritt, cleared away the timber on his land and followed farming. Charles H. Duncombe enlisted in the war, and shortly afterward contracted an illness that rendered him unfit for service and at the end of six months he was discharged. George H. Duncombe has one brother, Morris E., who is engaged in the jewelry and printing business in Wattsburg. Mr. Duncombe was united in marriage, in 1884, to Mertie, daughter of Charles E. and Isabel (Johnson) Gross. Four children are the issue of this marriage: Charles G., Herbert G., Isabel and Alice M. Mr. Duncombe is actively engaged in farming, and is also manager of a large saw-mill in the eastern part of the county. This mill furnishes the Union City Furniture Company with 100,000 pieces of turned lumber every month. Mr. Duncome takes an active part in the Presbyterian Church, and is affiliated with the Masonic order. In politics he is independent.

Charles Harrison Page, Lowville, Erie county, Pa., born in Allegheny county, New York, April 6, 1840, of English extraction, is a son of Phineas P. and Mary (Spaulding) Page. His father settled in Venango township when he was one year old, where he was reared and educated, and has lived continuously, with the exception of the time he served in the late war. He enlisted September 4, 1864, in Co. F, 211th P. V. I., and took an active part in the battles of Ft. Stedman, Petersburg, and Point of the Rocks, and was discharged June 6, 1865. Mr. Page has four brothers and sisters, namely: Albert Page, who is engaged in mercantile business in Union City, Pa.; Mary E., wife of Charles Austin; Helen (deceased wife of Samuel Phelps), and George, who is a farmer in Kansas. On the 22nd day of October, 1862, Mr. C. H. Page was married to Alice, daughter of Aaron M. and Jane (Butterfield) Durfee. Three children have been the issue of said marriage, namely: Marion L., Walter E., and Cecil A. Mr. Page is a prosperous farmer, and has 105 acres of good farm land. He is a member of the Methodist Church and is an active member of the G. A. R.

Marvin Elliot Jones, Lowville, Erie county, Pa., born in Venango township, June 15, 1837, of English parentage, is a son of James and Ann (Smith) Jones. He had two brothers, James Harris and James Lucas, both deceased. The grandfather of Mr. Jones settled in Venango township about 1810, took a quarter-section of land, and gave 118 acres to Marvin, which he cleared. He still retains 39 3/10 acres, having given 37 7/10 acres to his daughter as a wedding present. Mr. Jones was married in 1858 to Geraldine Stafford. Two children were born to this union: Anna, wife of George Dippo, and James H. In 1862 he enlisted in the 111th P. V. I., served one year in the army of the Potomac, participating in the battles of Chancellorsville, Va., and Gettysburg, Pa. He was with others transferred to Sherman's command to reinforce Rosecrans; he fought in the battles of Watahatchie, Lookout Mountain, Mission Ridge, and took part in the siege of Atlanta, and followed Sherman in his march to the sea. He was mustered out July 19, 1865. On August 28, 1868, Mr. Jones took for his second wife Maria L. Shipman, who died on the 22nd of June, 1869. May 3, 1871, he was married to Alice D., daughter of Stephen and Hannah (Smith) Allen. Two children were the result of this union: Heman L. and Maria L., wife of Fred Plumb. Mr. Jones is a member of the G. A. R. James Jones, the father of Marvin Elliot, died April 7, 1894, in Wesleyville. He came from a long line of Puritans which gave to the world Bishop E. S. Jones of the M. E. Church. James Jones was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and was greatly respected by a wide circle of friends. Mrs. Jones still survives her husband. In the settlement of James Jones' estate it largely went to his son and grandchildren.

Allen Henry Smith, of Phillipsville, Erie county, Pa., was born in Venango township, February 28, 1848, son of Thomas and Sallie (Jones) Smith. He is a farmer by occupation, and has three sisters and brothers, namely: Melvin, a farmer in Iowa; Wallace (deceased), and Ella, wife of Thomas Newsham. His grandfather, John Smith, settled in Venango township in 1810, and took up a quarter section of land, which he cleared of timber. On February 20, 1874, Mr. Smith married Kate, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Fritz) Duncombe, and as issue of this marriage they have two children, namely: Ely and Gertrude. When Mr. Smith started for himself, his father gave him 100 acres of land and he in spite of losses entailed by reason of two fires has accumulated 300 more, and has at present 200 head of stock on his place, and estimates himself worth $20,000. Mr. Smith is a Methodist.

Judge Weber Chaffee, Lowville, Erie county, Pa., was born in Boston, Erie county, N. Y., eighteen miles south of Buffalo, April 17, 1865, settled in Erie county, Pennsylvania, in November, 1870, and in Venango in September, 1886. He is the eldest child of Isaac and Hilda (Bathburn) Chaffee. There were four children, namely: George, U. S. postal clerk on L. S. & M. S.; Clark, superintendent of a hardware store in Boston; Francis (deceased); Freelan, in county treasurer's office of Buffalo, N. Y., and Alice, wife of Edward Nett, a druggist. Mr. Chaffee received his education at the Springfield Academy and the New York Central College, and finished at the University of Rochester. He then studied law in the office of Judge P. G. Parker, and while there was an associate and fellow-student of Grover Cleveland, who was then studying in the office of Bowen, Rodgers, Rock & Bowen. In Grundy county, Iowa, he was elected county judge and county clerk, and was a member of the board of supervisors. On the 28th day of April, 1891, he married Melissa M., the only child of Abel E. and Abigail (Harrington) Chaffee, his second cousin, and as issue to said marriage there were five children, namely: Ernest, Willis N., Agnes and Archibald. Mrs. Chaffee is a space writer for a number of newspapers. Mr. Chaffee is a third degree Mason, and is senior warden of the Wattsburg Lodge, No. 533, and is a member of the Grange. He is a Democrat.

Mrs. Zephia Ryan, widow of Erastus Ryan, was born May 7, 1836, in Washington township. Her father, William McLallen, was a native of Erie county. He was born April 22, 1804, in the eastern portion of Washington township. His father was Robert McLallen, a native of New York, and of Irish descent. He married a Miss Polly Drake, in New York State, and settled in Erie county about 1798. They had ten children, of whom William was the sixth child. He was married to Miss Philena Davis, daughter of Zopher Davis, a native of Vermont. She was born there in 1805, and in 1815 came to Erie county with her parents, who settled in Washington township. Mr. and Mrs. McLallen had eleven children, of whom Zephia was the fifth child. On June 9, 1850, Mrs. Zephia Ryan was married to Erastus Ryan, a son of John Ryan, a native of London, England. Mr. Ryan came to this country when a boy, and lived with a family in eastern New York State. On reaching his maturity Mr. Ryan was married to a young English woman. Soon after his marriage he moved to Erie county, locating in Washington township, where his wife died. He later married Maranda Crow, and Erastus, their eldest child, was born February 13, 1830. There were nine other children in this family, of whom five were girls. Erastus was first married to Miss Phebe Hamilton, an orphan girl. She died April 12, 1856, leaving one child, Winstone L. Ryan, who is now living in LeBeauf township, near McLallen's Corners. The marriage of Mr. Ryan and Miss McLallen resulted in the birth of five children, all of whom are now dead with one exception, William Wallace, who was born May 20, 1869. The others, Ellsworth E., Florilla, Norton J. and Archie E., all died before they were 4 years old. Mr. Ryan died September 20, 1892, leaving his widow and sons, who are living near McLallen's Corners.

Harry Culbertson, postmaster at Edinboro, Pa., was born June 23, 1870, in that place. His father, Louis C. Culbertson, was a son of John Augustus Culbertson, who, in turn, was the first man to settle in Washington township, making his home in what is now the thriving village of Edinboro. The ancestors of William Culbertson were originally from Scotland. They went first from Scotland to the North of Ireland, and were of Scotch-Irish population in the province of Ulster. Here they are known to have taken a prominent part in the life and death struggle between King James II and his Protestant subjects in the siege of Londonderry. The first Culbertson to emigrate to America is said to have come over during the reign of King George I., of England, about 1720. The eldest son of this man was born in Ireland in 1708. His name was John. The eldest son of this second John Culbertson was Andrew, who was born in 1731. In 1763 he was married to Jennette Boyd in Philadelphia, and the following year settled in the town of Williamsport, Lycoming county, Pa. They had nine children, the eldest of whom was William, who, in the year 1794, was married to Mary Culbertson, a relative also descended from the John Culbertson who came over from Ireland. This marriage took place at Williamsport, and the following year they settled in the eastern part of Washington township. In 1795 they moved farther west, to what is now the town of Edinboro. He built at the mouth of Conneaut lake a grist and sawmill near the location of the present mill at that place. He acquired considerable land in the vicinity of Edinboro, and combined, to some extent, the business of milling and farming. He was at an early day appointed a justice of the peace, which office he held continuously for forty years. Mr. Culbertson's first wife died at Edinboro March 2, 1802. They had four children: Andrew Columbus, Jennette C., John Augustus and William Washington. In January, 1806, occurred the second marriage of William Culbertson. His second wife was Margaret Johnson, who died June 30, 1820. They had five children: Maria J., James Johnson, Josiah J., Cyrus A. and Elizabeth. Mr. Culbertson died November 11, 1843. John August Culbertson, son of William Culbertson, was married to Clarissa Harrison in Edinboro, October 23, 1827. They had six children: Harrison, Louis C., Johnson, Porter, Emily, who married John Prouditt in Edinboro, and Edwin. Mrs. Culbertson died October 16, 1882, and she was followed by her husband on March 16, 1872. Their second son, Louis C., father of Harry Culbertson, subject of this sketch, was born March 7, 1832. On May 31, 1858, he was married to Martha M. Prouditt, daughter of Alexander Prouditt, son of Andrew and Isabel (Smith) Prouditt, who settled in Franklin township in 1853. This family is of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and were among the early settlers in this country. Eleven children were the result of this union: Claribel, now the wife of Frank Pulling, living at Edinboro; Mabel, the wife of Charles Dundan, in Edinboro; Hattie, died October 28, 1870; Agnes, Harry, Lizzie and Andrew, living with their parents. Mr. Culbertson is a carpenter by occupation, and is one of the men who had done considerable toward building the pretty town that is now his home. Mr. Harry Culbertson was born and reared in Edinboro. He was educated in the Edinboro State Normal School, attending there five terms. He then clerked in his uncle's store for seven years, when he was appointed postmaster by President Cleveland on March 18, 1895. In this capacity he is assisted by his sister, Agnes Culbertson.

Henry Lewis, Edinboro, was born in Meadville, Crawford county, Pa., December 9, 1832. His great grandmother, Mrs. Jane Campbell, was the first woman settler in Washington township. She came to Erie county in 1797, with the William Culbertson party, which came from Williamsport, Lycoming county, Pa. Mrs. Campbell was a widow and was accompanied on the trips by her two sons, John and James. They settled on 400 acres of land in Washington township just south of the present site of the town of Edinboro. Soon after Mrs. Campbell was married to Robert Fritz Randolph. They removed to Meadville where he died. Mrs. Campbell returned to her home in Washington township, soon after her husband's death. She died October 18, 1843. John Campbell, a son of Jane Campbell, was married on May 10, 1804, to Mary Laughery, a daughter of James Laughery. They had nine children. Sarah, their second child and daughter, was born January 28, 1807. On May 27, 1830, she was married to Jesse Lewis, son of Lot Lewis, who settled in Crawford county in 1797, immigrating from New Jersey. The Lewis family is of Scotch, Welch and Irish descent. Jesse and Sarah Lewis had eight children, of whom Henry, the subject of this sketch, was the second child. The others are: Mary J., widow of J. O. Reeder; John Randolph, now general secretary of the Cotton States International Exposition, at Atlanta, Ga. Sarah Jane married William S. Prouditt; she died March 10, 1857; James Alexander, was killed in the battle of Gettysburg; Harriet Amanda, is now the wife of William S. Prouditt, and is living in Chicago; Martha Ann, wife of C. H. Barnes, of Lake Charles, La.; William Winters, now living at Palton, Iowa. Henry Lewis was twice married, first on January 13, 1856, to Frances Fry, of Franklin township. She died January 7, 1861. They had one daughter, Mary Frances, who married Daniel F. Delo, by whom she had one child, Flora W. Mr. Delo died February 28, 1882, and his wife on March 12, 1890. Mr. Lewis was married to his present wife, Catherine A. Shreve, a daughter of Samuel and Sarah Ann (Flemming) Shreve, of Venango county, on August 8, 1866. They have had no children. Mr. Lewis entered the army in the late war, enlisting in July, 1862, in Co. B, 145th P. V. I. He participated in the battles of Fredricksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. In the latter battle Mr. Lewis lost his left arm, and was also badly injured in the back by a piece of shell that Gettysburg. After the amputation of his arm he returned home until December, when he returned to his regiment in the field, and then on December 18, 1863, he was honorably discharged. Mr. Lewis started in life as a carpenter and joiner, and continued in that business until appointed postmaster of Edinboro by President Lincoln on January 5, 1865, which office he held until March, 1886. He has also served one term as borough councilman, and was for eighteen years a trustee in the Edinboro State Normal school. Mr. Lewis is a member of Profridit Post, No. 416, G. A. R., and also of the U. V. L. at Erie. He has held all of the offices in his post and was its first commander. Mr. Lewis is also a member of the A. O. U. W.

John Randolph Lewis is a Pennsylvanian, having been born in Erie county September 22, 1834. After attending preparatory schools, he took the regular course of study at the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery and the medical department of the University of Vermont, after which he engaged in the practice of dental surgery. Having enlisted, April 20, 1861, he served during the three-months' term as sergeant of Co. H, 1st Vt. I., taking part in the battle of Big Bethel and other engagements of that campaign, and being discharged August 15, 1861. He re-entered the army September 16, 1861, as captain of Co. I, 5th Vt. I. On July 16, 1862, he was promoted to major, and to lieutenant-colonel October 3, following. He served in all the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac, being wounded at White Oak Swamp, until May 5, 1864, when he lost his left arm at the shoulder joint from a gun-shot wound at the battle of the Wilderness. Having been promoted to the colonelcy of his regiment, June 5, 1864, it was found that his wound unfitted him for active service, and he was mustered out September 11, 1864. Having been commissioned colonel of the 1st Reg., Vt. Res. Corps, September 8, Lewis accepted, September 12, the day after his discharge from the 5th Vermont. He served on the board for the examination of officers for transfer to the Vt. Res. Corps until December 26, 1864, and then on the board for the examination of enlisted men in hospitals for transfer to the same corps until June, 1865. Having been a brevet-brigadier-general of volunteers, March 13, 1865, he commanded the post in Elmira, N. Y., from June till October, awaited orders at Buffalo till December, and was then on duty at Nashville as inspector-general of the staff of Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, and assistant commissioner B. R. F. and A. L. at Nashville until January, 1867. Having been commissioned major of the 44th U. S. Inf., January 22, 1867, Gen. Lewis accepted the place and was mustered out of the volunteer service March 31, and into the United States Army April 1, 1867. Then he served on the staff of Gen. C. C. Sibley at Savannah, Macon and Atlanta till 1869; unassigned March 15, 1869; assistant commissioner B. R. F. and A. L., Atlanta, Ga., to April 28, 1870; brevet lieutenant-colonel and brevet colonel, U. S. A., March 2, 1867; retired, with the rank of colonel, U. S. A., April 28, 1870, after a total active service of eight years and eleven months. Since leaving the army his occupations have been as follows: State school commissioner of Georgia, 1870 to 1872, during which time he organized the public school system of the State; mercantile business at Des Moines, Ia., 1873 to 1876; resident of Buffalo, N. Y., 1876 to 1880; secretary Atlanta Cotton Expositions, 1880 to 1881; mercantile business at Atlanta since 1883; postmaster of Atlanta from August 1, 1889, to December 1, 1893; secretary Cotton States and International Exposition from April 1, 1894, to December 31, 1895. Gen. Lewis was a charter member of the O. M. Mitchell Post, Department of Tennessee and Georgia, and has served as its senior vice-commander. At the Nineteenth National Encampment in Portland, Me., he was elected junior vice-commander-in-chief. He was married and has two sons.

Alonzo Shafer, clergyman, postoffice McLallen's Corners, born in Cobleskill, N. Y., September 21, 1846, is a son of Sylvester and Margaret (Andrews) Shafer, natives of Cobleskill, N. Y. The former was born at Cobleskill, N. Y., in 1825, and was by occupation a carpenter and joiner. He enlisted in December, 1862, in Co. K, 121st Reg. Heavy Artillery, and in June, 1863, was transferred to the light infantry, and while on picket duty was shot by a sharpshooter. He was married in 1845 to Margaret, daughter of James Andrews, a native of New York. The former died in 1863, and the latter in 1875. This union was blessed with seven children, six of whom are now living, viz.: Abraham, born in 1849, now living in Green Bush, N. Y.; Celia, born in 1851, wife of John Carr, of Onenta, N. Y.; James, born in 1854, living in Onenta, N. Y.; Mary, born in 1857, wife of John Wetherwax, of Onenta, N. Y.; Helen, born in 1860, died in 1870; Emma, born in 1863, the wife of Stephen Sweet, of New York city. Rev. Mr. Shafer received a part of his education at Carlisle Seminary, New York city, and finished at the normal school in Cobleskill, N. Y.; he took a theological course in Brooklyn, N. Y., and in 1879, started to preach the gospel in Albany, N. Y., for the M. E. Church, remaining there for a short time. He then went to New York city, and was there one year, and from there he went to Brooklyn, N. Y., remaining there four years; he then went to Delhi, N. Y., for one year, joining the Christian denomination; to Jonesboro, N. J., for one year; Hartwick, N. Y., for two years; then to New London, Conn., where he remained two years and six months; and, in October, 1894, he moved to McLallen's Corners, where he has charge of the church, and also the one at Itley, Pa. He has been principally engaged in evangelist work. Rev. Mr. Shafer was united in marriage September 23, 1869, at Unadilla, N. Y., to Malicia C., daughter of Joseph Fisher, a native of New York. Of the twelve children composing the Fisher family, seven still survive. This union has been blessed with one child, viz.: Frances K., born September 19, 1870, wife of N. D. Rutherford, of Hartwick, N. Y., who is by occupation a photographer. Rev. Mr. Shafer is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 89, of New London, Conn.; also the Jr. O. U. A. M., Temple of Honor and Good Templars, of New London, Conn. His wife is a member of the Daughters of Liberty. Rev. Mr. Shafer, after leaving the State of New York, asked and received his letter from the New York Eastern Christian Conference, and September 24, 1895, he joined the Erie Christian Conference, to which his local charge is attached.

Henry C. Allen, farmer, McLallen's Corners, Erie county, Pa., was born August 30, 1846, in Cambridge township, Crawford county. The first of this family, James, born in 1762, near London, England, came to America in 1825, and settled in Cambridge township, Crawford county, Pa., where he purchased a farm of 250 acres which he was engaged in raising and farming until his death, in 1837. He was married to Elizabeth Tamer, a native of England. This union was blessed with seven children: Charles, William, Anna, Eliza, Mary, Henry and Jane, the wife of George Barnes, of Janesville, Wis. Henry, sr., born in 1806, in England, came to America with his father in 1825, when 19 years old, and was a resident of Crawford county until his death, in 1888. He was one of the pioneer settlers of Cambridge township, and was united in marriage in 1833 to Mary, daughter of John Humes, a native of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. To this union were born ten children, as follows: James, born in 1834, now living in Lead City, S. D.; Matilda, born in 1836, the wife of James Hawthorn, living in Crawford county, on part of the old homestead; John, born in 1837, of Crawford county; Oscar, born in 1840, of Crawford county; Parnell, born in 1842, died in 1849; Mary, born in 1844, died in 1862; Henry, jr., Adelia, born in 1849, the wife of Amos Willie, of Crawford county; Homer, born in 1851, now living in Lead City, S. D.; and Alma, born in 1853, the wife of Frank Glover, of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Henry C. Allen received a common school education in Cambridge township, Crawford county, remaining at home until the age of 35, when he started out for himself at farming on a part of the old homestead, remaining there until 1892, when he purchased 106 acres of land in Washington township, Erie county, Pa., known as the Andrew Culbertson farm, located one mile south of McLallen's Corners. He was united in marriage October 12, 1881, to Maggie (born June 24, 1861), the daughter of Joseph Kline, a native of Erie county. She was the third child of a family of nine children, six of whom are now living, viz.: Emma, born in 1857, died in 1877; Fannie, born in 1859, wife of Fortis Crow, of Washington township; Claude, born in 1863, now living in Crawford county; Pet, who died in infancy; Jasper, jr., born in 1867, living in Washington township; Norman, born in 1870; and Jennie, born in 1874. Mr. and Mrs. Allen are the parents of three children, as follows: Bruce, born in 1882; Claude, born in 1884; and Mary, born in 1894. Mr. Henry C. Allen is a member of the Grange at Cambridge, Crawford county, Pa.; he has never sought office, and has always voted the Democratic ticket until three years ago. Mr. Allen has won the respect of all with whom he comes in contact, and occupies a worthy place in the estimation of the community.

Emery S. Mattison. farmer, Edinboro, Erie county, Pa., was born December 22, 1861, and is a son of Sheldon and Delindia (Woodard) Mattison, natives of New York. The first of this family to come to Washington township was Ruben Mattison, a native of Eastern New York, born in 1794, one of a family of four children. He served in the war of 1812; was married in 1817 to Experience, daughter of Zenas and Betty (Blakeslee) Potter, of Erie county, New York. She was one of six children, and was left motherless at the age of 15, and kept house for her father until his second marriage four years later. They settled on the shores of Chautauqua Lake, near where Mayville now stands, remaining two years. From there they went down the Allegheny river on a flat boat to Marietta, O., where they stayed three years, when they removed to Erie county, New York. In 1840 they came to Washington township, Erie county, Pa., where they bought a farm, and passed the rest of their days. They had a family of six children, three of whom are now living: Asenath, widow of Stephen Watt, now living with her son, Levi, on a farm in LeBoeuf township; Sheldon and Sherman, formerly of Erie county, Pennsylvania, but now living in Michigan. Reuben died in 1878, aged 84 years, and Experience in 1873, at the age of 75. They and their children were members of the Christian Church of McLallen's Corners, Erie county. Sheldon Mattison, born in 1827, in Erie county, New York, came to Erie county, Pennsylvania, with his father when about seven years old, and in his youthful days worked by the month; when a young man he went to Illinois, and was engaged in farming for a short time. He was twice married, first to Easter Dibble; this union resulted in six children, two of whom are living: Alwildia, wife of William Briggs, Kondo, Mich., and Amelia, wife of Fred Clark, of Michigan; Ardella (deceased), was the wife of E. Swails. He returned from the West and went to Allegheny county, New York, and engaged in the lumber business for four years. He then came to Washington township and engaged in the carpenter trade. Mr. Mattison took for his second wife, in 1860, Delendia Woodard, born in 1842, a native of Allegheny county, New York. To this union were born two children: Emery S., and Emma, born in 1867, wife of Dr. B. N. Bricker, of Wildwood, Mich. His second wife died in 1888. Emery S. Mattison received his education at the Edinboro Normal School, and was engaged at farming for his father until 24 years of age, when he was married to Hattie, daughter of Philander and Clarissa (Mitchell) Porter, natives of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. There are now six children in the Porter family, four of whom are now living. Hattie was the second child. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Mattison went to Rondo, Mich., where he was engaged in teaching school for one year. He then came back to Washington township and taught school for three seasons, after which he went to farming on the old homestead, containing sixty-two acres of land in a high state of cultivation, with good buildings, on Kinter Hill. This union has been blessed with five children: Georgia died in 1887; Porter, born in 1888; Alta, born in 1890; Fenn, born in 1891, and Clara, born in 1894, died in 1895.

Fred Henneous, farmer, McLallen's Corners, Erie county, Pa., was born December 16, 1819, in Hanover, Germany, and is a son of Christian and Charlotte (Kissman) Henneous, natives of Germany. Mr. Henneous was by occupation a farmer in Germany, where he owned a farm of 100 acres. He was married in Hanover, Germany, to Charlotte Kissman. They were the parents of four children, three of whom are dead. Mr. Fred Henneous was twice married: first in Germany, Frederica Deiderich, a native of Hanover, Germany, in 1847, and in 1852 he started with his wife and three children to America, landing in Baltimore, Md., and from there he went to St. Louis, Mo., where his wife and two children died of cholera, and, in 1854, he came to Erie, Pa., from there going to Cambridge township, Crawford county, where he purchased a farm of fifty-five acres, operating it successfully for twenty years. He then came to Washington township and bought a farm of 111 acres, where he now resides. He married for his second wife, in 1857, Charlotte, daughter of Henry Saunders, a native of Germany. This union has been blessed with nine children: Albert, born in 1859, and now judge of Aurora county, South Dakota; Fred, born in 1861, living at home; Anna, born in 1863, wife of James Campbell, of Crawford county, Pennsylvania; Sena, born in 1865, living in Erie; Frank, born in 1867, and engaged in the manufacture of wagons in Monroe county, Iowa; George, born in 1869, living at home; Emma, born in 1871, at home; Eddie, born in 1873, living in Washington township; Mark, born in 1875, at home. Fred Heuneous and wife were members of the Lutheran Church at Drake's Mills. In politics he is a Republican.

Sylvester Culbertson, farmer, McLallen's Corners, Erie county, Pa., was born January 12, 1844, in Washington township, and is a son of Stephen and Elizabeth B. (Isherwood) Culbertson, natives of the township. The first of this family to settle here was John, who, in 1799, took up 400 acres of land, but his title was not clear, the land also being claimed by a Mr. Fisher. The matter was settled by Mr. Culbertson taking a deed for 150 acres. Stephen Culbertson, born May 13, 1809, in Washington township, was the first settler in the southeast corner of Washington township, where he took up a tract of land, cleared it and farmed it until his death. He was married March 27, 1834, to Elizabeth B., daughter of George Isherwood, one of the early settlers of LeBoeuf township. They were the parents of eight children: Adeline, born April 30, 1836, wife of Halsey Mitchell of Crawford county, Pa.; Nancy, born May 20, 1839, the wife of Wells Hodges, of Lansing, Mich.; George, born April 12, 1841, who enlisted, in 1865, in Co. E, 98th Reg., and was honorably discharged June 23, 1865; he died shortly afterwards from exposure received there; Sylvester, born January 12, 1844; Fayette, born August 6, 1848, and died in 1849; Wesley, born July 8, 1850, and died in 1877; Rhorbort, born May 6, 1852, a farmer of LeBoeuf township; and Austin, born May 3, 1854, now living on the old homestead. Elizabeth Culbertson died March 21, 1885, at the advanced age of 81 years. Mr. Sylvester Culbertson received a common school education in Washington township, and, in 1870, started at farming; he purchased the farm where he now lives, containing 70 acres, cleared it up, and now has it in a good state of cultivation, with substantial buildings; it is located one and a half miles from McLallen's Corners. He was united in marriage May 9, 1893, to Roxy, born July 26, 1848, daughter of George and Lydia Upham, natives of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, the former born October 25, 1814, the latter January 14, 1821. There are six children in the Upham family, viz.: Roxy, the wife of Sylvester Culbertson; George C., born July 9, 1850, a farmer of Ovid, Neb.; John N., born April 16, 1852, of Crawford county; Effie, born November 20, 1854, and died March 12, 1893; Amos T., born September 15, 1856; Hattie, born October 13, 1865, the wife of Frank Racop, of Crawford county. Mr. Culbertson and wife are the parents of five children, as follows: Myrtle S., born May 7, 1870, the wife of Charles Ryan, of Washington township; Maud L., born June 21, 1874, and died February 21, 1891; De Etta M., born November 16, 1876; Grace B., born August 13, 1884; and Willow F., born October 4, 1889.

Balsar Bowman, farmer, Edinboro, Erie county, Pa., was born in Baden, Germany, January 1, 1810, and is a son of Joseph and Sarah (Cushman) Bowman, natives of Baden, Germany, both of whom are now dead. They were the parents of five children, as follows: Martin, who came to America and settled near McKean, where he died about twenty years ago; Philip also came to America and settled in New York city, where he died; Balsar, Sophia (deceased), Elizabeth (deceased). Balsar Bowman came to America in 1830, and settled in Erie, Pa., where he followed the occupation of watch-maker for three years. He then purchased a farm of 25 acres in Cussewago township, Crawford county, Pa., living there for three years, and in 1838, he purchased the farm where he now lives, located on Kinter Hill, two and one-half miles from Edinboro, containing 130 acres, now in a good state of cultivation. Mr. Bowman was twice married, first to Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Fry, December, 1835, in Erie. To this union were born six children: Mary, born in 1837, the wife of Amos Burdick, of LeBoeuf township; William, born in 1839, living in LeBoeuf township; Joseph, born in 1841, of LeBoeuf township; Susan, born in 1843, wife of William Way, now deceased; John, born in 1845, living in Erie, Pa.; and Charles, born in 1848, living at home. Mr. Bowman married for his second wife, Julia, daughter of Patrick Brofa, a native of Ireland. Mr. Bowman is a highly respected citizen of Washington township, and is a member of the Catholic Church of McKean.

Albert C. Stafford, farmer and dealer in meats, Edinboro, Erie county, Pa., was born May 28, 1853, in Washington township, and is a son of Jasper N. and Mary (Sipps) Stafford, natives of Erie county. The first of the Stafford family to come to Erie county was Annanias, who came from New York State when the township was all a wilderness, and settled in Conneautte valley, near McLallen's Corners, where he purchased a farm and was engaged in farming it until his death, about twenty years ago. There were eight children in the family, three of whom are living: Bazillia, the wife of William Mallory of LeBoeuf township; Lucinda, wife of Mathias Sipps, of Muskegan, Mich.; and Edward, now living in Oceana county, Michigan. Jasper Stafford, born in 1823, in New York State, came to Pennsylvania, when a boy, with his father, and lived at home until he was 19 years of age. He was married in 1842 to Mary, daughter of Benjamin Sipp, one of the pioneer settlers of Washington township, and a shoemaker by trade, following that occupation for twenty years. During that time he purchased a farm of fifty acres, near Gleeton Corners, farming it for a number of years. Selling it he purchased another of fifty-five acres, located on the Crane road, about half a mile north of the other place, which he occupied until his death, in 1890. Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Stafford were the parents of nine children: Melissa, wife of Philip Kline, of Washington township; David, living in Oceana county, Michigan; Aaron, who enlisted in 1863 in Co. C, 83d Reg., P. V. I., and in the battle of the Wilderness he received a wound which resulted in his death the same year; Matthias, living in McLallen's Corners; Jane, wife of Bennett Crocker, of Oceana county, Michigan; Albert; Lydia (deceased); Eva (deceased), and Clara (deceased). Albert Stafford received a common school education, and at the age of 17 he started in life, working in the lumber woods in the northern part of Michigan, remaining there two years, when he came back to Pennsylvania, and worked in a mill at Cambridge, Pa., for about two years; he then purchased a small farm near Cambridge, and operated it two years; coming to Washington township, he purchased a farm of ten acres, and is engaged in farming and the meat business. Mr. Stafford was united in marriage in 1874, to Alice (born in 1853), daughter of Melker Stultz, a native of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. To this union were born five children: Clara Bell, born January 1, 1877; Aaron Chilton, born May 28, 1880; Della May, born April 27, 1883; Mary Elizabeth, born August 8, 1886, and William, who died in infancy. His wife died June 18, 1891. Mr. Stafford has held the office of tax collector two years, and is highly respected in the community. In politics he is a Republican.

Patrick Flynn, farmer, Edinboro, Erie county, Pa., was born March 10, 1820, in County Cork, Ireland, and is a son of Dennis, Jr., and Catherine (Lally) Flynn, also a native of Ireland. Dennis, sr., was the only ancestor who came to America, arriving about the time of the Revolutionary War, and settled in South Carolina, living there until his death. He married Ellen Tobin; they were the parents of six children, all of whom are now dead. Dennis, jr., born in 1770, in Ireland, where he followed the occupation of a farmer until his death. He was married in 1790, to Catherine Daley. This union was blessed with ten children, six of whom arrived at maturity, and four came to America, viz.: Margurite, who came here about 1847, was the wife of Benjamin Raycroft, both of whom are now dead; Ellen, came to America about 1852, was the wife of Daniel Sullivan (deceased); she is now living in Cincinnati, O.; Patrick and Michael, who came about 1848 to Pennsylvania, and settled in Erie county, where they lived until his death, which occurred in 1885; Patrick, who came to America in the spring of 1847, landing at Baltimore, Md., and from thence going to Philadelphia, where he worked a short time and then went to Norristown, Pa., and remained for one winter; he went to Harrisburg, and eighteen months later removed to Cincinnati, O., where he lived over six years; he then came to Washington township, Pennsylvania, in 1855, settling on the farm on which he now resides. Mr. Flynn has always been a hard-working man, and brought his farm from a primitive wilderness to a high state of cultivation, with substantial buildings on it. The farm is located two and a half miles from Edinboro. Mr. Flynn was twice married, first to Mary, daughter of Daniel Lehan, a native of Ireland, in 1848. She was the mother of seven children, three of whom are now living; Catharine (born in 1849) living in LeBoeuf township; Ellen (born in 1854), in Denver, Col.; Margaret (born in 1857), wife of John Kingston, of Washington township. He took for his second wife Mary Ann Farley, a native of Ireland. To this union have been born six children, two of whom are now living: Joseph V., born February 14, 1869, is now engaged in the grocery business at Erie, Pa., and John, born June 13, 1872, druggist, Edinboro. Mr. Patrick Flynn has held the office of school director for three years. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church of Crossingville, Crawford county, Pa. In politics he is a Democrat.

John A. Bolard, L. L. B., eldest son of Frederick D. Bolard and Celia H. Bolard, was born in Crawford county October 4, 1867. He was a grandson of Christopher Bolard, a prominent business man of Meadville, Crawford county, Pa., and came to Waterford with his parents in 1874, completing his studies in the grammar school, which was followed by a three-years' course in the Waterford Academy, graduating in 1889; the same year he became principal of the Jamestown (Pa.) Seminary, which position was held until 1890, when he entered the law department of the University of Michigan, graduating with the class of 1892. He next studied law in the office of A. E. Sisson, Esq., in Erie, and was admitted to the Erie county bar in July, 1893. January 1, 1893, Mr. Bolard became associated with his brother, Charles F. Bolard, in the publication of the Waterford Leader, and continued it as a live local journal. He began the practice of law in Waterford, where he is now located, in May, 1893, and August 8, 1894, he was married to Mary J., youngest daughter of Andrew J. Cowan, formerly of Venango county.

Prof. W. P. Mercer, principal of Waterford Academy, was born in Mansfield, N. Y., in 1864. Soon after leaving the public schools he entered Chamberlain Institute, from which he graduated in 1885, and immediately entered Hillsdale College, in Hillsdale, Mich., graduating with high honors in 1890. He taught at intervals during his college course, beginning as early as 1882. Soon after completing his educational course he was elected superintendent of the public schools in Homer, Mich., and a little later, acting principal of Chamberlain Institute in Randolph, N. Y., which position he held until elected principal of the Waterford Academy in 1892, which position he held until 1895. He has been prominently identified with educational work, having been actively engaged in presenting miscellaneous treatise of science in general with illustrated lectures before teachers' institutes throughout the country. His marriage took place in 1886, to Miss Belle Eddy, of Cottage, N. Y., who was instructor of Latin and German in the Waterford Academy during his incumbency of the principalship.

C. W. S. Anderson, justice of the peace, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born in Waterford township in 1827, and was educated in the public schools and Waterford Academy. His parents were William and Nancy Anderson. The former, who was identified with hauling equipment for Perry's fleet died in 1846, the latter surviving until 1876. Her maiden name was Nancy Pollock, daughter of Capt. James Pollock, a member of the constitutional convention. C. W. S. Anderson began life as a clerk in the store of T. B. Vincent, dry goods merchant in Erie, and next entered the employ of Cadwell & Bennett, later returning to Waterford, where he engaged as clerk for Hutchinson & Son. Four years later he was employed by Cooper & Stanford, general merchants. In 1866 he became justice of the peace in Waterford, and has since continued in that capacity. In 1853 he was married to Miss Maryetta Leland, of Erie. Seven children blessed the union, five of whom are living, as follows: Mrs. L. B. Thompson, Grace, Charles, Harry and Lincoln; Mrs. Virginia A. McClue died in 1888, and Vermont in infancy. Mr. Anderson was a prominent member of Clement Lodge 220, I. O. O. F., during its existence.

Daniel W. Hunt, farmer, Waterford, Pa., one of Erie county's most progressive citizens, is a native of Waterford. He was born on the place where he now resides March 12, 1854. He is a son of Simeon and Aseneth (Tracy) Hunt. Simeon Hunt was a native of Connecticut, and a descendant of old New England stock. He came to Erie county about the year 1814, settling in Waterford, and purchasing the farm (now owned and occupied by Daniel W. Hunt) from the State, through Land Commissioner Martin. The place is located near the borough of Waterford, on the north side, and now contains fifty-five acres, a great deal of the land having been sold off in town lots. Simeon Hunt built a distillery in Waterford, which he operated for many years. It is the only distillery ever operated in Waterford. He was prominent in county politics, and served as auditor of Erie county several terms. Mr. Hunt led a very active business life, and died April 2, 1874. Aseneth Tracy, his wife, was a daughter of Capt. John Tracy, who was one of the most prominent men of Erie county (see sketch of the Tracy family). She died in 1854. Simeon and Aseneth (Tracy) Hunt were the parents of six children, viz.: Caroline (deceased), Cardelia (deceased), Ann, Mrs. David Hunt, resides in Somanauk, Ill.; Horace resides in Mill Village; Daniel W., and Mary Jane (deceased). Daniel W. Hunt was reared in Waterford and educated in the Waterford Academy. He remained at home with his father until 1852, when he entered the employ of Stockton & Fuller, in Erie, as clerk. After remaining there two years he went to Illinois, and shortly after went to Iowa, which, at that time, was well on the frontier border of the "Great West." He pre-empted a claim in Pocahontas county, and was one of the first settlers in that locality. During the Indian excitement of 1859, he moved out of that section, as did nearly all the settlers, and returned to Pennsylvania. In 1867 he again removed to his Iowa farm, where he resided until 1876, when he moved back to Waterford. Mr. Hunt has made agriculture his chief occupation, and may well be included in the list of Erie county's most successful farmers. He was employed on the construction of the Erie and State Line R. R., now the L. S. & M. S. He was united in marriage December 14, 1876, to Miss Adeline, youngest daughter of Squire J. and Sophia (Reed) Trask, of Waterford township. The father was a native of Massachusetts. He was born in 1797, and died in 1866. His wife died in 1883. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt have one child, Reed Tracy, born February 6, 1880. He is now attending school. During the late Rebellion Mr. Hunt responded to Governor Curtin's call for minute men. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. and Masonic order. He is a Republican, but in political matters does not allow partisan feeling to override his judgment.

J. A. Boyd, furniture and undertaking, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., born in LeBoeuf township in 1838, where his early days were spent. He began active life as a carpenter at the age of 25 years, which vocation he pursued until 1889, when he succeeded H. C. Putnam in the furniture and undertaking business. In 1867 he was married to Jennie McLean, of LeBoeuf township. Mr. Boyd is a son of Johnson Boyd, a native of Pennsylvania, who died in 1889 upon the farm in LeBoeuf township, on which he had spent an active and busy life. D. C. Boyd, of LeBoeuf township, is also a son of the deceased. Mr. J. A. Boyd was a member of the 102d Reg., P. V. I., and is an active member of the G. A. R., A. O. U. W., F. & A. M., and Jr. O. U. A. M. organization, bearing official relation to each.

Isaac Y. Lunger, retired farmer, is a resident of Waterford borough. He was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, January 5, 1822, son of Jacob and Elizabeth Lunger, natives of Pennsylvania, and the youngest of a family of eleven children. Jacob Lunger was a shoemaker by trade, in the days when it was the custom to go from one farmhouse to the other and make all the shoes of the family. In this way he accumulated means with which he purchased a farm in Waterford township. His father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Jacob died in 1858, and his wife in 1855. Isaac Y. Lunger was first married in 1843, to Elizabeth Burger, who died in 1880, and a year later his eldest son Charles. In 1881 Mr. Lunger was married to Mrs. Anna Miller, widow of Grekoson Miller. His eight children, five of whom are living, were educated in the Waterford Academy. They are Mrs. L. M. Ross, Mrs. B. M. Edmunds, Mrs. V. C. Barnes, George W. Lunger, who was married to Miss Etta Clemmons in 1890, and Fred J. Lunger, who in 1893 was united in marriage to Maud Sedgwick. Mr. Lunger has spent his whole life in Waterford township, removing to the borough in 1887. He has served as school director eleven years and road commissioner two years, and is known as a representative farmer of the township.

James W. Hamilton, carpenter, was born in Waterford, Pa., May 22, 1821, where the first thirty years of his life were spent. He was the son of Hugh and Mary (Anderson) Hamilton, the former a native of Centre county, and the latter of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Hamilton's ancestors were numbered among the early inhabitants of Centre county, and removed from there to Venango county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Hamilton went to Peoria, Ill., in 1856, where he followed his trade until ten years ago, when he settled in Waterford borough, and is now one of its prominent residents.

C. L. Townley, M. D., Waterford, Erie county, Pa., is a son of James Townley, who was a native of Waterford, Pa., in 1817. He left his parents at the early age of three years. This was in 1820. James was the son of Robert Townley, who came from Ireland about the year 1790, and became one of the early settlers of Erie county. He occupied and owned the house, now the property of T. W. Whitney, which is identified among the early landmarks of Waterford borough. The wife of James Townley was Fidelia Reese, and was born in Cuba, N. Y., in 1822. Dr. Townley was born in 1853, and is a graduate of the Western Reserve Medical College, Cleveland, O. He began the practice of medicine at Oil City, Venango county, Pa., in 1880, and came to Waterford in 1889, where he has since engaged in active practice. Dr. Townley was married, in 1881, to Florence Brown, of Venango county. Helen, their daughter, was born in 1890. He is a member of Waterford lodges, F. & A. M. and I. O. O. F.

E. E. Kendall, M. D., physician and surgeon, Waterford, Pa., was born in Union City, August 13, 1860, second son of Darwin R. and Alice (Smith) Kendall, residents of Waterford for the past twenty years. The latter is a daughter of John Smith (deceased) of Washington township, Erie county. Dr. Kendall spent his early life attending school during the winter and in summer assisted his father at his trade, that of carpenter. He entered the Waterford Academy as a student in 1880, and taught district school during the winters of 1881-2-3, after which he entered the drug store of Clemens & Patten, where he clerked and studied medicine under Drs. Bowman and Clemens. He graduated from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, April 5, 1887, and began the practice of medicine in Warren county, Pennsylvania. In 1888 he located in Waterford, where he has a very extensive and successful practice. After the terrible fire in Waterford, March 3, 1885, Dr. Kendall and brother, P. G. Kendall, bought the stock of E. W. Patten, and now have one of the best and prettiest drug stores in the county. April 21, 1887, Mr. E. E. Kendall was united in marriage to Iva G., daughter of Henry and Helen R. Miner (deceased), residents of Fairview, Erie county. A son, M. Raymond, was born July 3, 1888; a son, Ralph L., died July 23, 1891, aged 11 months; a daughter, Leah Isabella, was born September 5, 1894. Dr. Kendall is a member of the M. E. Church and the board of trustees of the academy, and is president of the public school board. He has an active membership in the following lodges: I. O. O. F., Knights of the Maccabees, P. H. Circle and E. A. U.

Hon. William Benson, banker, Waterford, Pa., one of the substantial business men of Erie county, is a descendant of Isaac Benson, who emigrated from County Armagh, Ireland, to America in 1780, accompanied by his wife, Lydia (Lytle) Benson. They settled in Salina, N. Y., where they remained about a year or two, when they removed to Warren county, Pennsylvania. They were the parents of three children, viz.: James, William and Margaret. James married a Rebecca Van Kirk, by whom he had ten children, five boys and five girls. They lived about a mile east of Waterford. William married Sarah Bishop, of Delhi, N. Y., and they reared a family of seven children, viz.: James F., John B., Emily M., married Noah H. Shane, of Cleveland, O.; William, Jane, married James M. Scott, of North East; S. B. and George W. William Benson is the only one now living. The father, Isaac Benson, was a carpenter and joiner by trade, and did some of the first building in the town of Waterford, where he settled. He assisted in getting out the timber used in the construction of Commodore Perry's fleet. He ran a keel boat from Pittsburg to Waterford, and brought the nails used in building the first houses in the locality, which was then nearly a wilderness, the old French and English fort being the only building in the place. In 1838 he built a tannery about one mile east of the town, which he operated until his death, which occurred in 1850, at the age of 62. He was well known in the county and prominent in politics, and during the existence of the Whig party was one of its strongest advocates in Erie county. In 1826 he was elected one of the county commissioners, and was justice of the peace from 1840 to the time of his death. He also held several other local offices. William Benson was born in Waterford April 5, 1818. The house where he was born is still standing. He received his education in the Waterford Academy. At the age of 17 he engaged in teaching school, and taught a district school four winters, and one year in Waterford Academy. He then clerked in a store three years, when he followed farming about six years. In 1850 he was elected a justice of the peace to succeed his father. He held that commission sixteen years. He followed surveying a great deal, and served as county surveyor from 1854 to 1863. Mr. Benson was elected associate judge of Erie county in 1866, and re-elected in 1871, serving ten years. He was one of the last associate judges under the old constitution. He has served as one of the trustees of Waterford Academy since 1850. In 1861 he engaged in banking in Waterford, in partnership with Chester West, under the firm name of Benson & West. In 1874 Mr. West sold his interest to S. G. Brotherton, who died in 1886. Since that time Mr. Benson has been in the banking business alone. He was married December 30, 1841, to Miss Submit, daughter of Jason Phelps, who was one of the early settlers of Waterford and a native of Connecticut. To this union have been born five children, viz.: Edgar, cashier of bank; Kate, married Charles Phelps, both deceased; George (deceased), William P., Waterford, and Jessie, married William G. Sargent, agent for the P. S. & L. E. R. R. at Meadville. The number of responsible public positions which Mr. Benson has held is the best evidence of his ability, and this fact also shows that he has always been regarded as a man fully worthy of the confidence and esteem of the community. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and cast his first vote for General Harrison, in 1840.

Eugene P. Benson, bank cashier, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born November 5, 1842, in Waterford township. He was educated in the Waterford Academy, and has been a life-long resident of the township. Mr. Benson has been identified in the work of extending numerous surveys of the township and borough since 1860. He became associated with the Waterford Bank as cashier in 1890, and became a resident of the borough in 1870. He is a son of William Benson, who was born in 1818, and came to the locality at an early date. Eugene P. Benson was united in marriage to Adelia C., daughter of John Brown, of Summit township, in 1866. He is a member of the Waterford Lodge, F. & A. M. and the A. O. U. W.

E. W. Patten, druggist, born January 26, 1861, in LeBeuf township, where he spent several years of his early life. Educated at Waterford Academy, he soon after accepted a clerkship in his present store with Bowman & Smith, and in the fall of 1883 purchased Dr. Bowman's interest, and the firm continued under the name of Clemens & Patten until 1886, when Mr. Patten assumed entire control of the business, which has greatly increased under his successful management. He is a son of Thomas Patten, of LeBeuf township, and is a member of the Waterford Lodge, F. & A. M. He was married in 1886 to Nettie N. Briggs, of Waterford borough.

L. M. Ross, boot and shoe-dealer, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born in McKean township, Erie county, in 1841. He was a son of James S. Ross, who died in 1885. He moved to Waterford township in 1851, and was engaged in lumbering for some time. His wife was Sarah Ann Wilson, a native of Vermont. Mr. L. M. Ross was married in 1862 to Nancy Jane Lunger. Their children are: Hattie Elizabeth, wife of George Wells, born in 1863; Fred Ernest Ross, born in 1872. Mr. Ross was for many years engaged in the lumber business, and embarked in the boot and shoe trade in 1893, and is also an active member of the A. O. U. W. and I. O. O. F.

James X. Haynes, farmer, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born in England in 1833, and came to this country with his parents at the age of 11 years. He was the son of Thomas Haynes, an early resident of the township, who died in 1891. James X. Haynes was married in 1852 to Ellen Beaumont, daughter of Mark Hill and Sarah (Thornton) Beaumont. Their children are Mary Ellen, wife of Abram Burger, of Erie; Mark Hill Haynes, Erie; John F. Haynes, Bagdad, Erie county; Anna, wife of William Craig, of Bagdad, Erie county; James F. Haynes, Bagdad, Erie county; Harry Haynes, Waterford township; Minnie, wife of Dana Briggs, Waterford. Mr. Haynes has resided on the farm he now occupies during the past forty-two years.

John M. Moore (deceased) was born in 1836 in Waterford township and spent most of his days on the farm on which he died, October 27, 1883. He was married September 15, 1869, to Carrie V. Wheeler, daughter of Stephen D. and Nancy (Pritchard) Wheeler, natives of New Hampshire, who came to Waterford township when the locality was a dense wilderness. Many of the early scenes are recalled by Mrs. Susan Moore, who still survives, being in her 83d year. J. M. Moore was a son of Alexander Moore, who came to this country from Ireland at the age of 12 years. He married Susie Lytle. The children of Mr. Moore are Dwight Kirk and Forest Free Moore, who, with their mother, conduct the farm which was surveyed and purchased by their ancestors three generations ago.

Judson Walker, farmer, Waterford township born December 26, 1836, on the farm now occupied by him, was educated in the Waterford Academy, and afterwards taught township schools several terms, later becoming interested in farming, and since 1860 has devoted his time chiefly to that. December 30, 1883, he became equally interested with his brother, Joseph, in the farm upon which he now resides. Joseph Walker died on the 4th of April, 1894. Judson Walker was elected treasurer of Erie county on the Republican ticket in 1889, and served three years. He is identified as a prominent farmer with the township interests, and is a member of the following organizations: F. & A. M., I. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W. The remaining members of the family, not heretofore mentioned, are: Francis R., Waterford; Cecelia A., Nancy M., at home, and Sarah A., Mrs. A. M. Wood, Lincoln, Neb. James Walker, Judson's father, was born in 1796, was a native of Connecticut, and of Revolutionary stock. His father, Joseph Walker, was a member on the staff of General LaFayette. He was himself a soldier in the war of 1812, for which he received a pension. At the time of his death he was the eldest man in Waterford township. He settled, in 1816, on the place where Judson now resides, coming from New York State. In 1850, assisted by his sons, he built over a mile of the plank road, then being constructed from Waterford to Erie, and during the construction of the Philadelphia and Erie R. R. he and his sons constructed some three miles of said road. In 1836 he married Sarah Ross, of Meadville, Pa., who died March 30, 1866. They were among the pioneers of the county. Judson Walker has held all the township offices, and during the year 1887 was transcribing clerk in the State Senate at Harrisburg. He was married April 11, 1835, to Miss Kate M. Crawford, of Erie, Pa. He is a Republican in politics, and has several times been elected a delegate to the party conventions. Mr. Walker has a farm of 325 acres, located three miles from Waterford and twelve miles from Erie, on the Waterford and Harbor Creek road, and is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

I. C. Hayes, tanner, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., born February 18, 1837, in Waterford, a son of James and Polly (Boyd) Hayes, who were early identified with the town. James Hayes was born in 1799. His father was a native of Ireland. At an early day he went to Milton, Pa., to learn the trade of chair-making and wheelwright. After learning his trade he located in Waterford. He married in 1823, and spent the remainder of his life in Waterford, excepting a short time spent in Mill Creek, and on farms near Waterford. Fourteen children blessed this union, of which I. C. was the ninth child. The father died March 1, 1874, and his wife, November 18, 1866. Much interesting history surrounds the ancestors of this large family, many of whom served in the Revolutionary war. I. C. Hayes married Eta Barnett. One son was born to them, William Boyd Hayes. Mrs. Hayes died, and Mr. Hayes afterwards married Rose Johnson; they had five children, as follows: Clarence, born April 3, 1876; Alice, born October 7, 1878; Jessie, born September 27, 1880. Two children are dead: Ella, born December 25, 1882; Irwin, born November 21, 1884. Mr. Hayes was a member of the 83d Reg., P. V. I., and was wounded at the battle of Bull Run. He has always made Waterford his home, and has for some time been proprietor of the Waterford tannery.

H. L. White, retired, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., born April 3, 1831, in Waterford borough, was a son of I. M. White, born 1802, a native of Vermont, and whose wife was Rose Anna Lenox, of Erie county, born 1803. Their children were W. C. White, born May 15, 1833, and H. L. White, who married Naomi Rich, born May 15, 1837, daughter of Richard and Mary Rich, of Erie, natives of England. Their children are E. L. White, of Nashville, Tenn., and Della R., wife of G. G. McLean. Mr. White began life as a clerk for Cooper & Stanford, and was afterward in the employ of H. H. Whitney & White and Lucius Phelps. In 1860 he took the census of the east half of the city of Erie, all of North East township and borough, Harbor Creek, Greene and Waterford borough and township. In the fall of the same year he became traveling salesman for J. C. Burgess, and afterward for Clemens, Caughey & Burgess, of Erie, retiring in 1874, when he became a resident of Waterford borough where he has since lived.

Chester West (deceased), was born in Greenwich, Mass., in 1816, son of Justice and Ruth (Marvin) West, of Scotch descent. Chester came to Erie county at the age of 13 years, and went to live with his uncle, Dr. Loren West, of Edinboro, who died at an early day, leaving Chester to gain a livelihood, which he did by engaging in mercantile pursuits. Later he came to Waterford, and soon after associated himself in business with John Marvin, and engaged in general merchandising and the lumber trade. In 1860, he became associated with Judge Benson, and organized the first bank in Waterford, under the firm name of Benson & West. He continued in the banking business until 1874, when he retired. His death occurred May 3, 1891. Mr. West was married in 1855, at Nashville, Tenn., to Sophie, daughter of Michael Dominique and Victoire Hersant, natives of Paris, France. The children are: Alice West (deceased), Otis C. West, merchant, New York, and W. H. West, M. D., of Waterford, a graduate of Columbia University, class 1890.

Montello W. Davis, merchant, Waterford, Pa., born 1849, in Waterford township, son of William and Louise (Thomas) Davis, natives of Vermont. William Davis died in 1864, and was the son of Zophar Davis, a native of Long Island, and who came to Erie county with his family in 1816. He died in 1856. Montello W. Davis spent a portion of his early life in Andover, N. Y., and in Waterford township. In 1886 he engaged in the grocery business with his brother, M. M. Davis, in Waterford borough, under the firm name of Davis Bros. M. M. Davis sold his interest to M. A. Fatten in 1889, which firm now exists as Davis & Fatten. Mr. Davis was married in 1873 to Florence E., daughter of John A. Benson, of Waterford township. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W.

J. L. Cook, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., born January 28, 1811, in Buffalo, N. Y., son of Robert and Lodemaria Cook, natives of New England. Robert Cook was accidentally shot in 1811, while sitting in a hotel in Buffalo. His widow moved to Chautauque county, New York, and bought a farm; she was subsequently married to Samuel Truesdale; she died in 1827. Mr. J. L. Cook remained with his mother until 12 years of age. He then lived with Capt. John Tracy one year, and was afterwards hostler at H. G. Davis' hotel. He learned the cabinet-maker's trade of Johnson Boyd, with whom he served five years. Besides learning his trade, he assisted in caring for his five younger brothers and sisters, a liberal trait in his character which has followed him through his life-long career. His life since early childhood has been one of persistent activity, pushing one enterprise after another, and now, at the close of four score years, he is found full of life and animation. He married Belinda, daughter of John Boyd, Esq. Six children were born to them, as follows: Laura M., wife of John Brion; Ella, wife of D. D. Miner; Julia, wife of the late Dr. Spencer, of Erie; Lee (deceased); Cook and Edwin (deceased). Mrs. Cook departed this life September 1, 1877. Mr. Cook was proprietor of Cook's Hotel for fifteen years; at the same time was engaged in the carpenter and joiner business, employing from three to five men most of the time. He was one of the company who constructed the Lake Shore R. R. from the New York State line to North East, including the building of a bridge over Twenty-Mile creek, 580 feet long and 100 feet high, and the railroad buildings at North East. He then engaged in building three miles of plank road from Waterford to Marvin's Mills; piers and abutments across the Wabash at Vincennes, Ind.; graded about twelve miles of the O. & M. R. R., and about twenty on the U. M. in Missouri, and erected twenty buildings. He then returned to Waterford and purchased the Eagle Hotel, which he conducted three years, then sold out and went to Cameron, Pa., and opened the Riddle House, which he ran in connection with his trade for four years. He then erected a large hotel, a block of buildings and a residence, which he presented to his daughter, Laura. At that time he built the greater part of Emporium, Pa., and was worth $120,000. Reverses came, and his buildings were consumed by fire. He then engaged in the hotel business in the oil regions, and was again burned out. He then returned to Waterford, and with his old time vigor, erected the Park Hotel and other buildings. Waterford, like the places herein before mentioned in this sketch, has not only in this instance, but in numerous other ways, received a lasting benefit from this public-spirited citizen.

Lewis Sedgwick, retired farmer, Waterford township, Erie county, Pa., was born August 28, 1813, in Rensselaer county, New York; he has lived on the farm where he now resides since 1825. He is a son of Aaron Sedgwick, who was born in Massachusetts, coming to Waterford township at an early day, when the country was a dense wilderness, raised a family of ten children, and died in 1847. Lewis Sedgwick was married August 15, 1839, to Emily H., daughter of Captain Reuben Sharpe, a native of England, a soldier of the war of 1812, and an early settler of Erie county. Four children were born to them, as follows: Elmina M., wife of Wilson Marsh; Eugene V., who lost his life at the battle of Cedar Mountain, while acting as second sergeant in the 11th, P. V. I.; Jeremame B., of the United States navy, resident of Omaha, Neb., and Claude D., of Waterford township. Mr. Sedgwick is a grandson of Gordon Sedgwick, a soldier of the Revolutionary war, and besides being prominent in the various interests of the township, has served as assessor, constable and collector.

T. W. Barton, M. D., physician and surgeon, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., was born in Weston, Windsor county, Vt., in 1836, and is a son of Ira and Mary Barton, the latter a native of Vermont. Ira Barton was born in Hoosac, N. Y., March 24, 1796, and was a son of Timothy S. Barton, a native of Massachusetts and a soldier of the Revolutionary war. Ira was a graduate of the Medical College at Castleton, Vt., and began his practice in Western Vermont, continuing it in Massachusetts. In 1836 he came to Erie city, where he practiced four years, and then came to Waterford, where he followed his profession for forty years. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, enlisting when he was but 16 years old. Dr. T. W. Barton graduated from the Buffalo Medical College in 1862, and began the practice of his profession in Hartstown, Crawford county, Pa., where he remained until 1865, when he removed to Waterford, Erie county, Pa., and formed a partnership with his father, who finally retired from active duties of the profession in 1872. His death occurred in 1884. Dr. T. W. Barton was married October 4, 1864, to Emeline, daughter of Dr. James White, of Hartstown, Crawford county, Pa. Their children are: Shirley McLean, May E. and Loyd Barton. Dr. Barton became associated in the drug business with W. L. Kelly in 1882, and has since continued a prosperous business. He is a member of the F. & A. M. and I. O. O. F. societies.

Harvey Boyd, farmer and dealer in lumber, Waterford, Erie county, Pa., born February 21, 1815, on his present farm in Waterford township, Erie county, Pa., which consists of 200 acres of excellent farming land and a saw-mill, with a capacity of 3,000 feet per day. He is the son of the late James and Elizabeth (Lattimore) Boyd, who came to Waterford township and settled on the farm now owned by Harvey Boyd in 1802. Mr. Boyd was educated at the Waterford Academy, and was married to Sarah Ann Hinrod, daughter of Moses and Nancy (Lattimore) Hinrod, early settlers of Erie county. Their children are: J. Flavel, Elizabeth L. and Sarah A.

A. S. Pearce, Wayne township, farmer, Wheelock post office, was born in Columbus, Warren county, Pa., in 1838. He was the son of Ira Pearce, who in 1826, removed to Columbus from New York State. He was accompanied by two brothers, Erastus, now dead, and Loren, who died in 1889. A. S. was married in 1858, to Miss Sophia Mertz, daughter of Jacob H. Mertz, who came from New England in 1830 and settled on the State line. The children of A. S. are: Dessa M., wife of W. P. Hall, of Corry; Ira M., Lee C., Guy B., Ida, wife of Grant Barton, of Corry; Lora L., and Lo L. Mr. Pearce was a member of the Erie three months' men, under the command of Captain Austin. He afterwards enlisted in Co. K, 199th Reg. P. V. I., under Captain Echols. He is a member of G. A. R. post No. 70, of Corry. His grandfather, Loren Pearce, was a veteran in the war of 1812, and his brother Edgar N., was in the late Rebellion. A. S. Pearce, besides being engaged in farming pursuits, also represents the granite works of M. D. Judd, as traveling salesman.

Andrew Lyons, lumberman, Wayne township, Erie county, Pa., was born in Erie county, April 2, 1838. He is a son of Jesse and Jane (Kincaid) Lyons, who were married in 1837. The latter was born June 7, 1818, and died November 23, 1886; the former was born July 1, 1814, and died November 2, 1866. He came to Wayne township in 1834, where Mr. Lyons carried on a milling business, besides conducting a farm, and was a most thorough-going citizen. To this union were born eleven children, as follows: Andrew, Joshua (deceased), William (deceased), Rebecca E. (deceased), Julia A., Amanda A., Jesse K. (deceased), Samuel A., Rosetta J. (deceased), Celia N., and Sophronia A. The grandfather of Andrew Lyons, John Kincaid, was a veteran of the war of 1812. Andrew Lyons was married January 20, 1864, to Julia A. Bloss, who was born October 13, 1835. Their issue has been as follows: Carrie P., born March 17, 1871, and died September 6, 1888; and Eugene A., born November 21, 1873. Mr. Lyons has been engaged in the milling business sixteen years, and has run an extensive mill in Wayne township since 1885. He has been township commissioner, tax collector and assessor, and is a most highly respected citizen, of temperate habits.

William Buller, superintendent, State Fish Commissioner, Corry, Erie county, Pa., came to Corry in 1885, from Allentown, Pa., and accepted the position of superintendent of the State Hatcheries, one mile west of the City of Corry. This was at the time the State Commissioners purchased the present property of private owners, and fitted and enlarged the same, making it the most extensive of any in the State. William Buller was born in Maytown, Lancaster county, Pa., in 1853 and is a son of William B. and Annie (Gish) Buller, of Lancaster. Their children were: William, Emlen, Nathan, Howard, Bertha, Fannie and Abram, all living. Mr. Buller has been in the employ of the Commission for twenty-four years, and is a most enthusiastic and energetic man in this line, and has made numerous valued additions to the Commission. Since the start ten years ago there has been added, under the personal supervision of Mr. Buller, thirty-seven ponds, new spring-houses, food grinding machines, office, bridges, hatchery enlarged, and the ponds boarded and graveled, so that now Corry's hatchery has twice the amount of fish that any hatchery in the State of Pennsylvania contains. Mr. Buller makes this his first interest, and thus has attained great success in his chosen vocation.

ERRORS AND EXPLANATIONS.

- Page 85—The first National Convention of the Republican party was held in Philadelphia in June, 1856. It nominated Fremont and Dayton.
- Page 75—The postoffice name of Mill Town is Arbuckle. Lake Pleasant postoffice is at the head of the lake. Little Elk postoffice is in Girard township. (See map.)
- Page 76—"Mill Town (Lake Pleasant postoffice)" should read "Mill Town (Arbuckle postoffice.)"
- Page 81—Front Run should read Trout Run.
- Page 85—Six-Mile creek was accidentally omitted from the list of Lake Shore streams. See page 316 for a description of the same.
- Page 126—Gen. Reed's first steamboat was the Peacock, John Fleeharty, captain. The Pennsylvania was his second steamboat.
- Page 183—The distance referred to in the account of the fast train on the Lake Shore R. R. is from the Union Depot at Erie to the outer limits of Buffalo.
- Page 233—The Maine Liquor Law was defeated in 1854.
- Page 264—The name of E. Camphausen, Consul at Naples, should appear under the heading of "Other U. S. Officers."
- Pages 292-302—Little Elk postoffice is in Girard township. (See map.)
- Page 349—The Conneaut branch of the Shenango R. R. extends through the southern part of Springfield township. Its stations in the township are West Springfield and Five Corners.
- Page 397—There are thirty-four election districts in Erie City.
- Page 420—The sum of $10,000, appropriated to Erie harbor in August, 1894, through the efforts of Hon. Joseph C. Sibley, was unintentionally omitted.
- Page 501—The Burdett Piano Company is located at Peach and Eighteenth streets.
- Page 550—Levi Vincent came to America about 1700, during the reign of William III.

PART VII.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Aaron, Christopher B.	764½-676	Allison, William, Sr.	640	Arbuckle, Pressly	591
" Rev. F. P.	830	" David.	833	" Richard H.	806
" Jacob.	676	" Wm. F.	833	" Wm. G.	591
" Rev. Stephen E.	682	Almshouse, County.	146	" Wm. M.	591
Abattoirs and Meat Packing		" Stewards, List of.	274	" Wm. I.	591
Houses, Erie.	496	Alps Insurance Company, Erie	181	" Wm., Sr.	591
Abandonment of the Canal.	180	Altice, Rev. M. D. M.	863	Atkinson, W. P.	740
Abbey, W. F.	733	Amateur Fishermen.	424	Archer, C. B.	852
Abolishment of the Street Mar-		American Force at Erie.	107	" F. B.	855
ket, Erie.	523	" Fort Le Boeuf.	106	Arthur, John V.	823
Abolition Party Started.	225	" Garrison at Le Boeuf	105	Aubrey, H. C.	673
Aboriginal Inhabitants.	91	" Independence.	102	Austin, Capt. J. F.	773
Aborigines.	19	" Occupation.	94	Avonia.	299
Academy of Music, Erie.	520	Amity, County Officers from.	288	Babbitt, Elijah.	600
" Pupils, Erie, in 1844.	492	" Township.	287	Baker, John.	855
Academy Lands.	109	" Description of.	288	Baldwin, Frank E.	858
Academies and Seminaries.	189	Amity Township, History of.	287-289	" Nelson.	651
Ackerman, Philip.	855	" Mills and Roads.	287	Ball, Gideon J.	579
Acreage of Townships, Erie		" Pioneers of.	288	Ball & Colt Bankers, Erie.	480
County.	79	" Population of.	287	Banks and Bank Failures.	537
Act for laying out the town of		" Schools and Churches.	288	Bank of Commerce, Erie.	478
Presque Isle.	387	" Streams and Bridges.	287	Baptist Church, Early.	140-143
Adams, Davis B.	797	" Value of Farm Lands.	288	Barnes, Chas. G.	761
" John Quincy, Chosen		An Ancient Structure.	530	Barnhurst, H. R.	600
" President by the House.	219	Ancient Graveyard, An.	80	Barron, J. J.	829
Additional Law Judges.	150	Anchor Line Docks, Erie.	421	" Peter.	829
Adjutant Generals, List of.	264	Anderson, A. J.	820	" Thomas.	828
Adoption of Common School		" C. W. S.	891	" Valentine.	828
System, Erie County.	189	" Leslie M.	794	Barr, C. A.	873
Advent Churches.	143	Andrews, Dr. Wm. K.	805	" Family.	592
Advertiser, Erie.	176	Angola Disaster.	182	" George H.	592
African M. E. Church.	143	Animal Training (A. G. Mar-		" James, Sr.	592
After the Battle of Lake Erie.	136	tin's sketch).	792	" James.	593
Agricultural Societies.	193	Annual Salaries of Erie City		" Lester J.	594
Aitkin, A. B.	657	Officials.	407	" Matthew R.	593
Akam, G. O.	765	Anthracite Coal.	19	" Samuel.	593
Alarmed by a Camp Fire.	543	Anti-Cameron Outbreak in the		Bar Association, Erie.	100
Alberstadt, Tobias S.	744	Republican Party.	251	Bar, The Erie County.	143
Albion Borough, Descriptive.	285	Anti-Masonic Era.	220	Bartholme, Fred.	872
" Churches.	285	Anti-Slavery Movement.	139	Barton, Dr. T. W.	895
" Incorporated.	285	Anti-Slavery Riot.	38	Base Ball Grounds, Erie.	429
" Mills, News-		An Unsolved Mystery (C. T.		Batchelor, Harry.	795
" papers, Hotel, etc.	268	" Hall sketch).	786	Battershill, Wm. A.	746
Albion Borough Schools and		A. O. U. W., Erie.	472	Battles, Dr. R. W.	807
Secret Societies.	286	Appalling Lake Disasters.	128	Battles fought in Penn'a.	19
Albion Station.	284	Applebee, Patrick.	757	Battle Flags of Penn'a.	44
Aldermen, List of, in Erie.	406	Aqueducts in Erie County.	85	Bay and Harbor, Erie.	419
A Live King in Erie.	191	Arbiter-Zeitung.	591	Beaver, James A.	56½-67
Allen, Benjamin.	787	Arbuckle, Adam.	591	Beaver, Rev. Theodore C.	855
" Geo. A.	330½-595	" Family.	591	Beatty, Hugh.	848
" Henry.	787	" Frank P.	591	" John.	740½-848
" Henry C.	888	" Geo. W.	592	Beaver Dam.	380
" Henry, Sr.	889	" James.	592	Beck, Charles.	691
" James D.	640	" J. P.	592
Allison, James W.	647	" John B.	591
" William.	640

PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
	Beckman, Christian	817	Block Houses at Erie	107	Brown, David
	" Henry	817	Bloeser, Frank	755	" F. J.
	Beebe, Dr. F. A.	770	Blum, Frank A.	732	" George
	Beer, Ale and Malt Manu- facture, Erie	531	Board of Public Charities, Erie	436	" Henry
	Beginning of the Iron Indus- try	119	Board of Trade, Erie	504	" Isaac B.
	Bell of the Queen Charlotte	137	Bogenschutz, Nicholas T.	837	" Joseph
	Bell, Wm., Jr.	704	Bolard, John A.	891	" Joseph K.
	Belle Valley	330	Bolke, Wm.	811	" Richard T.
	Bemis, Henry S.	670	Bolles, Stephen W.	740	" Samuel
	Benevolent Societies (Miscel- laneous)	472	Bond, Jno. A.	883	" Scott
	Bennett, Henry J.	724	Boniski, Frank	704	" W. S.
	Bernritter, John	820	"Boo" Bladen, Colored Pioneer	822	Brown's Hotel, Erie
	" John, Sr.	820	Books in Early Use	188	Bruder, Andrew
	Berst, Henry	704	Booth, Rev. Geo. B.	808	Brundage, M. W.
	" Hiram L.	705	Borough and City Charters, Corry	536	Bryce, Alexander
	" Jacob	705	" Incorporated	74	" George
	" John	152½-704	" Boroughs, Principal	20	" Jno., V. S.
	" Titus	705	Bert, L. D.	845	" Peter H.
	Benson, Chas. P.	808	Borthwick, Lieut.-Com. J. L. D.	575	" Robt. H.
	" Eugene P.	893	Bostwick, Chas. F.	693	Buchanan and Breckenridge
	" Isaac	893	" Dewitt C.	846	" Elected
	" James C.	723	" John	846	" Buckshot War
	" Judge Wm.	835	Boundaries of Erie County	71	Buettner, Jno.
	" Joseph	643	Boundary Lines of Erie County	75	Bull, Geo.
	Benze, Rev. Adolph L.	698½-599	Bowman, Balser	890	Building and Loan Associa- tions, Erie
	" Rev. Gustave	599	" Joseph, Sr.	781	Building Inspector, Erie
	Bible Society, Erie County	143	Boyd, Harvey	896	" of Perry's Fleet at Erie
	Bicycle Works, Erie	497	" J. A.	892	Building Permits, Issued 1889- 94, Erie
	Biebel, Daniel	810	Boyer, Andrew	841	Buller, Wm.
	" George	810	Braddock's Defeat	20-24 101	Bumpus, J. F.
	Bigler, William	40½-66	Brady, John C.	598	Burchfield, Chas. S.
	"Big Oaks from Little Acorns Grow"	495	Brainerd, Samuel	637	Bureau of Charities, Erie
	Bingham, Benson	851	" Samuel M.	637	Burgesses of Erie
	" Jonathan	851	Brandes, Dr. Charles	584	Burgoyne, Jno. J.
	Biographies of the Govern- ors	65-68	Branchville	324	Burke, Andrew
	Biographical Sketches	543-896	Brass Works, Erie	497	" James
	Bird, Rankin and Davis, Fate of	138	Bray, Rev. James M.	643	Burning of Black Rock and Buffalo
	Bishops of the Erie Diocese (Catholic)	140	Break up of the Democratic Party in 1860	237	Buffalo
	Bishop Mullen (Catholic), Erie	457	Brewer, E. W.	859	Burning of the Steamboat Erie
	" Spalding (Episcopal)	444	Breweries, Erie	195	Burns, James H.
	" Vincent (Episcopal)	446	Brewster, First	117	Burton Family
	Bituminous Coal	20	Brick Works, Erie	497	" Allured, P.
	Black, Jno. F.	764	Brickyards, First	117	" Frank C.
	" Jno. R.	764	Bridges in Erie County	85	" J. B.
	" Matthew	764	Brief History of the Erie Coun- ty Regiments	209	" J. E.
	Bladen, A. B.	822	" Briggs, B. F.	855	" John
	Blair, David P.	735	" C. M.	865	" Spencer
	" James	735	" Henry R.	874	Busch, C. F.
	Blanchard, Wm. F.	868	" John	855	Buseck, Emil V.
	" Blank Bo'k and Printing Es- tablishments, Erie	497	Brindie, J. A.	823	Bush, Chas. H.
	Blauvelt, J. A.	848	" Samuel	823	Business at the Port of Erie
	Blenner, Anthony	747	British Army at Erie	94	Business Blocks, Erie, when erected
	" Edward C.	753	Briony, Rev. Farrell	834	" erected
	Bliss, John H.	208½-559	Brooks, Geo. W.	881	Business Centers, Erie, at Va- rious Periods
	" John, an Officer in the " War of 1812	559	" Stephen B.	882	Business and Residence Streets, Erie
	Bliss, Joseph, in the Conti- nental Army	559	Brown, Asel	719	Butt, Alonzo W.
	Bliss, George T.	560	Brown's Avenue Mission (Meth- odist Church), Erie	448	" G. Will.
			Brown, B. B.	635	" Wendell
			" Conrad J.	594	Butterfield, Henry
			" Daniel J.	884	Button Works, Erie

PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Cady, William.....	765	Cattle Driving and Selling.....	198	City Hall, Erie.....	439
Caflisch, Albert.....	869	" Trade, The.....	198	" Hospital, Erie.....	439
" Jacob.....	869	Caughy Family, Early Settlers.....	571	" Recorder of Erie.....	152
" John.....	869	" Andrew.....	571	" Superintendents, Erie and
Calls for More Men in the War		" Andrew H.....	571	" Corry.....	190
for the Union.....	205-206	" John.....	571	City Solicitors, Erie.....	406
Cameron, Opposition to in his		" John H.....	571	" Superintend'ts of Schools,
Party.....	251	" Miles W.....	571	" Erie.....	487
Camp, Benj. F.....	867	" Samuel H.....	571	City Superintendents of Streets
" Irvin.....	867	" Samuel S.....	571	and Sidewalks, Erie.....	406
Campaign of 1814 at Erie.....	136	Cauley, Rev. P. M.....	653	City Treasurers, Erie.....	405
Canal Abandoned.....	180	Cavalry Companies Recruited.....	202	Clark, David S.....	609
" Commissioners First		Cedars, The.....	428	" Family.....	631
" Elected.....	226	Cemeteries Established.....	144	" Chauncey.....	631
Canal, Erie-Beaver.....	179	Centennial Celebration, 1895,		" David.....	631
Canty, Jeremiah H.....	739	" Erie.....	525	" David, Jr.....	631
Capitals of the State.....	20	Centennial Exhibition, 1876.....	21	" Henry A.....	631
Captains of Police, Erie.....	414	Central Market House, Erie.....	523	" Henry.....	631
Capture of Forts at Erie and		" Park, Erie.....	425	" Joel.....	631
Waterford.....	93	" Presbyterian Church,		" William First White
Care of Paupers, Cost of.....	147	" Erie.....	440	Child Born in Harbor Creek.....	631
Carey, Isaac.....	718	Central Presbyterian Mission		Clark, Donald.....	807
" John H.....	749	Schools, Erie.....	440	" Fred'k.....	843
Carnegie Docks, Erie.....	421	Chaffee, Judge Weber.....	8-6	" Haniel.....	869
" Library (Pittsburg)		" W. E.....	801	" Louis S.....	865
" Builder of.....	613	Chamberlin, Merrick B.....	878	" Timothy.....	943
Carnes, William.....	722	Chambers, Ezekiel.....	891	Claus, H. V.....	820½-589
Carney, James.....	836½	" James.....	891	Clay and Polk Campaign.....	227
Carriage and Wagon Works,		Chambersburg, Burning of.....	44	Clerks of the Courts, List of.....	270
Erie.....	498	Change in the Actual Settlement		" of the U. S. Courts.....	153
Carroll Family.....	880	Law.....	110	" of the Erie Markets.....	406
" Ferdinand.....	880	Chapin, Dr. Samuel F.....	628	" to County Commission-
" Fletcher S.....	881	Character of Erie County Soil.....	72	" ers.....	273
" George.....	880	Charter Members, Board of		Clerks to Directors of the Poor.....	274
" George W.....	880	" Trade.....	504	Cleveland and Erie Railroad.....	181
" James.....	880	Chase, O. M.....	765	Cleveland and Hendricks
" John.....	880	Chesterlee, Jacob.....	851	" Elected.....	253
" Jonathan M.....	880	Cheney, Harrison C.....	692½-871	Cleveland, Frank F.....	609
" O. W.....	880	Cherry Hill.....	284	" Re-elected.....	258
" Samuel.....	881	Chestnut Street Presbyterian		" W. L.....	608
" Thomas.....	880	Church, Erie.....	441	Climate of Pennsylvania.....	21
" Wesley.....	880	Chidester, Dr. C. B.....	732½	" of Erie County.....	73
" William.....	880	Chiefs of Police, Erie.....	414	Close of the War for the Carse, John.....	700½-667	Cholera in Erie.....	198	" Union.....	207
Carter, Edward D.....	657	Chor, Philip.....	736	Close of Navigation, dates of.....	129
" John H.....	657	Christian Church, Early.....	140-143	Cloughsburg.....	396
" John S.....	594	" Endeavor Societies.....	143	Club Houses, etc.....	429
" Hill.....	381	" Endeavor Union of		Clune, Michael F.....	834
Cascades in Erie County.....	80	" Erie.....	467	Coal and Oil Inspectors, List
Casey, James.....	314½-605	Churches in Pennsylvania.....	20	of.....	277
" James F.....	605	Church of Christ (Taber-		Coal Dealers & Dock Builders.....	523
" Very Rev. T. A.....	322½-605	nacle), Erie.....	465	Coal Shipments, 1874-1894.....	422
Catholic Benevolent Legion.....	473	Church Organizations in the		Coat of Arms, Pennsylvania.....	21
" Bishops, Erie Diocese		County, 1880.....	141	Cochran, Dr. Geo. W.....	428
".....	140-456	Circuses and Shows.....	198	Cochran's Grove.....	428
Catholic Church, Growth of.....	140	Cities and Towns, Principal in		Cochran, John.....	602
" Churches, Schools, etc		Pennsylvania.....	20	" Robert.....	602
" Ladies' Mutual Bene-		Cities of Erie County, when		Colby, Chas. C. Jr.....	658
" fit Association.....	473	Incorporated.....	74	" C. Sr.....	658
Catholic Literary and other So-		City Assessors, Erie.....	406	" John.....	658
cieties.....	473	" Boundaries, Erie.....	390	" Piano Works, Erie.....	658
Catholic Mutual Benefit Asso-		" Charters, Erie.....	389	Col. Collars' Narrow Escape.....	891
ciation.....	473	" Controllers, Erie.....	406	Cole, Geo. W.....	840
Catholic Parochial Schools, 188-493		" Councilmen, Erie.....	490	" Thos. H.....	694
" Societies.....	472	" Electrician, Erie.....	406	Coleman, Wm. B.....	549½-744
" Union, Knights of St.		" Engineers, Erie.....	406	Collection District of Presque
John.....	473	" Finances of Erie.....	398	Isle.....	129

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Collectors of Customs, Erie.	129-263	Conrad, Joseph.	820	County Commissioners' Council to, List of.	273
Collectors of Internal Revenue		Conrader, Chas. A.	710	County Commissioners, Minority Representation.	247
Erie.	20	" Rudolph.	710	County Detectives.	275
Colleges in Pennsylvania.	20	Constable, Chas. A.	709	" Finances, 1861-1870.	208
Collins, John Henry.	664	" Edward W.	708	" " in Connection with the Last War.	208
Colored Masons, Erie.	474	" George.	708	County Jails.	145
Colored Odd Fellows, Erie.	474	" Herbert.	708	" Newspapers.	177
Colt's Station Road.	123	" John.	708	" of Erie, History of.	71-345
Colton Family.	602	" John, Jr.	708	" Officials, List of.	267-277
" Eli.	602	" Thomas.	708	" Supts. of Schools.	190-274
" Geo. W.	602	" Washington.	708	" State and U. S. Buildings, Erie.	145-149
" Henry.	602	Constitution, New, Adopted.	246	County Surveyors.	275
" Mark E.	602	Constitution, New, Text of.	45-61	" Treasurers.	270
Company L, Twelfth Cavalry Regiment.	215	Constitutions, Several States.	21	" Treasurer, when first Elected.	226
Competing Candidates for Judge.	150	Constitution, Present State, in full.	45	Courses of Study, Public Schools of Erie City.	489
Concord Township, Churches and Schools.	291	Constitutional Amendments Adopted.	224	Courts of Erie County.	21-149
Concord Township, County Officers.	289	Constitutional Convention, 1837	629	Court Criers, List of.	160-277
Concord Township, Earliest Settlement.	289	" Convent'n, State Convention, Voted Down.	223	" Expenses, 1894.	151
Concord Township, Historical and Descriptive.	289-291	Continental Congress, Sessions of.	20	" House Bell.	430
Concord Township, Population of.	289	Contract Authorized for a Water Supply in Erie.	408	" House, County.	145
Concord Township, Principal Streams.	290	Cook, Francis M.	786	" Terms of.	151
Concord Township, Roads and Railroads.	290	" J. L.	895	Covell, C. L.	767
Concord Township, Value of Farm Lands.	290	" Samuel.	786	Cox, Chas. S.	761
Concord Station.	291	Cooney, John R.	663	" John.	878
Congregational Church.	143	Cooper, Rev. Jeremiah.	863	" Joseph A.	724
Congressmen, Erie District.	262	Coppersmith, Jacob.	728	Cranch, Dr. Edward.	492½-604
Congressional Districts, Pennsylvania.	21	Corbett, W. S.	811	Cranberries and Cranberry Day.	415-529
Congressmen, Leading, from Pennsylvania.	21	Cordoner, Alex. C.	762	Crane, Ira.	763
Conneaut Township, County Officers.	285	Coroners, Erie County.	271	Crane Family.	603
Conneaut Township, Early Settlers.	281	Correspondence between Washington and St. Pierre.	100	" Abiather, a Revolutionary Soldier.	603
Conneaut Township, History of.	281-286	Corry City, Borough and City Charters.	536	Crane, Abiather, Jr.	603
Conneaut Township, Lands and Litigation.	283	Corry City Churches.	538	" Amos B.	603
Conneaut Township, Mills, Schools and Graveyards.	284	" Factories and Business Institutions.	563	" Charles.	603
Conneaut Township, Origin of Name.	281	Corry City, General Description of.	536	" Frank M.	603
Conneaut Township, Population of.	281	Corry City, History of.	535-540	" George.	603
Conneaut Township, Postoffices.	281	" Miscellaneous.	540	" George W.	603
" Pre-Historic Remains.	283	" Newspapers.	538	" Henry H.	603
Conneaut Township, Principal Settlements.	284	" Population, 1870-1890.	78-536	" James M.	603
Conneaut Township, Roads, Railroads and Canals.	283	Corry City, Public Officials.	539	" Joseph M.	603
Conneaut Township, Streams and Bridges.	282	" Schools.	537	" William A.	603
Conneaut Township, Value of Farm Lands.	283	" Secret Societies.	539	" William W.	603
Conrad, C. M.	743	" Sewerage System.	540	Cranesville.	294
" Jacob S.	756½-820	" Water Works.	540	Crawford, B. F.	849
		Cos. A and C, 15th Reg. N. G. P	524	" Thomas, Pioneer.	849
		Cost of Elections, Erie County.	262	Cray, M. A.	712
		Cost of Maintaining the Jail.	145	Criminals, Number of, in Pennsylvania.	21
		Counsel to County Commissioners.	273	Crosby, Manley.	766
		County Almshouse.	146	" Family.	824
		" Auditors.	275	" Michael.	825
		" Minority Representation.	247	" W. G.	638
		County Buildings.	145-147	Crotty, John.	760
		" Commissioners.	271	Crowley, Peter J.	702
		" " Clerks to, List of.	278	Culbertson, Harry.	887
				" W. C.	846½-788
				" John.	890
				" John Augustus.	887

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Eagle Village.....	397	Election Districts, Erie County	75	Erie City Building Pernits
Earliest Merchant Vessels on Lake Erie.....	125	" " First in Erie County.....	216	1889-1894.....	389
Earliest Movement for Erie's Water Supply.....	408	Elections, 1798 to 1895.....	262	Erie City—Business Men of Years Ago.....	505
Earliest Snow Falls.....	196	" Cost of.....	262	When Erected.....	513
" Thoroughfares in the County.....	120	" When Held.....	23	Erie City—Business University	494
Earliest War Vessels on the Lake.....	125	Elevations Above the Lake, Erie City.....	383	" " Bureau of Charities	425
Early Arrivals in Erie.....	391	Elgin Borough.....	291	" " Building and Loan Associations.....	484
" Catholic Burial Places.....	469	Eller, Frank.....	856	Erie City—Catholic Parochial Schools.....	493
" Lawyers in Erie.....	153	" Jacob.....	857	Erie City—Cedars, The.....	428
" Land Purchases, Erie County.....	105	" Michael.....	856	" Centennial Celebration.....	525
Early Military Companies.....	194	" Michael C.....	857	Erie City—Cemeteries and Early Graveyards.....	468
" Mills, etc., in Erie.....	116-495	Ellicott, Maj. Andrew, His Public Services.....	80½-550	Erie City—Changes in Business Centers.....	505
" Mills, Outside of Erie.....	117	Elliott, Andrew.....	798	Erie City—Charity Work.....	528
" Moves for Fire Protection	411	" Thos. A.....	798	" " Citizens' Association.....	534
" Navigation of the Lakes.	125	" Thos.....	798	Erie City—Churches and Sunday Schools.....	437-468
" Police System, Erie.....	414	" John.....	685	Erie City—Christian Endeavor Union.....	467
" Burial Places in Erie.....	448	Elithorp, John C.....	761	Erie City—Charter Granted.....	389
" Post-office Sites, Erie.....	534	Elk Creek Township.....	292-294	" " Councilmen Since 1851.....	400
" Presbyterian Churches in Erie County.....	138	" " Churches and Schools.....	293	Erie City—Chiefs Fire Department.....	413
Early School Buildings.....	486	" " Elk Creek Township, County Officers.....	293	Erie City—Cochran's Grove and The Maples.....	428
" Settlements.....	22	Elk Creek Township, Early Settlers.....	292	Erie City—Central Presbyterian Church.....	440
" Settlers.....	113	Elk Creek Township, General Description.....	292	Erie City—Chestnut Street Presbyterian Church.....	441
" Sunday Schools.....	143	Elk Creek Township, Population of.....	474	Erie City—Christian Science Association.....	465
" Surveys, Erie County.....	105	Elk Creek Township, Roads and Streams.....	293	Erie City—Cranberry Day.....	529
" Surveyors and Land Agents.....	110	Elk Creek Township, Value of Farm Lands.....	292	" " Day Nursery.....	436
East Grene.....	310	Elks, B. P. O. of.....	474	" " Deep Test Gas Well.....	527
East Springfield Borough.....	350	Ely, Theodore J.....	792	Erie City—Defunct Banks in.....	479
East Waterford.....	371	Emanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church, Erie.....	455	" " Destructive Floods, Stream of Mill Creek.....	527
Eaton, Henry M.....	660	Eming, Peter J.....	698	Erie City—Dime Savings Bank.....	480
" Morris.....	660	Eminent Men, Pennsylvania.....	23	" " Directory.....	530
Ebisch, Chas. G.....	683	Engle, Christian.....	797	" " Docks and Lake Business.....	420
" Gustave A.....	683	Engine, First made in Erie.....	741	Erie City—Dock Builders.....	533
" Wm. C.....	683	English and French in Erie County.....	92-99	" " Early Doctors and Dentists.....	534
Edenville.....	322	Episcopal Church, Early.....	140	Erie City—Early Mechanics.....	529
Edinboro, Borough of.....	367-369	Equitable Aid Union.....	474	" " Early Postoffice Sites.....	534
" Churches and Cemeteries.....	368	Erie Cemetery.....	469	Erie City—Settlers.....	391
Edinboro, Newspapers, Societies, etc.....	368	Erie City—Academy.....	491	" " Electric Light and Power Co.....	482
Edinboro Normal School.....	148-189-368	" " A Memorial Event.....	533	Erie City—Electric Motor Co.....	483
Edinboro Plank Road.....	121	Erie City—Art and Artists.....	530	" " Election Districts in.....	397
Edison Electric Light and Power Co.....	482	Erie City—Bay, Harbor and Banks and Banking.....	478	Erie City—Emanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church.....	455
Edison, Chelous.....	735	" " Bay, Harbor and Improvements.....	419	Erie City—Erie Cemetery.....	469
" Philander.....	735	Erie City—Beach Drive.....	530	" " Exchange for Women's Work.....	436
" W. N.....	735	" " Bethel Association.....	467
Edwards, David H.....	676	" " Board of Trade.....	504
" Thomas A.....	684½-782	" " Beer, Ale and Malt Production of.....	531
Effect of Railroads.....	531	Erie City—Borough and City Government.....	399
Egbert, Dr., Elected to Congress.....	246	Erie City—Board of Fire Commissioners.....	413
Eggers, Henry.....	853	Erie City—Boundaries of.....	390
Eggleston, Palmer E.....	712
Eichhorn, Louis.....	706
Eighty-third Regiment.....	202-210
Elber, John F.....	751
Eldridge, C. E.....	859
" C. D.....	859
Electric Assembly, Erie.....	474

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

907

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Erie City—Existing Banks...	478	Erie City—Kindergarten System...	494	Erie City—Proposed Public Library...	491
“ “ Express and Carrying Companies...	484	Erie City—Lake and Railroad Business...	512	Erie City—Public and Amusement Halls...	487
Erie City—Female Seminary...	493	Erie City—Laid Out...	107	Erie City—Public School Buildings...	487
“ “ Fire Alarm System...	413	“ “ Lakeside Cemetery...	471	Erie City—Public Buildings, in General...	429
“ “ Fire Insurance Companies...	410	“ “ Letter Carrier System in...	530	Erie City—Public Buildings, Churches, etc...	395
Erie City—Fire Limits...	434	Erie City—List of Manufactories in...	496	Erie City—Public Market...	522
“ “ Finances, Assessments and Tax Rates...	398	Erie City—Local Names, suburbs...	396	“ “ Public Parks...	429
Erie City—First Baptist Church...	451	Erie City—Low Water in the Lake...	533	“ “ Public School Statistics...	491
“ “ First Christian Church...	463	Erie City—Lumber Interests...	531	Erie City—Public Schools...	485
Erie City—First Methodist Episcopal Church...	463	“ “ Luther Memorial Church...	454	“ “ Railroads, Transportation, etc...	396
Erie City—First National Bank...	479	Erie City—Manufactories, History of...	495	Erie City—Real Estate Title Co...	484
“ “ First Presbyterian Church...	437	Erie City—Manufacturing, Statistics of...	496	“ “ Religious Statistics...	468
Erie City—First Spiritual Society...	466	Erie City—Marine National Bank...	480	“ “ Roman Catholic Chapels...	462
Erie City—First Universalist Church...	463	Erie City—Masonic History...	530	Erie City—Salaries of Officials and Prices...	390
Erie City—Fishermen's Paradise...	423	“ “ Members School Board, List of...	487	Erie City—Salem Evangelical Church...	464
Erie City—Fishing Industry, Growth of...	423	Erie City—Mercantile Agencies...	512	Erie City—Second Baptist Church...	452
Erie City—Gas Company...	481	Erie City—Military Companies...	524	Erie City—Second National Bank...	480
“ “ General Description...	392	Erie City—Ministerial Association...	467	Erie City—Sewerage System...	395
Erie City—German Baptist Church...	452	Erie City—Modern Market House...	522	“ “ Simpson M. E. Church...	448
Erie City—German Evangelical Lutheran Church...	456	Erie City—Musical Organizations...	523	Erie City—Sisters of St. Joseph...	531
Erie City—German Temple Congregation...	465	Erie City—National Guard...	524	“ “ Social, Secret, Benevolent, Protective Societies, etc...	472
Erie City—Glenwood Park...	428	“ “ Natural Gas...	527	Erie City—Soldiers' and Sailors' Home...	430
“ “ Grand Army of the Republic...	534	Erie City—N. W. Penn'a Humane Society...	435	Erie City—St. Alban's P. E. Church...	447
Erie City—Grove House Park...	428	Erie City—Old Council Records...	532	Erie City—St. Andrew's R. C. Church...	460
“ “ Hamot Hospital...	433	Erie City—Older Teachers in Public Schools...	490	Erie City—St. Ann's R. C. Church...	461
“ “ Harbor Appropriations...	419	Erie City—Old Folks' Home...	434	Erie City—St. Benedict's Academy...	493
Erie City—“Head” and Tracy's Point...	426	“ “ Original Town...	529	Erie City—St. James' A. M. E. Church...	450
Erie City—Hebrew Reformed (Jewish) Church...	463	Erie City—Park Presbyterian Church...	438	Erie City—St. Joachim's R. C. Church...	461
Erie City—High School...	487	Erie City—Peninsula Damaged by Storms...	417	Erie City—St. John's Lutheran Church...	453
“ “ Hijnrod Mission, Sunday School...	467	Erie City—Peninsula, Engineering work...	415	Erie City—St. John's P. E. Church...	445
Erie City—Home for the Friendless...	432	Erie City—Peninsula, Interesting Facts concerning...	415	Erie City—St. John's R. C. Church...	495
Erie City—Homoeopathic Hospital...	436	Erie City—Pennsylvania Gas Company...	481	Erie City—St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum...	434
Erie City—Horticultural Society...	530	Erie City—Pest House...	430	Erie City—St. Joseph's R. C. Church...	458
Erie City—Hotels, Ancient and Modern...	518	“ “ Picnics and Fairs...	533	Erie City—St. Mary's R. C. Church...	459
Erie City—Ideal Location, Fine Drainage...	392	“ “ Pleasure Boating...	425	Erie City—St. Michael's R. C. Church...	461
Erie City—Influence of Railroads...	531	“ “ Pleasure Resorts...	425	Erie City—St. Patrick's R. C. Church...	455
Erie City—Its Growth...	392	Erie City—Police Department...	414
“ “ Justices and Aldermen, List of...	406	Erie City—Polish Cemetery...	471
Erie City—Keystone National Bank...	479	“ “ Prices and Wages, Early Days...	528
		Erie City—Principal Officials Since 1805...	399
		Erie City—Private Pleasure Resorts...	429

PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
	Erie City—St. Paul's P. E. Church.....	441	Erie County—Geology of.....	73	Executive Officers, Principal in Pennsylvania.....	23
	Erie City—St. Paul's R. C. Church.....	461	" Gulfs,Cascad's, Natural Curiosities.....	80	Express and General Carrying Companies.....	489
	Erie City—St. Peter's Cathedral.....	467	Erie County—History of.....	71-345	Extensive Land Sales.....	111
	Erie City—Streams and Ravines.....	393	" " Mutual Fire Insurance Co.....	480	Ey, Herman.....	667
	Erie City—Streets,Avenues,etc	393	Erie County—Natural Gas in	73	Factories, First.....	113
	Erie City—Street Lighting.....	395	" " Oil Wells in.....	73	" Hotels and Business Houses, Erie.....	536
	" St. Stanislaus R. C. Church.....	400	" " Organization of.....	74	Fair Grounds, Erie.....	428
	Erie City—St. Vincent's Hospital.....	434	" " Original Townships of.....	74	Fairbairn, Oscar J.....	654
	Erie City—St. Vincent's P. E. Church.....	446	Erie County—Population of.....	77	Fairbairn, John.....	662
	Erie City—Swedish Baptist Church.....	453	" " Post-offices in.....	75	Fairview Borough, Description of.....	299
	Erie City—Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church.....	455	" " Pre-Historic Discoveries.....	80	Fairview Borough, Churches, etc.....	299
	Erie City—Tanning Industry.....	526	Erie County—Products of.....	72	Fairview Borough, First Settlers.....	299
	" " Taxes in 1820.....	529	" " Rates of Taxation.....	80	Fairview Borough, Industries, etc.....	300
	" " Teachers' Salaries, Public Schools.....	490	" " Receipts and Expenditures of.....	78	Fairview Township, Description of.....	295-300
	Erie City—Telegraph and Telephone Companies.....	484	Erie County—Regiments in the War for the Union.....	209	Fairview Township, Church Organizations.....	298
	Erie City—Tenth Street M. E. Church.....	449	Erie County—Savings Banks.....	479	Fairview Township, County Officers.....	297
	Erie City—The New Church.....	464	" " Schools Prior to General Law.....	188	Fairview Township, Early Settlers.....	295
	Erie City—The Tabernacle (Church of Christ).....	465	Erie County—Soil, Character of.....	72	Fairview Township, How Named.....	295
	Erie City—Topography of.....	393	Erie County—Soldiers, War of 1812.....	137	Fairview Township, Lands of, and Value.....	296
	" " Transfer Company.....	483	Erie County—Streams,Interior Lakes, Bridges.....	81	Fairview Township, Mills and Bridges.....	296
	" " Trinity Cemetery.....	471	Erie County—Teachers' Institute.....	190	Fairview Township, Population of.....	296
	" " United Brethren Church.....	463	Erie County—Timber of.....	73	Fairview Township, Roads, Railroads and Canal.....	297
	Erie City—United Presbyterian Church.....	441	" " Topography of.....	71	Fairview Township, School History.....	297
	Erie City—U. S. Branch Bank.....	478	" " Townships, Formation of New.....	74	Fairview Township, Stone Quarries.....	299
	" " Villa Marie Academy.....	493	Erie County—Valleys, Principal.....	71	Fairview Township, Streams of.....	296
	Erie City—Wards and Ward Limits.....	397	Erie County—Votes Separately.....	216	Fales, C. W.....	718
	Erie City—Water Department, History of.....	408	" Day Nursery.....	436	Family Histories.....	593 to 896
	Erie City—Wayne Street M. E. Church.....	450	" Electric Motor Company.....	482	Farmers' Alliance.....	193
	Erie City—Welsbach Gas Company.....	482	" Fair Associations, etc.....	194	Farms, Number of, Value, Production, etc.....	25
	Erie City—Woman's Christian Association.....	467	" Female Seminary.....	493	Farnsworth, N. A.....	800
	Erie City—Y. M. C. Association.....	466	" Gas Test Well.....	527	Farr, C. B.....	850
	Erie County—Area of.....	71	" Horticultural Society.....	530	Farrar, C. W.....	636
	" " Assess'm't Table.....	79	" Real Estate Title Co.....	484	" F. F.....	636
	" " Bar of.....	153	" Rubber Company.....	660	" Hall, Erie.....	521
	" " Boroughs in.....	74	Erie State Reserve.....	109	" Oliver.....	636
	" " Boundary Lines.....	75	" Transfer Company.....	483	" W. W.....	636
	" " Cities in, When Incorporated.....	74	" Yacht Club.....	425	Fast Run on Lake Shore Railroad.....	182
	Erie County—Climate of.....	73	Eriez, Tribe Exterminated.....	92	Fassler, Henry, Jr.....	872
	" " Election Districts in.....	75	Esser, Martin H.....	752	Fehrenbach, John.....	754
	Erie County—Elevations, Highest in.....	72	Etter, John W.....	717	Feisler, Louis E.....	723
	Erie County—First Settlement of.....	105	Evading the Liquor Law.....	543	Felton, G. J.....	849
			Evangelical German St. Paul's Church.....	142	Fenningham, Geo.....	711
			Evangelical Association.....	142	Ferguson, Frank L.....	805
			Evans, George W.....	794	Fernald, Geo. H.....	834
			Evans, Wm, E.....	782
			Ewing, Clark.....	673
			Exchange for Women's Work, Erie.....	436
			Execution, Only Civil in Erie County.....	153-193
			Execution of Bird, Rankin and Davis.....	138
			Executive Com., World's Fair.....	265

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

911

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Harbor Creek Fire Insurance Co.	481	Heidecker, Henry	811	Holmes, A. J.	727
Harbor Creek, Village	317	Heimberger, Jacob	756	Holmwood, Henry	699
Harbor Creek Township, Churches, Schools, etc.	318	Heiss, Samuel	672	Home for the Friendless, Erie	432
Harbor Creek Township, Public Officers	318	Heister, Geo. W.	758	Homeopathic Hospital and Free Dispensary	436
Harbor Creek Township, Description of	315-319	Hellman, Adam	809	Homestead Riots	38
Harbor Creek Township, Mills and Factories	316	" John	749	Hope Mission, Erie	452
Harbor Creek Township, Pioneers of	315	Hennecous, Fred	889	Hoover, Samuel	898
Harbor Creek Township, Roads, Railroads, etc.	316	Henry, John W.	691	Hopkins, L.	794
Harbor Creek Township, Streams and Gullies	316	Henderson, Joseph	858	Horace Greeley, an Erie Sunday School Scholar	143
Harbor Creek Township, Villages	317	" Wm.	858	Horace Greeley, Brief Residence in Erie	191
Hard Coal Docks, Erie	420	Herald, The Erie	175	Hough, Robt. B.	651
Harding, Albert F.	812	Hermann, Peter	818	Howard, H. C.	783
Hardwick, John W.	613	Hershey, Benjamin	824	" Henry	783
" William	612	" W. W.	827	How Erie was Laid out	389
Hare Creek, Settlement of	381	Hespelein, Michael	670	" the Pioneers Lived	114
Harper, Wm. W.	689	Hess, John W.	818	Hoyt and Stone Elected	249
Harrisburg and Presque Isle Company	108	Heuer, Edward	743	" Henry M.	56½-67
Harrison and Van Buren Campaign	192	John	743	Hubbard, James	779
Harrison and Tyler elected	225	Hewitt, Wm. M.	819	" Louis E.	736
" Morton elected	256	Heydrick, Balthazer	639	" W. S.	777
" Gen. Wm. H., in Erie	136	" Chas.	639	Huff, Gabriel	678
Hart, E. A.	851	" Chas. H.	639	Hughson, C. M.	757
" Edmund	851	" Dr. Christopher	639	Hull, Wm. C.	702
Hartleb, Mathias	820	" Peter C.	639	Humboldt Savings Bank, Erie	479
Harranif, John F.	48½-67	Heywang, G. W.	763	Hume, A. B.	803
Harrigan, The	474	Hicks, John S.	706	Humes, Henry J.	872
Harvest Home Picnic	194	Hiesler, Joseph	32½-65	" Joseph	872
Hasbrook, A. L.	763	Higgin, Geo. H.	638	Humphrey, Dr. Jonas	870
Haskins, Chas. P.	700	High Constables in Erie, List of	406	Hunt, Daniel W.	636½-892
Hastings, Daniel H.	56½-68	High School, Erie	487	" J. H.	726
" Elected Governor	290	High War Prices	208	" J. F.	722
Hatch, Adinjah	790	Highest Elevations in Erie Co.	72	" Simon	892
" Daniel W.	790	Highest Points on P. & E. R. R. in Erie County	184	Huntly, Orange S.	862
" Jason C.	790	Highland Light, Erie	176	" Orrin	862
" Roswell	790	Hill, Homer M.	713	Hunter, Capt. Robt.	815
Hatch Hollow	288	" Wm.	659	" Chas. E. B.	876
Hathaway, C. N.	657	" Wm. H.	659	" Dr. Wallace R.	646
" E. M.	791	Hillman, Rev. Benj. E.	835	Huster, Chas.	688
Haverstick, Henry B.	668	Hilton, Archibald	612	Hutchinson, David W.	619
" John D.	668	" Capt. John C.	612	" Family	619
" McCauley	668	" Family	612	" Myron	619
Haybarger, Geo.	725	" William E.	612	" Monroe	619
" Geo. Sr.	725	Himrod, Aaron	582	Hyke, W. H.	783
Hayes, I. C.	894	" Simon	582	Ignasiak, Rev. Andrew	663
Hayes-Tilden Campaign	247	" William, Sr.	583	Improved Order of Red Men	475
Hayes, W. E.	650	" William, Jr.	583	Incidents before the Battle of Lake Erie	134
Haynes, James X.	894	" Mission Sunday School Erie	467	Incorporated as a Borough, Erie	389
"Head," The	426	Hinkle, John A.	815	Independent Order of Forest ers.	475
Health Officers, Erie	406	History of Erie County	71-345	Independent School Districts	190
Heard, A. B.	715	History of Erie County Regiments	209	Indians and British at Erie	102
" Dr. Amos B.	832	Hodgins, Dr. James A.	894	Indian Councils	95
" George	715	Hoenes, Fred C.	772	" History	91-96
" Randolph	715	Hoffman, Edward	796½-642	" Hostilities	105
Hebrew Cemetery, Erie	469	" Frederick	723	Indians Offended	104
" Churches	143	Hogan, Hobart	737	Indian Purchases	96
" Societies, Erie	475	Holcomb, Chas.	746	Indians, The	27-91-96
		Holden, Anthony M.	878	Indian Threats	95
		Holidays, Legal	27	" Titles	23
		Hollands, Caleb	651	" Villages and Graveyards	95
		Holland Land Company	198
		Holliday, Maj. Samuel V.	582
		" Samuel, Sr.	582
		" William	582

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Indian Wars and Disturbances	28	Judges of the Superior Court	261	Kennedy, Frederick I.	694
Indigent, Care of	147	First Elected	261	Kent, Geo. L.	685
" Insane, Care of	147	Judge of the Supreme Court	265	Kepler, J. C.	748½-776
Inflated Currency, Its Effects	208	from Erie County	265	Kepler, Chas. H.	745
Inscription on Wayne's Monument	98	Judges, President, District, Additional Law, etc.	150-267-268	Kerner, Anton J.	757
Introduction of Steamboats on Lake Erie	126	Judge Thompson's Election to Congress	227-228	Kernick, Wm., Jr.	780
Introduction of Steam Fish Boats at Erie	424	Judge Trunkey's Election	249	Kessler, Christian	656
Iron and Iron Ore	28	Judicial Districts	150	" Henry	668
Irons, Joel B., D. V. S.	788½	Judicial System of Pennsylvania	28	Kester, Levi	666
Iron Works	119	Judson Family	585	Ketcham, Earl M.	640
County	119	" Amos	585	Keystone State, Origin of Name	28
Iron Works (Miscellaneous), Erie	498	" Amos M.	585	Kilburn, N. P.	772
Iroquois, Tribe of	92	" Col. P. E.	585	Kibler, Dr. C. B.	771
Irvine's Reservation	169	" Dr. William	585	Kidder, John	842
Irwin, W. W.	721	" P. E.	585	Kimberly, Geo. B.	572½-745
Jackson, A. C.	641	" Peter P.	675	Kimball, Wm. B.	879
" Andrew, Elected President	220	" P. E.	585	Kincaid, S. E.	770
Jackson, Andrew, Re-elected	221	" Seth	585	Kindergarten System	494
" James	641	" Timothy	585	King, Cyrus H.	885
" James P.	856	" T. M.	877	" Family	613
Jacobs, Frank A.	700	" William	585	" Alfred	585-613
Jacobson, C. M.	659	Junior Order U. A. M.	475	" Josiah	614
Jail, County	145	Jury Commissioners, First Elected	241	" Thomas	614
Jail Expenses	151	Jury Commissioners, List of	276	" Wilson	614
Jameson, Clark D.	883	Justices of the Peace, First Elected	225	King of France in Erie	191
Janes, Heman	532½-629	Justices of the Peace, List of 160-165	160-165	Kingtown	397
" James	886	" " and Aldermen, Erie City	406	Kinsey, Mathew L.	714
" Marvin E.	886	Justice Family	586	Klein, Charles H.	709
Jansen, Andrew P.	693	" Capt. John	586	Klick, Joseph	823
Jaquay, Rev. Kelsey T.	878	" John M.	586	Kline, W. G.	713
Jarecki, Alexander H.	615	" Joseph	586	" John A.	713
" August	614	Kaltenbach, Jacob	752	Klockner, Rev. Bernard H.	682
" Capt. Gustav	614	Kalvelage, John H.	642	Knights and Ladies of Honor	475
" Chas. W.	614	" John M.	730	" and Ladies of Macca-bees	475
" Frederick	615	Kamerer, Jacob F.	868	Knights of Honor	475
" Frederick, Jr.	615	Kane, M.	719	" of Labor	475
" Henry	614	" John	841	" of Malta	475
" Herman T.	614	Kearsarge	330	" of St. John and Malta	475
" Oscar	615	Keepville	284	" of the Golden Eagle	475
" Theodore	614	Keller, John	752	Knochel, Valentine	755
Jefferson, Elected	215	" Michael	758	Know-Nothingism, Rise of	233
John Eliot & Co., Bankers	479	Kelley, Geo. B.	877	Koch, Moses	404½-814
John Quincy Adams Elected by the House	219	" John	877	Kocher, Jacob, Sr.	811
Johnson, Earnest C.	778	" John L.	666	Kochler, Jackson	742
Johnson, Guy	714	" Wm. J.	757	" Charles	832½-743
" G. Watson	876	" Wm. S.	795	" Fred	743
Johnson's "Swing Around the Circle"	240	Kelsey, Henry C.	655	" John C.	753
Johnson, Wm. F.	40½-66	" Samuel H.	635	Kopcke, W. T.	836
Johnston, Joseph	599	" Joseph	655	Kramer, Daniel J.	702
Johnstown Flood	88	Kelso Family	554	Kraus, Edward	712
Jones, Bennett T.	676	" A. C.	557	Kreider, H. L.	829
" D. T.	741	" Albert J.	556	" John	829
" Hugh	452½-616	" Gen. John	555	" J. E.	794
" Hugh, Jr.	617	" Edwin J.	556	Krug, J. G.	669
Jourdan, John T.	729	" Melvin M.	556	" Max A.	641
Judges, Associate	151-268	" Melvin M., Sr.	556	Kuch, Edward	736
" First Elected	231	" Richard B.	557	" George	692
		" Wm. C.	557	" Phillip	736
		Kendall, Dr. E. E.	892	Kuhl, Peter, Sr.	785
		Kennedy, David	598	Kuhn, Joseph F.	698
				Kurtis, Col. Adam	750
				Lachermaier, Rev. James	682
				Ladies' Aid Society in the War	202

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

913

PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
	Ladies Auxiliary, Y. M. C. A.	466	Le Boeuf Township, Land Grants.....	320	List of U. S. Officials.....
	" Catholic Mutual Benefit Association.....	473	Le Boeuf Township, Roads, Quarries and Railroads.....	321	" Water Commissioners..
	Ladies of the U. V. L.....	477	Le Boeuf Township, State and County Officials.....	322	Literary and Other Societies, Catholic.....
	Lafayette's Visit to Erie.....	191	Le Boeuf Township, Value of Lands.....	321	Little, Christopher.....
	Land Agents and Surveyors.....	110	Le Boeuf Station.....	322	Live Stock, Statistics of, etc.,
	" Companies.....	708	Leading Products of Pennsylvania.....	29	" Living, Primitive Mode of.....
	Lands, First Purchasers of.....	111	Leech, John W.....	617	Livingston, Charles.....
	" First Sales of in Erie County.....	111	Leemhuis, F. G.....	734	" Hotel, Erie.....
	Land Grants.....	110	" P. L.....	734	Local Issues Supersede Party.....
	Lands, Litigation over.....	111	Legal Width of Streets in Erie	29	Local Names, Erie.....
	" Legislation Regarding.....	107	Legislation, Restriction Upon.....	29	Local Option, Adopted and Repealed.....
	Land Speculation in 1836.....	112	Legislature, Number of Members, etc.....	29	Lochner, Amand.....
	Lakes in Pennsylvania.....	29	" Nicholas.....	674	" Philip A.....
	Lake and Railroad Business, Erie.....	612	" Lockport Borough.....	309	" Rufus S.....
	Lakes Conneautce, Le Boeuf and Pleasant.....	85	" Lofin, John.....	781	Loomis, Dyer, Sr.....
	Lake Disasters.....	128	" Dyer, Jr.....	835	" James.....
	" Erie Described.....	86	" John Jay.....	838	" Joseph W.....
	Lakes, Fishing Industry of.....	89	" John Randolph.....	888	" Rufus S.....
	" Interior of Erie County	85	" Richard R.....	866	Loop, Charles.....
	Lake Navigation.....	125-131	Lexington.....	284	" Dr. D. D.....
	" Pleasant Road.....	122	Libraries, Art Galleries and Museums.....	29	" Peter.....
	" Road.....	121	" Liberal Republican Movement	245	Lord, Hugh Compton.....
	" Shore Masonic Relief Association.....	530	" War Subscriptions in Erie.....	201	" Judge Samuel.....
	Lake Shore R. R.....	182	Liberty Bell, The.....	29-200	" William Lee.....
	" Shore Visitor, Erie.....	175	Lichtinger, Anton.....	752	" Samuel P.....
	" Shore Streams.....	84	Lick, C. V.....	777	Loss of Life on the Lakes.....
	Lakeside Cemetery Association	411	Lielbe House, Erie.....	519	Louch, Abraham J.....
	" Park.....	425	Lieutenant Governor, First Elected.....	247	Love, James F.....
	Lambein, Martin.....	756	Lieutenant Governors, List of.....	27	" Samuel.....
	Lander, Francis.....	781	Life Saving Service, Erie.....	131	Lovell's Station.....
	Landsrath, John.....	874	Light Houses at Erie.....	130	Low Water in Lake Erie.....
	Lane, John F.....	726	Light House Keepers at Erie.....	130	Lowry, Commodore R. B.....
	Lang, Alfred P.....	821	Line and Cement Trade.....	532	" R. St. P.....
	" Charles A.....	748	" " Works.....	500	Lowville.....
	Language of Pennsylvania.....	23	Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg.....	27	Ludwig, E. D.....
	Lapsley, John E.....	823	Lincoln and Hamlin Elected.....	230	Lumber and Building Material.....
	Large Military Force at Erie.....	136	" Johnson Elected.....	230	" Interests, Erie.....
	Largest Picnics and Fairs.....	532	Lincoln's Beard.....	344	Lund, Peter.....
	Last Whig National Ticket.....	231	Lindsay, Cyrenus.....	861	Lundy's Lane Mission, P. E. Church.....
	Later Erie Military Companies	524	" Judah.....	861	Lunger, Isaac N.....
	Later Public Houses, Erie.....	518	" L. O.....	832	" Jacob.....
	Laurie, Frank.....	774	Link, Frank.....	748	Lutheran Church, Early.....
	Lavery, Village of.....	294	Liquor Amendment Defeated.....	257	Lynch, Col. Charles M.....
	Law, Charles.....	865	List of Erie County Attorneys	154	" Patrick.....
	Laws, Harry E.....	736	" Chiefs Fire Depart-ment.....	414	Lyon, Aaron E.....
	Law Library in Erie County.....	160	List of District and County Officials.....	267-277	" Francis K.....
	Lawrence and Niagara, The.....	137	List of Erie Mayors.....	536	" Rev. Geo. A.....
	Lawyers, Early.....	153	" " Fire Commissioners.....	413	" Marshall W.....
	Leary, John.....	780-788	" " Principals, Erie High School.....	487	Lyons, Andrew.....
	Le Barron, O. D.....	883	List of School Directors, Erie, 1834-95.....	488	" Lucy M.....
	Le Boeuf Township, Character of the Land.....	320	List of State Officials.....	264-267	Lysaght, Michael.....
	Le Boeuf Township, Churches and Schools.....	321			Lytle, S. F.....
	Le Boeuf Township, Creeks, Mills and Bridges.....	319			MacQueary, Rev. Howard T.....
	Le Boeuf Township, First White Settlers.....	319			Mackres, Dr. Henry O.....
	Le Boeuf Township, History of.....	319-323			Madison, Twice Elected.....
	Le Boeuf Township, Indian Camping Ground.....	321			Magvon, Henry E.....
					Mail Routes, Old.....

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Maine Liquor Law Voted	293	McKean, Thomas	24½-65	Methodist Episcopal Church Alliance	450
Down	845	Township	323	Methodist Episcopal Confer-	450
Maitland, Dr. E. E.	707	" Churches,	324	ences	520
Malinowski, Joseph	697	Schools, Roads, etc.	324	Metropolitan Hotel, Erie	680
Malthaner, Jacob	697	McKean Township, Early Set-	323	Metzner, Orr G.	680
Malt Houses, Erie	501	tlers	323	John	680
Manchester	298	McKean Township, Lands	323	Meyerhoffer, Tobias	651
Mandeville, M.	769	and Streams	323	Michaels, M.	769
Mangold, John V.	807	McKean Township, Mills and	324	"Michigan," U. S. S. Launched	127
Mann, Charles F.	747	Factories	324	Middleboro, Borough of	326
Mansion House, Erie	519	McKean Township, State and	325	Mifflin, Thomas	24½-65
Manufactures, Pennsylvania	39	County Officers	325	Miles Family	557
Manufacturing, Growth of	119	McKean Township, Villages	324	James	557
" Statistics, 1880	496	McLane, Col. John W.	635	" James, Jr.	558
Manufactories, Leading in Erie	496	McLallen's Corners	366	" John F.	558
"Maples, The," Erie	428	McLean, Frank E.	867	" William, First White Set-	557
Map of Erie County, Opposite	496	McLean, J. C.	864	tler	557
Title Page	480	McMahon, Daniel	653	Miles, William, Soldier	305
Marine National Bank, Erie	874	John J.	735	Miles Grove, Village of	305
Marks, Charles S.	825	McMullen, Andrew K., M. D.	624	Military Companies, Early	194
Marshall, F. F.	639	McNerney, J. M.	732	" Called to Erie	132
" James C.	639	McPherson, Dr. A.	646	" Companies, Modern	524
" Robert	842	McSparren Family	615	Military System, Old	194
" R. W.	842	Albert J.	616	Military System, Present	30
Martin, A. E.	849	Archibald	615	Mill Creek Township, Churches	329
" Agrippa D.	792	" Archibald, Jr.	616	and Schools	329
" G. E.	725	" Chas. Archibald	616	Mill Creek Township, Early	392
Martz, Charles M. S.	677	" Clark	616	Settlers	392
" James G.	677	" Frank	616	Mill Creek Township, Election	327
" Samuel	677	" James	615	Districts	327
Marvin Family	558	" John	616	Mill Creek Township, Errors	328
" Elisha	130½-558	" Joseph	615	in Survey	328
" Enoch	558	" Rev. Archibald	615	Mill Creek Township, Fair	332
" Selden	558	" William	616	Grounds, Military Camp, etc.	332
" William E.	558	McWhorter, William	710	Mill Creek Township, Fed-	333
Marvintown, Village of	397	Mechanical Drawing School,	718	eral, State and County Offi-	333
Mason and Dixon's Line	30	Erie	490	Mill Creek Township, First	331
" Edgar	846	Medical Societies, Erie County	171	Frame Barn in County	331
Masonic Societies, List of in	475	" Societies, Erie	476	Mill Creek Township, History	327
Erie	475	Meehan, William P.	702	of	327
Masonic History	530	Meeker, George B.	732	Mill Creek Township, Lands	328
Massassauga Hotel, etc.	520	John O.	732	for Support of Poor	328
Mattison, Emery S.	889	Mehl, Edward	804½-709	Mill Creek Township, Mills	332
" Reuben	889	Memorable Event, A.	533	and Factories	332
" Shelden	889	Mercantile Agencies, Erie	512	Mill Creek Township, Popula-	327
Mayors of Erie, List of	389	" Appraisers, List of	277	tion of	327
McAllister, Clark	762	Mercer, Prof. W. R.	891	Mill Creek Township, Promi-	331
McBrier, James	623	Merchants' and Manufactur-	891	nent Points	331
McCarter, Joseph	204½-603	ers' Electric Co., Erie	482	Mill Creek Township, Re-	334
" Wm. F.	603	Merchant Vessels on Lake	125	claimed Lands	334
McCarthy, Jeremiah	754	Erie	125	Mill Creek Township, Reser-	327
McClure, John	705	Mertens, Frederick E.	670	vations and Gore	327
" Robert T.	705	Louis	693	Mill Creek Township, Roads	329
McCoy, W. R.	805	Messenger, Sunday, Erie	176	Railroads and Canals	329
McCray, Chapman B.	764	Metcalf, George N.	567	Mill Creek Township, Streams	328
" Wilson C.	763	" Joseph P.	567	and Bridges	328
McCreary, Cassius	622	" Prescott	192½-566	Mill Creek Township, the Scott	334
" Gen. D. B.	282½-620	Methodist Episcopal	139	Farms	334
" Joseph J.	622	Church	139	Mill Creek Township, the Weis	334
" Samuel S.	621	Church, African	143	Library	334
" Winfield S.	621	Methodist Church, Early in	139	Miller, Andrew H.	744
McCurry, V.	825	Erie County	139	" Capt. G. W.	822
McDonald, Ralph W., D. D. S.	733	Methodist Church, Wesleyan	144	" Chas. F.	656
McIntyre, John	867	Methodist Episcopal Churches,	447	" Eugene M.	766
		Erie	447

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

915

	PAGE		PAGE
Miller, John.....	686	Nagle, Bailey P.....	653
" I. Newton.....	858	Nagle, T. H.....	653
" Thomas R.....	859	Nagosky, Alois.....	828½-663
" T. Jeff.....	753	" Barney.....	706
Mills, George C.....	778	" Frank.....	757
" Darby.....	117	Name of State, Origin of.....	30
Mill Town.....	288	Nash, D. E.....	856
Mill Village, Borough of.....	322	" George.....	859
Minerals of Erie County.....	73	Nason, A. H.....	794
Mineral Products of Pennsylvania.....	30	" A. J.....	783
Ministerial Association, Erie.....	467	National Guard of Pennsylvania.....	524
Minority Representation, Erie County Boards.....	247	National People's Party Started.....	258
Misery Day.....	87	National Union, Erie.....	476
Missimer, H. C.....	694	Natural Curiosities, Erie County.....	80
Mitchell, Adrain J.....	707	Natural Gas, State.....	30
Mizener, F. A.....	383½-652	" Gas Wells.....	527
Modern Cemeteries.....	144	" Gas Wells in Erie County.....	73
Modern Market Houses, Erie.....	522	Native American Party Organized.....	228
Money Matters and Politics.....	204	Native American Riots.....	28
Montfort, W. J.....	783	Nativity of the Pioneers.....	114
Montgomery, Dr. J. H.....	645	Naval Battle of Lake Erie.....	134
" F. L.....	639	" Inspectors, Erie.....	131
Monroe Twice Elected.....	218	" Officers from Erie County.....	207
Morgan, George B.....	677	Navigation of Lake Erie, Early.....	125-131
" Charles.....	677	Navigation, Opening of at Erie.....	129
Moore, Dr. M. M.....	799	Nellis, Daniel.....	793
" Frederick.....	853	" Peter H.....	793
" George R.....	863	Neubauer, Henry.....	812½-746
" Frank J.....	867	" Frank.....	746
" Harry L.....	867	New Constitution Adopted.....	246
" James.....	867	" in Force.....	247
" Marshall.....	867	" Jerusalem.....	396
" Wilson.....	867	" Park Opera House, Erie.....	521
" John F.....	672	New Ireland.....	322
" John M.....	672	News, Erie Evening.....	175
" Leslie B.....	672	Newspapers, Number of in Pennsylvania.....	30
" Shelden M.....	720	Newspapers, History of Erie County.....	173
Moore House, Erie.....	520	Newspapers Outside of Erie.....	177
Moorhead, James M.....	817	Newton, John.....	852
" Joseph B.....	833	" M. D.....	852
" Robert J.....	832	" Niagara, Place Where Sunk, etc.....	534
" W. K.....	817	Nichols, Harry H.....	790
Moorheadville.....	317	Nicholson, Andrew.....	826
Moravian Land Grant, 109-320.....	347	" Eliza.....	826
Morrell, Marcus L.....	859	" George W.....	826
Morton House, Erie.....	520	" John.....	826
" N. M.....	825	" John E.....	826
Moske, Julius.....	758	" D. W.....	657
Mott's Enormous Majority.....	233	Nick, Ernest.....	854
Motto of the State.....	30	" William C.....	670
Mulvin, Henry.....	761	"Nickle Plate" R. R.....	185
Munn, J. C.....	809	Nickle Works, Erie.....	501
Munsee, John W.....	762	Noble, Charles C.....	588
Murphy, Alfred H.....	664	" Horace W.....	588
" I. C.....	730	" Orange.....	587
" Patrick.....	708½-694	" Orange, Defeated for State Treasurer.....	251
Murray, E. R.....	774	Noble, Theodore F.....	583
" John D.....	770	" Light Guard.....	524
Music, Evening Schools, etc., Erie.....	490	Norcross, Andrew.....	818
Musical Organizations, Erie.....	476-528	" Peter E.....	819
Myers, Geo. H.....	784	Normal School, Edinboro.....	148-189-368
" Samuel C.....	784	Norris, Eben H.....	697
Mystic Shrine, Erie.....	476	North East Borough.....	340
		" " Banks and Hotels.....	343
		North East Borough, Churches.....	341
		" " Incidents.....	344
		North East Borough, Mills, Factories, Water Works.....	343
		North East Borough, Newspapers.....	343
		North East Borough, Public Schools.....	342
		North East Borough, St. Mary's College.....	341
		North East Township.....	336-345
		" " " A Great Grape Section.....	339
		North East Township, Churches and Cemeteries.....	339
		North East Township, Early Incidents.....	337
		North East Township, Federal, State and County Officers.....	344
		North East Township, Mills and Factories.....	388
		North East Township, Pioneer Settlers.....	336
		North East Township, Population.....	336
		North East Township, Principal Streams.....	338
		North East Township, Roads and Railroads.....	337
		North East Township, School History.....	340
		North East Township, Topography and soil.....	336
		North East Township, Value of Land.....	336
		North East Township, Villages, etc.....	339
		North Springfield.....	349
		Northville.....	339
		North Star Mission, Erie.....	452
		North Western Pennsylvania Humane Society.....	485
		North Western Pennsylvania, Counties of.....	30
		Norton, Harlow D.....	862
		Notable Law Suit.....	156
		November Election, First.....	247
		Nowak, John.....	695
		Nye, F. M.....	859
		"Nypano" R. R.....	185
		Oberkirch, Frank.....	642
		O'Brien, Joseph P.....	606
		" Patrick P.....	684
		" Richard.....	556½-606
		" W. H.....	719
		Observer Erie.....	174

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Road Fund in 1894.....	78	Salt Trade.....	124	Seelinger, Joseph L.....	810
Robbins, Dr. D. P.....	783	Sandborn, Wm. H.....	840	Seib, Peter.....	822
Roberts, Henry S.....	879	Sandusky, Jacob.....	751	Seiter, Edwin S.....	773
" Jesse.....	707	" John.....	758	Selden Family.....	564
Robinson, Daniel B.....	784	Saw Mills, First.....	116	" Dr. Charles C.....	565
" Wm. J.....	740	Schaffner, Morris.....	633	" Edward P.....	564
Rockefeller, E. S.....	650	Schaper, August H.....	812	" George D.....	564
Roemer, John J.....	664	Scheer, J. S.....	692	" " Jr.....	565
" Rev. John J.....	664	Schlosser, David.....	658	" " Sr.....	564
Rogers, C. P., Jr.....	768	Schmitt, Simon.....	823	" John Card.....	565
Rohl, Adolph.....	828	Schneider, Adam.....	703	" Memorial Chapel, Erie	438
Rohrer, Benjamin.....	830	" John.....	687	" Samuel.....	564
Roland, Emanuel.....	680	" William.....	703	" Samuel F.....	565
" Jacob.....	680	Schofield's First Election	238	Seminaries.....	189
" Levi H.....	680	Schofield-Marvin Congres-	242	Senators from Pennsylvania	39
Roll of First Erie School.....	465	sional Campaign.....	242	in United States Congress.....
Roman Catholic Church,		Schroeck, Adolph.....	708	Sergeant-at-Arms, City Hall,
Growth of.....	140	School Superintendents, Coun-		Erie.....	406
Roman Catholic Congregations		and City.....	190	Settlers, First in Erie County.	113
in Erie.....	455	School System, Pennsylvania	39	" in Erie County, Pro-
Roman Catholic Chapels in		" Public.....	190	" tection of.....	105
Erie.....	462	Schools, Public and Private.....	187	Sewell, D. W.....	803
Root, H. O.....	857	" The Erie.....	484	" Ebenezer.....	803
" P. A.....	857	School Buildings, Erie.....	487	" Norton.....	803
" Sidney A.....	857	School Term, etc., Public		Sewer System in Erie.....	395
Rose, E. E.....	827	Schools, Erie.....	489	Seymour, Dr. Nelson.....	484½
" Jacob F.....	827	Schuetz, Geo.....	830	Shafer, Rev. Alonzo.....	626
" J. C.....	827	Schultz, Christian.....	804	Shartswood, Elected Judge.....	241
" Jacob.....	853	" Edward.....	804	Shatto, John W.....	690
" John G.....	853	" George.....	830	Shaw, Wm. C.....	685
" John P.....	784	" Godfrey.....	795	Shawm, Charles E.....	613
Rosenzweig, Grant L.....	627	" Henry.....	795	" Henry.....	460½-613
" Isaac, Sen.....	627	Schumacher, Peter.....	754	" Wilbur.....	613
" Louis.....	468½-627	Schwartz, J. L.....	828	Shepard, Alexander.....	884
Ross, Benjamin H.....	845	" ".....	828	" Thomas J.....	884
" Harvey A.....	717	Scouler, Ezra.....	831	Sheppa, Wm. W.....	779
" L. M.....	893	" John.....	831	Sheridan Guard, Erie.....	524
Rossiter, S. Y.....	792	Scott, Andrew.....	563	Sheriffs, List of.....	269
" U. P.....	792	" Robert.....	563	Sherman, Anson B.....	863
Royal Arcanum, Erie.....	477	" Walter.....	428½-563	" Frank L.....	860
" Government in Penn-		" Emery D.....	722	" G. J.....	863
" sylvania.....	36	" Ezra D.....	722	" W. Jay.....	863
Royal Templars of Temper-		" Gustavus.....	546	Shermer, Henry.....	810
ance, Erie.....	472	" Maj. Robert J.....	546	Sherr, F. A.....	713
Royer Chas. E.....	737	" Rev. James.....	546	Sherwin, John.....	781
" Philip.....	737	" Robert Wainright.....	546	Sherwood, Dr. A. C.....	866
Runser, Edward T.....	759	" William L.....	184½-546	" John R.....	692
" Joseph.....	853	" " " His Coming		" F. W. M.....	866
Russell Family.....	574	" " " to Erie.....	546	Shipping Statistics, Lake Erie	126
" Geo. J.....	574	Scott, William L., His Vast		Short, Alfred.....	831
" N. W.....	176½-574	Mining and Shipping Inter-		" Samson.....	564½
Ryan, Mrs. Zephia.....	886	ests.....	546	Shows and Circuses.....	188
Salaries and Fees of State		Scott, William L., His National		Shreve, Richard.....	877
Officials.....	39	Influence.....	547	" " Sr.....	877
Salaries of County Officials.....	277	Scott, William L., His Political		" Col. William.....	877
" Paid Public School		Career.....	547	Shue, John R.....	815
Teachers, Erie.....	489	Scott-Mackey Campaigns.....	253-254	" W. H.....	815
Salary List, Water Depart-		Scott Farms, The.....	331-388	Shulze, John A.....	32½-665
ment, Erie.....	406	Sealers of Weights and Meas-		Shunk, Francis R.....	40½-66
Sale of Erie Town Lots.....	390	ures, List of.....	277	" Shunpike, The.....	122
" of Land in Erie County.....	167	Seal of the State.....	38½-38	Shuler, Daniel W.....	737
Salem Evangelical Association,		Second Baptist Church, Erie.....	452	Sibley-Flood Campaign.....	259
Erie.....	404	" National Bank, Erie.....	460	Siegel, Frank P.....	734
Salisbury, L. H.....	777	Sedgwick, Aaron.....	895	" Jacob F.....	693
Saltsman, John R.....	563	" Lewis.....	895	Sill, James.....	597
" R. J.....	370½-563	Seelinger, George.....	752	" Thos. H.....	104½-596
" William.....	563			Silliman, Dr. James E.....	627

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Silliman, H. L.	847	Springfield Township, Early Settlers.	345	State Fish Hatcheries.	148-381
" Thomas.	847	Springfield Township, Lands and Values.	347	" Officers from Erie Co.	364
Simpson, M. F. Church, Erie.	447	Springfield Township, Pioneer Trials.	346	" Officials, Principal.	39
Silverthorn, M. H.	307	Springfield Township, Population, etc.	345	" Police.	194
Sipple, John P.	718	Springfield Township, Public Men.	348	" Reservations.	109
Simmons, Elliott	683	Springfield Township, Roads, Railroads, Hotels, etc.	348	" Representatives.	226
" Frank R.	683	Burial Places, etc.	348	" Senators	265
Sinnacher, John	864	Springfield Township, Villages and Boroughs.	345	" Treasurer made Elective	244
" John P.	864	Stanbro, L. O.	783	Starr, Geo. W.	354½-549
Sisters of St. Joseph, Erie.	531	St. Alban's P. E. Church, Erie.	447	Start of National Greenback Party.	567
Sitterle, John B.	699	St. Andrews, R. C. " "	460	Steamboats, First on Lakes.	126
" Martin.	699	St. Ann's R. C. " "	461	Steam Fish Boats, Introduction of.	424
Skinner, Dr. Barker A.	885	St. Benedict's Academy,	493	Stearns, Herman T.	695
" Henry A.	765	St. Boniface	311	Steen, Charles.	714
" Oliver D.	771	St. James, A. M. E. Church, Erie.	450	Steenberg, Geo. T.	892
Slaves and Slavery in Erie County.	195	St. Joachim's R. C. Church, Erie.	461	Steiner, George.	671
Slavery, When Abolished in the State.	38	St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Reformed Church, Erie.	453	Steiner, Frank F.	752
Sloan, B. F.	694	St. John's R. C. Church, Erie.	459	Steinmetz, John A.	691
Slocum, George V.	617	St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, Erie.	435	Stem, Dr. H. L.	864
Smart, Morrel W.	671	St. Joseph's R. C. Church, Erie.	459	Sterrattania.	324
Smedley, Frederick B.	837	St. Mary's College.	341	Stetson, A. L.	848
" J.	837	St. Mary's R. C. Church, Erie.	458	" Sanders.	848
Smiley, Dallas G.	870	" " Priory, Convent, etc.	459	Stewards Erie County Almshouse, List of.	274
" James.	870	" St. Michael's R. C. Church, Erie.	461	Stone Cutters, Erie.	501
" Moses.	870	St. Paul's German Evangelical Church, Erie.	142	" Scarcity of in Erie Co.	73
Smith, Allen H.	886	St. Paul's R. C. Church, Erie.	461	" George S.	780
" Conrad.	827	St. Patrick's R. C. Church, Erie.	456	" Amos.	780
" Dr. A. R.	791	St. Peter's R. C. Church, Erie.	457	Stone, Leading Kinds of, in Pennsylvania.	89
" Dr. Munson C.	648	St. Peter's Cathedral, Erie.	457	Story, Jacob.	796
" Henry.	827	St. Stanislaus R. C. Church, Erie.	460	Stough, George.	716½-812
" J.	827	St. Vincent's P. E. Church, Erie.	446	" John.	827
Smutz, John.	773	St. Vincent's Hospital, Erie.	434	" Peter E.	827
Snyder, Simon.	24½-65	Stafford, Albert C.	890	" William P.	618
Sobel, Isador.	604½-638	" Ananias.	890	" William P.	619
" Semel.	638	" Henry C., Jr.	890	Strauch, John.	754
Soil, Character of, Erie County	72	" Jasper W.	890	Stratton, William H.	816
Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, Erie.	44-147-430	" Sr.	890	Streams in Erie County.	81
Soldiers' and Sailors' Monuments.	199-307	State Agricultural Society.	265	Streets and Avenues, Erie.	383
Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans.	44	" Presidents of.	265	Street Lighting, Erie.	395
Soldiers Authorized to Vote.	239	State and County Fairs in Erie.	193	" Market.	522
Soldier Candidates, Period of.	240	State Buildings.	38-147	" Names Changed, Erie.	384
" Vote, Mexican War.	229	" Board of Medical Examiners.	265	" Numbering, Erie.	385
Solicitors, City, Erie.	406	State Board of Public Charities.	265	Streuber, Louis.	627
Sons of St. George, Erie.	477	" Constitution of 1873.	45	Strong, Charles H.	569
" Veterans, Erie.	474	" Constitutional Conventions.	229-246	" Martin.	96½-568
Sontagsgast, The Erie.	176	State Fish Commissioners.	265	" Charles C.	860
Sopp, Frederick.	818			" J. M.	860
Spadacene, Charles.	752			" Job D.	860
Spahr, John F.	816			Strycker, Harry H.	860
Spath, George F.	816			Stubbe, John.	873
Spear, Alexander.	860			Stueben, Edward A.	690
Specht, Anthony.	847			Stuntz, J. F.	782
" Lawrence.	847			Sturdevant, Dr. H. C.	777
Spetz, Henry.	754			Sturgeon Family.	570
" John.	759			" Carson J.	620½-570
Speculation of 1836.	112			" J. C.	612½-570
Spencer, Dr. H. A.	645			Sturgis, G. W.	895
" Judah Colt.	566			Sullivan, H. C.	721
Speakers House Representatives from Pennsylvania.	265			" John.	705
Springfield Township.	345			Summer Resorts, Principal Erie.	38
" Church	348

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
United States District Attorneys	153	Vincent, Benjamin	550	War for the Union, Pennsylvania's Part in	43
United States Judges	153	" Bethael	550	War Vessels on Lake Erie	125
" " Jurors, How Selected	153	" Bethuel Boyd	551	" of 1812-14	132-138
United States Marshals	153	" Boyd, Rt. Rev.	551	" with Mexico	43
" " Officers	202	" Cornelius	552	Wards and Election Districts, Erie	397
" " Officials, List of	262-264	" Daniel	552	Warfeltown	397
Universalist Church, Early	142	" Harry	552	Warrentown	330
Universities and Colleges in Pennsylvania	40	" John	551	Warnath, Frederick	680
U. S. Collectors and Deputies	129	" John	552	Warren, J. V.	783
" Constitution, Pennsylvania's Part in Establishing	40	" Judge John P.	550	Washington, John G.	766
U. S. Life Saving Service, Officers of	131	" Levi	551	" Township, Description of	365-369
U. S. Officers, Principal, from Pennsylvania	40	" Strong	550	Washington Township, Creeks, Lakes and Lands	366
U. S. Representatives in Congress, Leading, from the State	127	Vicar Generals, Erie Diocese	456	Washington Township, Common Roads	366
U. S. Revenue Cutters	127	Vice-Presidents from Pennsylvania	41	Washington Township, Early Settlers	365
" Senators from Pennsylvania, List of	41	Vice-Presidential Candidates from Pennsylvania	41	Washington Township, Population of	365
U. S. Weather and Signal Service Office	131	Villa Marie Academy, Erie	493	Washington Township, Schools and Mills	367
U. S. Michigan	127	Vinegar and Pickling Works, Erie	502	Washington Township, State and County Officers	369
Unusual Seasons of Navigation, etc.	129	Voelk, Andrew F.	707	Washington Township, Villages and Churches	365
Unusual Spells of Weather	135	Volland, Charles	677	Washington's Visit to Waterford	100
Valleys, Principal in Erie Co.	71	" Leopold	677	Waterford Borough, American Settlement, etc.	372
Valuable Information about Fish and Fishing	89	Volunteer Army Officers, Erie County	207	Waterford Borough, Boating Trade	375
Valuations, Real and Personal Property	43	Vosburg, Albert	742	Waterford Borough, Churches	376
Van Buren Elected President	222	" Robert, Sr.	741	" " Factories, Mills, etc.	378
Van Scooter, John C.	628	Vote of the State for Governor " " " President	35	Waterford Borough, Fires, etc.	378
Vegetable Productions of Pennsylvania	42	Wade, Hial D.	779	" " French and English Forts	372
Veit, Albert	756	" Frank E.	711	Waterford Borough, Incidents of Early Days	374
" Bernard	756	" William R.	711	Waterford Borough, Newspapers	377
Venango Township	359	Wager, Stephen D.	690	Waterford Borough, Pioneers of	373
" " Churches, Graveyards and Schools	361	Wages, Old Time and Present	119	Waterford Borough, Postmasters	377
Venango Township, Creeks, Roads and Bridges	361	Wagner, John	766	Waterford Borough, Public Men	376
Venango Township, First Settlements	359	Wagner, Valentine	757	Waterford Borough, Tax Payers in 1813	374
Venango Township, Lands, Mills, etc.	361	Wadley, George	816	Waterford Borough, Academy	376
Venango Township, Population of	359	" Levi P.	813	" " Cemetery	376
Venango Township, Public Roads	360	" John	816	" " and LeBeuf Reserves	109
Venango Township, Reminiscences	362	Waite, Amos H.	779	Waterford, Laid out	107
Venango Township, Soldiers in the War of 1812	360	Waldermarson Peter	752	" Plank Road	122
Venango Township, Taxable Citizens in 1850	359	Waldinger, Fernando	854	" Turnpike	121
Venango Township, Villages of	359-362	Walbridge, Carl H.	802	" Township, Creeks and Lakes	370
Vessels Owned at Erie	129	" Ebenezer	802	Waterford Township, History of	369-378
Vessel Statistics	126	" Frank D.	820	Waterford Township, Lands, Reservation, etc.	369
Villages of the Indians	95	" John S.	820	Waterford Township, Population of	369
		Wales, A. L.	766
		" Settlement of	311
		Walker, John H.	622
		" Thomas M.	623
		" Judson	628 1/2-894
		" John W.	623
		" Robert T.	675
		" William A.	709
		Wallace Baptist Mission, Erie	452
		" Dr. John C.	552
		" Irwin M.	553
		" William	553
		" William M.	553
		Walther, Jacob F.	580 1/2-629
		Walnut Creek, Settlement of	330
		War Fleet for the Lakes Decided Upon	133
		War for the Union, Erie County's Part in	201-215-238

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Waterford Township, Roads, Bridges and Mills.....	371	Weis Library, The.....	334	Wing, A. K.....	847
Waterford Township, School History.....	371	Weiss, Samuel.....	666	Wingerter, Adam W.....	689
Waterford Station.....	371	Wieczorek, John.....	702	George B.....	690
Water Department, Erie.....	408	Wiesbach Gas Co.....	482	Winschel, Frederick.....	674
Waterfalls in the County.....	82	Welsh, John.....	749	John M.....	674
Waters, Hamilton E.....	742	" John S.....	726	Winter, George J.....	736
Water Works, Erie.....	408	Wells, Wm. Delaney.....	837	Wittich, Frederick.....	144½-631
Watson, Harrison F.....	592	Wellsburg, Village of.....	294	" Jr.....	632
Wattsburg.....	363	Wesleyan Methodist Church, Erie.....	143	" James Forbes.....	632
" Churches and Socie- ties.....	363	Wesleyville, Village of.....	317	" William G.....	632
Wattsburg, General Features.....	364	West Chester.....	894	Wolf, George.....	32½-66
" Newspapers.....	364	West Girard, Village of.....	306	Isaac.....	772½-846
" Public Men.....	364	West Greene.....	312	Women's Christian Associa- tion, Erie.....	467
Wattsburg, Plank Road.....	122	West, Simon P., Rev.....	741	Women's Relief Corps, Erie.....	474
Wayne, Anthony.....	96-98	West Springfield.....	349	Wood, C. M.....	799
" Block House, Erie.....	430	Wetmore, C. H.....	772	" Peter.....	724½-643
Wayne Street Church, Erie.....	450	" Jerome W.....	524½-597	Woods, Andrew J.....	720
Wayne Township, Early Set- tlers.....	382	Wheeler, Charles M.....	362½-804	Woodbury, E. A.....	824
Wayne Township, History of.....	379	" Dr. Arthur C.....	805	Woodmen of the World, Erie.....	477
" Lands and Streams.....	379	" Edward E.....	805	Woodruff, Samuel E.....	625
Wayne Township, Population of.....	379	" Fred C.....	805	" Rev. E. T.....	625
Wayne Township, Prehistoric Remains.....	382	" Orton H.....	805	" Thomas S.....	625
Wayne Township, Prominent Men.....	382	" Phineas.....	696	Worswick, Z.....	857
Wayne Township, Roads, Rail- roads, etc.....	381	Whig Party Organized.....	225	World's Fair, Part taken in by Penn'a.....	44
Wayne Township, State Fish Hatchery in.....	381	" Ticket, Last one Elected.....	231	Wright, Delos A.....	875
Wayne Township, the Greeley Family.....	382	Whiskey Rebellion.....	37	" John.....	786
Wayne Township, Villages, Schools, Mills, etc.....	380	White, Albert E.....	697	" Rial B.....	795
Wealth of the State.....	43	" Fred A.....	825	Yaple, Anson H.....	785
Weather and Signal Office at Erie.....	131	" H. L.....	894	" David.....	785
Weather Tables for Many Years.....	197	" Seymour, M. D., D. S.....	777	" William.....	785
Weather, Unusual Spells of.....	195	Whitehead, Charles.....	660	Yeager, Charles H.....	679
Weber, Andrew M.....	775	" Nathaniel J.....	685	" Louis.....	679
" Henry.....	723	" William.....	690	Y. M. C. Association.....	148-466
" Joseph B.....	696	Whitely, J. S.....	759	Young, Delmer J.....	698
Weed, Willis N.....	774	Whitman, Nicholas.....	826	" Henry D.....	698
Wedge, Henry.....	727	Whitman, Benjamin.....	248½-596	" James.....	820
Weeks, A. E.....	772	" " Editor of Erie Observer.....	596	" R. G.....	820
" Seth.....	772	Whiton, Charles.....	861	Youngs, G. L.....	852
W. N. Y. and Pa. Railroad.....	185	Wilcox, Clyde D.....	775	" L. G.....	852
Wehan, Peter.....	686	" House, Erie.....	519	Zahn, Dr. H. A.....	776
Weiblein, John G.....	782	Wild Game in Erie County.....	114	Zaepfel, Joseph.....	748
" Wm. F.....	749	Wilks, C. F.....	837	Zeigler, Jacob.....	822
Weigelville, Village of.....	331-397	Willis, Charles.....	851	Zeiser, Henry William.....	686
Weindorf, J. B.....	729	Wilkins, John.....	814	" Jacob.....	686
Weislogal, Charles E.....	782	" Thomas.....	814	Zion's Mission, Erie.....	454
Weis, Jacob.....	806	" Thomas L.....	814	Zimmer, Conrad.....	671
		Wilkinson, Abel.....	797	" William M.....	672
		Williams, J. B.....	655	Zimmerly, William.....	753
		" James C.....	710	Zuck, Clark W.....	642
		" George D.....	655	" John.....	810
		Wilson, Dr. M. A.....	519½-647	" John J.....	810
		" Harry L.....	596	" Lester L.....	642
		" John H.....	745	" S. B. P.....	810
		" Thomas, Hon.....	626
		Wilson House, Erie.....	520
		Wilson Moore's close run for Sheriff.....	242-246
		Wine Making.....	195

